TO THE RIGHT VERTVOVS, MOST EXCELLENT, NOBLE AND VICTORIOVS PRINCE KING IAMES OVR DREAD SOVERAIGNE, BY THE grace of God King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. long life, happie daies, and moſt proſperous raigne.

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM

MOſt noble and worthie King (my dread Soueraigne) let thoſe words of the heauenly and higheſt Maieſtie now ſound in your princely eares, which the Lord ſpake to Joſua: Moſes my ſeruant is dead, now therefore ariſe, verſ. 2. Euery place, that the ſole of your foote ſhall tread vpon, haue J giuen you, verſ. 3. There ſhall not a man be able to withſtand thee all the daies of thy life: as J haue been with Moſes, ſo will I be with thee, J will neuer leaue nor forſake thee, verſ. 5. Only be thou ſtrong and of a moſt valiant courage, verſ. 7. Let not the book of the law depart out of thy mouth, but meditate therein day and night; that thou maiſt obſerue and doe according to all that is written therein, verſ. 8. This holie Sermon made to Joſua, ſheweth his vocation that he ſhould riſe vp; the Lords donation, the whole land is giuen him; his proſperous ſucceſſe and preſeruation, the Lord will neuer leaue him; his righteous and godly adminiſtration, in obſeruing and keeping the will and precepts of God. Giue me now leaue (moſt vertuous and Chriſtian Prince) to enlarge briefly theſe foure neceſſarie points, and the ſame to applie to your princely perſon. Joſua 1.

1 Our Moſes then is dead, Queene Elizabeth hath chaunged her earthly kingdome for an heauenly, ſhe hath receiued an immortall crowne of eternitie, for a mortall one and tranſitorie: God hath raiſed your Highnes vp in her place, as a Joſua to make perfect Moſes conqueſt of Canaan, as a Salomon to execute Dauids godly purpoſe, as a Zorobabel to perfect Nehemiahs worke. Though we may complaine with Juda for Ioſias, that the breath of our noſtrels, the anoynted of the Lord, is taken away: yet God hath not left the bodie of the Engliſh Church and Lament. 4. 20.

Common-wealth breathleſſe, but hath inſpired new life and breath into it. We can doe no leſſe then as Ambroſe ſaith in the death of good Valentinian: Soluamus bono principi ſtipendiarias lachrymas: yet the annointing of Dauid will wipe away Samuels teares. God be bleſſed, it is not with the Church of England, as in Ambroſe time, when two godly Emperours Gratian, and Valentinian were taken away, almoſt together, as he ſaith: Utrumque Germanum, veluti oculos mihi effoſſos video: The Church had loſt theſe two brothers, as her two eyes. One called Greece, ἑτερόφθαλμον Ἑλλάδα, becauſe an excellent light as one of their eyes was loſt: but this loſſe being recouered and light ſupplied in your princely excellencie, wee haue no cauſe, as hee of Greece, ſo to ſpeake of noble Britannie. Neither yet is the caſe of Chriſts Church now, ſuch as the ſame father deſcribeth, which according to Chriſts rule (He that ſmiteth thee vpon the cheeke, turne to him the other) had receiued a blow vpon both cheekes, when theſe two good Emperours died: Percuſſa eras Eccleſia in maxilla tua, cum Gratianum amitteres, præbuiſti & alteram quando Valentinianus ereptus: Nor yet is it with vs as in Alexanders armie, when he was dead, which was like, as Leoſthenes compared it, to blind Cyclops, that groped with his hands, hauing loſt his eye. Our Church hath receiued a blow, but vpon the one cheeke; hath loſt a light, but is not dimmed: God hath appointed your Maieſtie to repaire our breaches, to heale our wounds, to recouer our ſight: and as Iob ſaith, to be a King in the armie, and as one that comforteth the mournors.

2 Now alſo is Gods promiſe fulfilled in your Highnes: he hath giuen vnto you all that the ſole of your foote treadeth vpon, euen this Engliſh ground, that ioyeth to be viſited by ſo princely a preſence. Much ioy was in the land and great peace enſued vpon the conioyning of two great families of Yorke and Lancaſter, which a long time contended for the Crowne: much more happie is this coniunction, whereby two famous kingdomes, heretofore at variance, are now vnited: like as Iſaie propheci̇eth; In that day ſhall there be a path from Egypt to Aſſhur, and Aſſhur ſhall come to Egypt, and Egypt to Aſſhur, ſo the Egyptians ſhall worſhip with Aſſhur. Two thouſand yeeres and more haue theſe nations of England and Scotland been diuided in gouernment: but now wee may truly ſay, there is vnus paſtor, vnum ouile: and what els may this betoken, but that wee ſhall all ſhortly be brought to one ſheepfold to waite for the appearing of our great ſhepheard Ieſus Chriſt. In one Religion and holie worſhip of God, theſe two nations of England and Scotland haue theſe fortie yeeres (thankes be to God) accorded; but now both in one Religion and the ſame regiment they are conſorted, neuer hereafter (I truſt) to be diuorced. Melanthius among the Athenians vſed to ſay, that the Citie was preſerued by the Orators diſſenſion: but our ſtate ſhall be confirmed by this happie vnion: your Maieſtie is that poliſhed corner ſtone, that hath coupled theſe two walles together, and as Ezechiels tallies put together two bodies in one: not as Xerxes that ioyned Europe and Aſia only with the Helleſpontian bridge made of timber and ſtone, but as Alexander, that in manners and conditions made them ſociable. Happie are theſe daies, and happie are you (O Prince) that haue wrought this wonder, and happie are our eyes that doe ſee theſe two renowned Countries conſenting in true Religion, and combined by one regall iuriſdiction. Demaratus, when he ſaw Alexander at Suſa weeping for ioy, ſaid, that the Grecians departed, wanted one great ioy, that they had not ſeene Alexander ſitting in Darius throne: And God we truſt ſhall ſo direct your royall Maieſtie to gouerne his Church in true Religion and pietie, and this Common-wealth in peace and tranquilitie, that wee may thinke our ſelues happie, ouer thoſe that are at reſt, who liue to ſee it.

ὅτι Ἀλέξανδρον οὐκ εἶδον ἐν τῷ Δαρείῳ θρόνῳ καθήμενον.

3 The Lord ſayth further to Ioſua, As I haue bin with Moſes, ſo will I be with thee: So, ſeeing your Maieſtie profeſſeth and protecteth the Goſpell of Christ, as your noble predeceſſor did, the Lord will be with you, as he was with Queene Elizabeth. Thus the Prophet teſtifieth of Ioſias: when he iudged the cauſe of the afflicted and poore, he proſpered, was it not becauſe he knew me, ſayth the Lord? Religion and Righteouſnes are the ſupporters of Princes Thrones. The vaine ſucceſſe of the heathen Rulers is not worthie of mention: as of Sylla, who was ſo proſperous in his exploits, that he called himſelfe Fortunes ſonne: or of Iulius Cæſar, who ſayling in a great tempeſt, when the Pilot was doubtfull to ſet forward, ſayd, Go to now hoiſe vp the ſayles, remember that thou carrieſt Cæſar, and Cæſars fortune: theſe were but their vaine brags. For though for a while they proſpered, yet their ſtate was ſoone altered: the firſt dyed in ſhame and ignominie, the other was ſlaine by treacherie: It is vertue that maketh Kings victorious, and pietie that bringeth proſperitie. Neuer any Prince, whoſe fame is celebrated in heathen ſtories, eſcaped more dangers, then noble Alexander: tenne ſeuerall times he was wonderfullie deliuered; among the Illyrians his head was wounded with a ſtone, his neck bruſed with a barre: at Granicum he was cut in the head by a ſword: at Iſſum wounded in the thigh: at Gaza falling frō his horſe, his arme was put out of ioynt: at Maracatarda his hucklebone was broken: among the Indians ſhot in the ſhoulder: among the Gandridæ wounded in the leg: and at Mallus ſhot into the breſt with a dart where the yron was left behinde: in ſcaling the Aornian rocks, which ſeemed higher then the flying of birds, he was in great perill: beſide he eſcaped many treacheries and conſpiracies of diuers diſcontented perſons about him. This happie ſucceſſe of Alexander is aſcribed by the wiſer heathen to his reuerend opinion of the gods then worſhipped, to whom he referred the praiſe of his victories, who hauing ſurprized the Barbarians, ſent tenne thouſand talents into Greece to build temples for the gods. But greater deliuerance from the externall inuaſion and internall practiſing, from forraine aſſaults, and treacherous attempts at home, neuer any Prince had, then our late Soueraigne your Maieſties moſt noble predeceſſor. The ſhield of faith defended her, the helmet of her hope protected her, the ſword of the ſpirit, the word of God, did fight for her: Feare not then, O noble Prince, as God was with Moſes, ſo will he be with Ioſua. Queene Elizabeth hath left your Maieſtie her ſucceſſor in dominion, her heire for religion, the image of her clemencie, and other princely vertues, the patterne of her happie ſucceſſe: ſhe ſhall not dye as long as you liue; her memorie is reuiued in your Maieſtie; her princely benignitie remaineth in your noble conſanguinitie: that we may ſay with Ambroſe in the death of Theodoſius, Tantus imperator nobis receſſit, ſed totus non receſſit, reliquit eum nobis ſucceſſorem, in quo eum debemus agnoſcere.

Ambroſe in obit. Theodoſ.

4 Concerning the vpright and religious adminiſtration of both Church and Common-wealth affaires, as Ioſua is a mirror for all Princes; ſo therein of your princely prudence, pious conſcience, exquiſite learning and ſcience, as our neighbour-Church and Countrie hath had many yeares ioyfull experience, ſo we truſt to haue comfortable knowledge and cogniſance. Ioſua was bid that the booke of God ſhould not depart out of his mouth: ſo we doubt not, but that beſide other books of learning, your highneſſe is often exerciſed in Gods booke. Homer was not ſo familiar to Alexander, Anaxagoras with Pericles, Plato with Dion, Panetius with Scipio, Athenodorus with Cato, as we truſt the Prophets and propheticall men are to your Maieſtie: and as Valentinian made account of Ambroſe, Sibi ſalutem quandam venturam arbitrabatur, as Ambroſe ſayth, and he himſelfe was likewiſe affected to the Emperour, Quam me ipſum pro tua obtuliſſem fide, ſaith he, as your Maieſtie ſhall finde all the Miniſters and profeſſors of the Goſpell obliged in like deuotion toward you.

Ambr. in obit. Valent.

Infamous is the memorie of barbarous Atias King of Scythia, who when Amænias the Muſitian playd before him, ſayd, he had rather heare the neying of a horſe: and of vniuſt Antigonus, who when one preſented vnto him a booke of Iuſtice, refuſed it: of rude Lucinias, who thought learning a vice in a Prince. But the fame of your princely care to religion, and fauour of learning, hath made me bold to offer this treatiſe of religion to your Highneſſe: which with the Author thereof, and the truth it maintaineth, I humblie in the name of this Church, whereof I am a ſmall member, do commend to your gratious defence, patronage, and protection: the ſame which two yeares ſince I preſumed to ſend to your highneſſe, as a token of loue from a Miniſter of the Goſpell to a Chriſtian Prince, ſo I now againe preſent it vnder your Highneſſe name as a pledge of loyaltie from a faithfull ſubiect to his moſt dread and deare Soueraigne. Saint Luke wrote his Goſpell to noble Theophilus: Saint Paule reioyced in the defence of the truth before King Agrippa, Act.26.3.27. which beleeued the Prophets. Quadratus a Chriſtian Philoſopher, offered his Apologie of the Chriſtian faith to the Emperour Adrian; Iuſtinus Hieron.catal.1. ſcriptor. to Antoninus Pius; Apollinarius to Marc. Antonius: And we the Miniſters of the Goſpell do flie for defence of our faith to your Chriſtian Maieſtie. As Demetrius Phalerius gaue counſell to the King, that he ſhould prouide bookes treating of the affaires of the Kingdome, that he might finde that in writing, which his friends did forbeare to tell him: So I haue exhibited this Treatiſe of Religion, that where leaſure admitteth no conference, your Highneſſe owne reading may informe your conſcience.

And now (moſt noble King) ſeeing by Gods prouidence you are aduanced to the regiment of this noble Kingdome, not attayning the ſame as Alexander by Conqueſt, or by chance, as Darius King of Perſia by the neying of an horſe, Aegon King of Argiues by the flying of an Eagle, or by lot, as the Athenian Law-makers; but by Gods direction, and your lawfull ſucceſſion: the Lord now ſayth to you, as to Ioſua, Only be ſtrong, and of a moſt valiant courage. Yea, and I am bold to ſay to your Maieſtie, which S. Paule ſayd to Timothie according to the pro- 1.Tim.5.18. phecies which went before vpon you, That you by them ſhould fight a good fight: ſo now beginneth to be fulfilled that prophecie of the Reuelation, That the tenne hornes, that is, Kings and Princes, which before gaue Reuel.17.16. their power to the beaſt, ſhall make her deſolate and naked, eate her fleſh, and burne her with fire: that is, ſhall vtterly ouerthrow the kingdome of Antichriſt. King Henry the eight, of worthy memory, we truſt was herein a Prophet: England (ſayth he) hath taken leaue of popiſh crafts for euer, neuer to be delu- Fox.pag.1083. ded of them hereafter: Romane Biſhops haue nothing to do with Engliſh people, the one doth not traffike with the other, at leaſt though they will haue to deale with vs, we will none of their merchandiſe, none of their ſtuffe.

Queene Elizabeth was herein a Propheteſſe, who in the firſt yeare Stow ann.1. Eliza. of her raigne made this anſwere to the Parliament houſe: It is not to be feared, but God will ſo worke in my heart, and in your wiſdoms, as good prouiſion by his help may be made in conuenient, whereby the Realme ſhall not remaine deſtitute of an heire, that may be a fit Gouernour, and peraduenture more beneficiall to the Realme, then ſuch of-ſpring as may come of me. This princely heire beneficiall to the Realme, as we all ſee this day, God hath prouided your Maieſtie to be, vpon whom our eyes are, not only as vppon οὐδεὶς ἀθηναίων μελὰν ἱμάτιον δι᾽ αὐτοῦ ἐνεδύσατο. an other Pericles, who neuer cauſed any of the Athenians to weare a black

The Engliſh Nation ſayth vnto 2.Sam.5. your Higneſſe, as the Iſraelites to Dauid, You are our bone and our fleſh: We come to bring you from Hebron to Ieruſalem: all Iſrael is yours, and not Iuda only: God hath a great worke to be perfected by your hands: what Dauid begun, Salomon muſt finiſh. God giue your Maieſtie ſtrength, and multiplie the yeares of your happie raigne, as Dauids time in Ieruſalem exceeded his raigne in Hebron; that your Maieſtie may attayne to the ſacred old age of Queene ELIZABETH, and ſo many yeares gouerne his Church militant in earth in the Euangelicall veritie, as that you may in the triumphant Church in heauen be receiued to the Angelicall ſocietie.

THE PREFACE TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

BRITISH MUSEUM

*IT may ſeeme ſtrange (good Chriſtian Reader) that the Goſpell hauing been taught amongſt vs by Gods eſpeciall goodneſſe and mercie, nowe theſe two and fortie yeeres, with great euidence of trueth, plaine demonſtration out of Scripture, and moſt apparant conuiction of the aduerſarie, that there yet ſhould be found among vs, whoſe eares are open to heare, & their hearts more ready to beleeue lies, than to receiue the truth.
What els ſhould be the reaſon hereof, I cannot iudge, but that, which the Apoſtle rendreth:* Becauſe they receiued not the loue of the truth, that they might be ſaued, God ſhal ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould beleeue lies, 2.Theſſal.2.11. And therefore we may ſay of them, as Hierome of ſome in his time : Vnum tibi confiteor, mores meorum optimè noui, facilius eos vinci poſſe, quam perſuaderi :
I will confeſſe one thing vnto you, I know their manners very well, they may be ſooner ouercome, then perſwaded : aduerſ.Luciferian. For if our Sauiour Chriſtes rule do hold, as it muſt needes ſtand: Ex fructibus eorum cognoſcetis, &c. *Yee ſhall knowe them by their fruites, Matth.7.16. how can that Religion be iudged to be good, that bringeth forth ſuch bad fruits as treacherie, conſpiracies, practiſes againſt Prince and Countrie, which things are ſo notoriouſly knowne, and ſo freſh in euery mans memorie, that for proofe hereof I neede not deſcend to particulars.
VVhat aileth then theſe men, that they cannot conſent in Religion with vs: we build our faith onely vpon the Scriptures, we ſeeke onely the glorie of Chriſt, abaſing our ſelues, and our corrupt nature, onely extolling grace: which of theſe can offend them: they enioy their liuings, whereas Proteſtants were denied their liues; they haue libertie, we were kept in thraldome and miſerie; they grow rich and purchaſe, the Proteſtants could not holde their owne. I cannot ſee then, what it is, that ſhould diſcontent them: did not the Prophet* Ezechiel well propheſie of ſuch: They Geneſ.49.17.

of the deepe waters, and troubled the reſidue with their feete. They are not content themſelues to eate the fat, and drinke the ſweete of the Land, but ſome of them (for I accuſe not all) haue laboured and practiſed to diſturbe our peace, and to trouble our quiet ſtate. But let not vs (good brethren) be offended at theſe things. Firſt, let vs not be aſtoniſhed, as though ſome ſtrange thing had befallen vs: for Saint Paul hath ſaid, That hereſies muſt be among vs, that they which are 1.Cor.11.19. approued may be knowne: in time of perſecution exercebant patientiam Eccleſiæ, they did proue the patience of the Church: but now as Auguſtine ſaith, exercent ſapientiam; they doe exerciſe the wiſdome of the Church. Let not the number and multitude offend vs of thoſe, which doe band themſelues againſt the Church: for ſo it muſt be, Chriſts flocke is but a little flocke. Luk.12.32.
Let vs not be afraid of their wiſdome, power or ſtrength: the Scripture teacheth vs, that they in their generation are wiſer then the children of light: yet the Lord our God, that is with vs, and fighteth for vs, is wiſer and ſtronger then they. Let them not deceiue vs with a ſhew of holines: for Sathan can transforme himſelfe into an Angel of light: neither let it moue vs becauſe they 2.Cor.11.14.

ſhould be Martyrs. But let vs (not ſtumbling at any of theſe ſtones) be conſtant in the faith, and goe forward in the profeſſion of the Goſpell, which is grounded vpon the Scripture, ſealed with the blood of Martyrs, waited and attended vpon theſe many yeeres, as the miſtreſſe with the handmaid, with peace, proſperitie, and aboundance of al bleſſings. Bellarm.de laicis.lib.3. cap.1. With them there is no peace to be had : their owne Doctors teach, that no reconcilation can be made betweene vs : And indeede ſo it is, for there is no fellowſhip betweene light and darkeneſſe. Deut.22.10. The Iſraelites were commanded, not to ſowe their ground with diuers ſeedes, nor to plough with an Oxe and an Aſſe. What is this elſe, but that the Church of God cannot conſiſt of beleeuers and Idolaters, of true Chriſtians and hypocrites, Catholikes and Heretikes, Proteſtants and Papiſts? Their ſeede and ours is diuers : they ſow the doctrine of men, and humaine traditions : we ſow the ſeede of Gods word. The Oxe is onely fit for the Lords plough, that chaweth the cud, and deuideth the hoofe; the Aſſe doth neither : Who is he that deuideth the hoofe and chaweth the cud? Homil 35. Auguſtine telleth vs, Fiſſa vngula pertinet ad diſcernendum quid dextrum, quid ſiniſtrum : ruminatio pertinet ad eos, qui cogitant poſtea quid audierint : He deuideth the hoofe, that deuideth and diſcerneth what is good, and what euill : and they chawe the cud, that doe meditate of that, which they heare out of the worde. But ſuch are not the common Catholikes among the Papiſts : for they doe not allowe euery one, the miſtreſſe, the maid, the ploughman and artificer to talke of Scripture, or moue queſtions and doubts in Religion : and ſo make them Aſſes, not Oxen to chawe the cud. Rhemiſt.Prefat ſect.7. Rhemiſt.1.Ioan 4.ſect 1. They ſay it belongeth not to euery Chriſtian, to diſcerne betweene true and falſe doctrine, but they muſt take their faith of their ſuperiours, and obey them in all things : and ſo neither would they haue them deuide the hoofe, taking from them their diſcerning iudgement. Dan.2.33. There is no agreement therefore to be looked for at their handes : no more then yron or clay can be tempered together. Their old veſſels cannot receiue the new liquor of the Goſpell : but they muſt firſt become new themſelues : they muſt firſt put off their beggerly ragges of popiſh ceremonies and ſuperſtitions, or els they ſhall neuer put on Chriſt : Ierem.15.19. And to be ſhort, Reuertantur illi ad te, ne tu reuertaris ad illos : Let them returne vnto vs, we will not returne to them, as the Lord ſaith to Ieremie.

But leſt now we ſhould be thought to ſpeake without booke, deepely charging our aduerſaries with hereſies, lyes, falſe doctrine, and prouing nothing : we will take ſome paines to ſet downe ſome principall opinions of the Papiſts, which haue in the purer ages of the Church been condemned for hereſies.

1 Marcellina the companion of Carpocrates the archheretike, worſhipped the Images of Ieſus and Paul, and offered incenſe vnto them, Auguſt.hæreſ.7. So the Papiſts doe worſhip the Images of Saints, and in the ſecond Nicene Councell it was decreed, that the Image of God ſhould be worſhipped with the ſame honour that God himſelfe was.

2 The Heracleonites did annoynt their ſicke which lay a dying, with oyle and balme, Hereſ.16. So the Papiſts haue found out extreme Vnction and made it a Sacrament.

3 The Caiani did hold, that the ſinne of Iudas in betraying Chriſt, was a benefite to mankind, Hereſ,18. The Papiſts come ſomewhat neere : one of them affirmeth, that the Iewes had ſinned mortally, if they had not crucified Chriſt : Ex Iuel.defenſ.Apolog.p.676.

4 The Pepuziani iudged heretikes, becauſe they permitted women to be Prieſts, Hereſ.27. So it was decreed in the Florentine Councel among the Papiſts, that in the caſe of neceſſitie, not onely a lay man, but an heretike, pagan, and a woman too, may baptize.

5 The heretikes called Angelici were condemned, becauſe they worſhipped Angels, Hereſ.39. So the Rhemiſts teach, that Angels may be worſhipped, Annot.in Apocal.3.ſect.6.

6 There was a ſect of heretikes that walked with bare feete, becauſe God ſaid to Moſes, put off thy ſhooes, &c. Hereſ.68. And ſo are there of Friers that goe barefoot, as the Friers Flagellants, and Franciſcanes.

7 The Priſcilianiſts did make the Apocrypha, that is, bookes not Canonicall of equall authoritie with Scripture, Hereſ.70. So doe the Papiſts, the bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Machabees, and others, which are not found in the Canon of the Hebrue, they make them bookes of Canonicall Scripture, and part of the word of God : yea, they ſay, that whatſoeuer the Paſtors of the Church doe teach beſide Scripture in the vnitie of the Church, is to be taken for the word of God, Rhem. Annot.1.Theſ.cap.2.ſect.12.

8 An Archheretike called Marcus, did holde that Chriſt did not verily ſuffer and indeede, but in ſhew onely and appearance, Hereſ.14. The Apollinariſts alſo affirmed, that Chriſt tooke humaine fleſh without a ſoule, Hereſ.55. I pray you, how farre are the Papiſts from theſe hereſies? for they affirme that Chriſt ſuffered not in ſoule: Nay the Rhemiſts hold, that it is a blaſphemous aſſertion ſo to ſay, Annot.Hebru.5.v.7. What is this els, but either with Marcus to ſay, that Chriſt ſuffered but in ſhew, and that he felt nothing in ſoule, when he cryed out vpon the Croſſe, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? for if there were no ſuch matter indeede, Chriſt muſt haue vttered thoſe words onely in outward ſhew and pretenſe. Againe, they cannot ſhift off handſomely from them the Apollinariſts hereſie: for why did Chriſt take vpon him our fleſh and ſoule, but to redeeme man, that was loſt both in body and ſoule? and therefore he muſt needes haue ſuffered both in body and ſoule: for if there were no vſe of the humaine ſoule in the worke of our redemption, you might as well ſay with the Apollinariſts that Chriſt had no ſoule at all. Thus Auguſtine Cont. Felician.cap.13. reaſoneth: Si totus homo perijt, totus beneficio ſaluatoris indiguit; ſi totus beneficio ſaluatoris indigebat, totum Chriſtus veniendo ſaluauit: If the whole man both in body and ſoule were loſt, he wholly had neede of a Sauiour: and if he wholly needed a Sauiour; Chriſt by his comming did wholly ſaue him. Ergo, it followeth that Chriſt muſt wholly haue dyed and ſuffered in body and ſoule to redeeme man, that was wholly loſt in body and ſoule.

The Anthropomorphites did imagine, that God was in ſhape and proportion like a man, 9 Hereſ.50. Doe not our Rhemiſts ſauour ſtrongly of this hereſie, which allowe the Image of God to be pictured like an olde man with gray haires in their Churches? Annot. Act. cap.17. verſ.29.

The heretikes Abeliani, thought it not lawfull for their ſect to liue without wiues, and yet they 10 neuer vſed, nor kept company with their wiues, Hereſ.87. Doe not the Papiſts come neere them, which hold that their Prieſts which were maried before orders, ought not afterward to haue acceſſe to their wiues, yet are they their wiues ſtill, neither is the mariage knot diſſolued betweene them? Rhemiſt.Act.21.ſect.1.

The Pelagian heretikes did hold three pernicious opinions. Firſt, that a man may be perfect in 11 this life and keepe all the Commaundements, Hereſ.88. So the Rhemiſts ſay, it is poſsible to keepe all the precepts of the law, Annot Iohan. 14. ſect.1. Secondly, the Pelagians ſay, that grace is giuen vnto men onely to this ende, that they may more eaſily doe thoſe things which they are commanded to doe by their owne freewill, Hereſ.88. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that man was neuer without freewill, but hauing the grace of Chriſt, it is truly made free, Annot.Ioan.8.ſect.2. What is this els, but that his free will is made more free, and that grace helpeth him not wholly to worke, but more eaſily onely? Thirdly, the Pelagians hold, Gratiam Dei non ad ſingulos actus dari: That the grace of God is not needfull to be giuen at euery aſſay, but that their free will in moſt things is ſufficient, Auguſt.Epiſt.106. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that though the Gentiles beleeued ſpecially by Gods grace, yet they beleeued alſo of their owne free will, Act.13.ſect.2. What ſay they elſe, but that a man may beleeue by his owne free will without grace?

The Manichees condemned the eating of fleſh, as being vncleane and impure, Hereſ.46. So 12 the Papiſts alſo forbid at certaine times the eating of fleſh. And herein they perhaps differ from the Manichees: They held that fleſh was vncleane by creation: The Papiſts by reaſon of the curſe: for God curſed the earth, and not the waters (ſay they) and therefore vpon faſting dayes fiſh is preferred before fleſh, Durand.lib.6.capit.de alijs ieiunijs. So they both agree in this, that fleſh is a thing impure and vncleane: for if they had not ſo thought, why did not that popiſh Biſhop of London Stokeſlie, rather ſuffer the pigge to be eaten, which was found in one Frebarnes houſe in Frebarne Fox.p.1585. Lent time, his wife being great with child longing for a peece thereof, then command it as an vncleane thing to be buried in Finsburie fields, and ſo the good creature of God to be ſpoyled and loſt?

There was alſo another moſt blaſphemous opinion of the Manichees: for they helde that the parts and members of Chriſt were diſperſed euery where, and that in their meats and drinkes, they did deliuer the members of Chriſt, which were tyed and bound in the creatures. Tales (ſaith Auguſtine) ſunt electi eorum, vt non ſint ſaluandi à Deo, ſed ſaluatores Dei; liberant enim Auguſt.in Pſal.104. membra Chriſti, cum manducant: The elect amongſt them (for ſo they call their principals) do make themſelues the ſauiours & redeemers of God, for they do ſet at libertie (as they imagine) the members of Chriſt, he is not their ſauiour. Compare nowe the opinion of the Papiſts with theſe heretikes: ſee if they be not coſin germanes: for as they made themſelues, ſaluatores Chriſti, ſauiours of Chriſt : ſo is it a ſaying among the Papiſts, that Sacerdos eſt creator creatoris ſui : the Prieſt at Maſſe, which by fiue words ſpeaking maketh the body of Chriſt, is a maker, ſay they, of his maker, a creator of his creator, Ex Iuell.lib.artic.pag.615. But herein the Papiſts goe beyond the Manichees : for they deliuered the bodie and members of Chriſt from the priſon of the creatures, and ſent them vp to heauen : the Papiſts bring them downe from heauen, and cloſe them in the creature, vnder the ſhape of bread and wine.

Thus farre we thought good to ſhew, how neere the Papiſts come to the heretikes of olde time : that it might appeare to the world, that we doe not vniuſtly charge them with hereſie, and that we haue good cauſe to ſhunne and abhorre their poyſoned doctrine. Many other hereſies I could haue produced ; which are reuiued by our aduerſaries, and raked againe as it were out of their graues, where they did quietly reſt: But that I am not of purpoſe nowe to deale in this matter : which in a ſeuerall Treatiſe I haue handled more at large.

In Tetraſtylon

I haue onely by the way giuen a taſt of the bitter and ſowre doctrine of Poperie : that our countrie men, which haue been any thing that way infected, may take warning, that if they haue ſipped of the whore of Babylons cuppe of fornication, they ſhould leaue off, before they haue drunke more deepely, leaſt they in the ende be conſtrained to drawe out the very dregges thereof, and to be drunken with their intoxicate cup. If they will in time be warned, they may : a word to a wiſe man is ſufficient : and if they be wiſe, they will alſo take heede in time, I ſay vnto them, as Auguſtine did ſometime to the Donatiſts : Si ſapitis, bene & rectè, ſi autem non ſapitis, nos veſtri curam geſſiſſe non pœnitebit, quia etſi cor veſtrum ad pacem non conuertitur, pax noſtra tamen ad nos reuertitur : If you will be learned, it is well, and as we wiſh : but if you will not, it repenteth vs not, that we haue had ſome care of you : for although your heart be not conuerted to the peace of the Goſpell, yet our peace returneth to vs againe.

Contra Petilianum.3.59.

Here by the way, I muſt remember my ſelfe of one thing, which I had almoſt ouerſlipped. Euery where both in this Preface and in this whole booke, ſpeaking of our aduerſaries, I call them Papiſts, as we are knowne by the name of Proteſtants : I ſuppoſe our Engliſh Romaniſts will take no offence or griefe hereby ſo to be called : although I haue heard that ſome of them hold great ſcorne to be named Papiſts, yet I ſee no reaſon, why they ſhould ſo doe. The Rhemiſts like this name well enough, becauſe it is not deriued from any one man, but from their Popes and chiefe Biſhops, to whom (ſay they) we are bound to cleaue in Religion, and obey in all things : So to be a Papiſt (ſay they) is to be a Chriſtian man, a childe of the Church, and a ſubiect to Chriſts Vicar. Seeing then this name pleaſeth their ghoſtly fathers of Rhemes ſo well, there is no reaſon why they ſhould miſlike it : and therefore we will vſe it ſtill, as beſt expreſſing their profeſſion, who are pinned vpon the Popes ſleeue for their faith & Religion. As likewiſe the name of Proteſtants we refuſe not : which name I thinke, though elſwhere before in vſe, yet in England tooke beginning in King Henry the eights dayes; when there was a generall proteſtation made in the name of the King, the whole Councell and Clergie of England againſt the Pope : In the which proteſtation, thus we finde : England hath taken her leaue of popiſh crafts for euer, neuer to be deluded with them hereafter : Romane Biſhops haue nothing to doe with Engliſh people : the one doth not traffique with the other : at the leaſt, though they will haue to deale with vs, we will none of their merchandiſe, none of their ſtuffe. Thus we ſee how a Papiſt and a Proteſtant are defined : A Papiſt is he that cleaueth to the Pope in Religion, and is obedient to him in all things : A proteſtant is he, that profeſſeth the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt, and hath renounced the iuriſdiction of the ſea of Rome, and the forced and vnnaturall obedience to the Pope. Theſe names therefore as beſt fitting both our profeſſions, ſeeing no cauſe to the contrary, I purpoſe euery where to vſe and retaine throughout this Treatiſe.

Fox.p.1083.

I would here finiſh and make an end of this Preface, but that firſt I muſt make the Reader acquainted with the order and method, which I haue followed in ſetting downe the controuerſies : The whole body therefore of the controuerſies betweene the Papiſts and vs, our worthie and learned countriman D.Whitakers hath digeſted and diſpoſed into a ſingular Method, the which I haue propounded to my ſelfe throughout this diſcourſe to obſerue.

The hereſies and errors therefore of Poperie, doe either impugne the offices of Chriſt, with his benefites and merites, or his perſon : the moſt of them are of the firſt kinde, ſome errors they maintaine againſt his perſon, but not many.

Firſt, the name of Chriſt ſheweth his offices: for it ſignifieth annoynted: he was annoynted to be our Prophet, King and Prieſt: Ieſus betokeneth a Sauiour, and ſetteth forth the benefites of our redemption and ſaluation. Firſt then of this officcs, and then of the benefites, that doe ariſe and ſpring thereof.

The firſt office of our Sauiour Chriſt, is to be our heauenly teacher and Prophet. His heauenly doctrine is contained no where els but in the Scriptures. The firſt generall controuerſie then muſt be of the Scriptures: where there ariſe many queſtions: as of the Canonicall bookes of the Scripture, of the vulgar tranſlation of Scripture, of the perſpicuitie, and plaineneſſe, authoritie, interpretation and perfection of Scripture, with ſuch other.

The ſecond office of Chriſt is to be our King: and becauſe his kingdome is his Church: here we are to handle the controuerſies about the Church: which is either the Church Militant vpon earth, or the Church Triumphant in heauen.

The Church militant is to be conſidered, either in generall, where theſe queſtions are moued, what the Church is, whether it be viſible or not, by what markes it is knowne, whether it may erre, what authoritie it hath. Then the partes of the Church, which are either aſſembled and gathered together, as in generall Councels: where theſe doubts muſt be diſcuſſed, whether generall Councels be neceſſary, by whom they ought to be ſummoned, whether they can erre, whether the Pope be aboue Councels or not, and ſuch like: Or elſe the parts of the Church are ſeuerally to be conſidered, and they are of three ſortes, either the chieſe parts, the middle and meane parts, the loweſt and baſeſt parts of the Church: The chieſe member they make to be the Pope: where there are many queſtions and of great waight, as whether the regiment of the Church be Monarchicall, whether Peter were appoynted head of the Church, whether the Pope be Peters ſucceſſour, whether he may erre, whether the Pope be Antichriſt, with ſuch other. The middle parts, are their Clerkes, which are either ſecular, as they call them, which haue any Eccleſiaſticall function, where we muſt enquire o their election and degrees, of their ſingle life, and ſuch like; the Regular Clerkes are their Monkes, and other of that profeſſion, where we muſt entreat of vowes, of their ſolitarie life, their habite, their Canonicall houres, with other matters. The loweſt members are the lay men: where the queſtions about the Ciuill Magiſtrate muſt be handled: as whether he may put heretikes to death, whether he haue any power and authoritie in Eccleſiaſticall matters, and hitherto of the Militant Church.

The Triumphant Church conſiſteth either of Angels, or other Saints departed: Concerning the Angels, we diſſent about the orders and degrees of them, about their miniſterie and office, and whether they are to be prayed vnto.

Concerning the Saints departed, there are many queſtions in controuerſie, as of Purgatory, Limbus Patrum, whether they are to be praied vnto, of their Reliques, Images, Temples, Holy daies, and ſuch like.

The third office of Chriſt is his Prieſthood, whereof there are two Parts, his interceſſion, where we muſt enquire, whether Chriſt be the onely Mediatour of interceſſion, and his Sacrifice, where the maine and great controuerſie concerning the Sacraments doth offer it ſelfe: for by the Sacraments the power and efficacie of the death of Chriſt is deriued vnto vs.

Here firſt we muſt entreate of the Sacraments in generall, as of their number, their efficacie, the difference betweene the Sacraments of the olde and new Teſtament: then in particular, as of Baptiſme, and the ſeuerall queſtions thereto belonging, of the Lords Supper, where alſo the great controuerſie about their Idolatrous ſacrifice of the Maſſe, and other neceſſary queſtions muſt be handled. Then follow in order fiue other popiſh Sacraments, to be conſidered of, confirmation, penance, extreame vnction, orders, matrimony. And theſe are the controuerſies concerning the offices of Chriſt.

The controuerſies which concerne the benefits of our redemption, with other ſeuerall queſtions, are theſe. Firſt of the ſtate of man in Paradiſe before his fall: where we are to diſcuſſe of the ſtate of Adams ſoule, and of his bodie, whether it were created immortall, of Paradiſe, whether it were a place knowne, and yet remaining. The ſecond Controuerſie is concerning Adams fall, where the queſtions are handled, of Adams tranſgreſſion, and of originall ſinne, with the ſeuerall parts thereof. The third Controuerſie conſiſteth of the reparation of mankinde: where theſe principall queſtions are decided, of Predeſtination, of Grace, Free will, Faith, Iuſtification, Good workes.

Laſtly, there remaine ſome queſtions about the perſon of Chriſt, as whether he be αὐτόθεος, that is, God of himſelfe, whether he encreaſed in wiſdome, whether he ſuffered in ſoule, whether he merited for himſelfe, with ſuch other.

Thus haue we the ſumme and body of Antichriſtian doctrine, which we purpoſe by the grace of God to goe through, beginning at the firſt, and ſo proſecuting euery particular queſtion, till we are come to the laſt. My purpoſe is not to ſet down all the hereſies, which impugne the Chriſtian faith, but onely thoſe which are maintained by the Church of Rome this day; who are the chiefe troublers and diſquieters of the peace of our Church: I ſay therefore with Auguſtine, Omnis Chriſtianus Catholicus iſta non debet credere, ſed nō omnis, qui iſta non credit, conſequenter ſe debet Chriſtianũ credere: Euery true Chriſtiā is bound not to beleeue theſe things, but yet not ſtraightway euery man, that beleeueth them not; muſt hold himſelfe to be a good Chriſtian, for there are many errors and hereſies in the world beſide papiſtrie: But this we haue only choſen to deale againſt in this treatiſe, as being moſt dangerous to our ſtate, more plauſible to carnall men, and moſt like to infect. I haue now this third time, for thy benefit, Chriſtian Reader, peruſed, corrected, & augmented this worke, and publiſhed it for thy vſe. The ſecond edition was in theſe foure poyntes enlarged more then the former: firſt, I haue anſwered more obiections of the aduerſarie, and propounded more arguments for the truth: Secondly, I haue added the Canons of the auncient Councels throughout for the more liuely euidence of truth: Thirdly, I haue adioyned to euery place of greateſt weight, the ſeale and teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs: Fourthly, this booke containeth one hundreth more of popiſh Errors then the firſt: where I haue briefely touched Bellarmines chiefe arguments in ſome maine Controuerſies of our faith, as he hath lately cauſed them to be publiſhed in the third volume of his Controuerſies: which came forth ſince the firſt edition of this booke. In this third edition I haue performed more then in the former, in theſe foure points: Firſt, I haue anſwered all ſuch places of weight, which our aduerſaries allcage out of Scripture, and remoued many more obiections of the aduerſarie than before. Secondly, I haue inſerted more teſtimonies of the Fathers for the proofe of the truth, and anſwered their ſhewe of the Fathers in ſome principall controuerſies: Thirdly, I haue conuinced them by the Lawes Imperiall, and their owne Pontificiall decrees, and by their owne writers. Fourthly, I haue adioyned a confutation of Bellarmines firſt booke of Indulgences and Iubilee pardons, and added one Centurie more: ſo that the whole is increaſed to fiue Centuries, that is, ſo many hundreds of popiſh errors and hereſies.

This, through Gods gracious aſsiſtance I haue performed in this worke, and throughout the ſame, as neere as I could, I haue followed Auguſtines rule, Ita ſtylo, ſi potuero moderabor, vt huic operi in Dei voluntate peragendo, nec ea, quæ ſuperſint dicam, nec ea quæ ſatis ſunt prætermittam: My care hath been ſo to temper my ſtyle, that neither things ſuperfluous ſhould be inſerted, nor things neceſſary omitted. Theſe my labours, farre beyond my ſtrength, though not aboue my hope, by the Lords extraordinarie aſsiſtance (I muſt needes coufeſſe) I haue brought to an ende. Recompence I looke for none, but thy good acceptation (Chriſtian Reader:) it is the good of Gods Church, which I ſeeke: other encouragement (the Lord helpe) in theſe dayes we haue ſmall: I now commend my ſelfe to thy prayer, my labours to thy diligent reading (Chriſtian brother) and both you and them to Gods good bleſsing: who giue vs grace to diſcerne truth from error, and hauing diſcerned them, power to ſhunne the one, and embrace the other: that as he well ſaith, Speremus, quæ Chriſtus promiſit, & ſequamur quò præceſſit: that hoping and truſting here to that which Chriſt hath promiſed, we may follow at length, whither he is præceded and gone before vs:

THE FIRST BOOKE OR CENTVRIE CONTEINING THE CONTROVERSIES OF RELIGION, WHICH ARISE IN QVESTION BETWEENE THE CHVRCH of God and the Papiſts, about the word of God conteined in the Scriptures, and the Church Militant here vpon earth, with the parts and members thereof.

THE FIRST GENERALL CONTROVERSIE of the holie Scriptures.

ACcording to the method which I haue propounded to my ſelfe (God aſſiſting me by his ſpirit) to obſerue throughout this whole treatiſe of the controuerſies, and as I haue ſet it down in the end of the preface, in the firſt place we are to entreat of ſuch matters as concerne the Propheticall office of Chriſt. He is our Prophet, our heauenly teacher, and Doctor, Matth. 23. verſ. 8. from him proceedeth all holy knowledge: we haue not ſeene God, nor the high things of God: but the onely begotten ſonne, which is in the boſome of the father, he hath declared him. Iohn 1.18. Wherefore all the true ſheepe of Chriſt will heare his voyce, Iohn 10.3. His voyce is not elſe where heard but onely in the Scriptures: We muſt heare Moſes and the Prophets, Luke 16.29. and as S. Ambroſe well ſaith, Qui vult ad Chriſti peruenire myſterium, non ingreditur ad illud, niſi per euangelicæ ſcripturæ ſecretum: No man can attaine to the knowledge of Chriſt, but by the euangelicall Scriptures. Firſt of all therefore this great and moſt famous controuerſie betweene vs and our aduerſaries concerning the Scriptures muſt be handled: which is diſtributed into ſeuen ſeuerall queſtions.

Serm. 57.

1 Concerning the Canonicall Scripture, what bookes are to be receiued into the ſacred Canon, what bookes to be reiected and counted apocryphall.

2 Concerning the authenticall Edition of the holy Scriptures, whether the Hebrue, Greeke or Latine tranſlation is chiefly to be followed.

3 Whether the Scriptures ought to be tranſlated into the vulgar and Engliſh tongue: and whether publike prayers and diuine ſeruice ought to be vſed in the ſame tongue.

4 Whether the Scriptures are authorized by the Church, and not rather ſo knowne to be of themſelues.

5 Concerning the perſpicuitie and plainenes of the Scripture, whether it be ſo hard, that the common people may not ſafely be admitted to the reading thereof.

6 Concerning the interpretation of Scripture: which queſtion is diuided into three parts: firſt whether the Scripture admit diuers ſenſes and expoſitions: ſecondly who hath the chiefe authoritie to expound Scripture: thirdly what meanes ought to be vſed in expounding of it.

7 Concerning the perfection of the Scripture, three parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether the Scriptures be neceſſary: ſecondly, whether they be ſufficient to ſaluation: thirdly, whether there be any traditions beſide neceſſarie to ſaluation.

THE FIRST QVESTION CONCERNING the Canonicall Scripture.

Of the ſtate of the firſt Queſtion.

WE haue not any thing in this place to deale with thoſe heretikes, which denie either the whole Scripture, or any part thereof: but onely with our aduerſaries the Papiſts, that holding all thoſe bookes to be Scripture, which we doe acknowledge, doe adde vnto them other bookes which are not canonicall : ſo that they offend not as other heretikes, in denying any part of the Scripture, but which is as bad, in adding vnto it; for both theſe are accurſed, Reuel. 22.18. And here I could haue wiſhed that they would haue followed S. Hieroms counſell, writing thus vnto Læta; as touching the canonicall bookes of the olde teſtament, which after he had reckoned vp, as we now hold them, giueth this caueat concerning the Apocrypha: Caueat omnia Apocrypha, & ſi quando ea, non ad dogmatum veritatem, ſed ad ſignorum reuerentiam legere voluerit, ſciat non eorum eſſe, quorum titulis prænotantur, multaque his admixta vitioſa, & grandis eſſe prudentiæ aurum in luto quærere: Let her take heede of all the Apocripha, which if ſhe will read, not for the truth of doctrine, but reuerence of the ſtorie, let her know, that they are not their writings, whoſe title they beare, and that many corrupt things are intermingled; and herein lieth great wiſdome, how to gather gold out of durt. Hieron. ad Lætam.

Firſt of all briefly before we proceed, let vs ſee who they were that did offend in the firſt kinde, namely in denying and detracting from Scripture. Some heretikes generally reiected the whole Scripture, ſome certaine parts thereof. The Sadduces receiued no Scripture, beſides the fiue bookes of Moſes; the Maniches condemned the whole old teſtament, and ſo did wicked Marcion.

The bookes of Moſes the Ptolemaits refuſed, the booke of the Pſalmes the Nicolaitaines, and the Anabaptiſts in our dayes: there wanted not which condemned the booke of the Preacher and the Canticles as wanton and laſciuious bookes: and the Anabaptiſts are not here behind with their parts. The holy and excellent booke of Iob hath alſo found enemies, and ſome of the Rabbins, which doe thinke that the ſtorie is but fained: which hereſie is confuted Ezech. 14.14. for there Noah, Iob, Daniel are named together: ſo that it is manifeſt, that ſuch a man there was. Wicked Porphyrie refuſeth Daniel as forged.

The new teſtament the Maniches moſt impiouſly affirmed to be full of lies. Cerdon the heretike condemned all but Lukes Goſpell. Cerinthus receiued none but Markes. The Valentinians could away with none but Iohns Goſpell. The Alogians of all other hated Iohns writings. The Ebionites only admitted Matthewes Goſpell. The Acts of the Apoſtles the Seuerian heretikes contemned. The Marcionites the Epiſtles to Timothie, to Titus, to the Hebrues. The Ebionites could not away with any of S. Pauls workes. But the Church of God hath euen from the Apoſtles time acknowledged and receiued all the bookes of the new Teſtament, as they now ſtand together, as by Origene a moſt anncient writer of the Church is in theſe words confeſſed: Sacerdotali tuba primus in Euangelio ſuo Matthæus increpuit; Marcus quoque, Lucas & Ioannes ſuis ſingulis tubis ſacerdotalibus cecinerunt, &c. Firſt Matthew ſoundeth forth his euangelicall trumpet; then follow Marke, Luke and Iohn ſinging with their Prieſtly trumpets; Peter alſo ſendeth forth the trumpet of his two Epiſtles; Iames alſo and Iude, and Iohn maketh melodie with his trumpet in his Epiſtles, and the Apocalypſe, and Luke in the acts of the Apoſtles: Et Paulus in quatuordecim epiſtolarum ſuarum fulminat tubis: And Paul thundereth out in the trumpets of his fourteene Epiſtles. Vnto theſe former heretikes adde the Zuinckfeldians and Libertines that refuſe to be iudged by the Scripture, calling it a dead letter, and flie vnto the inward and ſecret reuelations of the ſpirit. And by your leaue the Papiſts are not far from this hereſie ſome of them: although the Ieſuite crie neuer ſo much with open mouth, that we belie them, De verbo Dei lib. 1. cap. 1. Take but a little paines to peruſe that worthy learned mans and reuerent Fathers defence of the Apologie p.521. there you ſhall finde how that Lodouicus a Canon Lateran in Rome, ſaid in the Councell of Trent, that the Scripture is but mortuum atramentum, dead inke. The Biſhop of Poitiers ſaid, that it was but res inanimis & muta, a dead and dumbe thing. Albertus Pigghius, that the Scriptures were but muti Iudices, dumbe Iudges. Eckius calleth it Euangelium nigrum, & theologiam atramentariam, the blacke Goſpell and inkie diuinitie: and it is naſus cereus, a noſe of waxe ſaith he. And now in commeth Hoſius with his part: that it is but loſt labor which is beſtowed in the Scripture: for the Scripture is a creature, and a certaine bare letter. But the Ieſuit ſaith, that we abuſe the name of that man, for thoſe are not his owne words, but he reporteth them of Zuinckfeldius. Be it ſo for this time, though M. Iewel beſtow ſome paines to proue them to be according to his owne meaning. Though theſe be not Hoſius owne words, yet theſe are not much better, yea far worſe, who ſpeaking of Dauids writing of the Pſalms, ſaith thus, Quid ni ſcriberet, ſcribimus indocti doctique poemata paſſim, why might not he write (ſaith he) being a temporall Prince, as Horace ſaith, we write ballads euery body both learned and vnlearned? Hoſ. lib. 2. cont. Brentium.

Homil.7. in Ioſu.

I pray you now how much doe theſe Papiſts differ from the Libertines and Zuinckfeldians, vnleſſe it be in this, that the Libertines cleaue to ſecret reuelations; the Papiſts are pinned vpon the Popes ſleeue, affirming that it is no Scripture nor Goſpell without the determination of the Church. Nay one of them ſaith, Determinatio Eccleſiæ appellatur Euangelium, the determination of the Church is called the Goſpell, Iohannes Maria. Will you yet heare of greater impietie? Anno Domini. 1240. or thereabout, there was a booke ſet forth by the Friers, called Euangelium æternum, full of their owne fables, and abominable errors: they taught that Chriſts Goſpell was not to be compared vnto it,and that the Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould be preached but fiftie yeares. This booke with much adoe was condemned by the Pope,(but after long diſputation) and it was burnt ſecretly,leaſt the Friers ſhould haue been diſcredited: and withall,the booke of Guilielmus de S. amore, which he had written againſt the Friers,and therein diſputed againſt their Goſpell, was commanded to be burned with the other. Beſides theſe hereſies, their opinion alſo is to be reiected, that thinke that the holy writers might in ſome things be deceiued,as miſtaking one thing for another,or fayling in their memorie. To this opinion Eraſmus enclined, whom Bellarmine taketh paine to confute,*lib.1.cap.6.* He might as well haue turned his argument vpon Melchior Canus their owne champion, who thinketh that Stephen Act.7. in telling ſo long a ſtorie might forget himſelfe in ſome things, *Can.lib.2.cap.*18. But we herein miſlike both Eraſmus conceite,and Canus his fancie,and who elſe haue ſo thought of the Scriptures;and ſay rather with S. Auguſtine:Tantummodo ſcripturis canonicis hanc debeo ſeruitutem,&c. I doe onely to the canonicall Scriptures owe this ſeruice and obedience,which I doe ſo follow, that I thinke the writers thereof erred not any whit at all: and with S. *Hierome,*who,whereas ſome accuſed S. Matthew of forgetfulnes,as though he ſhould haue named Ieremie for *Zacharie,*Matth.27.9.thus writeth: *Abſit hoc de pediſſequo Chriſti dicere,&c.*Far be it from me ſo to ſay of the follower of Chriſt,who in alleaging the Prophets,hunted not for words or phraſes,but had a care to ſet down the ſenſe and doctrine:for he thinketh that place there cited to be taken,though not word for word,out of Ieremie. But now to the queſtion.

Epiſt.19.

Hieron. ad Pammach.

CERTAINE QVESTIONS ABOVT SOME of the Canonicall bookes of Scripture.

THe bookes of Scripture whereof we now intreate,are of three ſorts: ſome are both by vs and our aduerſaries iudged to be Canonicall, as all the bookes of the new Teſtament, wholly as they ſtand: and all theſe bookes of the olde Teſtament,ſo many as are found in the Hebrue:Some are both of vs and our aduerſaries reiected,and thruſt out of the canon: what bookes they are, ſhall be declared in the next ſection.

A third ſort there is,which our aduerſaries would gladly bring into the number of the bookes of ſacred Scripture,but we herein doe by warrant of Gods word reſiſt and withſtand them: and of theſe alſo afterward.

Concerning the firſt kinde,namely ſuch bookes,as are both by them and vs acknowledged for Canonicall,there is no queſtion betweene vs for the authoritie of them: only about the booke of the Preacher there ariſeth ſome controuerſie betweene Bellarmine and vs, whom eſpecially I purpoſe to trace through out this treatiſe. We are agreed of the booke it ſelfe,that it is Canonicall; of the author,that he was Salomon: but theſe two points we varie about: firſt Bellarmine thinketh that Salomon made that booke before his fall: we thinke he ſet it forth after, as a token of his repentance: ſecondly,he thinketh that Salomon was a reprobate,and a caſt away for euer: we hold the contrarie: let vs firſt examine his arguments,and then ſet downe our owne.

The Papiſts.

THat this book of the Preacher was compiled by *Salomon,*before he fell,thus the Ieſuite would proue it.

*Argum.*1. The Preacher ſaith,that his wiſedome remained yet with him.chap.2.ver.9.But it is not like, that the heauenly gift of wiſedome continued with him, after his heart was turned from God to Idolatrie: Ergo, it is like this booke was made before his fall, while he was in the ſtate of wiſedome,*lib.1.de verb.cap.*5.

*Anſwer.*1. Salomons wiſedome was not only in diuine,but in humane things,and in the knowledge of nature: for he ſpake of trees, of hearbs, of beaſts and fowles, and therefore he is ſaid to excell in wiſedome the children of the Eaſt, and the wiſe of Egypt, whoſe knowledge was in naturall things, 1.King.4.verſ.30.33. And this wiſedome might remaine with Salomon in the middeſt of pleaſure, as we ſee it was not denied to the vitious and idolatrous heathen Philoſophers: yea and Salomon ſaith of himſelfe, that he thought to giue his heart to wine, and yet to leade his minde in wiſedome, chap.2.verſ.3. ſo that it ſeemeth, that the gift of wiſedome did not whollie faile him,no not in his fall.

2 And what if it were graunted, that the ſpirit of wiſedome departed from him all the time of his dotage? Why might it not returne to him againe afterwards,when he began to repent him of his fall: as the ſpirit of ſtrength and fortitude being gone from Sampſon, for a while, came to him againe.

3 Or thus rather the place may bee vnderſtood: I was great, and increaſed aboue all (ſaith he) that were before me in Ieruſalem, alſo my wiſedome remained with me: that is, he maketh a large and ample confeſſion of his ſinne,that while he was in honour and wealth,with wiſedome,euen then his heart was entiſed from the true worſhip of God, euen in the middeſt of Gods bleſſings: ſuch was his vnthankfulnes to God, and forgetfulnes of his benefits. So then the time of the continuance of his wiſedome, is not to be referred to the inſtant of making this book, but hath reſpect to his fall: for he ſaith, that his honour, riches, and wiſedome continued yet, (I was increaſed:) but it is to bee thought, that as he being drowned in pleaſure, decayed in wiſedome; ſo alſo his credit and ſubſtance was empayred, which were giuen him as handmaides to waite of his wiſedome.

*Argum.*2. Salomon doted when he was an old man, 1.King.11.4. to what time then will you aſſigne then his repentance? Againe, if this book had bin made after his fall, it is like, that whereas he maketh a particular rehearſall of all his pleaſures, he would not haue omitted his pleaſure and delight in ſuch a multitude of wiues and concubines: And is it like, that he being beſotted with the loue of ſo many women, could indite ſuch excellent ſayings? Bellarm.ibid.

*Anſ.*1. Salomon was old when he gaue himſelfe vnto women, yet it is like he was older, when he weaned himſelfe from his pleaſure, and returned vnto God by heartie repentance: for there are diuers degrees of old age. Secondly, it was not neceſſarie that Salomon ſhould reckon vp all his pleaſures: neither indeed doth he: for he ſpake of trees, and beaſts, and fowles, which no doubt was a great delight vnto a wiſe man, to be occupied and exerciſed in knowledge: yet thereof he maketh no mention in the 2.chap. Neither is he altogether ſilent concerning his delight in women: for he ſaith, I prouided me men ſingers, and women ſingers, the delites of the ſonnes of men, verſ.8. And, I haue gotten me men ſeruants, and maides, and had children borne in my houſe: or as the Latin text readeth, I had a great houſehold. He may in this place haue relation to the multitude of his wiues and concubines: why not? 3. To the third poynt, we anſwer: we ſay not, that at the ſame time, while Salomon gaue his minde to pleaſure, that he wrote this booke; but afterwards, when he was come to himſelfe, and awaked out of his long ſleepe.

The Proteſtants.

AT what time the booke of Eccleſiaſtes was written by Salomon, though it bee no materiall poynt of our faith to know; yet becauſe the trueth euery where, ſo much as by diligent endeuour may bee attained vnto, is to be ſought out: It ſhall appeare by theſe reaſons following, that both it is moſt like and probable, that it was indited after Salomons fall, and that it is moſt ſafe ſo to thinke, becauſe there can no other time be aſſigned for Salomons repentance, as it ſhall euen now be ſhewed.

*Argum.*1. Firſt, it is made manifeſt by the inſcription and title of the booke: the words of the Preacher: for from whence is it, that Salomon being a King, to whom it pertaineth not to teach the people, but to the Leuits and Prieſts, doth giue himſelfe ſo ſtrange a ſtile? It is not becauſe by his writing he preacheth: for then in his two other bookes of the Prouerbs and Canticles, by the ſame reaſon, he might haue ſo named himſelfe: but of a King he is now become a Preacher, preaching vnto the people by the example of his conuerſion. The word קהלת choheleth properly ſignifieth Eccleſiaſten, ſeu Eccleſiaſticum, a Churchman, or a man of the congregation: And ſo Salomon calleth himſelfe, either becauſe he was now reſtored, and made as it were a man of the Church againe: or becauſe publikely he had ſome ſpeech, after his returning to God, as is the manner of theſe, which publikely ſhew repentance for their ſinne, ſic Iunius in hunc locum.

*Argum.*2. The Preacher in this booke doth euery where vrge his owne experience: as I turned me to behold, 2.12. I haue ſeene vnder the ſunne, 3.16. I haue ſeene all things in the daies of my vanitie, 7.17. He alſo profeſſeth as much, that he ſought in his heart by his owne experience to finde out, wherein conſiſted the chiefe goodnes of men vnder the ſunne, 2.3. And hauing runne thorough the courſe of al things in his owne knowledge and experience, he at the length, as a man of much obſeruation and great continuance concludeth: Vanitie of vanities, (ſaith the Preacher) all is but vanitie, chap.12.8. Ergo, it is like that Salomon wrote this booke, being now thorough aged, and of long experience: wiſedome indeede goeth not by yeeres, but experience is the daughter and offſpring of old age.

*Argum.*3. Further, the Preacher ſaith, he ſought in his heart to giue himſelfe to wine, and to apprehend folly, Eccleſ.2.3. But when elſe did he lay hold on folly, then, when he fell into the ſnares of women, and was ſeduced to Idolatrie? Ergo, this booke was made after his fall. It will here I know be anſwered, that there is no ſuch thing in the text, as I haue alleaged: Indeed, in the vulgar Latine there is not, which tranſlateth cleane contrary to the Hebrue: for in ſtead of, Cogitaui pertrahere animum ad vinum, & prehendere ſtultitiam, I thought to draw my ſelfe to wine, and to apprehend folly: it is read, Cogitaui abſtrahere me à vino, & deuitare ſtultitiam: I bethought to withdraw my ſelfe from wine, and to ſhunne follie; quite contrarie. But Bellarmine taketh vpon him to iuſtifie the vulgar tranſlation, and ſaith that the hebrue letter ב beth, ſignifieth in conſtruction as well from as to; and therefore wee may as well reade from wine, as to wine: and this is more agreeable to the text ſaith he, becauſe it followeth, and to leade my heart in wiſedome, &c.

Lib.2.de verb. cap.9. reſp. ad arg.3.

*Anſ.*1. The Ieſuite, that maketh himſelfe ſo skilfull in the ſignification of the Hebrue, ſhould haue quoted ſome place, where this letter ב, following in conſtruction the word משך maſhach, that ſignifieth to draw,is tranſlated from: but that can he not finde,but the contrarie:as Iudg.4.6.Deborah biddeth Baruck draw the people not from,but to the mount Tabor. 2. But he ſaith nothing of the other word אחז achaz, which neuer ſignifieth,deuitauit,he ſhunned,but the contrarie,apprehendit, he apprehended. 3. This reading agreeth better with the text: for the Preacher ſaith, that euen while his wiſedome remained with him,he gaue himſelfe to wine and pleaſure:as afterward in the tenth verſe.

*Argum.*4. Laſtly,we hold it a very firme and ſure thing, that Salomon recouered his fall, and was reſtored to fauour before he dyed: as in the next place it is to be ſeene: and that this booke was ſet foorth as a ſeale and ſure ſigne of his repentance,which it could not be, if it were written before,and not after his fall. And of this iudgement is S. Hierome,that the booke of Eccleſiaſtes was written after Salomons fall, and to that purpoſe he expoundeth thoſe words, 2.Chron.9.29. The reſt of the workes of Salomon firſt and laſt are written in the booke of Nathan the Prophet,&c. Priorũ antequam præuaricatus, poſteriorũ poſtquam præuaricatus: His firſt workes were thoſe before his fall, and his laſt after his fall. But what workes were more like to follow after his fall,then his repentance,and the writing of this booke? and therefore in the ſtorie of the Kings it is ſaid, The reſt of the words of Salomon: 1.King.11.41. Wherefore Salomon euen after his fall vttered many wiſe words,and his wiſedome returned vnto him: and it is like to haue been ſome notable thing,that Salomon did in his latter time,ſeeing that three Prophets,as Nathan, Abiah, Ieedo in their bookes made mention thereof: as in 2.Chron.9.29.

The Papiſts.

THe ſecond point of the difference here betweene Bellarmine and vs,is that he thinketh,Salomonem à Deo reprobatum fuiſſe, that Salomon was reprobate of God: though (he ſaith) he is not ignorant,that the Iewes and Hierome alſo are of a contrarie opinion, yet he rather followeth Auguſtines iudgement herein,who ſhould ſo write(as he ſaith) *in Pſal.*126.that Salomon was reiected of God. Other arguments beſide the credit of Auguſtines name, he vſeth none, *Bellarm.de verb.dei lib.*1.*cap.*5.

Anſ. I thinke the Ieſuite doth greatly miſtake and miſconſter Auguſtine in the place alleaged: he ſpeaketh there indeede of the fall of Salomon, not of his finall reprobation: Quid mirum (ſaith he) ſi in populo Dei cecidit Salomon? in paradiſo non cecidit Adam? What marueile is it if Salomon fell among the people, or in the Church of God? did not Adam fall in paradiſe? If Salomon were no more reprobate then Adam was, nor his fall more dangerous then his, Salomon was no caſt-away at all. Auguſtine addeth further: Iſte Salomon ædificauerat templum domini, in typo futuræ eccleſiæ, & corporis Chriſti: This Salomon built the temple of the Lord,to bee a type of the Church,and bodie of Chriſt to come: *ibid. in Pſal.*126. Hence then a reaſon may bee framed thus: you cannot ſhew me in all the Scripture, that a reprobate was euer appointed of God to be a figure of Chriſt or his Church: But Salomon was a figure of Chriſt,as it is euident throughout the whole 45.Pſal. and the temple he built,as a figure of Chriſts bodie, Ioh.2.Ergo.

Againe, ſaith Bellarmine, the Scripture maketh no mention of the repentance of Salomon, and therefore it is like he repented not.

*Anſ.*1. Though in matters of faith,and points of doctrine an argument may bee taken negatiuely from the Scripture, yet not ſo in matters of fact: it is a good conſequent, this doctrine is not found in Scripture,and therefore ought not to be receiued: yet it followeth not,this or that thing is not mentioned to haue been done in the ſtorie of Scripture, therefore it was not done: for Chriſt did many workes and miracles which are not remembred in the Goſpell: doth it follow therefore,that he did no more,becauſe no more are ſpoken of in the Goſpell? 2. I may then frame you the ſame anſwere, which your Maſter of Sentences maketh to that place of Ambroſe, who ſpeaking of S.Peters repentance, ſaith, Lachrymas eius lego, ſatisfactionem non lego: I reade of his teares,not of his ſatiſfaction. Your Maſter thus anſwereth: Multa facta ſunt, quæ ſcripta non ſunt: Many things haue been done, that are not written. Though the Maſters anſwer be not ſufficient here, becauſe ſatisfaction is with them an eſſentiall point of penance, and pertaineth to doctrine: yet may it very well ſerue our turne in a matter of fact as touching Salomons repentance. 3. And yet wee doe affirme, that this act of Salomons conuerſion and repentance, is not altogether without euidence of Scripture,as now followeth to be ſhewed.

Mag.lib.4.d.17.ſ.

The Proteſtants.

THat Salomon was not reiected or reprobate of God, but choſen rather and elected, thus by Scripture we make it plaine.

*Argum.*1. I vrge thoſe places of Scripture, 2.Sam.12.24. it is ſaid, that God loued Salomon, and thereupon the Prophet called him Iedidiiah, beloued of God: but whom God loueth, he loueth to the end. Againe, 2.Sam.7.14.there the Prophet thus ſpeaketh in the name of the Lord concerning Salomon: I will be his father,and he ſhall be my ſonne: if he ſinne, I will chaſten him, &c. but my mercie ſhall not depart away from him,as I tooke it from Saul,whom I haue put away before me: the reaſon is gathered thus : Salomon was not caſt away as Saul was, Saul was caſt away for euer. Ergo, ſo was not Salomon.

Argum.2. Reade 2.Chron.11.verſ.17. Rehoboam (ſaith the text) for three yeeres walked in the way of Dauid and Salomon, that is,in the true worſhip of God: Dauids way and Salomons way, are here ioyned together,and taken for all one : but Dauid dyed the ſeruant of God : Ergo, alſo Salomon. Neither can any man here ſay, that Salomons way is here iudged by the beginning, not by the end : for God meaſureth the righteouſnes of men by the end, not by the beginning : he iudgeth them as he findeth them,he regardeth not what they haue been,Ezech.18.24.

Argum.3. Though theſe places of Scripture are euident enough to conuince the matter in hand,yet we will vnto theſe adioyne this reaſon : Can any man ſhew me, when,and where, God vſed a reprobate as his inſtrument, and pen-man to write Scripture, or as a type and figure of Chriſt? but Salomon was both a writer and regiſter of Scripture,and a moſt liuely type of Chriſt: Ergo, he was no reprobate. The propoſition of this argument is apparantly grounded vpon Scripture,as Rom.8.14. As many as are led by the ſpirit of God,are the ſonnes of God: but the Prophets which were the writers and pen-men of Scripture,ſpake as they were moued by the holy Ghoſt, 2.Pet.1.21. and ſo were led by the ſpirit: Ergo, they were the ſonnes of God, and ſo not reprobates. Now wherein Salomon was a type of Chriſt,is thus declared by Origen in his prologue vpon the Canticles : In plurimis Salomonem Chriſti typum ferre, &c. That Salomon in many things did beare the type of Chriſt is not to be doubted : firſt,in that he is called peaceable:ſecondly,in that the Queene of the South came vnto him from the ends of the earth : and Chriſt is the true Eccleſiaſtes,or Preacher,who took vpon him the forme of a ſeruant,that he might congregate and gather together his Church : A congregando enim eccleſiam eccleſiaſtes dicitur : For he is named of the Church,of gathering ẏ Church together.And thus it appeareth how Salomon was a type of Chriſt.

Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Where I am, there alſo ſhall my miniſters be, Ioh.12.26. but the writers of Scripture were in this eſpeciall ſeruice the principall miniſters of Chriſt : Ergo,they reſt with Chriſt and are not caſt-awaies. But ſufficient of this by matter,let vs now proceede.

OF THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKES of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

1.Error. There are certaine bookes annexed to the old Teſtament, which the Papiſts themſelues doe not acknowledge for canonicall,as the Prayer of Manaſſes, the two bookes of Eſdras, commonly called the third and fourth of Eſdras : alſo other which are not vſually in our Engliſh Bibles,as an appendix to the booke of Iob,the 151.Pſalme,a Preface to the lamentations of Ieremie,the third and fourth booke of the Machabees, a booke called the Paſtor. None of all theſe bookes are found in the Hebrue : one of them onely is tranſlated out of the Syriake, namely, the appendix to Iob: ſome of them are extant in Latin onely, as the Prayer of Manaſſes, the third and fourth of Eſdras, the reſt are in Greeke. Of all the other, the bookes of Eſdras are worthie of leaſt credit,being ſtuffed full of vaine fables, fitter to feed curious eares, then tending to edification : as cap.4.6.lib.4. there is a tale put in of two great fiſhes, Henoch, and Leuiathan,which no waters could hold : chap.4.41.he ſaith,that the ſoules are kept in the womb of the earth : in the 14.chapter he reporteth how the bookes of Scripture being loſt in the captiuitie, were reſtored by Eſdras,and how after he had drunke off a cup of water, but as fire in colour, giuen him by the Angell,he ſpake fortie daies together and ceaſed not : in which ſpace fiue Scribes wrote from his mouth 204.bookes:theſe and ſuch like tales that booke is full of. All theſe aforeſaid bookes are as well by our aduerſaries,as our ſelues reiected: ſo that they themſelues dare not allow all that is extant in their Latin vulgar tranſlation.

Other bookes alſo there were ſome annexed to the old Teſtament, ſome to the new, which were deuiſed by Heretikes, but now are not extant, whereof there is no queſtion betweene vs : as another booke of Geneſis, called μικρογένεσις, Geneſis the leſſe, whereof Hierome maketh mention, tom.4.de.42.manſionib. Likewiſe the booke of Henoch,which, as Auguſtine ſaith,ob nimiam antiquitatem reijcitur,is reiected becauſe it is too old : lib.18.de ciuitat.dei.cap.38.

Gelaſius alſo in his Decretall, reciteth certaine Apocryphal bookes of the old Teſtament : as one of the daughters of Adam,another of Ogias,a giant, that ſhould fight with the Dragon after the flood : a booke alſo called the repentance of Iamnes and Mambres : Decret.p.1.d.15.c.3.

Theſe bookes alſo were forged in the new Teſtament: as the goſpell of the twelue Apoſtles,the goſpell of Thomas,another goſpell of Matthias : mentioned by S. Ambroſe, proœm.in Luc. S. Hierome alſo,Catolog.ſcriptor. maketh mention of theſe bookes : the acts of Peter,the goſpell of Peter, the preaching of Peter, the reuelation of Peter : a goſpell to the Hebrewes : an epiſtle of Barnabas : the peregrinations of Paul and Tecla.

Gelaſius in his Decretall reckoneth vp a great number of ſuch like forgeries: as the iourneyes of Peter, the acts of Andrew, the acts of Philip, the acts of Peter, the acts of Thomas: alſo the goſpell of Thaddæus, the goſpell of Thomas, the goſpell of Barnabas, the goſpell of S. Andrew: likewiſe certaine forged reuelations, as of Paul, of Thomas, of Stephen: with many ſuch other, as may bee ſeene in that place, as it is alleaged by Gratian, Decret.p.1.d.15,cap.3. But of theſe and ſuch like there is no controuerſie betweene vs.

The queſtion betweene vs then is concerning theſe bookes: firſt, certaine peeces ioyned to canonicall bookes, as ſeuen chapters of Eſther; certaine ſtories annexed to Daniel, as of Bell and the Dragon, of Suſanna, the Song of the three children: alſo the Epiſtle of Baruch ioyned to Ieremie. Then follow certaine whole bookes, as Tobie, Iudith, the Wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus, two bookes of the Machabees: theſe ſixe bookes, with the other three appendices or peeces of bookes the Papiſts hold to be canonicall, and of as firme authoritie as any part of the Scripture. Arguments they haue none, beſide certaine teſtimonies of ſome Fathers and Councels, which we purpoſe not to deale withall, leauing them to our learned countrie men who haue taken in hand to diſcuſſe theſe controuerſies to the full, Bellarm.de verb.dei lib.1.cap.4.

The Proteſtants.

VVE are agreed concerning the new Teſtament, that all the bookes thereof as they ſtand are to be receiued of all for Scripture: for as for thoſe forged goſpels of Thomas, S. Andrew, of Nicodemus, and the like, though the Church were troubled with them in times paſt, yet their memorie being now worne out, there is no queſtion of them. Concerning the bookes on both ſides acknowledged, if ſome one man ſeeme to doubt of ſome one part, as Luther is thought to doe of the Epiſtle of Iames and Iude, it ought no more to preiudice vs, then Caietanus opinion doth hurt them, who called more bookes in queſtion then Luther did, as the Epiſtle of Iames, of Iude, the ſecond of Peter, the ſecond and third of Iohn, the laſt chapter of Marke.

We differ not then in the new Teſtament, vnleſſe it be concerning the author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, which our aduerſaries ſtoutly affirme to bee S. Pauls, which wee denie not, neither certainly can affirme it, ſeeing in ſome Greeke copies it is left out, and in the Syriack tranſlation: ſome would proue S. Paul to be the author of this Epiſtle, by that place 2.Pet.3.15. where the Apoſtle maketh mention of S. Pauls Epiſtles, which according to the wiſedome giuen vnto him he wrote to you: that is, the Hebrewes, for vnto them S. Peter writeth both the firſt, 1.epiſt.1.1. and the ſecond Epiſtle, 2.Epiſt.3.verſ.1. I finde alſo that many excellent godly learned men of ancient time, as Hierome, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, and before them Origen, hom.8.in Geneſ. with others, haue taken S. Paul for the author of this Epiſtle. And among the late famous witneſſes of Gods truth, and holy Martyrs (to whoſe iudgement I attribute as much, if not more, as to any mans beſide) that bleſſed man Maſter Philpot, doth cite S. Paul to the Hebrewes, in a certaine epiſtle of his written to the Chriſtian congregation, Fox.p.1832. and againe in another epiſtle to certaine godly brethren, pag. 1385. col.2. But it mattereth not who was the author, ſeeing wee receiue it as canonicall: for the title is no part of the booke, and ſo neither of Scripture: and we receiue many bookes in the old Teſtament, the authors whereof are not perfectly knowne. And of this matter, thus further writeth S. Hierome: Catalog.ſcriptor.Epiſtola, quæ fertur ad Hæbræos, &c. The epiſtle to the Hebrewes is not thought to be Pauls, becauſe of the difference of the phraſe and ſtile: but either the epiſtle of Barnabas according to Tertullian, or of Luke or Clement: or ſurely, becauſe Paul writ to the Hebrewes, he cut off the title of his name, becauſe it was enuied amongſt them: he writeth as an Hebrew to the Hebrewes, that is in his owne tongue moſt eloquently. Thus Hierome reporteth many opinions, ſetting downe nothing certainly himſelfe.

But here by the way, if I might be ſo bold, I would ſpurre a queſtion to our Romane Diuines, that whereas it was decreed (as they would beare vs in hand) by the Apoſtles, *can. Apoſtol.*84. that the two epiſtles of Clement, and his precepts or conſtitutions contained in eight bookes, ſhould be counted amongſt the canonicall bookes of the new Teſtament: for theſe are the words of the canon, Sint omnibus vobis Clericis & laicis, ſacri & venerandi libri, &c. Let theſe be accounted of all both Clerkes and lay men, as holy and reuerend bookes: and then are reckoned vp the bookes of the old Teſtament, and afterward of the new, amongſt the which, the foreſaid workes of Clement are numbred. If thoſe bee the right canons of the Apoſtles, as wee are made to beleeue they are, how dare our aduerſaries doe contrarie to this decree? wee will giue them leaue to pauſe a while of this matter, and in the meane time proceede.

So then all the queſtion betweene vs, is about the Apocrypha of the olde Teſtament: they are called Apocrypha, becauſe they are hid and obſcure, not becauſe their authors are vnknowne: for as I ſaid, we knowe not by whom certaine Canonicall bookes were written. Neither are they ſo called becauſe of ſome vntruthes contained in them contrarie to Scripture, as the moſt of them haue, as we heard before out of S. Hierome: Multa his admixta vitioſa: That there are many falſe things mixed in theſe bookes: for it followeth not, that euery booke which hath no vntrueth or lye, ſhould ſtraightwaies be taken for Scripture: but they are therefore iudged and called Apocrypha, becauſe they were not in former time receiued into publike and authenticke authoritie in the Church, neither to be alleaged as grounds of our faith, though they may be read for example of life, and may haue other profitable vſe, as S. Hierome well ſaith, Legat ad ædificationem plebis, non ad authoritatem Eccleſiaſticorum dogmatum confirmandam: The Church readeth them for the edifying of the people, not the confirmation of doctrine: Præfat. in Prouerb. And S. Auguſtine ſheweth why they are ſo called, Quia nulla teſtificationis luce declarati, de neſcio quo ſecreto, neſcio quorum præſumptione prolati ſunt: Becauſe they were publiſhed with no light of authoritie, but hatched in ſecret by ſome mens, I know not whoſe preſumption. But the Canonicall Scripture only hath this priuiledge to giue rules of faith, and thereupon it hath the name, that we may be bold to beleeue and ground our faith vpon the Canonicall and holy Scripture, which is the onely word of God. Wherefore out of this number of Canonicall Scripture we exclude all the bookes afore named, and therefore let not the reader be deceiued, that although they be ioyned in one volume with the Scripture, to thinke that they are for that, of the ſame authoritie and credite with the reſt: firſt we will ſhew our reaſons in generall, and afterward come to the particular bookes in order.

Contra Fauſt. lib.11.2.

1 All Canonicall Scripture in the olde Teſtament was written by Prophets: We haue a ſure word of the Prophets, ſaith S. Peter, 2.1.19. and S. Paul, Rom.16.26. calleth them the Scriptures of the Prophets: and S. Auguſtine ſaith, Quas itaque ſcripturas dicimus, niſi canonicas, legis & prophetarum? de vnitat. eccleſ. cap.16. We acknowledge no Canonicall Scriptures of the old and new Teſtament, but the law and the Prophets: But none of thoſe bookes aforenamed, of Tobias, Iudith and the reſt, were written by the Prophets: for they were all written ſince Malachies time, who was the laſt Prophet, as the Church complaineth, Pſalm.74.9. There is not one Prophet, nor any that can tell vs how long: Ergo none of theſe bookes are Canonicall.

2 All the Canonicall bookes of the olde Teſtament, were acknowledged of the Iewes and Hebrues, for they were then onely the Church of God, and where ſhould Scripture be found but in the Church? To them, ſaith S. Paul, were committed the oracles of God, Rom.3.2. But the Iewes receiued none of theſe bookes into the Canon of the Scripture. For moſt of them were written in the Greeke, but none of them in the Hebrue tongue. And this ſome of the Papiſts cannot deny. Ergo they are not Canonicall. Here alſo S. Auguſtine thus writeth, Omnes literæ, quibus Chriſtus prophetatus eſt, apud Iudæos ſunt: All the bookes which propheſied of Chriſt, are kept amongſt the Iewes, in Pſalm.56. and S. Hierome vpon thoſe words of the Parable, All mine are thine, Luke 15. thus writeth to the ſame purpoſe, Omnia intelligamus, legem, prophetas, eloquia diuina: By all we vnderſtand, the law and Prophets, and the diuine ſayings: the Iewes then had all the Scriptures, but they had none of theſe Apocrypha, therefore they are no part of Scripture.

Tom.4. de filio prodigo.

Canus a Papiſt anſwereth, Non reiectos fuiſſe hos libros à Iudæis, ſed non receptos, that theſe bookes were not reiected of the Iewes, but onely not receiued, lib.1. Annot. Anſ.1. This is but a quaint diſtinction, for that thing, which a man knoweth, and yet receiueth not, nor alloweth, what doth he elſe, but reiect it? As our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, He that is not with me, is againſt me: and he that gathereth not, ſcattereth abroad, Luke 11.23. The Iewes therefore in that they receiued not, nor acknowledged thoſe bookes, refuſed and reiected them. Secondly, how could they otherwiſe chuſe but reiect thoſe bookes, and ſunder them from the reſt of the Scripture, which were written in a ſtrange tongue, and not in Hebrue, wherein the reſt of holy Scripture was written? And what opinion the Iewes haue of theſe bookes, S. Hierome further witneſſeth thus: Arguunt nos Hebræorum ſtudia, & imputant nobis contra ſuum canonem latinis auribus iſta transferre: The ſtudious Hebrues finde fault with vs, and blame vs for tranſlating into latine, bookes contrarie to their canon: præfat in Tobiam. The Iewes then did not onely not receiue theſe Apocryphall bookes, but reiected them alſo: and of this iudgement is Arias Montanus one of their owne Church, that no bookes of the old Teſtament not extant in the originall Hebrue, are Canonicall.

3 There is no Scripture of the old Teſtament, but it hath approbation of the new: for as the Prophets beare witneſſe to Chriſt, ſo he againe doth witnes for the Prophets, and therefore it is a true propoſition of Caietane, though he be controuled and checked of Catharinus another Papiſt for it, that there is no Scripture, which was not either written or approoued by the Apoſtles: but in the whole new Teſtament you ſhall not finde one teſtimonie cited either in the Goſpell or the Epiſtles out of any of the Apocrypha, as out of other bookes of Scripture: therefore hauing no approbation of the new Teſtament, we conclude, they are none of the olde.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtles haue declared thoſe books to be Canonicall, lib.1. de verbo. cap.10. Anſwer.1. Catharinus herein is contrarie to Bellarmine. For he ſaith, that the Church hath receiued certaine bookes for Canonicall, Quos nec ſcriptos ab Apoſtolis, nec approbatos fuiſſe conſtat: Which it is certaine, were neither written, nor approoued by the Apoſtles, lib.1. Annot. Secondly, they are neuer able to ſhew, when and where the Apoſtles declared theſe bookes to be Canonicall, for as much as they are not cited, neither in the Goſpels, nor Epiſtles, written by the Apoſtles,which onely are their authenticall writings. And therefore we againe conclude,that becauſe the new Teſtament doth not giue any witneſſe to any of theſe bookes, as it doth to the law and the Prophets, Quibus Chriſtus (as Auguſtine ſaith) perbibet teſtimonium, vt teſtibus ſuis: Vnto the which Chriſt giueth teſtimonie, as his witneſſes, *lib.2.contra.Gaud. cap.*23. Therefore they are no part of the old Teſtament: As Hierome then ſaith of the interpretation of Scripture, Sit illa vera interpretatio quam Apoſtoli probauerunt: That is the true interpretation which the Apoſtles haue approued; ſo thoſe are the very authenticall Scriptures, which haue the teſtimonie and approbation of the Apoſtles.

Præfat. in Euangel.

4 It ſhall appeare in the ſeuerall diſcourſe of the particular bookes,that there is ſomewhat euen in the bookes themſelues to be found,that barreth them from being Canonicall.

OF THE BOOKE OF BARVCH.

The Papiſts.

THis is their beſt reaſon for the authoritie of this hooke, becauſe Baruch was Ieremies ſcribe: and therefore Baruch cannot be refuſed,vnleſſe alſo we doubt of Ieremie.Bellarm.lib.1.de verbo Dei.cap.8.

The Proteſtants.

THis booke was neither written by Ieremie nor Baruch: firſt,becauſe it is in Greeke: if either Ieremie or Baruch had written it,it is moſt like they would haue written in Hebrue.Secondly, the phraſe and manner of ſpeech ſheweth,that it was neuer written in Hebrue:for in the 6.Chapter in the Epiſtle of Ieremie,verſ.2. it is ſaid that the Iſraelites ſhould be in captiuitie ſeuen generations,that is 70. yeares, but it cannot be found in any Hebrue booke that a generation is taken for the ſpace of 10. yeares.

I will adde vnto this a matter of experience concerning this booke: One Ed. Allin a conſtant Martyr,reading this place in the 6. of Baruch, Wherefore when you ſee the multitude of people worſhipping them (he meaneth the Idols) behinde and before, ſay in your hearts,it is thau, O Lord,that ought onely to be worſhipped. By this place, the ſaid Martyr ſaith,he was ſeduced to heare Maſſe, and therefore his conſcience gaue him, that it was no Scripture. Fox.pag.1980.col.1. Concerning this booke alſo S. Hierome writeth thus: Præfat. in Ierem. librum Baruch Notarij eius,qui apud Hebræos nec habetur,nec legitur prætermiſimus: I haue pretermitted the booke of Baruch Ieremies ſcribe,which the Hebrues neither haue nor reade: But if it had been one of the Canonicall bookes,Hierome would not haue paſſed it ouer.

We want not alſo the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries: for Iohannes Driedo, a writer of their own, refuſeth this booke to be Canonical. lib.1.de ſcriptur. & dogmatib. eccleſiaſtic.cap.vltimo.

OF THE SEVEN APOCRYPHAL Chapters of Eſther.

The Papiſts.

ONe of their chiefe Arguments, beſides teſtimonies and authorities, which would make too great a Volume,is this (which is common alſo to the reſt of the Apocrypha) they are read in the Church,and haue been of auncient time. Ergo they are Canonicall. I anſwere, that it is no good argument. Hierome ſaith plainely, Legit Eccleſia, ſed eos inter Scripturas Canonicas non recipit, Præfat. in lib. Solomon. The Church indeede (ſaith he) readeth them, yet for all that they are not Canonicall. And Auguſtine was wont to reade vnto the people the Epiſtles of the Donatiſts,and his anſwers vnto them,*Epiſt.*203.

The Proteſtants.

THe moſt of our reaſons againſt the authoritie of the 7. Chapters added to Eſther (for of the 10. firſt Chapters,which are found in the Hebrue,we make no doubt at all) are drawne from the matter of the booke it ſelfe.

1 In the ſecond of the Canonicall Eſther,ver.16. it is ſaid that the conſpiracie of the two Eunuches againſt the King,was in the ſeuenth yeare of Aſſuerus: but in the 11. Chap.verſ.2. of the Apocryphall Eſther,we reade that Mardocheus did dreame of this conſpiracie in the ſecond yeare. Bellarmine anſwereth,that both are true;for the dreame was in the ſecond yere,and the conſpiracie in the ſeuenth; ſo belike,there was fiue yeres betweene. But in the 11. Chapter, it is ſaid that Mardocheus was much troubled about that dreame,and the next night after his dreame the conſpiracie was enterpriſed.

2 The true hiſtorie of Eſther ſaith, that Mardocheus had no reward at that time of the king, chap.6.3. but the forged ſtorie ſaith,chap.12. that at the ſame time the King gaue him great gifts, which cannot be meant of that great honor,as Bellarmine coniectureth, which afterward was beſtowed vpon Mardoche: for then Haman (being hanged the ſame day that Mardoche was aduanced to honor,Eſther.6.7.) could worke him no deſpite,whereas the forged ſtorie ſaith, that after the King had rewarded him,then Haman began to ſtomach him,becauſe of thoſe two Eunuches.

3 Againe, the ſtorie which is added, was written many yeeres after Mardocheus and Eſthers death,vnder the raigne of Ptolemaus and Cleopatra,as it appeareth chap.11.1.It is not like therefore to be a true ſtorie. Bellarmines ridiculous coniecture is this, that there were two ſtories written in Hebrue of Eſther, the one compendious and ſhort, which wee now haue: the other more large, which might bee tranſlated by Lyſimachus there ſpoken of, chap.11.whoſe tranſlation we now only haue,the originall being periſhed.And it might be,ſaith he,that theſe 7.chapters were ſometimes written in Hebrue, ſed caſu aliquo excidiſſe, by ſome miſchance were loſt. Anſw.Firſt, the text ſaith not that Lyſimachus tranſlated any ſuch Hebrue ſtorie,but onely the epiſtle of Phurim. Secondly, this cannot bee that ample and large ſtorie imagined, being ſhorter,and not ſo full as the canonicall Eſther. Thirdly,it is not like that theſe chapters, or this other ſtorie,which he imagineth,was euer written in Hebrue: for they were more like to bee kept in the Hebrue tongue,then in the Greeke: for ſo much as there was neuer any people more carefull in keeping any thing, then the Iewes were of their Hebrue Scriptures. Theſe therefore are but bare, and light coniectures to make canonicall Scripture.

4 Beſides,the falſe ſtorie ſaith,that Haman was a Macedonian,chap.16.verſ.10. the true ſtorie ſaith,he was an Agagite or Amalekite, chap.8.3. how can theſe two agree? Nay, the forged booke ſaith, that Haman would haue deſtroyed the King, and ſo conueied the kingdome of the Perſians to the Macedonians: which could in no wiſe be: for the kingdome of the Macedonians was not yet ſpoken of: and ſo it continued in ſmall or no reputation till Philippus the father of Alexander, who was very neere 150.yeeres after, by Bellarmines owne confeſſion.

Bellarmine to ſalue vp this matter,and to bring Mardoche neerer to the end of the Perſian Monarch,when as the kingdome of the Macedonians began to floriſh,maketh him to be not ſo little as 170.yeere old,as old as Abraham; an age not incident into thoſe daies, whereas in Moſes time the age of mans life is abridged to 70.or 80.yeeres, Pſal.90. or els, ſaith he,whereas Mardoche is ſaid to haue been brought with King Ioachim into captiuitie, it was not, becauſe hee was then borne,but was in his fathers loynes. Who ſeeth not what ſillie ſhifts theſe are?

5 Other contradictions there are betweene thoſe two ſtories of Eſther: the falſe ſtorie ſaith, that when Eſther came in to the King, that he looked fiercely vpon her,in ſo much,that ſhe fell downe as dead, chap.15.10. but the true ſtorie witneſſeth, that at the firſt the King held vp his ſcepter to the Queene in token of fauour, and well accepted of her comming. The falſe ſtorie, that Haman went about to hurt Mardoche becauſe of the two Eunuchs,whoſe conſpiracie he had reuealed, chap.12.6. But the true ſtorie ſaith, that he began to ſtomacke Mardoche, becauſe he would not bow the knee to him,nor doe him reuerence,Eſth.3.2. Vide plura apud Whitak.quæſt.1. cap.18.de Scriptur. S.Hierome with the reſt of the Apocrypha, which are not extant in the Hebrue,excludeth theſe chapters of Eſther out of the canonicall Scripture,tom.4.Paulino: and in his preface to the bookes of the Kings. Neither doe we here want the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries, for both Nicholaus Lyranus, and Dionyſius Carthuſianus in their commentaries vpon this booke, and Sixtus Senenſis,lib.1.& 8.bibliothec. doe refuſe this appendix of Eſther,as not being canonicall.

OF CERTAINE CHAPTERS annexed to Daniel.

THere are three parcels ioyned to Daniel, the Song of the three children,the ſtorie of Suſanna, of Bel and the Dragon,in the vulgar Latin,which are not any part of canonicall Scripture.

1 They are neither extant in Hebrue at this day, nor are like to haue been tranſlated out of Hebrue into Greeke: but compiled firſt in Greeke,and therefore not written by Daniel: for verſ. 54.58. of the ſtorie of Suſanna, where one of the Elders ſaith, he ſaw her vnder a Lentiske tree, the other vnder a Prune tree: he vſeth a certaine paronomaſie or alluſion vnto the Greek words: which cannot ſtand in the Hebrue,as of the tree σχῖνος, he ſaith the Angell of the Lord σχίσει, ſhall cut you in two: and ſo of the tree πρῖνος,πρίσει, ſhall deuide thee in two. As if a man ſhould thus allude in Engliſh: thou waſt vnder the Prune tree: the Lord ſhall prune thee.This alluſion is not in the Hebrue, as the learned haue very well obſerued, but onely in the Greeke. This exception was taken long agoe againſt this booke by Iulius Africanus, who liued vnder M.Aurelius Antoninus, and hereof did write an epiſtle to Origene, from whom Bellarmine borroweth his anſwere which here followeth: Hierom.catalog.ſcriptor. Who alſo reporteth of a certaine learned Iew, that becauſe of this alluſion doubted not to ſay, that this booke was compiled by ſome Greeke: for the alluſion(ſaith he) is in Greeke,as if a man ſhould ſay in Latin, De illice arbore,illico pereas,& à lentiſco,non lente pereas: and as if in Engliſh a man ſhould thus ſay, thou waſt vnder a firre tree, the Lord ſhall fire thee,or vnder a pare tree, he ſhall pare thee.

Præfat. in Daniel.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Daniel neither named the Lentiſke tree, nor the Prime tree, but ſome other, that might haue an alluſion to cutting, as the names in Greeke haue: and that the Greeke tranſlator kept not the word, but the ſenſe. Bellarm.cap.9. Anſw. Firſt, the Ieſuite, that is ſo full of his coniectures, ſhould likewiſe haue geſſed, what trees they were, and how they are called in Hebrue, that Daniel named: ſo ſhould his coniecture haue ſeemed more probable. Secondly, if his imagined Hebrue ſhould name one tree, the interpreter ſhould ſet downe another, to keepe the alluſion ſtill, one of them muſt needes tell an vntrueth, and ſo both of them could not be Scripture, which faileth not in the leaſt trueth.

2 The particular time is not knowne when this ſtorie ſhould bee done: yet it is certaine, it was in the captiuitie; for Suſanna dwelt in Babylon: but Daniel could not then bee ſo young a childe as the ſtorie maketh, for he was carried away in the firſt captiuitie with Iehoiakim, as it is Dan.1. And Ezechiel, that liued about that time, doth ſpeake of the great prudence and ſage wiſedome of Daniel, Ezech.28.3. and ioyneth him with Noah and Iob, chap.14. All this proueth that Daniel could not bee ſo very a babe in the beginning of the captiuitie, as the ſtorie maketh him.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Ezechiel maketh mention of Daniel, viuentis adhuc in ætate puerili, being but a childe: being euen then famous amongſt the people for the deliuering of Suſanna, and for his interpretations of dreames. Anſwer. But the contrarie is eaſily proued, that Daniel was no childe, when Ezechiel gaue this teſtimonie of him. 1. He is ioyned with Noah and Iob, and the text ſaith, They ſhall ſaue neither ſonnes nor daughters: which could not bee true of Daniel, being himſelfe but a childe. And though, as the Ieſuite ſaith, it be but a ſuppoſition, that if theſe three were among them, &c. yet would not the Prophet ſuppoſe a thing impoſſible, as if a childe might haue both ſonnes and daughters. 2. Againe, the word which the Prophet vſeth, ſaying (if theſe three men, &c.) אנוש, is neuer giuen to any childe in Scripture, but is alwaies ſpoken of the elder ſort: as 1.Sam.17.12. Iſhai ſenex veniens inter homines: Iſhai was counted old among men, Likewiſe, Eſay.32.9. Riſe ye women or mothers, and heare ye daughters: the word is נשים naſhim, which is the plurall number of אנוש the firſt letter radicall taken away. Wherefore it appeareth by the vſe and acceptation of this word, that Daniel, who is by the Prophet counted among the elder men, could at that time be no childe.

3 In the ſtorie of Daniel it is ſaid that he was ſixe daies in the Lions denne: but the true ſtorie ſaith, he was there but one night, chap.6. The Ieſuit anſwereth, he was twice in the Lions denne, or rather he thinketh there were two Daniels, the one of the tribe of Iuda, which was that great Prophet: the other of Leui, which was the principall in thoſe two ſtories of Suſanna, and of Bel and the Dragon. But this is a poore ſhift, to inuent another Daniel, whom the Scripture neuer knew: and if it were ſo, why are all their acts ioyned together, as if one Daniel had done and writ them all?

Other exceptions were taken in times paſt, as S. Hierome reporteth, by a certaine learned Iew ſpoken of before, againſt theſe forged pieces of Daniel: as againſt the Song of the three children: Tantum otij fuit trib. illis pueris, &c. Had the three children ſuch leiſure, in the middeſt of the furnace to make verſes, and to ſtirre vp all creatures to the praiſe of God? And as for the ſtorie of Bell, what great miracle was it to finde out the deceit of the prieſts, or to kill the Dragon, with gobbets of pitch, which were done rather by a cunning wit, then a propheticall ſpirit? And concerning the taking vp of Habbacucke, ſaith he, where can the like example be ſhewed in al the old Teſtament, that any of the Saints was carried in his bodie, and did flie in the ayre: whereas Ezechiel (ſaith he) was tranſported in ſpirit; and Paul dare not affirme, that he was rapt vp in his bodie? Thus then that Iew oppoſed, as Hierome hath the ſtorie, præfat. in Danielem.

Vpon theſe and ſuch like reaſons, S. Hierome doubteth not to call the ſtorie of Bell and the Dragon fables: præfat. in Daniel. and ſo doth S. Auguſt. de mirabilib. lib.2. cap.32. Bellarmines anſwere is, that by fables, Hierome vnderſtandeth, hiſtories, cap.9. which is a very ſimple anſwer, and vntrue: for Hierome in the ſame place further thus writeth: Quas fabulas, &c. nos veru antepoſito, eaſq́ iugulante ſubiecimus: Which fables, becauſe they are ſo well knowne, wee haue added, that is tranſlated, but marked them with a daſh ſtroke or croſſe line to cut the throat of them: for Hierome vſed this marke in his tranſlation, thereby ſignifying what he would haue put out. If Hierome calling them fables, ſhould meane ſtories, why did he thus write? And Auguſtine in the place alleaged giueth a reaſon, why he will not collect any wonders, or miracles out of theſe bookes, becauſe he counteth them fables: if he had vnderſtood ſtories, he would not haue pretermitted them.

But what opinion S. Hierome had of theſe fabulous ſtories, it is cleere by Ruffinus inuectiue, who blameth him, for that he cut off from the Scriptures the ſtorie of Suſanna, an example of great chaſtitie, and the Song of the three children. And Ruffinus in the ſame place, rather being ſtirred in choler, than ſpeaking of iudgement, thus argueth the caſe with Hierome: Firſt, ſaith he, it is not to bee doubted but that Peter ſitting 24.yeeres at Rome,did deliuer vnto the Church all the bookes of Scripture, and theſe among the reſt: but it is not like he would commend vnto them falſe bookes. Secondly,the Apoſtle biddeth vs to take heede of Iewiſh fables,and muſt we now be ſent to the Iewes to learne,which are the Scriptures? Thirdly, thus the holy martyrs are held to haue been in error,which did vſe to ſing in the Church, the Song of the three children.

Theſe and ſuch like arguments Ruffinus vſeth in his inuectiues againſt Hierome: to the which Hieromes anſwere may be thus gathered,though I finde not in any one place theſe arguments by him confuted.

Apolog.2.in Ruffinum.

To the firſt: it is denied,that Peter, of whoſe ſitting at Rome ſo many yeeres it may be doubted,did not commend any of the Apocryphall bookes to the Church,as parcell of the Scripture: for Hierome thus writeth,Apoſtolici viri ſcripturis vtuntur Hebraicis,&c. The Apoſtolike men vſe none but the Hebrue Scriptures. It is manifeſt, that thus did the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: but the Apocrypha are not in the Hebrue.

To the ſecond: the ſame Apoſtle, which biddeth vs take heede of Iewiſh fables, yet referreth vs vnto them,for the diuine oracles: Rom.3.2. yea, and Origene,as Hierome ſaith,whom Ruffinus did ſo extoll, did conferre with the Iewes for the vnderſtanding of the Hebrue Scriptures, as he confeſſeth,that he learned of one Huillus a Iew what is vnderſtood by Ariel,in the 29.of Eſay.v.1 apolog.1.cont.Ruffin.

Pammachio & Oceano.

To the third: it followeth not, though they bee read in the Church, that therefore they are Scripture: the Church readeth them for the edifying of the people, as Hierome ſaith, not for the confirmation of doctrine. And as touching the martyrs, they might haue their errors, as their ſinnes: neither ought wee to embrace the errors of martyrs: Defendamus ergo peccata (ſaith Hierome) quia,qui poſtea martyres, prius peccatores fuerunt: We might as well maintaine their ſinnes,becauſe they,which afterward became martyrs, firſt were ſinners. Thus wee ſee how Ruffinus challenged S.Hierome for leauing out of the Apocrypha,and how S.Hierome defendeth himſelfe:and yet it may ſeeme ſtrange,that Ruffinus ſhould blame Hierome for this, whereas, he himſelfe in the Creede which goeth vnder his name, which is to bee found both amongſt Cyprian, and Hieromes workes,doth exclude,the bookes of Tobie,Iudith, Macchabees,Eccleſiaſticus,the Wiſedome of Salomon,out of the number of the ſacred Scripures. But thus much of this controuerſie betweene theſe two ancient writers.

Laſtly,wee haue here the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries,for Ioannes Driedo, a popiſh writer,refuſeth theſe pieces annexed to Daniel, as being no part of the Scripture: lib.1.de ſcriptur, & dogmatib.eccleſiaſtic.cap.vltimo.

OF THE BOOKE OF TOBIE.

1 THis booke is not found in the Hebrue, in the which tongue all the oracles of God were kept. Ergo,it is worthily doubted of.

2 Our aduerſaries themſelues confeſſe, that in Hieromes time it was not receiued for canonicall. The Ieſuite anſwereth: that it might be doubted of before it was determined in a generall Councell: to whom (ſaith he) it appertaineth to define of canonicall Scripture: As though this were not a greater doubt,whether a Councel hath any ſuch authoritie to determine which books ought to be receiued for canonicall, for Canus a Papiſt maketh a queſtion of it, lib.2.cap.8. And the Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith that the Church cannot, Facere canonicum de non canonico, make a booke not canonicall to be canonicall,but onely to declare thoſe to be canonicall,which are ſo indeed. Wherefore the Papiſts take too much vpon them,to make this booke within the Canon,being of it ſelfe not canonicall,and ſo adiudged by antiquitie.

3 There is ſome contradiction in the ſtorie,as it is tranſlated in the vulgar Latin, for chap.3. verſ.7.the text ſaith,that Sara dwelt in Rages,a citie in Media: but chap.7.1. ſhe is ſaid to dwell in Ecbatane: and from thence Tobie ſendeth the Angell to Rages,to receiue the money of Gabael.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that there might bee two cities of the ſame name (Rages) one where Sara dwelt with Raguel, another where Gabael dwelt: or ſhe might bee ſaid to dwell in Rages,becauſe ſhe dwelt neere vnto it,*Bellarm.cap.*11.

Anſwer. Firſt,who ſeeth not what beggerly ſhifts theſe are: as before the Ieſuite found out two Daniels, ſo here he hath found vs out two cities: but none of theſe ſhifts can ſerue his turne: for whether he ſay,that Sara dwelt in his new found citie, or neere vnto Rages, both are falſe,if that bee true in the 7.chapter, that ſhe dwelt in Ecbatane. Secondly,all this buſines the Ieſuit is put to,becauſe he will not confeſſe an error in the Latin tranſlation,which in ſtead of Ecbatane, readeth Rages,chap.3.7. as by examining of the Greeke text may eaſily appeare: And thus Michael Medina diſſolueth this doubt,whoſe iudgement though Bellarmine miſlike,yet in the end he muſt bee faine to agree to him: or elſe thoſe places will neuer bee reconciled. This obiection, though it maketh nothing againſt the credit of this ſtorie, which wee impugne by other arguments, yet it much ſhaketh the authoritie of their vulgar Latin.

4 He that readeth the booke it ſelfe ſhall finde that both the ſtile, and the matter is not ſuch as beſeemeth canonicall Scripture : as chap.3.8. the euill ſpirit named Aſmodeus, a word not found in the canonicall Scripture, ſee Tremel. vpon that place. Chap.5.12.the Angell is made to ſay he was of Azarias ſtocke. 6.1.in the vulgar Latin, but not in the Greeke, Tobie his dogge followed him, a matter not beſeeming the grauitie of Scripture. Chap.12.15.Raphael one of the ſeuen Angels: ſee Tremel. vpon that place. Chap.8.3.the diuell driuen away with the ſmell of a broyled liuer.

S. Hierome of the booke of Tobie, thus writeth, Legit quidem eccleſia, ſed inter Canonicas ſcripturas non recipit: The Church readeth them, but receiueth them not into the number of Canonicall Scriptures.

OF THE BOOKE OF IVDITH.

AN eſpeciall argument againſt this booke is, that the hiſtorie cannot bee aſſigned to any time.

1 It is pretie ſport to ſee how the Papiſts doe moyle themſelues about this point: and cannot agree amongſt themſelues. Some hold that this ſtorie fell out after yͤ captiuitie in Cambyſes time, as Lyranus, and Driedo: ſome in Darius Hiſtaſpis raigne, as Gerardus Mercator: ſome would haue it before the captiuitie in Sedechias time, as Genebrard : ſome in Ioſias time, as Iohan. Benedictus: but the Ieſuite confuteth them all, and bringeth the ſtorie to Manaſſes raigne : but he hath alſo miſt the cuſhion.

2 It appeareth that this ſtorie could not be after the captiuitie, for we reade not of any Nabuchadnezar afterwards, for the kingdome was tranſlated from the Aſſyrians to the Perſians and Medes. Againe, it could not bee before, either in Ioſias time, Sedechias, or Manaſſes : firſt, becauſe in the 5.chapter verſ.18. it is ſaid, that the Temple had been deſtroyed and caſt downe, which could not be in any of thoſe Kings raignes. It is but a ſhift of Bellarmines, to ſay thoſe words were foyſted into the text : it is rather to be thought, that the Ieſuite is put to his trumps, not hauing elſe what to anſwer. Secondly, Iudith being at this time in the flower of her age, and liuing afterward many yeeres till ſhe was 105.yeere old, all which time, and many yeeres after her death, the booke ſaith in the laſt chapter, the land had reſt: this cannot agree with Manaſſes time: for within 40.yeeres or not much aboue, the land fell into great trouble, ſtraight after Ioſias death. Where then is this long time of reſt? And the Ieſuite that ſtill groundeth vpon impoſſibilities and vnlikelihoods, that Iudith was at this time fortie yeere old, which was (ſaith he) in the beginning of Manaſſes raigne, and ſo to die about ſeuen yeeres before Ioſias: yet for all his ſcanning is driuen to this ſhift, that the many yeeres peace after her death muſt be vnderſtood of poore ſeuen yeeres. Thirdly, if all this happened in Manaſſes time, whom the King of Aſſur tooke and carried away priſoner, and had much troubled and afflicted the countrie of Iudea : what neede had Holofernes to enquire ſo curiouſly of Achior the Ammonite, of the countrie, their citie, people, kings, and ſuch like : ſeeing they had knowne the countrie too well before in ſpoyling and waſting of it, as the Iewes by wofull experience had felt? And this is Bellarmines owne reaſon againſt their opinion that hold Iudith to haue liued after the captiuitie : *argum.*8. becauſe Holofernes needed not then to haue enquired of the people, and of the countrie, ſeeing the Perſians could be ignorant of none of theſe things, ſaith he, when as they had diſmiſſed the Iewes thither a little before. But this reaſon holdeth ſtronger againſt Bellarmine: for what neede any ſuch inquiſition after this people, ſeeing the King of Aſſur had ſent his hoſt and Captaines thither before to fetch Manaſſes to Babylon?

Iudith cap.5.

S. Hierome ſaith, that this book of Iudith, as the other of Tobie, were not receiued of the Church into the Canon of the Scriptures : præfat in Prouerb. And Auguſtine againe thus affirmeth out of S. Hierome : Librum Iudith Iudæi in canonem ſcripturarum non recepiſſe dicuntur, & minus authoritatis habet ad ea roboranda, quæ in contentionem veniunt : The Iewes are ſaid, not to haue receiued the booke of Iuidth into the canon of the Scriptures, and it is of ſmall authoritie to ſtrengthen any doctrine, that commeth in queſtion, de ciuitat.dei 18.26.

OF THE BOOKE OF WISEDOME.

The Papiſts.

OVr aduerſaries reaſon thus : they ſay that S. Paul, Rom.11.34. vſing this ſpeech : Who hath knowne the Lords minde, or been his counſellor? doth alleage it out of the 4.chap. of this booke, verſe.13. Ergo, it is Canonicall. We anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſeemeth not in that place to cite any teſtimonie,though the words which he vſeth may elſe where be found. Secondly,though the like words are read in the booke of Wiſdome, yet it is not neceſſarie the Apoſtle ſhould borrow them from thence,but rather they are alleaged out of the 40.of Eſay 13.where the Prophet ſaith: Who hath inſtructed the ſpirit of God,or was his counſeller ? And this alſo is the opinion of the Rhemiſts,that S. Paul in that place vſeth the Prophets words.

The Proteſtants.

OVr reaſons againſt the authoritie of this booke are theſe and ſuch like.

1 Becauſe this booke is not found in the Hebrue, but written onely in Greeke: wherefore it is not Canonicall,ſeeing the Iewes had all the oracles of God.

2 Philo a Iewe is thought by the Papiſts themſelues to be the author of this booke,who liued after Chriſt in the time of Caligula;neither himſelfe was a Chriſtian or beleeued in Chriſt: therefore an vnlike man to be a writer of Canonicall Scripture. Bellarmine ſaith it was another Philo, who was more auncient. Indeede Ioſephus maketh mention of a Philo before this time,but he was an Heathen and no Iew: But this booke was held to be, Philonis Iudæi, Philo the Iewes, as S. Hierome witneſſeth,præf. in Prou. and S. *Aug.lib.*17.*de ciuit.cap.*20.

3 If this booke were written by Salomon,why is it not extant in Hebrue? For Salomon wrote in Hebrue and not in Greeke. Many of the Papiſts alſo doe prooue, that it was not written by Salomon: for though Salomon in the ſecond chapter be brought in praying vnto God; that is no good argument to proue Salomon the author,for the author might ſpeake in the perſon of Salomon. S. Hierome doubteth not to call this booke, Pſeudepigraphum, falſely intituled: and againſt Vigilantius: De Salomone ſumis teſtimonium quod Salomonis non fuit: You bring a ſaying out of Salomon, which was none of Salomons. And S. Auguſtine, Propter nonnullam eloquij ſimilitudinem, vt Salomonis dicatur, obtinuit conſuetudo: Cuſtome hath ſo preuailed, that it is called Salomons, for the likenes of ſtile and ſpeech: *de ciuitat.lib.*17.*c.*20. If this booke then were none of Salomons,and yet beareth his name, it cannot be Canonicall Scripture wherein there is no vntruth.

OF THE BOOKE CALLED Eccleſiaſticus.

The Papiſts.

THey haue none but common and generall arguments for the authoritie of this booke, as that it was of old read in the Church,and diuers of the fathers alleadged teſtimonies out of it. All this proueth not, as we haue ſhewed before,that it was Canonicall,but that it was well eſteemed and thought of, becauſe of many holeſome and good precepts which are contayned in it. And for further anſwere, we ſay, that it followeth not, becauſe the Fathers doe quote Eccleſiaſticus in their writings,that therefore it is Canonicall. Firſt, the Fathers alleage alſo the teſtimonies of the heathen Philoſophers and Poets, and yet they are nothing leſſe then Canonicall. Secondly, Hierome ſaith, Legit Eccleſia,&c. The Church readeth them, but yet doth not take them for Canonicall: as then the Church doth reade them, and yet maketh them no Scripture, ſo the Fathers in their writings may vſe them. Thirdly,if it ſhall be ſaid, that the Fathers doe cite this booke as Canonicall: to this I anſwer, that therein, they may be deceiued as Auguſtine was,who ſometime alleageth Eccleſiaſticus vnder the name of a Prophet,*lib.cont.Pagan.*6. and calleth the booke Propheticall, *lib.*2.*de. Geneſ.c.*5. But this his opinion he retracteth: lib. 1. Retract. 10. Or elſe the Fathers doe alleage theſe bookes not as Canonicall, but as Hagiographa, that is,holy writings,ſuch as were inferior to the Scriptures; but yet to be preferred before other mens writings; as Hierome ſaith the Hebrues did count the bookes of Tobie and Iudith among the Hagiographa, and yet did cut them off from the Scriptures.

The Proteſtantes.

WE doe thus improue the authoritie of this booke.

1 The author in the Preface ſayth, that he tranſlateth in this booke ſuch things, as before were collected by his grandfather in Hebrue, and excuſeth himſelfe, becauſe that things tranſlated out of the Hebrue doe looſe their grace,and haue not the ſame force:ſo then it appeareth that this booke cannot be canonicall being imperfect: Neither was his grandfathers worke (which is now loſt) to be thought any part of the ſcripture, ſeeing he was no prophet himſelfe, but a compiler and a collector of certayne things out of the prophets.

2 He exhorteth his countrey men to take it in good worth, and ſo craueth pardon: but the ſpirit of God vſeth not to make any ſuch excuſe, whoſe works are moſt perfect,and feare not the iudgement of men.

3 This booke ſaith, chap. 46. verſ. 20. that Samuel propheſied after his death, and from the earth lift vp his voice. Whereas the canonicall Scripture ſaith not that it was Samuel, but that Saul ſo imagined, and thought it to be Samuel, 1.Sam.28. And Auguſtine thinketh it was, phantaſma Samuelis,but a ſhew onely and repreſentation of Samuel,and an illuſion of the diuell,lib. ad Dulcitium, Dulcitium, quæſt.6. For it is not to be thought, that the diuell can diſeaſe the ſoules of any men, much leſſe of Saints departed. See more of this, controuerſ.9.quæſt.1.part.2. S. Auguſtine ſaith, that Eccleſiaſticus is thought to be Salomons, as before he ſaid of the other booke called the Wiſdome of Salomon: Propter nonnullam eloquij ſimilitudinem: For ſome likenes of the phraſe, lib.17. de ciuit. Dei.c.20. S. Hierome: Hæc duo volumina legat ad ædificationem plebis: Theſe two bookes the Church may reade for edifying of the people, not any confirmation of doctrine: præfat.in Prouerb. In the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles, there are onely three bookes aſcribed to Salomon, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Canticles: but as for this booke the Canon giueth this caueat, Extrinſecus addiſcant iuuenes ſapientiam eruditi Sirach: Let the young men learne the wiſdome of learned Sirach, beſide and without the Canon. Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome in his decree of the Canonicall Scripture, doth bring in onely two bookes vnder Salomons name, the Prouerbs and Eccleſiaſtes with the Canticles, both which he maketh one booke: And thus haue we the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries owne authors againſt them.

OF THE TWO BOOKES OF THE Machabees.

OVr Arguments againſt the authoritie of this booke are theſe enſuing, for our aduerſaries bring nothing on their parte, but ſuch arguments drawen from teſtimonies and authorities, as doe generally ſerue for all the Apocrypha, which are aunſwered afore.

1 Iudas is commended, 2. booke chap. 12. for offering ſacrifice for the dead: which was not commaunded by the law, neither is it the cuſtome of the Iewes ſo to doe to this day. And againe, they were manifeſt idolaters: for there were found iewels vnder their coates conſecrate to the Idols of the Iamnites. And our aduerſaries grant themſelues, that prayer is not to be made for open malefactors dying impenitently. Bellarmine ſaith, that Iudas did godlie thinke, that they might repent them at the very point of death, c.15.ad obiect.1. Anſw. By this reaſon a man may pray for the wickedeſt man, that dyeth, if he haue a conceite, that he might repent in the very inſtant of death: but this is contrarie to their owne Canons: Decret.par.2.cauſ.24.qu.2.c.4.Gelaſ. Nobis fas non eſt aliud decernere præter id in quo dies ſupremus quemque inuenit: We ought not to iudge otherwiſe of a man, then as his laſt day findeth him.

2 Lib.2.cap.2. many things are reported of the arke, the holy fire, the altar, the tabernacle, which ſhould be hidde by Ieremie in a caue, and that the Lord would ſhewe the people theſe things at their returne. Here are many things vnlikely and vntrue. Firſt, it is found, ſaith the text, in the writings of Ieremie: but no ſuch ſtorie is there found. Secondly, Ieremie was in priſon till the very taking of the Citie: and the Citie being taken the Temple was ſpoyled, the holy things defaced and carried away; how could they then be conueyed by Ieremie? Thirdly, in their returne they found neither arke nor fire, nor any ſuch thing. But, ſaith the Ieſuite, the Iewes in their conuerſion to God in the end of the world may haue them againe: as though when they ſhall beleeue in Chriſt, they will any more looke backe to the ceremonies or rites of the law: for what vſe then I pray you ſhall they haue of altar or ſacrifice or any ſuch like?

3 There is a great diſagreeing in the ſtorie betweene the two bookes concerning the death of Antiochus, lib.1.cap.6.v.6.16. It is ſaid that Antiochus died for griefe in Babylon, hearing of the good ſucceſſe of the Iewes. lib.2.1.ver,16. Antiochus was with the reſt of his ſoldiers ſlaine in the Temple of Nanea, and his head cut off and throwen forth. Chap.9. the ſame Antiochus falling ſicke by the way dyed with a moſt filthy ſtinking ſmell, conſumed of wormes: thus, this murtherer and blaſphemer, ſayth the text, 2.lib.9.28.died a miſerable death in a ſtrange countrey among the mountaines. How could this man dye thrice, in Babylon, in Nanea, and by the way in a ſtrange countrey? It is confeſſed by the Ieſuite that it was the ſame Antiochus, who ſaith he loſt his armie in the temple, and ſickened by the way, and dyed at Babylon. But the ſtorie ſaith, that their heads were cutte off: I thinke then he could not liue, and that he dyed in a ſtraunge countrey, therefore not at Babylon in his bed. Theſe things hang not together.

4 Further, the author of theſe bookes ſayth, that he abridgeth the ſtorie of one Iaſon a Syrenean, lib.2.cap.2.ver.23. who was an Heathen: but the ſpirit of God vſeth not, neither needeth to borrow of prophane writers. He ſaith that this worke was not eaſie but painefull to him, but required ſweating and watching. verſ.26. But to the holy writers of Scripture though their owne labour and diligence was not wanting, yet was not the worke hard or moleſtious vnto them. Laſtly, the author (ſaith he) writeth for pleaſure and recreation of the reader, and craueth pardon if he haue not done well, lib.2.15.39. But to reade for pleaſure is no end of Scripture: neither doth the ſpirit of God vſe any excuſe either for matter or manner.

Our aduerſaries ſay, that S. Paul likewiſe confeſſeth, that he was rude in ſpeaking, 1.Cor.11.6. We anſwere, he ſo ſayth, becauſe the falſe Apoſtles ſo gaue out of him, not that he was ſo indeede:

and yet in that place S. Paul doth not excuſe himſelfe, for his not ſufficient handling of his matter, as this author doth. Neither is that ſpeech of S. Luke any thing like: for there the Euangeliſt doubteth not to ſay, that he had attayned to an exact knowledge of all things. Vpon theſe premiſſes we conclude, that theſe bookes of the Machabees are not Canonicall, nor to be taken for any part of holy Scripture, though we denie not, but that there may be ſome profitable vſe of them for the ſtorie.

5 Laſtly, 2. Machab. c. 14. v. 42. Razis is commended for killing of himſelfe, contrarie to the Scripture. Bellarmine anſwereth, that he is commended not for his godly, but manfull act: he is ſaid to haue dyed manfully.

Anſw. 1. The word is εὐγενῶς, nobly, valiantly: which very word is vſed, Act. 17. 11. where the Diſciples of Berœa are ſaid to be more noble, then they of Theſſalonica, that is, more religious and godly: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, godlines is great riches, ſo is it true nobilitie: neither ſhall any man finde any nobilitie in Scripture to be commended without godlines. Wherefore this author, if hee ſpeake according to the phraſe of Scripture, commending nobilitie, meaneth alſo godlines; otherwiſe, as Auguſtine ſaith, Sic fortes laudare ſolet hiſtoria gentium: The hiſtories of the Gentiles doe vſe ſo to commend the valour of their men. 2. Auguſtine, when the Donatiſts alleaged the example of Razis in defence of their madnes, which killed themſelues, thus doubteth not to anſwer, denying the authoritie of the booke: Non habent Iudæi hunc librum, ſicut Moſis & Prophetarum: The Iewes doe not account of this booke, as of Moſes and the Prophets, lib. 2. cont. Gaudent. ad. cap. 24.

And that the authoritie of theſe bookes hath alwaies been vncertaine it may appeare: for that the number of them is not agreed vpon, ſome making but one, ſome two, ſome three Canonicall: Gelaſius in his Canon, holdeth but one of the Machabees Canonicall: the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles reciteth three Canonicall bookes, the Papiſts generally holde but two: and thus our aduerſaries owne authorities doe not make for them.

Thus haue we ſeene in particular, what credite is to be giuen to theſe Apocryphall books, that they are not to be receiued into the Canon of the Scripture: and now of them all in generall, that they are not to be held to be any part of the Scripture, beſide the arguments before ſet downe, we haue fower moſt euident teſtimonies of antiquitie.

The firſt of S. Hierome; who bringeth all the Canonicall bookes to the number of the Hebrue Alphabet, making them but two and twentie in all: for as, ſaith he, there are but two and twentie Hebrue letters, whereby a man learneth to ſpeake, and expreſſe his minde; ſo are there ſo many bookes of Scripture, whereby wee are trained vp to holy knowledge. And theſe are the bookes: fiue of Moſes, Geneſis, Exodus, Leuiticus, Numbers, Deuteronomie: eyght of the Prophets, Ioſua, the Iudges with Ruth, Samuel, the Kings, Eſaias, Ieremias, Ezechiel, the ſmall Prophets: then nine, which he calleth, Hagiographa, holy writings: as Iob, the Pſalmes, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, the Canticles, Daniel, the Chronicles, Eſra, with Nehemiah, Eſter: which make in all two and twentie. Some, ſaith he, make Ruth, and the Lamentations two ſeuerall bookes, and ſo number them foure and twentie, to anſwer the foure and twentie Elders in the Reuelation: Sciamus, quicquid extra hos eſt, inter Apocrypha eſſe ponendum: Let vs knowe, that whatſoeuer booke is not among theſe, is to be placed amongſt the Apocrypha: Hieron. præfat. in lib. Regum.

The ſecond authoritie is of S. Cyprian: who after he had rehearſed the Canonicall bookes, then addeth further: Sciendum eſt, quod & alij libri ſunt, qui non Canonici, ſed Eccleſiaſtici à maioribus appellati ſunt: We muſt know, that there are other bookes beſide, not Canonicall, but Eccleſiaſticall ſo called: as the wiſdome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus; the bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Machabees: Cyprian. in ſymbolum.

The third authoritie is from the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles, where none of the Apocrypha are named amongſt the bookes of the olde Teſtament, but three bookes of the Machabees onely, which are not all held to be Canonicall of the Papiſts.

The fourth and moſt pregnant witneſſe is the Councell of Laodicea, in the 59. Canon: Quæ oportet legi & in authoritatem recipi, hæc ſunt: The bookes that ought to be read and receiued into authoritie, are theſe, and then the two and twentie bookes Canonicall are rehearſed, no mention at all being made of any of the Apocrypha. This Councell though it were prouinciall, yet is ratified by their owne Canons, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 11. and was confirmed in the ſixt generall Councell, Can. 2. as Gratian alſo witneſſeth. decr. p. 1. d. 16. c. 7. And the Pope is ſworne to obſerue the eyght generall Councels, whereof the Trullane being the ſixt, is one. decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 8. And ſo it was decreed in the Councell of Conſtance, ſeſſ. 39. and in the Councell of Baſile, ſeſſ. 38. that the new elected Pope ſhould take his oath not to violate the faith of the eyght generall Councels: Wherefore how is not the Pope forſworne in receiuing the Apocrypha into the number of the Canonicall Scripture, contrarie to the 59. Canon of the Councell of Laodicea, which was confirmed in the ſixt Trullane, Can. 2. which Councell and euery Canon thereof, the Pope is ſworne to obſerue: and thus the edge of their owne weapons is turned vpon their owne head.

THE SECOND QVESTION CONCERNING THE authenticall and moſt approoued Edition of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

2. Error. WHereas it is confeſſed that the Hebrue Edition of the old Teſtament is the moſt ancient, in the which tongue the Scriptures were compiled by the Prophets; and that the new Teſtament was written in Greeke by the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: yet our aduerſaries doe generally holde, as it was decreed in the Tridentine Chapter, Seſſ.4.decret.2: That in all ſermons, readings, diſputations, controuerſies, the vulgar Latine tranſlation ſhould be taken for authentike before the Hebrue or Greeke, and that no man ſhould preſume vpon any occaſion, to reiect it or appeale from it.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truely affirme, that although there are diuers Editions of the olde Teſtament beſides the Hebrue, and ſome of them very auncient, as the tranſlation of the Septuagints, compiled by ſeuenty two ancients of the Iewes, at the inſtigation of Ptolemæus Philadelphus King of Egypt, 300. yeares before Chriſt; and after Chriſt there were other tranſlations in Greeke made by Aquila Symmachus, Theodoſion, and others; alſo a Chaldee Paraphraſe compiled by the Iewes, and laſt of all diuers Latine tranſlations; the which as Auguſtine ſayth, in his time were ſo many, that they could not be numbred; and S. Hirome ſaith, Apud Latinos tot ſunt exemplaria, quot codices: The Latines haue ſo many tranſlations as bookes, præfat. in Ioſu: Yet of all the reſt the Hebrue being the moſt ancient, and the mother of the reſt, and freeſt from corruptions, ought to be receiued as moſt authentike. And for the new Teſtament, though there be a Syriacke tranſlation very ancient, yet the Greeke ought to be preferred (being the ſame tongue wherein the Apoſtles and the Euangeliſts wrote) to be the onely authentike copie.

The queſtion then betweene our aduerſaries and vs, is not about any other tranſlation of the old and new Teſtament, but the vulgar Latine, as it is read in their Churches and vſed amongſt them. As for the Chaldee Paraphraſt they themſelues confeſſe, that it is ſtuffed with Iewiſh fables: *Bellarm.lib.2.c.*3. And the Syriake is by him confeſſed not to be ſo auncient, as the times of Athanaſius, Epiphanius, Hierome: and therefore not to be compared either with the Greeke or Latine tranſlation. And as for the Greeke tranſlations of the olde Teſtament, of them all the tranſlation of the Septuagint, was of greateſt account; who are ſaid to haue been put apart in 72. celles, and to haue all agreed in their tranſlation: But S. Hierome holdeth this to be a fable, of the 72. celles, the ruines whereof a long time after were ſhewed at Alexandria, ſeeing that neither Ariſtæus, who was a chiefe man about King Ptolemie, that ſet the 70. interpreters on worke, nor Ioſephus maketh any mention thereof. And as touching the interpreters themſelues, he ſaith, Aliud eſt vatem agere, aliud interpretem: It is one thing to be a Prophet, another to be an interpreter. And as for Apolog. 2. in Ruffin. the tranſlation, he ſaith, Germana illa & antiqua tranſlatio corrupta & violata eſt: That auncient and true tranſlation of the Septuagint, is corrupted and violated, which as Hierome ſaith, was agreeable to the Hebrue: but ſo is not the Greeke copie now extant, which is full of corruptions, and ſeemeth to be a mixt and confuſed tranſlation of many: wherefore our aduerſaries doe labour to iuſtifie their Latine tranſlations: ſome of their arguments, let vs ſee.

The Papiſts.

Arg. 1. THe Latine Church hath vſed the vulgar Latine tranſlation for the ſpace of eight hundred, or nine hundred yeares, and it is not like that the Church all this while was without the true Edition of the Scriptures. Ergo it is onely authenticall. We anſwere, firſt, by this argument it followeth that this vulgar Latine being generally vſed, was preferred before other Latine tranſlations, which were at the firſt in great number, not that therefore it is more authentike then the Hebrue in the old, and the Greeke in the newe Teſtaments. Secondly, there were other Churches beſides the Latine all this while, as amongſt the Greekes famous congregations and Churches: that be it in the Latin Church, the vulgar tranſlation was reteined being erroneous; yet the whole Church continued not in that error, which were not ſo tyed and bound to the Latine tranſlation. Thirdly, if men all this while (knowledge decreaſing, and a way being in preparing for Antichriſt) were negligent in correcting and amending the common tranſlation, this is no good argument to make it authenticall.

*Argum.*2. As the Hebrues had an authentike tranſlation in their owne tongue, and the Grecians in theirs, why ſhould not the Latine Church haue it alſo authenticall in Latine? We anſwere, firſt, it is no good reaſon, becauſe the Lord did conſecrate the Hebrue and Greeke tongue, and therein would haue his word written, that therefore he would or ſhould alſo haue made the Latine as well authenticall,as they.Secondly,if the Latine Church muſt haue an authentike tranſlation,why ſhould not other countries likewiſe haue their authenticals? The Armenians had the Scriptures of olde tranſlated by Chryſoſtome, the Sclauonians by Hierome, the Gothes by Vlphilas; why ſhould not theſe alſo as well be authentical? And ſo looke into howe many tongues the Scriptures ſhould be tranſlated,ſo many authentical tranſlations ſhould there be.

*Argum.*3. They ſay that all other tranſlations which are come forth ſince, are erronious, and much differ amongſt themſelues. *Anſw.*Firſt,this is no reaſon to preferre it before the Hebrue and Greeke,though it were better then all other tranſlations.Secondly,they charge vs falſly,that our tranſlations are diſſonant and erronious: for their diſagreement is not in ſuch ſubſtantiall points, and where any of them doe ſwarue from the originall, we allow them not : and yet there is not the meaneſt of them,but may iuſtly compare with theirs,yea and be preferred before it. Thirdly, if their tranſlation were ſo pure, as they ſay Beza himſelfe maketh it, he would not haue ſet forth a new Edition : and he preferreth it in ſome places before other tranſlations, but is farre off from making it authenticall,and ſo are we.

*Argum.*4. The Hebrue text of the olde Teſtament in many places is impure and corrupt,and the Apoſtles diuers times in citing the old Scriptures, doe follow the Septuagint, and not the Hebrue. Ergo it is not authentical. Bellarmine to proue the Hebrue to be corrupt,giueth an inſtance of fiue places : the three principall I will ſet downe : firſt,Iſai 9.the Latine hath,his name ſhall be called wonderfull: in the Hebrue, vocabit nomen eius, he ſhall call his name,which Caluine himſelfe confeſſeth, not to be ſo good a reading. Anſw. Firſt, there is no great difference in the ſenſe,to ſay his name ſhall bee called, or he or they ſhall call his name : for it is obſerued by the learned in this tongue, that verbs of the third perſon are often taken imperſonally among the Hebrues, ſic Vatablus. Secondly, the ſame letters in the Hebrue doe ſerue for both theſe words, the alteration is in the pricks or points : which as Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, Extrinſecus addita ſunt, nec mutant textum, were added outwardly, that is, by other writers and interpreters of Scripture, and doe not change the text, which conſiſteth of the letters, not of the poynts. Secondly, he obiecteth that place, Pſal.21.16. the Latine hath,foderunt manus,they pierced my hands : but the Hebrue is, not Caru,they pierced, but Caari tanquam leo,as a lyon : but the former reading of all Chriſtians is approoued.

*Anſw.*Firſt,this is the onely place of moment,which can be obiected : Bellarmine alſo here doth furniſh vs with an anſwere : that theſe two words being ſo like in ſound, and in the characters might eaſily be miſtaken either by the negligence of the writers and penmen, or by the Rabbins, that firſt added the prickes. 2. Diuers learned men of both ſides doe teſtifie, that there be many Hebrue copies to be found,which haue Caru,not Caari : ſic Andradius, Galatinus : Ioannes Iſaachus lib.2.cont.Lindan.

The third place is that, Pſal.19.where the Latin hath,as S.Paul doth cite the place,Their ſound is gone forth : but the Hebrue ſaith,their line is gone forth. Anſ. Indeede the Hebrue word ſo ſignifieth,but the Septuagint,whom the Apoſtles follow,doe interpret according to the ſenſe: for the glorious workmanſhip of the heauens,as with a noiſe or ſound doth ring in euery mans eare,and ſet forth the power of God,as Iob ſaith, How little a portion doe wee heare of him, and who can vnderſtand the thunder of his power? Iob.26.14. the workes of God doe as it were thunder out the power of God. But this is no good argument to iuſtifie the Latin tranſlation before the Hebrue, becauſe the Latin followeth the Septuagint,which the Apoſtle approueth : for firſt,by this reaſon alſo the Septuagint ſhould be authenticall,which they themſelues will not graunt.Secondly,S.Hierome ſheweth the cauſe, why the Apoſtles ſometimes followed the Septuagint : Vbicunq; loquuntur ad populos, his teſtimonijs vtuntur, qua iam fuerant in gentibus diuulgata : So often as they ſpeake to Tradit.in Gen.46. the people, they vſe ſuch teſtimonies, as were commonly knowne amongſt the heathen : as the tranſlation of the 70.was. Another reaſon thereof was, that when the Apoſtles alleage any te-
Hieron.Algaſ. quæſt.2. ſtimonie out of the old Teſtament,non verba ſecutos eſſe, ſed ſenſum : that they follow not ſo much the words,as the ſenſe:and therefore where the Septuagint keepe the ſenſe,though not the words, the Apoſtles doe not refuſe them, becauſe the tranſlation was ſo well knowne , as in this place now in queſtion : Sed vbi 70.ab Hebrais diſcrepant,but where the 70.doe differ from the Hebrue, the Apoſtles expreſſe the Hebrue ſenſe,&c.

We anſwere further : firſt, that the Ieſuite hath not proued , nor yet is euer able to proue the Hebrue fountaines to bee corrupt. Secondly, where they are faultie, it is to bee imputed to the negligence, or vnskilfulnes of thoſe through whoſe hands they haue paſſed, and no otherwiſe. Thirdly,that the Apoſtles alleaged the Septuagint,it maketh not for the Latin, and they alleaged it not as better then the Hebrue, but becauſe the Greeke tongue was then more vniuerſally knowne.Fourthly,neither did the Apoſtles in citing Scripture alwaies tie themſelues to the vulgar Septuagint : as for example ſake may appeare in thoſe places,Mica.5.2. cited Mat.2.6.Ierem. 31.13. cited Mat.2.18. Eſay.9.2. alleaged Mat.4.15.16. Eſay.42.1. rehearſed Mat.12.18. but the Apoſtles as they being directed with the ſpirit were able to write Scripture, ſo alſo to recite and alleage Scripture. Fiftly, for thoſe fiue places which the Ieſuite ſaith are faultie in the Hebrue, we are able to ſhew almoſt fiftie times fiue places in the Latin, and therefore by this reaſon they haue gained nothing. Theſe are the Ieſuits arguments, *de verb. dei lib.*2. *cap.*10. and ſome of our Rhemiſts in their preface to the new Teſtament.

Bellarmine alſo taketh the like exception againſt the Greeke of the new Teſtament, ſhewing in ſome places, that the Latin text is leſſe corrupt. Firſt, ſaith he, 1. Cor. 15. 47. the Greeke hath, the ſecond man is, the Lord from heauen: the Latin more truly, is from heauen heauenly.

Lib. 2. de verbo, cap. 7.

Anſ. 1. How can the trueth of the Latin bee tried, but by the Greeke, out of the which it was tranſlated? which being more ancient, muſt firſt bee beleeued. 2. The firſt reading is moſt agreeable to the text, and ſo readeth Damaſcen lib.3. de fide. cap.12. prouing by this place Chriſt to be God, and man; which could not be ſo well gathered, if wee ſhould not reade, the Lord from heauen. 3. The Syriake tranſlation alloweth the firſt reading according to the Greeke.

Secondly, 1. Cor. 7. 33. the Greek hath, there is a difference between a wife and a virgin, or they are diuided: the Latin much better, ioyneth it to the verſe before, the man that is maried, is diuided, that is, diſtracted about many things.

Anſ. 1. The former reading is approued by the Syriake tranſlation, by Theophylact, and Baſil, as Beza ſheweth vpon this place: and S. Hierome alloweth it writing againſt Heluidius, though elſewhere he diſſent from himſelfe. 2. It is more agreeable to the text, for the Apoſtle ſheweth how they are diuided: The vnmaried careth for the Lord, the maried for the things of the world.

Thirdly, Rom. 11. 12. the Greeke hath, ſeruing the time, καιρῷ, the Latin much better κυρίῳ, ſeruing the Lord.

Anſ. The beſt Greeke copies haue alſo κυρίῳ, ſeruing the Lord, as appeareth in the Syriake tranſlation: and who ſeeth not, that it might rather be a ſcape of the writer, taking one word for another, then a fault in the text. Thus we ſee that Bellarmine by theſe exceptions hath gained nothing for the Latin, nor yet empayred the credit of the Greeke. And be it graunted, that ſome ouerſights might be committed through the ignorance of the Scribes and Notaries, yet the authoritie of the originall is ſound ſtill: and for one ſcape in the Greeke, it is an eaſie matter to ſhew twentie in the Latin.

The Proteſtants.

Arg. 1. IF the Latin tranſlation be authenticall, as it was decreed in the Councell of Trent, then it muſt haue been ſo from the beginning, ſo ſoone as there was any Latin tranſlation: for the Councell had not authoritie to make that authenticall, which was not, but onely to declare it ſo to be. But the Latin tranſlation, for the ſpace of 600. yeeres after Chriſt was not receiued as authenticall: for we finde that the Latin writers, as Lactantius, Hilarius, Ambroſius, Hieronymus, Auguſtinus, and others, did not vſe the ſame Latin tranſlation: Ergo, this vulgar Latin hauing not been alwaies, ſince it was extant, authenticall, neither ought it to be now.

Argum.2. That edition which was made, and framed, and firſt written by the Prophets, Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, is to be preferred before that, which was not compiled by any Prophet or Apoſtle. But ſuch are the Hebrue in the old Teſtament, and the Greeke edition in the new, by the confeſſion of our aduerſaries, Bellarm. cap.7. lib.2. Such is not the Latin, for it is vncertaine by whom it was written: for the Ieſuite confeſſeth that it is not all of Hieromes edition: as the booke of the Pſalmes, Wiſedome, Eccleſiaſticus, the Machabees, which they thinke were not tranſlated by Hierome. But let vs graunt that the whole was of Hieromes doing, yet was he no Prophet nor Apoſtle: ſaith he, Aliud eſt vatem eſſe, aliud interpretem: It is one thing to bee a Prophet, another to bee an interpeter. Wherefore it is no reaſon, that Hieromes, or whoſe tranſlation elſe ſoeuer ſhould be receiued before the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

But ſay our aduerſaries, if we had a perfect copie of the Hebrue and Greeke editions, wee confeſſe they were to be preferred: but now they are full of faults, and greatly corrupted. We anſwere: firſt, the Ieſuit himſelfe diſputing againſt Canus and Lindanus, two archpapiſts, that though there may be ſome ſcapes in the tranſlations by the fault of ſome Libraries and imperfect copies, yet concerning the doctrine of faith and manners, ſaith, there is no corruption in them, lib.2. c.2. Secondly, though there may be, and are, ſome words falſely written, and by error thruſt into the text, yet they ſhall neuer proue that they are more corrupt, the Hebrue and Greeke, then the Latin: for it followeth no more, that becauſe of ſome ſcapes the Latin is to bee preferred before them, then that a cloake altogether patched and ragged is better then a cloake of veluet that hath but one piece.

Argum.3. The Ieſuite himſelfe, and other Papiſts confeſſe, that in ſome caſes it is very neceſſarie to haue recourſe to the originall: as when ſome word ſeemeth to be miſtaken by the writer, as where cecinit is read for cecidit: dorix, for vorax: cor, for coram: or when the Latin copies doe varie, as Ioſ. 5. ſome Latin bookes haue, Quibus iurauit, vt oſtenderet eis terram, vnto whom he ſware that he would ſhew them the land: that he would not ſay ſome other, and this (ſaith Bellarmine) is the truer reading being agreeable to the Hebrue. Thirdly, when the ſentence is ambiguous, as Luk. 2. Pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis, peace vnto men of good will: the originall ſheweth, that (good will) is to be referred to peace: peace or good will vnto men, not vnto men of good will. Fourthly, and laſtly, the force and propertie of the words is better vnderſtood in the originall, Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 11. Ergo, by the Ieſuits confeſſion, the originall or fountaines are more certaine and ſure without doubtfulnes and ambiguitie, therefore more authenticall then the Latin.

Argum. 4. S. Hierome himſelfe findeth fault in diuers places with the vulgar Latin, as it now ſtandeth: and therefore it is not authenticall, nor yet any of Hieromes tranſlation.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that all the old Teſtament, beſide the Pſalmes, the Wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus, the Machabees, are of Hieromes tranſlating, and that theſe reaſons may be giuen, why notwithſtanding there are ſome places remaining in the tranſlation, which Hierome found fault with. Firſt, through the negligence of the Notaries. Secondly, becauſe of the diuers acceptions of the Hebrue words, Hierome ſometime taking one ſignification, ſometime another. Thirdly, becauſe Hierome might afterwards correct and amend the place himſelfe, otherwiſe, then he firſt found fault.

Anſ. I will now produce ſome few places out of Hieromes tranſlation, wherein none of theſe former ſhifts ſhall ſerue their turne, Matth. 5. 22. S. Hierome readeth: he that is angrie with his brother without a cauſe, licet (ſaith he) in pleriſque Latinis codicibus, ſine cauſa, additum non ſit, though in many Latin bookes, this (without a cauſe) is not added: and ſo is it left out in the vulgar Latin.

Hieron. Amando.

Matth. 6. 34. Hierome readeth, ſufficient for the day is, afflictio, the affliction or griefe thereof; rather, then malitia, the malice thereof, as in the vulgar Latin.

Hieron. Minorio.

1. Cor. 15. 51. This (ſaith he) which is read in the Latin, we ſhall all riſe, but not all be chaunged, is not found in the Greeke: yet ſo readeth the Latin.

Dial. 1. aduerſ. Pelagian.

2. Chron. 35. Ioſias was buried in Mauſolæo patrum, in the Mauſoleum or tombe of his fathers; ſo readeth the vulgar Latin: but Hierome ſaith, Iſta vox profana, & gentilis: This is a prophane, and heatheniſh terme.

Ibid.

1. Tim. 3. 2. Hierome readeth, qui poſſit docere, that is able to teach: the vulgar, a Doctor, or teacher, or docilis, teachable: which Hierome in the ſame place calleth, Latinam ſimplicitatem, the ſimplicitie or ignorance of the Latin tranſlator.

In theſe places alleaged, the tranſlation whereof Hierome reproueth, it may eaſily appeare, that the fault was neither in the Notarie or penman, nor yet is the diuers ſignification of the word the cauſe; neither did Hierome correct his iudgement afterward, reſtoring that to the firſt reading which he had corrected: as may appeare moſt ſufficiently by this one place, Rom. 12. 3. where he ſaith, Male in Latinis codicibus legitur, ſapere ad ſobrietatem: It is an euill reading in the Latin, to vnderſtand according to ſobrietie: for ſobrietie he readeth chaſtitie. So likewiſe, to ſhew that he was no changeling, 1. Tim. 2. 15. he ſaith, Non vt male habetur in Latinis codicibus ſobrietas eſt legenda: We muſt not reade ſobrietie, as it is euill tranſlated in the Latin, but chaſtitie: S. Hierome would neuer haue called the authenticall tranſlation, ſimple, vnlearned, euill, prophane, as he doth this vulgar Latin, as we haue ſeene in theſe places.

Argum. 5. There are many and great errors in the vulgar tranſlation, and contrarie to the originall: Ergo, it is not authentike. Some of the places we will quote, as Geneſ. 3. ipſa conteret, for ipſum, ſhe ſhall breake the Serpents head, where we doe reade that not the woman, but her ſeede ſhall breake his head. Geneſ. 6. verſ. 6. for figmentum cordis malum, the thoughts of mans heart are euill; they reade, intenta ad malum cogitatio, inclined to euill: and ſo extenuate originall ſinne. Eccleſiaſt. 16. 14. for ſecundum opera, a man ſhall receiue according to his workes; they reade after the merit of his workes. Eſdras 9. verſ. 8. the vulgar Latin hath, pax illius, for paxillus. Pro. 16. verſ. 11. lapides ſeculi, ſtones of the world: for lapides ſacculi, ſtones of the bagge. And though Bellarmine here acknowledge a fault in the copies by miſtaking ſome letter, yet are thoſe words retained in the vulgar Latin ſtill without correction. In their Latin tranſlations of the Pſalmes there are many corruptions, Pſal. 2. verſ. 12. Apprehendite diſciplinam: apprehend diſcipline, or inſtruction, for Oſculamini filium, Kiſſe the ſonne. And thus an euident place againſt the Iewes for the ſecond perſon in Trinitie, is obſcured and ouerthrowne, by the corrupt Latin text. Pſal. 67. verſ. 12. Si dormiatis inter medios cleros, though ye ſleepe betweene two lots, without any ſenſe: the Hebrue thus, inter ollas, though you haue lien amongſt the pots, as being blacke with affliction. It is pretie ſport how Bellarmine and the reſt, that would in all things iuſtifie the vulgar Latin tranſlation, how he runneth himſelfe out of breath, to finde out ſome likely expoſition of this place: and in the end he thus plaieth the interpreter, if ye ſleepe betweene two lots, that is, if ye Preachers abide in the midſt between two lots, the heauenly, and the earthly, neither giuen wholly to action, nor wholly to contemplation; then ſhall the Church bee like a doue, &c. A goodly expoſition ſure, they muſt ſleepe betweene two lots, action and contemplation, that is, they muſt come at neither, but ſleepe betweene both: the words will rather enforce this ſenſe, if we take his expoſition. And indeede of this ſort were moſt of their fat bellied Monkes and Friers, neither ſeene in contemplation of knowledge, nor action of good life. Verſ.23. of the ſame Pſalme they reade, conuertam in profundum maris, I will turne them into the bottome of the ſea; for reducam profundo maris, I will bring them from the depth of the ſea, cleane contrary. Pſal.132.15. viduam eius benedicam, I will bleſſe his widow; for victum, I will bleſſe his victuals. So in the new Teſtament are many falſe readings. Matth.6.11. Panem superſubſtantialem, for, quotidianum, ſuperſubſtantiall bread, for daily or neceſſarie bread. chap.24.6. Opiniones præliorum, for, rumores. Chap.20.9. acceperunt ſingulos denarios, for, ſinguli denarios: they tooke euery peny, for, euery man a peny. Chap. 21.30. Eo domine, for, ego domine, I goe Lord, for, I Lord. Luk.1.28. plena gratia, for, gratis dilecta, haile Mary full of grace, for, freely beloued. Luk.15.8. euertit domum, for, euerrit: ſhe ouerthrew the houſe, for, ſhe ſwept the houſe. 1.Cor.15.verſ.51. non omnes immutabimur, we ſhall not all be changed, for, omnes immutabimur, we ſhall all be changed. Epheſ.2.10. creati in bonis operibus, created in good workes, for, ad opera bona, created vnto good works. Rom.c.16.23. Gaius hoſpes meus & vniuerſa Eccleſia, for, vniuerſæ Eccleſiæ: Gaius mine hoſt, and the whole Church, for of the whole Church. 1.Cor.9.22. vt omnes ſaluos facerem, pro, vt omnino aliquos ſaluos facerem: that I might ſaue all, for, that I might ſaue ſome. Heb.12.8. Ergo adulteri, non filij eſtis, pro, ſpurij & adulterini: wherefore ye are adulterers, and not children, for, ye are baſtards, and not children. An hundred more errors and ouer, you may finde noted in the readings of our learned countrie man *D.Whitak.*2. *quæſt. de ſcrip.*10.11.12.cap. Theſe I haue ſet downe for a taſte.

And as the vulgar Latin is imperfect and full of corruptions, and maketh the Scriptures darke and obſcure: ſo on the contrary ſide, the originals of the Hebrue and Greeke are exceeding profitable, and doe bring great light and perſpicuitie to the Scripture: for neuer were the Scriptures better tranſlated, or more plainly vnderſtood, then ſince they were tranſlated out of the originals. Heare the iudgement of a reuerend and learned man ſometime a Biſhop in this land: who in a certaine conference and diſputation of the Biſhops, when ſome of them ſtood mightily for vnwritten tradition, ſtanding vp made an oration, vſing among other theſe words: The Germanes haue made the text of the Bible ſo plaine and eaſie by the Hebrue and Greeke tongues, that now many things may be better vnderſtood without any gloſſes at all, then by all the commentaries of the Doctors, B. Fox. Fox pag.1183.col.1.

Laſtly, we will rehearſe Auguſtines iudgement: Vtcunque eſt, ei lingua magis credatur, vnde eſt in aliam per interpretes facta tranſlatio: Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth (ſaith he) wee ought to giue more credit to that tongue, out of the which other are tranſlated, *lib.*15.*de ciuit.cap.*13. Ergo, the Hebrue in the old Teſtament, and the Greeke in the new, out of the which the Latin and all other tranſlations haue iſſued, ought to haue the onely preheminence. To this agreeth S. *Ambroſe, lib. de incarnat.c.*8. Ita in Græcis codicibus inuenimus, quorum prior eſt authoritas: So we find in the Greek copies, whoſe authoritie is to bee preferred. *Et lib.*2.*de ſpiritu, cap.*6. Si quis de Latinorum codicum varietate contendat, Græcos inſpiciat codices: If any man doe take exception againſt the diuerſitie of the Latin bookes, let him looke into the Greeke. And S. Hierome ad Lucinium: Vt veterum librorum fides de Hebræis voluminibus examinanda eſt, ita nouorum Græci ſermonis formam deſiderat: As the credit of the old Teſtamēt muſt be examined by the Hebrue volumes, ſo in the new by the Greek. And this authoritie of S. Hierome is ratified and allowed by their owne decrees; *Gratian.decr.p.*1.*d.*9.*cap.*6. And to this purpoſe Franciſcus Mirandula made an oration to Leo 10. and the Councell of Laterane, that the Scriptures might be conferred with the originall copies. So alſo Iſodor. in præfat. ad Concil. Quod ſi veritas quærenda eſt, Græcorum ſequamur ſtylum, eorumq́ imitemur editiones & exemplaria. Et poſtea: Vnitas & veritas ab ipſis quærenda eſt, quorum lingua edita eſſe noſcuntur: If we ſeeke for the trueth, let vs follow and imitate the Greeke copies and examples. And afterward: The trueth is to be ſought for at their hands, in whoſe tongue or language it is ſet foorth. This he ſpeaketh of the true originall copies of the Councels to be had from the Greeke. And the ſame reaſon alſo ſerueth for the authentike originals of the holy Scriptures. Thus haue we their owne teſtimonies againſt them.

THE THIRD QVESTION: CONCERNING the vulgar tranſlation of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

THey doe not abſolutely condemne the tranſlation of the Scriptures into the vulgar tongue, whatſoeuer they haue thought in times paſt: neither would they generally haue euery man permitted to reade the Scripture, but ſuch onely as haue eſpeciall licence from their ordinarie, hauing the teſtimonie of their Curates that they be humble and deuout perſons, Rhenenſ. præfat.

ſect.6. So then they hold it daungerous for all men to reade Scripture, and they would not willingly licence any, but their Pope holy deuout Catholikes: they are like to make a mad peece of worke, that goe about to picke their faith out of Scripture, ſay the Rhemiſtes, annot. 1. Cor. 1. 5. This then is their opinion, that it is neither neceſſarie nor conuenient for all men to haue acceſſe to the Scriptures: we will ſee ſom of their reaſons.

Argum. 1. From the time of Eſdras till Chriſt, and in our Sauiours time, the Scriptures were not in the vulgar tongue, but onely in the Hebrue, which the Iewes vnderſtoode not after the captiuitie: Ergo it is not nowe neceſſarie to haue them in the vulgar tongue. That the people vnderſtoode not Hebrue, the Ieſuite proueth out of the 8. of Nehemiah: where it is ſaid, that Eſdras did expound the law to the people, becauſe they vnderſtood it not. We anſwere, that the text ſaith cleane contrarie, that he read the law before the people that vnderſtood it, verſ. 3. and they might giue the ſenſe, though the people vnderſtoode the language. Concerning the places obiected out of the Goſpel, to proue the Iewes ſpake another language then Hebrue, as it appeareth by thoſe ſpeeches Marc. 5. Talitha cumi, Matth. 27. Golgotha, which ſauour not of the Hebrue tongue. We anſwere, that although they ſpake not pure Hebrue, but many ſtrange words were vſed, yet they vnderſtoode the Hebrue; for why els doth Chriſt bid the people to ſearch the Scriptures? And they were not the Iewes, but the Romane ſouldiers that vnderſtoode not the voice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, ſaying, he called for Elias. And whereas Bellarmine further would gather by that place, Iohn 7. 49. This people, that know not the law, that the Iewes vnderſtoode not the Scriptures in the Hebrue tongue; it is a meere cauill: firſt, they note the ignorance of the people not in the letter of the law, but the ſenſe thereof, which the Phariſees had obſerued by their traditions, and therefore Matth. 23. they are ſaid to haue ſhut vp the kingdome of Heauen. Secondly, it is euident Luke 4. 18. that the people vnderſtoode the reading of the law: for when Chriſt had read the text, without further conſtruing, or tranſlating of it, he ſhut the book and ſaid to the people, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares. Againe, Act. 15. 21. Iames ſaith, that Moſes is preached, becauſe he is read: in what ſenſe can reading be called preaching, if it be not vnderſtoode. And yet it is more euident, that the people vnderſtoode the Hebrue tongue, Act. 22. 2: for when they heard, that Paul ſpake Hebrue, they kept ſilence. What dare not now theſe fellowes affirme, thus contrarie to Scripture not being aſhamed to ſay, that the Iewes vnderſtoode not Hebrue?

Bellarmine argum. 2.

Argum. 2. The Apoſtles (ſaith the Ieſuite) wrote their Epiſtles onely in Hebrue or Greeke, and not in the vulgar tongues of the nations to whom they preached: Ergo it is not neceſſary that the Scriptures ſhould be in the vulgar tongue. We anſwere: firſt, it had been an infinite labour for the Apoſtles, to haue left their writings in euery language; neither was it neceſſary, ſeeing out of the originals they might be tranſlated into euery language. Secondly, they preached the ſame things vnto the Gentiles in their owne tongues, which they afterward left in writing. Thirdly, the Greeke tongue, wherein they wrote, was vniuerſally knowen, and fewe countries were ignorant of it eſpecially in the Eaſt partes. But it is moſt certaine, that the Apoſtles did write to no Churches in the Greeke tongue, which vnderſtoode it not. And whereas the Ieſuite giueth an inſtance, of the Epiſtle written to the Romanes, whoſe vulgar tongue was Latin and not Greeke, and the Epiſtles of Iames and Peter written to the diſperſed Iewes: it can be no queſtion, whether the Romanes vnderſtoode Greeke, the language being ſo common, and moſt of them being Grecians, as may appeare by their names, yet reſiant at Rome, to whom he writeth: and how could the Iewes being diſperſed among the Gentiles, be ignorant of the Greeke tongue, ſeeing now alſo they ſpeake the languages of thoſe countries, where they are diſperſed?

Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 15. argum. 5.

Argum. 3. There is no cauſe (ſay they) why the Scriptures ſhould be tranſlated: if it be for the vnderſtanding of the people, they vnderſtand them not being tranſlated neither. We anſwere: many things they may eaſily vnderſtand: and for the harder places, they are neerer the vnderſtanding of them being tranſlated, then before: for then they haue two great lets, the tongue vnknown, and the obſcure and hid ſenſe; now they neede not to labour for the tongue, but onely for the ſenſe.

Rhemiſt. præfat. ſect. 13.

Argum. 4. The Scriptures are occaſion of offence and hereſie, being not right vnderſtood. Ergo. And here Bellarmine telleth vs a tale of a certaine woman in England that ſtoode vp in the Church when ſhe heard the 25. Chapter of Eccleſiaſticus read and ſaid, is this the word of God, nay it is the word of the Deuill? We anſwere: firſt, becauſe many ſurfet of meates and drinkes, it is no reaſon that ſober men ſhould bee forbidden the vſe of them: no more for heretikes and wicked mens ſakes ought the people of God to bee barred from Scripture. Secondly, more haue periſhed by ignorance in Scripture, then by miſunderſtanding it: and the Scripture was ordayned of God to meete with offences, and to confute hereſies. 2. Tim. 3. 15. Wherefore theſe men make themſelues wiſer then God, that thinke the Scripture is an occaſion of thoſe diſeaſes, for the which it is appointed a remedie. The like blinde reaſon ſometime a popiſh Frier vſed againſt M.Latimer, in his frierly ſermon: if the rude people, ſaith he, ſhould heare the Scriptures read in Engliſh; the ploughman when he heareth, that he which holdeth the plough, and looketh backe, &c. would thereupon ceaſe to plough any more. And the baker when he heareth it read, a little leauen corrupteth the whole lumpe, might be moued not to vſe leauen at all: and when the Scripture ſaith, If thine eye offend thee plucke it out, the ignorant might be perſwaded to pull out their eyes: And therefore it was not good to haue the Scriptures in Engliſh. To this frierly reaſon, M.Latimer vouchſafed no other anſwere but this: he would wiſh the Scriptures no longer to be in Engliſh, till either the ploughman were thereby perſwaded not to plough, or the baker not to bake, Fox.p.1734.col.2.

Now concerning Bellarmines tale, though we neede not beleeue it vnleſſe we will, ſeeing he hath it but by hearesay: yet if any fooliſh woman ſhould be ſo ſimple, as to be offended with the reading of the Scriptures, which ſhe vnderſtandeth not, this can be no preiudice to ſo holy an exerciſe, no more, then the exclamation of the Pythoniſſe, Act.16. was vnto S. Pauls preaching. But the Ieſuite pleaſeth himſelfe in this tale, becauſe he miſliketh, that women ſhould be acquainted with the Scriptures: and yet can he not be ignorant how Aquila, and Priſcilla his wife expounded to Apollos the way of God more perfectly, Act.18. And Ruffinus that tranſlated ſome of Origenes homilies giueth this as a reaſon: Hoc beneficij procreabit hæc lectio, vt prophetia peruenire non ſolum ad viros, verumetiam ad religioſas fœminas poſſit: This benefite, ſaith he, ſhall come by this reading or tranſlation, that the knowledge of this propheſie not only men, but women alſo may attaine vnto: præfat. in hom.Origen.in Pſal.36. In thoſe dayes women vnderſtoode the Latin tongue, and were acquainted with the Scriptures tranſlated into that language.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe beleeue and holde that it is requiſite, expedient and neceſſarie for the Scriptures to be vttered and ſet forth in the vulgar and common ſpeech, and that none vpon any occaſion ought to be prohibited the reading thereof for knowledge and inſtructions ſake: and that Chriſtian Magiſtrates ought to prouide, that the people may haue the Scriptures in their mother and knowen tongue. Wherefore great wrong was offered to the people of England, that diuers 110.yeares, till King Henrie the eight, could not be ſuffered to haue the Scriptures in Engliſh. And how, I pray you, did the Papiſts ſtorme, when as Tindals tranſlation came foorth? ſome affirming that it was impoſſible to haue the Scriptures tranſlated into Engliſh: ſome that it would make the people heretikes: others that it would cauſe them to rebel, Fox.pag.117.col.1. What fowle and ſhamefull ſlanders were theſe? For the vulgar tranſlations of Scripture we reaſon thus.

Argum.1. It is Gods commaudement, that the Scriptures ſhould be read before the people, that they may learne to feare God, Deut.31.verſ.11.12. The people are commanded to write the law vpon their gates, and in their houſes to conferre and talke with their children, and teach them the law, Deut.6.6,7,8. And our Sauiour biddeth the people ſearch the Scripture, Ioh.5.verſ.39. Ergo what God hath commanded, no man ought to prohibite or forbid: the people therefore muſt not be kept from reading of the Scripture.

Argum.2. Without Scripture there is no faith; faith is neceſſarie for all people: Ergo the knowledge of the Scripture: that faith commeth by the Scriptures, reade Iohn 20. 31. theſe things are written, that ye might beleeue Ieſus Chriſt to be the ſonne of God. Again, the weapons of Chriſtian men are not denied to any, whereby they ſhould fight againſt their ſpiritual enemies: but the word of God is a ſpeciall part of our harneſſe, and a principall weapon, euen the ſword of the ſpirit, Ergo. Epheſ.6.

Argum.3. The Goſpell may be preached in the vulgar tongue, as our bleſſed Sauiour and the holy Apoſtles taught the people: Ergo the word of God may be read and written in the vulgar tongue. The propoſition our aduerſaries grant, that ſermons may be made in the vulgar tongue: but it followeth not, ſay they, that therefore Scripture ſhould be in the mother tongue, Rhem. 1. Cor.14.8. But I pray you how can the Preacher alleadge Scripture in his ſermon, vnles it be recited in the vulgar tongue? or how ſhould the people know they preach the word, vnles they may compare their doctrine with Scripture, as the Berrœans did, Act.17.

Argum.4. I will adioyne the teſtimonie of three godly learned Martyrs, vnto whoſe iudgement, I thinke as much ought to be giuen, as vnto any mans beſide, who ſealed the trueth they profeſſed with their blood: theſe three Martyrs are Tindal, Lambert, Bradford. Tindal was the firſt, that in thoſe laſt times tranſlated the new Teſtament into Engliſh: whereat the Papiſts ſo ſtormed, that ſome of them ſaid it was not poſſible to tranſlate the Scriptures into the Engliſh tongue: others, that it was not lawfull for the lay people to haue it in their mother tongue: ſome, that it would make them all heretikes: yea, they ſo practiſed againſt Tindal, that at the length they tooke from him his life. This holy Martyr ſaith, that the very cauſe why the Papiſts would not haue the Scriptures tranſlated, was this, that the people might be kept in ignorance ſtill, and ſo they might tyrannize ouer their conſcience by their ſuperſtitious doctrines, Fox.pag.1077.

Lambert ſaith, that there can be no reaſonable cauſe to withhold the Scriptures from the people, ple, being the foode of their ſoules, eſpecially when they deſire it, no more then bodily foode ought to be kept from thoſe that hunger after it, pag. 1116. col. 1.

Bleſſed Bradford ſaith, that it was plaine robberie to take from the people the Engliſh ſeruice: to whom one Willerton replyed, that the people ought to learne at the prieſts hands: to whom he anſwered, then will you bring the people to crucifie Chriſt againe, and let Barrabas goe, if all muſt be learned at the prieſts hands, for ſo the prieſts then perſwaded the people, pag. 1612.

Argum. 5. We haue the practiſe of the Church of God in times paſt for our warrant: for in Chryſoſtoms time the people had vulgar tranſlations: whereupon he exhorteth them to get them Bibles, or at the leaſt the new Teſtament, the Actes of the Apoſtles, the Goſpels, Homil. 9. Epiſt. ad Coloſſ. We heard before that the Armenians, Sclauonians, Gothes had the Scripture in their owne language: ſo many hundred yeares agoe in England King Alured tranſlated the Pſalter: a copie whereof was found in Crowland Abbey, called S. Guthlakes Pſalter, as Maſter Lambert witneſſeth: and Bede our learned country man tranſlated S. Iohns Goſpel, Fox p. 1115. col. 2. The Rhemiſts alſo confeſſe, that more then 300. yeares agoe the Italians had the Bible tranſlated, and the French men aboue 200. yeares agoe, Præfat. in Teſtam. 4. ſect. Why ſhould not the people of God haue the ſame libertie now freely to reade the Scriptures, as they haue had in times paſt?

Bellarmine anſwereth, that he denieth not, but that the Scriptures were in times paſt extant in the vulgar tongue, yet not vniuerſally to all, but to ſuch as might profit by reading of them. Our Rhemiſts alſo ſay, that Chryſoſtome, when he exhorted the people to reading of Scripture, ſpake as a pulpit man, not as giuing a rule in ſchooles, præfat. in Teſtam. ſect. 14. And Bellarmine addeth that it was not his meaning that they ſhould all reade Scripture, but ſuch as might doe it ſafely. lib. 2. cap. 16. reſponſ. ad argum. 7.

Anſwer. Firſt, ſeeing in times paſt, great and populous nations had the Scriptures tranſlated, as the Armenians, Sclauonians, into their vulgar tongue, how is it like that any man was forbidden the reading of them? As we doe proue vnto them, that theſe nations had the Scriptures in their owne tongue, ſo if they can ſhew vs any prohibition to haue been made in thoſe countries, to bar any from reading of Scripture (which they are neuer able to doe) they ſhould ſay ſomewhat. 2. That Chriſoſtomes meaning was, that all men ſhould be exerciſed in reading of Scripture, it dooth eaſilie appeare: for he ſo exhorteth in his ſermones, vnto the which all the people of all conditions reſorted, therefore he ſpake to all: yea he would haue boyes and children to reade Scripture. And though Chriſoſtome were nowe in the Pulpit, what of that? He would not (I thinke) ſay one thing in the Pulpit, and an other thing in ſchooles: he would not ſpeake otherwiſe, then he thought; or make the Pulpit a place to vtter lies in. 3. Whereas Chriſt giueth libertie to all to ſearch Scripture, yea commandeth them ſo to doe, with what authoritie can they reſtraine this libertie? And if euery man muſt be readie to render a reaſon of his faith and hope, 1. Pet. 3. 15. then euery man ought to ſtudie the Scriptures, thereby to learne to giue account of his faith. What profiteth it a man to haue meate, and not to eate it, apparell and not to weare it? ſo what good doth it to haue Scriptures, and not to reade them?

Let vs heare Auguſtines opinion: Lectiones diuinas (ſaith he) & in Eccleſia, ſicut conſueſtis, audite, & in domib. veſtris relegite. I would haue you both to attend vnto the publike readings in the Church, and in your houſe to reade ouer againe the holy leſſons: but how could the people reade them at home, if they were not in their vulgar tongue?

But Auguſtine was but one man, heare then the conſent of whole councels. Turon. ſub Carolo. can. 17. Homilias Epiſcopus transferre ſtudeat in ruſticam Romanam linguam, aut Theotiſiam, quo facilius cuncti poſſint intelligere, quæ dicuntur: The Biſhop muſt haue a care to tranſlate yͤ Homilies into the countrey, Latin or vulgar tongue, that al men may the better vnderſtand what is ſaid. If it be anſwered, that ſermons and Homilies may be read and preached in the vulgar, but not the Scriptures; we oppoſe an other decree. In eccleſijs parochialib. per ſingulos dies dominicos preſbyteri clara voce ac intelligibili ac verbis maternis annuncient 10. præcepta decalogi, et articulos fidei: In the pariſh Churches euery Lords day, let the Presbyters declare with a loud and intelligible voice and in the mother tongue, the ten commandements and articles of the faith: ſynod. Senouenſ. decret. morum 11. And it was alſo decreed, ſynod. Auguſten. cap. 25. That the Angels ſalutation, and the Lords prayer ſhould be ſaid in the vulgar tongue. Thus we ſee that thoſe popiſh prelates that liued 40. or 50. yeares agoe, were not altogither ſo popiſh and vnreaſonable, as our Romaniſts in theſe dayes are. I will alſo oppoſe againſt them their owne Maſter of Sentences, who preſcribing the office and dutie of a lector, thus ſaith, Vim accentuum ſciat, diſtinctè legat, ne intellectum auditoribus auferat, &c. Let him know the accents, and reade diſtinctly, that he hinder not the vnderſtanding of the hearers: let him marke what muſt be read indicatiuely, what with an interrogation, and keepe his diſtinctions: which if he doe not, he troubleth the peoples vnderſtanding, and moueth other to laughter: Mag. lib. 4. diſ. 24. d. But what neede theſe precepts of obſeruing the accents, and keeping diſtinctions, where no man vnderſtandeth what is read: or what neede they feare the hindring of the peoples vnderſtanding, where nothing is vnderſtood? Wherefore it appeareth by this, that it ſtandeth with the maſters minde, to haue the Scriptures read in the vulgar tongue.

AN APPENDIX OR PART OF THIS QVEſtion, concerning publike prayers and diuine ſeruice in the vulgar tongue.

4.Error.

IT was decreed in the Tridentine Councell, that the ſeruice of the Church which they call the Maſſe, ſhould not be celebrated in the vulgar tongue. *ſect.*22.*cap.*8. And it is the common practiſe euery where of the Romiſh church to vſe the Latin tongue onely. We muſt be content (ſay they) with thoſe three tongues which God honored vpon the croſſe: namely, the Hebrue, Greek, and Latin. This libertie onely they grant, that their prieſt may expound ſome things, as he readeth, and ſhew the meaning to the people.

Argum. 1. Thus they argue: The maieſtie and grauitie of the ſacred buſines, doe require alſo to be vttered in a ſage, ſanctified and graue language: Ergo, not in the vulgar. *Bellarm.lib.*2.*cap.*15 *argum.*7. We anſwere, the grauitie, reuerence and holineſſe conſiſteth not in words, phraſes, and ſounds, though neuer ſo eloquent, but in the things themſelues. Neither is any tongue that is vnderſtood, before the Lord counted barbarous: for S. Paul ſaith, that he is a barbarian, and ſpeaketh barbarouſly in the Church, that cannot bee vnderſtood, 1.Cor.14.11. And Acts 2.11. the very ſtrangers and barbarians heard the Apoſtles vtter in their languages the wonderfull things of God: they thought the tongue no diſgrace to thoſe holy myſteries they vttered.

Pope Nicholas 1.Epiſt.ad Michaëlem Imperator.Conſtantinop. writeth thus of this matter, the Emperour in a certaine Epiſtle to the Pope had termed the Latine tongue barbarous: whom he anſwereth thus: Omnis operis derogatio, redundat ad opificis iniuriam: ô furorem, qui nec lingua nouit parcere quam deus fecit: in eo ipſo, quo verum Deum colit lingua Latina, quantum barbaram, vel ſcythicam linguam antecedit, agnoſcitur: The diſgracing of the worke, tendeth to the iniurie of the worker: What madnes is this, not to ſpare that tongue which God hath made? and herein, how farre the Latine tongue exceedeth the Barbarians and Scythians language, it is ſeene, becauſe it worſhippeth the true God. By theſe two reaſons, whereby he proueth the Latin tongue not to be barbarous, we likewiſe affirme neither the Engliſh tongue, nor any other vulgar language of Chriſtians to be barbarous: both becauſe they are the gifts and workes of God, and becauſe the true God is by thoſe vulgar tongues acknowledged and worſhipped.

Bellarm.lib.2. de verb.c.16. reſ.ad arg.2.

Argum. 2. Leuit.16.ver.17. The people is commanded to ſtand without, till the Prieſt went in and made attonement for them: they vnderſtood not the Prieſt, for they heard him not: Ergo it is not neceſſarie the people ſhould vnderſtand the Miniſter. We anſwere. Firſt, that was a type of our Sauiour Chriſt, who euen ſo aſcended into heauen, as the high Prieſt did into the holy place: but types and figures proue nothing. Secondly, they vnderſtood not the Prieſt, becauſe they heard him not: but they cannot proue that the Prieſt vttered any thing in their hearing at any time, which they vnderſtood not.

Rhemiſt.annot.1.Cor.c.14.ſect.14.

Argum. 3. We muſt onely vſe thoſe tongues in holy affayres, which were ſanctified in the croſſe: that is Hebrue, Greek, and Latin. We anſwer: Thoſe tongues were not then vſed for any ſuch purpoſe, but that the death of Chriſt might by thoſe common and vniuerſall tongues be the further ſpread abroad. And ſurely if they would proue that theſe tongues were hereby ſanctified, me thinkes Pilate was no fit inſtrument of that ſanctification, by whoſe appointment the title was written: why then are not all tongues as well ſanctified, wherein the holy Ghoſt ſpake, as theſe which were written by Pilate? Thirdly, doth not the Apoſtle ſay, that euery tongue ſhall confeſſe that Ieſus Chriſt is the Lord, &c. 2.Philip. 11. Seeing God hath ſanctified euery tongue and language for the confeſſion of the faith, how dare you goe againſt Gods ordinance? Laſtly, if thoſe three tongues onely were conſecrated vpon the croſſe, why did Pope Nicholas the 1. when he had decreed that ſeruice ſhould bee ſaid in the Latin tongue, yet diſpenſed with the Sclauonians and Polonians, to haue it in their owne vulgar tongue?

The Proteſtants.

WE doe affirme, that as it hath been the commendable vſe of all ancient Churches, to haue the ſeruice in the vulgar tongue, that the people might vnderſtand, and be better ſtirred vp to deuotion: ſo the ſame godly vſe ought for euer to remaine and bee retained in the Church of God.

Argum. 1. This is moſt agreeable to S. Pauls doctrine, 1.Cor.14.verſ.26. who would haue all things done to edifying: but by an vnknowne tongue no man is edified: and he ſaith, he had rather ſpeake fiue words to be vnderſtood, then ten thouſand otherwiſe. Some of the Papiſts ſay, that S. Paul ſpeaketh of preaching eſpecially and but obiter of praying: ſo B. Brookes, Fox pag. 1879.

But in the 14.verſe he ſpeaketh namely of prayer, and in the 16.of the peoples ſaying Amen, which was not giuen at ſermons,but in the end of prayers: this is but a weake anſwer. The Rhemiſts and the Ieſuite ſay, he meaneth certaine extraordinarie Hymnes and giuing of thankes, whereof S.Paul ſpeaketh Epheſ.5.19. Anſ. S.Paul ſpeaketh generally of all publike exerciſe in the Church,whether of prayer,preaching,ſinging,that it ſhould all be done in a knowne tongue: for he vſeth the generall termes of ſpeaking, τὸ λαλεῖν, and of the voyce, as verſ.11. If I vnderſtand not the power of the voyce (he ſaith not of the ſong or preaching) I ſhall be to him that ſpeaketh,a barbarian: ſo he miſliketh not onely preaching, or ſinging, but any kinde of ſpeaking in the Church in a ſtraunge tongue. And againe, S.Pauls reaſon is generall againſt all exerciſes in the Church ordinary or extraordinary in an vnknowne tongue,becauſe he would haue all things referred to the edification of the Church. Bellarmine againe thus anſwereth, that the reaſon is not alike,for theſe extraordinary ſongs and prayers,which were vſed in thoſe times,and for the ordinary ſeruice: for the end of thoſe ſongs,was the inſtruction and conſolation of the people: but that is not the end of our ordinarie prayers, but the ſeruice and worſhip of God:*Bellarm.cap.16. ad obiect.*1. Anſw. How is not the Ieſuite aſhamed thus to contradict the Apoſtle, who ſaith directly that the Scriptures are written for our comfort and conſolation,Rom.15.4.yet he ſaith the end of reading the Scriptures in the diuine office is not for conſolation. Secondly,as though the worſhip or ſeruice of God,can be ſeuered from the inſtruction and conſolation of the people: or can God be rightly worſhipped by that, which giueth no inſtruction to the worſhipper? Thus would the Ieſuite bring in againe,a Samaritane ſeruice or worſhip: for they (as our Sauiour ſaith) *worſhip they know not what,*and ſo doe the Papiſts: but wee, ſaith he, all true worſhippers, worſhip that wee know, Ioh.4.22. and conſequently wee know what wee worſhip. This place of S.Paul is too euident and plaine, then that it may bee ſo eaſily wreſted and depraued by their hereticall and deceitfull gloſſes.

Out of this place of the Apoſtle,which maketh ſo directly againſt prayer in a ſtrange tongue, theſe arguments may bee gathered. Firſt, no language not vnderſtood ought to bee vſed in the Church,becauſe it edifieth not,and they ſhould ſpeake in the ayre,that is,vainly,to no purpoſe, verſ.9. Ergo, ſeruice in the Latin tongue is vnprofitable where it is not vnderſtood. So ſaith S. Ambroſe: Si ad ædificandam eccleſiam conuenitis, ea debent dici quæ intelligunt audientes: If you come together to edifie the Church,thoſe things muſt be ſpoken which may be vnderſtood. Secondly, he that ſpeaketh with a ſtrange tongue,muſt keepe ſilence if there be no interpretor,verſ.28.Ergo, Latin ſeruice muſt be abandoned,vnleſſe they will interprete it,which were a loſt labour,ſeeing they may haue it as well in Engliſh. Againe S.Ambroſe: Tacere debet in eccleſia,qui lingua loquitur,quam ſolus ſcit: He muſt hold his peace in the Church,which ſpeaketh with a tongue,which he onely vnderſtandeth. Thirdly, he that ſpeaketh in a ſtrange tongue is as a Barbarian, or an alien to the hearer that vnderſtandeth not, verſ.11. but it were abſurd, that the Miniſter of the word or Sacraments ſhould be an alien to the people. Ergo. So S.Ambroſe: Non competit fidelibus audire linguas,quas non intelligunt, ſed infidelibus, qui non ſunt digni intelligere: It is not meete for beleeuers to heare thoſe tongues, which they vnderſtand not, but for vnbeleeuers,who are not worthie to vnderſtand. Fourthly,no prayer or giuing of thanks ought to be vſed in the Church, vnto the which the people cannot ſay Amen,verſ.16. but they cannot ſay Amen to Latin prayers,becauſe they know them not.Ergo. Fiftly,if it were not lawfull to vſe the miraculous gift of tongues,ſuch as this was in the Apoſtles time, without interpretation: much leſſe is the Latin to be vſed,which may be pronounced and read without a miracle. *Argum.Proteſtant.diſput.Weſtmonaſt.pag.*2120.

In 14.1.ad Cor.

*Argum.*2. Who ſeeth not that prayers made with the vnderſtanding are more comfortable and fruitfull: the other nothing to profit at all,nor yet to be auaileable before God? Howſoeuer our aduerſaries ſay,that the heart and affection may pray, though the vnderſtanding pray not, yet S.Paul ſaith,they ſpeake in the ayre: their prayer is but winde,1.Cor.14.9.and mine vnderſtanding(ſaith the Apoſtle) is without fruite,verſ.14. Therefore not amiſſe did that godly martyr *M.Wiſehart,*compare the ridiculous geſtures of the prieſt at Maſſe, being not vnderſtood of the people, to the playing of an Ape: Fox pag.1269.col.2. And one Iohn Riburne was vniuſtly troubled of Longland Biſhop of Lincolne Anno 1530.for ſaying,if we had our Pater noſter in Engliſh,one ſhould ſay it nine times,againſt once now: Fox pag.984.col.2. And was not that ghoſtly and Biſhoplike counſaile thinke you of the Biſhop of Cauaillon to the Merindolians in France? that it was ſufficient to know their *Pater noſter,*and Creede in Latin: it was not neceſſarie to ſaluation to vnderſtand or expound the articles of faith: for there were many Biſhops,Curats,yea Doctors of Diuinitie, whom it would trouble to expound the Creede or Pater noſter. *Fox Martyrolog.*pag.949.col.2.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that a prayer in an vnknowne tongue may be profitable, if there bee the intention of the heart,for the prayer is made vnto God,and it is ſufficient if he vnderſtand it: we ſee alſo,that they which are abſent, who neither heare, nor vnderſtand our prayers, yet may bee profited by them : neither is the inſtruction or edification of the people any end of prayer, but it is a part of ſeruice that belongeth vnto God : Bellarm.cap.*16.*reſ.ad.*2 & 4.*obiect. Againe,ſaith he, the Apoſtle doth not ſay that his prayer is without fruite,but onely his minde or vnderſtanding, but his ſpirit and affection is profited: for he ſaith,thou verily giueſt thanks well: and the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch a tongue as none doe vnderſtand in the Church : but the Latin , though the common people vnderſtand it not,yet many that know the language doe.

Anſ. The heart cannot bee neere vnto God without faith, whatſoeuer intention it hath ; but faith is ioyned with knowledge : he then that prayeth, he knoweth not what,can haue no faith or hope of thoſe things, which he knoweth not. And if it were ſufficient, that God vnderſtood our prayer, then neede not the prayer to bee vttered by the voyce, becauſe God knoweth the thoughts of the heart. Secondly, they which are abſent vnderſtand not the prayers made for them,becauſe they know them not : and they are praied for,they pray not: but the people is preſent,within hearing of the voyce,and they all offer vp one prayer,therefore they ought to vnderſtand it. Thirdly,it is an abſurd anſwere,that publike reading is not for the peoples inſtruction: it hath no vſe nor end, in reſpect of God, who neede not to receiue any information, or to haue his memorie renued by reading of ſtories : wherefore it is either in vaine,or elſe the end thereof is the peoples inſtruction. And if prayer be a part of Gods worſhip, which muſt proceede from the loue of God,and God is to be loued,with all our heart,our ſoule and minde, Matth.22.37. then our prayers muſt not bee made with a bare intention onely,but with knowledge and vnderſtanding : for God requireth both the heart, the minde and the ſoule. Further, where the Apoſtle ſaith,my ſpirit praieth,but my minde is without fruite,he doth not ſo ſpeake, as though the ſpirit (that is the affection)could pray without the vnderſtanding : but by the ſpirit is vnderſtood the ſpirituall gift of ſpeaking with tongues, as Hierome, Sedulius, Primaſius expound this place, as they are cited by Eſpenſæus : de Chriſt.Mediator.pag.*234.*g. So that the meaning is this, he for his owne part,that hath the gift of tongues,praieth or giueth thankes well,knowing and vnderſtanding what he praieth;but the vnderſtanding of other,that heare,is not edified. Fiftly, and therefore the Apoſtle miſliking that any ſhould ſo pray, not being vnderſtood of others, ſaith, I will pray with the ſpirit,and I will pray with the vnderſtanding alſo,verſ.15. And that the affection cannot be good in prayer without the vnderſtanding,and that ſuch prayer is without fruit,Saint Ambroſe expounding this place ſaith : Quem fructum habere poteſt,qui ignorat quæ loquatur ? What fruit can he haue,who knoweth not what he ſpeaketh? Sixtly,neither were theſe ſtrange tongues vnderſtood of none in the Church,for there was alſo the gift of interpretation, as well as the gift of tongues,verſ.27.and yet many times your Latin ſeruice is vnderſtood of none in the Church, no not of the Prieſt that ſaieth it : as may appeare by that Prieſt that ſpake falſe Latin, when he baptized,ſaying, In nomine patria, filia, & ſpirita ſancta: Which baptiſme was called into queſtion: and for better reſolution, they were faine to poſt vp to Rome to Pope Zacharie, who after much conſultation determined that notwithſtanding the falſe Latin, the baptiſme was good : Decret. pag.*3.*d.cap.*86. And that many popiſh prieſts are no better Clerkes now a daies, then they were in thoſe times,let vs heare what Eraſmus ſaith : Quanquam ſacerdotum vulgus hodie magni faciat ſua verba,quæ nec ipſi qui ſonant intelligunt: Though now a daies the moſt ſort of Prieſts doe ſo magnifie their Latin words,which they vnderſtand not,that ſpeake them : Præfat. in Hieron. epiſt.Paulino. tom.*4.

Argum.*3. In the time of the Law,all things pertaining to their publike prayer, benedictions, thankſgiuings , ſacrifices, were celebrated in their vulgar tongue. 2.Chron. chap.29. Ezechias commaunded the Leuites to praiſe God with the Pſalmes of Dauid and Aſaph, which no doubt were in the Hebrue tongue: If they did ſo in the ſhadowes of the Law,much more ought we now, who,as our Sauiour ſaith,ought to pray, ſpiritu & veritate, in ſpirit and trueth. Argum.Proteſtant. diſput.Weſtmonaſt.

We will conclude with Auguſtine: Quare dicta ſunt,niſi vt ſciantur? quare ſonuerunt,niſi vt audiantur ? quare audita ſunt,niſi vt intelligantur ? Tract.in Iohan.*21. Why are things ſpoken in the Church (ſaith he)but to be knowne ? why are they pronounced but to be heard ? why are they heard but to be vnderſtood ? Ergo, Leſſons,and Scriptures, and publike prayers muſt bee vſed in a knowne tongue,and eaſie to be vnderſtood.

It was thus alſo decreed not long ſince in a general Councel: Concil.Lateranenſ.ſub Innocent.*3. *c.*9. *Quoniam in pleriſq; partibus intra eandem ciuitatē permixti ſunt populi diuerſarū linguarū, diſtrictè præcipimus,vt pontifices huiuſmodi ciuitatum, prouideant viros idoneos, qui ſecundum diuerſitates rituum & linguarum diuina officia illis celebrent,& eccleſiaſtica ſacramenta miniſtrent: Becauſe in many places,in one and the ſame citie there be mixed together people of diuers languages,we do ſtraightly charge the Biſhops of thoſe cities to prouide able men,to celebrate diuine ſeruice,and miniſter the Sacraments of the Church vnto them,according to the diuerſitie of their rites and languages.

What could be ſayd plainer,for the celebrating of diuine ſeruice in the vulgar tongue? Bellarmine thus would anſwere this authoritie, that Innocentius decree is to bee vnderſtoode onely. of the Greeke and Latin tongues,and of no other; and that he would haue the ſeruice of the Church celebrated in theſe two tongues and no other. *Anſw.*1. This appeareth to be a weake anſwere, for the decree maketh mention of people,diuerſarum linguarum,of diuers languages; and therefore he would haue the diuine office celebrated according to the diuerſitie of their tongues. But diuers tongues implie not a dualitie onely of two, but a pluralitie of many. 2. This Canon prouideth, that ſeruice ſhall be ſaid in diuers languages,becauſe of the diuerſitie of the people: but what need this prouiſion,if that the vnderſtanding of the people ſhould not be reſpected? for otherwiſe one language might ſerue diuers people. 3. A little before,if the Ieſuite be remembred, he ſaid, that many hundred yeares agoe, long before Innocentius time, neither the Greeke in Grecia, nor the Latine in Italie were the vulgar tongues,nor commonly vnderſtoode, chap.15. and yet now he graunteth,that Innocentius would haue Greeke and Latine Seruice, becauſe of the diuerſitie of the people; that is,to their vnderſtanding: ſo Bellarmine neither agreeth with himſelfe, nor with their owne Canons.

Laſtly,in defence of this truth,that praiers ought to be vſed in the vulgar tongue, Iohn Ardelie, and Iohn Simſon gaue their liues. Fox pag.1583.col.1. and Iohn Hallingdale, pag. 2026. THE FOVRTH QVESTION: OF THE authoritie of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

5.Error.
Echius enchirid.loc. de authorit.eccleſ.
Pighius lib.1. de Hierarch eccleſ.cap.2.
Can.loc.com. lib.2.cap.8.
Stap.lib.9. doc.princip. cap.1.

THe Papiſtes of former times doubted not to ſay, that the Scripture is not authenticall without the authoritie of the Church; ſo Echius ſaith,ſo Pigghius, that the authoritie of the Scripture dependeth of the authoritie of the Church neceſſarilie. Hermannus a Papiſt moſt impudently affirmeth, that the Scripture ſhould be of no more credite then Æſopes fables,without the approbation of the Church: a fowle blaſphemie. But our Papiſtes of later time, being aſhamed of their forefathers ignorance, they ſay that the Scriptures in themſelues are perfect, ſufficient, authenticall, but that to vs it appeareth not ſo; neither are we bound to take them for Scripture without the authoritie of the Church: ſo Canus, Bellarmine, Stapleton. So that (ſay they) in reſpect of vs the Church hath abſolute authoritie to determine, which is Scripture, which not. *Ex Whitacher.quæſt.3.de Script.cap.*1.

*Argum.*1. There is no more certaine authoritie,then of the Church: Ergo the Church muſt determine of Scripture, ſic Stapleton. We anſwer. Firſt, the Maieſtie of the Scriptures themſelues is more certaine, and the inward teſtimonie of the ſpirit, without the which we cannot be perſwaded of the truth and authoritie of the Scripture. Secondly, if they meane by the church,the Synagogue of Rome,it hath nothing to doe to iudge of Scripture,being the ſeate of Antichriſt: neither is the authoritie of that Church to be credited, but rather ſuſpected and miſtruſted.

*Argum.*2. There are certaine writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles not Canonicall; and other writings of ſome that were no Prophets,made Canonicall: Ergo the Church hath authoritie to iudge of Scripture,ſic Stapleton. For the firſt,where he obiecteth that there are many writings of the Prophets, as of Salomon, Nathan, Ahija, Ieedo, 2.Chron.9.29. that are loſt, and if they were extant, ſhould not be receiued: We aunſwere. Firſt,it is not to be doubted of, but ſome part of the Canonicall Scripture is loſt. Secondly, how proueth he that if they were extant, they were not to be acknowledged for Scripture?

Stapleton further obiecteth, that S.Pauls Epiſtle written to the Laodiceans whereof mention is made,Coloſ.4.16.was neuer receiued into the Canon. We anſwere,there is no ſuch Epiſtle mentioned in that place ſent to the Laodiceans,but from Laodicea,as it is in the Originall, which was not like to haue been of the Apoſtles writing to them, who at that time had not ſeene the Laodiceans,Coloſ.2.1.but an Epiſtle rather written by them to the Apoſtle; which S.Paul would haue the Coloſſians reade, becauſe it might conteine ſomewhat, which did concerne them: that Epiſtle therefore, that carrieth S.Pauls name to the Laodiceans,is but a forged, and baſtard writing, and therefore worthilie reiected out of the Canon. This was the iudgement alſo of a generall Councell.Nicen.2.action.6.tom.5.Inter epiſtolas diuini Apoſtoli,quædam fertur ad Laodicenſes,quam patres noſtri tanquam alienam reprobarunt: Amongſt the Epiſtles of the diuine Apoſtle there is one counted,bearing the name to the Laodiceans,which our fathers haue reiected as a baſtard and forraine writing. Their ſentence is that this Epiſtle was fained,and neuer written by S.Paul.

To the ſecond, that bookes not made by Prophets are iudged Canonicall, as of Toby, Iudith:

We anſwere, that theſe bookes ought not to be canonicall, neither that euer they were ſo taken, till of late it was decreed by Councels of no great antiquitie: for in the Laodicene Councell and other auncient Councels, they were deemed not to be Canonicall.

Argum. 3. Certaine bookes of the new Teſtament before doubted of, as the Epiſtle to the Hebrues, the Apocalypſe, the ſecond Epiſtle of Peter, the ſecond of Iohn, are receiued into authoritie by the Church: and other bookes, as the Goſpel of Thomas, Matthias, Andrew, Peter, were reiected by the authoritie of the Church. We anſwere. Firſt, we denie not but that the Church is to diſcerne betweene the true Scriptures and forged bookes: but this ſhe doth not of her owne authoritie, but following the direction of Gods ſpirit ſpeaking in thoſe writings: for the Church looking into the ſacred and diuine matter of the Apoſtles writings, was moued to acknowledge them for the word of God, though of ſome they were doubted of: and finding the other to be fabulous bookes did by the direction of the ſame ſpirit reiect them. Secondly, Auguſtine and Hierome think that the Canon of Scripture might be confirmed in the Apoſtles time, Iohn being the ſuruiuer of them all, who both acknowledged the true writings of the Apoſtles, and condemned the contrarie. If it be ſo (the ſpirit of God in the Apoſtles hauing determined this queſtion alreadie concerning the Canonicall Scripture) the Church hath no authoritie to alter or change that decree. Concerning this matter S. Auguſtine writeth thus vnto S. Hierome, Epiſt. 19. Veritas diuinarum ſcripturarum, &c. non à quibuſlibet, ſed ab ipſis Apoſtolis; ac per hac in Canonicum authoritatis culmen recepta, ex omni parte verax & indubitata perſiſtit: The truth of the diuine Scriptures was receiued into the Canon of authoritie by none other but the Apoſtles themſelues, and therefore is vndoubtedly true. The Apoſtles then by the ſpirit of God haue ſet downe the Canon of the Scriptures, which the Church is bound to receiue, and beleeue: it hath no authoritie to make the Canon of the Scriptures.

Argum. 4. The Church is more auncient then Scripture, and was before it. Ergo, it is of more authoritie then Scripture. Argum. Eckij Enchirid. & Hoſ. lib. 3, de authoritate ſcripturæ.

Anſw. 1. We graunt, that the Scriptures, that is the word written, haue not been from the beginning: yet though there were a Church before the Scriptures, that is the word written, the word of God notwithſtanding was before the Church, which is the ſame now written, that was before vnwritten. 2. Neither is the argument good, for alwaies that, which is more auncient, is not of greateſt authoritie: for Iohn Baptiſt, in reſpect of his office came before Chriſt, yet was not his authoritie greater.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not deſpiſe the ſentence of the Church, as our aduerſaries doe falſly charge vs: nay we doe reuerence the iudgement of the Church of God, and heare it with all obedience, to whome we confeſſe it belongeth. 1. As a faithfull keeper or treaſurer, carefully to preſerue and keepe the holy Scriptures from being violated or corrupted by heretikes or other enimies of Scripture. 2. According to her ſpirituall cunning, to diſcerne the Scripture from other forged and baſtard writings, as the Goldſmith doth the gold from other adulterate mettal. 3. To propound and preach, and hold out the light of Gods truth to the people. 4. To interpret and expound Scripture according to the analogie of faith. Whitach. quæſt. 3. cap. 2. de ſcriptur. We confeſſe alſo as much, as hath been in former times decreed by the Papiſts themſelues: Penes eccleſiam eſt diſcernendi authoritas ſcripturas veras ab adulterinis: ſic etiam poteſtatem habet interpretandi, atque adeo ex eiſdem ſcripturis eliciendi & explanandi dogmata: the Church hath power to diſcerne true Scripture from falſe, alſo to interpret the Scripture, and out of the ſame to deriue and explane precepts of religion, that is to preach. But the Church ought not to ſet the Lords ſtamp vpon falſe coine, as the Papiſts doe in making Apocryphall bookes Canonicall. Neither doe we onely beleeue the Scripture, becauſe of the Churches teſtimonie, nor chiefly, but becauſe the ſpirit of God doth ſo teach vs, and the Scriptures themſelues doe teſtifie for themſelues: ſo that euery man is bound to acknowledge the Scripture, though there were no publike approbation of the Church: Fulk 2. Galat. 6. Whitacher. quæſt. 3, cap. 1. de Scripturis. We doe reaſon thus.

Interrelig. Cæſarea cap. 11. anno. 1548.

Argum. 1. The Ieſuite doth reaſon ſtrongly for vs: he bringeth fiue arguments to proue the Scripture to be the word of God: veritas vaticiniorum, the conſtant and perpetuall trueth of the Propheſies: incredibilis ſcriptorum conſpiratio, the wonderfull harmonie and conſent of holy writers of the Scripture: teſtis eſt Deus ipſe, the ſpirit of God is a principall witneſſe vnto vs: teſtis eſt ipſa Scriptura, the Scripture it ſelfe beareth witneſſe, as 2. Tim. 3. all Scripture is giuen by inſpiration: teſtis eſt diuinorum numerus infinitus miraculorum: laſtly, the many and great miracles wrought by the Prophets and Apoſtles doe teſtifie for the truth thereof. He maketh no mention at all of the teſtimonie of the Church, but ſaith the ſame that we hold, that the ſpirit of God inwardly working in our hearts by the Scriptures themſelues, which we find to be moſt perfect, conſonant, true, of ſingular maieſtie, doth teach vs which is the word of God. Bellarm. de verbo Dei. lib. 1. c. 2.

Thoſe arguments or inducements, which do ariſe of the conſideration of the Scriptures themſelues (as Bellarmine here ſetteth downe ſome, and other may be added vnto them) are more forcible to perſwade vs, that it is the word of God, then the bare teſtimonie of the Church: Firſt, doctrinæ maieſtas, the ſingular maieſtie of the Scriptures, in the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and of the heauenly doctrine therein contained: wherein none of the writings of the Philoſophers or Orators, are to be compared vnto them. Secondly, beſide the maieſtie of the matter, the purenes of ſtile, grauitie and diuineneſſe of ſpeech, doth commend the excellencie of Scripture. Thirdly, the antiquitie of theſe holy writings ſheweth them to be diuine: for the bookes of Moſes are found to bee more ancient, then all the writings in the world. Fourthly, the propheticall predictions and prophecies, which afterward were accompliſhed, yea the very names of certaine men were ſet down many yeres before they were borne, as Ioſias, 1. King. 13. 2. Cyrus, Eſay. 44. 28. Fiftly, the wonderfull and ſtrange miracles, which were wrought by the Prophets and Apoſtles. Sixtly, the teſtimonies alſo of Martyrs, which gaue their liues in defence of the holy doctrine ſet forth in Scripture, doe euidently declare, that they are diuine writings. Seuenthly, the enemies of the Scriptures, which haue attempted all meanes to extinguiſh them, and could not preuaile, doe ſet forth the maieſtie, and authoritie thereof. Eightly, the writers alſo of the Scriptures the Prophets and Apoſtles, doe not a little moue vs: who were but ſimple and plaine men, as ſhepheards, heardmen, fiſhermen, before they were called and ſet apart of God for this worke: whereby it is apparant, that God who inſpired them with ſo great grace, was the author of the Scriptures: Hæc Caluin. lib. inſtitut. 1. cap. 8. Theſe aforeſaid motiues do eaſily conuince, that the Scriptures are no humane, but diuine writings: and they are more able to moue vs, then the bare teſtimonie of the Church: yet perſwade vs they cannot, which is the onely worke of the ſpirit, but onely prepare our hearts, and ſtirre vs vp: Ergo, much leſſe is the authoritie of the Church able to doe it.

Argum. 2. The Scripture giueth authoritie to the Church: Ergo, the Church giueth not authoritie to the Scripture: the firſt we proue by our aduerſaries owne confeſsion: for being asked, how they know that the Church erreth not, they alleage ſuch places of Scripture, as Matth. 28. 20. I âm with you to the end of the world, and the like: how then doth the Church giue authoritie to Scripture, ſeeing it taketh her warrant and authoritie from thence? The Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith, that nihil eſt certius vel notius Scripturis, nothing is more certaine or notoriouſly known then Scripture. And againe, ſacra Scriptura eſt regula credendi certiſſima, the holy Scripture is the moſt certaine rule of faith. Bellarm. de verbo. 1. 2. If the authoritie of Scripture then be moſt certaine, what reaſon is it, that they ſhould depend vpon the iudgement of the Church, which is nothing ſo certaine? The leſſe certaine ought (rather and ſo doth indeed) depend of the more certain; the Church vpon the ſcripture, not contrariwiſe; for the Scriptures are the foundation of the Church, Ephe. 2. 20. Argum. Whitach. 3.

Argum. 3. To beleeue the Scripture is a worke of faith: the Church cannot infuſe faith into vs, but the ſpirit of God. Ergo the ſpirit of God not the Church teacheth vs to beleeue Scripture. argum. Whitach. 18.

Againe, if the Scriptures depend vpon the approbation of the Church, then the promiſes of ſaluation and eternall life conteined in the Scriptures doe ſo likewiſe: but it is abſurd to thinke that the promiſes of God doe ſtand vpon the allowance of men, Ergo neither the Scriptures, argum. Caluini. lib. 1. inſtitut. cap. 7.

Argum. 4. The Scripture is the chiefe iudge, and ought ſo to be in all controuerſies: we may appeale from the Church to the Scripture, not from the Scripture to the Church: the Church is ſubiect to the Scriptures, the rule of faith is in the Scriptures, not in the Church: for the companie of the faithfull which is the Church, are ruled by faith: they doe not ouerrule faith: neither are a rule thereof: the Church is a point of beleefe, as in the Creed, not a rule or meaſure thereof: Ergo the Church is not the chiefe iudge of Scripture, but it ſelfe to be iudged by Scripture. Whitach. argum. 16.

Argum. 5. We haue euident places of Scripture, Iohn. 5. 34. ſaith Chriſt, I receiue no witneſſe of men: but the Scripture is the voice of Chriſt, and of the ſame authoritie. Ergo. ver. 36. I haue a greater teſtimonie then of Iohn, the Scriptures doe teſtifie of me. ver. 9. The teſtimonie of the Scriptures is greater then the record of Iohn: Ergo then of the Church. 1. Ioh. 5. 6. the ſpirit beareth witnes, that the ſpirit, that is, the doctrine of the ſpirit, is the truth. And ver. 9. if we receiue the witneſſe of man, the witneſſe of God is greater, Ergo, not the iudgement of the Church, but the witneſſe of the ſpirit doth certifie and aſſure vs of the truth and authoritie of Scripture.

I will adde one ſaying out of Auguſtine: Mihi certum eſt, nuſquam à Chriſti authoritate diſcedere, non enim reperio valentiorem. Contra Academic. lib. 3. cap. 20. I am reſolued for no cauſe to leaue the authoritie of Chriſt (ſpeaking in the Scriptures) for I finde none more forcible: Ergo the authoritie of Scripture is aboue the Church, which is denied by the Rhemiſtes, annot. 2. Gal. ſect. 2. I will here vrge them with their owne authoritie: Thomas Aquinas hath this diſtinction: that God worketh two waies; firſt by mediate cauſes, as the Prophet ſaith, Pſalm. 138. Thou haſt made me, that is, by the worke of nature: ſecondly, he worketh ſomethings immediately, as miracles: ſo he ſaith, Deum hominis intellectum per alias literas mediatè inſtruere, per ſacras immediatè: God inſtructeth man mediatly by other writings, but immediately by the Scriptures: as miracles then are Gods workes immediatlie, ſo are the Scriptures his words. Then as miracles of themſelues are knowne to be Gods works, as the Magicians in Ægypt could ſay, digitus Dei eſt, it is the finger of God; ſo are Scriptures knowne to be Gods writings: for if we ſhould neede the teſtimonie of men to perſwade vs of the word, then God thereby doth not immediately inſtruct vs, as Thomas Aquinas here ſaith. So then, as the Lawes of Emperours, though they were, ſine die & conſule, without the date of the day and the Conſull, were notwithſtanding authentike, becauſe they were imperiall, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. leg. 1. Iuſtinian. much more the holy Scriptures ought of themſelues to beare credite, becauſe they are diuine. Ex citation. Eſpenſei in 2. Tim. p. 120. g.

Laſtly, let vs ſee the confeſſion of the holy Martyrs, whoſe iudgment in matters of faith, though our aduerſaries regard it not, yet is of vs much to be regarded, ſeeing they doubted not to ſpend their liues in defence of their faith.

Maiſter Philopt thus anſwereth to Morgans argument, who vrged that the Church was before Scripture, and therefore aboue Scripture: that the worde of God conſiſted not onely in letters and externall writing, but it was the word, wherewith the hearts of the Patriarches, Prophets and Apoſtles were inſpired, euen before it was written, as the ſalutation of the Angel was the Scripture of Chriſt, and word of God, euen before it was written: ſic Philpot, pag. 1417. diſput. conuocat.

Maiſter Bradford ſaith, that the Church is a meane more ſpeedily to bring vs to know the Scriptures: as was the woman of Samaria a meane to bring the Samaritans to know Chriſt: but as they, when they had heard Chriſt, beleeued not ſo much becauſe of her report, as for that they heard him themſelues ſpeake: ſo after that Scriptures are diſcerned, and ſhewed to vs by the Church, we beleeue them to be the word of God, not becauſe the Church ſaith ſo, but for that indeed we finde them to be ſo, as true ſheepe acknowledging the voice of our ſhepheard Chriſt Ieſus ſpeaking therein, hac ille. pag. 6116. col. 1.

Maiſter Glouer Martyr, to this argument propounded, the Church ſheweth which is the word of God, Ergo it is aboue the word, anſwereth thus: this is no good reaſon, for by the ſame argument Iohn Baptiſt ſhall be aboue Chriſt, becauſe he ſhewed Chriſt: and he that telleth one which is the King, ſhould be aboue the King. pag. 1712.

Robert Drakes Martyr, being asked how he knew the Scriptures to be the word of God, anſwered: by the holy doctrine which it containeth, teaching ſaluation by Chriſt, and giuing precepts of holines, to withdraw vs from a wicked life. William Tims anſwered, that the old Teſtament doth giue witneſſe to the new, and one of them doth teſtifie for another: whereby it appeareth, they are the very word of God. Fox. pag. 1897. All thoſe holy Martyrs died in this confeſſion of their faith: therefore bleſſed be God that hath not left his truth without ſuch excellent witneſſes, in thoſe crooked and euill daies.

THE FIFT QVESTION CONCERNING THE perſpicuitie and plainneſſe of the Scripture.

The Papiſts.

6. Error. OVr aduerſaries doe hold that the Scriptures are moſt hard, difficult, and obſcure. Bellarmine ſaith, neceſſariò fatendum eſt, Scripturas eſſe obſcuriſſimas, it muſt needes be granted that the Scriptures are moſt obſcure, de verbo Dei. lib. 3. cap. 1. They doe not onely affirme that ſome things are obſcure in the Scriptures: but that they are all hard, and doubtfull, and vncertaine, and compare them therefore to a leaden rule, which may be turned euery way, Petrus a Soto. And to a noſe of wax, Lindanus a Papiſt, ex Tilmanno de verbo Dei, error. 5. Our Rhemiſts ſay, it is all one to affirme ſome things to be hard in a writer, and the writer to be hard: ſo they conclude, that the Scriptures are both in reſpect of the matter and manner, very hard, and therefore daungerous for the ignorant to reade them. Rhemenſ. annot. in 2. Pet. 3. verſ. 16.

Argum. 1. They obiect that place, 2. Pet. 3. 16. where the Apoſtle ſaith, ſpeaking of S. Pauls Epiſtles, that many things are hard. Ergo, the Epiſtles of S. Paul are hard, and ſo the Scriptures: this is Bellarmine and the Ieſuites Argument. We anſwere. Firſt, he ſaith not, that Pauls Epiſtles are hard, but many things, which he entreateth of. Secondly, they are hard not to all, but the vnſtable and vnlearned doe peruert them. Thirdly, we denie not, but that ſome places in the Scripture are obſcure, and haue neede of interpretation: but it followeth not, that therefore the whole Scripture is obſcure: and becauſe of ſome harde places, that the people ſhould be forbidden the reading of all.

Argum. 2. The Scriptures are obſcure both in reſpect of the matter and manner: firſt the matter is high and myſticall: as of the Trinitie, of the incarnation of the word, of the nature of Angels, and ſuch like. We anſwer, theſe myſteries may be ſaid to be obſcure three diuers waies. 1. In their own nature: ſo are they hard indeed, for by humane reaſon, we cannot attaine to the depth of them. 2. In reſpect of their handling in the Seripture: ſo are they not obſcure, for all theſe things are plainly declared in the word, as the nature of ſuch deepe myſteries will affoord. 3. In reſpect of vs: ſo muſt they needes be obſcure, if men be not contented with the knowledge in the word, but curiouſly ſearch further. Luther therefore doth aptly diſtinguiſh of theſe things, he ſaith that, res Dei, the things of God are obſcure, the very depth of his myſteries cannot be comprehended of vs: but, res Scripturæ, theſe things, as they are opened in Scripture, are plaine, if we will content our ſelues with that knowledge.

Secondly (ſaith Bellarmine) the manner of handling is hard and obſcure: there are many tropes, metaphors, allegories, Hebraiſmes, which cannot eaſily be vnderſtood. We anſwere. Firſt, many of theſe are rather ornaments of the Scripture, as tropes, metaphors, then impediments to the reader. Secondly, though the phraſe of Scripture ſeeme hard at the firſt, yet by further trauell in the Scriptures it may become eaſie and plaine: for all things are not vnderſtoode at the firſt. Thirdly, we denie not but that ſome places are obſcure, and had need to be opened.

Argum. 3. If the Scriptures be not hard, what need ſo many Commentaries, and expoſitions, Rhemiſt. 2.Pet.3.16. & Bellarm. lib. 3. de verb. Dei. cap. 1. We anſwer. Firſt, ſo many Commentaries are not requiſite, ſome may be ſpared. Secondly, expoſitions are needfull for the vnderſtanding of darke places; but many things are plaine enough without expoſitions, and may be vnderſtood of the ſimple.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not hold that the Scripture is euery where ſo plaine and euident, that it neede no interpretation, as our aduerſaries doe ſlander vs, and therefore here they doe fight with their owne ſhadow. Bellarm. lib. 3. de verbo cap. 1. We confeſſe, that the Lord in the Scriptures hath tempered hard things and eaſie together, that we might be exerciſed in the Scriptures, and might knocke and labour by prayer and ſtudie, for the opening of the ſenſe: and that there might be order kept in the Church, ſome to be hearers, ſome teachers and expounders, by whoſe diligent ſearch and trauell, the harder places may be opened to the people. But this we affirme againſt our aduerſaries: firſt, that all points of faith neceſſarie to ſaluation, are plainely ſet forth in the Scriptures. Secondly, that the Scriptures may with great profite be read of the ſimple and vnlearned, notwithſtanding the hardnes of ſome places, which in time alſo vſing the meanes they come to the vnderſtanding of, Ex Fulk. annot. 2. Pet. 3.16. Whitacher. quaeſt. 4. cap. 1.

Argum. 1. Firſt, that which we maintaine is euident out of the Scripture, Deut. 30.11. The commandement, which I command thee, is not hid from thee, nor farre off. And as it followeth, Thou needeſt not aſcend to the heauens, or goe beyond the ſea: the word is neere vnto thee, euen in thy mouth and heart, to doe it. argum. Brentij. Ergo the Scriptures are plaine. Firſt, the Ieſuite anſwereth, that it is meant onely of the decalogue and the ten commandements, that they are eaſie, not of the whole Scripture. As though if the commandements be eaſie the reſt of the Scriptures be not likewiſe, as the Prophets and hiſtoricall bookes, being but commentaries and expoſitions of the decalogue. S. Paul, Rom. 10.6. vnderſtandeth this place of the whole doctrine of faith, who better knew the meaning of Moſes then the Ieſuite. Againe, the Prophet Dauid ſaith, Thy word is a lanterne to my feete, and a light to my pathes: which is not to be vnderſtood only of the commandements and precepts in Scripture, but of the whole word of God, as Auguſtine expoundeth it: Quod ait lucerna pedibus verbum tuum, verbum eſt, quod ſcripturis omnibus ſanctis continetur: where he ſaith, thy word is a lanterne to my feete, he vnderſtandeth the word of God, which is contained in all the holy Scriptures, Auguſt. concion. 23. in Pſalm. 118.

Argum. 2. 2.Cor.4.3. If our Goſpell be hid, it is to them onely that are loſt: Ergo the Scriptures are plaine to the faithfull. The Ieſuite anſwereth, S. Paul ſpeaketh of the knowledge of Chriſt, not of the Scriptures. Firſt, it is manifeſt out of the ſecond verſe, that S. Paul ſpeaketh of that Goſpell, which hee preached to the Corinthians, which is the ſame hee wrote vnto them: wherefore if the Goſpell preached were eaſie and plaine, why is not the Goſpell written by him, I meane the doctrine of faith, being the ſame which he preached? Secondly, if they graunt that the knowledge of Chriſt is eaſie, we aske no more: for this is that we ſay, that the doctrine of faith and ſaluation is plainely expreſſed in Scripture.

Argum. 3. This is the difference betweene the new Teſtament and the old: the old is compared to a claſped book, Eſa. 29.11. the new to a book opened, Apoc. 5. The knowledge of Chriſtians far exceedeth the knowledg of the Iewes: it was lawful for them to reade the Scriptures, much more for all Chriſtians. The Ieſuit anſwereth that our knowledge is greater then theirs, not in all Scripture, but in the myſteries for our redemption only. We anſwer: this is all we deſire: for if the myſterie of ſaluation and redemption be plainely opened in the Scripture, why ſhould not the people be admitted to the reading of the word, to be confirmed in the knowledge of their redemption? Who ſeeth not what ſillie anſwers theſe be? Auguſtine thus writeth of this matter, In ÿs (inquit) quæ apertè in ſcripturis poſita ſunt, inueniuntur ea omnia, quæ fidem continent moreſque viuendi: De doctrin. By this appeareth, that this Councell deemed not the reſt of the Scripture ſo very hard, ſeeing they ſo ſtreightly enioyne the reading and preaching of the hardeſt booke in Scripture to the people: which ſome reformed Churches euen at this day doe forbeare the reading of.

Further, if that by the Emperiall law it was prouided, Vt ad omnium notitiam, conſtitutiones valeant peruenire: That the conſtitutions ſhould come to euery mans knowledge: Cod. lib.1.tit.1. lege.3.Iuſtinian: And againe, Conſtitutionum noſtri codicis iubar omnibus clareat, leg.3. That as the Sunne beames our conſtitutions ſhould ſhine vpon all. I will alſo vrge them with their owne decrees: Decret.par.1.diſt.38.cap.9. Ignorantia ſcripturarum, ignoratio Chriſti: The ignorance of the Scripture, is the ignorance of Chriſt. If then the people be kept from the knowledge of Scripture, they cannot attaine to the knowledge of Chriſt.

Which may be tranſlated thus.
No age ſo young, no wit ſo ſmall,
which Scripture doth not fit:
Ther's milke for babes, and yet withall

If then children and little ones, and men of ſimple wit may be admitted to the reading of Scripture, it ſeemeth not that it ſhould be ſo difficult and obſcure, as they would beare vs in hand.

I will in the laſt place adde the iudgement of a reuerend and learned man, that faithfull martyr, and bleſſed ſeruant of God D.Taylor, who in an epiſtle of his confuteth a certaine ſermon made by a popiſh Prieſt in Hadley, whereof the ſaid D.Taylor was Paſtor: He ſaith, the Scripture is full of darke ſentences: but indeed it is called of Dauid, a candle to our feete, and a light to our ſteps. Our Sauiour Chriſt calleth his word the light, which euill doers doe flie from, &c. Fox p.1528.

THE SIXT QVESTION: CONCERNING the interpretation of Scripture.

THis queſtion doth deuide it ſelfe into three parts: Firſt, concerning the diuers ſenſes of the Scripture. Secondly, to whom the chiefe authoritie to expound Scripture is committed. Thirdly, what meanes muſt be vſed in the interpretation of Scripture.

THE FIRST PART OF THE SIXT QVEſtion: of the diuers ſenſes of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

THere are two ſtrange aſſertions of our aduerſaries concerning this matter. Firſt, they affirme that the Scripture may haue diuers ſenſes and meanings in the ſame place. The ſenſe of the Scripture is either literall (ſay they) and hiſtoricall, which is the firſt and moſt proper ſenſe; or ſpirituall, that is an higher ſenſe deriued out of the other. The literall ſenſe, which there is gathered directly, and immediatly out of the words: the ſpirituall, which hath another reference, then to that, which the words doe properly ſignifie. The literall is of two ſorts, either plaine and ſimple, or elſe figuratiue: as where Chriſt ſaith, I haue other ſheepe, which are not of this folde, &c. Iohn 10. Whereby he vnderſtandeth other people beſide the Iewes. The ſpirituall is of three kindes; Allegoricall, Tropologicall, Anagogicall: they ſhew by particular inſtance and induction, that the Scripture beſide the literall ſenſe may haue theſe alſo. 7.Error.

The Allegoricall ſenſe is, when beſides the plaine hiſtoricall and literall meaning, ſomewhat is ſignified, which by an allegorie is referred vnto Chriſt, or the Church, as Gal.4. beſide the trueth of the ſtorie of the bond and free woman, S. Paul applieth it vnto the two Teſtaments: Ergo, one place may haue more ſenſes then one.

The Tropologicall ſenſe is, when as there is ſomewhat ſignified appertaining to manners, as Deut. 25. Thou ſhalt not muſle the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corne: this by S. Paul is applied to the miniſters of the Goſpell, 1. Cor. 9. Ergo, the Scripture hath diuers ſenſes.

The Anagogicall ſenſe is, when the place is applied to decipher and ſet forth the kingdome of heauen and eternall things, as Pſal. 94. I ſware vnto them, if they ſhould enter into my reſt: this is literally vnderſtood of the reſt in Canaan, and ſpiritually of life eternall: Ergo, many ſenſes. Thus reaſoneth Bellarm. lib. 3. de ſcriptur. cap. 3.

The Proteſtants.

WE affirme that of one place of Scripture there can bee but one ſenſe, which we call the literall ſenſe, when as the words are either taken properly, or figuratiuely to expreſſe the thing which is meant: as in this place, The ſeede of the woman ſhall breake the Serpents head: the literall ſenſe is of Chriſt, who ſhould triumph ouer Sathan, though it bee ſpoken in a borrowed and figuratiue ſpeech. There can bee therefore but one ſenſe, which is the literall: as for thoſe three kindes, they are not diuers ſenſes, but diuers applications onely and collections out of one and the ſame ſenſe: as S. Ambroſe ſaith in 17. cap. Luc. Non vna tantum figura, ſed multiplex in ſcripturis eſſe conſueuit, vt vnus ſermo plures ſpecies comprehendat: The Scripture is accuſtomed to afford not one, but diuers figures, that one ſaying may comprehend diuers kindes vnder it: that is, diuers ſpeciall ſenſes, or applications of one generall ſenſe.

Argum. 1. It ſhall appeare by a ſeuerall induction of all theſe kindes: In the firſt example of the Allegoricall ſenſe, Galat. 4. the Apoſtle ſaith not that there is a double ſenſe, but that it may be allegorically applied, which is hiſtorically ſet downe. There is then but one ſenſe of the place, part whereof conſiſteth in the ſtorie, part in the allegorie: ſo that the whole ſenſe is contained in them both. Concerning the ſecond example of the Tropologicall: there is not a twofold ſenſe of that place, but one whole generall ſenſe, that as the mouth of the oxe was not to bee muſled, ſo the miniſter of the Goſpell muſt bee prouided for. Likewiſe of the Anagogicall kinde: it is not one ſenſe to vnderſtand the reſt of Canaan, another of the kingdome of God: but there is one whole ſenſe, that as they for their Idolatrie were depriued of the land of promiſe, ſo wee ſhould take heede leaſt by our diſobedience we loſe the hope of the kingdome of heauen. So wee conclude that thoſe are not diuers ſenſes, but one ſenſe diuerſly applied.

Argum. 2. The literall ſenſe is the onely ſenſe of the place, becauſe out of that ſenſe only may an argument ſtrongly be framed: wherefore ſeeing allegories and tropes doe not conclude, they are not the ſenſes of the place. An allegorie or type may be part of the literall ſenſe, and then it concludeth: but when an allegorie is framed beſide the literall ſenſe, it concludeth not; and therfore is no part of the ſenſe: as to reaſon thus, the oxes mouth muſt not be muſled: Ergo, the Miniſter muſt bee maintained, it followeth well, becauſe it is part of the ſenſe. But allegories deuiſed beſide the ſenſe proue not, though they may illuſtrate.

Argum. 3. That propertie is the ſenſe of the place, which the text alwaies yeeldeth: for no text of Scripture is without his ſenſe: but the ſpirituall ſenſe is not in euery place to be found, but the literall ſenſe alwaies. And this the Ieſuite confeſſeth: Non inuenitur ſpiritualis ſenſus in omni ſententia ſcripturæ: The ſpirituall ſenſe is not found in euery ſentence of Scripture: Ergo, it is not the ſenſe properly.

Here alſo I will vrge the Ieſuite with his owne teſtimonie: Spirituales ſenſus licet ædificent, & tamen non ſemper conſtat, an ſint à ſpiritu ſancto intenti: The ſpirituall ſenſes, though they may edifie, yet it is not alwaies certaine, whether they bee intended by the ſpirit: but the literall ſenſe is certaine alwaies to bee the ſenſe of the ſpirit, Bellarm. cap. 3. The literall ſenſe therefore is the onely ſenſe, becauſe it is the ſenſe of the ſpirit.

I will alſo oppoſe againſt them their owne decrees: Sext. decretal. lib. 5. tit 12. c. 3. Nicholaus 4. Gloſſæ non fiant, niſi forſan per quas verbi ſenſus, vel conſtructio, quaſi grammaticaliter ad literam, vel intelligibilius exponatur: Let there bee no gloſſes made, but ſuch, whereby the ſenſe or conſtruction of the word may bee grammatically expounded according to the letter. This decree alloweth none but the grammaticall and literall ſenſe.

The Papiſts.

8. Error. THeir other aſſertion is this, that it is lawfull to allegorize ſcripture both in the old and new Teſtament, Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 3. They reaſon thus, Rhemenſ. annot. Hebr. 4. ver. 5. The Apoſtle applieth the reſt of the Sabbath to the eternall reſt: Ergo, the like applications of the Fathers are lawfull. See Annot. Hebr. 7. 2. The Apoſtle (ſay they) findeth great myſteries, euen in the very names: Ergo, it is lawfull to make allegories.

The

The Proteſtants.

WE ſay it is dangerous to make allegories of Scripture, without the warrant and direction of Gods ſpirit. This was the occaſion that diuers of the ancient fathers greatly erred: as the Ieſuite himſelfe giueth an inſtance of Origen, who doth allegorize the ſtorie of Geneſis concerning the terreſtriall paradiſe. And it is much to bee wondered at that our aduerſaries doe ſo much ſtand for the allegorizing of Scripture, beyond the litterall ſenſe, ſeeing that, contrary to their owne iudgement, who ſo much eſteeme of tropes and allegories, in theſe words of Chriſt, hoc eſt corpus meum, they ſtand onely vpon the literall and verball ſenſe, admitting no trope, figure or allegorie at all. I will put them in minde here of a ſaying of an old popiſh Biſhop, aboue two hundred yeeres agoe: The words in Scripture (ſaith he) muſt not bee iudged by the ſenſe which they make, but the ſenſe whereof they are made, the conſtructions in Scripture are not bound to Donates rules, where faith is farre placed from the capacitie of reaſon: Sic Iohann. Treſnant. Epiſcop. Hereford. Fox pag. 465. How well the Papiſts now a daies doe follow this rule it appeareth by the former example.

To their arguments our learned countrie man D. Fulk anſwereth: Firſt, it followeth not, becauſe it was lawfull for the Apoſtles, gouerned by the ſpirit, to make allegories, that it is therefore lawfull for others. Secondly, when the fathers or any other writers can bee aſſured of the ſame ſpirit, which the holy writers had, and of the like dexteritie in vnderſtanding and expounding Scripture, they may likewiſe be bold to make allegories.

Let vs heare what Auguſtine ſaith of this matter: Sicut mihi multum errare videntur, qui nullas res geſtas aliquid aliud prater id, quod eo modo geſta ſunt, ſignificare arbitrantur: ita multum audere, qui prorſus ibi omnia ſignificationibus allegoricis inuoluta eſſe contendunt: As they are much deceiued, which thinke that the ſtories in the Scripture doe ſignifie no other thing, but that which was done: ſo they are too raſh and bold, that would draw all things to allegories, which they reade in Scripture. Ergo, it is not lawfull for any to inuent allegories of Scripture, as it ſeemeth good to themſelues.

Concil. Bracarenſ. 1. can. 30. it was thus decreed: Placuit, vt nihil veteris teſtamenti poeticè compoſitum in Eccleſia pſaltatur: It ſeemeth good to vs that no part of the old Teſtament ſhould be ſung in meeter in the Church, or compoſed after a poetical manner. But what do they elſe but follow poeticall fictions, that draw the Scripture as they liſt, to imagined allegories? Synod. Auguſt. c. 13. Concionator ſe ad captum auditorum demittat, nunc Catechiſtam agat, nunc interpretem ſcripturarum, nunc vitiorum reprehenſorem, nunc doctorem myſteriorum: The Preacher muſt apply himſelfe to his auditors capacitie, ſometime playing the Catechiſt, ſometime interpreting Scriptures, otherwhile reprehending vice, and againe vnfolding myſteries. He muſt then vnfolde myſteries, not allegorize Scripture at his pleaſure, and make more myſteries.

Let them heare alſo their owne decrees: Decr. par. 1. d. 37. c. 4. Pſeudoprophetas eos debemus accipere, qui aliter ſcripturarum verba accipiunt, quam ſpiritus ſanctus ſonat: We vnderſtand them to bee falſe prophets, which doe take the words of Scripture otherwiſe, then the ſpirit ſoundeth. And againe, ibid. cap. 14. Clemens 1. Multas quidem, vt audiuimus veſtrarū partium ingenioſi homines, ex ÿs, qua legunt, veriſimilitudes capiunt: Certaine wittie conceited men in your parts, as I heare, doe gather ſimilitudes and reſemblances out of that which they reade: which vſe is forbidden in this decree: the former canon calleth them, imagines, vmbras, phantaſmata: ſhadowes, and phantaſies. And I wiſh in my heart, that in handling of Scripture, this age of ours were not too much giuen to follow ſuch wittie rather then pithie conceites and phantaſies.

THE SECOND PART OF THE SIXT QVEſtion: to whom the chiefe authoritie to expound Scripture is committed.

The Papiſts.

IT was decreed in the Councell of Trent, that Scripture ſhould bee expounded, as the Church expoundeth it, and according to the common and conſonant conſent of the fathers, Seſſ. 4. The Rheiniſts ſay, that the ſenſe of the Scriptures muſt bee learned of the fathers and paſtors of the Church, Præfat. ſect. 18. If the fathers agree not, the matter is referred to a generall Councell: if there it be not determined, we muſt haue recourſe to the Pope and his Cardinals. The Ieſuite dare not referre the matter to the Pope alone to expound Scripture, but ioyneth the Colledge of Cardinals with him, Bellarm. lib. 3. de ſcript. cap. 3. 9. Error.

Argum. 1. They obiect that place Deut. 17. 9. where the people are commanded to reſort vnto the Prieſt or Iudge in doubtfull matters: Ergo, there ought to bee a chiefe and ſupreme Iudge in Eccleſiaſticall matters, Bellarm. We anſwere: Firſt, here the ciuill Magiſtrate and the Iudge are ioyned together, as verſ. 12. Wherefore if they will gather hereby, that the Pope muſt bee ſupreme Iudge in all Eccleſiaſticall matters, then the Emperour ought to be as well in ciuill. Bellarmine anſwereth, that by the Iudge is vnderſtood the chiefe Prieſt: or if it be taken for the ciuill Iudge, he is but to execute the ſentence giuen by the Prieſt. *Contra.*1. It appeareth in the 12. verſe, that the high Prieſt and the chiefe Iudge are not all one: that man, that ſhall not hearken to the Prieſt,&c. or vnto the Iudge, howſoeuer the vulgar Latin reade otherwiſe. 2. We graunt that the Prieſts office was to declare to the Iudge the word of God, but not to giue ſentence: for the Prieſt had not to doe with matters of blood, which are named amongſt other cauſes, verſ.8. Secondly, the text ſaith, they ſhall come to the Prieſts, verſ.9. aſſigning many, not to one onely Prieſt. Thirdly, they muſt iudge according to the law, verſ.11. not as they liſt themſelues. Bellarmine ſaith, that this is no condition, if they ſhall iudge according to the law; for then the people ſhould iudge the ſentence of the Prieſt: but it is a promiſe, &c. *Contra.*1. We ſay not that the people ſhould iudge of the ſentence of the Prieſt, but the law of God it ſelfe: as the Diſciples by the Scriptures did examine the Apoſtles preachings, Act.17. who were not inferiour in office in the Goſpell to the Prieſts in the law. 2. Neither had the Iudges any ſuch promiſe not to erre in iudgement, but ſo farre forth as they followed the law: for there were among them vnrighteous Iudges, as Abimelech, Iudg.9. and the two Elders, that condemned Suſanna, which booke is good ſcripture with them. Fourthly, here is no mention made of doubts in interpreting Scripture, but of controuerſies that may fall out betweene man and man, either eccleſiaſticall to be decided by the Prieſt, or ciuill by the Magiſtrate. Fiftly, we graunt that in euery countrie there ought to bee a ſupreme and high ſeate of iudgement for the determining of controuerſiall matters betweene men: but it followeth not that there ſhould be a ſupreme Iudge ouer the whole Church, eſpecially in ſuch matters as this concerning the ſenſe of the Scriptures, which is not committed to the iudgement of men, neither is any ſuch controuerſie named in that place, verſ.8.

*Argum.*2. Eccleſiaſt.12.11. The Wiſeman compareth the words of the wiſe to nayles which are faſtened, giuen by one paſtor. In this place Salomon teacheth, that men ought to reſt in the ſentence of the chiefe paſtor, without any further inquirie or ſearch. And if the chiefe paſtor in the old Teſtament had ſuch authoritie, much more the chiefe Prieſt in the new: Ergo, we ought to reſt in the ſentence and iudgement of the Pope with his aſſiſtants, *Bellar.cap.4.argum.*3.

We anſwere, the wiſe men are here vnderſtood to be the Paſtors and Miniſters of Gods word, but this one paſtor ſignifieth neither the high Prieſt in the old law, nor the Pope in the new, but Ieſus Chriſt the high ſhepheard for our ſoules. What great boldnes is this to attribute that to the Pope, which is onely proper to Chriſt?

*Argum.*3. They alſo picke out ſome places in the new Teſtament, as Matth.16.19. to thee will I giue the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. Chriſt ſaith ſo to Peter: Ergo, the Pope hath authoritie to expound Scripture. We anſwere: firſt, by the keyes here is meant commiſſion to preach the Goſpell, not onely to expound doubts. Secondly, they were giuen to all the Apoſtles, not to Peter onely, Matth.28. verſ.18.19. Concil. Aquiſgranenſ.cap.9.ex Iſidor. Cæteri Apoſtoli cum Petro par conſortium honoris & poteſtatis acceperunt: The reſt of the Apoſtles were receiued together with Peter, into the ſame fellowſhip of dignitie and authoritie or power. Thirdly, the Pope is not ſucceſſor of Peter, no more then any other godly Biſhop, nor ſo much, vnleſſe he follow Peters ſteps: As S. Hierome ſaith to Damaſus, as it is alleaged in your own decrees: *Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.qu.1.c.*14. Petri & fidem & ſedem tenes: You hold both Peters ſeate and faith. So they abuſe that place, Matth. 18.17. He that will not heare the Church, &c. Ergo, the Biſhops and chiefe paſtors muſt expound the doubts in Scripture. Anſw. Firſt, our Sauiour ſpeaketh here of the diſcipline of the Church, of corrections and admonitions, not of interpreting Scripture, which dependeth not vpon the will and phantaſie of Pope, Cardinals, or popiſh Councels, but muſt bee tried by the Scriptures themſelues. Secondly, wee muſt giue eare to the Church, but with a double condition: firſt, we muſt be ſure it is the Church of God, as our Sauiour himſelfe expoundeth, verſ.20. Where two or three are gathered together in my name, &c. ſo that euery congregation is not the Church, but that which is aſſembled in the name and authoritie of Chriſt. Secondly, we muſt not heare them, contrarie to the Scriptures, but ſo long as they doe teach the doctrine of Chriſt: for otherwiſe an Angell from heauen is not to be heard, 1. Galath.1.8.

*Argum.*4. S. Paul went to Ieruſalem to conferre with S. Peter, Iames and Iohn, otherwiſe he ſaith he ſhould haue runne in vaine: Ergo, the iudgement of faith belongeth to Peter, and Peters ſucceſſor, *Bellar.cap.*5.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Paul went not vp to Ieruſalem of neceſſitie, as though he needed to haue his doctrine confirmed by the former Apoſtles: for he himſelfe ſaith contrarie, Galat.2.6. They that ſeemed to be the chiefe communicated nothing with me. And againe, Peter was rather confirmed by him, whom he openly rebuketh for a certaine ſlip of infirmitie, verſ.12. but he ſpeaketh in reſpect of others, that ſaid he taught contrarie to the Apoſtles, leaſt he ſhould haue runne in vaine. Secondly, S. Ambroſe ſaith to this purpoſe, that Paul went vp to Ieruſalem to ſee Peter, not of neceſſitie, ceſſitie, Neque vt aliquid ab eo diſceret, qui iam ab authore didicerat, ſed propter affectionem Apoſtolatus, & propter concordiam: Neither to learne any thing of him, who had learned of Chriſt the author himſelfe, but for loue vnto his fellow Apoſtle, and for concord ſake. Ambroſ. in hunc locum.

The Proteſtants.

WE haue a more compendious way to come to the vnderſtanding of the Scripture: It were too long when we doubt of any place to ſtay till wee haue the generall conſent of the paſtors of the Church, or to expect a generall Councell, or goe vp to Rome. And it were too much to trouble the Popes grauitie with euery queſtion: the Lord hath ſhewed vs a more eaſie and readie way, ſo that wee neede not aſcend to heauen, or compaſſe the earth, or paſſe the Alpes: but the word of God is amongſt vs, the Scriptures themſelues and the ſpirit of God opening our hearts doe teach vs how to vnderſtand them. And yet wee ſay not, as they doe falſely charge vs, that wee allow euery priuate mans interpretation of Scripture; and refuſing the iudgement of the Paſtors of the Church, place the gift of interpretation in euery mans particular breaſt, Bellar. de verb. dei. lib. 3. cap. 4. But wee denie, that the interpretation of Scripture is aſſigned to any ſucceſſion of Paſtors, or tied to any place or perſons: and yet graunt, that it is the office of the Paſtors and Miniſters, to whom the diſpenſation of the word is committed, not of priuate men to expound Scripture according to the ſenſe and meaning of the ſpirit; and to diſcerne betweene the orthodoxall and hereticall interpretations: yet they are but the inſtruments, the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scriptures is the interpreter of himſelfe: and in this vnderſtanding we conſent to a decree of one of your owne Synodes: Senonenſ. ſynod. decret. 4. de fide: Eccleſia catholicum ſenſum ab hæretico, germanum ab adulterino diſcernit: The Church doth diſcerne the Catholike ſenſe from the hereticall, the true from the falſe. It hath no power to make or coyne interpretations beſide Scripture, but to diſcerne and diſtinguiſh. Our arguments now follow.

Argum. 1. That only hath power to giue the ſenſe of Scripture, which doth beget vs faith: the ſpirit onely by the Scriptures begetteth faith, Rom. 10. 17. faith commeth by hearing the word: Ergo, the ſpirit of God is the onely interpreter of Scripture. The propoſition alſo is cleere: for ſeeing the Scripture is the true ſenſe and meaning thereof, if any ſhould giue the ſenſe of the Scripture, but that which worketh faith, then vpon him ſhould our faith bee grounded. If the Pope therefore giue the ſenſe of Scripture, and our faith ariſeth of the Scripture vnderſtood, then our faith is builded vpon the Popes ſenſe, argum. Whitach. 2. & 9.

Argum. 2. The Scriptures cannot be interpreted but by the ſame ſpirit, wherewith they were written: but that ſpirit is found no where but in the Scriptures. Ergo. The firſt part the Papiſts themſelues graunt: the ſecond is thus proued. The ſpirit of the Apoſtles is not giuen by ſecret inſpiration, that ſauoureth of Anabaptiſme: where is it thē to be found? whether is it like that S. Peters ſpirit ſhuld be found in yͤ Popes chaire, or in his Epiſtles? or if they haue S. Peters ſpirit, where is S. Pauls found but in his writings? Yet it is all one ſpirit, and appeareth not elſewhere but in the Scriptures: where euery man may finde it as well as the Pope: The ſpirituall man iudgeth all things. 1. Cor. 2. 15. You haue an oyntment from him that is holy, and you haue knowne all things: 1. Ioh. 2. verſ. 27. You neede not that any man teach you. By theſe places it is euident, that euery faithfull man by the ſpirit of God according to the meaſure of his gift, and qualitie of his calling may vnderſtand the Scriptures. To this beareth witneſſe that decree, Synod. Colonienſ. part. 2. cap. 4. Preſbyteri in lege domini meditentur die & nocte, & iudicia diuina exquirant & ſcrutentur non propria præſumptione, aut humano ſenſu, ſed ſpiritu ſancto dictante, &c. Let the Preachers and Presbyters meditate in the law of God day and night, and ſearch and trie out the diuine iudgements, not by their owne preſumption, or humane ſenſe, but according to the direction of the ſpirit. This Canon referreth Preachers for the vnderſtanding of Scripture, not to the Pope or Cardinals, but to the ſpirit of God as the author; and the diligent ſearching of Scripture as the meane.

Argum. 3. The doctrine of the Church muſt bee examined by the Scriptures: Ergo, the Scriptures are not to ſtand to the iudgement of the Church. The former part is prooued by the example of the Berrœans, Act. 17. 11. If they did well in examining Pauls doctrine, much more may the decrees of the Pope, Church, Councels, be examined by the Scriptures. But they knew not whether Paul was an Apoſtle or not, therefore they might examine his doctrine, ſaith the Ieſuit. Anſw. Firſt, they could not bee ignorant of his Apoſtleſhip, who was famous throughout the Churches. Secondly, they doubted only whether Paul was an Apoſtle; but we are ſure the Pope is none, neither ſucceſſor of any Apoſtle, but very Antichriſt: Ergo, wee haue more iuſt cauſe to examine his decrees. Thirdly, if S. Pauls Apoſtleſhip might be doubted of, much more may the Popes authoritie be called into queſtion.

Argum. 4. S. Paul ſaith, We are builded vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ. 2. 20. The Pope nor his Church are not the foundation of the Saints: Ergo, wee are not to build vpon them nor their interpretation. Bellarmine denieth the aſſumption or ſecond part, and ſaith, that the teſtimonie of the Church is a ſecond foundation: for we know not which is the word but by the Church. *reſp. ad arg.*13. Anſw. 1. The Ieſuite ſpeaketh abſurdly, in ſaying the Church is the foundation, the Church is the building: and the building and foundation cannot be all one. Secondly, there cannot be diuers foundations: as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1. Cor. 3. 11. Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is laid, Ieſus Chriſt. If it ſhall be obiected, how then are Apoſtles ſaid to be foundations? I anſwere; the perſons of the Apoſtles is not the foundation, but their doctrine, which is the faith in Ieſus. Thirdly, it is another vntruth, that the Scriptures are not knowne but by the teſtimonie of the Church: as partly hath been ſhewed before, and ſhall more afterwards, as Chriſt ſaith, Iohn 5. 34. He did not receiue the teſtimonie of men, his owne workes did witneſſe of him; ſo the efficacie of the ſpirit ſpeaking in the Scriptures doth teſtifie of it, that it is the word.

*Argum.*5. If the Pope haue authoritie to iudge of Scripture, and that the ſenſe of the Scripture without his approbation is not authenticall, then it would follow, that the Pope is aboue Scripture, which were not onely a great abſurditie, but a grieuous blaſphemie.

Bellarmine. To be ſaid to iudge of the Scripture may be taken two waies, either to iudge whether the Scripture be true or no: and who ſo thus iudgeth, ſhould be aboue Scripture; but ſo doth not the Pope: Or elſe to iudge of the ſenſe of Scripture, which is not to be aboue Scripture, but aboue the priuate iudgements and interpretations of men, ſic Bellarmin. lib. 3. cap. 10. *reſponſ. ad argum.*14.

Anſw. Firſt to expound and giue the ſenſe of Scripture, by the Scripture it ſelfe, is not to be a iudge of Scripture, or ſuperiour to it, but to be ſubiected rather vnto it and ordered by it: but the Pope in taking vpon him abſolute authoritie to expound Scripture, doth make himſelfe ſuperiour to it, in as much as the Scripture is not the letter, but the ſenſe thereof: he therefore that ouerruleth the ſenſe, ouerruleth Scripture. Secondly, againe, he that may giue the ſenſe to Scripture, as it pleaſeth him, may at his pleaſure make the Scripture true or falſe; for the Scripture is the ſenſe: the Pope for the moſt part giueth a falſe ſenſe of Scripture, and ſo maketh the Scripture falſe: and thus is he become a Iudge of Scripture after the firſt way, which the Ieſuite denieth.

Now let Auguſtine ſpeake: Nouit charitas veſtra omnes nos vnum magiſtrum habere, & ſub illo condiſcipulos eſſe, nec ideo magiſtri ſumus, quia de ſuperiore loco loquimur vobis, ſed magiſter eſt omnium, qui habitat in nobis omnibus. You know brethren (ſaith he) that we are all fellow ſchollers vnder one maſter, and though we ſpeake to you out of an higher place, yet are we not your maſter, he is the teacher and maſter of vs all that dwelleth in our hearts. Ergo the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scriptures is the chiefe and beſt interpreter thereof.

I will enforce againſt them firſt their Imperiall lawes, then their owne pontificiall conſtitutions, which order I purpoſe God willing to obſerue thoroughout.

Firſt, Iuſtinian hath this law. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 17. leg. 11. Quis legum ænigmata ſoluere idoneus eſſe videbitur, niſi is, cui ſoli legiſlatorem eſſe conceſſum eſt: Who is thought more fit to open the darke ſentences of the law, but he that hath authoritie to make them? And therefore he concludeth, Tam conditor, quam interpres legum ſolus Imperator iuſtè cenſebitur: The Emperour onely is of right taken to be both the maker, and interpreter of the law. As then the Imperiall lawes muſt be interpreted by the Emperor that made them; ſo the diuine lawes by the ſpirit of God that gaue them: ſo alſo ſaith your owne law, *decret. Gregor. lib.*5. tit. 39. c. 31. Innocent. 3. Vnde ius prodijt, interpretatio quoque procedat: Let the interpretation proceede from whence the law commeth.

Secondly, ſearch further your owne decrees, part. 1. diſt. 20. præfat. Diuinarum tractatores ſcripturarum in ſacrarum ſcripturarum expoſitionibus eis præponuntur: The interpreters of Scripture for the expoſition thereof, muſt be preferred before the Popes: Ergo all reſteth not in the Popes breaſt.

Let vs laſtly heare the iudgement of an holy Martyr, that maintained this trueth with the loſſe of his life; who being demaunded of Boner, denyed that the Pope had any authoritie to expound Scripture: adding further, what a goodly expoſition did the Pope make of Scripture, when he ſet his foote vpon the Emperours necke, and ſayd, Thou ſhalt walke vpon the Lyon and the Aſpe, the young Lyon and the Dragon: ſic Roger. Holland. Fox pag. 2040. col. 2. His reaſon is this, the Pope miſconſtrueth Scripture, and expoundeth it as he liſt. Ergo this authoritie is not giuen him of God.

THE THIRD PART OF THE SIXT QVESTION: concerning the meanes or method to be vſed in interpreting of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

10. Error. OVr aduerſaries preſcribe this method and courſe to be taken in expounding of Scripture, which conſiſteth in foure rules: the generall practiſe of the Church, the conſonant interpretation of the Fathers, the decrees of generall Councels; laſtly, the rule of fayth, conſiſting partly of the Scriptures,partly of traditions vnwritten,Stapleton. Concerning the three firſt, we haue already touched them in part: they appeare to be inſufficient. Firſt, the Councels and Fathers he made chiefe interpreters of Scripture before,and now they are but meanes: what other chiefe iudge then is there to vſe theſe meanes? ſurely none but the Scriptures. Secondly, theſe meanes are moſt vncertaine,the practiſe of the Church is often changed, Fathers agree not in their expoſitions,and Councels cannot alwaies be had.

Concerning the rule of faith conſiſting of vnwritten verities: he groundeth it falſly vpon that place Rom.12.6.Let vs propheſie according to the rule of faith,and Gal.6.16. As many as walke according to this rule. This rule was a certaine platforme of religion,giuen by the Apoſtles before the Scriptures were written, according to the which (ſay they) the Scriptures were afterward compiled by the Apoſtles, *Rhemenſ.in Rom.*12.6. Anſwere: Saint Paul meaneth no other rule, but that which is ſet downe in his writings, no other forme of doctrine but that contained in his Epiſtles, as in the 6. to the Galathians, ſpeaking of this rule, he alludeth to the former verſe, where he ſaith, he reioyced in nothing but in the Croſſe of Chriſt: his rule therefore is to receiue Chriſt onely without the ceremonies or workes of the law: againſt the which hereſie he diſputeth in the whole Epiſtle. But of all other it is a great blaſphemie to ſay that the Apoſtles ſet downe the Scriptures by a rule, as though the ſpirit of God, by whom they ſpake, had need of any ſuch direction. So then no vnwritten rule can giue a direction to the written word, but the written word rather giueth a rule to all other things,as one of your owne Popes confeſſeth: Cum ex ſcripturis,integram quis & firmam regulam ſuſceperit veritatis, &c. When a man hath gathered a firme and certaine rule of truth out of the Scriptures, then may hee compare with it other liberall arts,&c. Concerning alſo theſe foure waies of theirs, I will appoſe them againe with their owne authoritie: decr.p.1.d.20.c.3.Innocentius 1. the decree ſtandeth thus,which I will onely ſet downe tranſlated,becauſe it is long: If there be any cauſe which cannot be diſſolued by the bookes of the olde Teſtament,the foure Euangeliſts and writings of the Apoſtles,then haue recourſe to the diuine writings in Greeke: if nothing be found there, then to the Canons of the Apoſtolike ſea: if not there,then to the Catholike ſtories of the Church: if neither there,conſider the practiſe of the Saints: if yet the queſtion cannot be diſſolued,gather thē elders of the prouince,and aske them,&c. Out of this decree I gather three things: firſt that the meanes here preſcribed, are not to be vſed, but where the Scripture is ſilent: and therefore where any thing may be decided by Scripture, theſe helpes are ſuperfluous. Secondly, in the laſt place we are not referred to the Pope and his Cardinals, but to the Elders, that is, the Biſhops, Paſtors,and Miniſters of euery Prouince.Thirdly,he ſendeth vs to the Greeke originall of the Scriptures,which is one of the meanes that we doe preſcribe.

Clemen. 1. decret.p.1. d.37.cap.14.

The Proteſtants.

WHen wee ſay that the Scriptures muſt expound themſelues, our meaning is, that by certaine compendious and readie meanes, wee ſhould labour to vnderſtand the Scriptures by themſelues: the meanes are eſpecially theſe foure:Firſt,to haue recourſe to the Original tongue, as in the old Teſtament to the Hebrue; in the new,to the Greeke: as 1.Tim.2.15. Through bearing of children they ſhall be ſaued, if they continue in faith and loue: in the Engliſh it is doubtfull whether this clauſe,*if they continue in faith,*be referred to children,or to thoſe that beare them; but reade the Greeke and the doubt is remoued: for bearing of children is all one word in the originall τεχνογονία, ſo that it muſt needes be vnderſtoode of the women, for the word τεχνογονία, bearing of children is in the ſingular number,that which followeth of the plurall,and it is but an action,not a perſon;ſo that it ſhould be improperly ſayd,if they continue,that is,in bearing of children.

Stapleton obiecteth againſt this meane: that it is not now needfull,ſeeing there is a perfect and abſolute tranſlation authoriſed by the Councell of Trent,he meaneth the vulgar Latin. We anſwere: firſt,it is no perfect,but an erronious tranſlation, and very corrupt. Secondly, if it were neuer ſo perfect, yet for more certaintie, it is profitable to ſearch the originall: euery man will truſt his owne skill,rather then another mans. Thirdly,the Councell did fondly in authoriſing an olde blinde tranſlation, before the authenticall copies of the Hebrue and Greeke. For the Greeke originall,we haue the decree of Innocentius the firſt, before repeated; and for recourſe to be had to the Hebrue, we haue the practiſe of their owne Maſter of Sentences: who in deciding of a certaine queſtion,in the ſecond of Geneſis, whether we ſhould reade conſummauit Deus, or compleuit, God did conſummate,or accompliſh his works vpon the ſeuenth day, reſolueth vpon the latter reading: quod habet Hebraica veritas, which is, ſaith he, according to the Hebrue veritie.lib.2.d.15.g.

2 Secondly, the ſcope of the place, the circumſtance of it, with that which goeth before, and commeth after,muſt be weighed, which will bring great light to the place we haue in hand: an example we haue 1.Pet. 4. 8. Loue couereth the multitude of ſinnes: the Papiſts gather out of theſe words,that loue doth iuſtifie vs before God, and taketh away our ſinnes: But by the circumſtance of the place,the Apoſtle ſaying immediately before; Haue feruent loue among you, it is eui-dent he vnderſtandeth brotherly loue amongſt our ſelues, whereby faults are buried, forgiuen, and forgotten.

Stapleton obiecteth, that this is but an vncertaine way, and many times fayleth: for the Scripture paſſeth many times from one matter and argument to another: how then can it helpe to conſider the circumſtance of the place being of a diuers matter? We anſwere, we ſay not that any of theſe meanes ſerueth for euery place, but when one fayleth, to vſe another: when the circumſtance helpeth not, to run to the originall; if there we finde no ſuccour, to compare places together; and when we may, to vſe them all, or the moſt. This rule of examining the circumſtances, as the precedence, and conſequence of a text, may be alſo warranted by their owne practiſe: So Nicholas the fourth, in expounding of the rule of S. Francis giueth this precept: Sext. decretal. lib.5. tit.12. c.3. Vtriuſque iuris argumenta nos docent, ea, quæ in principio ad medium & finem; illa verò, quæ in medio, ad principium & finem; & quæ in fine ad vtrumque, vel eorum alterum ſæpe referri: The reaſon of both lawes doth teach vs, that the beginning muſt be referred to the middeſt and the end; the middeſt to the beginning and the end; the end vnto both the other, or the one of them at the leaſt. If they themſelues then are ſo curious in the ſifting out of the meaning of their ſuperſtitious Father, with what face can they blame our diligence in ſearching the ſenſe of the Scripture.

3 Thirdly, the conference of places is very profitable, as Iames 2.21. Abraham was iuſtified by workes, compare it with that place, Rom.4.2. there S. Paul ſaith flatly, that Abraham was not iuſtified by workes. Wherefore ſeeing one Apoſtle is not contrary to the other: we muſt needes gather, that this word iuſtified is diuerſly taken: Paul ſaith that Abraham was not iuſtified, that is, made righteous before God by his workes; Iames ſaith he was iuſtified, that is, declared to be iuſt before men, and ſo Thomas Aquinas expoundeth it.

Stapleton obiecteth, that this meanes in comparing of places is of it ſelfe many times of ſmall force. Anſw. As though we affirme that theſe meanes muſt be vſed a ſunder, and not rather ioyntly togither, and where one faileth, another to helpe. Secondly, ſome things are found but once in the Scriptures. Anſwere, they are then either very plaine, or not greatly neceſſary. Thirdly, heretikes haue erred in comparing of Scripture. Anſwere, they compared them not diligently, nor with a ſyncere minde, but corruptly and negligently.

Let vs heare what that reuerend and learned man, and conſtant Martyr, B. Cranmer thinketh of this meane in comparing and conferring of Scripture: I wonder, ſaith he, that you doe attribute ſo little to the reading of Scripture, and conferring of places, ſeeing the Scriptures doe ſo much commend the ſame: as Ioh.5. Scrutamini ſcripturas, ſearch the Scriptures, Fox. pag 1460. in diſput. Oxonienſ. This reuerend fathers iudgement, I dare ſet againſt either Stapletons opinion, or any others of that ſide: nay put the ſentence of their whole Church in one balance, it ſhall not be able, in this, or any other poynt of the Chriſtian faith, to weigh againſt the faith of theſe holy Martyrs in the day of iudgement, but ſhall be found lighter then vanitie.

Leo the firſt alſo ſomtime Biſhop of Rome, whoſe iudgement our aduerſaries, I thinke, dare not refuſe, thus writeth of this meane in hauing recourſe to the Scripture, Epiſtol. decretal. 10. cap.1. In hanc inſipientiam cadunt hæretici, qui cum ad cognoſcendam veritatem aliquo impediuntur obſcuro, non ad propheticas voces, Apoſtolicas literas, nec ad Euangelicas authoritates, ſed ad ſeipſos recurrunt, &c. Such is the fooliſhnes of heretikes, that when as by ſome darke place they are hindred from knowing the trueth: they will not reſort to the Prophets and Apoſtles writings, but truſt onely to themſelues. His counſell is, if we meete with any darke place in Scripture, to reſort to none other but to the Prophets and Apoſtles for the vnderſtanding thereof. And Clemens the firſt ſaith, as he is cited by Gratian. decr. p.1. tit.37. c.14. Ex ipſis ſcripturis debemus ſenſum capere veritatis: We muſt take the ſenſe of the Scripture, from the Scriptures themſelues.

4 The fourth rule is the analogie and proportion of faith, which is nothing els but the ſumme and grounds of religion gathered out of Scripture, ſuch as are contayned in the Creede, the Lords Prayer, the ten Commaundements, and in our whole Catechiſme. We muſt take heede that in the interpretation of Scripture we ſwarue not from this rule of faith, nor impugne any principle of Religion. Wherefore the Papiſts interpretation of thoſe words of Chriſt we doe reiect, Hoc eſt corpus meum, this is my bodie: who would haue the very fleſh of Chriſt preſent in the ſacrament: for this is againſt the article of the Creede, that Chriſt is aſcended into heauen, and there ſitteth till his comming againe in iudgement.

Concerning theſe meanes, thus writeth Auguſtine, Rariſſimè inuenitur ambiguitas in verbis proprijs, quam non aut circumſtantia ipſa ſermonis qua cognoſcitur Scripturarum intentio, aut interpretum collatio, aut præcedentis linguæ ſoluat inſpectio, de doctrin. Chriſt. lib.3 4. There is almoſt no ambiguitie in any word properly vſed (that is not metaphoricall or borrowed) which may not either by the circumſtance of the place, the conference and comparing of interpreters, or by looking into the Originals, eaſily be taken away. Auguſtine we ſee approueth this methode, though our aduerſaries like it not. So alſo in your owne decrees: decr. p.2. cauſ.24. qu.3. c.27. Quicunque aliter ſcripturam intelligit, quam ſenſus ſpiritus ſancti flagitat, quo ſcripta eſt, hæreticus appellari poteſt : He that otherwiſe vnderſtandeth Scripture, then after the meaning of the ſpirit wherewith it is written, is an heretike. Wherefore the Scripture out of Scripture muſt be expounded : for where elſe is the ſpirit of the Scripture to be found, but in the Scripture?

Beſides theſe meanes, which I haue ſhewed, prayer muſt be vſed before we enterpriſe any thing, that the Lord would direct vs. And they which cannot ſo eaſily take this courſe, which is preſcribed, ſhall doe well to ſeeke helpe of learned and godly expoſitors, or to conſult with their paſtors and miniſters.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION: CONCERNING the perfection and ſufficiencie of Scripture.

THis queſtion is deuided into three parts. Firſt, whether the Scriptures be abſolutely neceſſary. Secondly, whether they be ſufficient without vnwritten traditions. Thirdly, whether there be any traditions of faith and manners beſide the Scriptures.

THE FIRST PART OF THE NECESSItie of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

11. Error. THe Ieſuite laboureth to proue that the Scriptures are not ſimply neceſſary : which we denie not, for meate is not ſimply neceſſary, for God may preſerue man without : ſo in reſpect of God nothing is ſimply neceſſarie : God is not neceſſarily tyed to vſe this or that meanes. But his arguments doe tend to this end, to ſhew that the Scriptures are not neceſſarie at all, and may be ſpared in the Church (ſo ſaith Petrus à Soto) the Scripture was not alway extant, and it is not neceſſarie vnto faith : and the Scripture is not now ſo neceſſarie ſince Chriſt, as it was afore, Tilman. de verb. dei error. 17.

Argum. 1. There was no Scripture from Adam to Moſes, for the ſpace of two thouſand yeares, and yet true religion was kept and continued, and why might not true religion be as well preſerued 1500. yeares after Chriſt without Scripture, as afore? Bellarmine de verb. dei lib. cap. 4. argum. 1.

We anſwere : It followeth not, becauſe in times paſt God taught his Church by a liuely voyce, that the written word is not neceſſarie now : for the Lord ſaw it good, that his word ſhould be left in writing, that we might haue a certaine rule of our faith in this corrupt and ſinfull age. And what els is this, but to controll the wiſdome of God, ſaying, it is not neceſſarie or needfull for the Church, which the Lord ſaw to be needfull : for if the Lord had thought it as good for vs to be taught without Scripture, as in that ſimple and innocent age of the world (I meane innocent in reſpect of vs) he would not haue moued and ſtirred vp his Apoſtles to write.

Argum. 2. After the time of Moſes, when the law was written, yet there were many that feared God amongſt the Gentles, which had not the Scriptures, as Iob, and the other his friends : Ergo, the Scripture not neceſſarie. The Iewes alſo themſelues vſed traditions more then Scriptures, as Pſal. 44. verſ. 1, 2. The fathers did reporte the workes of God to their children: by the negligence alſo of the Prieſts the law was loſt, as 2. King. 22. we reade that the volume of the law was found, which had been miſſing a long time, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere : firſt, euen the faithfull amongſt the Gentiles did reade the Scripture, as the Eunuche Act. 8. had the booke of the Prophet Iſay. Secondly, the Iewes declared the workes of God vnto their children, but the ſame were alſo written, as how the heathen were caſt out before them, and of their deliuerance out of Egypt : thoſe were the things they heard of their fathers, as we reade Pſal. 44. and 78. yet all theſe things are recorded in the bookes of Moſes. Thirdly, what though the Prieſts were negligent in preſeruing the Scriptures, it is no good argument to prooue that therefore they are not neceſſarie, neither was the whole booke of the law loſt, but either Moſes owne manuſcript, or the booke of Deuteronomie. Yet he hath proued nothing.

Argum. 3. The Church after Chriſt wanted the Scriptures many yeares: Ergo they are not neceſſarie, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere, it is a great vntrueth : for the old Teſtament the Church could not be without, and the new teſtament was written not long after in the age of the Apoſtles : whoſe liuely voyce and preachings were vnto them, as their writings are now to vs. See now, what ſtrong arguments they bring : the Scriptures were not neceſſarie in the time of the Patriarkes, when God taught them by his owne voyce; they were not neceſſarie in the time of the Prophets and Apoſtles, when they had men inſpired of God to teach them : Ergo they are not now neceſſarie, when neither God teacheth from heauen, neither haue we any Prophets or Apoſtles to inſtruct vs by heauenly reuelations: nay rather becauſe they were not neceſſarie then, when they had other effectuall meanes, notwithſtanding they are neceſſary now, ſeeing there is no other way of inſtruction left vnto vs.

*Argum.*4. If the writing of the Scriptures were neceſſarie, then Chriſt would not haue omitted to haue giuen his Apoſtles charge and commandement ſo to doe: but this he doth not; neither doe the Apoſtles make mention of any ſuch charge that was giuen them, but onely to preach, Bellarmine cap 4.argum.2.

*Anſw.*1. It was not needfull that our Sauiour Chriſt ſhould giue his Apoſtles charge concerning all neceſſarie things to bee done in the Church, ſeeing he was to ſend them the holy Ghoſt who ſhould leade them into all truth: and therefore our Sauiour telleth them, that he had many things to ſay, but they could not beare them, but the ſpirit afterward ſhould teach them, Iohn 16. 12.13. The inſtitution of deacons, Act.6. the forbidding of things ſuffocated, Act.15. for a time, were neceſſarie; yet herein they receiued no inſtruction from Chriſt, who referred them to the direction of the ſpirit. Secondly, Chriſt notwithſtanding did alſo giue them a charge to write, both by way of implication, where he biddeth them teach all nations, Matth.28. which was impoſſible to be done by their liuely voyce, and therefore muſt be ſupplied by their writing: as alſo directly Iohn is charged to write to the Churches, Apocal.1.11. And this being the laſt booke which is commaunded to be written, it is not to be doubted of, but that the reſt were written by the ſame authoritie. Thirdly, the Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith: Apoſtoli non niſi neceſſitate quadam coacti: The Apoſtles did not write, but thereunto moued of neceſſitie. But if the Scriptures were not neceſſarie, there ſhould be no neceſſitie of writing.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Scriptures are neceſſarie for the people of God, the reading, preaching, and vnderſtanding whereof is the onely and ordinarie meanes to beget faith in vs, we thus proue out of the Scriptures themſelues.

*Argum.*1. Theſe Scriptures containe neceſſarie knowledge to ſaluation, which cannot be learned but out of the Scripture, Ergo they are neceſſarie. The knowledge of the law is neceſſarie; but that onely is deriued from the Scripture: as the Apoſtle witneſſeth Rom.7.7. he had not knowen luſt to be ſinne, vnleſſe the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt. And if the right knowledge of the law is not learned, but out of Scripture: much more the knowledge of the Goſpell is more high and myſticall, and more ſtrange vnto our nature.

*Argum.*2. That whereby we are kept from error and doubtfulnes in matters of faith is neceſſarie: but this is performed by the Scripture, Ergo. Firſt, the Scripture keepeth vs from error, Matth. 22. 29. Yee erre, not knowing the Scriptures (ſaith our Sauiour.) The ignorance of Scripture was cauſe of their error. Secondly, if our knowledge were onely builded vpon tradition without Scripture, wee ſhould bee doubtfull and vncertaine of the trueth: ſo Saint Luke ſaith in his Preface to Theophilus: I haue written (ſaith hee) that thou mighteſt bee certaine of thoſe things, whereof thou haſt been inſtructed. Hence wee conclude, that although wee might know the trueth without Scripture, as Theophilus did, yet wee cannot knowe it certainly without it.

Argum 3. If the Scriptures be not neceſſarie, then we may be without them; but this cannot be: Ergo the Scriptures cannot be ſpared: for then God had done a needleſſe and ſuperfluous worke in ſtirring vp the Prophets and Apoſtles to write. S.Paul ſaith, that whatſoeuer is written, is written for our learning, that through patience and conſolation of the Scriptures we might haue hope, Rom. 15.4. The Lord ſaw in wiſdome that his people could not be without the Scriptures, which are neceſſarie for their learning, for their comfort, and to ſtrengthen their hope: how then dare our aduerſaries ſay, that the Scriptures are not neceſſarie, ſeeing theſe things wrought in vs onely by the Scriptures, knowledge, conſolation, hope, are moſt neceſſarie.

*Argum.*4. The knowledge of eternall life is neceſſarie; but that commeth onely by the Scriptures, Iohn 5.39. Search the Scriptures, for in them you thinke to haue eternall life: Ergo they are neceſſarie. Againe, to be made wiſe vnto ſaluation, and perfect to euery good worke, are neceſſarie: but theſe things the Scripture worketh, 2.Timoth.3.15,17. Further, a man cannot walke in darkenes without light, ſo that light in darkenes is neceſſarie: but the Scriptures are light in a darke place, 2.Pet.1.19. Laſtly, our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith to Martha, Luke 10.42. vnum neceſſarium: one thing is neceſſarie, namely that which Marie had choſen, to heare the word and voyce of Chriſt, who elſewhere ſpeaketh not but in Scripture, Iohn 5.39. they teſtifie of me, and verſe 46. Moſes wrote of me: Ergo the knowledge of the Scriptures is neceſſarie.

Let Auguſtine now put in his verdict: *Illud credo, quod etiam hinc diuinorum eloquiorum clariſſima authoritas eſſet, ſi homo illud ſine diſpendio ſalutis ignorare non poſſet. de peccator. merit. & remiſſ. lib.*2.36. I thinke (ſaith he) that euen concerning this matter (ſpeaking of the Originall or beginning of the ſoule) the Scriptures would not haue been ſilent, if we might not ſafely be ignorant of this matter, without danger of ſaluation: Ergo whatſoeuer is neceſſarie to ſaluation, is onely to be found in Scripture (for other matters there not expreſſed, there is no danger in not knowing them) therefore the Scriptures by this Fathers iudgement are moſt neceſſarie. Let vs heare a teſtimonie of their owne.

Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocentio 3. cap. 10. we finde this decree: Inter cætera, quæ ad ſalutem ſpectant populi Chriſtiani pabulum verbi Dei permaximè noſcitur ſibi neceſſarium, quia ſicut corpus materiali, ita anima ſpirituali nutritur cibo. Among other things which concerne the ſaluation of Chriſtian people, the foode of the word of God is knowen to be moſt neceſſarie; for as the bodie is fed with materiall foode, ſo the ſoule with ſpirituall: the foode therefore of Gods word is moſt neceſſarie. And leaſt it might be imagined, that the word vnwritten is as well here vnderſtoode, as the word written: let it be conſidered what Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome writeth in his decretals, Epiſtol. ad Euphemiam. Fides ex auditu, auditus per verbum Dei: illud i. verbum, quod confeſſioni B. Petri Apoſtoli portas inferni nunquam prævalituras eſſe promiſit: Faith commeth by hearing, hearing by the word of God: that is, that word which promiſed that the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile againſt the confeſſion of Peter. And this is the word written; the neceſſitie then of the word of God, is the neceſſitie of the word written.

THE SECOND PART OF THE SEVENTH question, of the ſufficiencie of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

THey do ſtrangely affirme, that the Scriptures containe not all things neceſſarie to be knowen 12. Error. concerning faith and manners, and that they are not ſufficient without traditions, Bellarm. cap. 3.4. Lindanus a Papiſt ſaith, that the Scriptures containe not all things neceſſarie to ſaluation. Andradius, that their approued traditions are of equall authoritie with the Scripture, Ex Tilman. de verbo error. 2.

Argum. 1 The Ieſuite thus reaſoneth againſt the ſufficiencie of Scripture: There are diuers bookes of Canonicall Scripture loſt and periſhed: Ergo that part of Canonicall Scripture which remaineth, is not ſufficient. That much is loſt, he thus proueth, 1. Chron. cap. vlt. mention is made of the bookes of Nathan and Gad. 2. Chron. 9. of the bookes of Abijah and Ieedo: and in the new Teſtament, Col. 4. of the Epiſtle of S. Paul to the Laodiceans: all thoſe bookes are loſt.

Anſw. 1. S. Auguſtine thus anſwereth, thoſe bookes of the Prophets, which are named in the Kings, are not found in the Canon, for what cauſe, ſaith he, I know not, Niſi quod exiſtimo prophetas illos, alia ſicut homines, hiſtorica diligentia; alia ſicut prophetas inſpiratione diuina ſcribere potuiſſe: But that I thinke, that thoſe Prophets might write ſome ſtories as men, and ſome things as Prophets, by the inſpiration of the ſpirit, lib. 36. de ciuitat. Dei c. 38. Thus Auguſtine thinketh that thoſe bookes now wanting, were no part of the Canonicall Scripture. But wee denie not, but that ſome bookes are now wanting, which were part of Canonicall Scripture, and yet that which remaineth is ſufficient: as ſome of Salomons bookes are periſhed, which he wrote of hearbs and plants, and many of his Prouerbs: the Lord ſaw that they were not ſo greatly neceſſarie for vs to ſaluation, as containing matter of ſtorie rather then of doctrine. Secondly, there is not ſo much wanting, as the Ieſuite would beare vs in hand: for the bookes of the Prophets which he nameth, are the ſame with the books of the Chronicles and of the Kings, which no doubt were written by thoſe Prophets. And as for the Epiſtle of Saint Paul to the Laodiceans, there was neuer any ſuch: the text is, Written from the Laodiceans; it was the Epiſtle rather of the Laodiceans to Saint Paul, vnto the which he partly maketh anſwere in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, and therefore he would haue it read alſo in their Church. And this is Saint Hieromes iudgement concerning this epiſtle: Legunt quidam & epiſtolam ad Laodicenſes, ſed ab omnibus exploditur: Some doe reade the Epiſtle to the Laodiceans, but it is refuſed of all men: catolog. ſcriptor.

Argum. 2. There are two things in Scripture, the letter and the ſenſe: the firſt is knowne to all, that can reade, but the ſecond is not had without tradition: Ergo, the Scriptures are not ſufficient, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the ſenſe of the Scriptures is contained in the Scriptures themſelues, and if it bee not there to be found, it is not the ſenſe of the Scriptures. And of this matter your owne Clemens giueth a good rule, as he is alleaged by Gratian: Decret. pag. 1. diſt. 37. cap. 14. Non ſenſum, quem extrinſecus adulteretis alienum & extraneum debetis quærere, &c. ſed ex ipſis ſcripturis ſenſum capere veritatis: You muſt not ſeeke for a ſtrange ſenſe without, which you may adulterate at your pleaſure, but out of the Scriptures themſelues the ſenſe of truth muſt be had. Secondly, the Ieſuit is intangled in his owne ſpeech: for he ſaith, Duo eſſe in ſcriptura, voces ſcriptas, & ſenſum: There are two things in Scripture,the written words,and the ſenſe: Ergo,the ſenſe of Scripture(by his owne confeſſion)is in the Scripture.

Argum.3. There are many points, which we ought in no wiſe to be ignorant of, which the Scriptures ſpeake either obſcurely of,or not at all.

Firſt,theſe things are obſcurely and doubtfully ſet downe in Scripture, the equalitie of the perſons in Trinitie,the proceeding of the holy Ghoſt,from the Father and the Sonne; the doctrine of Originall ſinne.

We anſwere: firſt,if theſe things be found at all in the Scriptures, it is ſufficient concerning the queſtion we haue in hand. Secondly, the Scripture doth manifeſtly declare the trueth in all theſe poynts, the equalitie of the perſons is directly proued, 1.Iohn 5.7. There are three, which beare record in heauen,the Father, the Word,and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one: the proceſſion of the ſpirit,Iohn 15.26. The ſpirit is there ſaid to be ſent from the Father and the Sonne; and Iohn 14.26. Whom the Father will ſend in my name: Originall ſinne is deſcribed plainely by the Apoſtle, Rom.5.12. though the name be not found in Scripture: By one man ſinne entered into the world,and death by ſinne,for as much as all men haue ſinned.

Secondly,there are diuers things neceſſarie to be knowen,not at all neclared in Scripture: theſe examples he ſetteth downe. It is neceſſarie to beleeue that the Canonicall Scriptures are contained in the old and new Teſtament. And not onely ſo,but to know which bookes are Canonicall, as that the Goſpell of Marke and Luke are Canonicall, and ſo of the reſt: yea it is neceſſarie to know that theſe are the very Goſpels which were written by S.Marke and Luke,and ſo of the reſt of the Scripture: but theſe things cannot bee knowen out of the Scriptures themſelues, but by tradition. Ergo the Scriptures containe not all neceſſarie knowledge.

Anſwere: Firſt,the Scriptures doe giue teſtimonie of themſelues,the old Teſtament giueth witneſſe to the new,and the new againe to the olde. All Scripture is giuen, ſaith S.Paul, by inſpiration: and the harmonie and conſent of Scripture, the propheticall predictions, the holy precepts, the chaſt and pure ſtile, doe euidently ſhew, that they are the writings of the holy Ghoſt: and the iudgement and ſentence of the Church concerning Canonicall Scripture, if it be right,muſt and doth ariſe, and is grounded vpon theſe conſiderations drawen out of the Scriptures themſelues.

Secondly,likewiſe to know euery particular booke of Scripture to be Canonical,it is not ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation, ſeeing many godly learned men haue doubted of ſome bookes, who (God forbid) but might notwithſtanding be ſaued. Againe we anſwere,that thoſe very particular books,as the Goſpels of Marke and Luke are receiued, the Goſpels of Bartholmew and Thomas refuſed,not ſo much becauſe the Church hath ſo determined, but becauſe their determination agreeth with the trueth it ſelfe: ſeeing thoſe forged goſpels are found to be full of fables,and therefor worthie of ſmall credit: the other are pure,chaſt, and diuine writings. So S.Auguſtine ſaith: In Apocryphis licet inuenitur aliqua veritas,tamen propter falſa multa,nulla eſt canonica authoritas: In the Apocryphall bookes,though ſome things bee true, yet becauſe there are many falſe,they are not of any canonicall authoritie: lib.15.de ciuitat.dei.cap.23.

Thirdly,we anſwere,that it is not neceſſarie to know the author of euery booke,for as much as there are diuers books of Scripture whoſe authors are not knowne: it is enough to beleeue them to be Scripture.

Further ſaith the Ieſuit,it is neceſſarie to know that Mary continued a perpetuall virgin. We anſwere,the Scripture ſaith euery where ſhe was a virgin, neither maketh mention of any children ſhe had: and therefore out of the Scripture we gather,that ſhe ſo continued. And thus doth S.Hierome anſwere Heluidius: Vt hæc, quæ ſcripta ſunt, non negamus, ita ea, quæ non ſunt ſcripta renuimus: As we denie not, what is written,ſo we refuſe, what is not written. That God was borne of a virgin we beleeue,quia legimus, becauſe wee reade ſo in Scripture: but that Mary was married afterward,we beleeue not,quia non legimus,becauſe we doe not reade it. Secondly,Baſil ſaith that it is ſufficient to know ſhe was a virgin before the birth of Chriſt. Laſtly,to know that the Paſch or Eaſter muſt be kept vpon the Lords day is neceſſarie. Anſwer. There is no ſuch neceſſitie in it to ſaluation: neither needed the Church ſo much to haue contended about it in times paſt: theſe are the mightie weapons,which our aduerſaries vſe. That this day is meeteſt to be kept (as it is) vpon the Lords day, S.Auguſtine doth ſhew it out of Scripture: *Epiſt.*118. Quo die dominus crucifixus,& ſepultus, & reſurrexit, ex Euangelio manifeſtum,&c. It is manifeſt in the Goſpell, what day our Sauiour was crucified, buried, and roſe againe: Et vniuerſo orbi perſuaſum eſt Paſcha ſic celebrari oportere: And the whole world was perſwaded, that the Paſch ought to bee celebrated after that manner.

Vnto thoſe obiections which the Ieſuite maketh, I will adde alſo one other, which ſometime was obiected to that excellent learned man, and famous martyr Maſter Philpot, by Maſter Chriſtoferſon: How doe you know that Chriſt is homonſios, that is,of one ſubſtance with his father, but by the determination of the Church? Anſ. I doe know it by Scripture, Heb.1.3. Chriſt is ſaid to bee the expreſſe image of Gods ſubſtance. Obiect. Nay he ſaith, but expreſſa imago ſubſtantiæ, and an image is an accident. Anſ. Yes, the text is ſubſtantiæ illius, of his, that is Gods ſubſtance: and ye know that in God are no accidents. Neither is this the onely place for this purpoſe, but we haue other: as our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, Ego & pater vnum ſumus, I and my father are one: ſic Philpot. Fox pag.1820.col.2.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not affirme, as our aduerſaries charge vs, that all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, are expreſſely contained in Scripture, that is, in ſo many words: but this wee hold, that all things, which are neceſſarie to be knowne of vs, are either expreſſely declared in Scripture, or neceſſarily concluded out of Scripture, and ſo contained in them. Wee alſo graunt, that it was not Goſpell onely which was written, but all that Chriſt and his Apoſtles taught by liuely voyce: the whole ſumme whereof and ſubſtance is contained in the written word: and ſo we conclude, that nothing neceſſarie to ſaluation either concerning faith or manners, is elſewhere to bee found but in the holy Scriptures.

*Argum.*1. S.Paul ſaith: If wee, or an Angell preach vnto you otherwiſe then that which wee haue preached, let him be accurſed: Ergo, the Scripture containeth all things neceſſarie.

Firſt, the Ieſuite anſwereth, that S.Paul ſpeaketh not onely of his writings, but alſo of his preachings which were not written.

We anſwer, that the ſumme of all S.Pauls preachings is contained in his Epiſtles and other holie writings: for S.Paul confirmed his doctrine out of the Scriptures, as Act.17.10. the Berrœans examined his doctrine by the Scriptures, and found it to bee conſonant, and to agree in all things.

Secondly, he condemneth thoſe which preach any thing, not beſides or otherwiſe, but contrarie: and therefore not any other doctrine beſides Scripture is forbidden, but that which is contrarie. We anſwere, whatſoeuer is impoſed as neceſſarie to ſaluation beſide the Scripture, præter Scripturas, is alſo contra Scripturas, contrarie to Scripture; as are all popiſh traditions, which they lay a neceſſitie vpon, both beſide and contrary to Scripture. 2. Neither did thoſe falſe Apoſtles, againſt whom S.Paul writeth, ſo much bring in another or contrarie Goſpell, as the Apoſtle ſaith verſ.7. as they did labour to corrupt and peruert that Goſpell, which S.Paul taught. Therefore all traditions whether præter, or contra, beſide or contrary to Scripture, are notably by this place ouerthrowne. And as S.Auguſtine ſaith, Qui prætergreditur fidei regulam, non incedit in via, ſed recedit à via: He that paſſeth beſide the rule of faith, doth not goe in the way, but departeth from the way. So that, as he doth not only goe out of the way, which goeth againſt it, but he alſo that goeth beſide it: ſo not onely traditions and ceremonies apparantly contrarie to ſcripture, but euen them alſo, which haue a ſuperſtitious ſhew of holines are againſt it.

*Argum.*2. Ioh.20.31. Theſe things are written, that ye might beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the ſonne of God, and that in beleeuing ye might haue life through his name: Ergo, the Scripture containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: for they ſuffice to worke in vs faith, and faith bringeth vs to eternall life.

Firſt, Bellarmine anſwereth, that Iohn ſpeaketh onely of that which he had written. Anſw. If this one Apoſtles writings were able to worke faith, the whole bodie of Scripture much more: but he rather ſpeaketh of all other holy writings of the Apoſtles, for he was the ſuruiuer of them all, and acknowledged their writings & approued thē. Secondly (ſaith he) the Apoſtle ſaith not that thoſe writings onely ſuffice, but they are profitable, and referred to this end, to worke faith. Anſ. The Scripture is not one of the meanes, but the ſole, whole, and onely meanes: for if they perfectly worke faith, what neede any other helpes: but the firſt is true; for they doe beget in vs a perfect faith, which ſhall bring vs to eternall life: Ergo, they are the onely meanes of faith.

*Argum.*3. The whole Scripture (ſaith S.Paul) is profitable to teach, to improoue, to correct, and inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, 2.Tim.3.16. Ergo, it containeth all things neceſſarie: for what elſe is requiſit beſides theſe foure, to teach the right faith, improue error, to inſtruct in righteouſneſſe and vertue, and to correct vice?

Firſt they anſwere, the Apoſtle meaneth as well euery booke of Scripture, as the whole: euery part therefore hath this perfection as well as the whole. But you will not ſay, that euery booke containeth all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: therefore this perfection is not ſo to be taken, Bellar.

We anſwer. Firſt, S.Paul vnderſtandeth the bodie of Scripture, as verſ.15. thou haſt knowne the Scriptures, he ſpeaketh of them all. Secondly, if euery part had theſe vtilities, you might as well conclude that euery word and ſillable hath them, for they are parts of Scripture. Thirdly, it appeareth by theſe foure great vtilities here ſet downe, that the Apoſtle meaneth not any part or parts of ſcripture, but the whole, for euery part of ſcripture is not profitable for all theſe endes, but the whole.

Secondly, they ſay it followeth not: the Scripture is profitable, therefore ſufficient, they alſo graunt it is profitable. Anſ. But we conclude out of S. Paul, that the Scripture is not onely profitable, but ſufficient, as it followeth, verſ. 17. That the man of God may bee abſolute, perfectly inſtructed to euery good worke. If then the Scriptures are able perfectly to inſtruct vs, then are they ſufficient, then neede we no other helpes.

Neither are the Scriptures ſufficient onely to inſtruct the ignorant and vulgar ſort, but euen the learned, and ſuch, as are the teachers of others: That the man of God (ſaith the Apoſtle) may be abſolute, &c. That is, the Preacher of the Goſpell. To this agreeth the 67. Canon. Concil. Cabil. ſub Carolo: Quid generaliter ab omnibus & in omnibus ſequendum ſit, quid vitandum, qualiter intra ſanctam eccleſiam ſit viuendum, qui plenius noſſe deſiderat, ſanctarum ſcripturarum prata percurrere non deſiſtat: What is of all men, in all caſes to be followed, what to be auoyded, how a man ſhould liue and behaue himſelfe in the Church of God, he that is deſirous more fully to know, let him not ceaſe to trace the pleaſant fields of the holie Scriptures. The Scriptures then doe teach all men, in all caſes both concerning faith and manners, what is to be done, what to be left vndone.

Further Auguſtine thus writeth, in Pſal. 66. Ne putetis (ſaith he) ex alijs Scripturis petendum, quod forte hic deeſt: Thinke not (ſaith he) that it is to bee found in any other writings if it bee not in Scripture. And in another place: In Euangelio quaeramus, nam ſi ibi non inuenimus, vbi inueniemus? Let vs (ſaith he) ſeeke to be reſolued in the Goſpell, if we finde not there, where ſhall we finde it? Ergo, by the iudgement of Auguſtine there is no trueth neceſſarie to bee knowne, which is not to be found in the Scripture.

I forbeare to vſe other teſtimonies of the Fathers, as that of Origen: In Euangelijs omnis veritas, & omnis manifeſtatio veritatis: In the Goſpels is all trueth, and manifeſtation of trueth, Hom. 9. in Exod. And that of Ambroſe: Quod non legi vſurpare non debeo: I dare not vſe, or receiue, that which I reade not, lib. de incarnat. cap. 9. I will ſpare to cite the Fathers on our ſide, becauſe I omit the teſtimonies, which our aduerſaries vſe: profeſſing in this treatiſe chiefly to deale with the Scriptures: purpoſing hereafter, if it pleaſe God, to handle the authorities alleaged on both ſides: I will at this time onely vrge againſt them ſuch euidence, as I finde both in the Emperiall, and pontificial conſtitutions.

Firſt Iuſtinian. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 2. leg. 1. thus decreeth concerning the authoritie of his conſtitutions, that they ſhould onely be vſed in deciding of all cauſes, Quia recitatio conſtitutionum codicis noſtri ſufficiat: Becauſe the allegation onely of the conſtitutions of our Codex is ſufficient. If then the Emperours Codex be ſufficient for all ciuill cauſes, ſhall we thinke that the diuine Codex is leſſe ſufficient for ſpirituall?

Againe, Cod. lib. 9. tit. 29. leg. 1. the Emperours, Theodoſ. Gratian. Valentinian. enacted this law: Qui diuinae legis ſanctitatem, aut neſciendo omittunt, aut negligendo violant, &c. They are guiltie of ſacrilege, that either of ignorance omit, or of negligence violate the diuine law. Then muſt our aduerſaries be guiltie of ſacrilege, which doe omit and neglect the Scriptures, by following vnwritten traditions.

Secondly out of your owne Canons, Extrauag. commun. lib. 1. tit. 3. cap. 1. Bonif. 8. thus writeth: That none ſhould be receiued as a Legate of the Apoſtolike ſea, niſi fide doceat oculata: vnleſſe he demonſtrate it or make faith to the ſight, that is, by ſome writing: for it is the manner of that ſea to doe no ſuch thing, ſine ſignatis apicibus, without ſigned letters. If then in humane matters, there muſt be fides oculata, and ſignati apices, a faith in ſight, and ſigning of writings, how much more needfull is it in diuine?

Yet more directly, Ioh. 22. Extrau. lib. 5. tit. 8 c. vinc. Diuina exempla debent eſſe actionum noſtrarum regula: The diuine examples in Scripture (for ſo he meaneth, as it followeth in the Canon) muſt be an example of our acts.

Laſtly, the trueth of the doctrine that the Scripture containeth all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, hath been ſealed with the blood of Martyrs: this was one of the articles obiected againſt Doctor Taylor, Fox pag. 1522. And in teſtimonie whereof (ſaith Bradford) I giue and render my life, epiſtol. ad Londinenſ. pag. 1626. col. 1.

To this alſo giueth teſtimonie, that valiant ſouldiour of Chriſt M. Haukes martyr: Is not the Scripture (ſaith he) ſufficient for my ſaluation? Yes, ſaith one of Boners Chaplaines, it is ſufficient for our ſaluation, but not for our inſtruction. He anſwered, God ſend me the ſaluation, and you the inſtruction, Fox pag. 1586.

For this article alſo that the word of God doth containe ſufficient doctrine to ſaluation, the townſhips of Winſon and Mendleſam in Suffolke were perſecuted, pag. 1912. What neede wee doubt then of this doctrine which is proued by Scripture, grounded vpon reaſon, and confirmed by the blood of the Saints?

THE THIRD PART OF THE SEVENTH QVEſtion: whether there be any traditions, beſide Scripture concerning faith and manners.

The Papiſts.

THey vnderſtand by this word tradition, doctrine, precepts, and ceremonies, with other vſages of the Church, which are not written in the Scriptures. They doe not ſay that all their traditions are neceſſarie, but they make diuers kindes of them: ſome are vniuerſall, obſerued in the whole Church, ſome particular: ſome are free, ſome neceſſarie: ſome are Apoſtolicall, inuented by the Apoſtles, ſome Eccleſiaſticall by the Church. So thus they conclude; all traditions decreed in Councels, and iudged Apoſtolicall, and whatſoeuer the Church of Rome receiueth as Apoſtolicall, are not to be doubted, but to be Apoſtolicall indeede. Secondly, all Apoſtolicall traditions are of equall authoritie with the writings of the Apoſtles, Bellar.lib.4.cap.2.& 9. And they are that part of the word of God which is vnwritten, as well as the Scriptures are that part which is written. Let vs ſee what arguments they bring for theſe traditions. 13.Error.

Argum.1. They giue an inſtance of certaine traditions, as the baptiſme of infants, and the not rebaptiſing of thoſe, which were before baptiſed by heretikes. We anſwer, theſe two cuſtomes of the Church are grounded vpon Scripture: for as children were in the time of the law circumciſed, ſo are they now vnder the Goſpell baptiſed: and that promiſe, Geneſ.17. I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede: as it belonged to them and their children, ſo doth it appertaine to vs and our children.

Concerning the other point, that they whom heretikes haue once baptiſed, ought not to bee baptiſed againe: S. Auguſtine doth prooue it out of the Scripture, Epheſ.4. There is one faith, one Baptiſme. Ergo, not to be repeated.

But now they come in with other traditions, as the Lenten faſt, which they vſe moſt fondly and ſuperſtitiouſly: the eight Eccleſiaſticall orders, Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, Subdeacons, Acolythiſts, Readers, Exorciſts, Doore-keepers, the worſhipping of Images, with many other: theſe they would face vs out to be Apoſtolicall traditions, and to haue bin vniuerſally obſerued, which are but their vaine brags, and Thraſonicall crakes: they ſhall neuer proue them vniuerſall, much leſſe Apoſtolicall. And becauſe they finde no ſcripture to eſtabliſh theſe their ſuperſtitious phantaſies by, they flie vnto tradition, which is their onely hauen, where they hope to finde ſuccour: but all in vaine. Bellarm.lib.4.cap.9.Conſul.Whitacher.queſt.6.cap.4.

Argum.2. They proceede and alleage Scripture for their traditions, as that place Ioh.16.12. I haue many things to ſay, but you cannot beare them now: Ergo, ſay they, there are many traditions not written.

We anſwere. Firſt, it followeth not, becauſe Chriſt declared not all things at that time, that therefore he kept them from his Apoſtles altogether. Nay, whatſoeuer afterwards the Apoſtles learned of the ſpirit of God, they had heard before of Chriſt: for it was the office of the ſpirit, partly to put them in remembrance of Chriſts ſayings, Ioh.14.26. which they had heard before, but vnderſtood them not, and ſo forgat them, partly they were taught of the ſpirit, whatſoeuer was neceſſarie, who ſhould leade them into all trueth, and teach them things to come, which are the ſame things which the Apoſtles did both preach and write. Wherefore theſe things, which Chriſt forbeareth to ſpeake, are the ſame things, which were afterward taught by the ſpirit, and are contained in the Apoſtles writings. Secondly, if there were other matters, which Chriſt vttered not, how followeth it, nay what great preſumption is it to ſay, that thoſe trifles and apiſh toyes, which the Papiſts vſe in their Idolatrous ſacrifice, and their other beggerly ceremonies (which boyes may well laugh at) are thoſe profound matters, which the Apoſtles were not then able to conceiue.

Argum.3. That of all other, they take to be an inuincible place, 2.Theſſ.2.15. Keepe the inſtructions or traditions, which ye haue been taught either by word, or by Epiſtle: Ergo, there are traditions beſide Scripture.

We anſwere, when S. Paul wrote this Epiſtle, all the Scriptures were not written: wherefore beſides theſe two ſhort Epiſtles, which doe not containe the ſumme of the Goſpell, nor all neceſſarie precepts, he by his preaching ſupplied what was wanting, and ſo declared vnto them the whole myſterie of the Goſpell, as he ſaith, 1.Theſſ.2.2. theſe he calleth his traditions, becauſe yet he had not written his other Epiſtles, wherein thoſe inſtructions and traditions are contained. This then is but a weake argument: the Theſſalonians had other inſtructions and traditions, beſide the two Epiſtles written vnto them: Ergo, they had other traditions, beſide all the writings of S. Paul and the other Apoſtles. This is their maine and waightie argument. And further, it is not onely the Apoſtles phraſe, but the vſe of the Fathers, to call the Scriptures a tradition: as S. Cy- prian epiſt. ad Pompeium: Si aut in Euangelio præcipitur, aut in Apoſtolorum epiſtolis, aut actibus continetur, obſeruetur etiam & hæc ſancta traditio: If it be either commaunded in the Goſpell, or contained in the epiſtles or acts of the Apoſtles, let this tradition alſo bee obſerued. Likewiſe S. Ambroſe: Corpus Chriſti traditiones ſunt ſcripturarum: The bodie of Chriſt are the traditions of the Scriptures.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, wee graunt that all things are not written which our Sauiour Chriſt and the Apoſtles taught, and that it was the Goſpell, which they preached, as well as this which is written: yet in ſubſtance they preached the ſame Goſpell, which now is expreſſed in the Scripture: neither was there any neceſſary precept deliuered in their ſermons, which is not now to bee found in the Scriptures. Secondly, we denie not but there were certaine rites and orders ordained by the Apoſtles in diuers Churches, which were not committed to writing, becauſe they were not to continue and endure for euer in the Church: as that precept, Acts 15. that the Gentiles ſhould abſtaine from ſtrangled, and from blood. Thirdly, wee alſo graunt that the Church may vſe externall rites and orders either left by tradition, or ordained by the Church for decencie and comlineſſe, and tending to edification. But we conſtantly affirme, that there are no traditions in the Church of God neceſſarie to ſaluation beſide Scripture: wherein all things are contained neceſſarie to ſaluation, both concerning faith and manners.

*Argum.*1. It is not lawfull, as to take ought from the word of God, ſo to adde any thing vnto it, Deut. 12.32. Apocal. 22.18. But they which bring in traditions neceſſarie beſide the Scriptures, doe adde vnto them. Ergo.

To the propoſition the Ieſuit anſwereth: that all addition to the word of God is not forbidden, for the Prophetes did write after Moſes, and the Apoſtles after the Euangeliſts. We anſwere: firſt, that thoſe holy men had authoritie from God to compile Scripture: if the Papiſts haue the like Apoſtolike authoritie for their traditions, let them ſhew it, and we will beleeue them. Secondly, the Prophets did but explane Moſes, and expound the law, and the Apoſtles did as it were ſet forth their Commentaries vpon the Goſpell: this therefore was no addition, becauſe they did not derogate from the perfection of the Scriptures any way.

To the aſſumption they anſwere: that their traditions are but expoſitions of the Scripture. We anſwere, their traditions are cleane contrarie to Scripture, as the worſhipping of Images, and the ſacrifice of their Maſſe: and they adde to Scripture, making it vnperfect, ſaying, It doth not containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation. Wherefore they cannot eſcape that curſe, which they runne into that adde to the word of God.

*Argum.*2. All traditions among the Iewes beſides the law were condemned, Matth. 15.3. Ergo, all vnwritten traditions now muſt bee aboliſhed. The Ieſuite anſwereth: Firſt, Chriſt condemned not the ancient traditions of Moſes, but thoſe which were newly and lately inuented. Anſ. Firſt, the Scripture maketh no mention of any ſuch traditions of Moſes: Chriſt biddeth them ſearch the Scriptures, not runne vnto traditions. Secondly, theſe ſeemed to be ancient traditions, bearing the name of Elders traditions, and they were in great authoritie amongſt the Iewes: moſt like, becauſe of ſome long continuance.

Secondly (ſaith he) Chriſt findeth fault with wicked and impious traditions. Anſw. Firſt, their traditions were not openly and plainly euill and pernicious, but had ſome ſhew of holineſſe, as the waſhing of pots, and tables, and beds. I would the Papiſts did not here take themſelues by the noſe, whoſe traditions come neerer to open impietie, and blaſphemie, then theirs did. Secondly, Chriſt in oppoſing the Scripture againſt traditions, therein condemneth all traditions not written, beſides the Scripture.

*Argum.*3. If Paul preaching the whole Goſpell, Act. 20.27. did ſay none other things then Moſes and the Prophets; then all things neceſſarie to ſaluation are contained in the Scriptures. For it cannot bee ſaid to bee a whole and perfect Goſpell, if any thing neceſſarie to ſaluation bee wanting. But Paul preached nothing, but out of Moſes and the Prophets, Act. 26.22. Ergo, much more now is the Scripture a perfect rule of faith; wee hauing beſide Moſes and the Prophets, the holy writings of the Euangeliſts and Apoſtles. So that wee further reaſon thus: If Moſes and the Prophets were ſufficient without any other helpes for the times of the law, much more ſufficient is the new Teſtament together with the old now. But the firſt is true, therefore the ſecond. The conſequence of the firſt propoſition cannot bee denied: for we ſee now more then the Prophets did, Matth. 13.17. and if the old Teſtament then was ſufficient, much more the new together with the old. The ſecond part is thus proued, Luk. 16.29. The rich mans brethren are ſent to Moſes and the Prophets, which were more ſufficient to inſtruct them, then if one ſhould come from the dead: ſo that the written word is to be preferred before vnwritten reuelations. And Abraham, in ſaying, heare them, teſtifieth, that they contained ſufficient inſtruction vnto life: Ergo, much more the Goſpell now.

*Argum.*4. The Scriptures were written, to be a rule and meaſure of our faith : And they being the worke of God, whoſe workes are all perfect, muſt needes alſo be a perfect rule of our faith : and ſo containe all things neceſſarie to faith : for the rule and meaſure muſt not come ſhort of that which is meaſured.

*Bellarm.*1. The Scripture was not ordained eſpecially to be a rule of our faith : but onely to be, Commentarium quoddam, as a remembrancer to nouriſh and preſerue ſound doctrine by preaching: for if it were to that end, it ſhould conteine onely ſuch things as belong vnto the faith ; but now it conteineth many things beſide.

Anſwere 1. That the Scriptures were not written, to be a rule of our faith, it is a bold and vntrue aſſertion contrarie to Scripture: the Scriptures doe teach and ſhew vs eternall life, Iohn 5.39. but it is eternall life to beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, Ioh. 3. 16. Ergo, the Scriptures doe teach and giue rules of our faith and beliefe: yea S. Paul doth in direct termes call the doctrine of Chriſt crucified, which is ſet forth in Scriptures, a rule, Gal. 6.15.16.

*Bellarm.*2. Againe we ſay, that the Scripture, is a rule of faith (though this be not the chiefe end thereof) yet not a totall and abſolute rule, but in part onely : the word of God is one part or peece of the rule, vnwritten traditions another.

Anſwere 1. That it is the chiefe end of Scripture to be a rule of faith and good manners, the wiſe man ſpeaketh plainely, Prou. 1. 1. The prouerbs of Salomon to know wiſdome and vnderſtand the words of knowledge, to receiue inſtruction to doe wiſely. This is the end of Scripture to know true wiſdome, and to doe wiſely: And leaſt they ſhould ſay, that this is the end onely of that booke, S. Paul ſheweth the ſame generally to be the end and vſe of all Scripture, 1. Tim. 3.16. 2. If the Scripture be a rule, then is it a perfect rule : for God leaueth not any of his workes vnperfect : I knowe, ſaith the Preacher, that whatſoeuer God doth, it ſhall be for euer : to it can no man adde, and from it can no man diminiſh : Eccleſ. 3.14. But the Scripture is one of Gods workes: Ergo, it is perfect: yea Saint Paul ſaith plainely, that the Scriptures are able to make the man of God perfect to euery good worke : Ergo, themſelues are much more perfect. 3. It is no good argument which the Ieſuite vſeth, the Scriptures conteine more then belongeth to faith, or then is neceſſary to be beleeued : Ergo, they are not properly a rule of faith. We anſwere. 1. Though the Scriptures be profitable to other ends, then to inſtruct in faith and good manners, yet this is the chiefe and principall, as we haue ſhewed : and though many things in Scripture declared hiſtorically, are not properly of the ſubſtance of Faith ; yet there is nothing therein conteined, which may not be referred to faith and good manners, as profitable, and helping to one of thoſe ends. 2. This argument may be returned vpon the Ieſuites owne head : for if the Scripture ſpeake of many things which are not of the neceſſitie of faith, much leſſe is it ſilent in all neceſſarie points of faith : if it abound in things not neceſſarie, Non deficit in neceſſarys, much leſſe doth it faile in neceſſarie.

Laſt of al, although we might multiplie many arguments, but theſe I truſt, ſtronglie concluding out of Scripture, may ſerue as a ſufficient bulwarke againſt all Popiſh paper bullets : Let vs heare in the knitting vp the iudgement of Auguſtine. In his rebus, inquit, in quibus nihil certi ſtatuit Scriptura, mos populi Dei, vel inſtituta maiorum, pro lege tenenda. Epiſt. 86. In all thoſe things (ſaith he) ſpeaking of externall rites, and ceremonies, of the which we haue no certaine rule out of Scripture, the cuſtome of ẏ people of God, & the godly conſtitutions of our forefathers muſt ſtand for a law. But concerning matters of faith and good manners the Scriptures do giue certaine rules; as in another place: *In ijs quæ apertè in Scriptura poſita ſunt, inueniuntur illa omnia, quæ continent fidem, moreſq; viuendi, de doctrina Chriſt.*2.9. Al things appertaining to faith, and ẏ rule of life, are plainely expreſſed in the Scripture: Ergo, by the ſentence of Auguſtine, traditions beſides Scripture haue nothing to do with the doctrine of faith and manners, but do conſiſt only in externall rites & cuſtomes of the Church.

This doctrine alſo that no traditions concerning either faith or manners are to be receiued beſides Scripture, wanteth not the glorious conſent of Martyres. Sir Iohn Borthwicke knight was condemned by the Cardinall of Scotland, for affirming, amongſt other things, that the Pope ought not to obtrude vpon the Church any lawes of faith beſide or contrarie to the Scripture: for as the Prophets (ſaith he) alwaies in the beginning of their propheſies, ſaid The word of the Lord, ſhewing thereby, that they preached not their owne phantaſies, but the word of God; and as our Sauiour bad his Apoſtles preach, Mat. 28. not what they would themſelues, but what he commanded them: ſo now nothing ought to be taught in the Church beſide the word of God conteined in Scripture. *Fox.*pag. 1264. See the confeſſion alſo of Iohn Fortune Martyr, that he would not beleeue vnwritten verities, which agreed not with written verities. Fox pag, 1918. col. 2.

Let vs alſo ſee the conſent of antiquitie : *Concil. Florentin. general. Seſſ.*7. Andreas Coloſſen. being choſen a champion for the Latine Church, thus ſpeaketh vnto the Greeke diſputers, which ſaid ſpeech was approoued of the whole Councel : Velim à vobis (ampliſſimi patres) doceri an ſacratiſſim. euangelium perfectiſſim. religionis noſtræ doctrinam præ ſe ferat : Equidem vos nihil aliud puto pro veſtra ſumma pietate reſponſuros, quàm conſummatiſſimam fidei noſtræ ſcientiam in ipſo concluſam eſſe : I would gladly learne of you (honorable Fathers) whether the moſt holy Goſpell doth not ſet foorth the moſt perfect doctrine of our religion, I thinke you will make no other anſwere (ſuch is your pietie) then that therein, the moſt abſolute knowledge of our faith is contained.

Further for the Imperiall conſtitutions: *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*18. lex. vnic. Gratian. Valentinian. omnes ſciant, nemini quicquam, quam quod ſcriptis probauerit, eſſe credendum: Let all men know, that no man is to be credited in any thing, vnleſſe he proue it by writing: Likewiſe, *lib.*3.*tit.*1.*leg.*8. Conſtantin. placuit in omnibus rebus præcipuam eſſe iuſtitiæ ſcriptæ rationem: It ſeemeth good to vs, that in all matters greateſt regard be had vnto the written law. As then in ciuill matters, the written law onely tooke place, ſo alſo in diuine, the ſacred writings ſhould onely be heard: and the rather, becauſe there is greater danger, and more vncertaintie in vnwritten Scriptures, then vnwritten lawes.

Heare alſo your owne decrees: *decr.p.*2.*cauſ.*24.*qu.*3.*c.*30.*Leo.*1.Qui non ad propheticas voces, non ad apoſtolicas literas, nec ad euangelicas authoritates, ſed ad ſeipſos recurrunt, ideo Magiſtri erroris ſunt: They which doe not run to the propheticall ſayings, Apoſtolicall writings, and Euangelicall authorities, but haue recourſe to themſelues, become the maſters of errors. Therefore Papiſts be maſters of errors, becauſe they doe not in all things referre themſelues to the Scriptures. I would therefore they were reſolued to follow the voice of the Scriptures, and leaue their blinde traditions; as once one of their owne Popes bethought himſelfe, Iohn 22. extrau. tit. 7. c. 1. Dignum eſt, vt adulterinas plantationes, quas non pater cæleſtis, ſed humanæ temeritatis audacia plantauit, Apoſtolici culminis cenſura diuellat: It is meete, that ſuch plantations, as not the heauenly father, but humane raſhnes hath planted, ſhould be rooted out by the Apoſtolicall cenſure. If the Pope would thus doe, as he ſaith, he ſhould be an Apoſtolike man in deede.

THE SECOND GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE CHVRCH.

HAuing now finiſhed the queſtions betweene our aduerſaries and vs, concerning the Scriptures, and word of God, which all doe belong to the Propheticall office of Chriſt: in the next place ſuch controuerſies are to be handled, as doe concerne the Kingly office of Chriſt. And ſeeing the Church of Chriſt is his kingdome, where he ruleth and raigneth, we muſt intreat of the Church: and firſt in generall of the whole, then in ſpeciall of the partes and members. This preſent controuerſie concerning the Church in generall ſtandeth vpon fiue principall queſtions.

1 Of the definition of the Catholike Church: two partes of the queſtion. Firſt, whether wicked men and infidels, be true members of the Church. Secondly, whether the Catholike Church be inuiſible.

2 Whether the Catholike Church may erre, and whether the viſible Church may faile vpon earth.

3 Concerning the true notes and markes of the Church.

4 Of the authoritie of the Church: two partes. Firſt, whether the Church haue authoritie in matters of Faith beſide the Scriptures, and whether we ought to beleeue in the Church. Secondly, concerning the ceremonies of the Church.

5 Whether the Church of Rome be the true Church: two parts. Firſt, whether it be the Catholike Church. Secondly, whether the Church of Rome be a true viſible Church: of theſe now in their place and order.

THE FIRST QVESTION: OF THE definition of the Catholike Church.

The Papiſts.

THe Catholike Church (ſay they) is a viſible companie of men profeſſing the ſame faith and Religion, and acknowledging the Biſhop of Rome to be their chiefe paſtor, and the Vicar of Chriſt vpon earth. *Bellarmin.de Eccleſ.lib,3.cap.2.Caniſius capit.de precept.Eccleſ.articul.* 9*.Lindanus lib.4.cap.*84.

The Proteſtants.

THe Catholike and vniuerſall Church is the inuiſible companie of the faithfull elected and choſen to eternall life, Iohn. 10.16. A particular Church is a member of the vniuerſall and Catholike Church, and it is a viſible companie and congregation of men, amongſt whom the pure word of God is preached, and the Sacraments rightly adminiſtred: in the which viſible congregation, there may be and are many hypocrites, euill and vnfaithfull men founde, and ſhall be to the end of the world. So then betweene the vniuerſall and particular Church, there is a treble difference. Firſt, the one is diſperſed ouer all the world; the other in ſome one countrey, citie, or any certaine place. Secondly, the vniuerſall conſiſteth onely of the elect; the particular both of good and bad. Thirdly, the Catholike is inuiſible; the other is viſible and to be ſeene.

The queſtion betweene vs and our aduerſaries, is about the vniuerſall Catholike Church, which they doe falſely define in three points. Firſt, they hold that wicked men are true members of the Catholike Church. Secondly, they allow not this diſtinction of the Church viſible and inuiſible, but doe affirme that the Catholike Church is viſible. Thirdly, they make the Catholike Church to be in ſubiection to the Biſhop of Rome. Concerning this laſt point, it belongeth to the controuerſie of the Biſhop of Rome, and therefore we will not touch it in this place. The other two are now to be handled in this queſtion as two parts thereof.

THE FIRST PART OF THIS FIRST QVEſtion, whether wicked men and infidels may be true members of the Church.

The Papiſts.

THey affirme that not onely the predeſtinate, but euen reprobates alſo may belong vnto the Church, and be true members thereof. *Bellarmin.Lib.3.de Eccleſ.cap.*7. Nay they denie that the elect which are vnborne, and not yet called, doe appertaine to the Church of Chriſt. Rhemiſts annot.in 1*.Tim.3.Sect.*10. This then is generally their opinion, that there is no internall grace or vertue required in the members of the Church, but onely the externall and publike outward profeſſion. *Bellarmin.cap.*2. And therefore they doubt not to ſay that euen wicked men and reprobates remaining in the publike profeſſion of the Church, are true members of the bodie of Chriſt. *Rhemiſts annot.in Iohan.15.Sect.*1. 14.Error.

*Argum.*1. They firſt alleage certaine places of Scripture, as Matth. 3. the Church is compared to a barne floore, where there is both chaffe and corn. Mat. 13. to a net caſt into the ſea, where all manner of fiſhe are gathered togither. 2. Tim. 2. to a houſe, wherein there be veſſels of honor and diſhonour: Ergo, both good and bad are members of the Church, *Bellarm.cap.7.lib.*3.

We anſwere. All theſe places muſt be vnderſtood of the viſible Church: which is knowne by the publike preaching of the word, and therefore Matth. 3. compared to a fanne, and Math. 13. to a draw net; the Apoſtles, paſtors and teachers are the fiſher men. Wherefore we denie not but that wicked men may be in the Church, but not of it: yea they may be members of the viſible Church for a time, but cannot be truely ingraffed into the bodie of Chriſt. *Fulk.annot.Iohan.15.Sect.*1.

*Argum.*2. The Church (ſay they) is compared to a bodie, 1. Cor. 12. as in the bodie there are ſome parts, which haue neither ſenſe nor life: ſo in the Church there are ſome members, which haue neither faith nor charitie, which is the life of the Church: Ergo, wicked men may be right members of the Church: *Bellarm.cap.*10. There may be alſo ſome fruitleſſe branches in the vine, and ſo euill men may be members of Chriſt. *Rhemiſt.annot.15.Iohan.1.Euery branch not bearing fruit in me ſhall be caſt forth: Ergo*, there may be fruitleſſe branches in Chriſt.

We anſwere to the firſt, who would haue ſaid, as the Ieſuite doth, that there are parts in the bodie, that receiue neither life nor ſenſe of the bodie? doth he meane the nailes and haires, as he ſeemeth to giue inſtance in the end of the Chapter? but they are no partes of the bodie but excrements (he is ſo deepe in his ſophiſtrie, that he hath forgotten Philoſophie) and yet they receiue ſome gift from the bodie, for they growe and increaſe; but the wicked receiue no grace at all from the Church. The Rhemiſts yet are more reaſonable, that ſay the wicked in the Church, are as ill humors and ſuperfluous excrements in the bodie, rather then liuely parts thereof, 1. *Iohan.2. Sect.*10.

To the ſecond, is a dead bough or a branch, I pray you, any part of the tree? I thinke not: the tree cannot conueniently ſpare any one of the parts thereof: but the dead parts are hurtful and comberſome, and it doth the tree good to cut thẽ off. But that they haue preuented vs, we would haue vſed no better argument againſt them, then this drawen from the reſemblance of a mans bodie: for as what is in the bodie receiuing no life nor power from the bodie is not properly a part of the bodie, howſoeuer it ſeeme to be ioyned to the bodie: ſo the wicked although they be in the outward face of the Church, yet becauſe they are not partakers of the ſpirituall life thereof by Chriſt, are not truely to be iudged members of it.

*Argum.*3. If wicked men ſhould not be right members of the Church, but the faithfull and predeſtinate, we ſhould be vncertaine which is the true Church: which is not to be admitted, becauſe the whole doctrine, and all the principles of Religion doe depend of the teſtimonie of the Church. *Bellarm.lib.*2.*cap.*10.

We anſwere. Firſt, although it is neceſſarie that the true Church ſhould be certainly knowen, yet not for that cauſe, which the Ieſuite pretendeth: for the religion of Chriſtians is grounded vpon the Scriptures, and although the true Church doth giue a notable teſtimonie thereunto, yet doth not our faith depend vpon their witneſſe, teſtimonie, or allowance. Secondly, the true viſible Church is certainly knowne by the preaching of the word, and the right vſe of the Sacraments: ſo that we doubt not but there is the true Church, where we finde theſe markes: neither is it needfull to know the eſtate of euery particular member thereof; for ſo long, as all actions in the Church are directed and ordered by the rule of Gods word, we neede not to doubt to commit our ſelues to that Church, howſoeuer otherwiſe men doe ſtand before God: and yet, ſo much as is neceſſary, the faithfull may be iudged and knowne by their fruites.

Thirdly, though we admit that wicked men are members: yet the vncertaintie remaineth ſtill: for they themſelues hold that neither men not baptiſed, or perſons excommunicate, or heretikes can be of the Church: but many may liue in the Church, whom we know not to be baptiſed, which may be ipſo facto, by the deede dooing excommunicate without publike ſentence, and heretikes alſo: Wherefore euen amongſt themſelues they are vncertaine, who are members of the Church.

*Argum.*4. There is but one Church, the wicked, which outwardly profeſſe Chriſt, are of ſome Church: Ergo, of this one Catholike Church: argum.D.Day epiſcop.Ciceſt. Anſwere, there is but one true Church, but alwaies vnto the ſame was ioyned in the world a falſe, and malignant Church: theſe two Churches were repreſented in the beginning in Cain and Abel, and ſo haue continued. Obiect. I grant you, in the Law, before Chriſts comming there were two Churches, but not ſince Chriſts comming. Anſwere. Yes that there was, for was there not a Iudas in the new law, and a Simon Magus? Obiect. But you cannot finde me two Churches after Chriſt was aſcended. Anſwere. Yes, S. Paul ſaith that Antichriſt with his falſe generation ſhall ſit in the temple, 2.Theſ.2. which is not the true, but the falſe Church, *reſponſ.Philpotti, Fox.*pag.1818.

The Proteſtants.

Fulk. annot. 1.Iohan.2. Sect.10. Fox.pag.609.

WE holde that the Catholike Church conſiſteth onely of the predeſtinate, and comprehendeth the vniuerſall number of all thoſe which ſhall be ſaued; not onely thoſe now liuing on earth, but all that haue been ſince the beginning of the world: of this Church S. Paul was euen being a perſecutor, for hee was neuer a member of the Diuell nor reprobate, as Iohn Huſſe ſaith, *articul.*2. Of this Church Iudas the traytor neuer was, though he were reputed for a Diſciple of Chriſt for a while, *Huſſ.articul.*7. Therefore the wicked and reprobate though they liue in the outward aſſembly of Chriſtians, are no more the true members of Chriſt, then the tares in the field may be counted wheate or good corne.

*Argum.*1. The true members of Chriſt are alſo his ſheepe: the wicked are not the ſheepe of Chriſt: Ergo, neither his members.

Iohn.10.3.

The ſheep of Chriſt heare his voice; the wicked doe not heare his voice: Ergo. If they ſhall anſwere, that hypocrites and wicked men doe heare Chriſts voice, ſo long as they continue in the outward profeſſion of Chriſtians, we thus improue it: Chriſts ſheepe doe follow him in life and example, Ioh.15.4. but ſo doe not they. If it ſhall bee yet anſwered, that they may alſo a while walke in Chriſts ſteps: this is not enough, for all Chriſts ſhall be ſaued, verſ.9. Wherefore the Goſpell vnderſtandeth ſuch followers, as continue to the end. Bellarmine would ſeeme here to anſwere with a diſtinction, that ſometimes in the Scripture ſheepe are taken both for the good and bad, as where Chriſt ſaith to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: ſometime for the predeſtinate onely, as Ioh.10. *My ſheepe heare my voyce, cap.7.reſ.ad argum.*5. Contra. It is enough that he confeſſeth in this place of Iohn the predeſtinate onely to bee vnderſtoode by ſheepe: for it followeth in the ſame chapter, verſ.16. There ſhall bee one ſheepefold, and one ſhepheard: therefore if the ſheepe onely be in the ſheepfold, and the predeſtinate onely bee the ſheepe; then they onely belong to the ſheepfold.

*Argum.*2. Chriſt is the head of his Church, and all the parts thereof; but he is not the head of the wicked and reprobate; Ergo. The Ieſuite graunteth that he is the head, euen of thoſe parts that ſhall periſh, *Bellarm.cap.*7. We thus anſwere, Chriſt is the head onely of thoſe, for whom he gaue himſelfe, Ephe.5.23.25. but he gaue not himſelfe for the wicked: Ergo. If this be denied, we thus proceede, Chriſt died onely for thoſe whom he ſanctifieth and cleanſeth, to make them a glorious Church without ſpot and wrinckle, Ephe.5.26.27. But this cannot agree in any wiſe to the wicked. Ergo.

Argum.3. The Church of God is the whole familie of the children of God in heauen and earth, Epheſ.3.15. they both make but one Church, the wicked are not of this familie: for who would ſay that the Saints in heauen, and wicked and reprobate men vpon the earth, are fellow ſeruants, and of one houſehold? Ergo, they are not of the catholike Church. Likewiſe Ioh.11.52. The end of Chriſts death was to gather together in one the children of God, &c. but the wicked are not the children of God: Ergo, they belong not to the congregation which Chriſt hath gathered together.

Bellarmine anſwereth here by a diſtinction: that ſome are ſaid to bee the ſonnes of God and members of Chriſt, according to their preſent iuſtice; ſome according to Gods predeſtination: the wicked may be the firſt way the ſonnes of God, and the members of Chriſt, Bellarm. cap.7. reſp. ad argum.6.

Contra.1. This diſtinction is contrarie to the Apoſtle, Rom.8.17. The children of God are alſo heires: but the wicked are not heires; therefore they are not children. 2. The Ieſuite doth not anſwere to the point in queſtion: for our aſſertion is, that the wicked cannot bee the true members of Chriſt: he anſwereth, they may bee ſo called after a ſort, according to their preſent ſtate, which is in ſhew only, and outward apparance, not in deede and in trueth: for they that doe beleeue in Chriſt, and are in deede his ſheepe, ſhall neuer periſh, Ioh.10.28. And againe, verſ.26. Ye beleeue not, becauſe ye are not my ſheepe. Wherefore faith and beleefe maketh men Chriſts ſheepe, contrary to that which the Ieſuite affirmed before, that there is no internall grace, or vertue required to make a member of Chriſts Church.

Argum.4. Of all other that is a moſt euident place, 1.Ioh.2.19. They went out of vs, but were not of vs: Ergo, heretikes and reprobates are not of the Church. Bellarmine anſwereth: though they were not of vs, that is, of the Church, animis & voluntate, in ſoule and minde, and purpoſe of hart: yet they were of vs, externa profeſſione, in externall profeſſion. Thus they are not aſhamed (ſuch is their great boldneſſe) to contradict the Scriptures: for the Apoſtle ſaith, non erant ex nobis, they were not of vs: they ſay, yes forſooth, after a ſort, erant ex nobis, they were of vs: the Apoſtle ſaith nay, they ſay yea, he ſaith indeede exierunt ex nobis, they went out of vs: which ſoundeth nothing like, as erant ex nobis, they were of vs, as the Ieſuite ſubtlely would conclude.

Let Auguſtine ſpeake for vs both: Illa columba, vnica, pudica, caſta, ſponſa ſine macula & ruga non intelligitur, niſi in bonis, iuſtis, ſanctis: That louely doue (ſaith he) the chaſt, vndefiled, & vnſpotted ſpouſe (that is the Church of God) is onely vnderſtood of thoſe that are righteous, faithfull, holy: Ergo, the wicked are not of the Church, which is the ſpouſe of Chriſt.

Concil. Vormatienſ. in præfation. concil. Eccleſiam catholicam precio ſui ſanguinis redemptam, cum eo credimus in perpetuum regnaturam: That catholike Church, which is redeemed by his blood, we beleeue ſhall raigne with him eternally. The wicked therefore are no members of the catholike Church, for they ſhall not raigne with Chriſt.

We want not here the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries: Ioannes de Turre cremata lib.4. de Eccleſ. par.2. cap.20. holdeth, that they which haue no faith nor no inward grace, doe not belong to the Church.

So the Maſter of the Sentences out of S. Auguſtine affirmeth: Illi ad templum dei non pertinent, qui cognoſcentes deum, non ſicut deum glorificant: They belong not to the temple of God, which knowing God, doe not glorifie him as God, lib.1.d.37.e.

Hereunto agree their owne decrees, Decr.p.2. cauſ.24. quæſt.3. cap.8. Ad eccleſiam non pertinent illi, qui in eius vnitate corporaliter miſti per peſſimam vitam ſeparantur: They belong not to the Church of Chriſt, which being corporally mixed in the ſocietie thereof, are ſeparated by an euill life. Againe, Cauſ.33. quæſt.3. diſt.1. de pœniten. cap.70. Qui peccator eſt, & aliqua ſorde maculatus, de eccleſia Chriſti non poteſt appellari, &c. He that is a ſinner, and polluted, cannot be called of the Church, which is without ſpot, &c.

Laſtly, this doctrine, that the faithfull onely are the true members of the catholike Church, which is the myſticall body of Chriſt, hath the witneſſe and approbation of holy martyrs. This was one of the articles for the which Iohn Hus was condemned in the Councell of Conſtance, for ſaying that the catholike Church is the vniuerſall companie of the predeſtinate: grounding his opinion vpon that place of S. Paul, Epheſ.5. Chriſt ſo loued the Church, that he gaue himſelfe for the ſame: but he gaue himſelfe onely for the faithfull, Fox pag.610. arti.8. Luther openly proteſted before the Emperour at Wormes, that he would not conſent to the Councell of Conſtance, becauſe it condemned this article propounded by Iohn Hus, That the catholike Church is the communion of the predeſtinate, and ſo aboliſheth, ſaith he, this article of our faith, I beleeue the holy Church vniuerſall: and ſaith further, he was readie to ſpend his blood, rather then to reuoke any trueth agreeable to Gods word, pag.852. See the confeſſion alſo of Richard Feurus a French martyr, That the congregation of Chriſt conſiſted in the number of the elect, Fox p.912.col.1.

This alſo was the faith of the Merindolians, That the catholike Church was the fellowſhip of Gods elect: who for this and other points of their Chriſtian faith, were perſecuted, and their countrie deſtroyed, Fox pag.954.col.1.

That the faithfull onely are the members of Chriſt: it is affirmed by Doctor Ridley, and Maſter Latimer martyrs, according to the Scripture, If any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his, Rom.8.9. And the Church of Chriſt ſtandeth onely of liuing ſtones, 1.Pet.2.5. that is, true Chriſtians, not onely outwardly in name and title, but inwardly in heart and truth, reſponſ. ad articul. Antonij 7.

The blood of theſe holy martyrs doth giue a liuely teſtimonie vnto the trueth, and doth notably confirme vs therein.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, whether the Catholike Church be inuiſible.

The Papiſts.

15.Error. THey doe affirme that the catholike Church is, and hath been alwaies viſible: not ſo viſible, becauſe it might be ſeene, but that it hath been alwaies actually viſible, and not ſeene onely vnto the members of the Church, but notoriouſly knowne to the whole world, *Rhemenſ. annot. in Matth.cap.*5.ſect.3. Neither doe they meane any particular Church ſo to haue been viſible, but the vniuerſall catholike Church, which they define to bee a viſible congregation of all faithfull men, *Caniſius cap.de fide & Symbol.articul.*18.*Bellar.lib.*3.*de Eccleſ.cap.*12.*ration.*7.

Argum.1. The foundation of the Church is viſible: therefore the Church is viſible. The propoſition they prooue thus: for whether wee affirme Chriſt, or Peter to bee the foundation of the Church: both of them are now viſible in him, which is the Vicar of Chriſt, and Peters ſucceſſor.

We anſwere: Firſt, we vtterly denie either Peter to be the foundation of the Church, or elſe the Pope to be his lawfull ſucceſſor: for Peter is no more the foundation of the Church, then all the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ.2.20. whoſe doctrine is the foundation, not their perſons. And as for the Pope, wee care not ſo much for outward ſucceſſion in place, which notwithſtanding they cannot proue to haue been perpetuall without interruption, as wee doe require a ſucceſſion of faith and doctrine. Secondly, wee affirme that Chriſt is the foundation, but not the viſible beholding of Chriſt with the carnall eyes, but beleeuing in his name: for when Peter had vttered that notable confeſſion of Chriſt, he ſaid that fleſh and blood had not reuealed it, but his father in heauen: but if the beholding of Chriſt had giuen Peter a ſight of the foundation, then fleſh had reuealed it vnto him, his carnall eyes had brought him to Chriſt. Thirdly, we may much better returne this argument vpon themſelues: that becauſe the foundation of the Church, which is faith in Chriſt, is inuiſible, therefore the Church is inuiſible.

Argum.2. They heape vp many places of Scriptures, but to ſmall purpoſe, as Matth.18. Tell the Church. Acts 15. When they came to Ieruſalem, they were receiued of the Church. Philip.3.6. Paul perſecuted the Church. How could the Church be perſecuted? how could it receiue the Apoſtles, if it were not viſible? *Bellarm.cap.*12.

We anſwere, what goodly reaſons here be? a particular Church, ſuch as was at Ieruſalem may be ſeene: Ergo, the catholike and vniuerſall. Secondly, a particular Church may bee ſometime viſible: Ergo, alwaies. Thirdly, the Church is viſible vnto the faithfull, as in time of perſecution, for to Paul it was not knowne, when he perſecuted it, but onely to the brethren: Ergo, it is viſible to the world. For theſe three points they muſt proue, that the catholike Church not a particular is viſible, that the Church is not ſometime but alwaie viſible, yea and to the world, or elſe they ſay nothing. For ſhame maſters make better arguments.

Argum.3. He hath ſet his tabernacle in the Sunne, Pſal.19. The Church is as a citie vpon an hill, Matth.5. Ergo, it is alwaies viſible, *Bellarm.ibid.Rhemiſt.Mat.*5.ſect.3.

We anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtles themſelues, euen at this time, when Chriſt ſpake theſe words vnto them, were not ſo in ſole, or in monte, in the Sunne, or vpon the hill, that they were ſeene of the world, nay they were not ſeene nor acknowledged of the Scribes and Phariſees in Iewrie: the Church is ſeene of the faithfull, it is viſible to them that ſearch for her out of the Scriptures: they that can ſee the mountaine, ſhall ſee the citie, the mountaine is Chriſt, the citie is the Church. No maruaile if the Church be not alwaies viſible to the world, for they ſee not, neither do they know Chriſt. Secondly, the Church is ſaid to be on a hill: becauſe the trueth ſeeketh no corners, heretikes and falſe teachers flie into the deſert and into ſecret places, Matth.24.verſ.26. but the truth is not aſhamed: the Apoſtles confeſſed Chriſt, euen before Kings and Princes, Mark.13.19. So Auguſtine expoundeth it, *Cont.Fauſtum.lib.*13.*cap.*13.

Argum.4. Chriſts Church is alway viſible. Dic eccleſiæ, ſaith he, Tell it to the Church. But how can a man goe vnto that Church, which he knoweth not? *argum.Boner.pag.*1691. Marci Antonij.obiect.6.

Anſw. 1. In the times of the Apoſtles, when the Church was perſecuted, they were faine to congregate themſelues in houſes and priuie places: who though they were not knowne by any external pompe, yet were they knowne among themſelues, and redreſſed things that were amiſſe, euen in their ſecret aſſemblies. Neither were they altogether vnknowne of the world: for how could they then haue perſecuted them, though they were not regarded, reſponſ.Rob.Smithi. Martyr.

2. The fault why the Church is not ſeene, is not becauſe it is not viſible, but becauſe mens eyes are dazeled, and cannot ſee, vnleſſe they looke for it, by the light of Gods word, reſponſ.Brad.pag.1616.col.1.D.Ridley ad 6.obiect.Marc. Antonij.p.1719.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning the Catholike Church, wee hold, that becauſe it is an article of our faith, it is alwaies vnto the world inuiſible, and not to bee eſpied but by the eyes of faith, Fulk Matth.5. ſect.5.

Concerning particular Churches, if by viſible, they vnderſtand that which may bee ſeene, ſo we graunt they are alwaies viſible, Fulk. Act.11.verſ.24. If for that which is actually viſible: we ſay it is not ſo alwaies viſible to the world, nay it may ſometimes bee ſo hid and ſecret, that the members know not one another, Fulke in Matth.5.ſect.3.

Argum. 1. To the Hebrues it is thus written, chap.12.ver.18, 23, 24. You are not come to the mountaine, which might bee touched, but to the citie of the liuing God, the celeſtiall Ieruſalem, &c. Ergo, the Church is inuiſible, and here oppoſed to the viſible hill of Sinay.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this is vnderſtood of the triumphant Church in heauen, not of the militant vpon earth, chap.15.

To this wee make anſwere, the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth the whole vniuerſall Church in heauen and earth, which both make but one familie, Epheſ.3.15. for here he nameth not onely the ſpirits of iuſt men which are in heauen, but the faithfull vpon earth, whoſe names are written in heauen: the congregation (ſaith he) of the firſt borne: the words are πανήγυρις and ἐκκλησία, a gathering together, collection or congregation, which muſt needes bee vnderſtood of men vpon earth. Againe (ſaith he) ye are come, not ye ſhall come: they had now left the ſmoking mountaine Sinay, and were come to Sion, the Church vnder the Goſpell. Wherefore this is a moſt firme and inuincible argument: the catholike Church is the vniuerſal number of Gods choſen in heauen and in earth: Ergo, inuiſible.

*Argum.*2. We will giue an inſtance: In the daies of Elias the Church was not viſible, for he complaineth and ſaith that he was onely left alone, 1.King.19.10. Ergo, the Church is not alway viſible.

The Rhemiſts anſwere: Firſt, at that time the Church was viſible in Iudea, the ſouldiours were numbred to 1000.thouſand, 2.Chron.17. We anſwere. Firſt, belike they haue taken a more exact account of them then the Lord himſelfe: for he (ſaith he) had reſerued 7000. 1.King.19.18. that had not bowed their knees to Baal: they ſay there were ten hundred thouſand. Againe, Elias, if he had knowne ſuch a number, could not haue been left ſo comfortleſſe, as in griefe of heart to deſire to die. But be it graunted that the Church was viſible in Iudea at this time, though it were not ſo to Elias: yet where was that viſible Church in the daies of Achaz and Manaſſeh, when Iudea fell alſo to Idolatrie?

Annot. in Rom.11.ver.4.

Bellarmine alſo anſwereth, as the Rhemiſts doe, that in Elias time the Church was viſible in Iudea, and therefore God ſaith directly, that he had left 7000. in Iſrael: whereby thoſe tribes are vnderſtood which were vnder the King of Samaria, cap.16.reſp.ad argum.3.

Anſw. Firſt, they cannot ſhew vs of any Prophet notwithſtanding at this inſtant in Iudea. Secondly, I will aske the Ieſuite, theſe 7000. in Iſrael were they not of the Church? it cannot be denied: Ergo, the Church is not alwaies, and in all places viſible, as they would beare vs in hand: for they were not knowne to Elias, who complaineth that he was left alone. Thirdly, S. Paul, the beſt expounder of the Prophets, Rom.11.1. expoundeth Iſrael to be all the people of God: and himſelfe of the tribe of Beniamin he calleth an Iſraelite, which tribe notwithſtanding belonged to the diuiſion of Iuda. And in the fifth verſe the Apoſtle ſaith, Euen ſo now (ſaith he) there is a remnant, through the election of grace, as there were then 7000. left: whereby the Apoſtle ſignifieth, that this was the whole remnant of the elect which was left then.

Some other doe anſwere thus: They graunt that the Church before Chriſt might be inuiſible, but not the Church ſince Chriſt: for he ſaith, ædificabo eccleſiam, I will build my Church, not that I doe build, or haue built it: ſic Hethus epiſcop. Eboracenſ.

Anſ. By ſtanding thus ſtrictly vpon the future tenſe, you may as well proue that Chriſts Church was not at all before his comming, as that it was not viſible before. But Chriſts meaning is this rather, that there is no building in the Church but by Chriſt only: for Paul and Apollos be but waterers, ſic Bradford Martyr. Fox pag.1615.col.1.

*Argum.*3. To beleeue that there is an holy catholike Church is an article of our faith: Ergo, it is inuiſible. Bellarmine anſwereth. Firſt, the holineſſe of the Church is inuiſible. We replie, ſo the Church is partly viſible, partly inuiſible by his confeſſion. Firſt, why then doe ye define the catholike church to be a viſible congregation, if it be not wholly and altogether viſible? they know that definitio muſt conuenire definito, the definition muſt agree wholly to that which is defined: but now it is not: for they ſay, the catholike holy Church is partly viſible as it is a Church, partly inuiſible as it is holy. Secondly, doe we not ſay in the Creede, Credo Catholicam, as well as Credo ſanctam, I beleeue a catholike Church, as well as I beleeue the holy Church? then it is alſo inuiſible, as it is catholike, becauſe this alſo is part of the article. See I pray you what ſhifting is here.

Secondly he anſwereth, that ſome thing is ſeene in the Church, ſome thing beleeued: for wee ſee that viſible companie of men, which make the Church; but whether that companie be the true Church, we doe not ſee it, but beleeue it.

We replie againe: firſt, the Ieſuite hath not yet proued that ſome thing is ſeene in the Church, ſome thing beleeued: but one thing is ſeene, namely the congregation as they are men, another thing is beleeued, that they are the Church: the ſight and beleefe now by his owne confeſſion are not both in the Church. Secondly, wee denie that the vniuerſall companie of the catholike Church, which is the number of the predeſtinate, can be ſeene; therefore all is beleeued, and nothing ſeene. Thirdly, he ſaith that by faith we know which is the true Church: Ergo, by faith we know which are the members of the Church: Ergo, by faith the members doe know themſelues to be of the Church: therefore faith is requiſite in the true members of the Church: then vnfaithfull men cannot be true members of the Church: which point the Ieſuite ſtrongly before maintained againſt vs. Mendacem oportet eſſe memorem, a lier had neede haue a good memorie, leaſt he tell contrarie tales, and ſo hath the Ieſuite here: for before he denied that faith was requiſite to make a true member of the Church: here he ſaith, that without faith a member cannot be knowne, much leſſe therefore made.

Lib.3.de Eccleſ.cap.15. reſp.ad arg.6. cap.10.lib.3. de Eccleſ.

*Argum.*4. The Rhemiſts confeſſe in theſe very words, that in the raigne of (their imagined and ſuppoſed) Antichriſt the externall ſtate of the Romane Church, and publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the ſame ſhall ceaſe, and that there ſhall be onely a communion in heart with it, and practiſe in ſecret. Annot.in 2.Theſſ.2.ſect.10. Where then (I pray you) ſhall be your tabernaculum in ſole, ciuitas in monte, candela ſplendens in domo: your tabernacle in the Sunne, your citie in a mountaine, your candle ſhining in the houſe, that is (ſay you) in the world? Matth.5.ſect.3. Ergo, out of their owne words we conclude, that the Church ſhall not alwaies be viſible, and notoriouſly knowne in the world.

We muſt not here ouerpaſſe the ſentence and iudgement of the holy Martyrs, whoſe witneſſe is in ſtead of many arguments.

Maſter Bradford reaſoneth thus: As Eue was of the ſame ſubſtance that Adam was of; ſo is the Church of the ſame ſubſtance that Chriſt was of, fleſh of his fleſh, bone of his bones, Epheſ.5.30. Looke therefore how Chriſt was knowne when he was vpon earth, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt was not knowne by any external pompe in the world, but by conſidering according to the word of God: Ergo, ſo is his Church, Fox pag.1613.

This was one of the articles for the which Biſhop Farrar was condemned, for denying that the Church was alwaies viſible vpon earth, Fox pag.1554.col.2.articl.6.

M. Robert Glouer Martyr giueth an inſtance of Elias times, when the Church lay hid and was not apparant, no not to the Prophet. It was anſwered him that Elias complained onely of the ten tribes that fell from Dauids houſe. He replyeth, that they were not able to ſhew any Prophets that the other two tribes had at the ſame time, Fox p.1712.col.1.

M. Philpot confeſſeth the Church to be viſible, and inuiſible, the vniuerſall Catholike Church is inuiſible, conſiſting of the elect of God onely; the viſible conſiſteth of good and bad, and is known by the word of God and Sacraments, pag.1824.

Enarrat.in Pſal.128.

Laſtly, we will conclude with Auguſtine, Aliquando in ſola domo Noah Eccleſia erat: in ſolo Abraham Eccleſia erat: in ſolo Loth & domo eius Eccleſia erat: in ſolo Henoch Eccleſia erat: Sometime the Church was onely in Henochs houſe, ſometime onely in Noah, ſometime in Abraham alone, in Loth and his houſe. How then hath the Church been alwaies ſo viſible and notoriouſly knowne to the world, when it hath lien hidden ſometime in one houſe, yea in one man?

Interrelig.Cæſarea.cap.9. Eccleſia, quatenus conſtat membris talibus quæ ſecundum charitatem viuūt, ſanctorum eſt tantum, & eatenus ſpiritualis & inuiſibilis: The Church as it conſiſteth of ſuch members, which liue after the rule of charitie, is onely of the Saints, and ſo ſpirituall onely, and inuiſible. Behold here we haue the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries themſelues, ſitting in Councell for the inuiſibilitie of the Catholike Church. To this their owne decrees alſo doe giue conſent:

decr.p.3.diſt.2.cap.63. Societas corporis & membrorum Chriſti Eccleſia in prædiſtinatis: The ſocietie of the bodie and members of Chriſt is the Church conſiſting of the Predeſtinate. If the Church conſiſt of the elect onely, then is it not viſible to men, but onely to God; for he onely knoweth who are his, 2.Tim.2.19.

THE SECOND QVESTION: WHETHER the Church may erre.

THis queſtion is diuided into two parts. Firſt, whether the Catholike Church may erre at all, or not? Secondly, whether the viſible Church vpon earth may fall away from God into Idolatrie and Apoſtaſie.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE CATHOlike Church may erre in doctrine.

The Papiſts.

16.Error.

THey doe teach that the Catholike Church cannot poſſibly erre, not onely in matters abſolutely neceſſarie to ſaluation, but not in any thing, which it imposeth and commaundeth, whether it be contained in the word of God or not: yea that it cannot erre in thoſe things, which beſide the word of God in the holy Scriptures are commanded. And by the Church here they doe meane not onely the Paſtors and Biſhops, but the whole company of the faithfull: ſo that neither that which all the Paſtors of the Church doe teach, can be erronious, nor what is receiued generally of the whole Church, Bellarm. de Eccleſ. lib.3. cap.14. Rhemiſt. annot. in Iohan.14. ver.16.

Bellarm. lib.3. cap.14.

*Argum.*1. The Church (ſay they) is the pillar of trueth, 1.Tim.3. Ergo, it cannot erre. We anſwere: firſt, it is no otherwiſe the pillar of trueth, then a Virgine without ſpot and wrinckle, Epheſ.5.27. As that place doth not priuiledge the Church from all ſinne and imperfection of life; ſo neither doth this place exempt her from all error in doctrine. Secondly, ſhe is called the pillar of trueth in reſpect of vs, becauſe the trueth is preſerued in the true Church, and is not elſe where to be found: not becauſe the trueth dependeth vpon the Church: for Saint Paul ſendeth not Timothie in this place to learne of the Church, as though it could not poſſibly be deceiued; but (ſaith he) theſe things haue I written, that thou mayſt know how to behaue thy ſelfe in the houſe of God, verſ.14, 15. Ergo, the word of God is the rule of trueth, and the Church hath no warrant to be kept from error, but as ſhe is led and gouerned by the word of God. Thirdly, the argument followeth not, for Peter was a pillar, and yet erred, Gal.2.9.11.

*Argum.*2. They heape many arguments together. The Church hath the ſpirite of God, to leade it into all trueth, the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it, Matth.16. God hath giuen it Apoſtles, teachers, Euangeliſts, to keepe it in the trueth, Epheſ.4. Chriſt hath prayed for the Church that it may be ſanctified in the veritie, Iohn 17. Chriſt prayed that Peters fayth ſhould not fayle: Ergo the Church cannot erre, Rhemenſ. annot. 1.Tim.3.15.

We anſwere: euery one of the elect hath the ſpirit of God, neither ſhall the gates of hell preuaile againſt the faith of any one of the elect to ouerthrowe it: Chriſt prayeth for euery one of his Diciples that they may be ſanctified in the trueth. Ioh.17.20. wherefore it followeth as well by theſe arguments, that no one faithfull man can fall into error. The Paſtors and teachers ſo long as they follow the Apoſtles doctrine, may keepe the Church from error: but it is not gathered out of that place, Epheſ.4. that the paſtors, if they ſwarue from Gods word, cannot erre: But rather the contrarie; and therefore the Apoſtle addeth further, verſ.14. that we ſhould not be carried about with euerie winde of doctrine; but follow the truth in loue verſ.15. The Church then, ſo long as it followeth the truth, and is not carried with wind of doctrine, cannot erre.

Concerning Peter, Chriſt prayed for him that his faith ſhould not faile in that grieuous tentation, which he fell into. Secondly, he prayed not for him as gouernour of the Church, but as he prayeth for euery faithfull man, Ioh.17.23. Thirdly, for all this prayer Peter erred, Gal.2.

*Argum.*3. This argument was vſed in the Councell of Baſil: the Church is without ſpot and wrinckle, Epheſ.5.27. Ergo, without error, Fox. pag.672. ex Aenea Siluio.

We anſwere: firſt, S. Paul ſpeaketh there of a glorious Church, ſuch as it ſhall be in the kingdome of heauen, not of the Church, as it is vpon earth: ſo Reuel.7.14. The elders which ſate round about the throne, which are the Saints in heauen, were ſeene in long white robes, which they had waſhed white in the blood of the Lambe.

2 It followeth out of this place, that the Church is as well without ſinne, as free from error: which the diuines in the Councell did alſo grant. But ſeeing by their owne confeſſion euery member of the Church, being clothed in this mortall fleſh ſinneth, how can the Church be without ſinne? If the Church conſiſt of men, and all men are ſinners, how is the Church free? If all the parts and members be ſinnefull, how is not the whole alſo polluted with ſinne? If all the parts of the bodie be ſicke and diſeaſed, how can the whole be ſounde? The Church alſo is not aſhamed to confeſſe her ſelfe to be blacke, Can. 1. 5. ſhe ſhall be made beautifull and glorious without all ſpot and blemiſh in the kingdome of God: and euen now alſo is made righteous and iuſt before God through Chriſt, not becauſe ſhe hath no ſinne, but becauſe it is remitted: and although ſome errors and imperfections remaine, yet ſhall they be no hinderance to her ſaluation.

The Proteſtants.

THis queſtion, whether the Church may erre, muſt be vnderſtood with a double exception: firſt, that the vniuerſall Catholike Church of Chriſt erreth not, Caluin.inſtitut.lib.4.cap.8.ſec. 11. 12. But there is no viſible Church in the earth, which may not erre, as well in faith as in manners: this poſition was maintained by M. Bucer, in open diſputation at Cambridge, Fox pag. 1388. Secondly, the true Church of God may erre in ſome poynts not neceſſarie to ſaluation, but can not fall cleane away from God into any damnable error, Calu.ibid.Fulk.annot.in Epheſ. 5. verſ. 29. And in this ſenſe is the Church called, Religionis & fidei perpetua mater: A perpetuall mother and preſeruer of faith and religion, *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*5.*l.*14.Leo & Anthem. That the Church may erre as we ſay, we doe ſhew it thus: and by the Church, we vnderſtand the whole company and congregation, the paſtors with the people.

1 When our Sauiour Chriſt ſuffered, the Church erred in faith: Ergo, it may erre: the propoſition is thus proued. The Church was either in the Scribes and Phariſies, or els in the Apoſtles: but both of them erred: they in putting Chriſt to death; the other in their incredulitie, not beleeuing rightly in the reſurrection of Chriſt. Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the Phariſies were priuiledged not to erre, onely till the comming of Chriſt. We reply againe: firſt, after Chriſt was come they ſate in Moſes chaire, and Chriſt biddeth they ſhould be heard, Mat. 23. 2. If they erred not afore, neither could they now; for they were not diſplaced out of Moſes chaire: but the truth is, they neuer had any ſuch priuiledge not to erre. Secondly, the Maſter of Sentences ſeemeth herein to be of another opinion, who thus ſaith, anſwering to a certaine obiection, whether circumciſion ceaſed to be in force ſtraight after the inſtitution of Baptiſme: In Chriſti morte terminata eſſe legalia omnia: That all the legall rites were determined in Chriſts death, and from that time Circumciſion ceaſed, *lib.*3.*diſt.*3 K. If that all the Legals were in force till Chriſts death, then the Prieſthoode alſo: wherefore what priuiledge they had before, they held it till then. Thirdly, if the Phariſies were now prone to error, then by our aduerſaries owne confeſſion, they ceaſed to be the Church: Ergo, the Church was not now viſible, for in them it was not: and the Apoſtles fled from Chriſt, and ſhifted for themſelues: how could then the Church be viſible to the world?

Lib.3.de eccleſ.cap.17.

Secondly, the Ieſuite anſwereth concerning the Apoſtles. Firſt, the Apoſtles were not yet entred into their office and Biſhopricke, but only appoynted to it, and therefore they might erre. We reply againe: firſt, they were not onely appointed Apoſtles, but partly alreadie they had exerciſed their Apoſtleſhip: for they were ſent forth to preach the Goſpell, and had power and commiſſion to worke miracles, and heale diſeaſes, Matth. 10. How then is not the Ieſuite aſhamed to ſay, that they were not yet Paſtors nor Apoſtles? Secondly, if the Phariſies erred, and the Apoſtles erred, then all the world was in error: Ergo, by their ſaying at this inſtant there was no Church vpon the earth, which is a great abſurditie, for the Church erreth not, they ſay.

Thirdly, (ſaith the Ieſuite) the Apoſtles erred not in faith: they were reproued for not beleeuing the reſurrection: which beliefe becauſe they had not yet receiued, they could not looſe it. We reply. Firſt, though they had not erred in any materiall point; yet if there were any error at all in them, it is ſufficient for our purpoſe: that they erred it is manifeſt, for they fled away from Chriſt. Secondly, he excuſeth them for their infidelitie concerning the reſurrection, becauſe this faith they had not yet receiued. But had not Chriſt (I pray you) often inſtructed them of this matter? and if this were no ſuch error in them, then Chriſt was too ſharpe in reprouing them for their infidelitie. Thirdly, it appeareth, that they wholly were deceiued concerning the Meſſiah, Luk. 24. 21. the two Diſciples ſay, they truſted that it had been he that ſhould haue deliuered Iſrael: ſee then what weake anſweres theſe are: did theſe fellowes thinke that their gloſes ſhould not be examined? or that their dreames ſhould be taken for oracles?

Fourthly, ſome of the Papiſts affirme, that the true faith in the paſſion of Chriſt only remained in the virgin Maries breaſt: Alexand. Halenſ. Iohan. de turre cremat. If this be true, then is Bellarmines opinion falſe, that the Apoſtles at that time kept the faith. But it is moſt like that they are all deceiued, and that both Marie and the Apoſtles at that time were in great feare and doubt, and their faith ſhaken. That the Apoſtles wauered, we haue alreadie ſhewed: and yet there was greater cauſe, that they ſhould be ſtable in faith, who were alſo to be preachers of faith, then Marie who was a beleeuer onely, not an Apoſtle or preacher of the Goſpell.

Argum. 2. The Church of the Iewes erred before our Sauiour Chriſts comming: Ergo, the true Church may erre.

The propoſition is proued : In the time of the raigne of good kings, they did offer ſacrifice vpon hill altars, but onely to the Lord, which was an error. 2.King.12.3.14.4. The feaſt of the Paſſeouer was not kept ſo preciſely according to Gods word at any time before, no not in the raigne of the beſt kings, as it was in the 18. yeare of Ioſias raigne, 2.King.23.22. The feaſt of Tabernacles had not been ſo ſolemnly and truly kept from the daies of Ioſua, as it was in Nehemiahs time, Nehem.8.18. Ergo all this while the Church of the Iewes erred ſomewhat in the externall worſhip of God, Fulk. Eph.cap.5.Sect.4.

*Argum.*3. We reade of famous Churches that erred both in faith and manners after our Sauiour Chriſts comming in the fleſh, euen in the Apoſtles time : Ergo, the true Church may erre. The firſt part is thus proued : the Church of the Corinthians erred in manners : they went to law among heathen Iudges, chap.6. which was a generall fault among them : Is it ſo, that there is not a wiſe man among you ? verſ.5. They erred alſo in indgement. It will be anſwered, that the error, or hereſie rather, concerning the reſurrection was not generall : for the Apoſtle ſaith, How ſay ſome among you that there is no reſurrection of the dead? chap.15.verſ.13. But that error and abuſe in the receiuing of the Lords Supper ſeemeth to haue been more vniuerſally ſpred : Euery man (ſaith the Apoſtle) when they ſhould eate, taketh his own ſupper afore, and one is hungry, another is drunken, chap. 11.verſ.21. Euery man, ſaith he, that is, very many, yea and the moſt among them. The Church alſo of the Galathians, was (in no ſmall part thereof) infected with this error, that the ceremonies of the law ought neceſſarily to be kept together with the Goſpel: and therefore S, Paul vpbraideth in a manner the whole Church : O ye fooliſh Galathians, who hath bewitched you? &c. Chap. 3. 1. Ergo, theſe Churches, being notwithſtanding the Churches of Chriſt, erred.

Bellarmine anſwereth, confeſſing that theſe Churches had their errors (yea he is more liberall in granting this, then we would haue him) for hee ſlandereth the whole Church of Corinth, as though they denied generally the reſurrection of the dead, which they did not : S. Paul only chargeth ſome of them, that is, the falſe brethren, with this error, as it may appeare 1.Corinth chap.15. verſ.12.

Bellarmines laſt refuge therefore is this, that error may be in a particular Church, but not in the vniuerſall Catholike Church : *de eccleſ.lib.4.cap.2. argum.*3.

Anſwere : Firſt, thus Bellarmine himſelfe is conſtrained to vſe Caluines diſtinction which he miſliked before : who confeſſeth that a particular Church may fall into dangerous error, but not the vniuerſall, de eccleſ. lib.3.cap.14.princip. cap. Secondly, the Ieſuite hath granted, as much as we would deſire : for if euery particular Church be ſubiect to error, then the viſible Church is; for the viſible Churches muſt needes be particular : for vniuerſall things are not ſubiect to the ſenſe, but to the vnderſtanding : this then he hath granted, that a particular Church may erre, but the Italian, Spaniſh, French, and ſo of the reſt, are but particular Churches : Ergo, they may erre. Thus we haue the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, that particular viſible Churches may erre.

Auguſtine ſaith, Quomodo erit Eccleſia in iſto tempore, perfecta ſine macula & ruga, cuius membra non mendaciter confitentur ſe habere peccata? How can the Church be perfect in this life, without ſpot or wrinckle, whoſe members do truely confeſſe, that they are not without ſinne? Ergo, the Church ſinneth and is imperfect, and why not ſubiect to error? But in the Councell of Baſil it was denied, as ye haue heard, that the Church could ſinne.

Contr.2.Epiſt.
cap.7.

We haue their owne teſtimonies againſt them : as before for particular men, of their ſide, we haue heard the opinion of Alexander. Alenſ.3.par.quaeſ. vltim. artic. 2. and of Iohannes de turre cremata, lib. 1. *de eccleſ.c.*30. That at the paſſion of Chriſt the true faith onely remained with Marie : Hereupon it will follow, that the Church that then was, erred and failed in faith; vnleſſe they will ſay, that Marie onely was the Church.

But let vs heare the iudgement of their owne Church againſt them: decret. Gregor. lib.5.tit. 39. *c.*28. *Innocent.*3. Iudicium Dei veritati quæ nec fallit, nec fallitur, ſemper innititur; iudicium autem eccleſiæ nonnunquam opinionem ſequitur, quam & fallere ſæpe contingit, & falli, propter quod contingit interdum vt qui ligatus eſt apud Deum, ſit apud eccleſiam ſolutus, &c. The iudgement of God is grounded vpon the truth, which neither deceiueth, nor is deceiued; but the iudgement of the Church is many times ruled by opinion, which both may deceiue, and be deceiued : whereupon it ſometimes falleth out, that he, which is bound before God, is looſed with the Church ; and he that is free before God, is bound by the Church, &c. Beholde then a teſtimonie of one of your moſt learned Popes, that the Church may erre in iudgement. But it will be here anſwered, that he ſpeaketh of the diſcipline of the Church, not of doctrine. Anſw. But Bellarmine, to proue that the Church erreth not, obiecteth that place, Matth.18. dic Eccleſiæ, tell it to the Church : and he that heareth not the Church, let him be as an heathen and Publicane. But this were an hard matter, ſaith he, to bind men to heare the Church if it might erre: *Bellarm.c.*14. But this place is vnderſtoode altogether of diſcipline : wherefore his meaning is, that the Church cannot erre in the keyes : and in deede, ſo long as it followeth Gods word, it cannot, as our Sauiour ſaith, Whatſoeuer you binde in earth, ſhall be bound in Heauen: but otherwiſe it may erre in the keyes; ſo that ſometime, that which the Church bindeth in earth, may be looſed in Heauen: as Innocentius in this Canon confeſſeth.

Shall we now in the laſt place to this doctrine put to the ſeale of the holy witneſſes of Gods trueth: M. Bilney being demaunded, what he thought of the Church, whether it might erre or not: anſwered, that the Catholike Church can by no meanes erre in faith; for it is the whole congregation of the elect: otherwiſe he graunted not, Fox pag. 1000. articl.4. The like confeſſion made James Bainham Martyr, pag. 1028. But concerning the viſible Paſtors and teachers of the Church, we haue the ancient confeſſion of Walter Brute, who liued about two hundred yeares agoe, that they may all erre, and haue erred: yea Peter erred (ſaith he) Gal.2. and was therefore reproued of S. Paul, onely the Scriptures are priuiledged from erring, Fox pag.477.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER THE viſible Church may fayle vpon the earth.

The Papiſts.

17.Error. They holde that it is impoſſible that the viſible Church ſhould vtterly faile vpon the earth, and fall from God; but that there ſhall alwaies be a viſible and knowne Church vpon the earth, hauing a perpetuall ſucceſſion of Paſtors and Doctors, where the true worſhip of God ſhall be preſerued and kept, *Bellarm.lib.3. de Eccleſ.cap.*13.

*Argum.*1. Theſe and ſuch places of Scripture they ſtand vpon, Matth.16. The gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it. Matth.28. I will be with you to the end of the world. Pſalm.88. His throne ſhall be as the Sunne, and endure as the Moone: Ergo, the viſible Church ſhall not faile vpon earth, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere: that theſe places muſt be vnderſtood of the Catholike and vniuerſall Church, whereof we denie not, but euery true particular Church is a part. This Church is the ſpouſe of Chriſt, this Church ſhall not periſh, this is the kingdome of Chriſt, with this Church will he alway be preſent to the end of the world: we denie not but that the inuiſible Church ſhall continue vpon the earth ſo long as the world endureth. Secondly, thoſe places are vnproperly vnderſtood of the viſible Church, for therein are both good and bad: how then can that be the ſpouſe of Chriſt, where there are many infidels and wicked ones, which haue not eſpouſed themſelues vnto him? How can it be called his kingdome, whereas it is not of all acknowledged? But in the true Catholike Church all and euery one are eſpouſed to Chriſt: all and euery one haue the kingdome of God within them, as it is Luke 17.verſ.21.

*Argum.*2. They doe abuſe that place of S. Paul, Epheſ.4.11. He gaue ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and teachers, for the gathering together of the Saints: Ergo, the Church ſhall alwaies be viſible till all the Saints are gathered together, Bellarm.cap.13. Rhemiſt. Epheſ.4. Sect.5.

We anſwere: this place proueth that the Church hath neuer wanted Paſtors and teachers for the continuance of the trueth, neither ſhall euer be without them, as the Lord ſaid by the Prophet Eſay 59.verſ.21. My ſpirit which is vpon thee, and my words which I haue put into thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeed for euer. We therefore denie not but that in all ages, yea in the moſt ignorant times of Poperie, God raiſed vp faithfull teachers vnto his Church: although they were not mitred and croziard Biſhops, neither could ſhew any outward pompe or boaſt of any glorious ſucceſſion: Such were Guilielmus de S. Amore, Arnoldus de noua villa. anno 1240. Berengarius, Ioachim Abbas, in the time of Innocentius the 3. Wickleſ, Brute, Swinderby, Badby, and others about anno 1400. with many which were not knowne to the world: for the trueth neuer in any age wanted witneſſes.

By the continuance of the trueth and right faith we gather, that there haue been alwaies faithfull teachers, though not notorious to the world, and ſhall be: but who they were, and where they liued, what pompe, what authoritie they were of, it is not materiall to know: wherefore an outward viſible ſucceſſion of Biſhops and Paſtors is not neceſſarie for the continuance of the trueth: neither can it be concluded out of this place.

*Argum.*3. Thus they reaſon, there haue been alwayes ſome faithfull men, which haue outwardly profeſſed their faith: for if they diſſembled or cloaked their profeſſion, then were they not faithfull: Ergo, the Church hath been alwayes viſible, as in the time of perſecution, Bellarmin. ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, the Ieſuite doth cleane peruert and change the ſtate of the queſtion: for he defineth a viſible Church, to be multitudo congregata, in qua ſint prælati et ſubditi: a multitude or companie gathered together, where there are both Prelates and Biſhops, and people obedient vnto them. And now he giueth an inſtance of perſecution, wherein ſome faithfull Chriſtians may giue an outward profeſſion of their faith: where is now that multitude congregate together?

where is that iuriſdiction of Prelates? where is that viſible and glorious ſucceſſion? We denie not but that in time of perſecution the faithfull may be knowen to themſelues; and yet ſometime they are not: for in Iſrael there were ſeuen thouſand faithfull beſide Elias, yet he knewe none of them. But it followeth not, that therefore the Church is then viſible to the world, and notoriouſly knowen to men, as the Rhemiſts ſay, in Matth.5.Sect.3.& Act.11.Sect.3. Thus they flie manifeſtly from the queſtion.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that the Catholike vniuerſall Church, as it hath hitherto continued ſince the beginning of the world, ſo ſhall it endure to the end: the Lord ſhall neuer want vpon earth a companie of faithfull men, which ſhall truely ſerue him: though it be not neceſſarie, neither hath alwayes been ſeene, that they ſhould be in any one place. A viſible Church we define to be a congregation of men, amongſt whom the word is truely preached, and the Sacraments adminiſtred. Such a Church hath not alwayes been, neither can we be aſſured that it ſhall alway be found vpon the earth, wherein the worſhip of God publikely and viſibly is practiſed.

*Argum.*1. In the raigne of Ahaz King of Iuda there was no viſible Church, where the pure worſhip of God was practiſed; for both Iſrael vnder Pekah, and Iuda vnder Ahaz, fell to Idolatrie, and followed the cuſtome of the Gentiles, 2.King.16.3. yea Vriah the high Prieſt conſented with the King to ſet vp Idolatrie. Likewiſe in the dayes of Manaſſeh, who did euill after the abhomination of the heathen, 2.King.21.2. there was no place where God was publikely worſhipped: for Iuda was corrupted, Iſrael was carried away captiue: Ergo, there was a time when there was no viſible Church.

Bellarmine cannot here ſhift vs off with that anſwere, which he maketh to the obiection of Elias time: that he complayning of the ſmall number of the faithfull, meant of Iſrael onely: for at the ſame time, the true worſhip of God was exerciſed in Iudæa: to this we haue anſwered before, 1.quæſt.2.part. of this Controuerſie, in argum.proteſt.2.

The Ieſuite then hath another ſtarting hole: there is not the like reaſon betweene the Church of the Iſraelites then, and of Chriſtians now, for theirs was but a particular Church; and therefore though it failed with them, yet were there many faithfull among the heathen to be found, as Melchiſedech and Iob: but the Church of Chriſtians is an vniuerſall Church, &c. Bellarm.cap.16.reſp.ad argum.3.

Anſw. Firſt, I demaund of them, was not the Church of the Iewes then the Church of Chriſt, as the Church of Chriſtians is now? but the Church of Chriſt was alwaies Catholike: Ergo, ſo was that Church then: and though it were viſible onely then among the Iſraelites, yet all the faithfull in the world were members of the ſame Church, that the Iſraelites belonged vnto: Ergo, there is no ſuch difference betweene theſe Churches, as the Ieſuite ſuppoſeth. Secondly, what telleth he me of certaine beleeuers among the Gentiles? that is not the queſtion: for we doubt not but that the inuiſible Church of Chriſt hath been in all times and places: he ſhould haue proued, that there was another viſible Church to be found among the Gentiles, beſide that of the Iſraelites: which could not be, ſeeing that at Ieruſalem onely the ſacrifices were to be offered, and the law was onely and the Prophets among them, which then were the eſſentiall notes and markes of the Church. Thirdly, yet will the Ieſuite finde it an hard matter to finde any faithfull men at this time among the heathen, when there was none in Iſrael: In Melchiſedechs time, there was Abraham, and when Iob liued, there were many excellent men in Iſrael, if as ſome thinke, hee liued about the time of Moſes: but whom can he name now among the Gentiles, that were true worſhippers, when as all Iſrael and Iuda were giuen to idolatrie? We conclude then, that ſeeing we can aſſigne a time, when as the Church was not viſible among the circumciſed Iſraelites, and among the vncircumciſed it could not be, that there was a time when as the viſible Church fayled vpon earth: Auguſtine ſaith, Eccleſia Catholica, non ſolum poſt aduentum Domini & ſaluatoris noſtri prædicata eſt, ſed etiam ab initio mundi multis figuris & ſacramentis deſignata: The Catholike Church began not ſo to be called after the comming of our Lord and Sauiour Chriſt, but was from the beginning of the world by many figures and ſacraments deſcribed, ſerm. 217. Auguſtine here ſaith, that the Church before Chriſts comming was Catholica, Catholike or vniuerſall. Bellarmine ſaith, Eccleſia Iudæorum non erat vniuerſalis, The Church of the Iewes was not vniuerſall or Catholike. Out of Auguſtine I conclude thus, the Church of the Iewes before Chriſt was the Catholike and onely viſible Church of the world, but it ſometime failed: Ergo, the viſible Church may fayle vpon earth.

*Argum.*2. In the paſſion of our Sauiour there was no viſible Church, ſuch a Church wee ſtill meane, as where there are Prælati & ſubditi, paſtores & oues, Prelates and people, paſtors and ſheepe. We proue it thus:

The viſible Church was not amongſt the Phariſees and Prieſts, for they ſhamefully and wickedly erred, *Bellarm.*17. It was not amongſt the Apoſtles, for they alſo erred; therefore after the Papiſts opinion, they were not the Church: for the Church (ſay they) erreth not.

Secondly, he ſaith, they were yet but materiall parts, not formall, that is, not Biſhops or paſtors: how then could there bee a viſible Church, which was without the formall and principall parts, that is, Paſtors and Biſhops: Ergo, there was then no viſible Church.

3 When the abomination of deſolation ſhall ſtand in the temple, and there ſhall be a generall defection and apoſtaſie from the faith, then ſhall the viſible Church faile vpon earth. But the firſt is true, Matth. 24. 15. 2. Theſſ. 2. 3. Ergo.

To the firſt place the Ieſuite anſwereth, that it muſt bee vnderſtood of the deſtruction of the temple, chap. 16. But the Rhemiſts more liberall then ſo, affirme that it ſhall bee eſpecially accompliſhed in Antichriſts time, when as the ſacrifice of the Maſſe ſhall vtterly bee aboliſhed, Annot. in Mat 24. ver. 15.

To the next place concerning that defection and apoſtaſie, which S. Paul ſpeaketh of, firſt he ſaith, that it ſhall be a defection from the Romane Empire: but the Rhemiſts ſay, it ſhall bee a defection from moſt points of Chriſtian religion. Secondly, the Ieſuite anſwereth, that though it be a defection from the Romane faith, yet it ſhall not be generall but particular. But the Rhemiſts better aduiſed graunt it ſhall be a reuolt of kingdomes, peoples, prouinces: and the publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the Church of Rome ſhall ceaſe; they ſhall only communicate with it in heart, Annot. in 2. Theſſ. 2. ſect. 6.

Now out of their owne words we conclude: there ſhall be a time when as the publike ſeruice of God ſhall ceaſe, there ſhall be deſolation in the Churches and temples of Chriſtians: there ſhall bee then no publike entercourſe with the Church, but a priuate communicating in heart: Ergo, there ſhall be a time when there ſhall be no outward viſible Church notoriouſly and famouſly knowne: Ergo, our aduerſaries are in an error, and are condemned by their owne mouth.

In the laſt place let vs ſee how this doctrine hath been ſealed: Maſter Philpot that bleſſed martyr, by that place of S. Paul, 2. Theſſ. chap. 2. verſ. 3. Chriſt ſhall not come, except there be a departing firſt, ſheweth, that there ſhould bee an vniuerſall departing from the faith, for ſo the word ἀποστασία, properly ſignifieth, and we call him apoſtata that forſaketh the faith: in which ſenſe the word is vſed, 1. Timoth. chap. 4. verſ. 1. When this vniuerſal departing from the faith fell out in the world, which came to paſſe when Antichriſt was reuealed, and the man of ſinne diſcloſed, as the Apoſtle there ſaith: what was then become of the viſible Church? I thinke it failed when the profeſſion of the faith failed.

Fox pag. 1801. Examin. 4.

Let vs ſee antiquitie for this matter: The Emperour Conſtance, who fauoured the Arrians, thus tauntingly ſaid to Liberius Biſhop of Rome: Quota pars es orbis terrarum, quòd ſolus vindicas hominem nefandiſſimum? I pray thee how many parts of the world art thou, that thou dareſt alone ſuccour this naughtie man? meaning Athanaſius. Liberius anſwereth: Non eò quòd ſum ſolus fidei cauſa minuitur, nam & antiquitùs tres ſoli reperti ſunt reſiſtentes præcepto regis: The cauſe of faith is not therefore impaired becauſe I am alone, for ſometimes there were onely three found, which reſiſted the Kings wicked commandement, Dan. 3. When the true worſhip of God was only found amongſt three perſons, it is apparant that the viſible Church of God failed vpon earth. Thus haue we an authoritie of one of the Biſhops of Rome againſt them.

Theodor. lib. 2 cap. 16.

THE THIRD QVESTION: OF THE NOTES and markes, whereby the true Church may be diſcerned and knowne.

FIRST OF THE FALSE AND ERRONIOUS NOTES OF THE CHURCH.

OVr aduerſaries doe deuiſe many notes, whereby their Church is deſcried, as Bellarmine reckoneth vp fifteene in order, too many (certaine) to bee found in a good Church: but there are ſixe principall which they doe moſt ſtand vpon; Antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, ſucceſſion, vnitie, the power of miracles, the gift of propheſie. We will firſt touch theſe in order, and then come to ſpeake of the true and infallible notes of the Church.

Of Antiquitie. Note 1.

18. Error. THe Papiſts make great bragges of the long continuance of their Church: yea, that they can ſhew the deſcent of their Church from Adam, Rhemiſt. annot. in Act. 28. ſect. 5. But (alacke) ſillie men, they muſt come ſhort of our Sauiour Chriſt and the Apoſtles time, by fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres, for the moſt of the opinions which they now hold. Let vs examine their reaſons.

In any great change of religion (ſay they) the authors of the ſect, the time when it began, the perſons that oppugned it may be knowne: but no ſuch thing can bee ſhewed of our Church (ſay they) as we can ſhew of yours: we can tell them the yeere, the places, and ringleaders of their reuolt, ſay our Engliſh Rhemiſts, Annot.in 1.*Iohan.*2.*ſect.*9.*Bellar.lib.*4.*de Eccleſ.cap.*5.

We anſwere: firſt, no marueile if Papiſtrie herein doe much differ from other hereſies: they, as the hereſies of the Arrians, Pelagians, Donatiſts, becauſe they were not long to continue, ſuddenly brake out, and ſuddenly againe were extinguiſhed: But Papiſtrie, being the prop and pillar of Antichriſts kingdome, by whom the world muſt bee deluded many yeeres, was at the beginning to worke cloſely and ſecretly, not breaking out at once into open impietie and blaſphemie, but vnder pretence of holineſſe to ſet abroch her deadly poyſon: therefore S. Paul calleth it a myſterie of iniquitie, which began euen to worke in his daies, 2. Theſſ. 2. 7. And ſo ſaith S. Hierome; Nunc quoque myſterium iniquitatis operatur, & garrit vnuſquiſque, quod ſentit: Euen now the myſterie of iniquitie beginneth to worke, and euery man doth vtter his owne fancies.

Aduerſus Pelag. dialog. 1.

And whereas you alleage, that the authors of euery hereſie may be aſſigned, which cannot bee ſhewed, you ſay, of your profeſſion: S. Bernard would haue told you otherwiſe, if you had conſulted with him: for thus he writeth of the heretikes called Apoſtolici: Quære ab his ſuæ ſectæ authorem, neminem dabunt: Aske of them the author of their ſect, they can name none: which hereſie had not it proper author from amongſt men, as the Manichees had Manes, the Sabellians Sabellius, the Arrians Arrius, &c. But with what name will you call this hereſie? ſurely with none: non eſt ab homine illorum hæreſis, their hereſie is not of men, &c. yet is it not by reuelation, ſed per immiſſionem & fraudem dæmoniorum, but by the fraud and deceit of the diuell. Thus farre Bernard. Thus we ſee, that the heretikes called Apoſtolicall, could name no author of their ſect, yet were they heretikes: ſo the Papiſts, that haue ſo much in their mouthes, the See Apoſtolike, Apoſtolical men, Apoſtolicall traditions, &c. and ſo ſhew themſelues to be the Apoſtolici of theſe daies: though the authors of their ſuperſtitions lay hid, yet this were not ſufficient to cleere them of hereſie.

Serm. 66. in Cantic.

Secondly, we alſo anſwere, that all theſe things, the authors of their ſects, the time, the perſons that withſtood them, may manifeſtly be detected: firſt, concerning the time, we haue a manifeſt propheſie, Apocal. 20. that Sathan ſhould bee bound a thouſand yeeres, and afterward let looſe: when no doubt Antichriſt ſhould begin to ſhew himſelfe to the world. Concerning this ſpace of a thouſand yeeres, there are two probable opinions: ſome thinke they are to begin immediatly after our Sauiour Chriſts time, and ſo counting a thouſand yeeres, all which time Sathan muſt be bound; then Antichriſt ſhould begin to appeare. Thus Iohn Wickliffe expoundeth it. Others ſay, the thouſand yeeres ought to begin after the three hundred yeeres expired of perſecution: for all that while it is moſt like Sathan was let looſe, when he raged with open mouth like a Lion againſt the Church and Saints of God. Of this opinion was Walter Brute ſomewhat after Wickliffes time: who by this meanes maketh the propheſie of Daniel of 1290. daies, and that in the Apocal. 12. of 1260. daies, to agree with the thouſand yeeres of Sathans binding (a few yeeres excepted, which in the computation of hundreds and thouſands make no great oddes:) for taking euery day for a yeere, we ſhall come to 1290. yeeres after Chriſt: when the thouſand yeeres muſt be expired, beginning from the three hundred yeeres of perſecution. If wee count the thouſand yeeres from Chriſt, wee ſhall come to the time of Hildebrand, called Gregorie the 7. who was Pope of Rome a thouſand yeres after Chriſt and vpward: by whom the mariage of Miniſters is thought firſt to haue been forbidden. If we begin after the ceaſing of perſecution, which continued three hundred yeeres, we ſhall fall into the yeere 1300. about the time of Iohn Wickliffe, when the great rabble of Monkes and Friers began to ſwarme, and ſuperſtition to increaſe.

Fox pag. 426.

Fox pag. 101.

But we will take a little paine briefly to touch the authors of many ſuperſtitions in Poperie, and of their erronious and hereticall opinions. Anno 420. Zoſimus Biſhop of Rome did chalenge a prerogatiue aboue other Churches, that it might be lawfull to make appeales from other Churches to that See: and to ſet the better colour vpon it, he falſely alleaged a decree of the Nicene Councell, but there was no ſuch thing found there: wherefore it was decreed in the Councell of Carthage at that time, that none ſhould appeale ouer the ſeas to Rome.

Boniface the 3. purchaſed of the wicked Emperour Phocas the title of vniuerſall Biſhop. Tranſubſtantiation was firſt concluded againſt Berengarius, anno 1062. vnder Leo the 9. but not publikely enacted before anno 1216. vnder Innocentius the 3. The Dominicke Friers brought in the ſame time, and their ſect eſtabliſhed by Innocentius the 3. Auricular confeſſion alſo was brought in anno 1215. vnder the ſame Pope.

Fox Martyrol. pag. 1147.

Teleſphorus brought in the Lenton faſt. Calixtus inſtituted the foure Ember faſts in the yeere: Hyginus brought in Chriſme. We can alſo ſhew by whom euery piece of their blaſphemous Maſſe hath been patched together: Mariage was firſt prohibited by Nicholas the ſecond, Alexander the ſecond, Gregorie the ſeuenth, about the yeere 1070. The Communion in one kinde forged and inuented, and decreed in the Councell of Conſtance, not aboue two hundred yeeres agoe. By theſe few examples it may appeare that it is falſe which the Ieſuite ſaith, that the authors of their ſects and hereſies cannot be ſhewed.

Kemnit. exam. ſeſſ. 4.

Now wee will briefly declare what oppugners and gainſayers they haue had in all ages, ſince their groſſeſt opinions began to bee receiued: Such were Bertramus and Berengarius about Pope Hildebrands time, that mightily impugned the groſſe opinion of Tranſubſtantiation, Robertus Gallus 1291. Robert Groſthead Biſhop of Lincolne, who was called malleus Romanorum, the mallet or hammer of the Romanes, anno 1250. Franciſcus Petrarcha 1350. Iohannes de Rupe ſciſſa, who prophecied againſt the Pope 1340. with many other, which ceaſed not to crie out againſt the abominable vices and erronious opinions of the Church of Rome. Wherefore it is a great vntrueth, which the Ieſuite doth ſo ſtifly auouch, that we cannot ſet down the pedegree and deſcent of their Church and faith, and how it hath continually been reſiſted.

Fox. præfat.

3 Now whereas they ſay, that they can name the ringleaders of our ſect: we haue none other maſters and authors of our faith, then our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, by whoſe holy writings wee refuſe not to bee tried. But you flie from the light, you diſgrace the Scriptures, making them imperfect, and inſufficient: this the true Diſciples of Chriſt would not doe: you are the Diſciples of Chriſt, as the Phariſees bragged that they were the Diſciples of Moſes. And as then the true Church was not in thoſe that ſate in Moſes chaire, though they could alleage great antiquitie, but in Chriſt and his Apoſtles: ſo is not now the true Church to be diſcerned, by cuſtome or number of yeeres, but by that trueth which was taught and preached by our bleſſed Sauiour, and his Apoſtles. Auguſtine alſo ſaith, Poſſunt etiam latrones & adulteri pro ſe antiquitatem adferre: Theeues and adulterers can alſo alleage antiquitie for themſelues, quaſt. ex veter. teſtam. 114. Antiquitie therefore is not a perpetuall note of the Church.

Here Bellarmine, whereas wee alleage, that our Church is moſt ancient euen from the Apoſtles time, though it hath a long time been hid, and not been notoriouſly knowne in the world, as the malignant Church hath been; doth thus replie againſt vs: That if the true Church of Chriſt hath been ſo many yeeres buried in ſilence, it ſhould bee [illegible] more miſerable caſe, then the people of the Iewes, which haue had alwaies their Synagogues: and where is then that glorie of the Church of Chriſt ſpoken of by the Prophets? Bellar. lib. 4 de Eccleſ. cap. 5. in fine.

Anſw. 1. As for the Iewes, though their name and nation yet remaineth, yet they are a people ignominious through the face of the earth, and as vagabonds doe wander from one nation to an other, and therefore are not to be compared to the Church of Chriſt, which though it were in the firſt times obſcured in the cruell perſecutions of the Emperours, and ſince defaced through the ambition of the Biſhops of Rome, yet hath been ſince Chriſts time, for many yeres a glorious and flouriſhing Church throughout the world. 2. Concerning the glorie of Chriſts Church, foretold by the Prophets, it was rather ſpirituall in the propagation of the faith, and preaching of Chriſt to the Gentiles, 1. Timoth. 3. 16. then temporall in the outward glittering ſhew: and yet the Church alſo was outwardly glorious from the time of Conſtantine for many hundred yeeres after. The ſpirituall beautie of the Church hath and ſhall continue to the end of the world: the temporall glorie it alwaies enioyed not, as in the perſecutions vnder the Romane Emperours, and ſince vnder the Italian Biſhops; though in the middeſt of the hot perſecutions both then and ſince the true members of Chriſt ſhewed themſelues; as partly I haue touched before, in the ſecond part of this anſwere to their note of antiquitie, that for the ſpace of theſe fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres, there haue not wanted ſome of our Church, that haue taſted of their perſecutions.

But ſaith Bellarmine againe, moſt of your Euangelicall Doctors came out of our Church, as Luther confeſſeth himſelfe that he had been a Monke. Anſ. 1. And from whence, I pray you, ſprang our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles? came they not of the Iewes? and were not his Apoſtles taken out of the Iewiſh Church, that was then ſo corrupted in religion? 2. As vnder the gouernment of the high Prieſts and Scribes, there were notwithſtanding many deuout men, that expected the comming of the Meſſia, as Zacharie, and Simeon: ſo wee doubt not, but that in Poperie there were many, and ſome of them Monkes, that had a taſte of the Goſpell, and loathed the corruptions of the Romiſh Church.

But concerning this note of antiquitie, that it is no ſufficient mark of the Church, we can vrge them with both their lawes. Iuſt. Cod. lib. 8. tit. 55. l. 2. Conſtantin. Conſuetudo non valet, quæ rationem vincit non legem: That cuſtome or antiquitie is of no worth, which goeth againſt reaſon or law. But ſuch is your antiquitie againſt the law of the word of God. Ergo.

Secondly, out of your owne law, Decr. p. 1. d. 8. cap. 4. Veritate manifeſtata, cedat conſuetudo veritati: After the trueth is manifeſted, let cuſtome giue place to the trueth. Cap. 5. Gregorius 1. Chriſtus dixit, Ego ſum veritas, non conſuetudo: Chriſt ſaid, I am the trueth, not the cuſtome. Cap. 8. Conſuetudo ſine veritate, vetuſtas eſt erroris: Cuſtome without trueth, is the oldnes of error. Likewiſe, Decret. Gregor. lib. 1. tit. 4. cap. 11. Conſuetudo non derogat iuri diuino: Cuſtome doth not preuaile againſt the diuine law.

By all theſe decrees it is manifeſt, that cuſtome and antiquitie vnleſſe it bee propped vp with trueth, and agreeable to the law of God, is of no force. Such antiquitie vnleſſe you can ſhew for your Church, as wee are ſure you cannot, you are able to ſay iuſt nothing.

Laſtly, let them ſpeake that haue ſealed this doctrine with their blood: firſt, Maſter Philpot denieth that trueth ought to be meaſured by antiquitie: Ex diuinis nulla occurrit præſcriptio: Preſcription hath no place in matters belonging to God, pag. 1805. exam. 5.

Maſter Bradford alſo ſaith, that theſe three notes of the Popes Church, vnitie, antiquitie, conſent, may as well be in the diuels Church as in Gods Church: as for example, the idolatrie of the Iſraelites had them all three, pag. 1622. col. 1.

Secondly, the ſame bleſſed martyr Philpot plainly auoucheth, that his religion was older then the Papiſts by a thouſand yeeres, pag. 1821. exam. 11.

Roger Holland martyr, thus alſo with great boldnes proteſted: The antiquitie of our Church is not from Pope Nicholas, or Pope Ioane; but euen from the beginning from the time that God ſayd to Adam; The ſeede of the woman ſhall breake the Serpents head. Moreouer of our Church haue been the Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, Martyrs, and confeſſors of Chriſt, that haue been at all times, and in all ages perſecuted for the teſtimonie of the word of God. But for the vpholding of your Church, what antiquitie can ye ſhew? your idolatrous Maſſe is not yet 400. yeere old, and ſome of your Maſſes are younger, as that Maſſe of S. Thomas the traitor: hac Roger Holland. p. 2040.

Of Vniuerſalitie. Note 2.

OVr Church is vniuerſall, ſay they, both in reſpect of time, perſon, and place; it hath alwaies been in the world, in all countries and nations it hath floriſhed: Ergo, it is the true Church. 19. Error.

That it is vniuerſall, they firſt proue by the name of Catholike, which is, ſay they, by Gods prouidence appropriate to them, which name they affirme without ground to haue been impoſed by the Apoſtles vpon true beleeuers, Rhem. in Act. cap. 11. ſect. 4. Bellar. lib. 4. de Eccleſ. cap. 4.

We anſwere: firſt, the name of Chriſtians is a more honourable title then the name of Catholikes: for it is manifeſt, Act. 11. 26. that this name was vſed in the Apoſtles time, and by the Apoſtles themſelues allowed: but it is not certaine that the name Catholike came from the Apoſtles. Againe, many heretikes chalenged this name to be called Catholikes, who did not ſo eaſily obtaine to bee called Chriſtians: as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 8. leg. 6. Theod. Gratian. It is decreed, that the Neſtorian heretikes, non abutantur nomine Chriſtianorum, ſhould not abuſe the name of Chriſtians: the law ſaith not Catholikes. But this ancient and honourable name the Papiſts doe deſpiſe: for in Italie and at Rome it is vſed as a name of reproch, to ſignifie a dolt or a foole, Fulk. in Act. 11. 26.

2 We ſay that you doe vſurpe this name, as the Donatiſts in Auguſtines time would be called Catholikes: for what is the name of Catholike, without the Catholike doctrine? They are the true Catholikes that profeſſe the ancient and Apoſtolike faith: to vs therefore, bee it knowne to you, this name of better right appertaineth, then to you (ô ye Papiſts:) yet we haue better arguments to proue our Church by, then by ſillables and titles: Quaſi nos (ſaith Auguſtine) huius nominis Epiſt. 48. teſtimonio nitamur ad demonſtrandam Eccleſiam, & non promiſſis Dei: As though we (ſaith he) doe leane vpon this name to proue our Church by, and not rather vpon the promiſes of God. And S. Hierome ſaith, lib. 3. aduerſ. Pelag. Quid ſi te alius Catholicum dixerit, ſtatimne aſſenſum tribuam? ſtultiſſimum eſt, ſuper fide mea, ex alterius pendere iudicio: What if another man call thee Catholike, ſhall I giue conſent? it is a moſt fooliſh point concerning my faith to depend of another mans iudgement. So I ſay, it is a vaine thing for them to proue their faith, by the calling and naming of others.

Now then, although wee much force not of this name, that heretikes alſo haue chalenged to themſelues: yet this title as it was firſt taken, doth alſo appertaine to vs: for the Imperiall law ſaith vs, which was made by Theodoſ. Gratian. Valentinian. &c. that they which hold the equalitie of the Trinitie, ſhould bee called Catholike Chriſtians, Iubemus amplecti Chriſtianorum Catholicorum nomen: We will haue them called Chriſtian Catholikes, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. l. 1. But I truſt our aduerſaries cannot ſay, but that wee beleeue concerning the Trinitie as ſoundly as they themſelues. Therefore we alſo doe make chalenge of right to this title.

Secondly, they proue their vniuerſalitie, by the multitude of people that haue receiued the Romiſh faith: and their Church (ſay they) hath repleniſhed the greateſt part of the world. They would prooue this by the propagation of the Church, in the Apoſtles time, in Tertullian, Irenaus, Hierome, Auguſtine, yea and afterward in Gregories daies: yea and now alſo beſides many great countries in Europe, they haue of their Church in India, America, and the vnknowne parts of the world, Bellarm. cap. 7. nota. 4.

We anſwere: firſt, the trueth is not alwaies to be meaſured by the iudgement or opinion of the multitude: Follow not a multitude, ſaith the Scripture, to doe euill: the greateſt part is not the beſt: Chriſt calleth his flocke puſillum gregem, a little flocke: Feare not little flocke (ſaith he): Saint Hierome ſaith, Multitudo ſociorum nequaquam te Catholicum, ſed hæreticum eſſe monſtrabit: The multitude of your fellowes doth not therefore prooue you a Catholike, but rather an heretike, lib.3. aduerſ.Pelagian. And S. Auguſtine: Non omnes hæretici per totam faciem terræ, ſed tamen hæretici per totam faciem terræ, alij hïc, alij ibi: All heretikes are not diſperſed ouer the face of the earth, yet heretikes are, ſome here, ſome there, Homil.de paſtorib. Thus we ſee that heretikes may as well ſtand vpon vniuerſalitie, as Catholikes.

The like alſo hath the Ciuill law, *Cod.lib.*1.*titul.*20.*l.*1.Iuſtinian. Neque ex multitudine authorum, quod melius æquiuſque eſt, iudicatote, cum poſſit vnius forſan, & deterioris ſententia, & multos & maiores aliqua in parte ſuperare: Neither by the multitude of authors iudge ye what ſtandeth beſt with equitie, when as perhaps the ſentence of one that is inferiour, may in ſome reſpect goe beyond the greater and higher ſort. As then equitie in Ciuill cauſes goeth not by multitude, ſo neither veritie in diuine.

Heare alſo one of your owne Popes teſtimonie, Nicholaus 1.ad Michael.Imperator. Numerus puſillus non obeſt, vbi abundat pietas; nec multiplex prodeſt, vbi abundat impietas: nolite igitur gloriari in multitudine, quia non multitudo, ſed cauſa, damnationem, vel iuſtificationem adducit: A mall company hindereth not, where pietie aboundeth, neither doth a great companie further, where impietie aboundeth; glorie not therefore in multitude, for not the multitude, but the cauſe iuſtifieth or condemneth.

Secondly, you haue nothing to doe with the Church which was propagated in the Apoſtles time, nor for the ſpace of fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres after Chriſt: it was not your Church, for the moſt of your hereſies are more lately ſprung vp then ſo. And you neede not bragge of your vniuerſalitie now: for the Turke (I trow) hath a larger dominion then the Pope, and Mahometiſme is as largely ſpred as Papiſtrie, and further too. And for Europe, I hope you need not make your boaſt: the Pope had neuer leſſe iuriſdiction then he hath now, and I truſt euery day ſhall haue leſſe. But many (you ſay) in the new found countries haue been conuerted to your religion. Indeede, if you had had grace, ſuch an oportunitie being offered as the Spaniards had, you might haue wonne that ſimple people to Chriſt. But you thirſted more for their gold, then for their ſoules health: it is notoriouſly knowne to the world what extreame crueltie hath been wrought vpon that innocent people. Was that a Catholike part of the Spaniards to keepe dogs of purpoſe, to woarie and deſtroy the inhabitants, to vſe them as horſe and beaſts, to plough, to carrie, to digge? Thus by your crueltie, there were out of one ſmall Iland called Hiſpaniola, which was well peopled and inhabited, deſtroyed and rooted out in ſhort time, two millions of men and women: the ſtorie of Benzo an Italian, is abroad to bee ſeene of this matter: you haue none or few of your Popiſh Catholikes in thoſe countries, but of your owne brood that haue been ſent thither. But enough of this.

3 We nothing doubt, but that our faith, the truth of the Goſpel hath been long ſince knowne and publiſhed to the whole world.

Thoſe two conditions, which the Ieſuite putteth in, to make the Church vniuerſall, do helpe vs very well: the firſt is, that it is not neceſſarie, that all countries wholly ſhould profeſſe the Chriſtian faith; but it ſufficeth, if there bee ſome of the Church in euery countrie. The ſecond, it is not requiſite, that this vniuerſalitie of the Church ſhould be all at one time: but if it be done ſucceſſiuè, that is, in diuers ages, one countrie to be ioyned to the Church after another, it is enough.

Now keeping theſe two conditions, we ſhall eaſily proue our Church to be vniuerſall: for there are no countries in Europe, and few in the whole world, wherein there are not ſome of our faith, namely, that abhorre worſhipping of Images, doe onely hope to be ſaued by faith in Chriſt without merit, and beleeue in the reſt, as we doe. And againe, taking one age after another, we ſhall eaſily make it good, that our faith at times hath ſpred it ſelfe ouer the whole world.

Now let vs ſet to the ſeale of this our anſwere, the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs.

Bl. Philpot firſt denieth that vniuerſalitie, vnleſſe it be ioyned with veritie, is a ſufficient note of the Church, Fox pag. 1825. For the Church of God hath not for the moſt part the greateſt multitude, for it is the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction, and many there be that find it, ſic Richard Woodman Martyr.pag.1996.col.1.

Secondly, Maſter Philpot denieth that vniuerſalitie is a note of the Romiſh Church: for the faith which that See now maintaineth, hath not conſent of all nations, neither euer had: for the Greeke Church, and a good part of Chriſtendome beſide, neuer receiued their ſeruice in an vnknowen tongue, neither yet your Tranſſubſtantiation, your receiuing alone, your purgatorie, your Images: ſic Roger Holland Martyr.pag.2040.

Thirdly, ſaith M. Bradford, our Church is rather to be counted vniuerſall, though it were but in tenne perſons, becauſe it agreeth with the faith which the Apoſtles vniuerſally did plant: for Chriſts Church is not ſo much called Catholike, becauſe it is vniuerſally ſpred ouer all nations, for ſo was it not in the Apoſtles time, but becauſe the doctrine which they had receiued of Chriſt, was perfect,and appoynted to be preached to all the world. So ſaith Auguſtine, Eccleſia ideo dicitur Catholica,quia vniuerſaliter perfecta eſt,& in nullo claudicat: The Church is called Catholike, becauſe the doctrine thereof is vniuerſally perfect,and faileth not in any point, *lib.de Geneſ.cap.*1. Sic Philpot Fox pag. 1825.

The third Note, of ſucceſsion.

THey make great boaſt of the long and perpetuall ſucceſſion of their Popes from the Apoſtles for the ſpace of theſe 1500. yeares and more: condemning all Churches which cannot ſhew the like order of ſucceſſion, *Bellarm.cap.*8. *Rhemiſt. annot.in Epheſ.verſ.*13. And further,ſaith Bellarmine,there are two things requiſite in lawfull Paſtors and Biſhops,ſucceſſion,and ordination: for firſt they muſt ſucceede either immediatly ſome Apoſtle, as Clemens did Peter; or ſome conſecrated by the Apoſtles,as Ignatius ſucceeded Euodius,whom Peter made a Biſhop; or muſt be conſecrated by him that hath the Apoſtolike authoritie: but ſuch ſucceſſion, you can ſhew none in your Church,either from Apoſtle,or Apoſtolike men. 20. Error.

Secondly, ordination is requiſite in a lawfull Biſhop, that he bee ordained of three Biſhops, which were ordained of others,and they of others before them,til they come to the Apoſtles:thus Iacob was ordained Biſhop at Ieruſalem by Peter, Iames and *Iohn: Anacletus epiſt.*2. according to the firſt canon of the Apoſtles: neither can you ſhew ſuch ordination of your Biſhops: Ergo, you haue no true Paſtors,nor lawfull Biſhops,and ſo conſequently no Church,*Bellar.cap.*8.

Anſw. Firſt,as touching ordination, then concerning ſucceſſion. 1. That there ought to bee in euery Church a ſeemely ordination and conſecration of the Biſhops, Paſtors, and Miniſters, and that according to the example and rule of the Apoſtles, wee denie not; and ſuch wee doubt not,but our Church hath. But ſuch ordination,as the Ieſuite requireth, is not neceſſarie, that euery lawfull Biſhop muſt prooue his ordination by three other ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles time: as thus it is ſhewed. Firſt,if you will credit S.Hierome,he ſaith, Olim idem erat preſbyter & epiſcopus: In the beginning,a Biſhop and Prieſt were all one: and before that ſchiſmes entered into the Church,communi preſbyterorum concilio eccleſiæ gubernabantur,the Churches were gouerned in common by the whole presbyterie: Which ſentence of his is allowed in your owne canons,*Decret.par.*1.*diſt.*95.*cap.*5. If it bee thus,that this diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts was not brought in in the Apoſtles time, but afterward;then can no ſuch ordination be ſhewed from the Apoſtles time. Secondly,notwithſtanding the Canon which goeth vnder the name of the Apoſtles, it ſeemeth the practiſe of the Apoſtles, and of the Church was otherwiſe a long time: for Timothie,whom you hold to haue been a Biſhop, was ordained by the impoſition of the hands of the whole presbyterie or eldership,which was not the aſſemblie of Biſhops only, as Bellarmine would 1.Tim.4.14. expound it,but of other paſtors alſo,as Hierome doth interprete it,epiſt.ad Euagrium: and the Rhemiſts alſo in the ſame ſenſe tranſlate it,the prieſthood,and in their annotations ſhew the ancient practiſe of the Church agreeable to this place of S.Paul,when as the reſt of the Prieſthood lay on their hands together with the Biſhop. And your owne Canons to this purpoſe approoue the ſentence of S.Hierome: Senatum Romani habebant, cuius conſilio cuncta agebant,& nos habemus ſenatum noſtrum cœtum preſbyterorum: The Romanes had their Senate,by whoſe counſaile they did all things,and we haue our Senate the companie of Presbyters,*Decret.part.*2.*cauſ.*16.*cap.*7. And S.Ambroſe thus writeth plainly: Non per omnia conueniunt ſcripta Apoſtoli ordinationi, quæ nunc eſt in eccleſia: The writings of the Apoſtle doe not in euery point anſwere the ordination now vſed in the Church, in 4.ad Epheſ. How then is the Ieſuite able to prooue their manner of ordination from the Apoſtles time? The practiſe alſo of their owne Church is contrarie: as Decr.par 1.*d.*65. *cap.*2. Martinus thus decreeth: That at the ordination of a Biſhop,adeſſe oportet omnes, qui ſunt in prouincia ſacerdotes, all the other Biſhops of the prouince muſt bee preſent, whom the Metropolitane muſt ſummon by his letters: and if all come together it is well;but if this cannot be,yet moſt of thē muſt come: but they that cannot come, muſt be preſent by their letters,that ſo the Biſhop may bee ordained, omnium facto conſenſu, by a generall conſent of all. And then he concludeth thus: Si aliter factum fuerit,&c. But if it be done otherwiſe,then I haue preſcribed,ſuch ordination is of no force. Likewiſe,*diſtin.*66.1. Anicetus: Archiepiſcopus ab omnibus ſuæ prouinciæ Epiſcopis ordinetur: An Archbiſhop muſt bee ordained of all the Biſhops in the prouince. By theſe Canons a preſence of more then three Biſhops is required. Thirdly, whereas the Ieſuite ſaith,that Iames after this manner was conſecrated by three, Peter, Iames and Iohn, out of Anacletus, he ſpeaketh he knoweth not what,and is too much confident vpon his counterfeit Anacletus: for this Iames the Apoſtle named in the 2.to the Galathians with Peter and Iohn,is the ſame which was Biſhop of Ieruſalem: for the other Iames was ſlaine long before by Herod, Act. 12. and this the Ieſuite elſwhere confeſſeth, *lib.*1.*de Roman.pontifice cap.*18. but now he bringeth in a third Iames to be Biſhop of Ieruſalem. And if Iames muſt needes be ordained by three,how commeth it to paſſe, that S.Peter,againſt the Canon of the Apoſtles,himſelfe alone appointed Clement his ſucceſſor,ſaying thus, Clementem hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino? I ordaine Clement your Biſhop? Decr.par.2.cauſ.8.quaſt.1.cap.2. If it bee anſwered, Peter was an Apoſtle, and more then a Biſhop, and therefore might ordaine alone; why then did he not as well alone ordaine Iames Biſhop of Ieruſalem? vnleſſe you will ſay that it was the chiefe Biſhopricke, and therefore required the preſence of more Apoſtles. This vnleſſe you will ſay, you can ſhew no reaſon of Peters ſole ordaining Clement.

Fourthly, whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that as in the old law the Prieſthood went by carnall generation and lineall deſcent from Aaron; ſo in the new it muſt be deriued by ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles. We anſwere: firſt, that our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles could ſhew no lineall deſcent from Aaron, neither had their ordination from his ſucceſſors; and yet were the true paſtors of the Church. Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt began a new Prieſthood after the order of Melchiſedech, and therefore he was not tied to the lineall deſcent: but from Chriſt and his Apoſtles a ſucceſſion muſt now neceſſarily be ſhewed. Contra. To grant this difference for this time, though indeed Chriſt came not to diſſolue Moſes law, but to fulfill it; yet this wee ſay further, that both before Chriſt there were true paſtors and Prophets, which were not ordained by the Prieſts of Aaron; and ſince Chriſt, that receiued not their ordination ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles. Firſt in the old law, when the ordinarie Prieſthood was corrupted, God raiſed vp Prophets from other tribes, that receiued not from the Prieſts their ordination and allowance; ſuch an one was Amos, who was among the heardſmen, and as Hierome ſaith, Ruborum mora diſtringens ſubitò propheta effectus: was made a Prophet as he gathered wilde blackberries. After the ſame manner, in the corrupt times of the Goſpell, the Lord hath raiſed vp faithfull Miniſters to his Church, that could ſhew no ſucceſſion from the degenerated Clergie. Againe, ſince our Sauiour Chriſt S. Paul was appoynted an Apoſtle, who had not his ordination from the other Apoſtles, but was immediately called by Chriſt: yet the Ieſuite telleth vs that he was ordained of the other Apoſtles, and quoteth Act.9. Act.13. *Contra.*1. Act.9.17. Ananias layeth his hands vpon Saul to receiue his ſight, and to baptize him, but not to make him an Apoſtle: for Ananias himſelfe was but a Diſciple, no Apoſtle; how then could he ordaine an Apoſtle? Secondly, Act.13.3. The Prophets at Antioch named in the firſt verſe, layde hands vpon Saul and Barnabas, not thereby giuing them ordination of Apoſtles, but ſeparating and ſanctifying them for that eſpeciall worke: for if this impoſition were an ordination, and that other alſo by Ananias; by this reaſon, he ſhould be twice ordayned: and againe here were none but Prophets at Antioch, no Apoſtles; how then could they ordaine Apoſtles? Thirdly, if S. Paul were ordained by the Apoſtles, then he himſelfe was no Apoſtle, for the Apoſtles had no authoritie to make new Apoſtles, but all Apoſtles were immediately deſigned from God. Fourthly, the Apoſtle himſelfe ſaith, he was no Apoſtle of men or by men, but by Ieſus Chriſt, Galath.1.1. And againe, he did not communicate with fleſh and blood, neither went vp to the other Apoſtles, but after three yeares, verſ.16.17. immediately after his calling from heauen preaching Chriſt. Here is no ordination from the Apoſtles, he was acknowledged by them, and receiued into the number of the Apoſtles, but not ordayned.

Ad Heliodor.

If it be anſwered, that this example of S. Paul was extraordinarie, but now in the Church an ordination ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles muſt be ſhewed:

We replie againe, that we alleage not this example, as though we did expect the like extraordinarie calling now, or refuſe ordination deriued from the Apoſtles, but to this end, that if S. Paul were made an Apoſtle, without the ordination of the lawfull Apoſtles; much more may the Lord raiſe vp new Paſtors to his Church without ordination from the vſurpers of the Apoſtles. Secondly, we alſo hold that an ordination from the Apoſtles is alwaies neceſſarie in the Church, but not ſuch as they meane by locall ſucceſſion, and outward tradition: but a lawfull conſecrating and ordaining of Paſtors and Miniſters by the authoritie of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, according to the word of God committed to the faithfull diſpenſers in euery true Church and congregation of Chriſt; which ordination our Church hath. As for their ſuperſtitious ordination, we refuſe it as ſuperfluous and vnneceſſarie: there may be lawfull Biſhops and Paſtors without it, as there were Prophets in the Law not of Aaron: yea and much more, for the Prieſthoode of Aaron was of Gods inſtitution, ſo is not your Popiſh conſecration: And Saint Hierome here ſaith with vs; Non facit Eccleſiaſtica dignitas Chriſtianum: The Eccleſiaſticall dignitie maketh not a Chriſtian, as he ſheweth by the example of Amos: and thus much concerning ordination. Now in the next place of Bellarmines obiection for ſucceſſion.

We anſwere: firſt, they cannot ſhew ſuch an entire and perpetuall ſucceſſion, without any interruption, or diſcontinuance for ſo many yeares: for ſome time there were two, ſometime three Popes together: and this ſchiſme continued 29. yeares, till the Councell of Conſtance, where three Popes were depoſed at once, *Benedict.*13. the Spaniſh Pope, Gregorie 12. the French Pope, and Iohn 23. the Italian Pope. Beſide there are many other doubts in their ſucceſſion: Firſt, whether Peter were Biſhop of Rome or not, whereof more ſhall be ſaid afterward in the controuerſie of the Biſhop of Rome: and your owne Canons affirme, that ambo Eccleſiam Romanam conſecrarunt: both Peter and Paul did conſecrate the Romane Church: you muſt ſhew then a ſucceſſion from both. Secondly, it is vncertaine who ſucceeded Peter; your decrees hold, that he ordained Clement, as we haue ſeene before: others affirme that Linus was, primus poſt Petrum Epiſcopus, the firſt Biſhop after Peter, as *Dorotheus, Euſeb.lib.*3.*c.*4. Hieron. in catalog.&c. How then can you deriue your ſucceſſion from Peter? Thirdly, your ſucceſſion hath been interrupted and broken off, as when Pope Ioan ſtept into the Papall chayre, and a woman managed the affaires of your Church, ſay alſo, that ſhe was S. Peters ſucceſſor; ſo then they themſelues cannot ſhew that ſucceſſion, which they boaſt of.

2 If ſucceſſion be ſo ſure a note of the Church, it is found alſo in other Churches beſides, as in Conſtantinople where hath been a perpetual ſucceſſion (as Nicephorus ſaith) from S. Andrew, and where Ieremiah is at this day Patriarch, at Alexandria from S. Marke, where Melitius alſo hath at this time his patriarchal ſeate: in other Churches alſo of Grecia, they haue yet their Metropolitanes, as at Theſſalonica, where Gabriel now ſitteth, at Epheſus alſo and Corinth: as it may appeare by theſe reuerend patriarches and Metropolitanes authentike letters directed vnto our Churches here in the Weſt in the yeare 1593. in the behalfe of Iacomo Miloita, a Grecian of Pathmos, who collecteth for his raunſome. Other Churches therefore we ſee may alleadge ſucceſſion, as well as the Church of Rome.

The Ieſuite here is driuen to his ſhiftes, and hath nothing to ſay, but this: that the argument followeth negatiuely, that where there is no ſucceſſion, there is no Church: not affirmatiuely, that where any ſucceſſion can be ſhewed, there ſtraightwayes it ſhould follow there is a true Church: So by the Ieſuites owne confeſſion he hath made but a bad argument for the Church of Rome: we haue a perpetuall ſucceſſion of Popes from the Apoſtles time: Ergo, we are the Church. It followeth not, ſaith the Ieſuite: we grant it. Why then a little before did he call it inſolubile argumentum, an inſoluble and vnanſwerable argument?

3 Thirdly, we ſay, that a ſucceſſion of perſons in the ſame place, without ſucceſſion of doctrine, which they cannot ſhew, is nothing worth. A ſucceſſion of the Apoſtolike faith and doctrine proueth a continuance of Paſtors and teachers, and not contrariwiſe. We haue the Apoſtolike faith, and therefore we doubt not but that there haue been continually in the Church faithfull teachers, by whom that doctrine hath been preſerued and kept: though they were not famous, nor carried a glorious ſhew in the world. For that outward ſucceſſion is not neceſſarie, neither ſo much to be ſtoode vpon. Auguſtine when he had alleaged ſucceſſion againſt heretikes, concluded thus: Quanquam non tantum nos de iſtis documentis præſumamus, quàm de Scripturis ſanctis: although Epiſt.165. (ſaith he) we preſume not ſo much vpon theſe documents as of holy Scripture.

Wherefore briefely to ioyne iſſue with them: firſt we ſay that they themſelues can ſhew no ſuch ſucceſſion in place from S. Peter, as they pretend, as we haue ſhewed before. Secondly, though they did ſucceede in place, yet not ſucceeding in faith and holines, it is nothing: as Symmachus your owne Biſhop ſaith, that Petrus hæreditatem innocentiæ tranſmiſit ad poſteros, that S. Peter did leaue to his ſucceſſors the inheritance of his innocencie: decr.p. 1. diſt. 40. *c.*1. Therefore hauing left his innocencie, they haue left the ſucceſſion. Thirdly, whereas diuers of the Fathers commend the ſucceſſion of that See from the Apoſtles, it was for that they kept alſo the Apoſtolike faith: as *decr.p.*2.*cauſ.*24.*qu.*1.*c.*14. Hierome thus writeth to Damaſus, Petri & fidem & ſedem tenes: You holde both the ſeate and faith of Peter. Fourthly, a ſucceſſion in doctrine is ſufficient to proue a Church, though in reſpect of the time and place, the ſucceſſion bee interrupted: ſo the Apoſtle ſaith: Cui ſeruio à progenitoribus: Whom I doe ſerue from my progenitors, 2. Timoth. 1. 3. meaning Abraham, Iſaack and Iacob, the firſt Fathers of the faith, for we doubt his immediate progenitors did ſauour of the leauen of the Phariſees: As the Apoſtle proueth his faith by a deſcent though interrupted from his progenitors, ſo we ſhew our Church, by ſucceeding the Apoſtles in doctrine.

And here your owne decrees doe helpe vs well, *decr.p.*1. *diſt.*40.*c.*12. Non cathedra facit ſacerdotem, ſed ſacerdos cathedram; non locus ſanctificat hominem ſed homo locum; non omnis ſacerdos ſanctus, ſed omnis ſanctus ſacerdos: The chayre maketh not a Biſhop, but a Biſhop the chayre; the place doth not ſanctifie the man, but the man the place; euery Prieſt is not holy, but hee that is holy is a Prieſt. Wherefore where there is no epiſcopall chayre by ſucceſſion, holines of life and ſyncerity of doctrine may erect an Apoſtolike chayre.

Here wanteth nothing but the ſeale, I meane the blood of Martyrs giuen in teſtimonie of this and other points of our faith.

Bl. Philpot thus anſwereth to the argument of ſucceſſion: that it is no infallible note of the Church; for there may be a ſucceſſion of Biſhops where is no Church, as at Antioche, Ieruſalem: But if you put to ſucceſſion of Biſhops ſucceſſion of doctrine withall, as it was in Auguſtines time when he vſed this argument againſt the Donatiſts, it is a good proofe. Obiect. Why? will you not haue the Church to be certaine? by whom then will you be iudged? Anſwer. I denie not, but that the Church is certaine, but not neceſſarilie tyed to one place longer then it abideth in the word,by which all controuerſies ought to be iudged,Sic Philpot pag.1825.

Bl. Bradford being preſſed with this argument, that he could not goe vpward and ſhew a ſucceſſion of Biſhops,as they could,he might make a leap downward,but vpward he could not goe: maketh this anſwere. 1. The miniſterie of Gods word, and miniſters be an eſſentiall point: but to tranſlate this,ſaith he,to the outward glorious ſucceſſion of Biſhops,is a plaine ſubtletie.

2. S.Stephen, Acts.7. being accuſed to teach newe and falſe doctrine, goeth not vpwards to proue his faith, but beginneth at Abraham, and ſo goeth downwards till Iſaias time, and the captiuitie: from whence he maketh a great leap vntill the time he was in, which was about 400. yeares: On this ſort can we proue our faith,and ſo can you neuer do yours.ſic Bradford pag.1614. col.1.

The fourth Note, of Vnitie.

21.Error.

OVr aduerſaries doe ſtand much vpon Vnitie; which they thinke is the glorie of their Church: they doe embrace vnitie amongſt themſelues,and all ioyne in obedience to their head.Their vnitie alſo is ſeene,ſay they, in the wonderfull conſent of all their writers in matters of Religion: and the notable agreement and concord in the decrees of their Popes and Councels.But as for vs, and our Church,they ſay,it is full of rents,ſchiſmes and diuiſions.Bellarm.cap.9.

Firſt of the vnitie of their Church,and then of the vnitie of ours. Their vnitie, they ſay,is partly ſeene in their obedience, and louiug ſocietie and fellowſhip, partly in their Religion and doctrine.

Firſt, for their concord and loue one toward another: we will take ſome paines, a little to decipher it.About the yeare of the Lord 900.there was pretie ſport amongſt the Popes,nine of them one after another. Stephen the ſixt abrogated all his predeceſſor Formoſus decrees: and not content with that, he tooke vp his bodie which was buried, and cut two fingers of his right hand off, and commanded his bodie to be buried againe. After him ſucceeded Pope Rhomanus, Theodorus the ſecond,Iohn the tenth,who ratified and confirmed the doings of Formoſus.After them followed Pope Sergius, who diſanulling all their actes, tooke vp againe the bodie of Formoſus, cut off his head, and commaunded his bodie to be throwne into Tiber the great riuer in Rome. Was not heere great amitie and loue,thinke you,amongſt the Popes? ex Polychron.

Another notable example of their vnitie we haue in Pope Vrbanus time the 6. againſt whom ſtood vppe a contrarie Pope in Fraunce named Clement: it is worth the noting, what coyle theſe two Popes kepte: betweene whom many battles were fought, many thouſands ſlaine. Pope Vrbanus beheaded fiue Cardinals together after long torments. Biſhop Aquilonenſis, becauſe he did ride no faſter, was had in ſuſpition, and ſlaine and cut in peeces by Vrbans ſouldiers, at his commandement. Behold heere I pray you the vnitie of theſe Catholikes.

Theoderic. Niem.de ſchiſmat.

Ex paralip. Abbat.Vrſp.

We will adioyne one other example, no longer ſince then in King Henrie the eights time. The Duke of Bourbon being the leader of the Emperors armie, laide ſiege to Rome,and ſacked it: the Souldiers brake in vpon the Pope,which was Clement the ſeuenth being at Maſſe,ſlew diuers of the Prieſts, and one Cardinall called Sanctorum quatuor: they laide ſiege to the Caſtle of S.Angell, ſo long till the Pope yeelded himſelfe. The ſouldiors daylie that lay at the ſiege, made ieſtes of the Pope: ſomtimes they had one riding like the Pope with a whore behind him,ſomtimes he bleſſed, ſomtimes he curſed;ſomtimes with one voice they would call him Antichriſt.See here is their Catholike obedience to their chiefe Biſhop. Thus much concerning their vnitie and concord in life.

Let vs likewiſe take a view of their vnitie in doctrine. We heard before how Pope Stephen and Sergius aboliſhed the decrees of Formoſus: how then ſaith the Ieſuite,that the decrees of Popes doe conſent togither?The Councell of Baſill,and Conſtance before that decreed,that the Pope ſhould be ſubiect to generall Councels: but this Canon was afterwarde reuerſed,and now generally the Papiſts hold the contrarie,that the Pope is aboue Councels.

Let vs ſee the conſent of their writers: *Bellarmin.lib.*1.*de verbo.cap.*12. maintaineth againſt Lyranus,Driedo,Genebrard,and others, that Iudith was in Manaſſes time. Againſt Alphonſus de Caſtro, that heretikes are no members of the Church, *Lib.*3.*de Eccleſ.cap.*4. Againſt Iohannes de turre cremata, that faith is not neceſſarie to make one a member of the Church, *Lib.*3.*de Eccleſ.cap.*10. And euery where the Ieſuite taketh great libertie to confute and controll other his fellow Papiſtes: belike hauing found out ſome ſtarting holes, that they either knew not,or were aſhamed to creepe into, as the Ieſuite dooth: ſee more of their diſſentions in opinion, Tetraſtyl. Papiſt. pillar.4.

But (ſaith he) we denie not but that we haue deſſentions, but they are not in materiall points, but in ſuch things as appertaine not to faith. I maruaile, he bluſheth not thus to ſay, himſelfe knowing the contrarie.Is it not a ſubſtantiall point and belonging to faith,to know which bookes are canonicall Scripture, which are not? but in this queſtion they doe much diſagree. Caietanus the Cardinall ſaith,that we muſt acknowledge no Scripture,but that which was either written or approoued by the Apoſtles. But Catharinus a Papiſt doth reiect that opinion. Hugo Cardinalis, Arias Montanus, doe hold no bookes of the old Teſtament to be Canonicall, which are written onely in Greeke: the Papiſts now generally hold the contrarie. Ex Whitacher. 1. contr. c. quæſt. cap. 6. Bellarmine ſaith, that all thoſe opinions, which the Church holdeth, as articles or precepts of faith, were deliuered by the Apoſtles: and that the Church muſt not now ſeeke for new reuelations, but content her ſelfe with the Apoſtolike traditions and doctrine, de Scriptur. lib. 4. c. 9. Out of the which words it doth neceſſarily follow, that the Church is not now to found any new article of faith: but this generally is denied by the Papiſts: and Stapleton an Engliſh Papiſt, is not aſhamed to ſay, that the Church may adde more bookes to the Canonicall Scripture, by her abſolute authoritie.

Further, to beleeue that the Virgin Mary was without ſinne, yea conceiued without originall ſinne, is now amongſt the Papiſts receiued for an article of faith: and therefore in Paris none are admitted to be Doctors of Diuinitie, which doe not firſt confirme this article by their oth. Yet this was a great queſtion between the Scotiſts & Thomiſts, and a great & hot contention aroſe about this controuerſie, anno 1476. betweene the Dominicke Friers, who affirmed that ſhe was conceiued in ſinne, and the Franciſcanes, that held the contrarie. But theſe Franciſcanes had the vpper hand, and foure of the other order were condemned and burned for it at Berne: And yet for all this our aduerſaries will ſay ſtill, that they varie not in matters of faith. Thus we haue ſeene what is to be thought of Popiſh vnitie.

Fox Caſpar. Peucer. Chro. lib. 5.

Now to anſwer briefly to their falſe accuſation, whereby they charge vs with manifold ſchiſmes and diſſentions: yea Bellarmine is not aſhamed to ſay, that an hundred ſeuerall ſects are ſprung vp amongſt vs, cap. 10. lib. 4. de Eccleſ.

1 We ſay with S. Paul, Oportet hæreſes eſſe, 1. Cor. 11. there muſt be hereſies and diuiſions in the Church. And it is a ſigne we haue the trueth, when the diuell goeth about by ſchiſmes and contentions to hinder the preaching thereof. Wee anſwere to you, as Auguſtine did to the Pagans: Non proferant nobis quaſi concordiam ſuam: hoſtem quippe, quem patimur, illi non patiuntur: Let them not boaſt of their concord, and caſt in our teeth the diſſention of Chriſtians: the enemie aſſaulteth not them as he doth vs: Quid ibi lucri eſt, quia litigant, vel damni ſi non litigant: The diuell ſhall get nothing if they ſhould diſagree, nor loſe any thing by their agreement: for he hath ſure hold enough of them alreadie, conſenting all in Idolatrie. But amongſt Chriſtians he laboureth to hinder the trueth by diſcord, becauſe he cannot otherwiſe withdraw them from the true religion. Hearken now (ô ye Papiſts) if you conſent together, it is in euill: ſo long it pleaſeth the diuell well enough: he ſhould deſtroy his owne kingdome in ſowing diſſention amongſt you, for you fight for him. He vſeth to caſt fire brands amongſt good Chriſtians, to withſtand by this meanes the proceeding of the Goſpell.

2 It is a great ſlaunder, that there are ſo many diuiſions amongſt vs: an hundred ſaith the Ieſuite, but he ſhall neuer proue ten. He might haue bethought himſelfe of a full hundred of ſects amongſt his owne darlings the Monks and Friers, as maſter Fox hath truly gathered the number, pag. 260. See more Tetraſt. papiſt. 4. pil. where you ſhall finde three hundred diuers opinions and diuiſions among Papiſts. And whereas Bellarmine taketh vpon him, to prooue the Proteſtants guiltie of twentie ſeuerall hereſies, cap. 9. I haue reſerued the confutation thereof to another place in the treatiſe of the Pillars of Papiſtrie annexed to this booke: where in the ſecond pillar, par. 3. I haue anſwered the Ieſuites obiections of hereſie, and repaied them with fortie hereſies more, more properly incident to their Church, then his twentie are into ours.

3 Thoſe few ſchiſmes and diſſentions, which we haue (and yet too many, we muſt needs confeſſe) are not about points of faith, and articles of Religion: but concerning ſome things belonging to diſcipline and Church gouernment; which matters we deny not, but haue been ſomewhat too hotly and egarly followed of ſome amongſt vs: but God bee thanked, this contention hath not been purſued by fire or death, as the Franciſcanes did perſecute the poore Dominickes: nor yet to the pronouncing of each other heretikes, as Eugenius your Pope was condemned as an heretike in the Councell of Baſil.

Now, that it may appeare what vnitie is in the popiſh Church, I will giue an inſtance in their head, I meane the Popes, and that out of their owne Canons.

Whereas then diuers of them haue decreed, not to tranſgreſſe the decrees of their predeceſſors, as Decr. p. 2. cauſ. 25. quæſt. 1. cap. 7. Zozimus: Contra ſtatuta patrum condere, vel mutare aliquid, nec huius quidem ſedis poteſt authoritas: No not this See hath authoritie to chaunge the decrees of the fathers. And, qu. 2. cap. 4. Gregor. Si ea deſtruerem, quæ antecesſores, &c. non conſtructor, ſed euerſor eſſe comprobarer: If I ſhould reuerſe, what our predeceſſors haue decreed, I ſhould not be a builder vp, but a puller downe. And not onely the Canons of Religion, but other Ciuill conſtitutions of their predeceſſors ought to be kept: quæſt. 25. cap. 16. Leo 4. Quod patres ſiue in ſanctis canonib. ſiue in humanis affixere legibus, &c. We muſt not tranſgreſſe, whatſoeuer our fathers haue fixed either in the ſacred Canons,or other humane lawes. Yet notwithſtanding theſe conſtitutions,the Popes themſelues haue one diſſolued anothers decrees, both in ciuill and religious matters.

Concerning ciuill and outward matters: Clemens 5.reuerſeth Bonifacius 8.his Conſtitution,as touching taxes and impoſitions laid vpon the Church, Clem.lib.3.tit.17.cap.1. Ioannes 22.Extrau. tit.9.cap.1. reuerſeth the conſtitution of Clemens 5.which he made againſt Iuſtings and Tournaments.The ſame Clemens abrogateth the conſtitutions of Benedict.11.againſt the preaching Friers, Clem.lib.3.tit.7.cap.1. Benedict.11.likewiſe correcteth the decrees of Boniface the 8.as touching the immunities of the preaching Friers,Extrau.com.lib.5.tit.7.cap.1. Bonifac.8.reuoketh whatſoeuer Celeſtinus had decreed,Extrau.Ioann.tit.7. And thus one of them is ſtill euen with another. Bened.11.reſtoreth the Cardinals, whom Bonif.8.had depoſed and condemned. Extrau.comm.lib.5. tit.4.cap.1. Ioann.22.checketh the decrees of Gregor.10.and Bonifac.8.as touching the reſeruation of benefices.

The like agreement is found amongſt them in matters of religion. Iohann.22.determineth againſt Nichol.4.that Chriſt was no begger, but had a propertie in thoſe things he had, Extr.Ioan. tit.14.cap.4. The ſame Ioan.22.diſſolueth the ſect of the Fratricelles confirmed by Celeſtinus, Extr. Ioann.tit.7. The ſame Pope ratifieth the ſect of the Beguines diſſolued by Clem.5.Extrau.commun. lib.3.tit.9.cap.1.

If ſuch be the vnitie of their heads,as we haue ſeene,one of them ſtill oppoſing himſelfe againſt another,Iohn againſt Clement,Clement againſt Benedict,Benedict againſt Boniface,Boniface againſt Celeſtine, and they all againſt their predeceſſors,Zoſimus,Gregorie,Leo,&c. what ſhall we thinke of the reſt of the body,if the head be thus diuided? And this is the vnitie of the Popiſh Church,which they doe ſo much bragge of.

Laſtly,let vs adde the ſeale of our doctrine: Maſter Bradford ſaith,that vnitie is no ſure note of the Church: for the Idolatrous Iſraelites might haue pretended this argument for themſelues, Brad.pag.1622.

Maſter Latimer martyr ſaith, that a deforme diſagreement is better in the Church,ſo Chriſt bee preached, then vniforme ignorance agreeing in Idolatrie, alleaging Hieromes example, whoſe tranſlation of the Bible cauſed diſſention in a Chriſtian congregation: yet Hierome ſaith,Sed ego in tali opere nec eorum inuidentiam pertimeſco,nec ſcripturæ veritatem poſcentibus denegabo: But neither I (ſaith he) will feare their enuie in ſo profitable a worke, nor yet withhold the truth of the Scripture from thoſe which deſire it, *Hieron.prolog ſup.Canonic.epiſtol. Sic Latimer.epiſt. ad D.Ed.Baynton.pag.*1750.

Roger Holland alſo thus teſtifieth: As for the vnitie which is in the popiſh Church, what is it elſe,but treaſon,murder,poyſoning one another,idolatrie,ſuperſtition? What vnitie was there in your Church, when there was three Popes at once? where was your head of vnitie, when you had a woman Pope? Fox pag.2040.

The fifth Note: of the power of working Miracles.

22. Error. THis they affirme both to bee neceſſarie in the Church,to haue power to worke miracles, for the confirmation of the faith,when there is any extraordinarie chaunge or innouation of religion,and that it is a ſufficient note to deſcribe the Church: for it cannot bee (ſay they) but that, whereſoeuer this power is found,there ſhould be the true Church.

And hereupon they take occaſion to extoll the miracles of their Church: beginning at the Apoſtles time, and ſo in euery age they take vpon them to ſhew, that their Church neuer wanted thoſe that were endued with this power,*Bellarm.cap.*14.

We anſwere: Firſt, the gift of miracles doth no more prooue that to be the true Church where they are wrought,then they to bee holy men and elected of God, that doe them. The Magicians wrought many ſtraunge things in Egypt, contending a great while with Moſes: Antichriſt ſhall come working with ſignes and wonders,2.Theſſal.2. Therefore this proueth not a Church. The like ſtraunge wonders and miracles are to bee ſeene among the Turks, amongſt whom their religious profeſſors doe many ſtraunge things both aliue and dead: as witneſſeth *Captibus Septemcaſtrenſ.de Turcar.morib.c.*14. The like things to bee done in Dania ſome 300.yeere ſince, reporteth Saxo Grammaticus: and not long ſince in Gothia,Olaus Magnus. Wherefore miracles make no probation of a Church.

Firſt Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe were falſe miracles,and but forged,and onely to the eye, and in outward appearance,as Antichriſt is ſaid to come with lying wonders: or elſe ſuch things as though they ſeemed ſtrange to men,yet were not ſo in their owne nature,as the fetching down of fire from heauen,&c.which things Sathan can eaſily performe. We replie, firſt they are called lying wonders,not that they are done in ſhew onely,and haue no ſuch thing indeed, but becauſe they are wrought to confirme lies,and diſcredit the truth. Secondly, your miracles are very like to be ſuch, both wrought by the power of the diuell, and ſome of them but iugling feates of couſoners. Thirdly, yet a wicked man may haue power to worke miracles, not in ſhew, but verely and indeede, as to caſt out diuels, and to doe it in the name and power of Chriſt; and yet bee none of Chriſts diſciples, Matth.7.22. And it is confeſſed in your owne Decrees, par.2.cauſ.1.quæſt.1. that Magi Pharaonis faciebant ſimilia Moyſi, that Pharao his Magicians did like things to Moſes. And a writer of your owne ſaith: Miracula Deo & diabolo, Chriſto & Antichriſto communia: That miracles are common to God and the diuell, to Chriſt and Antichriſt, Eſpenſ.in 2.Timoth.p.93.c. The miracles then of Chriſt and Antichriſt, of the true and falſe Prophet differ not herein, that the one are in truth, the other in ſhew: but firſt in reſpect of the power; ſecondly, of the end: for the Saints of God worke by his power; the other by the power of Sathan, whom God doth oftentimes reſtraine, as the Magicians were not able to doe the like, when Moſes turned the duſt into lice, Exod.8.19. And therefore Nicodemus ſaith to Chriſt, Ioh.3.1. No man can do theſe works, that is, ſuch great workes, as thou doeſt, vnleſſe God were with him. Secondly, Chriſt and his Apoſtles by their miracles ſought the glorie of God, and the good of men, in conuerting of their ſoules and healing of their bodies: ſo Sathan worketh not, but onely to deceiue men, and confirme lyes, as Origen ſheweth, lib.1.cont.Celſum. And ſuch are moſt of popiſh miracles, deuiſed for the maintenance of Idolatrie and ſuperſtitious worſhip.

Secondly, Bellarmine bringeth in this diſtinction, that miracles doe demonſtrate the Church, not quoad euidentiam & certitudinem rei, in reſpect of the euidence or certaintie of the things, ſed quoad euidentiam credibilitatis, but doe ſhew onely the certaintie of credibilitie: His meaning is, that by miracles we may geſſe by all likelihood, which is the Church, but not certainly know it, Bellarm.lib.4.de Eccleſ.cap.14.

Anſ. 1. We haue then the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, that the power of miracles is no certaine, but a coniecturall note of the Church: what marke or note then call you that, whereby a thing cannot certainly be diſcerned? 2. We ſay, that many times we cannot ſo much as coniecture of the Church by miracles, which may bee done without the Church, as the miracles which Antichriſt ſhall worke.

Heare alſo your owne authoritie, Decr.par.2.cauſ.1 qu.1.c.56. Præter vnitatem, & qui facit miracula nihil eſt: in vnitate erat populus Iſrael & non faciebat miracula; præter vnitatem erant Magi Pharaonis, & faciebant ſimilia Moyſi: He that worketh miracles without the vnitie of the Church, doth nothing: the Iſraelites were in the vnitie of the Church, and did no miracles; the Magicians of Pharao were out of the Church, and yet did like things to Moſes: Ergo, true miracles ſuch as Moſes wrought, may bee done without the Church, and ſo conſequently they prooue not the Church.

Secondly, concerning your miracles we anſwer, that they are either fables, and old wiues tales, and no credit to bee giuen vnto them; or elſe they are one of thoſe two ſorts, whereof Auguſtine ſpeaketh: Remoueantur iſta vel mendacia fallacium hominum, vel portenta mendacium ſpirituum: Away with thoſe miracles, which are either couſoning tricks of deceitfull men, or wonders of lying ſpirits.

De vnitat. Eccleſ.cap.26.

Firſt, Monkiſh fables are not a whit daintie with our Romiſh Catholikes, their Legends are full of them: As that of Berinus, how being in the middeſt of the ſea ſailing into France, hauing forgotten ſomewhat at home, went backe walking vpon the ſea, and came to them againe, hauing not one thread of his garment wet. Many like tales are reported of Aldelmus Abbot of Malmeſburie, as how he cauſed an infant at Rome of nine daies old to ſpeake, to cleere Sergius the Pope, who was thought to bee his father: how he drew along a great piece of timber, that went to the making of the Church at Malmesburie. Such good ſtuffe alſo they haue of Iohn of Beuerlie, of Egwine Abbot of Eueſham, who when he had locked his feete in fetters, and caſt the key into the ſea, afterward a fiſh brought the key againe into the ſhip where he was ſayling. Reade Maſter Fox pag.125. All theſe and a thouſand more are but Monkiſh fables and dreames, whatſoeuer the Ieſuite maketh of them. And what elſe is that fabulous diſcourſe of theirs of the liues of the Saints, which they call, Legenda aurea, the golden Legend, but a dunghill of lyes? containing ſuch monſtrous fictions, and Monkiſh tales, as the better ſort amongſt them are aſhamed of. Hereof long agoe complained Petrus Abbot Cluniacenſ.lib.5. epiſt.29. about ſome foure hundred yeere ſince, Noſti quantum me pigeant falſa in eccleſia dei Cantica, &c. You know how much theſe lying ſongs in the Church doe grieue me, &c. and he maketh mention of one ſonnet or hymne of Benedict, containing no leſſe then 24. lyes. Lindanus a popiſh writer maketh mention in his 3. booke, cap.3. de interpretandis Scripturis, of an ancient complaint of one Agobertus Biſhop of Lions, who ſaid he had corrected the Antiphonarie, amputatis, quæ ſuperflua, leuia, falſa, blaſphema, phantaſtica multa videbantur, cutting off many things that ſeemed ſuperfluous, light, falſe, blaſphemous, phantaſticall: which Biſhop (ſaith Lindane) if he were now aliue to ſee our Miſſals and Antiphonaries, Deum immortalem, quo ea pingeret nomine? Good Lord (ſaith he) how would he call them? And yet our Papiſts now a daies would make vs beleeue,that all in their Legend is as true as the Goſpell.

In fine libri ſecund.de corrupt.artib.

I will adde hereunto the teſtimonie of Lodouicus Vines, of their Legend : Quàm indigna diuis & hominibus ſanctorum hiſtoria,quam neſcio cur auream Legendam appellent,cum ſcripta ſit ab homine ferrei oris, plumbei cordis: How vnworthie both God and men is the ſtorie of the Saints, which I ſee no reaſon why it ſhould be called the golden Legend,being written by one that had an iron, that is, impudent face,and a leaden and lumpiſh heart. Let any reaſonable man now iudge, what wee may thinke of the miracles of their Saints.

Secondly,beſide that moſt of their miracles are forged : they all tend to an vngodly end, to eſtabliſh their groſſe ſuperſtitions ; as to prooue the reall preſence, to terrifie men with Purgatorie fire,to bring in adoration of Saints,and the worſhipping of Images,with ſuch like, as one example I will alleage in ſtead of many. The ſecond Nicen Councell which decreed moſt irreligiouſly,that Images ſhould be worſhipped,bringeth in many moſt vnſauourie tales and fables,to ratifie this their impious deuice : as in the fourth action of that Synode,a narration is brought in, how a certaine Monke was tempted with a ſpirit of vncleannes,who appearing vnto him ſaid; If thou wilt be rid of me,doe not worſhip this Image,which was the picture of the Virgin. Is it not like now,may any man thinke, that the diuell will diſſwade men from Idolatrie ? or if there bee any matter of truth in this tale,it may bee applied againſt them,that therefore the diuell was ſent to vexe this Monke, becauſe he was an Idoll worſhipper, and ſo ſoone as he began to forſake his Idolatrie, the vncleane ſpirit alſo did forſake him.

The like fiction in the ſame place is brought in of a certaine image of Chriſt, which being in a certaine Chriſtians houſe, was forgotten of him when he left the houſe,and a Iew ſucceeding in the habitation, hauing inuited other Iewes to dinner, one of them eſpied the Image in dinner while, which the other Iew affirmed he had not ſeene before : then they ranne vpon the Image all at once,and pierced it in the ſide, out of the which iſſued ſuch a ſtreame of blood, that they filled an hydria,that is,a great water-pot with it: and then they tooke counſell,to ſee whether there were any ſuch vertue in the blood,to ſprinkle ſicke folkes therewith, and many recouered thereby. The Metropolitane of the place hearing tell hereof, tooke the blood, and ſent of it in glaſſe veſſels into Aſia,Europe,Africa, requiring them by letters to keepe the fift day before the Ides of Nouember with as great ſolemnitie yeerely, as they kept the Natiuitie, in remembrance of this miracle.

How many notable lyes are here couched together ? Firſt, that the Chriſtian ſhould be ſo careleſſe to leaue ſuch a monument behind him, which he daily worſhipped. Secondly, that the Iew hauing it alwaies in his eye ſhould neuer ſee it, till it was ſpied by his gueſts. Thirdly, that blood ſhould come out of a piece of wood. Fourthly, that ſuch abundance to fill a water-pot of two or three firkins, ſuch as the Iewes vſed for their purification, as wee reade Ioh.2.ſuch ſtore of blood, as is not thought to haue iſſued out of Chriſts ſide vpon the croſſe. Fiftly, that the Iewes nothing aſtoniſhed at the ſtraungenes thereof, ſhould ſeeke to worke miracles by it. Sixtly, that of this blood ſhould be ſent to all parts of the world : whereas Chriſt gaue no charge to his Apoſtles to gather his blood and ſaue it, that fell from him vpon the croſſe ; but onely to drinke his blood ſpiritually in the Sacrament. Seuenthly, that an holy day ſhould bee erected vpon this occaſion, which the Church of Rome it ſelfe,the mother of ſuperſtition,obſerueth not,nor yet(I think)any Church beſide.

Is not here goodly ſtuffe,to proue the adoration of Images by? But leaſt any man ſhould think, that of my ſelfe I charge this Councell with forgerie, I will produce the teſtimonie of a late Pope Adrian the 6.who thus writeth in the beginning of the ſixt Quodlibet : Græci certè in ſua illa Iconomachia ſcriptis admodum incertis & fabuloſis rem egerunt,dæmonum ſpectris,& muliebribus ſomnijs parum verecundè abutentes: The Grecians fighting for Images, doe prooue their matter by fabulous and vncertaine writings;abuſing the illuſions of diuels,and womens dreames without all ſhamefaſtnes,vt legere eſt in ſynodo Nycena.2.act.4.5. as is to bee ſeene (ſaith he) in the ſecond Nycene ſynode, the 4.and 5.action. Thus wee ſee, that both our aduerſaries doe abound with many forged and lying miracles, and the ſame brought in to eſtabliſh ſuperſtitious and damnable doctrines.

The like fabulous tales they haue of S.Bernard,who in one day,as Bellarmine is not aſhamed to report out of Gotfridus,did giue ſight to an eleuen blind,did heale tenne maimed perſons,and 18. more that were lame, and all in one day : and (ſaith the Ieſuite) he wrought ſo many miracles beſide, as it is hard to number them, Bellarm.cap.14. Thus if wee will beleeue the Ieſuite, Bernard wrought more miracles,then either Chriſt or his Apoſtles : but whether is it more reaſonable to credit Bellarmine for this matter,or Bernard himſelfe ? for he ſaith plainly,that he could worke no miracles,as Serm.de Benedict. Licèt non habeamus noſtra,conſolatio nobis magna eſſe debent patroni noſtri miracula : Although we haue no miracles of our owne,yet our patrones miracles (he meaneth Benedict) nedict)are our comfort. And againe, Serm.1.in die aſcenſion. Quis nunc damonia eijcit, linguis loquitur, &c. Who now a daies caſteth out diuels, ſpeaketh with tongues, &c. diuels are caſt out, when ſins are rooted out of the heart, &c. Is not this then hereticall forgerie, to faine ſo many miracles of a man, that denieth himſelfe that he hath any ſuch power?

Thirdly, it is out of doubt, that ſome of them were well practiſed with the diuell, and through his helpe could doe much. We will begin with Dunſtane, who cauſed a Roode to ſpeake, which was more ſtrange, then that of Balaams aſſe: for the aſſe had life, though ſhe had no reaſon; but this image had neither: Polydor Virgill thinketh little better of Dunſtane for this deed doing, but that he was a ſorcerer. Fox pag.158.

It is famous in hiſtories, how Silueſter the ſecond was aduaunced to the Papacie by the Diuell, and gaue himſelfe vnto him; and how, hauing ſome remorſe before his death, he confeſſed the fact before the people, and willed that his bodie ſhould be drawne of wilde horſe when he was dead, and there be buried where the horſe left it of their owne accord. How much ſuch diabolicall practiſes are fauoured by the See of Rome, may appeare by this one example, which we will now touch: In Pope Adrians daies, not many yeares agoe, there was a moſt abominable thing practiſed in Rome, euen vnder the Popes noſe, and by his permiſſion and ſufferance. The city of Rome being at that time grieuouſly ſcourged and puniſhed of God with the peſtilence, there was one Demetrius a Grecian, who with the good liking of the whole citie, to appeaſe the wrath of their gods, tooke a wilde Bull, whom with magicall inchauntments he made ſo tame, that he led him with a twine threed, and ſo ſacrificed him: And this being done, the ſicknes ſomewhat ſlaked. Call ye this the Church of God, that ſuffereth ſuch heatheniſh and abominable ſuperſtitions to be done in it? Or ſhall I take theſe men for Chriſtians, that doe allow the idolatrous and diuelliſh ſacrifices of the heathen?

Ex Paul. Iouio tom.2.lib.21.

Fourthly, let vs ſee what pretie fine iugling caſts haue been wrought by the Papiſts to deceiue the people. In King Henries daies, there was a monſtrous Idoll called the Rood of grace, which was made ſo with wiers and engines, that one ſtanding within could make euery part of the Idoll to moue, the hands, the eyes, the mouth: if a man brought but a ſmall peece of ſiluer, it would hang downe the lip; if it were a good peece, then ſhould his iawes goe merilie: This abominable Idoll by the Lord Cromwels meanes was broken downe, and the engines and parts thereof ſhewed at Paules Croſſe. Such a like thing was the blood of Hales, which they made the people beleeue was ſome of Chriſts blood, but in the end it was found to be but the blood of a Drake, and ſhewed likewiſe at Paules Croſſe, Fox pag.1188. At Caleis in the Sepulchre, it was ſaid, there were three boaſts beſprinkled with blood (as it was put in writing vnder Bull and Pardon:) but the place being ſearched at King Henries commaundement, they found three white counters ſodred in the ſtone with the top-bone of a ſheepes taile, pag.1223. A thouſand ſuch forged deuiſes the Papiſts had, which they are not aſhamed to maintaine for ſtrange and holy miracles. By this that hath been ſhewed, it is euident (I hope) to the indifferent reader, what ſmall cauſe our aduerſaries haue, to boaſt of their miracles.

3 Now to adde ſomewhat concerning the miracles of our Church. Firſt, wee truely ſay, that our doctrine is not new nor ſtrange, and therefore they are not to call for miracles at our hands. The miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, are alſo our miracles, ſeeing that wee profeſſe the ſame doctrine, which was confirmed by thoſe miracles. And as Iohn Baptiſt comming before Chriſt, and teaching the people to beleeue in him that was to come, wrought no miracle, ſeeing that Chriſt was to confirme that doctrine, which Iohn taught concerning the Meſſia, with miracles: ſo wee comming after Chriſt, and profeſſing the ſame faith which hee taught, haue leſſe neede of miracles, ſeeing that the doctrine, which wee holde, hath alreadie been auouched by the miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Bellarmines beſt anſwere is here, that Iohn taught nothing againſt the common and receiued doctrine, neither ſeparated himſelfe from the Prieſts.

Anſw. Both theſe are vntrue: for firſt, Iohn preached remiſſion of ſinnes by Chriſt, and miniſtred Baptiſme, both which were ſtrange vnto the Iewiſh Church; and againe he liued apart in the wildernes: the Scribes and Phariſees came to him, he went not to them: and he calleth them a generation of vipers; how then did Iohn communicate with them.

This notwithſtanding, we affirme ſtill, that miracles are not now needfull: will you heare what Chriſoſtome ſaith: Iam cum nullus ſit infidelis, nulla faciendorum miraculorum nunc eſt neceſſitas; igitur, qui ſignum vel inutile, vel non ſuo tempore facit, falſus propheta eſt, &c. Now ſeeing there are no Infidels, there is no neceſſitie of making miracles: and therefore he, which goeth about now to worke a miracle vnprofitable, and out of time, is a falſe Prophet. By this ſentence all Papiſts are falſe Prophets, that do ſo much vrge miracles. But I will further preſſe them with their own authoritie. Nycen. ſynod.2.act.4. Tharaſius the preſident thus ſaid, Wherefore doe not our images now a dayes worke miracles? I anſwere with the Apoſtle: Miracula non credentibus data ſunt, &c. Miracles are not giuen to thoſe, that beleeue, but to thoſe, which beleeue not. Hearken then you Romaniſts, you are conuinced of vnbeleefe if you ſeeke for miracles. Secondly, yet, the Lord be thanked, we are not deſtitute of miracles, as Auguſtine ſaith: Modò caro cæci non aperit oculos miraculo domini, at cor cæcum aperit oculos ſermone domini: Now, ſaith he, the blind doth not receiue his bodily ſight by the power of Chriſt, but the blind heart is lightened and illuminate through the Goſpell of Chriſt. Such miracles (the Lord be bleſſed) we can ſhew: ſinners are conuerted, afflicted conſciences are comforted; the ignorant are inſtructed; many are called by the preaching of the Goſpell.

Beſide theſe, which are daily conuerted among vs by the preaching of the Goſpell, the examples of thoſe in this place would be remembred, that being enemies to the Goſpell; yet by the mightie working of Gods ſpirit, were miraculouſlie conuerted from Poperie, euen in time of perſecution, and gaue their liues for the teſtimonie of the truth.

George Tankerſield, hauing been a Papiſt all King Edwards daies, in Queene Maries time, ſeeing the great cruelty practiſed againſt Gods Saints, began to miſlike both the Papiſts opinions and dooings, and grew into ſuch a liking of the Goſpell, that he gaue his life for the ſame. See his ſtorie, Fox pag. 1690. Maſter Greene Martyr, firſt an obſtinate Papiſt, was drawne to a loue and liking of the Goſpell by frequenting Peter Martyrs Lectors, and died for the ſame afterwards, Fox pag. 1851.

Among the reſt, the example of Iulius Palmer is moſt notable, and worthy eternall memorie: who all King Edwards daies continued an obſtinate Papiſt, refuſing either to reſort to common Prayer, or to Sermons but by compulſion, and was for Poperie expelled Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, where he was fellow: in Queene Maries dayes he was reſtored to his fellowſhip by the viſitors, all this while remaining a very Papiſt: Then by the conſtancie of the Martyrs and bleſſed ſeruants of God in Oxford and elſewhere dying for the truth, he began to ſettle his heart towards the truth, and by diligent reading of Scripture, and faithfull prayer being therein confirmed, he became not onely a confeſſor, but a conſtant witneſſe and Martyr of the Goſpell: See his ſtorie, Fox pag. 1934.

The like examples we haue of Miſtreſſe Lewes, which of a Papiſt in Queene Maries dayes became a Proteſtant: pag. 2012. and the like of Roger Holland: pag. 2039. both of them holy Martyrs. What greater myracles can we deſire for confirmation of the Goſpell then theſe, ſhewed in their miraculous conuerſions?

Yet if this will not content our aduerſaries, but they will ſtill crie with open mouth, and ſay, where are your miracles? Behold, to ſtop their wide and clamorous mouth, we will ſhew them alſo ſuch miracles, as they looke for, like to which they haue none. Was not that a miracle, which Oecolampadius reporteth to haue been done at the Martyrdome of Maſter Hugh Spengler: who being caſt into the water and ſo drowned, preſently all the water was coloured with blood, hee hauing receiued no wound nor hurt in his bodie before: at the which all the people were greatly amazed?

But what thinke you of that ſtrange ſigne which George Scherrer ſhewed at his death, who being beheaded, the body lay a pretie ſpace vpon the bellie till one might haue eaten an egge, and then turned it ſelfe vpon the backe, and croſſed the right hand ouer the left, and the right leg ouer the left: the Magiſtrates ſeeing it, hauing condemned his bodie to be burned before, being moued at the ſight hereof, cauſed it to be buried, Fox ex Matth. Illyrico.

It is worth the remembring, that is reported in the French ſtories of Petrus Bergerius a bleſſed Martyr: who was caſt into a filthie dungeon, where a theefe had lien the ſpace of eight moneths, being almoſt eaten vp with lice, and in ſuch miſerie, that he curſed his parents that bare him. This man through the teaching and the prayers of the Martyr, felt ſuch comfort in the Goſpell, that he became very patient in his affliction: and after his conuerſion this ſtrange thing was wrought vpon him; that whereas before hee was ſo full of lice, that hee might haue plucked out twelue at once betweene two of his fingers, the next day hee had not one, Fox ex Iohan. Criſpin. pag. 607.

Many ſuch other miraculous workes ſhewed in the life and death of the holy Martyrs, we are able to rehearſe: as that of Zuinglius, whoſe heart was found whole and vnburned three daies after his bodie was conſumed with fire, ex Oſwald. Miconio: the like whereof is conſtantly reported of bleſſed Cranmer, that his heart was found vnconſumed in the aſhes, his bodie being burned.

Stephen Brune Martyr at Rutiers in France 1540. could not be conſumed with the fire that was twiſe made about him, with veſſels of oyle powred vpon the faggots, ſo that the hangman in the end was faine to thruſt him thorough with his pike: ex Iohan. Criſpin.

Stephen Mangin Martyr burned at Meaux anno 1546. hauing his tongue firſt cut out, yet ſo ſpake, that he might be vnderſtood, ſaying, The Lords name be bleſſed, Iohan. Criſpin. lib. 6.

The like alſo is recorded of two other Martyrs, at Sanſerre, Iohannes Fileul, and Iulianus Leuille, who ſpake, their tongues being firſt taken from them, Fox pag.911. ex Iohan. Criſpin: ſo did alſo Peter Rouſeau Martyr at Bloys, anno 1556. ex Iohan. Criſpin. One Faninus an Italian Martyr was burned at Ferrara, anno 1550. for the truths ſake, whoſe bodie in the burning gaue an odoriferous fragrant ſmell of incomparable ſweetneſſe to all there preſent, ex Henric. Pantal. lib.7.

But we need not ſearch forraine ſtories for ſuch miraculous workes: God hath ſhewed his great power, and ſet forth his glorie, euen in our Engliſh Martyrs: it is crediblie teſtified, that where Wickliffes bones were brent ſprang vp a well, Fox pag.1044.

Iames Bainham in the middeſt of the flaming fire, his armes and legges being halfe conſumed, ſpake theſe words: O ye Papiſts, behold you looke for miracles, and here now you may ſee a miracle, for in this fire I feele no more paine, then if I were in a bed of down, but it is to me as ſweet as a bed of Roſes, Fox p.1030. What greater miracle can be looked for, then that the cruell rage of the fire ſhould be ſo ſtrangely ſlaked and mitigated, that it ſhould become not onely not grieuous, but pleaſant to the ſufferers? The like mitigation of paine, that conſtant Martyr M. Haukes, gaue a comfortable and chearefull ſignification of, by thriſe clapping of his hands ouer his head burning of a light fire, when euery man thought he had been dead, Fox pag.1592. Many ſuch examples might here be brought in: as of Robert Samuel Martyr, whoſe body is ſaid to haue ſhined bright like tried ſiluer in the middeſt of the fire. pag.1704. Likewiſe after the burning of Iohn Noyes Martyr, there was found in the aſhes one of his feete vnburned, whole with the hoſe on, vp to the anckle, Fox pag.2022.

Who ſeeth not now, that if miracles were to be ſtood vpon, and that thereby we would make proofe of our Church, that herein we might haue great aduantage againſt our aduerſaries? But their common anſwere is, that all theſe are fables, which we report of our Martyrs. And why I pray you, doo theſe things ſeeme incredible? May not God as well ſhew his power in theſe holy Martyrs, as he did in the auncient witneſſes of truth, that were perſecuted and put to death vnder the heathen Emperors? for Gods armes are not ſhortened, he is able to doo as great workes now, as he did then: And theſe his ſeruants died for the ſame truth, for the which the ancient Martyrs gaue their liues: Why ſhould it be more vnlikelie, that ſome of the Martyrs of our Church haue ſtood at the ſtake vntouched of the fire, as we haue heard before of Stephen Brune, then that Policarpus continued in the fire without burning, the fire hauing no power of his bodie, but was in the end thruſt through, as Stephen Brune alſo was ſerued, or that Cecilia remained a day and a night in a hot bath without hurt, as if ſhe had been in a cold place?

Why might not the Lord giue vnto Stephen Mangin Martyr, and others power to ſpeake, their tongues being cut out, as he did to Romanus, who being depriued of his tongue ſpake theſe words: He that ſpeaketh Chriſt ſhall neuer want a tongue? Fox pag.90.

Polycarpus before mentioned, his bodie in the middeſt of the fire gliſtered like ſiluer or golde, pag.43. Why may we not credit the like report of Robert Samuel? There came a moſt pleaſant ſmell from Polycarpus bodie, as it had been of mirrhe, or ſome pretious balme: may not this as well be true of Faninus, whoſe example we ſaw before? Polycarpus being thruſt through with a ſword, for he could not burne, there guſhed out ſuch aboundance of blood, as that the fire was quenched therewith. May we not as well beleeue, that which is reported of Biſhop Latimer, whoſe prayer vnto God was, that he might giue his heart blood for his truth, and ſo it came to paſſe, that in the fire, his ſides being opened by the violence thereof, the blood iſſued out abundantly, which was ſtrange to behold. Fox p.1740. But I will be ſparing in theſe reports: for we haue better arguments to proue our Church by, as ſhall afterward appeare.

Yet, before I leaue this place, becauſe the Ieſuite hath ſuch a ſpite at Luther, (hee is a great eyeſore to him) we will in a worde or two declare what ſtrange things were wrought by Luther. It is crediblie reported of him, that a certaine young man had bound himſelfe by obligation to the Diuell, ſealed with his blood to giue him his ſoule, ſo he might haue his wiſh and deſire ſatiſfied with money: In ſhort time he grew to great wealth: the matter being diſcloſed with much adoo to Luther, he calleth the congregation together, and ioyneth in prayer for this young man: and as they prayed, the obligation was caſt in at the window. This credible report of Luthers act, may counteruaile the lying tale of rayling Staphylus, whom the Ieſuite ſo much crediteth, how that Luther attempted to caſt a diuell out of a woman, and was in danger to be ſlaine of the diuell himſelfe, *Bellarm. cap.*16. But why ſhould it ſeeme ſtrange, that by the prayers of the congregation the diuell ſhould depart? For by two waies are vncleane ſpirits caſt out, one is by the extraordinarie gift and faith of miracles, which though it continued ſome ages after the Apoſtles, till the Goſpell was vniuerſally planted, yet we holde it generally to be ceaſed now: the other way is ordinarie by faſting and prayer, which our Sauiour preſcribeth, Matth.17.21. Whereby we doubt not, but euen in theſe dayes, when it pleaſeth God, Sathan is chaſed from the poſſeſſion of Chriſts members. And in this kind Luther was ſingular, who vſed to pray ſo feruently, that the teares were ſeene to fall from his eyes in his prayer: And theſe are the weapons, whereby we fight againſt Sathan, the word of God and prayer, which are more forcible, then your ſuperſtitious croſſings, coniurations, exorcizings, yea then your holy water, or holy water ſprinckle. The experience hereof Origene ſheweth, that as he was preaching of thoſe words, 1. Sam. 2. of Anna, My heart reioyced in the Lord, one being preſent hauing an vncleane ſpirite cried out: vpon which occaſion Origene further ſaid thus, Contrarius ſpiritus exultationem noſtram in domino ferre non potuit: The aduerſarie ſpirit cannot abide our reioycing in the Lord, &c. Theſe meanes then of the Word and prayer ſeeing Luther had, we may more eaſilie be perſwaded of the truth of the ſtorie.

A notable and ſtrange miracle, credibly reported of Luther. Fox. pag.864.

Hom. in. 2. cap. 1. lib. Sam.

And as he was earneſt in prayer, ſo his prayers wanted not effect; for as he himſelfe confeſſed, he had obtained of God, that ſo long as he liued, the Pope ſhould not preuaile in his countrey. And is not this alſo a thing to be wondred at, that for all the Pope and Emperour ioyned together, and bent their forces againſt this ſillie poore man; yet the Lord defended him from the Lions teeth, and graunted him to end his daies in peace?

Thus it is apparant and manifeſt, that the Lord ſheweth his miraculous power many times in his Saints, to aſtoniſh the wicked: the great miracles which haue been declared in their holy martyrdomes, would fill a large volume. But theſe arguments we doe not chiefly ſtand vpon: yet thus much was not amiſſe by the way to be put in, to requite our aduerſaries withall, who doe ſo greatly magnifie and extoll their Antichriſtian Church, for their lying and fained miracles.

The ſixt Note, of the gift of Propheſying.

23. Error.

THis alſo our aduerſaries holde to be a perpetuall marke, whereby to knowe the Church: for they ſay that the true Church of God wanteth not thoſe which are endewed with the ſpirit of propheſie: And ſo they beare vs in hand, that in euery age there hath flouriſhed ſome Prophet in their Church: the firſt, that the Church ſhall alwaies haue Prophets, they would proue out of Ioel 2. I will power of my ſpirit vpon all fleſh. The ſecond, that they haue had ſuch prophets, they doe infer vpon a few forged examples, of Saint Bernard, and Saint Francis, a popiſh ſaint, and the founder of the ſuperſtitious order of the Franciſcans, and of ſuch others: Bellarmine cap. 15.

To the firſt we anſwere. 1. The propheſie of Ioel was accompliſhed in the apoſtles time, Act. 2. as Saint Peter expoundeth it, and therefore we neede not looke further for the fulfilling of it. 2. The Church of the Iewes wanted Prophets for the ſpace of foure hundred yeares and more before the comming of Chriſt: for we reade of no Prophet after Malachy: and the Church complaineth of this want, Pſalm. 74. verſ. 9. that they had Prophets no more: wherefore, the Church of God after the comming of Chriſt, may better ſpare this extraordinarie function of propheſying, ſeeing both Chriſt is alreadie come, who was the very ſubiect and matter of all the auncient propheſies; and we haue alſo moſt euident propheſies of the Apoſtles, Rom. 11. concerning the calling of the Iewes, 2. Theſ. 2. of Antichriſt in the Apocalypſe, of the generall eſtate and condition of the Church to the end of the world: Some of which are alreadie accompliſhed, ſome to be fulfilled in their ſeaſon: In theſe propheſies, we muſt reſt and content our ſelues, not looking for new reuelations. 3. There haue been Prophets amongſt the heathen, out of the Church of God: they alſo can bring foorth diuers old propheſies; ſo that if the iſſue lay in this point, they might as well contend to be the Church of God. Aſtyages dreamed that he ſaw a vine growing out of his daughter, that couered all Aſia: which came to paſſe in Cyrus. Auguſtine reporteth a propheſie of Hermes Triſmegiſtus, how that all the images and Idols of the heathen ſhould be broken downe through all Ægypt. The Indians were foretold of the Spaniards comming many a yeare before their arriuall in thoſe places: Their Zemes, that is, their deuils, which they worſhipped as Gods, told them, that there ſhould come a people with long beardes, fierce and cruell, that at one ſtroke ſhould ſtrike men oft by the middle: And all theſe things fell out afterwards to that nation accordingly.

Iuſtin. lib. 1. De ciuit. Dei lib. 8. cap. 26.

Benzo lib. 1. cap. 8.

But they will anſwere, that theſe were not true propheſies inſpired of God, but vncertaine predictions of the diuell. What will they ſay then to Balaam, that propheſied of Chriſt? There ſhall come a ſtarre of Iacob (ſaith he) Num. 24. 17. and in the ſame place, he ſaith, he heard the words of God.

The propheſies alſo of Sibill are wonderfull, which many yeares before the comming of Chriſt, propheſied of his incarnation, and of his paſſion, with the circumſtances thereof, as how he ſhould be crowned with thornes, that they ſhould giue him vineger to drinke, how the vaile of the temple ſhould be rent, and darknes ſhould couer the earth for three houres: and he himſelfe ſhould riſe the third day: yea ſhe ſetteth downe the very name of the Meſſiah, Ieſus Chriſt. Theſe propheſies came not of the diuell, for theſe myſteries, without all doubt, were not knowne to the euill ſpirits: for they were not fully reuealed to the Angels themſelues before the comming of Chriſt, Epheſ. 3. 10. Wherefore we conclude thus, that as the gift of propheſying is no ſure ſigne that they are members of the Church and elected of God, which are endued with it; as Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 7. 22. that that many which had propheſied in his name, in the day of iudgement ſhould be refuſed; and Balaam is ſet forth as an example of a falſe prophet and wicked man, Ep. Iude 11: So neither is this gift an infallible marke of the Church of God, whereſoeuer it is found. Your owne canons auouch the ſame, decr. part. 2. cauſ. 1. qu. 1. cap. 79. Prophetauit & Saul malus rex, & tunc prophetauit, cùm Dauid ſanctum perſequeretur: Saul alſo propheſied an euill King, and at that time, when he perſecuted Dauid. The gift then of propheſying, as it ſheweth not him to be a member of the Church, that hath it; ſo neither that to be the Church, where it is found.

To the Second part, concerning this miraculous gift which our aduerſaries pretend to haue: we anſwer. 1. They are but fables which they bring: for if all that is reported of S. Bernard in his life, of his miracles, and propheſies, were true, neither S. Paul nor any of the Apoſtles were to be compared vnto him for number of miracles: ſuch caſting out of diuels out of men, women and children, healing of ſtrange diſeaſes, foretelling of things to come: the Goſpell almoſt hath not ſtranger things of our Sauiour Chriſt. And S. Hierome, who was long before Bernards time, ſheweth that propheſie was then ceaſed: Prophetia domini paſſione ſignata eſt: All propheſie is ſealed vp in the paſſion of Chriſt, Tom. 3. ad Marcellam.

As for S. Francis, you may geſſe by this, what ſpirit he was of, that preſcribing to his followers, a certaine ſtrict order of liuing, as to weare no girdle, to goe barefoot, and ſuch like, he called it regulam euangelicam, the rule of the Goſpell: belike making himſelfe an other Chriſt, and ſo bringing in another Goſpell: for to all Chriſts diſciples Chriſts Goſpell is ſufficient. 2. But if they haue any propheſies of credit, which they can ſhew, they are ſuch, as are reported of Pope Silueſter the ſecond, who had warrant from the diuell, that he ſhould not die before he ſung Maſſe in Ieruſalem: and ſo it came to paſſe, for hauing ſung Maſſe in a chappell ſo called, he immediatly died. Not much vnlike to this was that of King Henry the fourth, who ended his life in a chamber at Weſtminſter called Ieruſalem, as he had an old propheſie. Edward the fourth alſo was told, that his ſucceſſors name ſhould begin with G. which was the cauſe of George the Duke of Clarence death, his owne brother: but the diuelliſh propheſie notwithſtanding tooke place, for Richard Duke of Glocester was King after him. In like manner Valence the Emperour had a blind propheſie, that one ſhould raigne after him, whoſe name began with Theod. which made Theodorus to rebell againſt him: but ſo it came to paſſe in deed, that Theodoſius was Emperour after him. Such blinde propheſies we denie not but the popiſh Church hath had many, which as you ſee, doe cauſe murder, ſedition, and bloudſhed: but other good propheſies comming of God, we know them not to haue any.

Fox pag. 717.

3 We denie not, but that there haue liued ſome amongſt them in their Church, which in thoſe dayes were counted prophets and prophetiſſes, as Hildegardis, anno 1146. likewiſe Briget, Catharine Senenſis: whom Bellarmine reckoneth vp amongſt others that wrought miracles. chap. 14. But concerning theſe we will anſwere, as the Ieſuite doth for Sibilla a prophetiſſe amongſt the heathen: that ſhe propheſied as touching ſuch matters as ſhould fall out to the Church, for a teſtimony of the faith of the Chriſtians: and ſo to be counted herein a prophetiſſe of the Church rather than of the heathen. chap. 15. So we ſay, that if thoſe three aboue named were Prophetiſſes, they were of our Church, and not theirs: for they propheſied of the decay of their Church and raiſing vp of ours. Hildegardis firſt propheſied of the beginning of Friers, and of their deſtruction, ſaying, that in the end, when their giftes and rewards ceaſed, they ſhould goe about their houſes like hungrie and madde dogges, drawing in their necks like doues. Bridget propheſied of the Church of Rome, that it ſhould be as a bodie condemned of a iudge, to haue the skin flaine off, and the fleſh to be cut in peeces: Catharine de Senis ſpeaketh of a reformation of the Church, and ſuch a renouation of Paſtors, that the onely remembrance thereof ſaith ſhe, maketh my ſpirit to reioyce in the Lord. All theſe things we ſee now accompliſhed: the ſects of Friers in many places put downe: the Popiſh iuriſdiction caſt out, a notable reformation to be wrought in the Church: our aduerſaries (I thinke) haue not to reioyſe in theſe propheſies; neither haue any great cauſe to challenge them for their Prophets. But I will helpe them a little, and bring to their remembrance a notable Prophetiſſe of theirs in King Henry the eights dayes, which was one Elizabeth barton a Nun, commonly called the holy maide of Kent, who being inſtructed by the Friers, fayned, as though ſhe had many reuelations: ſhe propheſied, that if the King proceeded in his diuorce, then in queſtion betweene him and Queene Katharine, that he ſhould not be King one yeare, no not one moneth: But (God be thanked) he liued almoſt twentie yeares after that, by whom many worthie things were wrought for the good of Chriſts Church. This prophetiſſe was afterward iuſtly met withall, and worthily ſuffered for her demerits, with all her accomplices: amongſt the which, Fiſher B. of Rocheſter was one, who thereupon was impriſoned, and forfayted his goods to the King. If they wil brag of their Prophets, let not the holy maide of Kent be forgotten in any wiſe.

4 Now laſtly becauſe they ſhall not outface vs with a vaine brag of prophets: I will ſhew what propheſies the Goſpell hath been adorned withall. Was not Iohn Huſſe a Prophet, who thus ſaid at his death: centum reuolutis annis deo reſpondebitis: after an hundred yeres you ſhall giue account of this your doing vnto God? Likewiſe Hierom of Prage, poſt centum annos vos omnes cito: I cite you all to make anſwere after an hundred yeares. Which propheſie of theirs tooke effect accordingly: for both theſe holy men ſuffred martyrdome about anno 1416. and iuſt an hundred yeares after, anno 1516. the Lord raiſed vp Luther, who indeed called the Pope and his doctrine to account.

Was not Sauonarola a Prophet, that ſaid one ſhould paſſe ouer the Alpes like Cyrus, who ſhould deſtroy all Italie? and is it not ſo come to paſſe? for neither Cyrus, nor whoſoeuer elſe could haue more laide waſt the popiſh Italian Church then the word of God hath done, and the liuely preaching of the Goſpel? Walter Brute propheſied that the temporalities ſhould be taken from the clergie for the multitude of their ſinnes: this Walter liued in King Richards dayes the ſecond. Bilney that conſtant Martyr and faithfull ſeruant of God propheſied, that many Preachers ſhould come after him, which ſhould preach the ſame faith that he had taught, and ſhould conuert many from their errors.

Fox pag.500.

We will come vnto neerer times: Did not Maſter Hooper prophecie, when taking his leaue of M. Bullinger at Zuricke, he ſaid thus vnto him, You ſhall be ſure (ſaith he) to heare from me, from time to time out of England: but the laſt newes of all I ſhall not be able to write, for there where I ſhall take moſt paines, you ſhall heare of me burned to aſhes? And ſo it came to paſſe, for he was burned at Glouceſter, where he was Biſhop, Fox pag. 1503.

Maſter Latimer would alwaies ſay, that the preaching of the Goſpell would coſt him his life, and he was perſwaded, he ſaid, that Wincheſter was kept in the tower for the ſame purpoſe. p. 1740.

Maſter Rogers prophecied in Queene Maries daies, that the Goſpell ſhould bee reſtored, and that the diſperſed Engliſh flocke ſhould bee brought againe to their former eſtate, pag. 1492. A certaine woman alſo in Exceter that died for the truth, ſpake to the like effect: who entring as it happened into S. Peters Church, where ſhe found a cunning Dutchman, making of new noſes to certaine Images, which had been diſfigured in King Edwards daies, ſaid vnto him, What a mad man art thou to make them new noſes, which within a few daies ſhall all loſe their heads: as it came indeede to paſſe, pag. 2051.

Roger Holland ſtanding in examination before bloodie Boner, thus boldly ſaid vnto him: This I dare be bold in God to ſpeake, which by his ſpirit I am moued to ſay, that God wil ſhorten your hand of crueltie, for after this day in this place, ſhall there not any by him (meaning Boner) bee put to death, pag. 2042. And after this day indeede, there was none put to death in Smithfield.

What ſhall I ſpeake of Maſter Bradford, who writeth thus in his epiſtle to Cambridge: You know I prophecied truly to you, before the Sweat came, what would come, if you repented not your carnall Goſpelling. I might here alſo inferre the propheticall praiers of the Martyrs: as how Maſter Latimer praied that the Goſpell might once againe be reſtored to England, and earneſtly ſued in his praiers for the preſeruation of Ladie Elizabeth, now our moſt gratious Queene: the which his praiers, the Lord, whoſe name eternally be bleſſed for it, in mercie to this land graciouſly granted. The like praier Maſter Philpot made at the ſtake for the reſtoring of the Goſpell, pag. 1831. col. 1. And, to make ſhort, the fiue laſt Martyrs burned at Canturburie, deſired God in their praiers before their martyrdome, that their blood might be the laſt that ſhould be ſhed: and ſo it was, Fox pag. 2053.

I alleage not theſe examples, vnto the which I could adde many beſides, to this end, as though I thought that thoſe propheticall gifts are ordinarie in the Church, or that thoſe holy Martyrs had the calling of Prophets (though it cannot bee denied, but that at ſome times, and in ſome caſes they had the ſpirit of prophecie;) or that hereby we meane to proue our Church: but to anſwere a little vnto our aduerſaries vaine, and vntrue bragges, that it may appeare to all men, with how much better right, wee might chalenge this propheticall gift in the behalfe and name of our Church.

Hitherto wee haue touched ſixe onely of the principall notes of the popiſh Church: the reſt which the Ieſuite addeth to make vp the number of fifteene, are ſuch vagrant and vncertaine notes, that I wonder, the Ieſuite for ſhame, would ſtuffe his booke with them: I will therefore only name them.

Another note therefore of Bellarmines Church beſide thoſe ſet downe, is duratio diuturna, nec vnquam interrupta, is the the long and laſting continuance of their Church without any interruption: their Church, they ſay, hath endured 1570. yeeres and more alreadie, and is like to continue to the worlds end: but our Church is newly begun, and ſhall ſoone come to an end, Bellarm. lib. 4. cap. 6.

Anſw. 1. Duration or continuance is no good argument of the Church: the heathen Idolaters could and did ſay as much for their idolatrie: As Aſclepiades obiected to Romanus (holy Martyr) Thy crucified Chriſt, ſaith he, is but a yeſterdaies God, the Gods of the Gentiles are of great antiquitie. 2. It is not true that their Church hath endured ſo long, they muſt ſtrike off almoſt 600. yeeres from their account; and yet moſt of their errors are nothing ſo old: yet if they could make vp the full number they ſpeake of, they haue not much to bragge of: The kingdome of the Sycionians, as Auguſtine witneſſeth, endured 950. yeeres, the Monarchie of the Aſſyrians 1300. yeeres and more; yet were they not for all this the Church of God. 3. The deſcent and pedegree of their Church hath not all this while, they ſay, been interrupted. To this we haue anſwered before, in the third note of ſucceſſion: Our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles could not ſhew a perpetuall deſcent of their Church not interrupted, yet were they the true Church. 4. Their Church ſhall endure to the end of the world: ſo ſhall Sathans kingdome waxe ſtronger towards the end: There ſhall be a generall decay of faith and charitie, Matth. 24. 12. yea and there ſhall be ſome remnant of Antichriſts kingdome euen at the comming of Chriſt: but to what end Saint Paul ſheweth, to bee aboliſhed with the brightnes of his comming, 2. Theſſ. 2. 8. 5. Neither is our Church, as they falſely charge vs, newly ſtart vp: but of our Church were the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Martyrs, as wee haue ſhewed: the Church of God may ſometime lie hidden in the world, and ſo hath ours. But they goe further, Our Church, they ſay, ſhall not long continue: So the heathen faced downe the Chriſtians, that their religion ſhould laſt but 365. yeeres: but it proued c[illegible]ne contrarie; for the Chriſtian faith increaſed ſtill, and Paganiſme within that compaſſe was baniſhed. As for our Church we know it ſhal continue to the worlds end, though with much trouble and perſecution, and euer after ſhall be with Chriſt.

Lib. 18. de ciuitat. dei c. 26.

Auguſt. de ciuitat. dei lib. 18. cap. 52.

Another note, which Bellarmine maketh the ſixt in number, is, Conſpiratio in doctrina cum Eccleſia antiqua: Their conſpiring in doctrine with the ancient Church, cap. 9. where he taketh paines to caſt vpon vs twentie ſeuerall hereſies.

Anſw. 1. For the full anſwere of this ſlaunder, I doe referre the reader to the ſecond pillar of Papiſtrie, part. 3. where it is euidently prooued, that the Papiſts (and not the Proteſtants) doe reuiue the old hereſies.

2 It may appeare, by the perpetuall allegation of Auguſtine and the decrees of Councels generall and prouinciall, yea and of their owne Canons, throughout this treatiſe in defence of our cauſe, that our doctrine agreeth with antiquitie, and not Papiſtrie.

Notwithſtanding as touching the Ieſuites chalenge of hereſie, where he laieth to our charge twentie ſeuerall hereſies, I haue eaſily remoued them, and requited him with fortie ſeuerall hereſies, all proued to bee in their Church: for the particular anſwere, to that place I referre the reader.

See the 2. pillar of Papiſtric, part. 3.

But now in generall it ſhall appeare by ſuch deſcriptions of heretikes, as heretofore haue been made, and by them cannot be refuſed, that not we, but they are the heretikes of theſe daies.

1 And firſt, if they will be tried by the definition of an heretike in the Ciuill law, wee will not refuſe: as Cod. lib. 1 tit. 4. leg. 1. Gratian and Valentinian thus define an heretike: Qui patris, filij, & ſpiritus ſancti deitatem ſub pari maieſtate non credunt, hæreticorum infamiam ſuſtinere, &c. They which doe not beleeue the deitie of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt to bee of equall maieſtie, ſhall ſuſtaine the infamie of heretikes. But we doe ſo beleeue: Ergo, are no heretikes. The popiſh Church is rather to be ſuſpected herein, that affirme, that Chriſt is not ἀυτόθεος, God of himſelfe: now if the Father be God of himſelfe, and the Sonne haue a beginning of his Godhead; then muſt there bee an inequalitie in the Godhead. See more of this afterward, Controu. 20. part. 2. quæſt. 1.

2 Likewiſe, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 8. leg. 2. Gratian. Valentinian. Hæreticus iudicatur, qui à minimo fidei deuiat articulo: He is iudged an heretike, that departeth from the leaſt article of the faith. But it is an article of the faith to beleeue, that Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God, and ſhall not come from thence till the day of iudgement: which the Papiſts muſt needes denie, affirming Chriſts bodie to be really and corporally in the Sacrament: and ſo they muſt either make Chriſt to haue two bodies, one in heauen, another in earth; or elſe they muſt hold, that his bodie may bee in two places at once, contrarie to the nature of a bodie.

3 We will not refuſe the triall of an heretike by your owne Canons: Decret. par. 2. cauſ. 24. quæſt. 3. cap. 28. Hæreticus eſt, qui alicuius temporalis commodi, & maximè gloriæ, principatuſque ſui gratia, falſas ac nouas opiniones gignit: He is an heretike, that for ſome temporall commoditie, eſpecially for glorie and principalitie ſake, doth deuiſe and follow new and ſtrange opinions. But the Papiſts doe ſeeke the glorie and principalitie of the Papall See, and the commoditie thereof, and thereto hold new opinions, as that it is of neceſsitie to ſaluation to beleeue the Pope to be head of the Church; that the Pope is aboue Councels, and ſuch like: Ergo, they are heretikes. And to ſpeake the truth, moſt of the popiſh opinions are ſuch as either tend to aduance the pride of the Biſhop of Rome, as the doctrine of his primacie ouer other Churches, his ſuperioritie ouer Kings, Princes, and ſuch like; or elſe to make their owne purſes fat, as their opinions of their reall preſence, Maſſes propitiatorie tiatorie for the quicke and the dead,purgatorie,pardons,pilgrimages,and ſuch other. And it was well ſaid (though merily) of Eraſmus to the Duke of Saxonie, who asked his iudgement of Luther; that he medled with two dangerous matters,that would not be touched,the Popes Crown, and the Monkes bellie.

4 Further alſo it followeth thus in your Canons as touching an heretike: Decret.par.2.cauſ.24. quæſt.3.c.30. Qui non ad Propheticas voces, non ad Apoſtolicas literas, non ad Euangelicas authoritates, ſed ad ſeipſos recurrunt, magiſtri erroris exiſtunt,&c. They which haue not recourſe to the Prophets, Apoſtles writings, and the Goſpels, are become the maſters of errors. And what this meaneth is expounded by Pope Vrbane in the ſame place,cap.32.Quia magiſter erroris eſt,non tantum hæreticus, ſed etiam hæreſiarcha dicendus eſt: Becauſe he is a maſter of error,he is not only an heretike, but an hereſiarch,that is,a maſter of hereſies. But the Papiſts,and not we, leaue the Propheticall,Apoſtolicall,Euangelicall writings,and runne vnto traditions, that is, to themſelues: Ergo they, not we, are the heretikes.

5 Likewiſe,Decr.p.2.cauſ.16.quæſt.7.Gregor.7. defineth, that he that ſhould graunt away to lay perſons or others,then to Prieſts,oblations and tithes, inter maximos hæreticos non minimus habeatur,let him bee counted not the leaſt among the greateſt heretikes. But the Pope is the man that firſt alienated the propertie of tithes, and erected impropriations, and ſo maintained them; as it may appeare in King Henry the thirds time,when the Biſhops of this land made ſuite to the Pope to haue impropriate benefices reſtored to the firſt vſe; at the contrarie ſuite of the Monkes, the Pope determined that they ſhould ſtand ſtill: Ergo,they are the heretikes.

Ex Flor.hiſtoriar. an. 1261.

6 Againe,your owne Canons allow this ſaying of S. Hierome,deciphering the authors of hereſie, Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.quæſt.3.cap.33.Veteres ſcrutans hiſtorias inuenire non poſſum ſcidiſſe eccleſiam,&c.& populos ſeduxiſſe, niſi eos, qui ſacerdotes à Deo poſiti erant: Looking ouer the ancient ſtories I cannot finde that any did make ſchiſmes in the Church, and ſeduce the people, but the Prieſts,&c. But the Papiſts ſay,that they onely haue the prieſthood, and that they are the true prieſts. If hereſie then and ſchiſme begin among the prieſts, as Hierome in his reading obſerued, and the Papiſts take themſelues to be the prieſts of theſe daies;then the Seminarie of hereſie is amongſt them. If it ſhall be anſwered,that Hierome ſpeaketh of the times before vnder the law,not ſince:the words following ſhew the contrarie,Iſti vertuntur in laqueum tortuoſum,in omnibus locis ponentes ſcandalum: Theſe, ſaith he, meaning the prieſts, are become ſnares,in euery place putting a ſtumbling blocke. He ſpeaketh of the time preſent and then being.

7 Or will they allow of the Maſter of Sentences definition of an heretike, who out of Hilarie affirmeth thoſe to be heretikes, aliter interpretantes ſcripturas,quam dictorum virtus poſtulat; de intelligentia enim hæreſis,non de ſcriptura eſt, which do interprete the Scripture,otherwiſe then the words are:for hereſie commeth not of the Scripture,but by the falſe vnderſtanding,lib.4.diſt.13.C. But the Papiſts doe thus interprete Scripture cleane beſide the text: for the probation whereof I referre the reader to the treatiſe annexed,2.pillar,part.2.Ergo,they are heretikes.

8 Heare alſo how one of your owne champions deſcribeth an heretike and hereſie: Hereſie is a falſe opinion defended with pertinacie cleerely repugning the word of God; Iohn Wynrime in his ſermon at S.Andrewes in Scotland,at the condēnation of M.*George Wiſehart,an.*1546.Fox p.1268. But many ſuch opinions the Papiſts maintaine contrarie to the Scriptures,as more at large in the place quoted before in the treatiſe annexed I haue ſhewed: Ergo,they are the heretikes.

Many other deſcriptions of hereſie I could alleage out of the Fathers,but theſe may ſuffice,gathered out of their owne authorities, by the which it is euident that Papiſts, not Proteſtants are heretikes.

The third note omitted, but with Bellarmine the eight, is Sanctitas doctrinæ, the holineſſe and pureneſſe of their doctrine,cap.11.

Anſw. I thinke theſe men will not bluſh in the end, to make a Saint of the diuell: for what more vnchaſt and vnpure religion can there be, then Poperie is? Call you that an holy religion, that canonized Thomas Becket for a Saint,who was a rebell and traitor to his Prince? Is that pure doctrine that calleth the mariage of Miniſters the worſt ſort of fornication? ſic Rhemiſt. That alloweth ſwearing and blaſpheming? One Sanpaulinus, for reprouing a man of ſwearing,was ſuſpected to bee a Lutheran,and thereupon examined,condemned,and burned,Fox pag.904. Is that an holy and perfect religion, which reprobates may attaine vnto? for the popiſh profeſsion requireth no more, then may bee found in reprobates. See a treatiſe of this ſet forth by W.Perkins.

Laſtly, let Roger Holland ſpeake, firſt a Papiſt, afterwards by Gods mercifull working an holie Martyr: He confeſſing of himſelfe in the hearing of his enemies, that while he was a Papiſt, he was giuen to carding and dicing,to riot,drunkenneſſe,all kinde of wantonneſſe, in hope of auricular confeſſion to the prieſt, and giuing him ſomewhat to doe penance for him, thinking, that hauing ſo done,he was of a cleere ground,and might returne to his old vomit againe. See his ſtorie, Fox pag.2040. Iudge now what a pure Religion this may be, which is a doctrine of libertie, and patrone of all licentious liuing?

The fourth note omitted, but with Bellarmine the ninth, is Efficacia doctrina, the efficacie and force of their doctrine in conuerting many vnto the faith, cap.12.

Anſw. 1. We graunt you that your religion is ſtrong to delude and deceiue, as all ſuperſtition is, and as S. Paul ſaith of Antichriſts teaching, Whoſe comming is by the working of Sathan, with all power, &c. 2.Theſſ.2.9.

2. We are much beholding vnto them, in affording vs ſo good an argument for our religion, which is very efficacious and forcible. Let the kingdomes of England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Dutchland, Germanie, Polonia, Denmarke, teſtifie, which ſometimes were blinded with poperie: but now (God be thanked) by the preaching of the Goſpell haue receiued great light: yea the efficacie of the Goſpell appeareth in the conuerſion of many obſtinate Papiſts to the profeſſion of the Goſpell, euen in time of perſecution, and to become conſtant Martyrs for the ſame, as hath been before declared in the fifth note of Miracles, 3.anſ. by the example of George Tankerfield, Iulius Palmer, Miſtreſſe Lewes, Roger Holland, &c.

The fifth note omitted, with Bellarmine the tenth, is Sanctitas vita, the holines of life of the authors, and profeſſors of their religion, cap.13.

Anſw. Goe to then, let vs ſee what holy Fathers the patrones of Poperie haue been; we will begin with their Popes: Was not Pope Ioane a holy woman, who hauing plaied the whore, fell in trauell in the middeſt of proceſſion? Was not Pope Iohn 13. another, who is ſaid to haue drunke to the diuell, to haue defloured virgins and ſtrangers; he lay with Stephana his fathers Concubine, and at the laſt was ſlaine in adulterie? Silueſter the 2. was a Coniurer and a Sorcerer, and couenanted with the diuell for his Popedome: To theſe we will ioyne Gregorie the 7. to make vp a meſſe, of whom Benno writeth, that he raiſed vp the diuell, and poyſoned ſixe Popes his predeceſſors. Many ſuch examples we may finde amongſt their pope holy fathers.

Luitprand. lib.6.

To thoſe we may ioyne other of their chiefe pillars. The Cardinall of Crema being ſent Legate into England, Anno 1129. in a Councel at London inueighing againſt the mariage of prieſts, ſaid it was a ſhamefull thing to riſe from the ſides of an whore, to make Chriſts bodie: who the night following, was ſhamefully taken with a notable whore, Fox pag.1167.

Doctor Maillard a great Sorboniſt in Paris, was ſo notoriouſly practiſed in the filthie acts of Buggerie and Sodomitrie, that almoſt all the children in the ſtreetes did know it: ex Iohan Criſpin.

And to come neerer home: that ſtout champion of Poperie, and captaine diſputer Doctor Weſton, was he not apprehended in adulterie, and depriued of all his ſpirituall liuings?

Fox pag.2102.

Neither were thoſe the practiſes of a few, but ſuch generally was the guiſe of their Clergie: It was one of the grieuances exhibited by the Nobilitie of Germany in the Councell at Norenberg, that the prieſts being forbidden to marrie, did goe about day and night to attempt and trie the chaſtitie of matrones, virgins, wiues, &c. pag.680. Yea, and it is ſo ſhamefull to rehearſe what filthie abominations were brought to light at the ſuppreſſion of the Abbayes here in England, which they practiſed in corners, as the Apoſtle ſaith, It is a ſhame to ſpeake of the things, which are done by them in ſecret, Epheſ.5.12. See Maſter Bale his preface to his booke de actis Romanorum pontificum. Wherefore the Ieſuite needed not, ſeeing their nakedneſſe is laid open to the view of the world, thus to boaſt of the holineſſe of their profeſſors, as to make it a note of their Church, which falleth out cleane contrarie.

The ſixt note omitted, with Bellarmine the fifteenth, is, ſaith he, Confeſſio aduerſariorum, The confeſſion of their aduerſaries. But here he is very weake in his prooues: Caluinus vocat Bernardum pium ſcriptorem: Caluin (ſaith the Ieſuite) calleth Bernard a godly writer, cap.16.

Anſ. Firſt, I pray you, what hath he got by Caluins confeſſion here? May not a man commend ſomething in one, and yet not commend all? Caluin commendeth Bernard for a godly deuout man, yet he approoueth not his iudgement in all things: godlineſſe of life is one thing; pureneſſe and ſinceritie of iudgement another. But what if he had ſimply commended Bernard, what is this to them? who though in many things he ſauour of ſuperſtition, yet in the moſt points is a witneſſe with vs rather then with them, as I could eaſily ſhew, if it were either needfull or conuenient in this place.

Secondly, the Ieſuite, to prooue the confeſſion of his aduerſaries, giueth but one poore inſtance of Caluines confeſſion, and ſuch another of Melancthons, which make nothing for them. But we can bring forth many confeſſions of the truth vttered by Papiſts: ſome for examples ſake I will ſet downe.

Panormitane, that mightie champion for the Pope, hauing diſputed much in the Councell of Baſil, for the preeminence of the Pope aboue generall Councels, in the end, the matter going againſt him, returning to his lodging complained with teares, that he had been compelled by his King, to ſtriue againſt the truth, and to put his ſoule in daunger: ex Ænea Syluio.

Doctor Mollius an Italian Martyr, being before the Cardinals of Rome examined of his doctrine, which he confirmed by Scripture, concerning Iuſtification, Free-will, Purgatorie, at the length (they being not able to conuince him) receiued this anſwere, that it was truth which he affirmed; but it was not meete for this preſent time, becauſe it could not bee taught without detriment of the Apoſtolike See.

Ex Henric. Pantal. lib. 19. anno 1543.

Doctor Baſſinet openly in an Oration proteſted in a great aſſemblie, that he was diſquieted in conſcience for giuing iudgement againſt thoſe which they called heretikes, becauſe he found moſt part of their opinions agreeable to Scripture, Fox pag. 945. col. 2.

The Biſhop of Cauaillon in France, committed the articles of the Merindolians to a certaine Doctor of Diuinitie to bee examined, who after eight daies peruſing of them, gaue his anſwere, that he found them agreeable to Scripture, pag. 949.

But amongſt all other the confeſſion of Wincheſter lying vpon his death-bed is worthie to bee remembred: who being put in mind by another B. of Iuſtification only by the blood of Chriſt, anſwered, that it was dangerous to open this gap to the people; yet to him, and ſuch other in his caſe it might be vttered: reported by one that was a great doer about Wincheſter, pag. 1788. col. 1.

I will alſo here adioyne the teſtimonie of Eraſmus, whom although the Ieſuite will not acknowledge wholly to bee theirs, yet he vouchſafeth to call him ſemi-Chriſtianum, a ſemi-Chriſtian, or halfe-Catholike: lib. 1. de verbo Dei cap. 9. he thus writeth to the Archbiſhop of Mentz; That many things were condemned in the bookes of Luther of Monkes and Diuines for hereticall, which in the bookes of Bernard and Auguſtine are read for ſound and godly.

We cannot deſire more large and ample confeſſions of our faith, then haue been made by the enemies thereof: theſe examples may ſuffice: wherefore this note better a great deale ſerueth our turne, then it maketh for the Ieſuite.

Of the iudgements of God vpon popiſh perſecutors.

TWo other of the Ieſuites notes remaine, the fourteenth, and fifteenth: The vnhappie end (ſaith he) of the enemies of their Church, and the externall happines and flouriſhing eſtate of the defenders thereof, cap. 17. 18.

Anſw. Firſt, more fearefull examples of Gods iudgements we ſhall not finde in any, then haue fallen vpon the perſecutors and butcherly ſlaughtermen of Gods ſeruants for the Goſpels ſake: you ſhall finde a whole treatiſe of this matter, wherein ſuch examples are gathered together, Fox p. 2100. Vnto that place I refer the reader, becauſe it were too long to giue particular inſtances of euery thing: yet becauſe the Ieſuite produceth certaine examples of Gods iudgements vpon Luther, Zuinglius, Oecolampadius, Caluin, whom he ſhamefully belieth; I will take a little paine, firſt to make anſwere to his ſlaunders, and then to ſhew ſome notable examples of Gods iudgements amongſt them. Firſt, he ſaith, that Luther, after he had ſupped merily, and made all his gueſts ſport, died the ſame night; Zuinglius was ſlaine in battell; Oecolampadius died ſuddenly in the night; Caluin was conſumed of lice, and calling vpon the diuell died, Bellar. cap. 16.

Anſw. Firſt, in ſome of theſe reports the Ieſuite ſhamefully lieth: for Luther died not of a ſurfeit or drunkenneſſe, as they report, but of an old infirmitie and weaknes of ſtomacke, and not in the night, but the next morning at eight or nine a clocke: alſo hee made a moſt comfortable end, with a ſweete praier immediatly before his death, and commending his ſoule heartily into the hands of God; as Melancthon reporteth the manner of his death. And Oecolampadius died not ſuddenly, but of an old ſickneſſe he had, encreaſed with ſorrow for the death of Zuinglius, Fox pag. 873. col. 1. And as touching Maſter Caluin, Bellarmine doth too ſhamefully belie him, who as he liued, ſo died the ſeruant of God, whatſoeuer theſe children of the father of lies ſay to the contrarie: Maſter Beza, who hath written the ſtorie of his life and death herein deſerueth more credit, then any of your lying and railing Libellers. The like vnſauourie lie Bolſecus Bellarmines author, reporteth of Maſter Caluin, how he was confederate with one Bruleus Oſtuno, a poore ſtranger at Geneua, that he ſhould faine himſelfe dead, and ſhould bee raiſed vp to life by Maſter Caluin, and how the ſaid Bruleus ſo diſſembling, when Caluin came in, and ſaid his praiers ouer him, was found dead indeede, Bellarm. cap. 14. But we doe nothing marueile at the impudent ſpirit of our aduerſaries: for thus alſo they belied Bucer, that faithfull learned man, that he ſhould denie at his death that Chriſt the Meſſiah was come: And that all the world may know their impudencie, euen this laſt yeere, they were not aſhamed to blaze abroad in their writings, that Beza died a Papiſt conuerted, and that at his motion made at his death, the whole Church of Geneua was reuolted to Papiſtrie: which lying Libell is confuted by Maſter Beza himſelfe, and the reſt of the Miniſters of Geneua in a pamphlet publiſhed in this laſt yere 1597.

Secondly, ſome of theſe iudgements, which the Ieſuite rehearſeth, we take to bee none at all, as to be ſlaine in battaile, as Zuinglius was; who as a good ſhepheard gaue his life for his flocke, and would not leaue them fighting in the defence of the Goſpell: he did not goe as a Captaine to wage battaile, as ſome of your Popes, and popiſh Biſhops haue done, but as a paſtor to teach and comfort them, which your owne Canons allow: as it was decreed, Synod. Franciſcan. That the ſeruants of God, propter diuinum miniſterium, for the diuine miniſterie or ſeruice might go to warre. Neither is it to be counted a plague to die by the ſword, or of any other violent death, to him that hath liued well, as S. Auguſtine well ſaith: Noli timere, non poteſt malè mori, qui bene vixerit: Feare not, he cannot die ill, that hath liued well. And againe, Vndecunque mors pio, bona eſt: Death howſoeuer it commeth to a godly man, is good: in Pſal. 148. And further, ſaith he, Doeſt thou thinke it an euill death, to die of ſhipwracke, to be ſlaine by the ſword, torne of wilde beaſts; did not the Martyrs indure the like deaths?

Thirdly, it ſhall euen now appeare, that all theſe iudgements which the Ieſuite hath brought forth, and many more haue iuſtly fallen vpon popiſh perſecutors. And for his fiue fained examples, we are able to giue him tenne times ſo many: but it ſhall not be needfull to rehearſe ſuch a number, yet ſome I will ſet downe.

Now then in the next place, as the Ieſuite hath endeuoured, but to ſmall purpoſe, to ſingle out ſome Proteſtants, as noted with Gods iudgements: ſo I will, ſomewhat to ſatisfie the reader, requite them with the like, not referring him altogether to Maſter Foxes treatiſe of this matter. For as Auguſtine well ſaith, Noui quemadmodum ſoleat contriſtare lectorem, cùm à libro, qui gerit in manibus in alium mittitur, quem forte non habeat: I know how it doth trouble the reader, when as he is referred from that booke he hath in his hands, to another which he hath not: and ſo he ſaith, ſatius eſt offerre habenti, quam differre non habentem: It is better to offer to him that hath the booke, then to defer him that hath it not, Auguſt. lib. 2. de Baptiſ. cap. 1. I will therefore, for their cauſe that haue not that large volume, ſort out ſome notable examples of Gods iudgements vpon perſecuting Papiſts: and becauſe they may deny them, though they be ſtrange, to be iudgements, I will together with the alleaging of them vſe theſe probations.

Firſt, the likenes of puniſhment in the old perſecuting Pagans, and in the new perſecuting Papiſts. Secondly, the confeſſion of our aduerſaries. Thirdly, the confeſſion of thoſe that were puniſhed and iudged of God. Fourthly, the prediction of the Martyrs, whom they perſecuted. Fiftly, their deſperate ends. Sixtly, the ſame iudgements fell vpon them, which they procured vpon others. Seuenthly, the extraordinarie courſe of Gods iudgements.

Firſt then, if wee ſhall finde perſecuting Papiſts to haue ſuſtained the very ſame puniſhments with the Heathen tyrants, no man can doubt, but that they were iuſtly iudged of God. Antiochus a miniſter of crueltie in the fift perſecution vnder Alexander, while he was in the execution of torments vpon one Agapitus for the Chriſtian faith, ſuddenly fell downe dead from his iudiciall ſeate, crying out, that his bowels within him burned with fire, Henric. de Erford. lib. 6. cap. 29. So at the condemnation of Wolfgangus a Germane Martyr, the Commendator of S. Antonie of Vienna ſitting for the ſpirituall Iudge, ſuddenly fell downe and died: and the Abbot of Clarilocus his aſſiſtant not long after at the cracke of gunnes fell downe and died, anno 1525. Pantal.

Againe, Claudius Preſident vnder Valerian in the eight perſecution a cruell perſecutor, was vexed of the diuell, and biting his owne tongue into many ſmall pieces died, Fox pag. 74. col. 2. In like manner Cardinall Creſcentius was vexed of the diuell, who was Preſident of the Tridentine Chapter, who ſitting vp late to write letters to the Pope, ſaw in his chamber comming toward him an huge blacke dogge with fierie eyes, and therewith ſtriken with a great feare died: vpon whoſe death the Councell was diſſolued, pag. 2107.

Maximinus that cruell tyrant was ſtriken with a moſt fearefull diſeaſe, conſuming his entrals, whereout iſſued an innumerable multitude of lice, with a moſt filthy ſtinking ſauour, that no man could abide him: his Phiſitions, becauſe they could not cure him, he commaunded to bee ſlaine, pag. 82. col. 1. In like ſort was Minerius plagued the perſecutor of the innocent Merindolians, whoſe bowels rotted within him being conſumed with wormes: who alſo commaunded his ſurgeon to be apprehended, that gaue him good exhortation; and he miſerably died with extreame ſtinch of the lower parts, with horrible blaſphemies, &c. pag. 913. col. 2. Twyford likewiſe a furious Papiſt, who ſet vp the ſtakes in Smithfield, rotted aboue the ground, ſo that no man could abide him, pag. 1218. col. 1.

Phillips the betrayer of innocent Tyndall died of lice. Bale alſo the Promooter in Queene Maries daies, was eaten of lice, pag. 2101. col. 1.

Maxentius that tyrant falling with his horſe from the bridge, which he did lay for Conſtantine, was drowned. The like iudgement befell a certaine young gentleman, an horrible blaſphemer, who being admoniſhed of his ſwearing, ſtill multiplying othes, pricked forward his horſe, being vpon the bridge: from the which the horſe ſprung aſide into the water, he crying vpon his back, Horſe and man and all to the diuell, pag. 2105. In like ſort Iohn Vander, a chiefe officer of Antwerpe, and a cruell perſecuter, riding to the citie in his wagon, when he was come to the bridge, the horſe ſtanding ſtill,cried out to the driuer,Ride on in a thouſand diuels names : and the horſe ſpringing beſide,he was caſt into the towne ditch, and ſo drowned. Thus we ſee,how in all reſpects as the perſecutors of the Primitiue Church were puniſhed, ſo yͤ enemies of Chriſts Church in theſe daies were recompenced. If then ſtrange kindes of death were to be counted iudgements in them,ſo are they in theſe.

Secondly,we haue our aduerſaries owne confeſſion : for the Ieſuite noteth foure iudgements of God,as I haue ſhewed before, which hee falſely affirmeth to haue fallen vpon thoſe learned Proteſtants: firſt, ſuddennes of death: ſecondly,to be vexed of the diuell : thirdly,to die blaſpheming : fourthly,to die ſecurely and merily after pots and cups, as he ſlandereth Luther. Three of the firſt I haue before touched, and giuen an inſtance of themſelues, that haue taſted of thoſe iudgements : and for the laſt,the Ieſuite might haue remembred how Pope Leo ſitting at ſupper, and very pleaſant,was ſuddenly ſtriken with a feuer,wherof he died,p.854. And for ſecure death, Eckius,that mightie impugner of Luther, might haue been thought vpon, whoſe laſt words when he died were theſe : In caſe the foure thouſand Guilders were readie,the matter were diſpatched : with the which,as it is thought,he ſhould haue purchaſed ſome preferment at Rome.

Thirdly,let vs heare their owne confeſſion that were puniſhed.King Henry the 2.of France hauing receiued his deadly wound at Iuſting, ſaid, he feared he was ſtriken for falſely impriſoning the poore Chriſtians,pag.2112. Likewiſe one Baſtian Captaine of the armie, that went againſt the Proteſtants of Luſerne,and S.Martin,threatning that day to doe much againſt them, and returning wounded, it was ſaid vnto him, Now it is well ſeene that their religion is better then ours,pag.967.

Fourthly,the prediction and foretelling of the Martyrs of the iudgements that followed, doe ſhew that they were ſent of God,as Maſter Patrike Hamelton at his death did cite the blacke Frier Campbel,that was his accuſer, to appeare before the moſt high God to anſwere for the innocencie of his death at a certaine day of the next moneth : immediatly before which day the Frier died, pag.975.col.2. Likewiſe, anno 1561. at Amboiſe in France certaine gentlemen being vniuſtly condemned to death by the Chauncellor Oliuier, one of them tooke of the blood of his fellowes that were beheaded, and lift his hands to heauen, and ſaid ; Lord behold the blood of thy children,thou wilt in time reuenge it : and ſhortly after the Chauncellor died in great deſpaire, Fox pag.2112.

Fiftly,the ſame iudgements ouertooke ſome of them, which they threatned, and had done to others : which ſheweth, that they were ſtriken of God : One Iohn Martin of Briqueras in France, threatned he would ſlit the Miniſters noſe ; who was himſelfe aſſaulted of a wolfe, which bit off his noſe,whereof he died mad,pag.955. Sir Rafe Ellerker Knight Marſhall at Calice,when Adam Damlip was executed,ſaid, he would not goe away before he ſaw his hart : but he himſelfe afterward was taken in a ſkirmiſh of the French,his priuie members cut off, and his hart raked out of his bellie,pag.1229. One Landeſdale a cruell enemie to the Goſpell, that ſuffered a poore man to die in a ditch by his houſe, was not long after caſt by his horſe into a ditch, and ſo died,Fox pag. 2104.

Sixtly, their deſperate and fearefull ends doe declare that Gods reuenging hand was amongſt them;as Plankney and Hanington,both fellowes of New Colledge in Oxford,drowned themſelues, and were taken vp,with their Crucifixes hanging about their neckes,pag.2104. Clarke,an open enemie to the Goſpell,hanged himſelfe in the tower,pag.1201.col.1. and diuers of them beſide killed themſelues : others died in deſpaire. Guarlacus a learned man of Louaine,and a mightie defender of Poperie, vttering moſt horrible blaſphemies in his ſicknes, cried out, that his ſinnes were greater then could be giuen : and ſo wretchedly in deſpaire ended his life, ex epiſtol.Claudij Senarclai ad Bucer. In like manner Iacobus Latomus, a mightie impugner of Luther,in his open Lecture in Louaine fell mad,and ſo was carried home and ſhut vp in a cloſe chamber till he died, who had nothing in his mouth, but that he was damned : ex ead.epiſtol. Many ſuch examples might be alleaged to this purpoſe : but theſe may ſuffice to ſhew, that their deſperate madnes of ſome in killing themſelues, of others in dying in deſpaire without all comfort, doth euidently ſhew that they were iudged of God.

Seuenthly, it may appeare by the extraordinarie meanes whereby ſome of them were puniſhed : Doctor Whittington Chauncellor, a perſecutor in King Henry the 7.daies, comming from the burning of a faithful woman,whom he had condemned,was ſlaine of a Bull,that offered to touch none of the people beſide, but comming againſt him, ranne vpon him, and toſſed him vpon his hornes,trailing his guts all along in the ſtreete,pag.775. Burton Bailiffe of Crowland, an earneſt defender of the Maſſe,and an enemy to the Goſpel,was poyſoned with the excrements of a crow, which flying ouer his head,as he rode by the way, let them fall vpon his noſe and beard,with the ſtinch whereof he fell into a continuall vomiting,whereof he died,pag.2100. A Frier of Mounſter,as he was in the pulpit inueighing againſt the doctrine of the Goſpell,was ſmitten with a ſudden flaſh of lightning, and ſo died: ex Pantal.2.part,&c. Wherefore as the Ieſuite noteth it to haue been a iudgement of God vpon Anaſtaſius the Emperour, a fauourer of the Eutychian heretikes, that was ſmitten of lightning: ſo can it not be denied, but in like ſort this was a iudgement vpon this Frier. Thus wee ſee how little the Ieſuite hath gained by making the iudgements of God a note of the Church.

Of the externall happines of the Church, the 15. Note.

NOw concerning externall happineſſe and good ſucceſſe: firſt, it is no certaine note of the Church of God, which oftner is without it, then it doth enioy it: for Chriſts kingdome is not of this world. And as the Lord ſuffered his people to ſoiourne as ſtrangers, and to bee euill entreated foure hundred yeeres, from Abrahams time to Moſes: ſo is it the condition for the moſt part of the Church of God ſtill; as the Prophet Ieremie ſaith, Dedit dilectam animam ſuam in manus inimicorum eius: He hath giuen his beloued and deare heart into the hands of the enemies thereof, Ierem. 12. And S. Auguſtine ſaith, Beneficentiſſima prouidentia omnipotens deus terrenam fælicitatem conceſſit & impijs, ne pro magno quæreretur à bonis: Almightie God of his bountifull prouidence, hath graunted earthly felicitie to the wicked, that the godly ſhould not ſo greatly deſire it, *epiſt.*120.*ad Honorat.cap.*5. How then can that bee a note of the Church which is common to the wicked? Nay, one of your owne writers ſaith contrarie, that Crux eſt eccleſiæ nota, the Croſſe is a note of the Church, Eſpenſ.in 2.*Timoth.p.*103.d. And againe, Prædixit Chriſtus labores, Pſeudochriſti proſpera: Chriſt foretold of labour and ſorrow, the falſe Chriſts prophecied of peace and proſperitie, pag. 100.g. By this ſentence Bellarmine is a falſe prophet, that would haue felicitie and proſperitie a note of his Church.

Secondly, as the Ieſuite ſheweth in the examples of Iuſtinian the elder, and Heraclius the Emperour, that they proſpered in their warres till they fell to be maintainers of hereſie, then all things went backward, *cap.*18. the like examples we can produce of the euill ſucceſſe and vnhappie end of thoſe who reuolted from the Goſpell to Papiſtrie, whom God bleſſed in all their enterpriſes before: This was the King of Nauarre his caſe, father to the now French King; who after he had ſuſtained a while the cauſe of the Goſpell, was content at the length to alter his profeſſion, and ioyne with the Duke of Guize, and was ſtriken with a pellet at the ſiege of Roane, whereof he died, much repenting his reuolt. It had been happie if the ſonne in the ſame caſe had remembred his fathers fall. The like experience of Gods wrath vpon reuolters, others of meaner place haue felt: as Henrie Smith ſometime a profeſſor of the Goſpell, afterward at Louaine peruerted to Poperie, comming home hanged himſelfe, with his Agnus dei about his necke. One Williams a ſtudent of the inner Temple, firſt a Goſpeller, then a Papiſt, fell ſtark mad, and ſo continued, Fox p.2105. Arnoldus Bomelius a young ſtudent of the Vniuerſitie of Louaine proſpered well, ſo long as he fauoured the Goſpell: afterward being peruerted by Tyleman Maſter of the Popes Colledge, fell into deſpaire, and killed himſelfe with his dagger: whoſe ſtorie Maſter Fox hath at large, pag. 1106. Thus it doth appeare how vnhappely it fareth with popiſh reuolters, contrarie to the Ieſuites obſeruation: therefore they cannot bragge of their outward felicitie.

Thirdly, neither of late can our aduerſaries, I thinke, boaſt of ſuch good ſucceſſe of their kingdome: for ſince the reuiuing of the Goſpell in the world, the Popes Crowne and dignitie hath been much impaired, and many Princes haue withdrawne their collers and ſhoulders from vnder his yoke. And as for England (God enlarge our hearts to bee thankfull therefore) there was neuer ſeene the like continuance of peace, and abundance of temporall bleſſings, as the Goſpell hath brought with it hitherto. And I am perſwaded, were it not for our ſinnes, wee ſhould enioy many yeeres ſtill, as I truſt in God wee ſhall, if wee will humble our ſelues before God by true repentance.

Thus farre of the Ieſuites fifteene notes, whereby the popiſh Church is deciphered. Now it followeth, that we declare the infallible and moſt certaine notes of the true Church.

Of the true and infallible Notes of the Church of Chriſt.

THe outward tokens whereby the true viſible Church is diſcerned, are not many in number, as our aduerſaries doe reckon vp many: the Ieſuite no leſſe than 15. ſupplying belike in number, that which they want in waight. Neither in this place doe wee ſpeake of the vniuerſall Catholike inuiſible Church, which is beleeued and not ſeene, being an article of our faith: but of particular viſible Churches, which are diſcerned and knowne by theſe two eſſentiall markes, the true preaching of the word, and right vſe of the Sacraments: Some alſo doe adde a third, namely, Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, *Beza confeſſ.de Eccleſ.art.*7. Hooper vpon the Creede, *articul.*72. But this partly is comprehended in the two former; for there cannot bee hearing and preaching of the word, and the frequenting of the Sacraments, vnleſſe there bee an exerciſe of Church diſcipline: partly alſo wee ſay that it is not ſo eſſentiall a note, as the other are: for the abſence of the other make a nullitie of the Church. If the word or Sacraments in ſubſtance be corrupted, the Church alſo is defaced: but if there bee not an exact forme of diſcipline, it doth not ſtraightway ceaſe to be a Church. Wherefore we conclude, that the true preaching of the word, and right vſe of the Sacraments, are the only neceſſarie and eſſentiall notes of the Church: where theſe two are rightly vſed according to Gods word, there is a right Church, as here in England, God bee bleſſed: where they are falſely and impurely handled, there is a falſe and corrupt Church, as among the Papiſts: where they are not at all in vſe, there is no Church, as amongſt the Turkes, Iewes, and Infidels. Firſt we will examine our aduerſaries arguments, and then bring forth our owne.

The Papiſts.

*Arg.*1. Bellarmine thus argueth: The true notes of the Church ought to bee proper and particular, not common and generall, as theſe are: for euery ſect of heretikes doe chalenge to themſelues the right preaching of the word, and vſage of the Sacraments: Ergo, they are no true notes, Bellarm. lib. 4. de Eccleſ. cap. 2.

We anſwere: Firſt, it skilleth not how many doe lay clayme to thoſe notes: the word of God it ſelfe is a manifeſt iudge where pure doctrine is taught, and the Sacraments rightly kept according to the inſtitution. It is no matter, howſoeuer Papiſts and other heretikes doe make their brags, the Scriptures themſelues can ſoone decide this queſtion. And S. Hierome ſaith well to this purpoſe: Nec ſibi blandiantur, quod videantur de ſcripturarum capitulis affirmare, quod dicunt: Neither let them flatter themſelues, becauſe they proue their aſſertions out of Scripture: For ſo the diuel alſo alleaged Scripture: Sed Scriptura non in legendo conſiſtunt, ſed intelligendo: But the Scriptures conſiſt not in the reading but vnderſtanding, &c. Cont. Luciferian. So then although heretikes by the letter of Scripture may take vpon them to proue their Church, yet by the true ſenſe thereof they ſhall neuer. Secondly, nay rather this argument may be turned vpon the Ieſuites head: for it is therefore the more like, that theſe ſhould be the true notes of the Church, becauſe euery hereſie doth labour to proue their Church thereby: for if it were not the right coyne, they would not goe about to counterfeit it. Thirdly, I maruell they are not aſhamed to obiect, that our notes are common, ſeeing theirs are moſt common: for not onely aſſemblies of heretikes, but euen the heathen and Idolatrous Gentiles might as well proue themſelues to be the Church, by thoſe popiſh notes, of vniuerſalitie, for Idolatrie had ouerſpread the whole world; of vnitie, they all conſented to perſecute the Church of Chriſt; of antiquitie, for the worſhip of Idols continued aboue two thouſand yeares; of ſucceſſion, for the monarchie of the Aſſyrians endured 1300. yeares, their kings all this while one ſucceeding another. They had alſo Prophets, and ſuch as wrought miracles. Our aduerſaries may be now aſhamed to caſt vs in the teeth, that our notes are common, when as theirs doe well agree to the Synagogues of Sathan, and aſſemblies of Infidels.

*Argum.*2. Saith he, the note or the marke muſt be better knowne and more notorious, then the thing marked or notified by it: ſo are not theſe; for we know not which is the word of God, nor what bookes are Canonicall, and to be taken for Scripture, but by the Church, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere: the Ieſuite ſtill beggeth that which is in queſtion: a foule fault in a profeſſed diſputer: for haue we not largely proued before 1. contr. quaſt. 4. that the Church dependeth vpon the authoritie of the Scripture, and not contrariwiſe, and that there is no more certaine and euident and vndoubted thing in the whole world, vpon the which a man may be bold to build and ground his faith, then vpon the Scriptures? This ſure is a childiſh and ridiculous argument, to take that as graunted, which is moſt of all in controuerſie. Secondly, he committeth the ſame fault himſelfe, chap. 14. where he maketh the power of miracles a note of the Church, and yet confeſſeth, Ex Eccleſia miracula demonſtrari: That true miracles are demonſtrated by the Church: why then may not the word of God as well ſhew the Church, although in ſome ſenſe the Church ſhew the word? Thirdly, the Ieſuite confeſſeth, cap. 2. that where the Scripture is receiued, and the Church doubted of, there the Scripture declareth the Church: which is our very caſe in theſe dayes: for ſeeing our aduerſaries and we are agreed concerning the moſt of the Canonicall Scriptures, but differ about the Church, in the Ieſuites iudgement in this caſe we muſt demonſtrate the Church by the Scriptures. Fourthly, the Ieſuite miſtaketh the matter: for we doe not thus reaſon, where the Scriptures are acknowledged for the word, there is the Church; for the Iewes receiue the old Teſtament, the diuell knoweth it is the word of God, which is contained in the Scriptures; but they are neither of the Church: but where the word is faithfully preached, profeſſed, receiued, and beleeued, there is the Church.

*Argum.*3. The true notes (ſaith he) are inſeparable from the Church: it is neuer without them. But many true Churches haue wanted theſe: The Church of the Corinthians was a true Church, and yet they beleeued not the reſurrection, chap. 15. The Galathians were a true Church, and yet they held that Moſes law was to be obſerued together with the Goſpell. And the Corinthians likewiſe did not ſincerely obſerue the Sacraments, 1,Corinth.11. And as many true Churches haue wanted theſe notes, ſo falſe Churches may haue them: for there may be true doctrine among ſchiſmatikes, ſuch as the Donatiſts were: for ſchiſmatikes may hold all poynts of ſound doctrine, who faile in charitie rather then in faith: Ergo, theſe are no true ſignes, Bellarm.ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, this argument may with better right be returned vpon their owne head: for many true Churches haue wanted their markes: Chriſt and his Apoſtles had neither ſucceſſion from Aaron, nor vniuerſalitie, and yet they made the true Church. The Church of the Iewes after Malachies time had no Prophets, nor myracles, for the ſpace of 400. yeares before Chriſt, and yet were they the true Church, and ſo of the reſt of your notes, the Church of Chriſt hath many times wanted them. Secondly, it was not the whole Church of Corinthus that doubted of the reſurrection, but certaine falſe Apoſtles that laboured to ſeduce others, 1.Cor.15.34. Some of you (ſaith the Apoſtle) haue not the knowledge of God: he ſaith, not all. So likewiſe amongſt the Galathians there were falſe teachers, that ſtoode for the law of Moſes: Galath.5.9. A little leauen doth marre the whole lumpe. It was not therefore a publike doctrine in the Church, but ſecretly taught by falſe Apoſtles. Thirdly, there may be ſome error in the Church, but being not fundamentall, ſuch an one as deſtroieth faith, it doth not diſſolue the Church: as there was ſome abuſe amongſt the Corinthians in receiuing the Sacrament: but the forme and inſtitution and ſubſtance of the Sacrament was kept. Nay, yet to graunt a little more: though the error be dangerous, and of great waight and moment, and ſuch an one, as being ſtiffely maintained, would deſtroy the faith and Church too: yet if they haue fallen into it rather of ignorance, then any other cauſe, and doe not continue in it, but doe ſubmit themſelues to be reformed by the word, it ceaſeth not for all that to be a Church. So the Corinthians referred themſelues wholy and their opinions to the iudgement and determination of the Apoſtle.

To the ſecond part of the argument, that pure doctrine may be found in an impure Church.

We anſwere: firſt, the example which the Ieſuite alleageth of the Donatiſts, is nothing to his purpoſe: for the Donatiſts did not onely offend in their ſchiſme, but they held alſo ſchiſmaticall and vntrue opinions, as that the Sacraments were polluted by the Miniſters, that Baptiſme giuen by heretikes, ought to bee iterated: that the Church in the earth conſiſteth onely of the good without any mixture of euill men: that the Church was periſhed from the whole world, and remained onely amongſt them: theſe were the opinions of the Donatiſts: they had not therefore pure doctrine. Auguſtine doubteth not to ſay vnto a chiefe Donatiſt: Schiſmaticus es ſacrilega diſceſſione, hareticus ſacrilego dogmate: Thou art a ſchiſmatike, for thy ſacrilegious departure from the Church, and an heretike for thy ſacrilegious opinions, *Cont.Gaudent.lib.*3. Wherefore the Ieſuite was much ouerſeene in alleaging this example. Secondly, there are no ſchiſmatikes, which doe ſeparate themſelues from the Church, but they doe diſſent in ſome opinion, and ſo as well fayle in faith as in charitie: for what elſe ſhould moue them, to be deuided from the Church, but diuerſitie and difference of doctrine? So Auguſtine anſwereth Creſconius, who made this difference of hereſie and ſchiſme: Hareſis, ſaith the Donatiſt, eſt diuerſa ſequentium ſecta, ſchiſma eadem ſequentium ſeparatio: An hereſie is a ſect of thoſe that follow other opinions, a ſchiſme is a ſeparation of thoſe which are of one opinion. No, ſaith Auguſtine, Nulla ſciſſio, vel ſchiſma eſt niſi diuerſum ſequantur: There is no ſchiſme, vnleſſe they follow diuers opinions: And that ſaying of S. Hierome is allowed in your owne decrees, Nullum ſchiſma, non aliquam ſibi confingit hareſim: There is no ſchiſme, which doth not inuent ſome new hereſie: decr.par.2.cauſ.24.qu.3.c.26. For although a ſchiſmatike ſhould be of the ſame iudgement in all other things, yet herein hee fayleth in ſound doctrine, in that he thinketh it lawfull, to deuide himſelfe from the Church: yet the Ieſuite ſhall neuer be able to ſhew me ſuch a ſchiſmatike, which did not beſide his ſeparation, holde ſome doctrine contrarie to the Catholike truth.

Wherefore we conclude, that whereſoeuer true and ſound doctrine is taught wholy and in euery part, for the matter, though not for the manner, there is the Church: as S. Paul ſaith, So Chriſt be preached, whether vnder pretence or ſincerely, I therein reioyce, Philip.1.18.

The Proteſtants.

1 FOr the ſufficiencie of theſe notes, we would deſire no better arguments then thoſe which our aduerſaries alleaged againſt vs: for firſt our notes are proper onely to the Church, and cannot be found in any place, where the Church of God is not. Secondly, they are moſt notorious markes, and a man by the Scriptures may more eaſily know, what true doctrine is, and which are the right ſacraments, then which is the true Church. Thirdly, theſe markes cannot be abſent from the Church, but doe alwayes accompanie it, and it is no longer a true Church, then it hath thoſe markes.

*Argum.*2. We are able out of the Scriptures to proue theſe markes, which may ſtand in ſtead of many reaſons. Ioh.10. My ſheepe heare my voyce: Epheſ.5. Clenſing it by the waſhing of water through the word: Ergo, the Word and Sacraments are true notes of the Church.

Bellarmine anſwereth to the firſt place, that the hearing of the word, is not a viſible note of the Church, but a ſigne vnto euery man, whereby he may know his election. We reply againe: looke which way a man is knowne to be a member of the Church, by the ſame way the Church alſo it ſelfe is diſcerned: if the hearing of the word doe make one a ſheepe of Chriſt, then doth it alſo ſhew which is the flocke and folde of Chriſt: As I know my hand or foote to be a part of my bodie, becauſe it hath life and motion of the bodie; euen ſo the bodie is diſcerned from a carcaſe, becauſe it moueth and liueth.

To the ſecond place he anſwereth, verie ſimply: that the Apoſtle there ſheweth not, which is the Church, but what good Chriſt hath wrought for his Church. We reply againe: But the Church is beſt knowen by the benefits that Chriſt hath beſtowed vpon it, amongſt the which the Word and the Sacraments are not the leaſt: Ergo, by theſe the Church is knowen, and in that place by the Apoſtle deſcribed: And let the reader iudge, whether that place of the Apoſtle, where there is direct mention made of the word and ſacraments, be not fitly applied to our purpoſe, concerning the deſcription of the Church.

Arg. 3. Looke how Chriſt is knowen, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt is knowen only by the Scriptures; as hee himſelfe ſaith, Iohn 5. Search the Scriptures, for they doe teſtifie of me: Ergo, the true Church is to be knowen by the Scriptures: The word of God therefore is an infallible note of the Church; argum. Bradford. epiſt. ad. Cantabrigienſ. This argument alſo vſeth D. Ridley Martyr, alleadging a place out of Chriſoſtome to this ſenſe: In times paſt there were many wayes to knowe the Church of Chriſt by, as by good life, chaſtitie, miracles, &c. but nowe theſe things are common to heretikes: and therefore the true Church is now to be knowen, tantummodo per ſcripturas, onely by the Scriptures: Hom. 49. in Mat. in oper. imperf.

S. Auguſtine alſo ſaith, In ſcripturis didicimus Chriſtum, in ſcripturis didicimus eccleſiam, epiſtol. 166. In the Scripture we doe learne Chriſt, in the Scripture let vs likewiſe learne the Church. His argument is the ſame that here we haue vſed. Looke how Chriſt is knowen, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt is onely knowen by his word: Ergo, ſo is his Church.

Now let vs adde the ſeale and ſtampe, which the holy Martyrs haue ſigned this doctrine with in their blood. Richard Feurus Martyr, who ſuffered at Lions for the truth anno 1554. ſaith, that the Church of God is onely to be knowen by the word of God, and the right inſtitution of the Sacraments. Fox page 912. Fredericke Danuile Martyr at Paris, being asked whether theſe two were the notes of the Church, anſwered, That doe I beleeue, and therein will I liue and die, Fox pag. 922. col. 2. See the confeſſion alſo of Thomas Benet Martyr. pag. 1039. Of George Marſh Martyr 1565. col. 2. Of Bartlet Green Martyr, The true markes of Chriſts Church, ſaith he, is the true preaching of his word, and miniſtery of the Sacraments, pag. 1852. All theſe with many others aduentured their liues, dying in the faith of that Church, which was knowen by thoſe two infallible notes. Let the Papiſts bring fourth any that durſt doe the like for their vniuerſalitie, antiquitie, and the like.

Laſt of all, for the truth and certaintie of theſe two notes of the Church, namely, the word and Sacraments, we haue the determination of the Papiſts themſelues aſſembled in Councel. Interrelig. Caſare. cap. 10. Sunt Eccleſiæ veræ notæ, doctrina ſana & ſacramentorum vſus, quibus à Iudæorum & Ethnicorum cœtibus eccleſia diſiungitur, quorum vtrique & ſana doctrina, & ſacramentis noui teſtamenti carent: The true notes of the Church are ſound doctrine, and the right vſe of the Sacraments, by the which the Church is diſtinguiſhed from the Iewiſh and heatheniſh aſſemblies, which neither haue ſound doctrine, nor the Sacraments of the new Teſtament.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, OF THE authoritie of the Church.

THe Papiſts affirme, that the authoritie of the Church conſiſteth in theſe fiue points. Firſt, in authoriſing the Scriptures, and defining which are Canonicall. Secondly, in giuing the ſenſe of the Scripture. Thirdly, in determining matters beſides Scripture. Fourthly, in making lawes and conſtitutions for the Church. Fiftly, in exerciſing of diſcipline.

Concerning the two laſt, we doe not greatly ſtand with them. We acknowledge the Church hath authoritie to make decrees and conſtitutions, but ſo, as the Apoſtles did: Viſum eſt nobis & ſpiritui ſancto, It ſeemed good to vs and the holy Ghoſt: the Church muſt be directed by the wiſdome of the ſpirite ſpeaking in the Scriptures.

We alſo acknowledge the holeſome power of the Church in exerciſing of holy diſcipline: but it muſt bee done in the name and power of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 5. 4. not according to the will of men.

Concerning the two firſt: we haue alreadie ſhewed, that neither the Church doth giue authoritie to the word of God, but doth take her authoritie from them: for the Scriptures are of ſufficient credit of themſelues, 1.controu.quæſt.4. neither that the ſenſe of Scripture dependeth vpon the interpretation of the Scripture, but that the word expoundeth it ſelfe, 1.controu.quæſt.6.

There remaineth therefore onely one point to be diſcuſſed of the authoritie of the Church: namely, in deciding of matters beſide the ſcriptures: which are of two ſortes, either neceſſarie appertaining to faith, or indifferent concerning ceremonies: of both theſe in their order.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE CHVRCH hath authoritie in matters of faith beſide the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

24.Error. WE ought to take our faith and all neceſſarie things of ſaluation at the hands of our ſuperiours, Rhemiſt. Act. 10.*ſect.*8. In points not decided by ſcripture we muſt aske counſail of the Church, *Præfat ſect.*25. The Church is the onely pillar and ſtay to leane vnto in all doubts of doctrine, without the which there can be no certaintie nor ſecuritie: we muſt therefore beleeue it and truſt it in all things, *annot.*1, *Timoth.cap.*3.*ſect.*9. Yea it hath authoritie, ſay they, to make new articles of faith: as in the Councel of Conſtance it was decreed to be neceſſarie to ſaluation, to beleeue the Pope to be head of the Church. In the Councell of Baſile it was made an article of the faith, to beleeue that the Councell was aboue the Pope; and therefore Pope Eugenius in not obeying the Councell was adiudged to be an heretike. Rhemiſt.1. Tim.3.9.

*Argum.*1. Vpon theſe words in the Goſpell, Ioh.15.27. the ſpirit ſhall teſtifie of me, and you ſhall beare witnes alſo: they conclude thus: Ergo, the teſtimonie of the truth ioyntly conſiſteth in the holy Ghoſt and Prelates of the Church, *Rhemiſt.Ioh.*15.*ſect.*8.

We anſwere: the witnes of the ſpirit, and of the Apoſtles, is all one witnes: for the ſpirit firſt teſtifieth the truth to the Apoſtles inwardly, and the Apoſtles inſpired by the ſpirit did witnes it outwardly: ſo the Paſtors of the Church witneſſing with the ſpirit, which is not now inſpired by reuelation, but onely found in the Scriptures, are to be heard: but if the ſpirit teſtifie one thing in the word, and they teſtifie another, there we muſt leaue them.

*Argum.*2. The Church erreth not: Ergo, we muſt heare her in all things, *Rhemiſt.*1.*Timoth.*3.*ſect.*9. We anſwere: firſt, the Church may erre, if ſhe follow not the Scriptures; proued before, 2.*controu.quæſt.*2. Secondly, ſo long as the Church heareth Chriſts voice, we are likewiſe to heare hers: and ſo long as ſhe is preſerued from error, ſhe will not ſwarue from Chriſts precepts, neither impoſe any thing vpon her children, without the warrant of her ſpouſe.

*Argum.*3. Thou canſt proue nothing by Scripture, it is dead, it muſt haue a liuely expoſitor: Ergo, the Scripture ought not to be iudge in matters of faith, but the Church, *Wincheſt.*pag. 1486. Anſwere. The Scripture is aliue and not dead, as you ſay. reſponſ.Roger.Mart.ibid.

Obiect. All heretikes haue alleadged Scriptures, therefore we muſt haue a liuely expoſitor for them, Worceſt.ibid. Anſwere. Yea, it is true all heretikes haue alleadged Scripture, but they were confuted by Scripture, and by no other expoſitor, reſponſ.Rog.Mar.ibid.

Obiect. The letter killeth, but the ſpirit giueth life: Ergo, the Scriptures which are the letter cannot iudge, ſic Boner pag.1867. Anſwere. Saint Paul meaneth not, that the word of God in it ſelfe killeth, which is the word of life, but that the word is vnprofitable, and killeth him that is voide of the ſpirit of God: and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Goſpell was to ſome the ſauour of life to life, and to ſome the ſauour of death, &c. Reſponſ.Philpot.Mart.ibid.

Obiect. The word cannot be iudge of the word: Ergo, there muſt be another iudge beſide. Argum.Stori pag.1805. Anſwere. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Verbum, quod locutus ſum, iudicabit in nouiſſimo die, The word that I haue ſpoken, ſhall iudge at the laſt day: If the word ſhall iudge at the laſt day, much more it ought to iudge our doings now, Reſponſ.Philpot.Mart ibid.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Church hath no ſuch power to ordaine articles of faith, or impoſe matters to be beleeued neceſſarie to ſaluation not contayned, or preſcribed in the holy ſcriptures: we proue it thus, and we are ſure, that the true Church of Chriſt will neuer challenge any ſuch prerogatiue.

*Argum.*1. All truths and verities in the Scriptures are not ſo neceſſarie to ſaluation, that the ignorance thereof ſhould bring perill of damnation: Ergo, much leſſe are any verities out of Scripture of any ſuch neceſſitie; the firſt is manifeſt: for to know the iuſt chronologie of time or ſpace of yeares, from the beginning of the world to Chriſt, is a veritie in Scripture, yet not neceſſarie: ſo to beleeue that Marie continued a virgine euer after the birth of our Lord, was thought by Baſile to be no neceſſarie point to ſaluation, if we did holde her to haue been a virgin afore: and many ſuch other points there are in Scriptures which a man may be ignorant of without perill of ſaluation: Ergo, much more may we be ignorant of vnwritten verities, or rather popiſh fables. For it is not like that the Scriptures doe abundari in ſuperfluis, abound in ſuperfluous things, that be not neceſſarie to ſaluation, & deficere in neceſſariys, and be wanting in neceſſarie.

*Argum.*2. The Church hath no more authoritie then the Apoſtles, nor yet in all things ſo much: but they had no power to make articles of faith: for S. Paul deliuereth that which he had receiued concerning the Sacrament, he durſt not adde vnto it, as the Papiſts haue been bold to doe ſince, 1. Cor. 11. Vpon which place S. Ambroſe thus writeth: Indignum dicit domino, qui aliter myſterium celebrat, quam ab eo traditum eſt: non enim poteſt deuotus eſſe, qui aliter praſumit, quàm datum eſt ab authore: The Apoſtle ſaith, he is vnworthie of the Lord, which doth celebrate the myſterie otherwiſe then it was by him deliuered: for he hath no true deuotion, which preſumeth to doe otherwiſe, then the author preſcribed: Ergo, the Church may explaine and open articles of faith out of the Scriptures, but not make new. Heare of this matter alſo a writer, whom you will not refuſe: Vincentius Lirinenſis vpon theſe words, 1. Timoth. 6. 20. O Timothie, Keepe that which is committed vnto thee: Intelligatur te exponente illuſtriùs, quod antè obſcuriùs credebatur: eadem tamen, qua didiciſti, doce, vt cùm dicas nouè, non dicas noua: Let that be vnderſtoode more cleerely by thy expoſition, which was obſcurely beleeued before: yet teach none other things then thou haſt learned, that though you ſpeake them after a new manner, yet vtter no new things. If Timothie then was to bring in no new things, but onely to explaine the olde, how much leſſe the Paſtors of the Church now.

Fox.pag.677.

*Argum.*3. We proue it by the confeſſion of our aduerſaries. The fathers of Baſile, that concluded, it was an article of the Chriſtian faith to beleeue the ſuperioritie of the Councell, did gather it out of the ſaying of Chriſt, dic eccleſia, and therefore enforced it as an article. Whereby we gather, that they held, that the Church could eſtabliſh no article of faith without Scripture. Bellarmine likewiſe ſaith, that the Church is not now gouerned by new reuelations, but we ought to be contented with thoſe decrees, which we haue receiued from the Apoſtles: Ergo, as Doctor Whitakers doth ſtrongly conclude, the Church cannot coyne new articles of faith.

Contra. de Scrip.quæſt.6. cap.4.

*Argum.*4. If the Scriptures doe teach all neceſſarie poynts both concerning faith and manners, then hath the Church no authoritie to eſtabliſh other articles of faith beſide: but the firſt is true: for the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Scriptures are able to make a man perfect to euery good worke: but where perfection is, there is nothing wanting, 2. Timoth. 3. 17. Ergo, the Church hath no ſuch power: ſee more of this, *controu.*1. *quaſt.*7. *part.*2.

Laſtly, we haue before proued at large out of the word of God, that the Scriptures containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: and therefore all articles of faith muſt be deriued from thence, 1. controu. quaſt. 7. And ſo we conclude with Auguſtine: Lingua ſonos, quibus inter ſe homines ſua ſenſa communicent, pacto quodam ſocietatis ſibi inſtituere poſſunt: Quibus autem ſacris diuinitati congruerent, voluntatem Dei ſequuti ſunt, qui rectè ſapuerunt: Qua omnino nunquam defuit ad ſalutem iuſtitia pietatique hominum: Men, ſaith he, may deuiſe among themſelues what language they will vſe to expreſſe their minde: but how to ſerue God, wiſe men euer followed the will and commaundement of God, which neuer hath fayled men in all neceſſarie matters concerning righteouſnes and godlines. By this Fathers ſentence, the Scriptures which containe the will of God, containe all neceſſarie things. Ergo, we neede not ſeeke elſewhere.

Epiſtol.49. quæſt.2.

This truth is ſealed by the confeſſion and glorious witneſſe of the holy Martyrs, that the holy Scriptures being written by the inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt, are the very true word of God, and therefore to be heard accordingly, as the Iudge in all controuerſies and matters of religion: this was the confeſſion of the holy Martyrs ſet forth anno 1554. ſubſcribed by Iohn Hooper, Iohn Rogers, Rowland Taylour, Iohn Philpot, Iohn Bradford, Laurence Saunders, and others, Fox pag. 1471.

Laſtly, we haue the authoritie of their owne Councels, Concil. Baſilienſ. epiſtol. ſynodal. Pope Vrbane is alleaged thus writing: Sciendum eſt quia inde Romanus pontifex nouas leges condere poteſt, vnde Euangeliſta nequaquam aliquid dixerunt, &c. Know this, that the Biſhop of Rome hath onely authoritie in this caſe to make new lawes, where the Euangeliſts and Scriptures are ſilent: But the Scriptures are not ſilent in any poynt concerning faith and manners. See the Councell of *Cauilon. can.*67. cited before *controu.*1. *quaſt.*7. *part.*2. *argum.*3. Ergo, neither the Church or Pope hath authoritie herein to make new lawes. And laſtly I will produce one of your owne Popes teſtimonies, *Iohn.*22. *extrau. tit.*14. *c.*5. verſus finem. Articuli fidei in ſymbolis continentur, &c. articuli fidei habent per ſcripturam probari: The articles of faith are conteined in the ſymboles or Creedes. Againe, the articles of faith muſt be proued by Scripture. Ergo, the Church can make no new article of the faith: but is bound to receiue thoſe contained in the Creede, and proued out of the Scriptures. Likewiſe *Concil. Ferraria. ſeſſ.*9. Beſſarion thus ſaith, Sciatis addendi ſymbolo facultatem, non ſolùm Romana, verùm vniuerſali Eccleſia, generalique ſynodo interdictam eſſe: Know yee that to adde to the Creede, not onely the Romane, but the vniuerſall Church and generall Synode hath no authoritie.

AN APPENDIX OR MEMBER OF THIS PART of the queſtion, whether we are to beleeue in the Church.

The Papiſts.

WE ought to beleeue and truſt the Church in all things: yea to beleeue in the Church, 25.Error. *Rhemiſt.*1.*Tim.*3.*ſect.*9. the Scripture alſo vſeth this ſpeech, to beleeue in men. annot.in 10. *Rom.*1.*ſect.*41.

*Argum,*1. Exod.14.31. they beleeued in God and Moſes. Ergo. We anſwere. Your owne vulgar text hath it, crediderunt Deo & Moſi ſeruo eius: they beleeued God and his ſeruant Moſes: that is, hauing ſeene the great power of God in the deſtruction of the Egyptians in the red ſea, according to the word of Moſes, they gaue credite vnto Moſes, which ſpake vnto them from God.

*Argum.*2. Philem verſ.5. Hearing of thy loue and faith which thou haſt toward the Lord Ieſus and vnto all the Saints. See, ſay they, here is faith toward the Saints.

We anſwere: there is no man, that is not peruerſly diſpoſed, but may eaſily diſtinguiſh the Apoſtles words; to attribute faith to Ieſus Chriſt, and loue to the Saints: which may appeare by the altering of the prepoſition, as they themſelues reade in their owne tranſlation, loue and faith in Ieſus Chriſt, and toward the Saints: ſo it muſt needes be thus vnderſtood, faith in Chriſt, and loue toward the Saints: this therefore is but a ſophiſticall cauill.

The Proteſtants.

THis word, Credo, beleeue, is taken three wayes: for there is credere deo, to beleeue God, that is, to truſt him in all things, credere Deum, to beleeue God to be, credere in Deum, to beleeue in God, as our creator, Lord, and redeemer. So we doe credere eccleſiam, we beleeue there is one holy Catholike Church: credere eccleſia, we doe alſo beleeue and giue credence to the Church, following the word of God: But we doe not in any wiſe credere in eccleſiam, beleeue in the Church.

*Argum.*1. We muſt not beleeue or put any confidence in a creature: the Church is but a creature: Ergo: for to beleeue in God, is onely proper to the Godhead: and therefore, Ioh.14.1. where Chriſt ſaith, ye beleeue in God, beleeue alſo in me: we doe neceſſarily out of theſe words inferre, that Chriſt is God, becauſe we are commanded to beleeue in him.

*Argum.*2. Faith is of things that are abſent and not ſeene: but the Church is preſent alwayes vpon earth, and alwayes viſible, as our aduerſaries holde: how then can it be an obiect of our faith? We cannot beleeue in that which is viſible and ſeene, for it is againſt the nature of faith.

Auguſtine ſaith, *Sciendum eſt quod eccleſiam credere, non tamen in eccleſiam credere debemus, quia eccleſia non eſt Deus ſed domus Dei: de tempore ſer,*131. We muſt know, that we are to beleeue there is a Church, not in the Church, for the Church is not God, but onely the houſe of God. Your owne decrees alſo doe approue that ſaying of S. *Auguſtine, Hom.*3. *ad Neophytos, decr.par.*3.*diſt.*4 *c.*73. Non quomodo in Deum credimus, ſic in Eccleſiam ſanctam catholicam, quæ propterea ſancta & catholica eſt, quia certè credit in Deum: Non ergo diximus vt in Eccleſiam quaſi in Deum crederetis, ſed vt in Eccleſia ſancta conuerſantes in Deum crederetis, &c. As we beleeue in God, ſo we doe not beleeue in the Church; which is therefore holy, becauſe it beleeueth aright in God: therefore we ſaid not, you muſt beleeue in the Church as in God, but that hauing your conuerſation in the Church, you ſhould beleeue in God. From whence we reaſon thus: that which beleeueth vpon an other is not to be beleeued vpon; but the Church beleeueth vpon God: Ergo: the reaſon of the propoſition is this, becauſe faith and beleefe is the laſt refuge of a Chriſtian; but beyond our beleefe in the Church there ſhould be another beleefe in God. And againe, there is but one and the ſelfe ſame obiect of faith: but now ſhould there be diuers, God the obiect of the Churches faith, and the Church the obiect of our faith.

For the confeſſion of this truth, that we ought to truſt onely in God, and not in men, and that we are bound no further to beleeue the decrees of the Church, then they are agreeable to the Scriptures: two conſtant Martyrs, H.Voes, and Iohn Eſch, gaue their liues at *Bruxelles, an.*1523.Fox pag.874.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning the ceremonies of the Church.

The Papiſts.

THey doe hold that the Church of God may vſe and bleſſe diuers elements and creatures for 26. Error. the ſeruice of God: as holy water to driue away diuels: the hallowing of ſalt, waxe, fire, palmes, aſhes, oyle, creame, milke, honey, *Rhemiſt.*1.*Tim.*4 *ſect.*12.& 13. Yea that the Church may borrow rites and ceremonies of the Iewes : *ibid ſect.*18. Yea by the creatures thus bleſſed, or rather coniured, they ſay, remiſſion of ſinnes is obtayned *ſect.*14.

*Argum.*1. Remiſſion of ſinnes was annexed to the oyle wherewith the ſicke were annointed, Iam.5.Ergo, remiſſion of ſinnes may be applyed by the like conſecrated elements, *Rhemiſt.*1.*Tim.*4. ſect,14.

We anſwere: Firſt, it followeth not becauſe the creature of oyle was vſed in the miraculous gift of healing and by the appointment of Chriſt, which ceremonie alſo was no longer to continue than that miraculous gift endured : it followeth not that other elements may be vſed ſo now without any ſuch warrant, and there being not the like occaſion, ſeeing all ſuch miraculous gifts are now ceaſed. Secondly, it was not the oyle whereby their ſinnes were forgiuen them, neither was it applyed to that end, it was onely a pledge vnto them of their bodily health : but the prayer of faith ſhall ſaue the ſicke, ſaith the Apoſtle, verſ.15. for God hath promiſed to heare the faithfull prayers of his children both for themſelues and others.

*Argum.*2. S.Paul vſed impoſition of hands, which was a ceremonie of the law vſed in conſecrating of Prieſts : Ergo, it is lawfull to borrow ceremonies of the Iewes.

We anſwere : It followeth not, becauſe Chriſt and the Apoſtles by the ſpirit of God retained ſome decent actions vſed in the law, therefore now the Church at her libertie may take of the Iewiſh ceremonies: this is great preſumption to thinke it is lawfull for the Church to doe whatſoeuer Chriſt and his Apoſtles did, *Fulk.*1.*Tim.*4.*ſect.*18.

*Argum.*3. They would warrant their ſuperſtitious ceremonies by S.Pauls example, how napkins and partlets went from his bodie, and they receiued health thereby : and the woman that came behinde Chriſt, and touched the hemme of his veſture, was healed of her diſeaſe, by that ceremonie, argum.Fecknami.

Anſw. Concerning the firſt example, the text ſaith, God wrought no ſmall miracles by the hand of Paul, Act.19.12. It was God therefore that wrought, not theſe ceremonies. And for the other, Chriſt ſaith, vertue is gon out of me : it was not then his veſture that healed the woman, but the vertue : and therefore our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole, *reſponſ.Thom.Haukes.Mart.*pag,1588.

The Proteſtants.

ALthough there be great moderation to be vſed in the ceremonies of the Church, and there is alſo ſome limitation for them : yet hath the Church greater libertie in the rites and ceremonies, which are appoynted for order and comelines ſake, then in the doctrine of faith and religion. The doctrine of ſaluation is alwayes the ſame and cannot be changed, and toucheth the conſcience: but rites and ceremonies are externall and commaunded for orders ſake : and neither are they vniuerſall, the ſame in euery Church, nor perpetuall, but are changed according to times, and as there is occaſion. Againe, the precepts of Chriſtianitie are either directly expreſſed, or neceſſarie concluded out of the Scriptures : but externall rites and ceremonies are not particularly declared in the word : there are onely certaine generall rules ſet downe, according to the which all ceremonies brought into the Church, are to be examined : As for the Sacraments of the Church, they cannot be altered, hauing a perpetuall commaundement from Chriſt : Therefore the Church cannot appoint, what, how many ceremonies ſoeuer ſhe ſhall thinke good, but according to theſe foure rules and conditions, which follow here in order.

1 All things ought to be done to the glorie of God, euen in ciuill actions, much more in things appertaining to the ſeruice of God, 1.Cor.10.31. Our aduerſaries offend againſt this rule, applying and annexing remiſſion of ſinnes to their owne inuentions and ſuperſtitious ceremonies, as vnto penance and extreme vnction, which they alſo make Sacraments : for this is greatly derogatorie to Chriſts inſtitution, who hath onely appoynted the hearing of his word, and vſe of the Sacraments, for the begetting and increaſing of faith, and by this faith onely is the death of Chriſt applyed vnto vs for the remiſſion of ſinnes.

2 All things ought to be done orderly and decently, 1.Cor.14.40. Wherefore all ridiculous, light and vnprofitable ceremonies are to bee aboliſhed : ſuch our aduerſaries haue many, as knocking, kneeling, creeping to the Croſſe, lighting candles at noone day, turning ouer of beades, and many phantaſticall geſtures they haue in their Idolatrous Maſſe, as turning, returning, looking to the Eaſt, to the Weſt: croſſing, lifting, quaffing, and ſhewing the emptie cup, with many ſuch toyes.

3 All things ought to be done without offence, 1.Cor.10.32. But to whom, that hath but a little feeling of religion, is not the abominable ſacrifice of the Maſſe offenſiue ? what good conſcience doth it not grieue, that the Prieſt ſhould create his maker, as they ſay ? ſhould offer vp the body of Chriſt in ſacrifice, and be an interceſſor as it were for his mediator, deſiring God to accept the ſacrifice of his ſonnes body ? as alſo to make it a propitiatorie ſacrifice for the quicke and the dead? But of theſe matters we ſhall haue fitter occaſion to entreate afterward, when we come to the ſeuerall controuerſies.

4 All things ought to be done to edifiyng, 1. Cor. 14. verſ. 12. But the popiſh ceremonies are ſo farre from edifiyng, that by reaſon of their infinite rabble and number, they are a clogge vnto Chriſtians, and more burdenſome, then were the obſeruations of the Iewes: They haue hallowed fire, water, bread, aſhes, oyle, wax, flowers, branches, clay, ſpittle, ſalt, incenſe, balme, chalices, paxes, pixes, altars, corporals, ſuperaltars, altarclothes, rings, ſwords, and an infinite company beſides: doe theſe tende (thinke you) to the edification of the minde? Nay, they doe cleane deſtroy and extinguiſh all ſpirituall and internall motions, drawing the heart from the ſpirituall worſhip of God, to externall beggerly and ragged relickes and ceremonies, Fulk. 1. Timoth. 4. ſect. 1. Beza. lib. confeſſ. de eccleſ. articul. 18. 19. 20.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie concerning ceremonies: Modus colendi deum per externos ritus, & ceremonias legis, quia hac fuerunt vmbra Chriſti & myſteriorum eius, ideo adueniente veritate Euangelica euanuerunt, & illicita facta ſunt: The manner of worſhipping God by externall rites and ceremonies of the law, becauſe they were a ſhadowe of Chriſt, and of his myſteries, are now by the comming of the Euangelicall truth aboliſhed and made vnlawfull.

Gloſſ. ordin. de 4. Concil. primitiuæ eccleſ.

But ſuch Iewiſh ceremonies many yet are retayned in the Popiſh Church, Colonienſ. part. 9. cap. 16. Quicquid in huiuſmodi rebus ad abuſum & ſuperſtitionem ſpectat, & quo populus à Deo ad collocandam in externis rebus fiduciam, abduci poſſit, prohibemus: Whatſoeuer in ceremonies tendeth to abuſe and ſuperſtition, and may withdraw the people from God to truſt in externall things, we forbid. But that ſuch Iewiſh ceremonies are not to be retayned in the Church, neither that it is lawfull after the example of the Iewes to inſtitute the like ceremonies in Chriſts Church; heare further the teſtimonie of one of your owne Popes: Innocent. 3. decr. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 47. c. 1. Poſtquam vmbra legis euanuit, & illuxit veritas Euangelij, ſi mulieres poſt prolem emiſſam actura gratias Eccleſiam intrare voluerunt, eis Eccleſiarum non denegandus eſt ingreſſus: After that the ſhadow of the law is vaniſhed, and the truth of the Goſpell hath appeared, if women after their deliuerance will enter the Church to giue thankes, it muſt not be denied vnto them. But by the law, women could not, but after a certaine time enter into the temple: wherefore as in this ceremonie Moſes law bindeth not, ſo neither in the reſt. And to this purpoſe may be applied that rule in the Ciuill law: Cod. lib. 7. tit. 6. leg. 1. Iuſtinian. Abſurdum eſt ipſa origine rei ſublata, eius imaginem relinqui: It is an abſurd thing, the originall being remoued, for the image or ſhadow to be retained: But the ceremoniall law of the Iewes is remoued, and therefore there ought not ſo much, as a ſhadow thereof to remaine. Vnto theſe we will adioyne the reaſons, and iudgement of the holy Martyrs concerning Popiſh ceremonies. Theſe orders of the Church are moſt pure, which doe come moſt nigh the example of the Primitiue Church: ſo doe not the orders of the Popiſh Church, but are furtheſt off from it: Ergo, they are vnpure, argum. Laurent. Saund. Mart. p. 1494.

Boner anſwered, that the propoſition was falſe: for the Church was then in her infancie, and could not abide that perfection, which afterward was to be furniſhed with ceremonies. Saunders replieth, that ceremonies were inuented at the firſt, for the rude infancie and weake infirmitie of man; and therfore it was a token of greater perfection in the primitiue Church, that it had few ceremonies; and of the rudenes of the papiſticall Church, becauſe it had ſo many ceremonies, partly blaſphemous, partly vnſauorie and vnprofitable, ibid. And it is to too abſurd, to thinke the ſtate of any Church more pure, then the Primitiue vnder the Apoſtles: as Gregor. Nazianzen. ad Gregor. Nyſſen. orat. 3. Sanctorum patrum conſtitutiones, qui proximiores fuere Chriſto, agnoſcamus: Let vs receiue the conſtitutions of the Fathers, as they come nearer to Chriſt. So then as the waters neareſt the fountaines are cleareſt, ſo the times next to Chriſt pureſt.

Iohn Fortune Martyr alleadged this place of Scripture againſt popiſh ceremonies: All things that are not planted by my heauenly father ſhall be plucked vp by the rootes, Mat. 15. So ſaith our Sauiour, but ſuch are popiſh ceremonies: Ergo. Obiect. Nay they are good and godly, neceſſarie to be vſed. Anſwere. But S. Paul calleth them weake and beggerly, and ſaith, they are bewitched, that ſeeke to be in bondage vnto them, Galath. 4. 9. Fox. pag. 1918.

Laſtly, in this cauſe Rich. Gibſon gaue his life, who refuſed to come to proceſſion, to beare taper or candle, or to receiue aſhes, or to beare palme, to receiue the pax at Maſſe, or holy water, or holy bread, or to obſerue the ceremonies and vſages of the popiſh Church, Fox p. 2033. col. 1. artic. obiect. 7.

THE FIRST QVESTION, WHETHER THE Church of Rome be the true Church.

THis queſtion hath two parts. Firſt, whether the Romane Church be the Catholike Church or not. Secondly, whether the Church of Rome be a true viſible Church.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE ROMANE Church be the Catholike Church.

The Papiſts.

27. Error. Bellarmine defining the Church, maketh this one part of the definition to be ſubiect vnto the Biſhop of Romes iuriſdiction, lib.3. de eccleſ. cap.2. And therefore they conclude, that they are out of the Church and no better then heretikes, that doe not acknowledge the Pope to be their chiefe Paſtor, Caniſ. de præcept. eccleſ. cap.9. So they make the Romane faith, and Catholike, to be all one: Rhemiſt. annot. in 1. *Rom. ſect.*5.

Their reaſons are none other, then we haue ſeene before, taken from vniuerſalitie, antiquitie, vnitie, vnto the which we haue alreadie anſwered, *quæſt.*3. of this controuerſie, Not.1.2.3.

The Proteſtants.

While the Church of Rome continued in the doctrine of the Apoſtles, it was a notable and famous viſible Church, and a principall part and member of the vniuerſall Catholike: but now ſince it is degenerate and fallen away from the Apoſtolike faith, from being the houſe of God, to be a Synagogue for Antichriſt, we take it not to be ſo much as a true viſible Church. But neuer was it to be counted the Catholike Church, as though all other Churches were parts and members of it: but it ſelfe onely was a part as others, and Catholike too, while it continued in the right faith: but not Catholike as hauing iuriſdiction ouer the reſt, and all to receiue this name of her.

*Argum.*1. The vniuerſall Catholike Church is ſo called, becauſe it containeth the whole number of the elect and firſt borne of God, Heb.12.23. Whereof many are now Saints in Heauen, many liuing in the earth, many yet vnborne. But all theſe were not, neither are of the Romane faith: the holy men departed knew not of theſe ſuperſtitious and prodigious vſages, which now doe raigne in the Church of Rome, nay many of them neuer heard in their life ſo much, as of the name of Rome: Ergo.

*Argum.*2. It is called Catholike, and vniuerſall, becauſe they that are to be ſaued, muſt belong vnto this company, and be of this Church, for without the Church there is no ſaluation: for Chriſt onely gaue himſelfe for his Church to ſanctifie it and cleanſe it, Epheſ.5.25. But all that die out of the faith of the Romane Church, doe not periſh. Nay verily, we doubt not to ſay, but that all which depart this life in the communion thereof without repentance, are barred from ſaluation, and die out of grace. You ſay, that who is out of your Church is damned; and we thinke verily on the other ſide, that if we depart from the true Church, whereon we are graffed in Gods word, we ſhould ſtand in the ſtate of damnation, *ſic Philpot. Mart. p.*1800. We are in the right faith: neither will we be our owne iudges, the Scriptures ſhall iudge vs; Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth, that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is of God, 1.Iohn 4.2. We beleeue aright in both the natures and all the offices of Chriſt: which you doe not; which doe greatly deface his propheticall office, in not reuerencing his word, but making it imperfect: his kingdome, in appointing him a Vicar and Vicegerent vpon earth, as though he of himſelfe were not ſufficient to gouerne: his Prieſthood, in ſetting vp another ſacrifice: Ergo, your ſpirit is not of God.

*Argum.*3. The Catholike Church is ſo called, becauſe it imbraceth the whole and onely doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ.2.20. But the Romane Church receiueth many things contrarie to Scripture, and addeth many things vnto it, as it ſhall appeare throughout this whole diſcourſe. Ergo.

The Catholike Church hath the name, becauſe it is diſperſed ouer the whole earth, Act.1.ver.8. But ſo was neuer the Romane faith, which is now profeſſed, as we haue ſhewed before, *Quæſt.*3. *de Eccleſ. Not.*2. Ergo. And this may further appeare out of S. Auguſtine thus writing to S. *Hierome, epiſt.*19. If we count it an euill thing to faſt Saturday, we ſhall condemne the Romane Church, &c. but if we count it euill, non ieiunare Sabbato, not to faſt Saturday, we ſhall condemne ſo many Churches of the Eaſt, & maiorem orbis Chriſtiani partem, and the greater part of the Chriſtian world: Ergo, the greater part of the Church did not receiue the ceremonies of the Romane Church, and ſo conſequently, it cannot be the Catholike Church.

We will adde the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs: Maſter Philpot reaſoneth thus, the world being deuided into three parts, Aſia, Europa, Africa; two parts thereof, Aſia and Africa, profeſſing Chriſt as well as we, did neuer conſent vnto the Church of Rome: yea and moſt part of Europa doth not allow the Church of Rome; as Germanie, Denmarke, Poland, a great part of England and Zeland: Ergo, neither your faith nor your Church is vniuerſall or Catholike, Fox pag.1804.

He alleageth alſo a ſaying out of Auguſtine, Æſtimamus fidem Catholicam à rebus præteritis, præſentibus & futuris: We iudge the Catholike faith of that which hath been, is, and ſhall be: If then you bee able to proue that your faith and Church hath been from the beginning taught, is, and ſhall be, then may you count your ſelues Catholike, otherwiſe not.

Iulius Palmer Martyr, vſeth this reaſon: your Church of Rome is not vniuerſall, but a particular Church of ſhauelings: Ergo, it is not the Catholike Church, Fox pag. 1939. col. 1.

For this truth alſo with other, George Marſh gaue his life, for ſaying that the Church of Rome is not the true Catholike Church, Fox p. 1566. col. 1.

See alſo for this poynt your owne authoritie, Baſilienſ. Concil. epiſtol. Synod. 3. Dicimus Romanam ſedem principalem inter alias ſedes; ſed nunquid dum partem laudatis, obliti eſtis totius: nunquid dum vnam Eccleſiam extollitis, eam quæ vniuerſalis eſt, in qua Romana continetur, prætermittitis? We graunt, that the Roman See is the principall among others; but while you commend a part, forget not the whole: Is it reaſon, that while you aduance one Church, the vniuerſall Church, in the which the Romane is comprehended, ſhould be pretermitted?

Againe in the appendix of the ſame Councell, Romana Eccleſia non eſt vniuerſa, ſed de vniuerſitate: The Romane Church is not the vniuerſall Church, but of the vniuerſall Church: and Concil. Ferrar. ſeſſ. 9. Romana Eccleſia vniuerſali Eccleſiæ inferior eſt: The Romane Church is inferior to the vniuerſall Church. By theſe authorities it appeareth, that the Romane Church is one, the vniuerſall and Catholike another.

See alſo to this purpoſe the lawes Imperiall: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 15. Leo, Anthemius. Sacroſanctam huius religioſiſſimæ ciuitatis Eccleſiam, matrem noſtræ pietatis & Chriſtianorum orthodoxæ religionis omnium, honores iure ante alios reſidendi habere iudicamus, &c. The holy Church of this moſt religious citie (meaning Conſtantinople, where Acatius was then Patriarke, as appeareth in the beginning of the law) the mother of our faith, and of all right beleeuing Chriſtians, we doe decree to haue this honour to haue the firſt place before all other. Here then we haue the Conſtantinopolitane Church the mother of the orthodoxall faith euery where profeſſed: and ſo by this law the Church of Rome alſo ſhall bee a daughter of that Church, and therefore not the mother or vniuerſall Church it ſelfe.

THE SECOND PART: THE CHVRCH OF Rome is not a true viſible Church.

The Papiſts.

Their arguments are as we haue heard, queſt. 3. of the notes of the Church, grounded vpon their ſucceſſion, miracles, gift of propheſying: anſwered ſufficiently afore, Not. 4. 5. 6. We neede not, nor muſt not for breuities ſake repeat the ſame things often. 28. Error.

The Proteſtants.

We deny vtterly that they are a true viſible Church of Chriſt, but an Antichriſtian Church, and an aſſembly of heretikes, and enemies to the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt.

1 That cannot be a true Church where the word of God is not truly preached, nor the Sacraments rightly adminiſtred according to Chriſts inſtitution: So are they not in the Popes Church: For the word is not ſincerely taught, but they haue added many inuentions of their owne, and doe preach contrarie Doctrines to the Scripture. The Sacraments alſo they haue not kept, for firſt they haue augmented the number: they haue made fiue more; of confirmation, orders, penance, Matrimonie, extreme vnction: beſide, the Sacraments of Chriſt they haue corrupted. In Baptiſme, beſide water, they vſe ſpittle, ſalte, oyle, Chriſme, contrarie to the inſtitution: and they lay ſuch a neceſſitie vpon this Sacrament, that all which die without it, ſay they, are damned. In the Lords Supper, they haue turned the Sacrament to a ſacrifice, made an Idoll of bread, changed the Communion into priuate Maſſes, taken the cup from the lay people, and many other abominations are committed by them: Ergo, neither hauing the word, nor Sacraments, according to the inſtitution, they are no true Church.

The propoſition or firſt part of this argument, as S. Paul Galath. 1. 8. He that preacheth otherwiſe, then the Apoſtles taught, is accurſed: yea that Church that ſo teacheth is accurſed: whether it adde to Chriſts doctrine, or detract or take away from it. And S. Ambroſe of taking away from Chriſts inſtitution thus ſaith: Negat Chriſtum, qui non omnia, quæ Chriſti ſunt confitetur: He denieth Chriſt, which doth not confeſſe and acknowledge all that Chriſt taught, lib. 6. in Luc. And for adding to the Scripture he thus teſtifieth, writing vpon thoſe words of our Sauiour, Be not the ſeruants of men, 1. Cor. 7. Serui hominum ſunt, qui humanis ſe ſubyciunt ſuperſtitionibus: They are the ſeruants of men, that ſubmit themſelues to humane ſuperſtitions. If they be the ſeruants of men, they are not the ſeruants of Chriſt: ſo S. Paul concludeth Galath. 1. 10. Thus the propoſition is ſtrengthened. But the Popiſh Church doth adde vnto the Scriptures, as it is euident in the Sacraments, wherein they vſe many rites beſide Chriſts inſtitution: It doth alſo detract, as in denying mariage to Miniſters, and the cuppe to the Laytie, both which the Scripture alloweth: Ergo, it is not the true Church.

*Argum.*2. They which are enemies to the true Church, and doe perſecute the members thereof, are no true viſible Church: they cannot be of that Church which they perſecute; as Bellarmine ſaith of Paul: how could he be of that Church which he with all his force oppreſſed? *de Eccleſ.lib.*3. *cap.*7. But they perſecute the Saints of God, and are moſt cruell towards them, as their conſciences beare them record. Ergo. So ſaith S. Auguſt. Eſt mundus qui perſequitur, de quo Chriſtus, ſi odit vos mundus, me prius odio habuit: eſt & mundus quem perſequitur; Deus erat in Chriſto mundum reconcilians ſibi: mundus damnatus, quicquid præter eccleſiam, mundus reconciliatus eccleſia: There is a world that perſecuteth, of the which Chriſt ſpeaketh, If the world hate you, it hated me firſt: There is an other world which it perſecuteth, of the which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, 2.Cor.5. the reconciled world is the Church, the damned world beſide the Church: Ergo, by S. Auguſtines ſentence the perſecuting Church, ſuch as is the Church of Rome, is not the true Church.

Eſpenſ.in 2.Tim.p.203.

And yet more plainly S. Chriſoſtome, as he is cited by one of your owne writers, *Hom.*19.oper. imperfect. Nunquid ouis lupum perſequitur, non potius lupus ouem, &c. Doth the ſheepe perſecute the woolfe, and not rather the woolfe the ſheep? the ſheep eateth herbes, the woolfe deuoureth fleſh: he therefore whom thou ſeeſt to feede vpon the herbes of Scripture, is a ſheepe: quem in ſanguine perſecutionis gaudentem, lupus: whom to delight in bloodie perſecution, he is a woolfe. But who are they which magnifie the Scriptures, and onely feede of them, as ſufficient to ſaluation? they are not the Papiſts, who ground their faith vpon vnwritten traditions, but Proteſtants: They are not then the ſheepe: and they are knowne to bee the moſt bloodie perſecutors of theſe daies: then they are the wolues, and therefore not the Church.

*Argum.*3. The habitation of Antichriſt cannot be the Church of Chriſt; ſo is theirs: the Pope himſelfe is Antichriſt, for who elſe but hee ſitteth in the Temple, being an enemie to Chriſt? 2.Theſſ.2. Where haue you a citie in the world built vpon ſeuen hils but Rome? Apocal.17.9. But of this matter we ſhall of purpoſe intreate afterward: Ergo, they are not a true viſible Church. And that Rome is the ſeate of Antichriſt, it appeareth by their owne confeſſion, who by Babylon vnderſtand Rome, Rhemiſt.annot.in 1.*Pet.*5.13. and ſo likewiſe Apocal.17.verſ.5. But Babylon is the ſeate of Antichriſt, and Rome is Babylon: Ergo. They haue here commonly two euaſions: firſt, it was called Babylon in reſpect of the perſecuting Emperours, Rhemiſt. Secondly, becauſe that before the end of the world Antichriſt ſhall haue his ſeate there, ſic Bellarm. But S. Hierome in his time doubted not to call Rome Babylon, when as both the Heathen perſecutions were ceaſed, neither yet their Antichriſt, whom they ſay ſhall come, reuealed: as thus he writeth, Fugite de medio Babylonis, &c. cecidit Babylon, & facta eſt habitatio dæmonum: Flie out of the middeſt of Babylon, let euery man ſaue his owne ſoule: for Babylon is fallen and become an habitation for diuels. He exhorteth them to leaue Rome, which here he calleth Babylon.

Ad Euſtoch. & Marcell.

And that the Pope is Antichriſt, see one of their Popes authoritie, *Decr.p.*3.*diſt.*3.*c.*12.Gregor. They that forbid any worke to bee done vpon the Saturday, are the preachers of Antichriſt, who when he commeth ſhall commaund vpon the Saturday, as well as the Lords day, to ceaſe from all worke. But this doth the Pope, forbid labour vpon the weeke daies, making them feſtiuall and holy daies, and neceſſarily to be kept. Ergo.

Laſtly, for this doctrine, that the Church of Rome, as it now ſtandeth, is not the true Church of Chriſt, many holy Martyrs haue giuen their liues: Thomas Man Martyr, anno 815. for holding that the popiſh Church was not the true Church, *articul.obiect.*9. Fox pag.815. Richard Feurus Martyr at Lyons, anno 1554. for ſaying it was not the true Church, becauſe it was gouerned by the traditions of men, and not the word of God, pag.912.col.1.

Thomas Bennet Martyr at Exceter affirmed, that the Papiſts appertained to the vniuerſall Church, but as dead members: for you ſay and preach, that the Popes word is equall with Gods word, pag.1039.col.1.

Maſter Saunders Martyr, that the Romiſh religion is rauening, and wooluiſh, as it appeareth, ſaith he, in three points: Firſt, it robbeth God of his due and only honour. Secondly, it taketh away the true comfort of conſcience in obſcuring or rather burying Chriſt, and his office of ſaluation. Thirdly, it ſpoyleth God of his true worſhip and ſeruice in ſpirit and truth, &c. *Saunder. epiſt.ad Epiſcop.Wintonienſ.pag.*1495.

See alſo the confeſſion of Thomas Oſmund, William Bamford, Nicholas Chamberlaine Martyrs: That the Church of Rome was no true member of the Catholike Church of Chriſt, becauſe the faith and religion thereof was not agreeable to Gods word, pag.1602.artic.3.obiect.

Maſter Robert Glouer Martyr, by theſe argumentsproueth the Church of Rome not to bee the Church of Chriſt: Firſt, Chriſts Church acknowledgeth Chriſt Ieſus onely to be their head: the Church of Rome ſetteth vp the man of ſinne for their head. Secondly, Chriſts Church heareth his voyce, and is ruled by his word, neither adding to, nor taking ought from it: the Church of Rome addeth to Gods word, and runneth a whoring after their owne inuentions. Thirdly, the true Church laboureth to reſiſt the luſts and deſires of the world, the fleſh and the diuell: thoſe for the moſt part giue themſelues to all voluptuouſneſſe, ſecretly committing ſuch things, which as Saint Paul ſaith, it is a ſhame to ſpeake of. Fourthly, the Church of Chriſt is perſecuted: the Church of Rome doth perſecute, murder, and ſlay the ſeruants of God; Ergo, it is not the true Church: *plura apud Fox, pag.*1710.*col.*2.

THAT THE CHVRCH OF THE PROteſtants is a true viſible Church.

The Papiſts.

THe arguments, which our aduerſaries vſe againſt vs to prooue vs to bee no Church, drawne from antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, ſucceſſion, the power of Miracles, prophecying, and ſuch like, I haue anſwered at large before in their ſeuerall places, that I ſhall not neede to repeate them againe. But generally the ſumme of our anſwere is this, that, whereas their argument may be thus framed: That Church which hath neither antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, vnitie, ſucceſſion, &c. is no true Church: but ſuch is the Church of the Proteſtants: Ergo. To this argument we haue thus anſwered: firſt, denying the propoſition, and ſhewing, that neither that alwaies is a Church where theſe notes are found; and that there may be a Church where they are wanting. Secondly, wee alſo infringe the aſſumption: for moſt of theſe notes I haue declared to bee more agreeable to our Church, and rather to be found amongſt vs, then with them. But who deſireth to ſee our anſwere more fully, I referre him to the ſeuerall places before, wherein theſe things are handled.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Churches of the Proteſtants, and namely the Church of England, are true viſible Churches, and notable members of the Catholike Church, beſide the arguments drawne from the preaching of the word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, which alwaies prooue a Church; wee will produce other reaſons, and ſuch as may perſwade our aduerſaries themſelues.

*Argum.*1. That Church which ſendeth forth Martyrs, as Chriſts faithfull ſouldiours, is the true Church: but the Church of the Proteſtants hath brought forth many Martyrs: Ergo.

The propoſition, I thinke, is not doubted of: for out of the Church there are no Martyrs: as S. Cyprian ſaith, Qui occiſi, &c. They which are ſlaine out of the Church, doe not winne a crowne of their faith, but a reward of their follie, *lib.*1.*epiſt.*1. Againe, the Martyrs of Chriſt are vndoubtedly ſaued, their ſoules are vnder the Altar, which is Chriſt, Apocal.6.9. And as Origen applieth that place of the Prophet Eſay.63.1. To them the Angels doe thus ſay and welcome them into heauen: Quis eſt iſte qui aſcendit ex Boſra? Who is this that aſcendeth from Bozra? that is, from the bloodie field: but there can be no ſaluation out of the Church. And further, the ſame Origen thus reaſoneth out of the words of our Sauiour, I haue a baptiſme to be baptiſed with, Luk.12.56. meaning his paſſion: Chriſtus profuſionem ſanguinis baptiſma vocat: Chriſt (ſaith he) calleth the ſhedding of his blood, baptiſme. But there is no kinde of true baptiſme and acceptable to God, but within the Church: Ergo, true martyrdome, which is a kind of baptiſme, is onely to bee found in the Church. But the propoſition needes no long proofe: I come to ſhew the aſſumption, that thoſe Saints, which out of our Church haue died for the Goſpell, were true and vnfained Martyrs.

Hom.7.in Iudic.

The ancient writers doe giue vs foure rules whereby to know and diſcerne the Martyrs of the Church: the firſt is S. Cyprians rule, by their ſingular patience: Sunt qui certis artibus, &c. There are ſome which by certaine artificiall meanes doe ſtupefie their bodies that they feele not the torments; there bee alſo ſome impotent and outragious affections, which take away the ſenſe of the bodie, &c. ſed placidum illud & manſuetum non videmus niſi in Chriſti martyribus: but wee finde not that quiet and meeke kinde of death, but onely in the Martyrs of Chriſt. But ſuch examples of patient death in the bleſſed Martyrs of our Church we haue many: and their patience appeareth both by their owne comfortable words and teſtimonie, by their couragious and conſtant behauiour, as alſo by the confeſſion of their enemies. Firſt for their owne teſtimonie: one Nicholas, or Francis Thieſſen, or one of them, which ſuffered for the Goſpell at Mechlin, anno 1545. when he felt the fire, ſaid thus; What a ſmall paine is this to bee compared to the life to come? Fox pag. 890. Anne Audebert Martyr at Orleance ſuffering vpon a Saturday, anno 1549. thus chearefully ſaid; I was firſt maried vpon a Saturday, and vpon a Saturday I ſhall be maried againe to Chriſt, p.903. col.1. Notable is the teſtimonie of that reuerend and godly Biſhop and Martyr B. Farrer, who thus ſaid to one Maſter Richard Ihones, who ſeemed to lament the painfulnes of his death, that if he ſaw him once to ſtirre in the paines of his burning, he ſhould then giue no credit to his doctrine: and as he ſaid, ſo being aſſiſted by Gods ſpirit he performed the ſame. But amongſt all other moſt glorious is the teſtimonie of Iames Baynham Martyr, who hauing his armes and legges

De duplici Martyrio.

halfe conſumed in the fire, thus cried out; Behold ô ye Papiſts, you looke for miracles, and here now may you ſee a miracle: for in this fire I feele no more paine, then if I were in a bed of downe, but it is to me as ſweete as a bed of Roſes, pag. 1030. col. 2.

Now for their conſtant and couragious behauiour, it was ſuch as became the valiant ſouldiours of Chriſt, void of all feare and doubtfulnes. Fiue conſtant Martyrs burned at Lyons, anno 1553. when the fire was readie to be put vnto them, they made this petition, that each might embrace and kiſſe the other, as being no whit afraid of death, pag. 906. Sixe Martyrs being burned together at Colcheſter, an. 1557. clapped their hands for ioy in the middeſt of the fire, that thouſands of people at the hearing thereof cried out and ſhouted, pag. 2009. Thomas Haukes bleſſed Martyr, in the middeſt of the fire lifted vp his hands ouer his head burning as a torch, with flaming fire, and clapped them thrice in token of great ioy, pag. 1593. Maſter Iohn Hooper Biſhop and Martyr behaued himſelfe in his bitter death, the fire being thrice renued, like a moſt meeke lambe of Chriſt, knocking ſtill vpon his breaſt till his arme fell off, pag. 1511. Such examples a great number might bee alleaged, of their conſtant and quiet behauiour: but theſe may ſuffice.

Their conſtancie alſo may appeare by the confeſſion of their aduerſaries. Firſt, William Huſſon Martyr at Roane, anno 1544. ſo cheerefully carried himſelfe in his death, that whereas ſome maliciouſly ſaid he had a diuell, they were of others reprooued, who ſaid, that if he had a diuell he ſhould haue fallen into deſpaire, pag. 900. A poore Martyr which ſuffered at Paris, anno 1549. being examined of his faith before the King Henry the 2. did ſo boldly anſwer for himſelf, that the King muſed much thereat: And whereas the Cardinals and Biſhops told the King, that the Lutherans did but carrie ſmoke in their mouthes, which if they were put to the fire, would vaniſh away; the King himſelfe thereupon purpoſed to be preſent to ſee the execution, where the poore Martyr in his cruell and painfull death was ſo couragious, that the beholding thereof did more aſtoniſh the King, then all the other before, pag. 903. Likewiſe that reuerend Archbiſhop and holy Martyr D. Thomas Cranmer did ſo manfully and valiantly endure the fire, not once mouing or ſtirring in the middeſt of the flames, that one Frier Iohn being ignorant of the conſtancie of Martyrs, ſaid to the Lord Williams, he died in deſpaire: who ſmiling onely ſo rebuked the Friers follie, pag. 1886. But enough hath been ſaid concerning the probation of this matter, namely the patience of the Martyrs, no whit inferiour to the conſtancie of the ancient Martyrs in the Primitiue Church. And thus much of the firſt rule to know a Martyr by.

The ſecond and third rules are Bernards, who thus writeth: Illa mors precioſa eſt, quam commendat vita, &c. That death is precious which a good life commendeth: but that is more precious, which a good cauſe commendeth, Ser. paru. 24.

Secondly, true Martyrs then are to be iudged by their holy life & innocent conuerſation: for as it is in the Pſalm 116. Precious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints, or holy ones. They thē that haue liued an vngodly and vncleane life, vnleſſe they be conuerted and change their wayes, are no fit witneſſes of Gods truth: But ſuch the Lord appointeth for the witneſſe of his truth, that are of vnſpotted life and of a godly conuerſation. The popiſh Church hath canonized for Martyrs, ſome that were rebels and diſobedient to their Prince, as Thomas Becket, and S. Hugh: ſome that were Sorcerers and Magicians, as Hildebrand their Pope, and S. Dunſtane: ſome haue been taken for Saints amongſt them that were ſlaine in their drunkennes, as it may be ſeene, Decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 45. cap. 1. But our Church can ſhew another kind of Martyrs, men of excellent vertuous life: as Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, a notable example of chaſt and continent life; Biſhop Cranmer of innocencie, Biſhop Hooper of hoſpitalitie; Maſter Latimer of painfull and diligent preaching; Tomkins of continuall and feruent praier. See their ſeuerall ſtories, and I thinke they cannot name one of the Martyrs of the Goſpell of an infamous life, after they came to the knowledge of the Goſpell: and ſo is a true Martyr deſcribed, Apocal. 14. 5. In their mouthes is no guile, &c.

Thirdly: but this note of an innocent life is not ſufficient of it ſelfe, vnleſſe it be ioyned with the other, namely the goodnes of the cauſe; which no doubt our Martyrs had, and I ſhew it thus: Firſt, it is a good cauſe to die in defence of the true worſhip of God, againſt the falſe adoration or worſhip of Idols: but ſuch is the cauſe of the Martyrs of the Goſpel in theſe daies: Ergo. The propoſition is prooued by a particular induction of the ancient Martyrs both before the law, vnder the law, and ſince the law, which haue been perſecuted for this cauſe: as before the law Laban perſecuted Iacob, becauſe of his gods, Geneſ. 31. 30. And Iacob putteth away all the ſtrange gods in his familie, Geneſ. 35. 2. In the time of the law vnder the Iudges Gedeon ſhould haue bin ſlaine, for deſtroying the Altar of Baal, Iudg. 6. 30. Vnder the Monarchie of the Chaldeans the three children were put into the fierie fornace, becauſe they would not bow downe to the image of gold, Dan. 3. Since the time of Chriſt vnder the Romane Emperours many thouſand Chriſtians were put to death, becauſe they refuſed to worſhip the Idols of the Heathen.

Now then that our Martyrs haue died in the ſame cauſe, which is the ſecond part of the argument, ment it may bee thus proued. Firſt, our aduerſaries themſelues cannot denie, but that they haue put many Proteſtants to death for refuſing to worſhip their images of gold, as the ſtorie of the Martyrs is full of ſuch examples. But here is their euaſion, that their images are not like the Heathen Idols, nor the worſhip of their images Idolatrie. Contra. That they are the only knowne Idolaters of this time, firſt it is cleere by the Scripture, Apocal.9.20. for there the Apoſtle and Prophet ſpeaketh of the worſhipping of Idols of gold and ſiluer, after the opening of the 7.ſeale, and the blowing of the ſixt trumpet, which muſt be by courſe of that prophecie long after the Idoll worſhip of the Heathen: ſo that the popiſh Church muſt needes thereby bee ſignified, there being no knowne nation beſide in theſe parts of the world, that worſhippeth Images. Secondly, the Iewes themſelues doe ſay, that Chriſtians worſhip Images contrarie to the law of God: as a Iew obiected to Maſter George Wiſehart as they ſailed together vpon the Rhene, Fox pag.1269.col.2. Wherefore it is manifeſt, that our Martyrs hauing ſtriued by death againſt the idolatrie of theſe times, haue died in the ſame cauſe, for the which the ancient Martyrs gaue their liues againſt the idolatrie of the Heathen.

Secondly, it is a good cauſe to die for the faith of Chriſt, and they are the faithfull Martyrs which hope onely to bee iuſtified by his death: Apocal.7.14. Theſe are they which haue waſhed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lambe. But in this faith haue our Martyrs died, hoping onely to finde life by faith in Chriſts blood: whereas the Papiſts ſeeke to make their robes white in the blood and merits of Saints. And againe, whereas the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the laſt times of perſecution, ſaith, Here is the patience of the Saints, here are they that keepe the commaundements of God, and the faith of Ieſus; There haue none elſe in all the world been perſecuted for the faith of Chriſt in theſe latter times, but the Proteſtants onely: the Papiſts perſecute, they are not perſecuted: and where they ſuffer, it is not for religion or the faith of Ieſus, but for treaſon, and wilfull tranſgreſſion of the Princes lawes. Thus then it is euident that our Martyrs are they in this place prophecied of, and dying in ſo good a cauſe, muſt needes be the faithfull witneſſes of God.

A fourth rule to diſcerne true Martyrs in their death, is by thoſe miraculous and ſtrange works of God declared in their martyrdome, though wee doe not alleage this either as a neceſſarie or vniuerſall note. So S. Ambroſe extolleth the martyrdome of S. Paul: De Pauli ceruice vnda lactis, &c. Serm.68. Out of Pauls necke being beheaded ſtreamed milke rather than blood: And no marueile if the nouriſher of the Churches abounded with milke, who ſaith (writing to the Corinthians) I gaue you milke to drinke, &c. So Policarpus could not bee conſumed with fire; Romanus ſpake, his tongue being cut out; Cecilia remained a day and a night in an hot bath, not being hurt. The like miracles are credibly reported to haue been ſhewed in the death of the Martyrs of the Goſpell. Stephen Brune could not be conſumed with the fire being twice renued, and though oyle were powred into it; but the hangman was conſtrained to thruſt him thorough. Stephen Mangin Martyr ſpake, his tongue being cut out. The like alſo is recorded of Gabriel Berandinus, put to death for the Goſpell at Troyes, anno 1550. pag.904. See more of ſuch examples before in the 2. controuerſie, 3. queſtion, in the fift note of Miracles: but we ſtand not ſo much vpon this point. Wherefore ſhortly to conclude this argument, where true Martyrs are, there is the Church: the Proteſtants Church hath true and faithfull Martyrs, as I haue ſhewed, by their ſingular patience, holie life, their honeſt and good cauſe, and by the wonderfull workes ſhewed in their death: Ergo, we are the true Church of Chriſt.

Secondly, we reaſon thus: That Church which hath been from time to time perſecuted in the world, is the Church of God: that which hath alwaies perſecuted and been filled with the blood of the Saints, is the malignant Church. But our Church for theſe foure or fiue hundred yeers hath been alwaies perſecuted; and they haue been the perſecutors. Ergo.

For the probation of the aſſumption or ſecond part of the argument, we neede not much labour: for all the world knoweth how the popiſh Church continually hath perſecuted the Proteſtants, and eſpecially within theſe 50. or 60. yeeres ſince the reuiuing of the Goſpell: in which time they haue ſpilled the blood of not ſo few as an hundred thouſand of Gods Saints, if an account bee taken thereof. For in France onely in that bloodie maſſaker in the yeere 1572. there were put to the ſword in one moneth 30. thouſand Proteſtants, Fox pag.2153. And the Pope at Rome hearing tell thereof, he with his Cardinals cauſed a ſolemne proceſſion to bee made, with ſinging of Te Deum, and proclaimed a yeere of Iubilee. We haue alſo for this point the confeſſion of the Rhemiſts: That Proteſtants (whom they call heretikes, as Paul of the perſecuting Iewes was counted an heretike, Act.24.14.) are put to death at Rome, and that they allow of their puniſhment in other countries, Rhemiſt. annot. in Apocal.17.ſect.8.

Now for the truth of the firſt part of the argument, that it is the lot of the Church of God to be perſecuted in this world, the Apoſtle thus witneſſeth, Gal.4.29. As then he that was borne after the fleſh perſecuted him that was borne after the ſpirit, ſo is it now. And further, that it is a proper badge of the malignant Church to ſucke the blood of the Saints: wee reade in the Reuelation 17.6. I ſaw the woman drunke with the blood of the Saints,&c. In which place by the bloodthirſtie whore of Babylon is ſignified the perſecuting Antichriſt at Rome: which is ſo plaine a text to conuince the aduerſarie, that they cannot poſſibly auoyd it, though they haue found out diuers ſhifts and euaſions, and eſpecially three, but all to little purpoſe. I will ſet them downe in order.

Firſt, by this whore the Rhemiſts would vnderſtand the whole corps of all the perſecutors that haue been from the beginning of the world to the end, Apocal.17.ſect.6. Contra. But this cannot be ſo. Firſt, chap.17.verſ.1. the Angell ſaith to Iohn, I will ſhew thee the damnation of the great whore: ſpeaking of the time to come, not of the time paſt. Secondly, verſ.6. She is drunken with the blood of the Martyrs of Ieſus: which muſt of neceſſitie be vnderſtood of the perſecution ſince the manifeſtation of Ieſus to the world. Thirdly, verſ.18. The whore is the great citie, that raigneth ouer the kingdomes of the earth: It is a certaine citie or regiment, therefore not an vncertaine and indefinite bodie or companie.

Secondly, by the whore of Babylon the Rhemiſts vnderſtand, the terrene ſtate of the perſecuting Emperours, not the Church or eccleſiaſticall ſtate there, annot.17.Apocal.ſect.4. Contra. Firſt, the beaſt, whereon the whore ſitteth, ſignifying that great citie, which bare rule ouer the kingdomes, was and is not, chap.17.8. that is, the imperiall ſtate was remoued, when the Popes ſucceeded; yet in them was reuiued the imperiall tyrannie. And hereunto agreeth that prophecie, chap.13.11. Another beaſt commeth out of the earth, which did all that the firſt beaſt could doe, and healed his deadly wound, and gaue life and ſpirit to the image of the beaſt, verſ.15. This is the beaſt that was, and is not, namely the beaſtly tyrannie of the perſecuting Emperours reuiued by the cruell Popes: wherefore the whore cannot ſignifie the terrene ſtate of the Emperours, for this beaſt was and is not. Secondly, S.Hierome alſo thus expoundeth, ſaying to Rome, Maledictionem,&c. Thou maiſt by repentance eſcape that curſe threatned thee by our Sauiour in the Apocalypſe, lib.2.aduerſ.Iouinian. But when S.Hierome thus did write, the heatheniſh perſecution was ceaſed: wherefore by Babylon the imperiall ſtate is not ſignified.

Thirdly, the Rhemiſts by the beaſt, that was, and is not, doe inſinuate Antichriſt, who is not yet come (ſay they) in our daies, neither ſhall come as long as the Empire of Rome ſtandeth, ibid.

Contra. 1. By the ſame reaſon wee conclude that Antichriſt is alreadie come, becauſe that which letted, or hindered the reuealing of Antichriſt, as the Apoſtles ſaith, 2.Theſſ.2.6,7. namely the Romane Empire, is taken away: for nothing now remaineth of the imperiall ſoueraigntie, but onely an image thereof: firſt, the large dominion of the Empire is loſt; he beareth little ſway that is Emperour, but in his owne ſeignorie, that he hath beſide the title of the Empire. Secondly, the ſeate of the Empire is chaunged, which was at Rome, but now is no certaine place. Thirdly, then the Empire went by deſcent and ſucceſſion, now by election. Fourthly, they were called the Romane Emperours, now the Emperours of Germanie. Fiftly, then Rome and Italie were ſubiect to the Emperour, now he hath nothing to doe there: ſo that the Romane Empire is long ſince decaied and diſſolued; and vpon the diſſolution thereof Antichriſt was to be reuealed. 2. Whereas Antichriſt by their owne confeſſion muſt be the ſeuenth Regiment, fiue were then paſt in S.Iohns time, the Regiment of Ægypt, Canaan, Babylon, the Perſians, Greekes, the ſixt was the Romane Empire: (though theſe ſixe Regiments are better referred to the ſixe formes of gouernment among the Romanes; the Kings, Conſuls, Decemuiri, Tribuni militum, Dictators, Emperors) then the ſixt, which is the Romane Empire, being aboliſhed (for now there is no Emperour, but a King of the Romanes, and that but a bare title neither, the Emperour is of Germanie) the ſeuenth which is Antichriſt muſt needes ſucceede: wherefore Antichriſt is alreadie come. 3. S.Hierome thus did write in his daies, calling Rome Sodome, epiſt.ad Lucinum. And againe, Dum in Babylone verſarer,& purpurata meretricis eſſem colonus,&c. While I was in Babylon, meaning Rome, and was an inhabiter of the ſkarlet whore, &c. præfat.ad Paulinianum. He neither vnderſtandeth this prophecie of the time paſt, nor ſuſpendeth it for the time to come, but euen in thoſe daies ſheweth how it began to bee accompliſhed, the Heathen perſecution being then ceaſed. So then it is cleere, that Rome was not onely, neither ſhall be onely, but euen now is and hath been a great while that ſkarlet whore of Babylon, drunken with the blood of the Saints: and what Saints blood haue they ſucked, but of the Proteſtants? And thus much for our ſecond argument.

Argum.3. Thirdly, the holy Apoſtle ſaith, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is of God, 1.Iohn 4.2. But the Church of the Proteſtants ſo confeſſeth: Ergo, it is of God.

Obiect. The Rhemiſts in their Annotations vpon this place ſay, that this was a note onely for thoſe times: for there are many which confeſſe that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, and yet are heretikes.

Contra. Firſt, the contrarie appeareth, for that the Apoſtle in the firſt verſe giueth a caueat to trie euery ſpirit, and afterward ſetteth downe this rule whereby to trie them: this rule then is generall for euery ſpirit. Secondly,by this rule Antichriſt is to be tried,both he that was then come, and he that ſhould come, verſ.3. Ergo, it was a rule alſo for afterward. Thirdly, this rule is the ſame with that confeſſion of Peter, Thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing Lord,Matth.16.18. Vpon which rocke Chriſt ſaith he would build his Church: Ergo, this confeſſion being the foundation of the Church,is a touchſtone for all ages. Fourthly,I will oppoſe againſt them a Synode of their owne, that maketh this rule generall for all ages: *Synod.Colonienſ.p.6.c.*15. Fidelis diſpenſator,&c. He is a faithfull diſpenſer,as Iohn witneſſeth, whoſe onely ſcope Chriſt is, and whoſe ſpirit confeſſeth that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, and as S.Paul doth interprete, Tit.2. that the grace of God our Sauiour hath appeared to all men, to teach vs to denie vngodly luſts,&c. in the which words the Apoſtle doth comprehend two natures in Chriſt; of the Word, in teaching vs the will of his fether; of the fleſh,in being offered for vs. Fiftly, though ſome heretikes may in word confeſſe Chriſt to bee come, yet if they detract from any of his offices, as the Papiſts doe from his Prieſthood,in making other mediators, and ſatisfactions, in that they denie that, for the which Chriſt came,they denie Chriſt. Wherefore we conclude,that ſeeing we hold the confeſſion of Peter,vpon the which the Church is builded, and acknowledge that Chriſt for his natures God and man, for his offices our only King,Prophet,Prieſt,and Mediatour is come in the fleſh; our ſpirit is of God, and our Church the true Church of Chriſt.

Arg.4. Fourthly,we reaſon thus; that Church,which maintaineth no hereſie contrarie to the Scriptures,is the true church of Chriſt: but ſuch are yͤ reformed Churches of the Proteſtants. Ergo.

The propoſition cannot be denied,the aſſumption or ſecond part is thus prooued: They which beleeue the law and the Prophets, and all things contained in the Scriptures, cannot maintaine any hereſie: ſo doth S.Paul cleere himſelfe from the accuſation of hereſie, Act.24.14. But the reformed Churches beleeue all written in the Scriptures, ſubmitting themſelues to the iudgement of the word for the triall of their faith and doctrine: Ergo, our Church cannot bee iuſtly charged with hereſie. Beſide,I haue ſhewed before,by the ſeuerall definitions of hereſie, that it can in no ſenſe bee laid to our charge in the queſtion of the notes of the Church in this controuerſie. And againe in the other treatiſe of the pillars of Papiſtrie it is prooued at large,that the Churches of the Proteſtants hold no one opinion, in the purer ages of the Church condemned for hereſie. And though Bellarmine doth charge vs with twentie hereſies,he ſhall neuer be able to proue one: but into their ſinke of ſuperſtition, fortie ſeuerall hereticall ſtinking puddles doe runne downe, as in the ſame place more at large may bee ſeene. So then Proteſtants are no heretikes, nor yet their Church hereticall,and conſequently a true Church.

Argum.5. Fiftly,where the true foundation is laid,which is Ieſus Chriſt only,there is the houſe of God. But our Churches lay no other foundation beſide Ieſus Chriſt: Ergo. The propoſition is the Apoſtles, 1.Cor.3.11. Other foundation can no man lay,then that which is laide, Ieſus Chriſt. And Epheſ.2.20. The Church is thus deſcribed to bee built vpon the foundation of the Prophets, and Apoſtles, Ieſus Chriſt being the chiefe corner ſtone.

The aſſumption alſo is manifeſt: for that we receiue onely the Scriptures, no vnwritten traditions: we acknowledge no Mediatour,but Chriſt; no ſatisfaction for ſinne,but his blood,and in all things make him the onely foundation of our building: whereas our aduerſaries doe ioyne as fellow with Chriſt the Virgin Mary, as the Ieſuite in the end of all his bookes moſt blaſphemouſly doth aſcribe the honour and praiſe of his labours to Chriſt, and the bleſſed Virgin. So beſide faith onely they haue brought in merits,ſatisfactions,works of ſupererogation, and ſuch like: and they doe not condemne any doctrine of the Proteſtants more then faith onely,which in effect is to denie Chriſt onely,the obiect of faith,to be the foundation. Wherefore they laying another foundation are not the Church: and the Proteſtants by the ſame reaſon are the Church, being builded onely by faith vpon Ieſus Chriſt the onely foundation.

Thus farre then I haue by moſt euident arguments ſhewed,that the reformed Churches of the Proteſtants are the true Churches of Chriſt: firſt, for that they haue ſent forth the conſtant Martyrs as faithfull witneſſes of Chriſt. Secondly, becauſe they haue been alwaies perſecuted and kept vnder by the malignant Synagogue. Thirdly, they haue the true confeſſion of Ieſus Chriſt to be come in the fleſh,which proceedeth from the ſpirit of God. Fourthly, they can ſhew no hereſie condemned in the purer ages of the Church for hereſie, to bee maintained by our Church. Fiftly, they are founded vpon the true foundation Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore are the right buildings and true Churches of Chriſt. Many other reaſons might be alleaged, and may hereafter at better leiſure,for the demonſtration of our Church: but I will content my ſelfe with theſe for this time,and ſo proceede vnto the reſt.

THE THIRD GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING COVNCELS.

A Councell is nothing elſe but an aſſembly and gathering together of the people of God, about the affaires and buſineſſe of the Church: and they are of two ſorts, either vniuerſall in the name of the whole Church; or particular, which are either Nationall, when the learned of a whole Realme are called together; or Prouinciall, when as the Churches of one Prouince doe aſſemble into one place to conſult of Religion.

There may be two eſpeciall occaſions of Councels: the one for reſiſting and rooting out of hereſies, as the Apoſtles and elders met together, Act. 15. againſt thoſe which would haue impoſed the Iewiſh ceremonies vpon the beleeuing Gentiles. So the Councell of Nice was celebrated the yeare of the Lord 327. to confound the hereſie of Arrius, who denied Chriſt, as he was God, to be equall to his Father. In the Councell of Conſtantinople, anno. 383. or thereabout, the hereſie of Macedonius was condemned, which denied the holy Ghoſt to be God: In the Epheſine Councell the firſt, Neſtorius hereſie was ouerthrowne, which affirmed Chriſt to haue two perſons, anno 434. The Councell of Chalcedon was collected, anno 454. about the hereſie of Eutiches, which held that there was in Chriſt but one nature after his incarnation; ſo confounding his humanitie and diuinitie together.

The other cauſe of the calling of Councels, is, to prouide and eſtabliſh holſome Lawes, decrees and conſtitutions, for the gouernment of the Church: ſo the Apoſtles called the brethren together, Act. 6. to take order for the poore. And in the Councell of Nice an vniforme order was eſtabliſhed for the celebration of Eaſter, which before had much troubled the Church.

Ex admonit. legator. ſeſsi. Concil. Trident.

Vnto theſe two cauſes of aſſembling Councels, which are Extirpatio hæreſis & reformatio morum, the rooting out of hereſies, and the reformation of manners, may alſo be added a third, and that is, pax externa Eccleſiæ, the externall peace of the Church, namely in compounding of controuerſies, and in working reconciliation betweene ſome principall members of the Church: As in the generall Councell of Epheſus, the matter was agreed betweene Zenon Biſhop of Cyprus, and the Patriarch of Antioch, who chalenged a prerogatiue ouer that Iland, that the Biſhops of Cyprus ſhould chuſe their owne Metropolitane: In the Councell of Chalcedon, action. 11. 12. the ſtrife betweene Baſſianus and Stephanus for the Biſhopricke of Epheſus was taken vp: Concil. Baſilienſ. An order of agreement was ſet betweene the French King, and the Duke of Burgundie. Concil. Florentin. great labour made for the vniting of the Latine and Greeke Church, &c.

Ex Appendice Concil.

The queſtions betweene vs and the Papiſts concerning councels, are theſe. Firſt, whether generall Councels be abſolutely neceſſarie. Secondly, by whom they ought to be called. Thirdly, of what perſons they ought to conſiſt. Fourthly, who ſhould bee the preſident of the Councell. Fiftly, concerning the authoritie of them. Sixtly, whether they may erre or not. Seuenthly, whether they are aboue the Pope. Eightly, of the conditions to be obſerued in generall Councels: of theſe in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION CONCERNING the neceſſitie of Councels.

The aſſertion of the Papiſts.

29. Error.

THey ſeeme in words to affirme, that generall Councels are not abſolutely neceſſarie: for the Primitiue Church was without any Councell for the ſpace of 300. yeares and more: yet they hold that ſome Councels, either generall or particular, are of neceſſitie to be had, Bellarmine de concil. lib. 1. cap. 11. And yet this is to be maruelled at, that they ſhould ſo much ſtand for Councels, ſeeing they might vſe a farre more compendious way, in referring all to the determination of the Pope, whom they boldly, but very fondly affirme, that he cannot erre.

Although they ſeeme not to lay a neceſſitie vpon generall Councels, yet in truth they doe contrarie: for they allow no Councels at all, without the Popes conſent and authoritie; neither thinke it lawfull for any Nation or Prouince, to make within themſelues any innouation or change of religion. So in the aſſembly at Zuricke, anno 1523. For the reformation of Religion, Faber tooke exception againſt that meeting, affirming that it was no conuenient place, nor fit time for the diſcuſſing of ſuch matter, but rather the cognition and tractation thereof belonged to a generall Councell. Sleid.lib.3.

And further they hold, that what hath been decreed in a Councell, cannot be diſſolued but by the like Councell, as if the Councell of Trent were to be diſanulled, it muſt be done by the like Synod. Bellarmine de concil. lib.3. cap.21. Which Councell they affirme to haue been generall; and therefore another generall Councell muſt by their opinion neceſſarily be expected, before it can be reuoked.

The confeſſion of the Proteſtants.

WE doe holde that generall Councels are an holeſome meanes for the repreſſing and reforming, both of errors in Religion, and corruption in manners: and that true generall Councels ought to be much deſired, and conueniently expected: that is, ſuch a Councell, where euery man franke and free may vtter his minde without feare: an holy Councell, where euery man may goe about to ſet vp godlines, not to oppreſſe the truth. Such a Councell King Henrie the eight of worthie memorie in his proteſtation for the Church of England, for not comming to the Councell of the Pope, truely affirmeth, that he deſired, and craued nothing ſo oft of God: but becauſe there is no hope of any ſuch Councell, ſeeing the Pope would be the chiefe doer in it; and it is too vnreaſonable, that the ſame man ſhould be both a partie, and a iudge; we doubt not, but that it is lawfull by the word of God, for euery Prince, Duke, Lord, within his owne ſeignorie, without any further delay, or expectation, by the aduice and counſaile of the learned and godly of the land, according to Gods law, to reforme their Church.

Firſt, becauſe all delay in matters of the Church are dangerous, and inconueniences are at the firſt hand to be met withall, as we ſee, Act.6. and Act.15. immediatly, when any queſtion did ariſe, the Apoſtles aſſembled togither. In the Councell of Baſil, where it was decreed, that the Pope was ſubiect to the Councels, Panormitane a ſtiffe champion on the Popes ſide, would haue the decree ſtaied till the returne of the Princes Embaſſadors: But Arelatenſis that worthy Cardinall ſtepped vp, and ſhewed what danger there might be in a ſmall delay, by the example of Hannibal, who deferring his going but one day to Rome, was driuen cleane out of Italie, hauing been very like to haue taken the citie, if he had vſed the opportunitie. But without all controuerſie, matters of faith ought not to be delayed: which could not be auoided, if a generall Councell ſhould alwayes be waited for.

Secondly, a Prince hath the like authoritie in his dominion, as the houſeholder hath in his houſe. But euery man ought to reforme his houſe, without any further delay, aduiſement or conſultation, as Ioſua ſaith, I and my houſe will ſerue the Lord, 24. verſ.15. Wherefore the Prince may and ought to performe the like in his countrey.

To this purpoſe is that place fitlie applied in the ſecond pſalme: Erudimini qui iudicatis terram: get you learning ye that are Iudges of the earth: to what end? that they may be able to vnderſtand the diſeaſes of the ſicke Church, and to ſeeke redreſſe for the ſame within their owne Realmes. ſic Henric. Rex, in proteſtat.

Laſtly, we finde by experience, that the Lord hath bleſſed ſuch reformations, which haue been made by Princes in their owne territories: as that in Zuricke anno. 1523. at Berne, 1528. and the moſt happie reformation of our Church of England begun by King Henrie the eight, encreaſed by that moſt vertuous Prince King Edward the ſixt, and proſperouſly continued and eſtabliſhed by our gracious Soueraigne Queene Elizabeth.

I will adde the teſtimonie of Auguſtine: who anſwering to the Pelagians, which obiected that they were condemned by certaine ſingle Biſhops in their owne dioceſſe, without a Synod, he ſaith thus, Ac ſi congregatione ſynodi opus erat, vt aperta pernicies damnaretur, quaſi nulla hæreſis aliquando, niſi ſynodi congregatione damnata ſit, &c. cont.2. Epiſtol. Pelag. lib.4. cap.12. As though, ſaith he, a Synod or Councell were alwayes neceſſarie to condemne a knowne hereſie: Nay, we finde that more hereſies without compariſon, haue been in the ſame places condemned, where they firſt ſprang, without any ſuch neceſſitie, more ſo, then otherwiſe.

The ſame alſo hath been the iudgement of the holy Martyrs, that in reforming of religion, generall Councels are not alway to be expected. So ſaith Richard Feurus Martyr, in his examination, ſpeaking of the Church of Geneua, that albeit the Pope and the Miniſters of the Church of Rome were not called to the inſtitution of the foreſaid Church of Geneua; yet it followeth not, that there was no lawfull order obſerued, in eſtabliſhing that Church, ex Iohan. Criſpin. lib.6.

Thus alſo Biſhop Ridley that godly and learned Martyr. We doe not reade that Chriſt in any place hath laid ſo great a burthen vpon the members of his ſpouſe, that he hath commanded them to goe to the vniuerſall Church ; Chriſt ſendeth them, that would knowe the truth, to ſearch the Scriptures. But that all men ſhould meete togither out of all parts in the world, to define the articles of our faith, I neither finde it commanded of Chriſt, nor written in the word of God. reſponſ. Rid. ad obiect. 6. Mar. Anton.

See alſo the conſent of antiquitie. Concil. Agrippinenſ. ſub Iulio. 1. Valerianus a Biſhop thus ſpeaketh, Etſi non hic omnes conſeniores apud Agrippinam conueniſſemus, ſufficeret à 5. Epiſcopis, Euphratem blaſphemum pronunciari: Although all we fellow elders had not met heere in this Councell, it had been ſufficient, if fiue Biſhops had pronounced Euphrates a blaſphemous heretike, for denying Chriſt to be God.

Concil. Aquileienſ. Palladius an Arrian heretike refuſing to anſwere, ſaying he expected a generall Councell : Ambroſe being preſent, maketh aunſwere thus. Ibi multitudine opus non eſſe, vbi veritas non laboraret in plurib, ſi locata eſſet in paucis: There needed no multitude to be aſſembled, where the trueth remained with a fewe. There is no ſuch neceſſitie therefore of generall Councels.

Laſtly, I will vrge againſt them a teſtimonie of one of their Popes, decret. part. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 1. cap. 2. Gelaſius: Sabellius was condemned by a Synode, neither was it neceſſarie afterward for the condemnation of his followers, ſeuerally to celebrate or ſolemnize Synodes. Wherefore Synodes are not in euery caſe neceſſarie now : we may inſiſt and reſt vpon the decrees of the auncient Synodes agreeable to Gods word.

THE SECOND QVESTION, BY WHOSE AVthoritie Councels ought to be called.

The Papiſts.

30. Error. THey doe generally hold, that generall Councels ought onely to be called and appointed by the Popes authoritie, or his aſſignment : their goodly reaſons are theſe.

Argum. 1. Councels ought to be congregate in the name of Chriſt, that is, by him that hath authoritie from Chriſt ſo to congregate them : Matth. 18. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Concil. cap. 12. Anſwere, See here is a goodly expoſition, to aſſemble in the name of Chriſt, is to aſſemble by the authoritie of the Pope : ſo belike where Chriſt ſaith, whereſoeuer two or three are gathered togither in my name, &c. Chriſt will not be preſent with them, vnleſſe we ſend vp to Rome for licence, that two or three may come togither.

Then are Councels aſſembled in Chriſts name, when they ſuffer themſelues and their actions to be gouerned by the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scripture. Bellarm. But who ſhall be iudge, whether Councels are ruled by the word of God, for both Papiſts and Proteſtants alleage Scripture for their decrees in Councels : wherefore this point is yet left vncertaine, vnleſſe we doe refer this matter, of calling and iudging of Councels to the Pope, that hath receiued that authority from Chriſt. Anſwere. 1. The Scriptures themſelues ſhall be iudges, whoſe decrees are agreeable to Scripture : they neede not any ſuperiour iudge. And whatſoeuer our aduerſaries ſay for their decrees, it is certaine, the moſt of them are not grounded vpon Scripture : nay it is their doctrine, that the Scriptures containe not all things neceſſarie concerning faith and manners : this one opinion ſheweth, how well the reſt of their decrees agree with Scripture. 2. We denie, that the Pope hath receiued any ſuch authoritie from Chriſt, as ſhall afterwards appeare : I maruell then that the Ieſuite will ſtill preſſe vs with that point, that is in queſtion betweene vs.

Argum. 2. Generall Councels ſhould be appointed by them, that haue generall authoritie to command men to come to the Councell : but this authoritie ouer the whole Church neuer any Emperour had, in ſuch ample manner, as the Pope hath : Ergo. Anſwere. firſt, it is a great vntruth, that the Popes ſpirituall iuriſdiction which he falſely challengeth, was at any time greater than the Emperours dominion; for Conſtantine ruled ouer both the Weſt and Eaſt Churches : but the Churches of Greece were neuer, nor are not to this day ſubiect to the ſea of Rome. For Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell of Baſile vnder this pretence, becauſe the Greekes, which ſhould come vnto the Councell for the vniting of their Church, would not paſſe the Alpes: but this vniting neuer went forward, an. 1431. Againe, if the commandement of one Emperour or Potentate be not large enough to appoint a generall Councell, as in theſe dayes it is not, it may be done by the conſent and agreement of Princes.

Argum. 3. Prouinciall Councels are aſſigned and ſummoned by Metropolitanes in their prouinces, and Nationall by Primates or Patriarches; therefore Generall Councels muſt alſo be ſummoned by the Pope ; for as the Metropolitane is to his prouince, the Biſhop to his Dioceſſe : ſo is the Pope to the vniuerſall Church. Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. 1. It followeth not, that the Pope may doe that in the vniuerſall Church, which is lawfull for the Metropolitane in his prouince, or a Biſhop in his dioceſſe: As it is no good conſequent, there may be a Monarch ouer one or two kingdomes: Ergo, alſo ouer al the world: for why ſhould there be one Eccleſiaſticall Prince rather ouer the vniuerſall Church, then one ciuill Magiſtrate ouer all the world?

2 We denie that it belongeth to Metropolitanes or Primates in their Prouinces to appoint prouinciall Councels, for eſtabliſhing Eccleſiaſticall lawes: but that it appertaineth of right to the Princes and Dukes in their ſeignories. Neither is the Conuocation of the Clergie in England ſummoned without the Princes authoritie: neither any decree made to ſtand in force without the royall aſſent. As for the Synodes, ſcenes, viſitations and ſuch like of Metropolitanes, Biſhops, Archdeacons in their ſeuerall iuriſdictions, they are for another end: not to enact new Eccleſiaſticall Lawes, but to ſee to the execution onely of them, which are alreadie enacted.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold it as a fond and ridiculous aſſertion, that generall Councels ſhould be ruled at the Popes becke, but that this authoritie is due, and hath been of old vnto Chriſtian Princes and Magiſtrates, and the Pope in ſo doing doth but vſurpe vpon their right.

Argum. 1. That the Pope hath not abſolute authoritie, to call, remoue, diſſolue, or eſtabliſh Councels, it is proued out of Scripture: for Act. 6. 2. the twelue Apoſtles, and not Peter onely, whoſe ſucceſſor the Pope doth falſely chaleng to be, called the multitude together about the election of Deacons.

Argum. 2. The Councels in times paſt were ſummoned by the Emperors, which our aduerſaries themſelues cannot denie, as the Nicen firſt, by Conſtantine the great: Conſtantinopolitane 1. by Theodoſius the elder. Epheſin. 1. by Theodoſius the younger: Chalcedonenſ. by Martianus. But, ſay our aduerſaries, theſe Councels were not appointed without the conſent of the Biſhops of Rome. I maruell they are not aſhamed ſo to ſay: for when Theodoſius called the Councell of Chalcedon, Leo then Biſhop of Rome, neither liked the time, for hee would haue had it deferred; nor the place, being deſirous to haue it in Italie: yet hee was content to obey the Emperors commaundement, and ſent his Agents to the Councell, there to appeare for him: Epiſt. 31. 34. ad Martianum: This was alleaged by Tunſtal and Stokeſlie two archpapiſts in their epiſtle to Cardinall Poole.

It ſeemeth therefore to be a meere forgerie, that Gelaſius writeth Epiſtol, ad epiſcop. Dardania, Authoritate vt ſynodus Chalſedonenſ. fieret, ſola decreuit apoſtolica ſedes: The Apoſtolike See by it ſole authoritie decreed, that the councell ſhould be holden at Chalcedon: for firſt Leo miſliked the time; Epiſcopali ſynodo Imperator nimium breue & anguſtum tempus indixit, Epiſtol. 13. The Emperour hath ſet too ſhort a time for the Councell. Secondly, he would haue had the Councell remooued into Italie: Omnes ſacerdotes cum lachrimis manſuetudini veſtræ ſupplicant, vt generalem ſynodum iubeatis intra Italiam celebrari, Epiſtol. ad imperator. 23. All the Cleargie with teares doth beſeech your clemencie, that you would commaund a generall Synode to be kept in Italie: To the ſame effect he writeth to Theodoſius, epiſtol. 31. and to Pulcheria Auguſta, epiſtol. 34. For all this ſute, the Emperour would not condeſcend to haue the Councell in Italie: but whereas he had ſummoned it to be kept at Nice, he from thence remoueth it to Chalcedon, whither alſo he ſendeth for Leo himſelfe to come, who excuſeth himſelfe for not comming, by reaſon of other great lets, yet ſendeth his Legats in his place, epiſtol. Leon. 13. It appeareth then, that Leo at this time wanted of his will, and was ouerruled by the Emperor, as it was good reaſon, to whom the ſoueraigne right of ſummoning Councels did onely appertaine.

Bellarmine graunteth, that theſe auncient Councels were congregate by the Emperors, yet the right was in the Pope ſtill: hee rendreth two reaſons why the Emperors authoritie was then requiſite: firſt becauſe, although it belongeth to the Pope to call Councels, yet hee cannot gather the aſſemblies in any Citie or conuenient place, without the leaue and conſent of the Lord of the ſoile: as if now a Councell ſhould be appointed by the Pope, and ſome place aſſigned for it, in Germanie, France, or Spaine, the conſent of the Lord of the citie muſt firſt be required.

Anſwere. Firſt, the matter is then come to this iſſue: the Pope cannot call a Councell, without the leaue of the ciuill Magiſtrate, but may be by him letted from his purpoſe: but the Prince may call his ſubiects together, and aske the Pope no leaue; neither is the Pope able to reſiſt his proceedings: I pray you which of theſe hath the beſt right, and the moſt Soueraigne power to congregate theſe great aſſemblies?

Secondly, if the Pope hath receiued authoritie from Chriſt, as you ſay, to proclaime and ſummon generall Councels: what reaſon is there that Chriſt ſhould waite vpon earthly gouernours, and aske their leaue, to haue his ordinance take place? Nay if Chriſt had entitled the Pope with any ſuch matter, he would both haue giuen him power ſufficient, and all helpes and meanes requiſite, to effect and accompliſh his holy, ſoueraigne, and puiſſant commiſſion.

Bellarmines ſecond reaſon, why the Emperors authoritie is not now ſo needfull, as it was then: becauſe in thoſe daies they were Lords of the world, and the Pope did ſubiect himſelfe to the Emperor, peror, in temporall matters: But now the Pope is a temporall Prince in his owne ſeignorie, as any of the reſt are.

Anſwere. 1. Yea, but vnleſſe the Pope were a temporall Prince ouer all the Chriſtian world, as the Emperors were, the Ieſuite hath anſwered nothing: If he be a Prince in his owne Territorie, let him meddle with his owne ſubiects, to call them together at his pleaſure; but what is this to generall Councels? Secondly, doe ye then confeſſe, that the Pope was then a ſubiect to the Emperor, but ſo he is not now: that then he was no temporall Prince, as now he is? Why maſters, what iugling is this? If it be S. Peters patrimonie which now the Pope hath, why hath he not alwaies had right vnto it? And why ſhould the Popes now challenge more then their predeceſſors, ſeeing they would beare vs in hand, that by perpetuall ſucceſſion, euen from S. Peter, they can fetch the Iuriſdiction of Popes both ſpirituall and temporall?

Argum. 3. It is a good reaſon which was alleaged in the Councell of Baſile, that if Popes onely ſhould call Councels, there ſhould be no meanes left to withſtand a wicked and vicious Pope. Who would thinke (ſay they) that the Biſhop of Rome would congregate a Councell, for his owne correction, or depoſition?

Argum. 4. The Pope hath no more authoritie, nor, by their leaue, nothing like as Peter had: but he challenged not this dignitie amongſt the Apoſtles, to ſummon Councels. We reade of foure onely Councels of the Apoſtles, ſay the Fathers of Baſile (for this alſo is their argument) the firſt was for the chooſing of Matthias, Act. 1. congregate at the commandement of Chriſt, who inioyned them not to depart from Ieruſalem. The ſecond, Act. 6. congregate by the twelue, not Peter onely, for the election of Deacons. The third, which was holden as touching the taking away of Circumciſion, and other ceremonies of the law, was gathered together by a generall inſpiration, Act. 15.6. The fourth, wherein certaine things contained in the law are permitted, ſeemeth to be gathered by Iames, Act. 21.18. Vpon theſe reaſons the Councell thus concludeth: That if the Pope would reſiſt, and haue no Councell congregate; yet if the greater part of the Church doe iudge it neceſſarie to haue a Councell, the Councell may be congregate, whether the Pope will or not. Ex Ænea Syluio, Fox pag. 676. col. 2.

5 Auguſtine ſaith: Catholicos Epiſcopos & partis Donati iuſſu imperatoris diſputando inter ſe contuliſſe. Breuicul. collation. lib. 1. cap. 1. That the Catholike Biſhops and the Donatiſts, did meet together to diſpute at the commaundement of the Emperour: There were in that Councell, which was at Carthage, of the Catholike Biſhops 286. and of the Donatiſts 279.

Laſtly, we haue the determination of two Popiſh Councels againſt them, Concil. Conſt. ſeſſ. 1. it was decreed, that the going away of the Pope ſhould be no let or ſtay, but the Councell might proceed. So Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell of Baſile, but the Councell cited him to appeare by himſelfe or his Legates, vnder a great penalty.

By this it appeareth, that the Pope hath no right to call, continue, or diſſolue generall Councels.

We haue alſo their owne decrees againſt them, decr. part. 1. diſt. 15. cap. 1. The Nicene Councell was peracted vnder Conſtantinus, the ſecond generall at Conſtantinople was aſſembled vnder Theodoſius the elder, &c. That is by their authoritie: & diſt. 16. cap. 6. The ſixt Synode Conſtantinus the Emperour congregated.

THE THIRD QVESTION, OF WHAT PERSONS the Councell ought to conſiſt.

The Papiſts.

31. Error. Whereas there are foure ſorts of men vſually preſent at Councels, the princes and Magiſtrates, Biſhops and inferiour Miniſters and Prieſts, and other lay people: of all theſe, Biſhops (they ſay) onely muſt haue a deciding or determining voice: Prieſts and other learned may diſpute and haue a conſultatiue voyce: Princes are there to defend the Councell, and ſee order kept; other of the Laitie may be there as officers and Miniſters, as Scribes and Notaries: but the ſuffrages and voices muſt onely be giuen by Biſhops, Eckius loc. de concil. Bellarm. de concil. lib. 1. cap. 15. Let vs ſee ſome of their reaſons.

Firſt, to teach and to feed is proper for the Paſtors onely, and to eſtabliſh and decree in Councell, is nothing elſe but to feed and teach: Ergo, Paſtors onely muſt rule in Councell: which none are but Biſhops: Soli Epiſcopi paſtores ſunt (ſaith the Ieſuite) neque laici neque Eccleſiaſtici quicunque: Onely Biſhops are paſtors, and none other of the Clergie beſides: And to them only, he ſaith, that is to be applied, Act. 20. Take heede to your ſelues, and the flocke, ouer the which God hath made you ouerſeers.

I anſwere. Firſt, what an abſurd ſaying is this and void of ſenſe, that the Biſhop is the onely paſtor of his Dioceſſe, and that euery Miniſter is not paſtor in his owne pariſh? Nay, if the Ieſuite would ſpeake truth, he ſhall finde that popiſh Biſhops are neither paſtors nor Doctors,for the moſt of them neither feede nor teach; and they bee not aſhamed to profeſſe it. Anno 1540.or thereabout, Thomas Forret Martyr,being found fault withall by the Biſhop of Dunkelden in Scotland,becauſe he preached ſo oft,exhorted the Biſhop againe,and wiſhed that he did preach. The Biſhop anſwered: Nay,nay,let that be, wee are not ordained to preach. And in further talke the blind blockiſh Biſhop bewraied his owne ignorance, I thanke God (ſaith he) that I neuer knew what the old and new Teſtament was. Thereupon roſe a common prouerbe in Scotland, you are like the Biſhop of Dunkelden,that knew neither the old nor new law. *Fox Martyrol.pag.*1266.

With this blind ſaying of the popiſh Biſhop,our countriemen of Rhemes alſo doe agree,which doubt not to ſay, that many which haue no gift to preach, yet for their wiſedome and gouernment,are not vnmeete to be paſtors and Biſhops, Annot.in 1.*Tim.*5.*ſect.*13.

2 I anſwere, the Ieſuit bewraieth his ignorance, in making no difference betweene communis, and propria politia eccleſia, the common and ſpeciall policie and office of the Church: for there are proper offices and duties,ſome of paſtors,ſome of gouernours, ſome of other miniſters: but this office to bee performed in generall Councels, is not proper to paſtors,but common to the whole Church: whereupon we denie,that it is Proprium paſtorum munus, ſuffragia ferre in Concilijs: It is not the proper dutie of paſtors,to giue voyces and make decrees in Councels.

3 By the Ieſuites argument, the fathers of Baſil do conclude cleane contrary out of that place, Epheſ.4.That becauſe Chriſt inſtituted not onely Apoſtles and Prophets, but paſtors and teachers for the worke of the Miniſterie, who doubteth (ſay they) but that the gouernance alſo of the Church is committed vnto others together with the Apoſtles? And hence they inferre, becauſe the worke of the Miniſterie is laid vpon the reſt of the Clergie, that therefore they ought not to be excluded from Councels.

4 That place,Act.20.vrged by the Ieſuite,is otherwiſe expounded by S.Hierome: Ad vnius eccleſia ſacerdotes ita Paulus loquitur,&c.Paul thus ſpeaketh to the Miniſters of one Church,calling them all Biſhops: whom before, verſ.17.he calleth Presbyters or Prieſts: And from this place he concludeth, that in the Apoſtles time there was no difference betweene a Biſhop and a Prieſt: Hieron.Euagrio.

*Argum.*2. Secondly, Panormitane in the Councell of Baſil thus reaſoneth for Biſhops: That they were the pillars and keyes of heauen, and therefore had onely deciding voyces. Vnto him anſwered at that time the wiſe and couragious Cardinall Arelatenſis, ſhewing Auguſtines iudgement vpon thoſe words(I will giue thee the keyes of heauen) that the iudiciall power was giuen not only to Peter,but alſo to the other Apoſtles,and to the whole Church,the Biſhops,the prieſts. Whereupon he inferreth, that if the prieſts haue a iudiciall power in the Church, they alſo ought to haue a determining voyce in Councels.

Thirdly,Lodouicus the Prothonotarie in the ſame Councell thus argued: Albeit(ſaith he)Chriſt choſe twelue Apoſtles and 70.Diſciples, notwithſtanding in the ſetting forth of the Creede,only the Apoſtles were preſent; thereby giuing example, that matters of faith did pertaine onely to the Apoſtles, and ſo conſequently to Biſhops. To him Arelatenſis made this anſwere: Firſt, it followed not,becauſe the Apoſtles onely are named,that they therefore onely were preſent at the ſetting forth of the Creede: for wee ſee that Princes beare the name and commendation of many actions,which are done notwithſtanding by their helpers. Secondly, Lodouicus cannot be ignorant(ſaith he)that there bee ſome articles in the Creede, which were not put to by the Apoſtles, but afterward by generall Councels: as that part, wherein mention is made of the holy Ghoſt, which the Councell of Lyons did adde.Thus much out of the Councell of Baſil.

The Proteſtants confeſſion.

OVr opinion grounded vpon truth and Scripture is this: that,not onely Biſhops, but all other paſtors admitted to the Councell,and the learned and diſcreet amongſt the lay men, ought to haue concluding voyces in Councell: and that rather the diſcuſſing and conſulting of matters pertaineth to the learned Diuines,the deciding to all,then contrariwiſe.

Firſt,that inferiour paſtors are to be ioyned with Biſhops and Prelates, it was amply prooued in the Councell of Baſil, of the which I haue ſo often made mention, as noble Arelatenſis reaſoneth thus: The dignitie of the fathers is not to be reſpected but the truth: neither will I preferre a lye of any Biſhop,be he neuer ſo rich,before a veritie or a truth of a poore prieſt. This is his firſt reaſon,that the truth ought to be receiued at any mans mouth be he neuer ſo ſimple: and therefore Prieſts as well as Biſhops are to be admitted to the Councell.

*Argum.*2. He declareth the ancient practiſe of the Church: In the Councell of Nice, where there were aſſembled 322.Biſhops, Athanaſius being then onely a Prieſt, withſtood the Arrians, and infringed their arguments. In the Synode of Chalcedon, there were preſent ſixe hundred prieſts,which name is common both to Biſhops and prieſts. When Paul Biſhop of Antioch preached ched that Chriſt was a man of common nature: the Councell aſſembled againſt him at Antioch, where the ſaid Paul was condemned: neither was there any man, which did more confound the ſaid Paul, then one Malchion prieſt of Antioch, which taught Rhetorike there.

Concerning the ſecond part, that lay men alſo with prieſts ought to be admitted: firſt we haue teſtimonie out of the word of God for it. Tit. 3. 13. For this cauſe Zenas the lawyer is ioyned as fellow in commiſſion with Apollos. But we haue a more euident place, Act. 15. 22. It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders with the whole Church. Here we ſee that not onely the Elders but the whole multitude, were admitted into conſultation with the Apoſtles. To this place our aduerſaries doe thus anſwere: Lodouicus the Prothonotary, firſt thus raſhly and fondly gaue his verdict in the Councell of Baſil, that there was no argument to bee gathered of the Acts of the Apoſtles, whoſe examples were more to be marueiled at, then to be followed. But to this Arelatenſis replied, that he would ſtay himſelfe moſt vpon the Apoſtles doings: for what (ſaith he) is more comely for vs to follow, then the doctrine and cuſtomes of the Primitiue Church? And Æneas Siluius reporteth (who writeth of the acts of that Councell) that all men impugned this ſaying of Lodouicus, that the Apoſtles were not to be followed, as a baſphemie.

Wherefore the Ieſuite hath found out another anſwere; he ſaith that none but the Apoſtles gaue ſentence, the reſt onely gaue conſent, and inward liking and approbation. This cauill Arelatenſis met withall long before the Ieſuite was borne, in the forenamed Councell. Neither this word, ſaith he, It ſeemed good, ſignifieth in this place conſultation, but deciſion, and determination. And ſo it doth indeed, for ſeeing there is one word applied to them all ἔδοξε, placuit, it ſeemed good to the Apoſtles, Elders, and the whole multitude, why ſhould it not be taken in the one and ſelfeſame ſenſe, and after the ſame manner vnderſtood of them all?

Argum. 2. Seeing the Councell doth repreſent the whole Church, there ought to bee preſent and to giue ſentence of all ſorts and callings of men: and the rather, becauſe the matter of faith and religion is a common cauſe, and as well appertaineth to lay men as to Biſhops, it behooueth them alſo to bee preſent. And further, it were more reaſonable that Princes and temporall Magiſtrates ſhould binde their ſubiects to their lawes, without their conſent, then that eccleſiaſticall perſons ſhould lay yokes vpon Chriſtians againſt their wils, for ciuill matters are more indifferent and left to our choice, then ſpirituall are: Yet wee ſee there are no lawes enacted in our Realme but by the high court of Parliament, where alwaies ſome are appointed for the commons, euen the whole neather houſe, without whoſe conſent no act can paſſe. So it were very reaſonable, that no law ſhould be laid vpon the Church, without the generall conſent thereof.

Thirdly, Auguſtines iudgement wee heard before alleaged by Arelatenſis, that ſeeing the iudiciall power of the keyes is committed to the whole Church, to Biſhops, to Prieſts, they all ought to be entertained in generall Councels.

Laſtly, that not onely Biſhops, but other alſo of the Clergie haue determining voyces in Councell, we haue the conſent of antiquitie. In the Councell of Antioch aſſembled againſt Samoſatenus, the whole Synod writeth thus: Epiſcopi, preſbyteri, & diaconi dilectiſſimis fratribus in domino ſalutem: The Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, to our beloued brethren in the Lord, greeting. And in their epiſtle they write thus: Neceſſarium eſt viſum, hunc reſiſtentem Deo, neque acquieſcentem veræ fidei abijci, &c. It ſeemed neceſſarie to vs, that this fellow, enemie to God, and not obedient to the truth, to be cut off: They all both Elders and Deacons gaue conſent to his condemnation.

Aquiſgranenſ. ſub Lodouico: Cœtus venerabilium præſulum, & ſequētis ordinis religioſorum ſacerdotum ſynodaliter congregatus: The aſſemblie of the reuerend Prelates, and of the next order, of the deuout prieſts, being councellike aſſembled together, &c.

Chalcedonenſ. action. 1. Orientales Clerici vnà cum Epiſcopis clamarunt, Flauianus in proprio loco quare non ſedet? The Clergie of the Eaſt parts together with the Biſhops cried out, why doth not Flauianus ſit in his proper place? This Flauianus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was diſgraced in the hereticall Councell, Epheſin. 2. and thruſt downe to the fift place: And therefore in this Catholike Councell, the Clergie thus cried out: then the Egyptians together with Dioſcorus the Eutychian heretike, cried againe, Imperator Epiſcopos vocauit, ſynodus Epiſcoporum eſt, ſuperflui quare clamant: The Emperour hath called the Biſhops together, the Synode conſiſteth of Biſhops, theſe fellowes are ſuperfluous. Thoſe heretikes were the firſt that tooke exception againſt the voyce of ſimple prieſts in Councell, calling them ſuperfluous.

So likewiſe in the Romane Councell vnder Pope Hilarie, in the laſt canon, where it was propounded, that no Biſhop ſhould appoint his ſucceſſor, but that he ſhould be elected, Ab vniuerſis Epiſcopis & preſbyteris acclamatum eſt: An acclamation was made by all the Biſhops and prieſts: excitation. Eſpenſ. in 1. Timoth. p. 371. c.

And leaſt it ſhould be ſaid, that the prieſts did not ſit as Iudges, but onely to aduiſe and diſcuſſe matters, I will anſwere them out of their owne Decrees; Decret. p. 1. diſt. 23. c. 1. In the Laterane Councell vnder Nicholaus 2. this report is made, Conſidentibus reuerendiſſ. Epiſcopis, Abbatibus, preſbyteris, byteris,&c. While the reuerend Biſhops, Abbots, and Prieſts did ſit, &c. Nicholaus began thus, &c. they all therefore did ſit as Iudges. And yet more euidently, diſt. 95. c. 6. Preſbyteri ab initio negotiorum iudices eſſe mandati ſunt, & intereſſe ſacerdotum concilio: Prieſts in the beginning were appointed to bee the iudges of the affaires of the Church, and to be preſent in Councels, &c. Marke this, they muſt be preſent as iudges.

As touching alſo the preſence of graue and wiſe men of the Laitie in Councels, wee haue the practiſe and examples of former times: In the Chalcedon Councell, there were preſent 7. noble Earles, appointed as Iudges, Anatolius, Palladius, Tacianus, Vincomalus, with the reſt, and 10. noble Senators, Florentius, Naurius, Protogenes, with others.

Toletan. 6. cap. 3. Conſonam cum rege, corde & ore promulgamus ſententiam, ſimul etiam cum ſuorum optimatum, & illuſtrium virorum conſenſu ſancimus, &c. We decree our ſentence, in heart and voyce according with our Prince, and together with the conſent of his Nobles, we doe enact, &c. Here the Eccleſiaſticall and Ciuill ſtate decree in Councell together.

We haue alſo a moſt cleere teſtimonie euen of a Pope himſelfe: Nichol. 1. epiſtol. ad Michaëlem imperatorem. Vbinam legis imperatores anteceſſores veſtros in ſynodalibus conuentibus interfuiſſe, niſi forſitan, in quibus de fide tractatum eſt, qua vniuerſalis eſt, qua omnium communis eſt, qua non ſolum ad Clericos, verùm ad laicos, & ad omnes omnino pertinet Chriſtianos? Where, I pray you, doe you reade, that the Emperours your predeceſſors were preſent in Synodes, but where they entreated of faith, which is common to all, and doth not only concerne the Clergie, but lay-men alſo, and generally all Chriſtians? Ergo, of matters of faith lay men may together with ſpirituall perſons conſult in Councels.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Pope Nicholas is ſo to bee vnderſtood, that the Emperour may bee preſent not as a Iudge, but only as one to defend the faith by good lawes, and where need is with the ſword.

Contra. But the Emperour Martian ſaith otherwiſe in his oration in the Chalcedon Councell: Nos ad confirmandam fidem, non ad oſtendendam virtutem, &c. We by the example of Conſtantine thinke good to be preſent in the Synod, to confirme the faith, not to ſhew our power. But the Ieſuite ſaith, to ſhew his power, and vſe his ſword.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, WHO OVGHT TO be the Preſident and chiefe moderator in Councels.

The Papiſts.

32. Error.

WIth one whole conſent they all agree and hold, that the Pope onely ought to haue the chiefe place in Councels, either himſelfe in his owne perſon, or elſe his Legates and deputies for him, they reaſon thus:

1 The Pope is the chiefe paſtor of the vniuerſall Church: for vnto Peter only it was ſaid, Paſce oues meas, Feede my ſheepe, and he is called and ſaluted in Councels by the name of father: and all other both Princes and Biſhops are ſheepe in reſpect of him. Bellar. cap. 19.

We anſwere: firſt, in the Ieſuites argument, there is petitio principij, a foule fault in a good Logician, though it bee none in a Sophiſter, ſtill to begge that which is in queſtion: for yet he hath not prooued that the Pope is the vniuerſall paſtor. Secondly, that place, Feede my ſheepe prooueth it not: Auguſtine ſaith, Redditur negationi trina trina confeſſio, ne minus amori lingua ſeruiat, quàm timori: In Iohan. tract. 123. He recompenceth a threefold deniall, with a threefold confeſſion, leaſt that his tongue ſhould bee leſſe ſeruiceable to loue, then it was to feare. So then, by this fathers iudgement, it was no priuiledge to Peter to be thrice admoniſhed, but he is thereby put in minde of his thrice deniall of Chriſt. Againe, I marueile the Ieſuite can ſo ſoone forget himſelfe: for in the 15. chapter afore, he prooued by theſe words (Feede my ſheepe) that Biſhops onely were paſtors; and he can now turne the words to ſerue onely for the Pope. Thirdly, what great matter is it for the Pope to be called father, ſeeing he is not ignorant that all Biſhops aſſembled in Councell and other learned, are called by that name? Nay, it is no rare matter for other Biſhops to bee ſaluted by the name of Pope: as Proſper writing to Auguſtine, twice in one epiſtle calleth him, beatiſſimum Papam, moſt bleſſed Pope, Tom. 7. 4. Princes and Biſhops to the Pope are ſheepe, ſaith the Ieſuite. Firſt, for Biſhops, though he had a iuriſdiction ouer all, which will ſticke in his teeth to prooue, yet ſhall they be no more his ſheepe, then prieſts are to Biſhops, and Biſhops to their Metropolitanes, who cannot be ſaid to be their ſheepe, though they haue ſome preeminence ouer them: for Auguſtines rule muſt ſtand; Nemo ſe noſtrum Epiſcopum Epiſcoporum conſtituit. de Baptiſ. 2. 2. No man is a Biſhop of Biſhops, nor ſhepheard of ſhepheards. Secondly, for Princes he hath nothing to doe with any but thoſe in his owne Biſhopricke: and as they are his ſheepe one way, as they are taught of him; ſo he and his Cardinals are the Magiſtrates ſheepe another way, and in reſpect of the ciuill gouernment he is their ſhepheard: And both he and they, Prince and Prieſt are ſheep-fellowes, vnder Ieſus Chriſt the chiefe ſhepheard: as Auguſtine ſaith, Tanquam vobis paſtores ſumus, ſed ſub illo paſtore vobiſcum oues ſumus. in Pſal. 126. We are ſhepheards to you, but both you and I are ſheepe vnder that great ſhepheard.

Argum. 2. Peter was Preſident in the Councell of the Apoſtles, Act. 15. Ergo, the Pope ought to be now, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Iames ſeemeth rather to haue been Preſident there, then S. Peter, and to haue determined the matter in queſtion: firſt, becauſe S. Iames ſpeaketh laſt, S. Peter firſt: and the laſt place is commonly giuen to the moderator or determiner. Secondly, S. Iames, when he had ſpoken, concludeth thus: verſ. 19. wherefore my ſentence is, &c. he determineth and giueth ſentence: whereas Saint Peter ſaith not ſo, my ſentence is, as a moderator, but rather as a perſwader and counſellor: Now therefore, why tempt ye God? &c. verſ. 10. Thirdly, it is confeſſed by our aduerſaries, that S. Iames was Biſhop at Ieruſalem, and therefore was moſt like to bee the chiefe, if any were, in his owne iuriſdiction.

But we affirme neither of theſe, to haue had any ſuch preeminence aboue the other, to bee the Preſident and chiefe Iudge, or to haue an ouerruling voyce: but that the matter was decided by an vniforme conſent of them all, being directed by the holy Ghoſt: It ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt and vs, verſ. 28.

Secondly, though Peter had been Preſident then, it followeth not that the Pope ſhould be now: for we denie the Pope to bee Peters ſucceſſor, either in his Apoſtolike doctrine, or Apoſtolike office: as ſhall appeare when we come to that place.

Argum. 3. Bellarmine taketh vpon him to prooue, that the Pope was Preſident by his Legates in the eight generall Councels, and maketh a particular induction of them all.

Anſw. But this argument rather maketh for vs, as it followeth argum. 3. that becauſe the Pope was not Preſident in any of the eight generall Councels, therefore the Preſidentſhip belongeth not vnto him: for in ſome of them, the Pope was not preſent neither perſonally, nor by his Legates, as in the firſt of Conſtantinople, where Nectarius was Preſident: in ſome the Pope was reſiant in the citie, but not preſent in the Councel, as Vigilius was in Conſtantinople, what time the fift generall Councell was there held: in ſome of them the Popes Legates were preſent, but they had not the chiefe or Preſidents place, as in the fourth generall Councell. But ſee more hereof afterward, argum. 3.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truly affirme, that the ſoueraigne Maieſtie of the Emperour and chiefe Magiſtrate, or his Legate, if he either be preſent himſelfe, or ſend, ought to be Preſident of the Councell: or elſe in their abſence, one to bee choſen and elected by the Councell for that function, as Cardinall Arelatenſis was choſen in the Councell of Baſil by the fathers to be moderator.

Argum. 1. Firſt, that it belongeth to the Prince, to haue this prerogatiue, it is hence prooued, becauſe he is the chiefe iudge in all matters and cauſes, both Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall: And it appeareth by the ancient practiſe of the godly Kings in Iſrael and Iuda; Dauid gathered a Councell together, when he brought the Arke to Ieruſalem, 1. Chron. 15. 3. where he was the chiefe doer, and director; for he appointed the Leuites their courſes, and ſet foorth a certaine fourme of thankſgiuing to be vſed, 1. Chron. 16. 4, 7. Hezekiah aſſembled a Councell, 2. Chron. 30. 2. where it was decreed, that the Paſſeouer ſhould be ſolemnely kept: & the poſts were ſent forth with the Kings writ or commiſſion. In Ioſiah his raigne there was a great aſſembly at Ieruſalem, of the Princes, the people, prieſts, and Leuites, and all from the greateſt to the ſmalleſt: where the King himſelfe was preſident and chiefe agent, reading the law before the people, 2. Chron. 34. 30, 31.

Bellarmine anſwereth. 1. Theſe are extraordinarie examples: Dauid and Salomon did deale in Eccleſiaſticall matters, not as Kings, but as Prophets.

Anſ. That Dauid and Salomon were Prophets we graunt, as by their Propheticall writings may appeare: But for the reſt of the godly Kings of Iuda, how is it likely that they were Prophets, ſeeing neither by word or writing they deliuered any prophecies? Againe, the care of religion was neither in Dauid, or the reſt extraordinarie or propheticall: for how can that bee extraordinarie, which was vſuall and commonly practiſed of all the religious Kings? And further, it was not the Prophets, but the Kings office to commaund their ſubiects to aſſemble together, as Hezekiah and Ioſiah did: for if it belonged to the Prophets, not to the Kings to aſſemble Councels, then Nathan, not Dauid; Iſaia, not Hezekiah; Ieremias the Prophet, not Ioſias ſhould haue called thoſe holy aſſemblies, which were ſummoned by theſe Kings. Laſtly, not onely theſe godly Kings of Iudah tooke this vpon them, but euen the King of Niniue with the conſent of his Nobles did call a faſt, Ionas 3. 7. So properly is it incident to the Emperiall Crowne to take care of religion.

Bellarmine. 2. We ſee that ſome of the Kings were puniſhed, for medling with the prieſtly affaires: for this cauſe Vzziah was ſtriken with leproſie, 2. Chron. 26. by this it appeareth, that it was extraordinarie in Kings to handle matters eccleſiaſticall, Bellar. ibid. cap. 20.

Anſ.Vzziah would haue offered incenſe vpon the Altar, which was only lawfull for the prieſt, and therefore was worthily puniſhed. Neither doe wee ſay that the Prince ought to deale with preaching of the word, adminiſtring of the Sacraments, giuing of orders, or ſuch like duties, which are properly incident to the paſtors office: But concerning theſe duties, of ſummoning Councels, and enacting eccleſiaſticall lawes, and the commaunding of all Eſtates and perſons euen in religious matters, wee affirme that thé right and power hereof, is meerely ciuill, and belongeth properly to the ciuill gouernour.

Argum.2. Secondly, we finde that the Emperours themſelues haue been preſent at Councels: as in the Nicene, Conſtantine the great was preſent: in the Councell of Chalcedon, Martianus: in the Conſtantinopolitane 3. Conſtantinus the Emperour: in the Conſtantinopolitane 4. Baſilius the Emperour was preſent. Is it to be thought that theſe noble Emperours, were at the Councels as inferiours or vnderlings? or had they not the chiefe places? then ſure they were Preſidents: for in the Councell the chiefe place belongeth to the Preſident. They might appoint a ſpeaker or prolocutor for them, as in the Parliament houſe, though the Prince bee preſent, yet the Lord Chauncellor ſpeaketh: but the chiefe power and Soueraigntie in the Councell, was in the Emperours.

Bellarmine here anſwereth by a diſtinction: Imperator non præſidebat concilio propriè vt iudex, præſidebat ſaltem quo ad locum materialem: The Emperour was not preſident in Councels properly as Iudge, but onely as chiefe in the place. And a little after he ſaith: Non tam ex loco, quàm ſubſcriptione colligenda eſt præſidentia: The Preſidentſhip is not ſo much by the place to be knowne, as by the ſubſcription: de Concil.lib.1.cap.19.

Anſw. Firſt, the Ieſuites diſtinction is nothing worth: for hath not alwaies the Iudge in place of iudgement the chiefeſt roome? for ſeeing the preſident or Iudge in Councels, hath the ſupreame and chiefe authoritie, and to the higheſt perſon of right belongeth the higheſt place; how can it otherwiſe be, but that to whom the chiefeſt place in Synods was aſſigned, the preſidentſhip alſo of right appertained.

Secondly, that the Emperors and in their abſence their Legates, were preſidents in Councels, not onely in reſpect of the higheſt place, but as Iudges properly: we are able to iuſtifie it by the auncient actes and monumentes of antiquitie. Concil.Epheſin.epiſtol.ad Theodoſium, rogamus clementiam tuam, vt per literas tuas pietatis ratum eſſe iubeas, confirmeſque concilij decretum: The Councell writeth thus to the Emperour: We beſeech your clemencie that by your godly letters you would ratifie and confirme the Decree of the Councell.

Martianus the Emperour in his oration to the fourth generall Councel of Chalcedon ſpeaketh thus: Nos ad confirmandam fidem, non ad oſtendendam virtutem exemplo Conſtantini adeſſe ſynodo cogitauimus: we not to ſhew our power, but to confirme the faith, haue thought good, by Conſtantines example, to be preſent in the Synode. To whom now (I pray you) did it belong to confirme and ratifie the actes of Councels, but to the Iudge and preſident? but this did the Emperours. Ergo.

In the Chalcedon Councell, *action.*1. thus we finde Reſidentibus magnificis, & glorioſiſſimis iudicibus in medio, &c. The moſt glorious and magnificent Iudges ſitting in the midſt, and on the left hand the reuerend Biſhops, Paſchaſinus and Lucentius, Leo the Biſhop of Romes deputies, and Anatolius Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople: and on the right hand, Dioſcorus Patriarch of Alexandria, &c. We ſee then, that the Noble men, ſupplying the Emperours place, were Iudges and preſidents in this Councell, not ſo much becauſe of their ſeate, as for their authoritie: for whereas Paſchaſinus and Lucentius tooke exception againſt Dioſcorus, ſaying, Non ſedeat in Concilio, ſed audiendus intromittatur: Let him not ſit in the Councell as iudge, but come in to be heard and iudged, yet the noble Iudges permitted it not.

3 That the Emperours were preſidents, they or their deputies in their name: we proue it not onely by their place in Councels, but by their ſubſcription. Alſo *Concil.ſub Sylueſtr.cap.*20. Conſtantinus, with his mother Helena ſubſcribed. *Toletan.*3. Reccaredus the King, togither with Badda the Queene ſubſcribed to the decrees of the Councell. *Concil.6.general. Conſtantinop. action.*18. Conſtantinus the Emperour ſubſcribed thus; Subſcriptio piiſſimi & Chriſto dilecti Conſtantini imperatoris: the ſubſcription of the moſt deuout and beloued of Chriſt Conſtantinus the Emperour.

Iuſtinianus the ſecond ſubſcribed to the decrees of the ſixt general Synode aſſembled in Trullo. Wherefore if the Emperours had the chiefe place in generall Councels, and the greateſt authoritie, and by their royall conſent, and ſubſcription confirmed the actes and decrees of Councels, why ſhould it be doubted that they were chiefe preſidents in Councels, and ought of right ſo to be.

Argum.3. As we haue ſhewed that Emperours or their deputies were preſidents in generall Councels; ſo with as eaſie labour can we make it plaine, that the Popes and Biſhops of Rome, were not in their owne perſons, or by their Legates, preſidents in any of the eight generall Councels.

In the firſt generall Councel Nicene, Euſtathius of Antioch was preſident: ſo witneſſeth Felix Biſhop of Rome, epiſtol. ad Zenonem imperatorem.

Wherefore Bellarmine in ſaying, that Vitus and Vincentius the Biſhop of Romes Legates, were the preſidents, doth oppoſe himſelfe againſt the teſtimonie of the Biſhop of Rome himſelfe, and giueth him the lie. Their owne decrees alſo thus teſtifie, decr.part.1.diſt.15.c.3. Gelaſius, That the Nicene Synode was celebrate, Mediante Conſtantino: Conſtantinus the Emperor being the mediator, or moderator: and Euſtathius was his ſpeaker or prolocutor.

*Conſtantinopol.*1. The ſecond generall Councell was celebrated vnder Nectarius, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, ſic patres Chalcedon. ſynod. action. 16.

Here Bellarmine confeſſeth that neither the Pope, nor his Legates were preſent, but that Nectarius was preſident: Ergo, by his owne confeſſion the Pope was not Preſident in this Councell: And whereas he ſaith the Emperor was not Preſident, it is contrarie to their owne decrees, decr.part.1.diſt.15.c.3. Gelaſius, who affirmeth that the ſecond generall Synode was held at Conſtantinople: Mediante Theodoſio ſeniore: Theodoſius the elder being mediator.

Epheſinæ ſynodo ſanctæ memoriæ Cyrillus præſedit: Cyrillus of bleſſed memorie was Preſident in the Epheſine, the third generall Councell, *ſic Leo epiſtol.*45.

Bellarmine ſaith that Cyrillus was the Popes Legate in this Councell. *Anſwere.*1. Leo before cited maketh mention of no ſuch thing. 2. The Pope did vſe to ſend Legates of his owne, and not to nominate Biſhops of the Greeke Church. 3. *Cod. lib.*1.*tit.*8.*l.*8. Valentinian, Martian thus teſtifie of this Synode, Cui beatæ memoriæ Cyrillus præfuit: Where Cyrillus of happie memorie was Preſident. The ſame witneſſeth *Gelaſius, decr.part.*1.*diſt.*15.*c.*3. In the Epheſine Synode, Neſtorius with the conſent of Celeſtinus was condemned, Mediante Cyrillo, &c. Cyrillus being the mediator or Preſident. And againe, *diſt.*16.*c.*10. The Fathers in this Councell did conclude twelue articles againſt ſo many hereſies of Neſtorius, authore Cyrillo, Cyrill being the author.

Gelaſius, decret. de Apocryphis, affirmeth the Councell of Chalcedon, which was the fourth generall to be celebrated, Mediante Martiano Auguſto, & Anatolio Conſtantinopolitano: By the mediation or Preſidentſhip of Martianus the Emperor, and Anatolius Patriarch of Conſtantinople. Yet notwithſtanding this authoritie of Gelaſius, Bellarmine ſtill auoucheth that the Popes Legates had the Preſidentſhip in this Councell. *Contra.*1. The Synode ſaith, Reſidentibus magnificis iudicibus, &c. The moſt magnificent Iudges ſitting, &c. there were ſeuen noble men by the Emperor appoynted as Iudges: but who elſe is iudge but the Preſident? 2. Theſe ſeuen Iudges ſit in the middeſt by the altar, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople and Alexandria on their right hand; Paſchaſinus and Lucentius, the Biſhop of Romes Legates, on the left hand: wherefore by their place it ſeemeth they were not Preſidents. 3. They would haue Dioſcorus excluded out of the Councell, but the Iudges would not permit it. 4. *Decr.part.*1.*diſt.*16.*c.*10. Anatolius is ſaid to be author of the 27. Canons made againſt Eutyches; wherefore he rather was the Preſident then the other. See alſo to this purpoſe the ſecond Nicene Councell, *action.*1. where Tharaſius Preſident of that Councell ſaith, Anatolius quartæ ſynodi principem fuiſſe: That Anatolius was the Prince or Preſident of the fourth Synode: Ergo the Popes Legates were not.

*Conſtantinopol.*2. The fift generall Councell was kept, Præſidente ſanctiſſimo & beatiſſimo domino noſtro patriarcha Menna: Our moſt holy and bleſſed Lord Mennas Patriarch of Conſtantinople being Preſident: *act.*1.2.3.& 4. Yet Bellarmine is not aſhamed to ſay, that not Mennas, but Eutychius his ſucceſſor was Preſident in the fift generall Councell; whereas in euery action of this Councell, which are but foure in all, there is mention onely made as before, of the Preſidentſhip of Mennas.

But what hath Bellarmine gained, if Eutychius, and not Menna was Preſident? What maketh this for the Popes Preſidentſhip? And if it be ſo, that Vigilius the Biſhop of Rome was at that time preſent at Conſtantinople, as the Ieſuite thinketh, why came he not to the Synode to chalenge his Preſidentſhip, but that he feared to be thruſt downe into the ſecond place, as Illyricus truely coniectureth, and is without cauſe chalenged by the Ieſuite of a lye, ſeeing he himſelfe confeſſeth as much in the beginning of the 19. chapter, alleaging this as a reaſon, why the Popes refuſed perſonally to be preſent, in the Greeke Synodes, becauſe the Emperor or his Legates would ſit in the Preſidents place?

*Conſtantinopol.*3. The ſixt generall Councell, *action.*1. Præſidente pijſſimo imperatore Conſtantino, The moſt deuout Emperor Conſtantinus being Preſident.

Yet notwithſtanding the words of the Councell ſtand thus, Bellarmine ſaith, that the Legates of Agatho the Biſhop of Rome had the Preſidentſhip: whereas beſide the direct teſtimonie of the Councell, as we haue heard, which maketh the Emperor Conſtantinus Preſident, the Legates of the Biſhop of Rome ſate vpon the left hand of the Emperor, and on the right George Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, and Macarius of Antioch, as the chiefer men.

Nicen. 2. The ſeuenth generall Councell, Tharaſius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was Preſident and author of the decrees.

This is notwithſtanding denied by Bellarmine,that Taraſius was Preſident : and yet the words of the Synode are theſe : We thinke it very meete and conuenient, that the moſt holy and high paſtor and rector Preſident of the imperiall Citie of Conſtantinople,new Rome,in the beginning to propound,what matters ſhall be handled,and as it were to open a doore to the reſt: but whoſe office was it elſe, but the Preſidents to propound the queſtions, and to moderate the diſputations ? Though we need not to contend for this Synode,which was moſt erronious,groſſe and idolatrous,and not worthie to be counted amongſt the eight generall Councels, and in deed it is none of them.

Conſtantinopol. 4. The eight generall Councell, Baſilius the Emperor was preſent, and Preſident,for he concludeth the Councell thus,Praſtamus omnibus qui in mente aliquid habet ambiguum, in medium exhibeat : We giue licence to all,that haue any doubt,to bring it forth. He was then the Preſident ; whatſoeuer the Ieſuite can obiect to the contrarie.

In theſe eight generall Councels the Pope of Rome was not himſelfe perſonally preſent : what will you ſay now to a generall Councell, where the Pope was preſent in perſon, and yet not preſident.

In the Councell of Florence, Palæologus Emperour of Conſtantinople, and Ioſephus Patriarch there, alſo Eugenius the fourth Biſhop of Rome were preſonally preſent, with the whole ſtate Eccleſiaſticall both of the Greeke and Latine Church : yet was not Eugenius preſident, as may appeare by theſe arguments.

1 At their firſt meeting there was great contention about their ſeates in the Councel,the Pope would haue placed the Greekes with their Emperour on the left hand, the Latine Clergie on the right, and himſelfe to ſit in the vpper end in the midſt betweene them both : but the Emperour would not ſuffer that,ſaying,that that place was meeter for him then for the Pope: Hereupon the Pope relented, and was contented to ſit on the right ſide ouer againſt the Emperour : but if he had been preſident,that place in the midſt of right had belonged vnto him.

2 The Grecians craued leaue of their Emperour, and Patriarch, when they began to ſpeake, as Beſſarion doth *ſeſſ.*1.and Marcus Biſhop of Epheſus *ſeſſ.*3.and *ſeſſ.*23.Iohanes Monachus ſaith thus to Marcus, Non ego,ſed Imperator, tibi legem imponere poteſt, Not I, but the Emperour is to appoint you the law of diſputing : But this onely belongeth to the preſident and moderator. 3.*Seſſ.*20. Imperator iuſſit vt iterum ſeſſio haberetur, The Emperour commanded another ſeſſion to be kept : Ergo,he was preſident,and not the Pope.

*Argum.*4. Laſtly, not to heape vp many reaſons in ſo plaine a cauſe ; I will alleadge one example moſt manifeſt out of *Auguſtine:*who writeth,that in that great Councel at Carthage where the matter was diſcuſſed betweene the Catholikes and the Donatiſts, there being preſent more then 500. Biſhops of both ſides, Marcellinus was appointed to be moderator of that diſputation: who diuers times putteth in his ſentence in the diſputation, and laſt of all, bidding both parts to goe aſide,he writeth the ſentence definitiue,and concludeth againſt the Donatiſts, approuing the actes of the Catholike Biſhops.hac Aug.breuicul. collation.

THE FIFT QVESTION, WHETHER Councels may erre or not.

The Papiſts.

THey are not all agreed,what to determine of this matter : ſome affirme that Generall Councels can in no wiſe erre, although the conſent of the Pope be wanting : thus the Fathers in Baſile concluded,Who is it,ſay they, that will preferre a ſinfull man before an vndefiled Church ? But Bellarmine more the Popes friend then ſo,holdeth,that euen generall Councels may erre,vnleſſe they follow the inſtructions and directions of the Pope : Yea that it is not ſufficient for the Pope to call a Councell, and ſend his Legate thither, but he muſt write continually for aduertiſement from his maſter before any thing be concluded: and therefore they doubt not to ſay,that the Councell of Baſile erred, though it had the conſent of the Popes Legate in defining, that the Councell is aboue the Pope,becauſe he had no ſuch direction from the Pope, *Bellarmine de concil. lib.*2.*cap.*11. 33.Error.

Nay the Ieſuite goeth further, that particular Councels being approued by the pope cannot erre,*cap.*5. So they holde that the holy fathers of the cruell Inquiſition cannot erre : Yea Panormitane was not aſhamed to ſay openly in the Councell of Baſile, that he would preferre the iudgment of the Cardinals of Rome before all the world. This then is the Ieſuites opinion, that no Councels by the Pope confirmed can erre : and that a particular Councell hauing his allowance, is to be preferred before a generall without. Let vs ſee ſome of their reaſons.

1 They abuſe certaine places of Scripture for their purpoſe : as that Act.15.It ſeemed good to vs,and the holy Ghoſt : I am with you to the end of the world : He that heareth you, heareth me.

*Bellarmine cap.2.Rhemiſt.in Act.*15.8.10. ſo then thus they argue, Councels are neuer without the ſpirit of God: therefore they cannot erre. A ſilly argument, as though the ſpirit of God were at their commaundement, or were tyed to places or perſons: They muſt firſt performe the condition before they can challenge the promiſe: that is, to follow the rule of Gods word, and obediently to ſubmitte themſelues thereunto; then will God vouchſafe to be preſent. The Goſpell ſaith, that whereſoeuer two or three are gathered togither in my name, I will be preſent euen in the midſt of them: Here promiſe is made, not to thouſands or hundreds, but to two or three; and therefore by this place an aſſembly of few perſons may as well be exempted from error, as Councels: But there is a condition, In nomine meo, in my name, and then followeth, in medio illorum, in the midſt of them: if then they are not met in the Lords name, they cannot looke for the preſence of Chriſt. I pray you where was the holy Ghoſt preſent in that Councell at Rome vnder Ioh. 23. when there appeared a great Owle, which ſtared and outfaced the Pope, who bluſhing at the matter, and fuming, roſe vp and departed? At the ſight of which Owle they whiſpered one in anothers eare, that the ſpirit appeared in the likenes of an Owle: and after that in another ſeſſion the ſame Owle appeared, and could not be driuen away, vntill by throwing bats and cudgels at her, ſhe fell downe dead before them, ex Nichol. Clemang. In the beginning of the Councel of Conſtance after the accuſtomed hymne ſung, Veni ſancte ſpiritus, a bill was ſet vp with theſe words, alijs rebus occupati, nunc adeſſe non poſſumus. We are now otherwiſe occupied, we cannot be preſent with you. We ſee now how ſure the Papiſts are of the holy Ghoſt in their popiſh Councels.

*Argum.*2. Act.15.28. It ſeemed good to vs and the holy Ghoſt: As the Apoſtles might ſay, that their decrees were the decrees of the holy Ghoſt: ſo all other Councels are ſure to haue the aſſiſtance of the ſpirit: Ergo, they cannot erre, Bellarm.lib.2.cap.2.

Anſwere. Firſt, if the Councels which are now held in the Church, are as ſure not to erre as the Apoſtolicall Councels, by the ſame reaſon euery particular paſtor of the Church may haue as good a priuiledge, to be exempted from error, as the Apoſtles themſelues had; for their Councels which erred not, conſiſted of particular members likewiſe not erring. But there is not the like reaſon of the Apoſtles, and their Councels then, as there is of ours nowe: for the Apoſtles, whoſe preachings, decrees, and writings, are now, and were then to be rules of our faith, for this cauſe receiued the ſpirit of God, whereby they were aſſured to be led into all truth, Ioh. 16.13. But Councels now are not to ſet rules of our faith, neither are their decrees to be taken for Scripture: therefore there is not the like reaſon of the aſſiſtance of the ſpirite nowe in ſuch meaſure, as they had it.

*Anſw.*2. Yet we graunt that the ſpirit of God is preſent ſtill in Councels aſſembled in Chriſts name, to direct them in all things neceſſarie: ſo that they be content to be ruled by the Scriptures, as we ſee the Apoſtles grounded their decrees vpon Scripture, Act.15.16. For thus the Apoſtles concluded, that ſeeing God foretold by his Prophets, that the Gentiles ſhould be called as well as the Iewes, that they were not therefore to be clogged with Iewiſh ceremonies, ſeeing they were ordayned to be a people holy vnto God, as well as the Iewes: But if the Paſtors of the Church refuſe to heare the voice of God in the Scriptures, they are very like to be deceiued, yea, are ſure to miſſe the line of truth.

*Argum.*3. The Church cannot erre: for the Apoſtle calleth it the pillar of truth, 1. Timoth. 3. but a generall Councell repreſenteth the whole Church: Ergo, it cannot erre. Bellarm.lib.2.de Concil.c.2.

Anſw. Firſt, concerning the aſſumption or ſecond part of this argument, we graunt, that a generall Councell lawfully aſſembled in ſome ſort repreſenteth the vniuerſall Church, but is not the vniuerſall Church: but fewe Councels are ſo generall, at the which ſome of euery nationall Church are preſent, which thing ought to be in an vniuerſall Councell. And againe, a generall Councell may erre, when as notwithſtanding ſome particular members of the Church hold the truth: as in that generall aſſemblie of 400. of Baals prieſts in Achabs time, they all being in error, the Prophet Micaiah only was in the right.

Secondly, concerning the propoſition, firſt wee denie that the Church is abſolutely freed from error, neither doth it follow, it is the pillar, therefore cannot erre; for Peter erred, and yet was a pillar, Galath.2. Secondly, the Church is called a pillar, and ground of truth, not abſolutely or ſubſtantially, as though the truth ſhould be meaſured by the Church, but onely demonſtratiuely, becauſe it profeſſeth the truth, and as a golden candleſticke holdeth out the light in the world, which is not elſewhere to be found but in the Church: and it is the pillar of the truth, as it is the houſe of God, ſuffering it ſelfe to be ruled and guided by the word of God.

The Proteſtants.

WE doubt not to ſay, that Councels haue erred, and may erre, preſuming any thing beſides the warrant of Gods word, and that neither vniuerſall or particular Councels are priuiledged, much leſſe any one man, no nor the Pope, not to erre in matters of faith, otherwiſe, then following the truth of the Scriptures, for in ſo doing, they are ſure not to be deceiued.

*Argum.*1. We haue examples in the Scripture of Councels that erred, as that aſſemblie in Achabs daies of 400. Prophets, who were all deceiued. The Ieſuite thus anſwereth, that it was an aſſemblie of Prophets, not of Prieſts: as though Prieſts were more priuiledged from error, than Prophets. And the Ieſuite, if he be well remembred, whereas we alleaged the examples of Dauid, Hezekiah, Ioſias, that aſſembled Councels, he gaue vs this anſwer, that they did it as Prophets, and not as Kings: wherefore by his owne confeſſion it belongeth to Prophets as well as to prieſts to aſſemble, and be aſſembled in Councel. Secondly (ſaith he) theſe were falſe prophets, not Prophets of the Lord. We graunt ſo, and this withall, that whereſoeuer the Lords prophets and paſtors, and miniſters aſſemble, that there they will heare the Lords voyce: which the Pope in his Councels doth not. But he ſtill ſuppoſeth, that the Pope and his miniſters are Chriſts diſciples: which is an vnreaſonable ſuppoſition, ſeeing we hold him to be Antichriſt, and that the Ieſuite knoweth. Thirdly, this Councell was called by the authoritie of the King, not of the high prieſt, and therefore might erre. Anſ. Firſt, the holy Councels ſummoned by Dauid, 1. Chron. 15. 3. by Hezekiah, 2. Chron. 30. by Ioſias, 2. Chron. 34. though they were by the authoritie of the King, not the high prieſt collected, were notwithſtanding godly and lawfull Councels. Secondly, neither was it the authoritie of the high prieſt, that could priuiledge Councels from error, ſeeing they themſelues erred, as Vrijah the high prieſt vnder that vngodly King of Iuda Ahaz was a moſt groſſe idolater, 2. King. 16. 11. Wherefore the Ieſuite hath here anſwered nothing.

*Argum.*2. Such a Councell alſo was that of the Iewes, Ioh. 9. where all they were excommunicate that confeſſed Chriſt, and Mark. 14. Chriſt himſelfe was by the Councell condemned: It cannot be denied, but that this Councell erred. Let vs heare the papiſts goodly anſweres: ſome ſay that the Councell erred in a matter of fact, de facto, non de iure, not in a caſe of right, as whether Chriſt ſhould be put to death; As though in condemning him, they denied not that he was the Meſſiah. Other that they erred in their owne opinion, not in the ſentence giuen, for Chriſt indeed was guiltie of death, ſay they, becauſe he did beare our ſinnes: the Ieſuite findeth not much fault with this anſwere, and yet it is an open blaſphemie, as is that alſo of the Papiſts, that the Iewes had ſinned mortally, if they had not put Chriſt to death. Some of them ſay, the Councell erred not in that which was done, but in the manner of iudgement becauſe it was tumultuous and diſorderly, and done by ſuborning of falſe witneſſes: and this ſaith the Ieſuite, is probabilis reſponſio, a probable anſwere, ſaith he, being moſt impious and blaſphemous. And their Maſter of Sentences determineth otherwiſe: Occidere Chriſtum fuit mala actio & peccatum: To kill Chriſt was an euill and ſinfull action, *lib.*1. diſt. 48. b. But he dare not reſt in this anſwere, but findeth out a fourth of his owne, that the chiefe prieſts and Councels of the Iewes could not erre before the comming of Chriſt, but after hee was come, they might. A blind popiſh anſwere: for doth not Chriſt euery where impugne the traditions and decrees of the Elders, as Mark. 7. which our Sauiour ſhould not haue done belike, ſeeing the Elders before his comming could not erre: or will they ſay, that thoſe traditions were right and good before, and afterward erronious? I know not elſe what they ſhould ſay.

Diſtinct. 13. Item in Margin.

Popiſh blaſphemie.

Againe, I oppoſe againſt the Ieſuite the determination of their owne Maſter: who ſaith, In Chriſti morte terminata eſſe Legalia omnia: That all the Legals were determined and tooke their end in the death of Chriſt; and ſo long Circumciſion (ſaith he) was in force, *lib.*4. Sentent. diſt. 3. k. But the law and prieſthood ceaſed together: Ergo, till Chriſts death the prieſts ſhould bee priuiledged not to erre, if they had any ſuch priuiledge at all.

*Argum.*3. We ſee by experience that many Councels haue erred: we let paſſe thoſe which the Ieſuite himſelfe confeſſeth to haue erred, as the third Councell of Antioch, where Athanaſius was condemned, and the Arrian hereſie approued: the Councell of Arimine, where the ſame hereſie was furthered; the ſecond Epheſine approuing Eutiches hereſie: theſe Councels, though they were generall, the Papiſts confeſſe to haue erred, and they haue a tricke to ſhifte it off, but a ſillie one God knoweth. They were not approued by the Pope, ſay they: As though all veritie and knowledge in the whole earth were locked vp in the Popes breaſt.

In the Councell of Neoceſarea confirmed by Leo the fourth can. 7. ſecond mariage is forbidden: that the Prieſt ſhould neither giue conſent to ſecond mariage, nor be preſent at the mariage feaſt, but rather inioyne penance for ſecond mariage.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Non prohiberi matrimonium, ſed ſolennitatem ſecundi matrimonij, that not ſecond mariage, but the ſolemnity of ſecond mariage is forbidden; for the celebritie of mariage was once onely accuſtomed to be done in the Church (ſaith he) when as virgins were coupled in matrimonie.

Contra. 1. The Canon ſpeaketh not of any ſolemnitie in the Church, but of the feaſt at home, Preſbyterum conuiuio ſecundarum nuptiarum intereſſe non debere, That the Prieſt or miniſter muſt not be preſent at the ſecond mariage feaſt. Secondly, the Canon ſaith, Quis eſt preſbyter, qui propter con- niuium illis conſentiat nuptijs : He is a prieſt of no worth, that for the feaſt ſake will giue his conſent to ſecond mariage. And againe, Pracipitur ſecundis nuptijs pœnitentiam tribuere: He is commanded to inioyne penance for ſecond mariage : not for the ſolemnitie of ſecond mariage, but for the mariage it ſelfe. It is plaine therefore, that this canon forbiddeth ſecond mariage it ſelfe. Thirdly, neither is it true which the Ieſuite ſaith, that all ſolemnitie in the Church was cut off in ſecond mariage : It was decreed indeed, Concil.Lateran.part.9.cap.2. In ſecundis nuptijs non debet benedictio iterari : The matrimoniall or mariage bleſſing muſt not bee iterate in ſecond mariage, becauſe it was once giuen before : yet both firſt and ſecond mariage was to bee ſolemnized in the Church, Synod.Colonienſ.part.7.cap.43. Coniunctio coniugum in facie eccleſia peragenda : The ioyning together of couples is to bee done in the face of the Church. He ſaith not in the firſt or ſecond mariage, but indefinitely of all.

*Toletan.1.can.17. Is qui non habet vxorem, & pro vxore concubinam habet à communione non repellatur :* He that hath not a wife, but in ſtead of his wife a concubine, is not for this cauſe to bee repelled the communion : a manifeſt error. This Councell was confirmed by Leo, as it may appeare canon 21. Bellarmine anſwereth, that a concubine is here taken for a wife, Ducta ſine dote, & externa ſolennitate, maried without a dowrie, and any outward ſolemnitie, as Agar is ſaid to be Abrahams concubine, yet ſhe was indeed his wife : and Keturah likewiſe.

Contra. 1. A wife is one thing, a concubine another, Sicut aliud libera, aliud ancilla, as a free woman is one thing, a bond woman another : ſo ſaith Leo the approuer of the foreſaid Councell, as he is alleaged, *Synod.Triburienſ.cap.*38. And further he ſaith, that if a man giue his daughter to one in mariage that hath a concubine, Non ita accipiendũ eſt, quaſi eam coniugato dederit, It is not ſo to be taken, as if he had giuen her to one maried alreadie : Niſi fortè illa mulier ingenua ſit facta, & dotata legitimè, & in publicis nuptijs honeſtata videatur : Except the woman bee made free and haue her dowrie, and be receiued in mariage publikely ſolemnized. Therefore ſhe that is neither endued with dowrie, nor ſolemnely maried, is no wife, but a concubine, which cleane ouerthroweth Bellarmines anſwere.

2. Whereas Bellarmine telleth vs, that in the Ciuill law a wife maried without ſolemnitie, is called a concubine; his law here deceiueth him : for whether he will be tried for this point by the Ciuill law or Canon, they make both againſt him. As *Cod.lib.5.tit.16.leg.2. Antonin.* forbiddeth that a ſouldiour ſhould make a gift to his focaria, or concubina, his concubine or houſemaid: which there is taken for one that is kept without mariage. Likewiſe, *titul.26.l.1.Conſtantin.* It is lawfull for no man to keepe a concubine, conſtante matrimonio, as long as he is married. In the ſame ſenſe is a concubine taken in the Canon law: *Decret.p.1.diſt.34.c.6. Etſi non habetis vxores, &c.* Though you haue no wiues, yet is it not lawfull for you to haue concubines. Thus then a concubine is one, and a wife another.

3. That Agar was not Abrahams wife, but his concubine, it appeareth thus : Firſt, ſhe was not made free, but remained a bond-woman ſtill, Gen. 16. and 21. Secondly, ſhe had no dowrie, nor her ſonne any inheritance with Iſaac, Gen. 21.10. Thirdly, if ſhe had been Abrahams wife, he ſhould haue done euill in diſmiſſing of her, and ſending her away. Fourthly, the Scripture onely calleth Sara Abrahams wife, Gen. 16.3. the other a bond-woman, euen after ſhe had a childe by Abraham, Gen. 21.13. ſhe is alſo called the maide of Sarai, and Sarai her dame or miſtreſſe, Geneſ. 16.6, 9. Sara alſo giueth Agar to Abraham, and ſaith, It may be I ſhall receiue a childe by her, Geneſ. 16.2. the bond-womans childe is by right her dames and miſtreſſes according to the law, Exodus 21.4. All this prooueth that Agar was a concubine onely, not wife to Abraham in any reſpect.

As for Keturah, it cannot bee denied, but that ſometime the Scripture calleth her Abrahams wife, Geneſ. 25.1. ſometime his concubine, 1. Chron. 1.32. yet in a diuers reſpect : for ſhe was his concubine, as ſome thinke, while Sara liued, and his wife afterward : and the Iewes doe hold that Keturah and Agar, are all one woman. To which opinion Hierome ſeemeth to incline, being moued thereunto by two places of Scripture : the firſt, 1. Chron. 5.19. where beſide the Agarens, are named Iethur and Naphiſh, as enemies to Iſrael, which were the ſonnes of Iſmael, Geneſ. 25.15. The other is, Pſal. 83.6. where the Iſmaelites and Agarens are named as two diuers nations : but Agar had no more ſonnes but Iſmael, ſo that the Iſmaelites and Agarens muſt bee all one, vnleſſe the ſonnes of Keturah bee vnderſtood for Agarens, which is moſt like. But how could Keturah her ſonnes be named Agarens, if ſhe alſo were not Agar? But leauing this as a coniecture of hiſtorie, whether Keturah were the ſame that Agar, or not, it is verely to bee thought that ſhe was both a concubine and a wife, the firſt while Sara liued, the ſecond after her death. So whatſoeuer the Ieſuite hath ſaid, or can ſay, the Toletan Councell decreed an error.

Hieron. trad. in Geneſ. 25. & 1. Paralip. cap. 1.

In the 6. generall Synode, Can.2. the Councell vnder Cyprian which concluded that heretikes ſhould be rebaptized, is approued. Can.72. The mariages betweene Catholikes and heretikes are iudged to be voyd, huiuſmodi nuptias, ſaith the Canon, irritas exiſtimari, a manifeſt error, and contrarie to S. Paul, 1. Cor. 7.13. *Can.*12. ſpeaking of the Canons of the Apoſtles, *Can.*6. which permitteth Miniſters to dwell with their wiues, which by them is forbidden in this place, they ſay thus, Statum eccleſiaſticum in pulchriorem ordinem prouehi volentes: Being deſirous to reduce the eccleſiaſticall ſtate to a more beautifull and perfect order, then it was in the Apoſtles time. As though any Church ſince was purer, then the primitiue vnder the gouernment of the Apoſtles. *Can.*67. Damnamus eos qui cuiuſcunque animalis ſanguinem aliqua arte condiunt, & ſic comedunt: We condemne thoſe that by skill of Cookerie doe dreſſe the blood of any beaſt to be eaten. But Saint Paul ſaith, euery creature of God is good, and not to be refuſed, &c. 1. Tim. 4.4. Theſe and diuers ſuch erros were concluded in this generall Councell: conſented and ſubſcribed vnto by Iuſtinian the Emperour, the Biſhop of Rome, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and by 200. Biſhops beſide and more, as may bee ſeene *Can.*102. And approoued in the 7. generall Councell, action.4. where Tharaſius the Preſident ſpeaketh thus of the Canons of the ſixt Councell, Scandalum eſt dubitare an ſint ſextæ ſynodi: It is ſcandalous, or offenſiue to doubt, whether they bee the right Canons of the ſixt Synod. And Adrian Biſhop of Rome thus writeth to the ſame Tharaſius, as he is alleaged in the Decrees: I receiue the ſixt Synod with all the Canons thereof, *Decr.p.*1. *diſt.*16. *c.*5.

*Concil. Carthaginenſ.*3. *can.*47. The Apocryphall bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Eccleſiaſticus, Sapientia, the Macchabees, are made Canonicall, contrarie to the Laodicen Councell, cap. vltim. where all theſe bookes are reiected out of the ſacred Canon. Therefore the Councell of Carthage erred.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt that the Councell of Carthage is of more authoritie then the Laodicen, becauſe it is the latter, and for that it is ratified by *Leo.*4. *diſt.*20. *c.*1. and ſo is not the other.

Contra. 1. The Councels the more ancient they are and neerer the Apoſtles times, ought to bee ſo much the more had in authoritie, and not the new to bee preferred before the old: I marueile that the Ieſuite, which ſo much vrgeth antiquitie, would haue vttered ſuch a ſpeech. 2. And againe, the ſame Leo the 4. in the ſame place confirmeth the Laodicen Councell: and likewiſe Felix 4. *Decret.*2. citeth the 26. and 59. Canons of this Synod: and it is confirmed in the ſixt generall Councell, *Can.*1. and ſo is not the Councell of Carthage: as it is alſo alleaged in the Decrees, *diſtin.*16. *c.*7. Wherefore the Laodicen is to bee preferred, and the Ieſuite hath ſaid nothing.

In the ſecond Councell of Nice, *act.*5. it was concluded, that Angels and the ſoules of men haue bodies of their owne, and are circumſcriptible & imitabiles pictura, and may bee deſcribed by picture, and that the Angels multoties in proprio corpore viſi, haue often been ſeene in their owne bodies. *Action.*1. It was decreed, Hanc eſſe veritatem vt in ſanctis eccleſijs venerandæ imagines colantur: That in holy Churches the images of Saints ſhould be worſhipped. Yet in the Eliberin Councell it was long before determined in this wiſe, *Can.*36. Placuit, picturas in eccleſia eſſe non decere: It ſeemeth good to vs, that there ſhould bee no pictures at all, or images in the Church. And to this Councell ſubſcribed Oſius Biſhop of Corduba in Spaine, who had been preſent before in the firſt Nicene Councell, and ſubſcribed for the Biſhop of Rome: this appeareth therefore to be a manifeſt error, which was decreed concerning the adoring of Images. And to make the error more foule, being blaſphemous enough in it ſelfe, *action.*4. one Iohannes Monachus ſteppeth vp, and ſaith, Imago maior eſt quam oratio, An Image is more worth then prayer: whereas prayer is inſtituted of God, an Image is the deuice of man. And in the ſame place, the ſame ſuperſtitious and idolatrous Monke ſaith, that it were better for a man to breake his oth, & iurantem peierare, and to be forſworne, then to keepe his oth, in deſtructionem imaginum, for the pulling downe of Images. And yet for all this Bellarmine will not yeeld that this Councell erred.

In the Councell of Rome vnder Pope Stephan the 7. all the acts of Formoſus his predeceſſor were reuoked. And in the Councell of Rauenna vnder Iohn 9. Pope, Formoſus acts were eſtabliſhed, and Stephans decrees abrogate.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that Pope Stephen erred onely in a matter of fact, being falſely informed, that Formoſus was not the lawfull Pope. Contra. But to reuerſe all the acts and decrees made by the Pope, ſheweth an error in iudgement alſo in one of them, either in him that firſt enacted them, or in him that after reuerſed them: As the putting of Chriſt to death, though it were a matter of fact, yet proceeded from a corrupt, blind, and reprobate iudgement. By this ſhift the Ieſuite alſo may excuſe the high prieſts from error, that put Chriſt to death.

Laſtly, in the Councell of Conſtance, they are excommunicate, that receiue the Sacrament in both kindes: the Councell of Baſil on the contrarie ſide, permitteth and giueth leaue to the Bohemians to vſe both kindes. One of theſe Councels muſt needes erre, and both of them were confirmed by the Popes: the Councell of Conſtance by Martin the 5. the Councell of Baſil by Felix 5. By this induction of many particulars we inferre and conclude, that Councels euen approued by the Pope, may and haue erred.

4. Laſtly, Auguſtines opinion is this, that prouinciall Councels ought to giue place to generall: Et ipſa plenaria priora poſterioribus emendari: And the former generall Councels muſt bee amended mended by the latter. The Rhemiſts haue found out this ſhift, that in matters indifferent, which are to be chaunged, according to time and place, Councels may be altered, *Act.*15.*ſect.*8. But to that it is anſwered, that the word emendare ſignifieth not onely a chaunge, but a correcting of that which is amiſſe. And that clauſe of Auguſtines muſt be put in, why Councels muſt be amended: Si à veritate deuiatum ſit, If they ſwarue from the truth: de Baptiſm.lib.2.cap.3. Wherefore we conclude, that Councels may erre.

Againe, that ſaying of Auguſtine is confirmed in your owne Decrees: Ego ſolis eis ſcriptorum, &c. I haue learned, onely to thoſe writers which are called Canonicall, to attribute this honour, that I beleeue none of them to haue erred in writing, &c. Decr.p.1.diſt.10.c.5. If the holy writers onely are priuiledged from error, then all other that are not Canonicall may erre, and ſo Councels among the reſt.

Laſtly, let vs put to the ſeale of this doctrine, the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs witneſſed by their blood: M. Rogers Martyr, alleageth the authority of a learned lawyer of the Church of Rome, namely, Panormitane, which ſaith that vnto a ſimple lay man, that bringeth the word of God with him, there ought more credite to be giuen, then to a whole Councel gathered togither: vnto which ſentence, the ſaid bleſſed Martyr giueth his conſent, Fox.pag.1487. Extrau.de Appel.cap. ſignificaſti.

Biſhop Farrar Martyr, was condemned for this article amongſt other, becauſe he would not ſubſcribe, that generall Councels neuer did nor can erre, Fox.pag.1554.col.2.ar.4.

Biſhop Ridley alſo holy Martyr, confeſſeth that Councels gathered together of ſuch guides, and paſtors, as doe walke after the guiding of Gods word, haue a promiſe to be guided of the ſpirit into all truth, and not otherwiſe. Fox.pag.1720.

THE SIXT QVESTION, CONCERNING THE AVthoritie of generall Councels, whether they may abſolutely determine without Scripture, and neceſſarily binde all men to the obedience of their Canons.

The Papiſts.

34.Error. IN words they would ſeeme to magnifie the Scripture aboue Councels: for they ſay, that the authoritie of the Scripture dependeth not in himſelfe, of Church, Pope, or Councels; but in reſpect of vs: the word of God, is the word of God, ſay they, though there be no determination of the Church: but we doe not know it ſo to be, but becauſe the Church hath ſo defined: Bellarmin. lib 2.de con. cap.12. Here is a goodly gloſſe, but nothing to the purpoſe: for in that they ſay the Church hath abſolute authoritie to declare and pronounce which is the word, (which indeede it hath not without teſtimonie and warrant of the word it ſelfe) by this meanes it commeth about, that much is taken for the word of God which is not: and ſo the Church doth not onely declare the word, but maketh that the word which is not.

Firſt, beſide the Apocrypha, which they make part of the word, as we haue ſhewed afore, they hold that their traditions are alſo the word of God, Bellarmine cap.12. Secondly, Gratian is ſo bold to affirme that the decretall Epiſtles of the Popes are to be counted amongſt the Canonicall Scriptures, diſt.19. can. in canonicis, and that the Canons of Councels are of the ſame authoritie, diſt.20.can.decretales. And Greg.1.epiſt.24. ſaith, he doth reuerence the foure generall Councels, as the foure Euangeliſts. Thirdly, they ſhamefully affirme, that whatſoeuer the Paſtors and prieſts doe teach in the vnitie of the Church, is the word of God, Rhemenſ.1.Theſ.2.ver.12.

Firſt then they conclude, that Councels are not bound to determine according to the Scriptures, but as iudges may determine of their owne authoritie. Secondly, that all men are bound of neceſſitie to receiue the decrees of Councels, without any further tryall or examination. They reaſon thus out of Scripture.

Bellar.lib.1.de concil.cap.18. Argum.1. Deut.17.12. He that harkeneth not vnto the prieſt, that man ſhall die. But marke I pray you, what goeth before, verſ.11. according to the law which they ſhall teach thee, and according to the iudgement which they ſhall tell thee, ſhalt thou doe: See then, here is no abſolute iudiciall power giuen to the prieſt but according to the law of God.

Thus anſwered Maſter Latimer Martyr, to the like obiection made by Biſhop White: If any controuerſie did ariſe, they were indeed referred to the Prieſts who were to iudge, not as they would themſelues, but ſecundum legem Dei, according to the law of God, Fox.pag.1762.

Argum.2. The example of the Apoſtles Act.15. is as fondely alleadged, where it was decreed (ſaith the Ieſuite) that the Gentiles ſhould not be burthened with ceremonies, which, ſaith he, was not determined by the Scriptures but by the abſolute ſuffrages of the Apoſtles. Againe, their decrees were abſolutely impoſed vpon the Churches, without any further examination of the Diſciples: Ergo, we are now alſo abſolutely bound to obey all decrees of Councels, Bellarmin. de concil.1.18.

We anſwere: firſt, it is falſe, that this matter was determined without Scripture: for Iames alleageth Scripture: and Peter thus reaſoneth, We beleeue through the grace of God to be ſaued aſwell as they, verſ. 11. therefore what need this yoke of ceremonies? Secondly. Though there had been no Scripture, who ſeeth not that the ſpirit of God ſo ruled the Apoſtles, that their writings and holy actions ſhould ſerue for ſcripture vnto the ages following? Thirdly, the Diſciples needed not to examine their decrees, knowing that they were gouerned by the ſpirit, as they themſelues write: It ſeemed good to vs and the holy Ghoſt: yet we ſee the brethren of Berœa ſearched the Scripture for the truth of thoſe things, which the Apoſtles preached, Act. 17. 11. When they can proue ſuch a plenarie power and fulnes of the ſpirit in their Paſtors and Councels, as was in the Apoſtles, we will alſo beleeue them.

Argum. 3. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, if he refuſe to heare the Church, let him be vnto thee as an heathen man and publicane: Ergo the Church is abſolutely to be obeyed in all things, Bellar. lib. 1. de concil. cap. 18.

Anſwere: firſt, our Sauiour in this place ſpeaketh not of the Canons and decrees of the Church concerning faith: but onely preſcribeth the forme of Church diſcipline, for reformation of manners and correction of ſinne: If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, &c. verſ. 15. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith no more then this, that Chriſtians ought to obey the ſentence of the Church in cenſuring of ſinne: but it followeth not that we ought to receiue newe articles of faith impoſed by the Church beſide Scripture. Secondly, Chriſt ſpeaketh not of euery Church abſolutely, but of a Church guided and ruled by his word, and aſſembled in his name, verſ. 20. for otherwiſe by the Ieſuites collection, our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles ſhould haue been as Publicanes, becauſe they obeyed not the Scribes and Phariſies, amongſt whom they cannot denie, but that the Church was at that time.

The Proteſtants.

WE do firmly beleeue that neither the Church nor Councels haue any ſuch abſolute power to determine without the holy Scriptures, either beſide or againſt them; or to bind other men to obey ſuch decrees: Neither that the true Church of God dare, or will arrogate ſuch power vnto it ſelfe: But that Councels are ordained for the diſcuſſing and deciding of doubtfull matters, according to the Scriptures and word written.

Argum. 1. If the Apoſtles preachings might be examined according to Scripture, much more the actes of all other Biſhops and paſtors. But that was lawfull in the Diſciples of Berœa, Act. 17. 11. which are commended for it: therfore called noble couragious Chriſtians, becauſe of this their promptnes, and diligence in ſearching out of the truth. Ergo.

Argum. 2. All things neceſſarie to ſaluation to be beleeued, are articles of our faith: but all ſuch articles muſt de grounded vpon the word of God: therefore nothing can be impoſed as neceſſarie to ſaluation without the word of God. Wherefore it is a blaſphemous ſaying of the Papiſts, that the Church may make new articles of faith, Rhemenſ. annot. in 1. Tim. 3. ſect. 9. And Eckius maintained the ſame point againſt Luther, in the diſputation at Lipſia, and brought forth a new article of faith, agreed of in the Councell of Conſtance, that it is de neceſſitate ſalutis, of the neceſſitie of ſaluation, to beleeue that the Pope is the head of the Church. The fathers of Baſil more modeſt then ſo, concluding that it was an article of faith to beleeue that Councels were aboue the Pope, doe vſe this reaſon: Thoſe things (ſay they) which we alleage for the ſuperioritie of generall Councels, are gathered out of the ſayings of our Sauiour Chriſt: Ergo, wee are all bound to obey them. Therefore we conclude, that the word of God onely written is the rule of faith, and of all things neceſſarie to bee beleeued: Rom. 10. 10. Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word. Councels are to explane and declare articles of faith, not to eſtabliſh new.

Martyrol. Fox pag. 677.

Argum. 3. S. Paul ſaith, that if an Angell ſhould preach otherwiſe then the Apoſtles had preached, (the ſumme of whoſe preaching is now onely to be found in their holy writings) let him be accurſed, Galath. 1. 8. 9. But an Angell preaching beſide Scripture, is to bee heard as ſoone, nay ſooner then a Councell aſſembled o[illegible]en decreeing any thing beſide the word of God: Ergo, neither is ſuch a Councell to be receiued, but rather to be iudged accurſed.

This was the faith alſo of the holy Martyrs, for the which they nothing doubted to giue their liues, that the Scriptures contained all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: neither would they receiue any decree of Church, Pope, or Councell, not agreeable to the ſame.

Firſt, Maſter Bradford ſaith, In teſtimonie of this faith I giue my life, Epiſtol. ad Londinenſ. pag. 1626.

Maſter Philpot holy Martyr, to Stories demaund, who ſaid vnto him, When as the Iudge in Weſtminſter hall giueth ſentence, doth the word giue ſentence or the Iudge? maketh this anſwer: Ciuill matters be ſubiect to ciuill men, and they haue authoritie to iudge of them: but the word of God is not ſubiect to mans iudgement, but ought to iudge all the thoughts, wiſedome, and doing of man, Fox pag. 1805.

Maſter Haukes Martyr, when Boner had thus ſaid to him : Ah ſir, you will haue no more then Scripture teacheth, but euen as Chriſt hath left it bare. He thus anſwered : He that teacheth me any otherwiſe, I will not beleeue him, pag. 1587. Thus wee ſee our doctrine hath been laid to the touchſtone, and tried in the fire : and neither the workmen were aſhamed, nor yet their worke burned. Wherefore it remaineth ſound and ſure, againſt the contentious brabling, and ſophiſticall cauils of all the Papiſts in the world.

Laſtly, we will heare Auguſtine ſpeake, Nec tu debes Ariminenſe, neque ego Nicenum tanquam præiudicaturus proferre concilium, ſcripturarum authoritatibus, &c. Neither muſt I alleage the Nicen Councell, nor you the Arimine, I am neither bound to the one, nor you to the other, let the matter be tried by Scripture, cont. Maxim. Arrianum lib. 3. cap. 14. By this fathers ſentence therefore, no man is bound of neceſſitie to be tied to Councels, but the Scripture onely is abſolutely to bee beleeued.

Wee haue alſo for this matter the euident teſtimonie of antiquitie, Conſtantinus the great thus ſpake in the Councell of Nice : Euangelici ſunt libri & Apoſtolici antiquorumque Prophetarum ſanctiones, qui nos erudiunt, quid de ſacra lege ſapiamus : expellentes igitur hoſtile certamen, ex verbis diuinitus inſpiratis ſolutionem quæſtionum mente capiamus : There are the bookes of the Goſpels, of the Apoſtles, and Prophets, which doe teach vs, what to hold in religion: therefore expelling all hoſtile and bitter contention, let vs ſeeke the ſolution of theſe queſtions out of Scripture.

Florentin. concil. ſeſſ. 3. Andreas Coloſſenſ. thus ſpeaketh in the name of the Latin Church : Diuino Euangelio ſupremum obtinenti locum & dignitatem, in primis nobis eſt innitendum: We muſt relie eſpecially vpon the holy Goſpell, as hauing the chiefe place and dignitie : Councels then muſt determine according to the Scripture, neither are we bound otherwiſe to giue eare vnto them.

The Ciuill law thus ſaith, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4 leg. 3. Martian. Iuxta Apoſtolicas expoſitiones, &c. Thoſe things which concerning the faith were decreed in the Councell of Chalcedon by our commaundement, were defined according to the expoſitions of the Apoſtles, &c. Et tit. 8. leg. 4. Valentin. ſpeaking of the Chalcedon Councell he ſaith : Nihil adimens ſacroſancto ſymbolo nec adijciens: Adding nothing to the ſacred Creede, nor taking from it. Councels then muſt determine according to Scripture, and cannot adde new articles of faith.

So likewiſe their owne decrees teſtifie : Decr. p. 2. cauſ. 24. quæſt. 1. cap. 21. Non afferamus ſtateras doloſas, &c. Let vs not bring deceitfull waights, to waigh as we thinke good our ſelues, ſaying, this is heauie, this light: but let vs bring the waights and balance out of the Scriptures, &c. And their owne Maſter of Sentences thus ſaith : Ne vltra præfinitionem dei ſermo de deo ſit, forma fidei certa eſt, non ergo aliquid addendum : That of God beyond Gods owne warrant, wee ſhould not ſpeake : the forme of faith is certaine, and nothing to be added to it, lib. 1. diſt. 33. e.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, WHETHER Councels be aboue the Pope or not.

The Papiſts.

35. Error. THis is a matter yet not fully determined amongſt the Papiſts : neither are they all of one opinion. In the Councell of Conſtance and Baſil, it was fully concluded, that the Councell is aboue the Pope. Gerſon of Paris, that was alſo preſent in the Councell of Conſtance, and a great doer againſt Iohn Huſſe, ſtifly maintaineth the authoritie of Councels aboue the Pope. Other Papiſts more fauourable to their new god amight, ſay, that the Pope is by right aboue the Councell, but he may (if he will) ſubmit himſelfe to the Councell. But now commeth in the ſtout Ieſuite, and ſaith with the reſt of the Schoolemen, that the Pope hath ſuch a ſoueraigntie aboue the Councell, that he cannot be ſubiect to their ſentence, though he would, Bellarm. de concil. lib. 2. 14. Yet he is in a mammering with himſelfe: for ſaith he, in periculo ſchiſmatis, When there is a ſchiſme, and it is not knowne who is the true Pope ; in ſuch a caſe the Councell is aboue the Pope. Let vs examine ſome of his beſt reaſons.

Argum. 1. Now commeth in a great blaſphemie. All the names, ſaith the Ieſuite, that are giuen to Chriſt in the Scriptures, as head of the Church, are aſcribed to the Pope, as he is called fidelis diſpenſator, Luk. 12. a faithfull ſteward in the Lords houſe: Paſtor gregis, Ioh. 10. the ſhepheard of the flocke : Caput corporis eccleſiæ, Epheſ. 4. the head of his bodie the Church : Vir ſeu ſponſus, Epheſ. 5. the husband or ſpouſe of the Church : All theſe titles (ſaith he) are due to the Pope : Ergo, he is aboue the Church, and ſo conſequently aboue generall Councels, Bellar. de concil. lib. 2. 17.

O Lord, what great blaſphemie is here, to appropriate the titles of Chriſt, to a mortall man! But goe to Bellarmine, and the reſt of that packe, fill vp the meaſure of iniquitie of your forefathers : ſay with Pope Athanaſius, that the people of the world are the parts of his bodie : with Cornelius the Biſhop in the Councel of Trent, the Pope being the light came into the world, and men loued darknes rather then light : with Pope Calixtus in the Councell of Rhemes, who, when he ſaw the Councell would not conſent to excommunicate the Emperour, impiouſly cried out that they had forſaken him,as Chriſt was left of his Diſciples : with Innocentius the third,that all things in heauen and earth,and vnder the earth doe bowe the knee vnto him : with Otho,no Pope but a Cardinall, that ſitting amongſt his Biſhops, blaſphemouſly applied to himſelfe the viſion of Ezechiel,chap. 1. reſembling the Biſhops to the foure faced beaſts, himſelfe vnto God that appeared to the Prophet in the midſt. Euen thus with the like ſpirit of blaſphemie, doe the Ieſuites crie out, that the Pope is the chiefe ſhepheard, ſteward, husband, and head of the Church vpon earth.

But wee will leaue to charge them ſo deepely with blaſphemie, which notwithſtanding they cannot auoide : let vs heare what the fathers of Baſil ſay to this point. Bellarmine ſaith, the Pope is the husband ; but they reaſon cleane contrarie : the Church (ſay they) is the ſpouſe of Chriſt : the Pope,make the beſt of him you can, is but a Vicar : but no man doth ſo ordaine a Vicar, that he maketh his ſpouſe ſubiect vnto him, but that the ſpouſe is alwaies thought to bee of more authoritie then the Vicar, forſomuch as ſhe is one bodie with her husband; but the Vicar is not ſo : thus haue they to the full anſwered the Ieſuite,ex Ænea Syluio. Better arguments they haue none for the Popes prerogatiue,then we haue ſeene.

*Argum.*2. The Pope by his ſole authoritie may congregate a generall Councell : Ergo, he is aboue a generall Councell.

Anſw. Firſt,to this anſwereth the Councell of Baſil,Epiſtol.Synodal. after this manner: by denying of the argument : Ante Concilij congregationem Concilium non eſt,ſed vt primùm congregatum eſt, ſtatim poteſtas vniuerſalis eccleſiæ,quæ eſt immediatè à Chriſto,in ipſum transfunditur & fit ipſum Concilium ſupra Papam : Before the gathering together of the Councell, it is as yet no Councell : but as ſoone as it is congregate,the power and authoritie of the vniuerſall Church is transfuſed into it, and ſo the Councell becommeth aboue the Pope : therefore it followeth not, that becauſe the Pope doth call it before it be a Councell,that he is aboue it,when it is called.

Secondly, we anſwere,as wee haue ſhewed in the queſtion before,that this authoritie of ſummoning Councels belongeth not to the Pope.

Other arguments vſed by our aduerſaries are anſwered to the full,by Iohannes Patriarch of Antioch, opuſculo Baſil.Concil.annexo: As firſt the Church receiueth the iuriſdiction of the keyes from the Pope : Ergo, it is inferiour. Secondly, Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe, the paſtor is aboue the ſheepe. Thirdly, the Pope is the head of the Church: Ergo non licitum eſt membra ab obedientia capitis recedere : Therefore it is not lawfull for the members to depart from the obedience of the head.

Anſ. The Patriarch anſwereth thus : to the firſt, Petrus recepit claues ſub nomine & ſigno eccleſiæ: Peter receiued the keyes not in his owne name,but in the name and ſignification of the Church. The Church then receiueth them not from Peter,but he receiued them for the Church.

To the ſecond,Chriſt in ſaying to Peter,Feede my ſheepe,gaue him power ſuper ſingularia membra, ouer ſome particular members,not ouer the vniuerſall Church.

To the third he frameth this anſwere : firſt, he denieth the Pope to bee head of the vniuerſall Church. Secondly,and yet he ſaith,Si caput in humano corpore efficitur languidum,&c. If the head in the bodie be weake and diſtempered,it is lawfull for the parts,illud ligare & cauterizare, to binde and cauterize it,leaſt the ſicknes of the head ſhould affect the whole bodie. And againe, he putteth this caſe : Si Papa eſſet furioſus,& diſcurreret cum gladio,&c. If the Pope were mad, and ſhould runne vp and downe with a drawne ſword, killing whom he met, it were lawfull for his ſubiects to take him, and binde him : Si hæc liceret pro ſaluatione corporis,&c. If this bee lawfull to be done by priuate men, for the health of the bodie,much more may a generall Councell repreſenting the vniuerſall Church doe it,for the health of the ſoule. Who liſt to ſee ſhall finde diuers other popiſh arguments there anſwered : opuſcul.Iohan.Patriarch. Antiochen.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope is by right, and ought to bee ſubiect to generall Councels, and that they haue authoritie to iudge,examine,ſuſpend,puniſh,and depoſe him,if there be iuſt cauſe,it is proued thus : This matter was pithily diſputed vpon by the fathers of Baſil, ſome of whoſe reaſons, it ſhall be ſufficient here to follow.

1 They proue this concluſion out of Scripture. Firſt,whereas Panormitane had ſaid, that the Pope was Lord of the Church : vnto him Segonius anſwered,that it was the moſt honourable title of the Biſhop of Rome,to be called the ſeruant of the ſeruants of God : and Peter,ſaith he,forbiddeth paſtors to behaue themſelues as Lords ouer the Clergie, 1.Pet.5. And if Chriſt the ſonne of God,came not to be miniſtred vnto,but to miniſter and ſerue, how then can his Vicar haue any dominion ? So was Panormitane anſwered.

Againe,the Diuines thus argued : Chriſt ſaith to Peter, Dic eccleſiæ, Peter is ſent to the Church or Councell : Ergo, the veritie doth remit the Biſhop of Rome to the Councell. But to this the Ieſuite ſaith, that Peter was not yet entred into his office to bee chiefe Biſhop, but was as a priuate perſon. So then belike, this rule of our Sauiour Chriſt, dic eccleſia, tell it to the Church, did but binde Peter, till Chriſt were aſcended, and he receiued his Vicardome.

This cauillous anſwere the fathers of Baſil wiſely foreſaw, and preuented it: for they ſhew how Peter was ſubiect to Councels euen after the aſcenſion: as Act. 11. Peter is rebuked (ſay they) by the congregation, becauſe he went to Cornelius, an heathen man: as if it had not been lawfull for him to attempt any great matter without the knowledge of the congregation. But that ſeemeth to make more for the purpoſe, Galath. 2. where Paul rebuked Peter to his face, becauſe contrarie to the decree of the Councell of the Apoſtles, he did cogere gentes Iudaizare, he would conſtraine the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes: Ergo, Peter was ſubiect vnto the Councell, ex Ænea Syluio.

Other reaſons many were alleaged by the fathers of Baſil. Firſt, the Biſhop of Burgen: As in euery well ordered kingdome, the whole realme ſhould bee of more authoritie then the King; ſo the Church ought to be of more authoritie then the Pope, though he were prince thereof.

Argum. 2. The Diuines brought theſe arguments: The Church is the mother of the faithfull, and ſo of the Pope, if he be a faithfull man: the Pope is then the Churches ſonne, as both Anacletus and Calixtus Biſhops of Rome confeſſed: Ergo, how much the ſonne is inferiour to his mother, ſo much is the Church ſuperiour to the Pope. Secondly, the Pope is inferiour to Angels, he is not greater then Iohn Baptiſt, of whom it is ſaid, that the leaſt in the kingdome of God is greater than he: but the Angels doe reuerently accord vnto the doctrine of the Church, Epheſ. 3. 10. Ergo, the Pope is bound to doe the ſame, who is leſſe then the Angels. Theſe fathers thought none ſo abſurd to denie the Pope to be inferiour to Angels, and therefore labour not to proue it. Yet Antoninus an old Papiſt ſaith, Non minor honor datur Papæ, quàm Angelis: There is no leſſe honour due to the Pope, then to the Angels. Nay another ſaith (I thinke it be Pope Paſchalis) Datur Epiſcopis, quod ne Angelis, vt Chriſti corpus crearent: It is graunted to Biſhops, which is not giuen to the Angels, to create the bodie of Chriſt. But the fathers of Baſil thought not theſe men worthie the anſwere; no more doe wee, and ſo let them paſſe. Thirdly, the Pope (ſay they) being the Vicar of the Church (for he is more truly ſo called then the Vicar of Chriſt) he may bee depoſed of the Church: for a Lord may put out his Vicar at his pleaſure: Ergo, the Pope is vnder Councels.

Argum. 3. If the Councels might not ouerrule the Pope, there were no remedie left to reſiſt a wicked Pope: Shall we ſuffer all things, ſay they, to runne into ruine and decay with him? for it is not like, that he would congregate a Councell againſt himſelfe. To this the Ieſuite anſwereth: that there is no remedie left, but to pray to God in ſuch a caſe; who will either confound, or conuert ſuch a Pope. Here is goodly diuinitie: we know that Antichriſt ſhall at length be deſtroyed at the comming of Chriſt; but if he ſhould be let alone in the meane while, and not bee brideled, he might doe much hurt, as he hath done too much alreadie. Yet the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that a wicked Pope may be reſiſted by force and armes: and why not, I pray you, as well by peaceable meanes? theſe ſayings are contrarie, Bellarm. cap. 19.

So then, this is popiſh diuinitie, that be the Pope neuer ſo wicked, doe he neuer ſo much harme, he is not to be controlled of any mortall man. Such doltiſh ſchoole poynts, maintained eſpecially by begging Friers, the fathers of Baſil complained of: As that they ſhould ſay, that no man ought to iudge the high and principall ſeate; that it cannot bee iudged, either by Emperour, Clergie, King, or people. Other affirme that the Lord hath reſerued to himſelfe the depoſition of the chiefe Biſhop. Others, yet more mad, are not aſhamed to affirme, that the Biſhop of Rome, though he carrie ſoules in neuer ſo great number to hell, yet is he not ſubiect to any correction, or rebuke. For all theſe ſtrange and blaſphemous poſitions, the fathers concluded, as ye haue heard, that the Pope ought to obey generall Councels.

Decret. p. 1. diſt. 40. cap. 6.

Laſtly, I will adioyne the iudgement of Auguſtine, who writing in his 162. epiſtle concerning the Donatiſts, whoſe cauſe was heard and determined by the Emperours appointment at Rome before Miltiades then Biſhop there, and other Biſhops aſſiſtants: and yet for all this the Donatiſts would not be quiet: Thus he ſaith, Putemus, illos iudices, qui Romæ iudicauerunt, non bonos iudices fuiſſe: Reſtabat adhuc plenarium Concilium, &c. Put caſe (ſaith he) that the Biſhop of Rome and the reſt, iudged corruptly: there remained yet another remedie: A generall Councell might haue bin called, where the Iudges and the cauſe might further haue bin tried and examined, and their iudgement, if there were cauſe, reuerſed. Whereby it appeareth, ſay the fathers of Baſil, that not onely the ſentence of the Pope alone, but alſo the Pope with his Biſhops ioyned with him, might be made fruſtrate by a Councell. Here the Ieſuite paltereth and ſaith, that a matter determined by the Pope in a particular Councell, may bee called againe in queſtion by the Pope in a generall Councell. Firſt, what neede that, ſeeing that a particular Councell hauing the Popes authoritie, as the Ieſuite confeſſeth, cannot erre? Againe, Auguſtine ſaith, Vbi cum ipſis iudicibus cauſa poſſit agitari: In the which generall Councell, the cauſe together with the iudges, of the which Miltiades was one, may be tried and examined: ſo that the Pope himſelfe might bee adiudged by the Councell, cell,and not the cauſe onely. Vpon the premiſſes wee truly and iuſtly conclude, that the Pope is, and of right ought to be ſubiect to generall Councels.

This alſo was the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Biſhop Cranmer appealed from the Pope to the next generall Councell: the tenor of whoſe appeale you may finde, Fox pag.1882. Maſter Latimer alſo being vniuſtly condemned by Biſhop White, the Popes Commiſſioner, appealed from his ſentence to the next generall Councell which ſhould bee congregate in Chriſts name. And with this appellation the Biſhop ſeemed to bee content, contrarie to the opinion of the Ieſuite, who maketh the Pope ſupreame Iudge of generall Councels, and ſuperiour vnto them, Fox pag.1767.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie. In the ſixt generall Councell, *Conſtantinopol.action.*3. Honorius Biſhop of Rome was condemned, becauſe he was a Monothelite, affirming one will onely to be in Chriſt, and ſo conſequently but one nature. Sergio & Honorio anathema, Pyrrho & Paulo anathema: We hold Sergius and Honorius, Pyrrhus and Paulus accurſed: thoſe three were Patriarchs in Conſtantinople and held the ſame error: the Councell iudged and condemned Honorius: Ergo, it was greater in authoritie.

Marcellinus alſo was condemned in the Sinueſſane Councell, for offering incenſe to Idols. Bellarmine anſwereth firſt, that in the caſe of infidelitie ſuch as this was, the Councell may diſcuſſe the Popes caſe. Ergo, by his owne confeſſion in ſome caſe the Councell is aboue the Pope.

Secondly ſaith he: Marcellinus firſt condemned himſelfe, and after that he was iudged of the Councell.

Contra. But the matter appeareth to bee farre otherwiſe. 1. Marcellinus appeared foure times before the Councell: the firſt time he laid the blame vpon the Prieſts and Deacons that did forſake him: the ſecond time he asketh one of the witneſſes vpon what day he ſaw him offring incenſe, and ſo would haue denied the fact: thirdly, he extenuateth the fault, that he did not offer ſacrifice, but onely burnt the incenſe in the fire. 2. There were 72.witneſſes produced againſt him, to conuince him. 3. One Quirinus a Biſhop ſeeing Marcellinus ſo ſtiffe in his owne defence, roſe vp in the Councell and ſaid thus; Non recedam de ſynodo, I will not depart from the Synode, till thy heart be manifeſted, &c. and ſo Marcellinus at the laſt fell flat to the earth, and confeſſed his ſinne, and was condemned of the whole Councell, where were preſent 300.Biſhops, and 30. Prieſts. Wherefore the Ieſuite may be aſhamed to goe againſt ſo euident a ſtorie.

Sixtus the third was accuſed of one Baſſus: whereupon the Emperour Valentinian aſſembled a Councell, wherein he was cleered and purged: *Decr.part.2.cauſ.2.quæſt.5.c.*10.

Symmachus in a Romane Synode, dignitate ſua expoliatus, was depriued of his dignitie: *Decret. par.2.cauſ.2.quæſt.7.c.*41 in gloſſa.

Likewiſe the Church of Rome did anathematize Dioſcorus Pope after his death: cauſ.24.qu.3. cap.6. Wherefore by theſe particulars it appeareth, that Councels haue been of an higher authoritie then the Popes: we can vrge alſo their owne authorities againſt them.

*Conſtant.Concil.ſeſſ.*4.it was thus decreed, Synodus in ſpiritu ſancto congregata generale Concilium faciens poteſtatem à Chriſto immediatè habet, cui quilibet cuiuſcunque ſtatus, etiamſi papalis exiſtit obedire tenetur: A Synode congregate in the holy Ghoſt making a generall Councell, hath power immediatly from Chriſt, to the which euery man, of what ſtate ſoeuer, although he be the Pope, is ſubiect to obey. And *ſeſſ.*45.Pope Martin ratified and confirmed whatſoeuer was decreed in this Councell, in materijs fidei, in matters of faith: And that this was veritas fidei catholicæ, a veritie of the Catholike faith, to hold generall Councels to be aboue the Pope, it was concluded, *Baſilienſ. Concil.Seſſ.*33. The practiſe alſo of theſe two Councels was according to their decrees: for in the Councell of Conſtance, three factious Popes were depoſed: *Iohn.*23.Gregorie 12.and *Benedict.*13. and Martinus the 5. choſen Pope. In the Councell of Baſil Eugenius the 4.depoſed, and Felix 5. elected.

Laſtly, Aegidius Viterbienſis, in his oration or ſermon before the Lateran Councell, in the hearing of Pope Iulius the 2. ſaid thus: Siqui forte ipſum pontificem per ſe inermem paruipendere auſi ſunt, ſynodi authoritate metuere, & vereri conſueuerunt: Nam ſi ſynodorum res geſtas repetamus, nihil illis potentius, nihil maius, nihil munitius intelligemus: If any haue been ſo bolde, as to ſet light by the Pope, being but weake of himſelfe, yet they feared and ſtood in awe of a Councell: for if we will but call to mind the acts of Synodes, we ſhall vnderſtand that there is nothing of greater power, ſtrength, or defence then they. Here is a large confeſſion, vttered euen in the hearing of the Pope, without checke or controlement, that Councels are of greater authoritie then the Pope. And it is agreeable alſo to their owne Canons: *Decret.p.2.cauſ.2.quæſt.7.c.*35. If Peter were corrected by Paul, &c. how much more eaſily that which is confirmed by the whole Church, Vnius Epiſcopi authoritati, &c. ought to be preferred before one Biſhops authoritie. And, cauſ.25.quæſt.1.c.1.Gelaſius, euery Chriſtian ought not to bee ignorant, that what the vniuerſall Church in Synode hath aſſented vnto, nullam magis exequi ſedem oportere, no See ought more readily to execute, then the Ieſuite ſaith, that Peter was not yet entred into his office to bee chiefe Biſhop, but was as a priuate perſon. So then belike, this rule of our Sauiour Chriſt, dic eccleſiæ, tell it to the Church, did but binde Peter, till Chriſt were aſcended, and he receiued his Vicardome.

This cauillous anſwere the fathers of Baſil wiſely foreſaw, and preuented it: for they ſhew how Peter was ſubiect to Councels euen after the aſcenſion: as Act. 11. Peter is rebuked (ſay they) by the congregation, becauſe he went to Cornelius, an heathen man: as if it had not been lawfull for him to attempt any great matter without the knowledge of the congregation. But that ſeemeth to make more for the purpoſe, Galath. 2. where Paul rebuked Peter to his face, becauſe contrarie to the decree of the Councell of the Apoſtles, he did cogere gentes Iudaizare, he would conſtraine the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes: Ergo, Peter was ſubiect vnto the Councell, ex Ænea Syluio.

Other reaſons many were alleaged by the fathers of Baſil. Firſt, the Biſhop of Burgen: As in euery well ordered kingdome, the whole realme ſhould bee of more authoritie then the King; ſo the Church ought to be of more authoritie then the Pope, though he were prince thereof.

Argum. 2. The Diuines brought theſe arguments: The Church is the mother of the faithfull, and ſo of the Pope, if he be a faithfull man: the Pope is then the Churches ſonne, as both Anacletus and Calixtus Biſhops of Rome confeſſed: Ergo, how much the ſonne is inferiour to his mother, ſo much is the Church ſuperiour to the Pope. Secondly, the Pope is inferiour to Angels, he is not greater then Iohn Baptiſt, of whom it is ſaid, that the leaſt in the kingdome of God is greater than he: but the Angels doe reuerently accord vnto the doctrine of the Church, Epheſ. 3. 10. Ergo, the Pope is bound to doe the ſame, who is leſſe then the Angels. Theſe fathers thought none ſo abſurd to denie the Pope to be inferiour to Angels, and therefore labour not to proue it. Yet Antoninus an old Papiſt ſaith, Non minor honor datur Papæ, quàm Angelis: There is no leſſe honour due to the Pope, then to the Angels. Nay another ſaith (I thinke it be Pope Paſchalis) Datur Epiſcopis, quod ne Angelis, vt Chriſti corpus crearent: It is graunted to Biſhops, which is not giuen to the Angels, to create the bodie of Chriſt. But the fathers of Baſil thought not theſe men worthie the anſwere; no more doe wee, and ſo let them paſſe. Thirdly, the Pope (ſay they) being the Vicar of the Church (for he is more truly ſo called then the Vicar of Chriſt) he may bee depoſed of the Church: for a Lord may put out his Vicar at his pleaſure: Ergo, the Pope is vnder Councels.

Argum. 3. If the Councels might not ouerrule the Pope, there were no remedie left to reſiſt a wicked Pope: Shall we ſuffer all things, ſay they, to runne into ruine and decay with him? for it is not like, that he would congregate a Councell againſt himſelfe. To this the Ieſuite anſwereth: that there is no remedie left, but to pray to God in ſuch a caſe; who will either confound, or conuert ſuch a Pope. Here is goodly diuinitie: we know that Antichriſt ſhall at length be deſtroyed at the comming of Chriſt; but if he ſhould be let alone in the meane while, and not bee brideled, he might doe much hurt, as he hath done too much alreadie. Yet the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that a wicked Pope may be reſiſted by force and armes: and why not, I pray you, as well by peaceable meanes? theſe ſayings are contrarie, Bellarm. cap. 19.

So then, this is popiſh diuinitie, that be the Pope neuer ſo wicked, doe he neuer ſo much harme, he is not to be controlled of any mortall man. Such doltiſh ſchoole poynts, maintained eſpecially by begging Friers, the fathers of Baſil complained of: As that they ſhould ſay, that no man ought to iudge the high and principall ſeate; that it cannot bee iudged, either by Emperour, Clergie, King, or people. Other affirme that the Lord hath reſerued to himſelfe the depoſition of the chiefe Biſhop. Others, yet more mad, are not aſhamed to affirme, that the Biſhop of Rome, though he carrie ſoules in neuer ſo great number to hell, yet is he not ſubiect to any correction, or rebuke. For all theſe ſtrange and blaſphemous poſitions, the fathers concluded, as ye haue heard, that the Pope ought to obey generall Councels.

Decret. p. 1. diſt. 40. cap. 6.

Laſtly, I will adioyne the iudgement of Auguſtine, who writing in his 162. epiſtle concerning the Donatiſts, whoſe cauſe was heard and determined by the Emperours appointment at Rome before Miltiades then Biſhop there, and other Biſhops aſſiſtants: and yet for all this the Donatiſts would not be quiet: Thus he ſaith, Putemus, illos iudices, qui Romæ iudicauerunt, non bonos iudices fuiſſe: Reſtabat adhuc plenarium Concilium, &c. Put caſe (ſaith he) that the Biſhop of Rome and the reſt, iudged corruptly: there remained yet another remedie: A generall Councell might haue bin called, where the Iudges and the cauſe might further haue bin tried and examined, and their iudgement, if there were cauſe, reuerſed. Whereby it appeareth, ſay the fathers of Baſil, that not onely the ſentence of the Pope alone, but alſo the Pope with his Biſhops ioyned with him, might be made fruſtrate by a Councell. Here the Ieſuite paltereth and ſaith, that a matter determined by the Pope in a particular Councell, may bee called againe in queſtion by the Pope in a generall Councell. Firſt, what neede that, ſeeing that a particular Councell hauing the Popes authoritie, as the Ieſuite confeſſeth, cannot erre? Againe, Auguſtine ſaith, Vbi cum ipſis iudicibus cauſa poſſit agitari: In the which generall Councell, the cauſe together with the iudges, of the which Miltiades was one, may be tried and examined: ſo that the Pope himſelfe might bee adiudged by the Councell, cell,and not the cauſe onely. Vpon the premiſſes wee truly and iuſtly conclude, that the Pope is, and of right ought to be ſubiect to generall Councels.

This alſo was the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Biſhop Cranmer appealed from the Pope to the next generall Councell: the tenor of whoſe appeale you may finde, Fox pag.1882. Maſter Latimer alſo being vniuſtly condemned by Biſhop White, the Popes Commiſſioner, appealed from his ſentence to the next generall Councell which ſhould bee congregate in Chriſts name. And with this appellation the Biſhop ſeemed to bee content, contrarie to the opinion of the Ieſuite, who maketh the Pope ſupreame Iudge of generall Councels, and ſuperiour vnto them, Fox pag.1767.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie. In the ſixt generall Councell, *Conſtantinopol.action.*3. Honorius Biſhop of Rome was condemned, becauſe he was a Monothelite, affirming one will onely to be in Chriſt, and ſo conſequently but one nature. Sergio & Honorio anathema, Pyrrho & Paulo anathema: We hold Sergius and Honorius, Pyrrhus and Paulus accurſed: thoſe three were Patriarchs in Conſtantinople and held the ſame error: the Councell iudged and condemned Honorius: Ergo, it was greater in authoritie.

Marcellinus alſo was condemned in the Sinueſſane Councell, for offering incenſe to Idols. Bellarmine anſwereth firſt, that in the caſe of infidelitie ſuch as this was, the Councell may diſcuſſe the Popes caſe. Ergo, by his owne confeſſion in ſome caſe the Councell is aboue the Pope.

Secondly ſaith he: Marcellinus firſt condemned himſelfe, and after that he was iudged of the Councell.

Contra. But the matter appeareth to bee farre otherwiſe. 1. Marcellinus appeared foure times before the Councell: the firſt time he laid the blame vpon the Prieſts and Deacons that did forſake him: the ſecond time he asketh one of the witneſſes vpon what day he ſaw him offring incenſe, and ſo would haue denied the fact: thirdly, he extenuateth the fault, that he did not offer ſacrifice, but onely burnt the incenſe in the fire. 2. There were 72. witneſſes produced againſt him, to conuince him. 3. One Quirinus a Biſhop ſeeing Marcellinus ſo ſtiffe in his owne defence, roſe vp in the Councell and ſaid thus; Non recedam de ſynodo, I will not depart from the Synode, till thy heart be manifeſted, &c. and ſo Marcellinus at the laſt fell flat to the earth, and confeſſed his ſinne, and was condemned of the whole Councell, where were preſent 300. Biſhops, and 30. Prieſts. Wherefore the Ieſuite may be aſhamed to goe againſt ſo euident a ſtorie.

Sixtus the third was accuſed of one Baſſus: whereupon the Emperour Valentinian aſſembled a Councell, wherein he was cleered and purged: *Decr.part.*2.*cauſ.*2.*quaſt.*5.*c.*10.

Symmachus in a Romane Synode, dignitate ſua expoliatus, was depriued of his dignitie: *Decret. par.*2.*cauſ.*2.*quaſt.*7.*c.*41.in gloſſa.

Likewiſe the Church of Rome did anathematize Dioſcorus Pope after his death: *cauſ.*24.*qu.*3. *cap.*6. Wherefore by theſe particulars it appeareth, that Councels haue been of an higher authoritie then the Popes: we can vrge alſo their owne authorities againſt them.

*Conſtant.Concil.ſeſſ.*4. it was thus decreed, Synodus in ſpiritu ſancto congregata generale Concilium faciens poteſtatem à Chriſto immediatè habet, cui quilibet cuiuſcunque ſtatus, etiamſi papalis exiſtit obedire tenetur: A Synode congregate in the holy Ghoſt making a generall Councell, hath power immediatly from Chriſt, to the which euery man, of what ſtate ſoeuer, although he be the Pope, is ſubiect to obey. And *ſeſſ.*45. Pope Martin ratified and confirmed whatſoeuer was decreed in this Councell, in materijs fidei, in matters of faith: And that this was veritas fidei catholicæ, a veritie of the Catholike faith, to hold generall Councels to be aboue the Pope, it was concluded, *Baſilienſ. Concil.Seſſ.*33. The practiſe alſo of theſe two Councels was according to their decrees: for in the Councell of Conſtance, three factious Popes were depoſed: *Iohn.*23. Gregorie 12. and *Benedict.*13. and Martinus the 5. choſen Pope. In the Councell of Baſil Eugenius the 4. depoſed, and Felix 5. elected.

Laſtly, Aegidius Viterbienſis, in his oration or ſermon before the Lateran Councell, in the hearing of Pope Iulius the 2. ſaid thus: Siqui forte ipſum pontificem per ſe inermem paruipendere auſi ſunt, ſynodi authoritate metuere, & vereri conſueuerunt: Nam ſi ſynodorum res geſtas repetamus, nihil illis potentius, nihil maius, nihil munitius intelligemus: If any haue been ſo bolde, as to ſet light by the Pope, being but weake of himſelfe, yet they feared and ſtood in awe of a Councell: for if we will but call to mind the acts of Synodes, we ſhall vnderſtand that there is nothing of greater power, ſtrength, or defence then they. Here is a large confeſſion, vttered euen in the hearing of the Pope, without checke or controlement, that Councels are of greater authoritie then the Pope. And it is agreeable alſo to their owne Canons: *Decret.p.*2.*cauſ.*2.*quaſt.*7.*c.*35. If Peter were corrected by Paul, &c. how much more eaſily that which is confirmed by the whole Church, Vnius Epiſcopi authoritati, &c. ought to be preferred before one Biſhops authoritie. And, *cauſ.*25.*quaſt.*1.*c.*1. Gelaſius, euery Chriſtian ought not to bee ignorant, that what the vniuerſall Church in Synode hath aſſented vnto, nullam magis exequi ſedem oportere, no See ought more readily to execute, then the firſt. So that by this Canon, euen the firſt See is bound to keepe the decrees of the vniuerſall Church.

THE EIGHT QVESTION, OF THE CONDITIONS and qualitie of generall Councels.

The Papiſts.

THeir vnreaſonable and vnequall conditions, are theſe and ſuch like, as follow.

1 That the Pope onely ſhould haue authoritie to ſummon, call, proroge, diſſolue and confirme Councels, and he onely to be the iudge, Preſident and moderator in Councels, or ſome at his appointment.

2 They will haue none to giue voices but Biſhops, and ſuch as are bound by oath of alleageance to the Pope.

3 That the Councell is not bound to determine according to Scripture, but to follow their traditions, and former decrees of Councels.

4 That no Councell is in force without the Popes aſſent, yea the Pope himſelfe (ſay they) by his ſole authoritie may abrogate and diſanull the Canons and decrees of Councels.

Theſe and ſuch other conditions the Papiſts require in their Councels: So they will be ſure, that nothing ſhall be concluded againſt them: And how vnreaſonable theſe conditions are, I haue ſhewed ſeuerally in the particular queſtions belonging to this matter.

The Proteſtants.

OVr conditions, which we would haue obſerued and kept, in generall Councels, are theſe, moſt iuſt and reaſonable:

1 That the Pope, which is a party, ſhould be no iudge: for it is vnreaſonable, that the ſame man ſhould be both a party and a iudge: and therefore he ought not to meddle with calling and appointing Councels, with ruling, or moderating them, ſeeing it is like, he would worke for his owne aduantage.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this rule, that the ſame ought not to be a partie and a iudge, may holde in priuate and inferiour iudges, but not in the chiefe iudge, Bellarm. lib. 1. cap. 21.

Contra. If it be iuſt that no man ſhould be iudge in his owne cauſe, the ſame rule of iuſtice ought to bind both the inferior and ſuperior iudges: ſo Athanaſius tooke exception againſt the Patriarch of Antioch, by whom he was depoſed, becauſe he was his enemie, and a partie; and his exception was admitted in the Chalcedon Councell, decr. p. 2. c. 3. qu. 5. c. 15.

Alſo Pope Nicholas the 1. Epiſt. ad Michaelem Imperator. bringeth in a ſaying of Gelaſius ſometime Biſhop of Rome: Quæro, iudicium, quod prætendunt, vbinam poſſit agitari? an apud ipſos, vt ijdem ſint & teſtes & iudices? ſed tali iudicio, nec humana committi poſſunt negotia: I aske, that courſe of iudgement, which they pretend, where ſhould it be handled? would they haue it among themſelues, to be both witneſſes and iudges? Which is not to be admitted, no not in humane affaires: Ergo, the Pope, by the teſtimonie of a Pope himſelfe, ought not to be both accuſer and iudge. Yea both the Ciuill and Canon law doe refuſe him as an incompetent iudge, that is a partie in the cauſe: as Cod. lib. 2. tit. 6. leg. 6. Valentin. That no man in the ſame cauſe, ſhould be an aduocate and a iudge; lib. 3. tit. 5. l. 1. Gratian. Nemo in ſua cauſa iudicet, That no man ſhould be iudge in his owne cauſe. So likewiſe their owne Canons; decr. part. 2. cauſ. 4. qu. 4. c. 1. Fabianus: That no man ſhould preſume to be both an accuſer and a iudge: And c. 2. Damaſus; The ſame parties muſt not be both accuſers and iudges. Yea and that the Pope himſelfe whom they make the ſupreame iudge ought to obſerue this rule, a preſident we haue in the Chalcedon Councell, where, when as Paſchaſinus and Lucentius the Biſhop of Romes Legates would haue Dioſcorus excluded out of the Councell, the iudges ſaid thus to Lucentius, Si iudicis obtines perſonam, non vt accuſator debes perſequi: If you take vpon you the perſon of the iudge, you cannot proſecute the matter as an accuſer. Wherefore we iuſtlie take exception againſt ſuch Councels, where the Pope taketh vpon him to be iudge, ſeeing he ought not to be a iudge in his owne cauſe.

2 That ſuch a time and place be appointed, as when and where the Churches of Chriſtendome may moſt ſafely and conueniently meete together: not at ſuch a time as Paulus the third called a Councell, when all Princes in Chriſtendome were occupied in great affaires: nor ſuch a place, as he then appointed at Mantua in Italie, whither Princes could not come without perill of iourney and danger of life, being penned in by the Popes garriſons. Thus Pope, or Biſhop Leo, (for then there were no Popes) writ to Martianus the Emperour, to haue the Councell remoued from Calchis to Italie, but he preuailed not. So Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell at Baſile, and brought it vnder his owne noſe: but was withſtood by the Councell.

Concerning the quietnes and freenes of the place to be choſen for the Councell, the Synode of Baſile thus writeth to the Bohemians, that whereas they had complained in times paſt, that they could not haue liberam audientiam, a free and ſafe hearing, iam ceſſabit, ſay they, omnis querela occaſio, now all occaſion of complaint ſhall ceaſe. Ecce iam locus & facultas plena audientiæ præbetur: Beholde we offer vnto you both freedome of place, and libertie of hearing.

Here Bellarmine maketh this anſwere, that whereas Cyprian hath this Canon, lib.1.epiſt.3. That controuerſies ſhould there be tried, where they ariſe: that this is to be vnderſtoode of the particular ſuites of men, not of matters of faith, which may be in any place determined, as he ſheweth by diuers preſidents.

Contra. That ſuch a place, not for iudgement of matters of fact onely, but in deciding of points of faith ought to be choſen, to the which all parties may ſafely, and without danger reſort, both the Ciuill law and your Canons doe warrant: as firſt, Cod.lib.3.tit.14.l.1. Conſtantin. Perſonæ miſerabiles, &c. Miſerable and poore perſons muſt not be drawne out of their prouince. And lib.7. titul.62.l.26. Gratian. Itineris longinquitas, &c. The length of the iourney doth hinder appeales to be made a farre off: So alſo the decrees conſent hereunto, p.2.cauſ.3.qu.6.c.13. Anacletus. Peregrina iudicia ſubmouenda: That iudgements in a ſtrange countrie muſt not be admitted, decr. Gregor. lib.1.tit.3.cap.28. Innocent.3. That no man ſhould be called aboue two daies iourney from home, no not by the Apoſtolike letters, becauſe of expenſes, and wearines of iourney: theſe two cauſes being rendered both by the Ciuil law and Canon, why no man ought to be ſummoned a farre off, may very well ſtand, and be obſerued in congregating and calling of Councels.

3 We would haue it a free Councell, where euery man might fully vtter his minde, and that there ſhould be a ſafe conduct graunted to all to come and goe: which the Pope for all his faire promiſes is vnwilling to doe, as it was flatly denied to Hierome of Prage in the Councell of Conſtance; to whom it was anſwered, that he ſhould haue ſafe conduct to come, but none to goe. Neither if they ſhould giue a ſafe conduct, were they to be truſted, for it cannot be forgotten, to their perpetuall infamie, that they brake the Emperour Sigiſmunds ſafe conduct graunted to Iohn Huſſe in the Councell of Conſtance, ſaying, that faith was not to be kept with heretikes.

Concerning this poynt alſo, the libertie of ſpeech in Councels: Conſtantinus the Emperor thus writeth, epiſtol ad Nicen.2. Damus vnicuique libertatem, vt ſine omni formidine ea eloquatur, quæ ſecum animo deliberauerit, quò veritas magis magiſque eluceſcat, & intrepida voce audiatur: We giue vnto euery man liberty, to vtter without feare, what he hath deliberated in his minde, and to be heard without dread, that the truth may better appeare.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that it is reaſonable a ſafe conduct ſhould be graunted, as was offered of late at the Councell of Trent.

Contra. In deed ſuch a ſafe conduct, as was offered to Iohn Huſſe by the Councell of Conſtance, as I haue ſaid, which they might breake at their pleaſure: but that ſuch a place ought to be choſen indifferently, where euery man might goe and come ſafely, one of your owne Popes thought it reaſonable, thus writing in defence of the King of Sicilie, cited and ſummoned by the Emperor: Clementin.lib.1.tit.11.c.1. Nunquid venire debuit ad iudicem exercitu feroci ſtipatum, &c. What ſhould he come to a iudge being garded with a fierce armie? Or to a populous place and of great power which was bent againſt him? Now if the Pope would call a Councell in Rome or in Italie, or in any other place, where he is receiued, may we not vſe the ſame defence, which Pope Clement did for the King of Sicilie?

4 That the matter ſhould not be left wholy to Biſhops and Prelates, but that the learned of the Clergie and Laitie beſides, ſhould giue voices, ſeeing the cauſe of religion is common and concerneth all. But moſt of all, that nothing be caried with violence or popularitie, againſt the Scriptures, but euery matter determined according to the truth thereof.

See for this matter the teſtimonie of Pope Nicholas the firſt, cited before queſtion 3. of this controuerſie. Fides vniuerſalis eſt, omnium communis eſt, quæ non ſolum ad Clericos, ſed Laicos pertinet, &c. That faith is vniuerſall, and a thing common to all, and appertaineth not onely to the Clergie, but to Lay men, and generally to all Chriſtians.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that it is againſt the forme of all Councels, that any but Biſhops ſhould haue deciding voices in Councels.

Contra. The Ieſuite if he would ſpeake his conſcience, knoweth the contrarie: for firſt in that Councell held by the Apoſtles, whoſe authoritie was greater, then of Biſhops, Act.15. the queſtion is determined by the whole conſent of the Apoſtles and Presbyters or elders: as verſ.6. The Apoſtles and Elders came together to looke to this matter: and verſ.22. It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders &c.

So in the Chalcedon Councell there were aſſembled 630. Fathers, not all Biſhops, but many of them Prieſts, as in the firſt action, the Ægyptian heretikes tooke exception againſt the Prieſts, calling them ſuperfluous: and Martianus alloweth the actes of this Councell, inſtituta à ſacerdotibus, which were done by Prieſts aſſembled at Chalcedon, Cod.lib.1.tit.4.leg.3.

And S. Hierome ſaith, whoſe ſentence is approued, decr.p.1.cauſ.16.qu.1.c.7. That as the Romans had their Senate, without whoſe Councell they did nothing: Ita & nos habemus ſenatum noſtrum, cætum Preſbyterorum: So the Church alſo hath their Senate, the companie of Presbyters: Wherefore if Prieſts be as Senators in Councels, there is no queſtion, but they ought to haue determining voices.

5 It is a moſt reaſonable condition, that all things in Councels ſhould be decided by the Scriptures. Bellarmine anſwereth no, becauſe according to the law of Martian, nothing ought to be called in queſtion, which hath been concluded in Councell, as this hath been determined in the ſeuenth generall Synode, that traditions not written ought to be receiued, *Bellarm.lib.*1.*c.*21. reſponſ. ad 4.condition.

Contra. Firſt, the law of Martian ſpeaketh of articles of faith once concluded, which ought not afterward to be doubted of, and of ſuch concluſions, as are made iuxta Apoſtolicas inſtitutiones: according to the inſtitutions of the Apoſtles: *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*4.*leg.*3. But this decree of the ſeuenth Synode is neither an article of faith, nor yet agreeable to the Apoſtles inſtitutions. Secondly, as for the ſeuenth Synode, we with the Greekes reiect it as an idolatrous Synode, and afterward repealed with the actes thereof in the Councell of Frankford, vnder Charles: yea one of Adrian.quodlibet.6. their owne Popes, Adrian the ſixt thus writeth of this Synode, Parum verecunde abutentes, &c. They doe without all ſhame abuſe old wiues fables and dreames, &c. Thirdly, that it is agreeable to the ancient practiſe of Councels, to haue all things decided by Scripture: ſee before queſtion 6. of this controuerſie.

Such a Councell we refuſe not, nay we much deſire, which is the true generall Councell: that is not generall, where all men cannot ſpeake; no freedome nor libertie graunted for men to vtter the truth, where all things are partially handled, and are ſwayed by one mans authoritie. Wherefore the Rhemiſts ſlander vs in ſaying we raile vpon generall Councels, annot. in Act. 15.10. and that we refuſe them, 2. Galath. 2. Whether we or they are enemies to true, generall, free, holy, indifferent Councels, let all men iudge.

THE FOVRTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE BISHOP OF ROME, COMMONLY CALLED THE POPE.

THis great and waightie Controuerſie containeth tenne ſeuerall queſtions.

1 Whether the regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

2 Whether Peter were the prince of the Apoſtles, and by our Sauiour Chriſt made head of the Church.

3 Whether Peter were at Rome and dyed Biſhop there.

4 Whether the Biſhop of Rome be the true ſucceſſor of Peter.

5 Concerniug the primacie of the Biſhop of Rome: ſixe parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether he haue authoritie ouer other Biſhops. Secondly, whether appeales are to be made to Rome. Thirdly, whether the Pope be ſubiect to the iudgement of any. Fourthly, whether he may be depoſed. Fiftly, what primacie he hath ouer other Churches. Sixtly, of his titles and names.

6 Whether the Biſhop of Rome may erre, and likewiſe whether the Church of Rome be ſubiect to error.

7 Of the ſpirituall iuriſdiction of the Biſhop of Rome: two parts. Firſt, whether hee can make lawes to binde the conſcience. Secondly, whether other Biſhops doe receiue their iuriſdiction from him.

8 Of the Popes temporall iuriſdiction: two parts. Firſt, whether he haue authoritie aboue Kings and Princes. Secondly, whether he be a temporall Prince.

9 Of the prerogatiues of the Pope.

10 Concerning Antichriſt: nine parts. Firſt, whether Antichriſt ſhall be ſome one ſingular man. Secondly, of the time of his comming. Thirdly, of his name. Fourthly, of his nation and kinred. Fiftly, where his place and ſeate ſhall be. Sixtly, of his doctrine and manners. Seuenthly, of his miracles. Eightly, of his kingdome and warres. Ninthly, whether the Pope be the very Antichriſt: of theſe in their order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, WHETHER THE Regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

WE are not ignorant that the Philoſophers made three formes and ſtates of gouernment in the common wealth: the Monarchicall, when as the principall and ſoueraigne power reſted in one, as in the King, Queene or Emperor: as Rome ſometime was ruled by Kings, and many yeares after by Emperours. Secondly, the Ariſtocraticall, when the common wealth was gouerned by an aſſembly and Senate of Nobles, as the Romanes had a long time their Conſuls and Senators. Thirdly, the Democraticall, which is the popular ſtate, when the people and multitude bare the greateſt ſway: as ſometime in Rome alſo, tribuni plebis, the officers for the people had the chiefe authoritie. Now of all theſe in common wealth matters, the firſt kind is the beſt and ſafeſt, the Monarchicall or princely gouernment. The queſtion now is, whether the ſame forme ought to be reteyned in Church gouernment: and in this queſtion certaine things are to be obſerued: Firſt, that we haue not to deale in this place with that part of Eccleſiaſticall regiment, wherein the Prince hath intereſt, as in ordaining Eccleſiaſticall Lawes, and ſeeing to the execution thereof: but the queſtion is onely of that regiment Eccleſiaſticall, which is proper to the gouernors of the Church, which conſiſteth in the miniſterie of the word and Sacraments, in ordaining and electing of Church-miniſters, in the diſpenſing of the keyes of the Church, in the Eccleſiaſticall cenſures and diſcipline, and ſuch like: whether in the Church there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop, from whom all other receiue this power in the premiſſes. Secondly, the queſtion is not of the ſpirituall gouernment of Chriſt, who is the chiefe Monarch and King of his Church, but of the outward and externall regiment vpon earth. Thirdly, we ſpeake not of the ſtate of any particular Church, either Nationall, prouinciall, or oppidall, but of the generall ſtate of the Church: whether ouer all Churches there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop. Theſe things premiſed, we come now to the queſtion.

The Papiſts.

THat there ought to be one chiefe Monarch and high Biſhop ouer all the Church, in all Eccleſiaſticall matters, for the deciding of controuerſies, preſeruing the vnitie of the Church, from whom all other Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters doe receiue their power and authoritie, they thus would proue: 36. Error.

Argum. 1. The militant Church is in all things anſwereable and correſpondent to the triumphant companie in Heauen: as Heb. 8. 5. Moſes was bid to make all things according to the patterne ſhewed in the Mount. But in heauen there is beſide God himſelfe, a Monarch and chiefe commander of the Angels, euen Michael the Archangel, Reuelat. 12. 7. Michael and his Angels fought. Ergo, it ought to be ſo vpon earth, Bellarmine lib. 1. de Rom. pontif. cap. 9.

We anſwere: Firſt, the Church vpon earth, neither is, nor can be altogether like to the celeſtiall congregation: for there is no temple, Reuel. 21. 22. There ſhall enter no vncleane thing: and many ſuch like differences there are: We are bid to follow them in holynes and obedience, ſo farre we muſt imitate the Angels, as in the Lords prayer 3. Petit. As for imitation and conformitie in other things, we haue no ſuch commandement: we are promiſed hereafter to be like them, but that is not yet. Neither doth that place proue any ſuch thing, Heb. 8. For how followeth it, Moſes was ſhewed a paterne to make the Tabernacle by: Ergo, the Church hath a paterne of her gouernement from heauen? When they can ſhew any ſuch paterne reuealed in the word (for their dreames and phantaſies we will not beleeue) for the Church, as Moſes had for the Tabernacle, then they ſhall ſay ſomewhat.

2 It is a vaine curioſitie ſo to deſcant of the Angels, as to appoint them a Captaine and commaunder, and to make nine orders or bands of them, as our Rhemiſts annot. 1. Epheſ. ver. 21. Theſe are but their dreames, they haue not a word in Scripture for it. And concerning Michael, they are much deceiued, for in that place Apocal. 12. 7. Chriſt is called Michael: Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon. And who, I pray you, is the chiefe Captaine of the Church againſt the diuell and his hoſt but Chriſt? And ſo is it expounded verſ. 10. Now is ſaluation in heauen, and the ſtrength and kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: Here he is called Chriſt, who before is Michael. In other places alſo, Michael is vnderſtoode to be Chriſt, as Dan. 10. 21. there is none that holdeth with me but Michael your Prince: here Michael is the Prince of the Church, and not of the Angels. And that Michael is not the Prince of the Angels, as our aduerſaries meane, taking Michael for an Angell, it is proued out of the 13. verſe. Michael one of the chiefe Princes: the Angels are all called Princes, and not one to be Prince aboue them.

Likewiſe the nature and ſignification of the word Michael agreeth hereunto: for it is compounded mans had their Senate, without whoſe Councell they did nothing: Ita & nos habemus ſenatum noſtrum, cœtum Preſbyterorum: So the Church alſo hath their Senate, the companie of Presbyters: Wherefore if Prieſts be as Senators in Councels, there is no queſtion, but they ought to haue determining voices.

5 It is a moſt reaſonable condition, that all things in Councels ſhould be decided by the Scriptures. Bellarmine anſwereth no, becauſe according to the law of Martian, nothing ought to be called in queſtion, which hath been concluded in Councell, as this hath been determined in the ſeuenth generall Synode, that traditions not written ought to be receiued, Bellarm. lib. 1. c. 21. reſponſ. ad 4. condition.

Adrian. quodlibet. 6.

Contra. Firſt, the law of Martian ſpeaketh of articles of faith once concluded, which ought not afterward to be doubted of, and of ſuch concluſions, as are made iuxta Apoſtolicas inſtitutiones: according to the inſtitutions of the Apoſtles: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. leg. 3. But this decree of the ſeuenth Synode is neither an article of faith, nor yet agreeable to the Apoſtles inſtitutions. Secondly, as for the ſeuenth Synode, we with the Greekes reiect it as an idolatrous Synode, and afterward repealed with the actes thereof in the Councell of Frankford, vnder Charles: yea one of their owne Popes, Adrian the ſixt thus writeth of this Synode, Parum verecundè abutentes, &c. They doe without all ſhame abuſe old wiues fables and dreames, &c. Thirdly, that it is agreeable to the ancient practiſe of Councels, to haue all things decided by Scripture: ſee before queſtion 6. of this controuerſie.

Such a Councell we refuſe not, nay we much deſire, which is the true generall Councell: that is not generall, where all men cannot ſpeake; no freedome nor libertie graunted for men to vtter the truth, where all things are partially handled, and are ſwayed by one mans authoritie. Wherefore the Rhemiſts ſlander vs in ſaying we raile vpon generall Councels, annot. in Act. 15. 10. and that we refuſe them, 2. Galath. 2. Whether we or they are enemies to true, generall, free, holy, indifferent Councels, let all men iudge.

THE FOVRTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE BISHOP OF ROME, COMMONLY CALLED THE POPE.

THis great and waightie Controuerſie containeth tenne ſeuerall queſtions.

1 Whether the regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

2 Whether Peter were the prince of the Apoſtles, and by our Sauiour Chriſt made head of the Church.

3 Whether Peter were at Rome and dyed Biſhop there.

4 Whether the Biſhop of Rome be the true ſucceſſor of Peter.

5 Concerniug the primacie of the Biſhop of Rome: ſixe parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether he haue authoritie ouer other Biſhops. Secondly, whether appeales are to be made to Rome. Thirdly, whether the Pope be ſubiect to the iudgement of any. Fourthly, whether he may be depoſed. Fiftly, what primacie he hath ouer other Churches. Sixtly, of his titles and names.

6 Whether the Biſhop of Rome may erre, and likewiſe whether the Church of Rome be ſubiect to error.

7 Of the ſpirituall iuriſdiction of the Biſhop of Rome: two parts. Firſt, whether hee can make lawes to binde the conſcience. Secondly, whether other Biſhops doe receiue their iuriſdiction from him.

8 Of the Popes temporall iuriſdiction: two parts. Firſt, whether he haue authoritie aboue Kings and Princes. Secondly, whether he be a temporall Prince.

9 Of the prerogatiues of the Pope.

10 Concerning Antichriſt: nine parts. Firſt, whether Antichriſt ſhall be ſome one ſingular man. Secondly, of the time of his comming. Thirdly, of his name. Fourthly, of his nation and kinred. Fiftly, where his place and ſeate ſhall be. Sixtly, of his doctrine and manners. Seuenthly, of his miracles. Eightly, of his kingdome and warres. Ninthly, whether the Pope be the very Antichriſt: of theſe in their order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, WHETHER THE Regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

WE are not ignorant that the Philoſophers made three formes and ſtates of gouernment in the common wealth: the Monarchicall, when as the principall and ſoueraigne power reſted in one, as in the King, Queene or Emperor: as Rome ſometime was ruled by Kings, and many yeares after by Emperours. Secondly, the Ariſtocraticall, when the common wealth was gouerned by an aſſembly and Senate of Nobles, as the Romanes had a long time their Conſuls and Senators. Thirdly, the Democraticall, which is the popular ſtate, when the people and multitude bare the greateſt ſway: as ſometime in Rome alſo, tribuni plebis, the officers for the people had the chiefe authoritie. Now of all theſe in common wealth matters, the firſt kind is the beſt and ſafeſt, the Monarchicall or princely gouernment. The queſtion now is, whether the ſame forme ought to be reteyned in Church gouernment: and in this queſtion certaine things are to be obſerued: Firſt, that we haue not to deale in this place with that part of Eccleſiaſticall regiment, wherein the Prince hath intereſt, as in ordaining Eccleſiaſticall Lawes, and ſeeing to the execution thereof: but the queſtion is onely of that regiment Eccleſiaſticall, which is proper to the gouernors of the Church, which conſiſteth in the miniſterie of the word and Sacraments, in ordaining and electing of Church-miniſters, in the diſpenſing of the keyes of the Church, in the Eccleſiaſticall cenſures and diſcipline, and ſuch like: whether in the Church there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop, from whom all other receiue this power in the premiſſes. Secondly, the queſtion is not of the ſpirituall gouernment of Chriſt, who is the chiefe Monarch and King of his Church, but of the outward and externall regiment vpon earth. Thirdly, we ſpeake not of the ſtate of any particular Church, either Nationall, prouinciall, or oppidall, but of the generall ſtate of the Church: whether ouer all Churches there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop. Theſe things premiſed, we come now to the queſtion.

The Papiſts.

THat there ought to be one chiefe Monarch and high Biſhop ouer all the Church, in all Eccleſiaſticall matters, for the deciding of controuerſies, preſeruing the vnitie of the Church, from whom all other Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters doe receiue their power and authoritie, they thus would proue: 36. Error.

Argum.1. The militant Church is in all things anſwereable and correſpondent to the triumphant companie in Heauen: as Heb.8.5. Moſes was bid to make all things according to the patterne ſhewed in the Mount. But in heauen there is beſide God himſelfe, a Monarch and chiefe commander of the Angels, euen Michael the Archangel, Reuelat.12.7. Michael and his Angels fought. Ergo, it ought to be ſo vpon earth, Bellarmine lib.1.de Rom.pontif.cap.9.

We anſwere: Firſt, the Church vpon earth, neither is, nor can be altogether like to the celeſtiall congregation: for there is no temple, Reuel.21.22. There ſhall enter no vncleane thing: and many ſuch like differences there are: We are bid to follow them in holynes and obedience, ſo farre we muſt imitate the Angels, as in the Lords prayer 3.Petit. As for imitation and conformitie in other things, we haue no ſuch commandement: we are promiſed hereafter to be like them, but that is not yet. Neither doth that place proue any ſuch thing, Heb.8. For how followeth it, Moſes was ſhewed a paterne to make the Tabernacle by: Ergo, the Church hath a paterne of her gouernement from heauen? When they can ſhew any ſuch paterne reuealed in the word (for their dreames and phantaſies we will not beleeue) for the Church, as Moſes had for the Tabernacle, then they ſhall ſay ſomewhat.

2 It is a vaine curioſitie ſo to deſcant of the Angels, as to appoint them a Captaine and commaunder, and to make nine orders or bands of them, as our Rhemiſts annot.1.Epheſ. ver.21. Theſe are but their dreames, they haue not a word in Scripture for it. And concerning Michael, they are much deceiued, for in that place Apocal.12.7. Chriſt is called Michael: Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon. And who, I pray you, is the chiefe Captaine of the Church againſt the diuell and his hoſt but Chriſt? And ſo is it expounded verſ.10. Now is ſaluation in heauen, and the ſtrength and kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: Here he is called Chriſt, who before is Michael. In other places alſo, Michael is vnderſtoode to be Chriſt, as Dan.10.21. there is none that holdeth with me but Michael your Prince: here Michael is the Prince of the Church, and not of the Angels. And that Michael is not the Prince of the Angels, as our aduerſaries meane, taking Michael for an Angell, it is proued out of the 13. verſe. Michael one of the chiefe Princes: the Angels are all called Princes, and not one to be Prince aboue them.

Likewiſe the nature and ſignification of the word Michael agreeth hereunto: for it is compounded of three Hebrue particles, as much as to ſay, one that is equall vnto God: which name in that ſenſe cannot be giuen vnto any creature.

Further, Epiſtle Iud. 9. there is mention made of Michael the Archangel, who ſtroue againſt the Diuel, and ſaid, the Lord rebuke thee Sathan: where the Apoſtle alludeth to that place of Zachar. 3.2. where the very ſame words are found: but there the Prophet calleth him Iehouah, that ſpake thoſe words, and here the Apoſtle calleth him Michael: So that in this place it muſt needes be vnderſtoode for Chriſt.

But to conclude, we denie not, but that Michael may be the name of ſome glorious Angell: but out of theſe places it cannot be proued. And againe, we will not ſtand with them, but that there may be degrees of excellencie amongſt the Angels, as there ſhall be amongſt the Saints: but that any one hath any ſuch ſoueraigne and commanding authoritie ouer the reſt, it is a curious and preſumptuous ſurmiſe.

Argum. 2. The Church of the old Teſtament was a figure of the Church vnder the New: but they had a high Prieſt aboue the reſt: Ergo, there ought to be now, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, we graunt the high Prieſt was a figure, but neither of Peter nor Pope, but onely of Chriſt: for in two things did the high Prieſt reſemble Chriſt, in offering of ſacrifice (ſo hath Chriſt offered vp himſelfe. Heb. 7.27.) and in entring into the ſanctuarie to make attonement for the people: ſo Chriſt is entered into the heauens, to appeare in ſight for vs before God, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 9.24. I trow in neither of theſe the high Prieſt could be a type either of Peter or Pope. Yes, ſaith Bellarmine, Aaron was a figure, not of Chriſt onely, but of Peter, and his ſucceſſors, cap. 9. reſp. ad 3. ration. Contra. Firſt, then belike Peter and his ſucceſſors are prieſts after the order of Aaron: How then are your prieſts after Melchiſedechs order, as ſome of you haue blaſphemouſlie affirmed? they cannot be both after the order of Aaron, and of Melchiſedech to. Secondly, the Apoſtle thus reaſoneth, Heb. 7.12. Where there is a chaunge of the prieſthood, there muſt bee a chaunge of the law; and ſo conſequently, where the law is chaunged, the prieſthood muſt be likewiſe: how then can the prieſthood of Aaron be a patterne of the prieſthood vnder the Goſpell, the law being chaunged?

2 Neither doth it follow, becauſe there was an high prieſt in one countrey, therefore there ought to be one ouer the Churches in all countries: as the Ieſuite frameth an other argument by a compariſon: becauſe a Biſhop is ouer his dioceſſe, a Metropolitane ouer his prouince, there may be as well a Pope ouer the whole Church. For by the ſame reaſon, becauſe a Lord may be the chiefe in his ſeignorie, a Duke in his prouince, a Prince in his Kingdome, therefore there ought to be an Emperour ouer all the world: or as M. Caluine ſaith, becauſe one field is committed to one Husbandman to dreſſe and to till, therefore the whole world may: which were a thing impoſſible.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, it followeth rather ſtrongly on the contrarie, that if one particular Church had neede to haue one chiefe prieſt to keepe it in vnitie; much greater neede hath the whole Church to haue one principall, becauſe the whole Church is in greater daunger of ſchiſme and diuiſion, then one particular.

Contra. Firſt, the Ieſuite had ſaid ſomething, if one man were as well able to prouide for the peace of the whole Church, as for the vnitie of one: but now he is not. But the beſt way to auoide ſchiſme, is for euery countrie to be gouerned in it ſelfe: as in the Ciuill ſtate, one Monarch is better able to keepe one kingdome from rebellion, then many kingdomes: And this is the reaſon why the great Monarches were diſſolued, for that their prouinces rebelled, and withdrew their obedience from them. Secondly, there is alſo one head of the vniuerſall Church, that doth preſerue it in vnitie, Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore we neede none other: as the Apoſtle ſaith, Epheſ. 4.15. Let vs follow the truth in loue, and grow vp vnto him which is the head, that is Chriſt.

Bellarmine ſecondly thus anſwereth Maſter Caluins ſimilitude: that one husbandman is not by himſelfe ſufficient, yet by his ſeruants may occupie many large fields: and ſo the Pope by his miniſters may be paſtor of the whole Church.

Contra. Yet the ſimilitude holdeth ſtill: for as it were inconuenient, that all tillage in the world, nay in one countrie, ſhould bee occupied vnder the title and intereſt of one man; for by this meanes corne might be engroſſed, prices raiſed, the common-wealth hindered: ſo was it as hurtfull for the Church to be vnder the commaund of one that foreſtalled all cauſes, and ſought aduantage to himſelfe, &c.

The Proteſtants.

THat there ought not to be any one chiefe Biſhop, Pope or prelate, to exerciſe iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, we doe thus make it good.

Iuel. anſw. to the Apol. pag. 657.

Argum. 1. We acknowledge no head of the Church but Chriſt, neither doth the Scripture attribute this title of Maieſtie ouer the whole Church, but onely to Chriſt. If the Pope or any els be the head, the Church is his bodie, which Bellarmine is aſhamed to graunt yet. Pope Athana- ſius doubted not to call populos mundi, partes corporis ſui, the people of the world, the parts of his bodie.

Againe, if he be the head, he muſt doe the duety of an head, which is, to knit and ioyne the parts together, and to giue effectuall power to euery part. Epheſ. 4.16. where the Apoſtle alludeth to the gouernment of mans body: in the which the parts receiue a double benefite from the head, the knitting and ioyning together by ſinewes, which come from the head; and ſenſe and motion alſo giuen to euery part from the head: but it were blaſphemie to thinke this of the Pope, that he giueth any influence to the Church. If they anſwere, he is but a miniſteriall head, Chriſt is the principall. We ſay againe, that although theſe things are principally wrought by the principall head, yet they muſt be done inſtrumentally, or miniſterially by the Miniſteriall head: or elſe it is but a rotten head: ſuch an one as the Woolfe found in a caruers ſhop (as you know the fable is) a goodly head, ſaith he, but without witte or braine. If Chriſt performe all the duety of the head himſelfe, then is there no other head: if the Pope doe ſomewhat that belongeth to the head, tell vs, what is it? If he will be an head and doe nothing, ſurely he muſt needes be a braineleſſe and witleſſe head.

Argum. 2. It is a dangerous and impoſſible thing to haue the charge of all Churches committed to one man: God alone is ſufficient to beare that burthen. Saint Paul ſaith, who is ſufficient for theſe things? No paſtor or miniſter, that is but ſet ouer one flocke or pariſh, is ſufficient to preach the word: much leſſe is any one man ſufficient to gouerne the whole Church.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, S. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that he had the care of all Churches, 2. Cor. 11.28. We replie againe, firſt, then belike S. Paul was vniuerſall paſtor and not Peter. Secondly, we muſt conſider that the Apoſtles were ſent to all the world: their calling was not limited; when they had planted the Goſpell in one place, they did take care alſo for other places: but now there is no ſuch Apoſtolicall calling. Thirdly, Paul did not beare this burthen alone, but the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts were his coadiutors and follow-helpers.

Secondly, ſaith he, why may not the care of the whole Church be committed to one man, as well as the gouernement almoſt of the whole world was appointed by God to Nabuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Auguſtus; ſeeing the gouernment of the Church is eaſier then the ciuill and politike regiment?

We replie. Firſt, we neuer read of any that had dominion ouer the whole world, as the Pope challengeth to haue ouer the whole Church, which is diſperſed throughout the world. Secondly, theſe great and large Monarches are ſaid to haue been giuen of God, Dan. 2.37. Not that this large dominion and vſurpation ouer other Countreyes ſo much pleaſed God; (for the people of God the Iſraelites in their moſt flouriſhing eſtate neuer had ſuch ſoueraignty ouer other countries, but by voluntarie ſubiection, as in Salomons dayes, 1. King. 4.21. the Kings round about brought preſents vnto him:) but becauſe the Lord turned and vſed this their large and mighty dominion to the good of his Church: for Cyrus was a defender of the Church, againſt all that bare euill will thereat: and the large Empire of the Romans ſerued very commodiouſly for the propagation of the Goſpell. Thirdly, the Ieſuite ſheweth his skill, when he ſaith, that the regiment of the Church is eaſier then the gouernement of the Commonwealth: Whereas there is no greater and waightier burthen vpon earth, then is the charge of ſoules. It ſeemeth the Pope taketh his eaſe, finding the care of the Church to be ſo eaſie and pleaſant a thing: indeede as he vſeth it, it is no great matter; for he preacheth not, but giueth himſelfe to eaſe and idleneſſe and all princely pleaſures. But England hath found by experience, and ſo did that worthy and famous Prince King Henry the eight, that there was neuer matter ſo hardly compaſſed, as was the reformation of the Church, and the ſuppreſſion of idolatrie and ſuperſtition in this land. S. Chryſoſtome better knew the waightie charge of a Biſhop, then any of the Popes that preach not, or then the Ieſuite ſeemeth to vnderſtand: he writeth cleane contrary, Eſſe difficilius Epiſcopum agere, quam regem: That it was an harder matter to be a Biſhop, then a King, &c. And againe; The whole world hath but one Emperour, Vnius vrbis Epiſcopus, &c. A Biſhop is but ouer one citie, but his care is ſo much the greater, as a tempeſtuous ſea exceedeth a ſmal riuer troubled with the winde, Hom. 8. in Acta. This godly father ſheweth the vanitie of the Ieſuites argument, that an example from the Ciuill ſtate is not to be taken for Eccleſiaſticall gouernment. And how impoſſible it is for one man to manage all the buſines of the Church, one of your owne Popes thus complainingly writeth: Bonifac. 8. Extrau. commun. lib. 3. tit. 6. c. 2. Multis arduis, quaſi torrens prægrauemur negotiis, &c. We are ouercharged with multitude of buſines, as a brooke that runneth downe with many waters, &c. Wherefore Auguſtine thus ſaith, Nemo noſtrum ſe Epiſcopum Epiſcoporum conſtituit, aut quaſi tyrannico terrore ad obſequendi neceſſitatem collegas ſuos adigit. de Baptiſ. 2.2. None of vs doth count himſelfe a Biſhop ouer other Biſhops, or taketh vpon him after a commaunding manner, as tyrants vſe, to enforce his fellowes to obey. Ergo, by his iudgement all Biſhops are of like and equall authoritie.

*Argum.*3. The Apoſtle deſcribing the Hierarchie of the Church,ſaith,that Chriſt hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets,&c. he ſaith not, he hath ordained one chiefe Biſhop. And againe,one bodie,one ſpirit,one baptiſme,one faith: he ſaith not,one Pope,&c.Epheſ.4.4.11.

Bellarmine anſwereth. 1. That the chiefe gouernment of the Church was committed to all the Apoſtles while they liued:but after the death of the Apoſtles,the Apoſtolike authoritie remained in Peters ſucceſſor onely,and ſo the Pope is ſignified in the Apoſtles,*reſp.ad argum.*2.

Contra. Firſt,why ſhould not the reſt of the Apoſtles haue power as well as Peter, to leaue their authoritie to their ſucceſſors, as S.Paul ſaith,1.Cor.9.5.Haue wee not power,&c. as well as Cephas to leade a ſiſter a wife,&c. As he had power equall to Peter in this particular, ſo in the reſt alſo. Secondly,if Peter left the gouernment Apoſtolicall to his ſucceſſor, what doe you thinke of S.Iohn, the ſuruiuor of the Apoſtles, had he alſo reſigned his Apoſtleſhip to Peters ſucceſſor, for he liued after Peter? Thirdly,there were other Sees alwaies as well counted Apoſtolicall, as Rome: Syricius epiſtol.4.can.1. Extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolica,&c. That no man ſhould take vpon him to ordaine a Biſhop,without the knowledge of the Apoſtolike See: meaning the Primate or Metropolitane.By your Popes teſtimonie,euery Primate is Apoſtolicall.

Bellarm. 2. The Pope is comprehended in theſe words; one bodie, one ſpirit: for as the bodie is knit in one obedience to the head,ſo the Church to the Pope.

Contra. Firſt,by this reaſon the Church ſhall bee the Popes bodie, which the Ieſuite denied before. Secondly,he hath vttered a great blaſphemie: for that which the Apoſtle attributeth onely to Chriſt,by whom all the body being coupled,&c. Epheſ.4.16.he giueth to the Pope.

We may adioyne vnto this that hath been alleadged,certaine reaſons out of Biſhop Longlands Sermon,which he preached before the King: who although in his time he were a great perſecutor of the flocke of Chriſt, yet herein he held the truth: That there can be no other head or Monarch of the vniuerſall Church,but Chriſt: thus he ſheweth it: Chriſt only is the great Prophet: ſo the Angell declared vnto Marie,Magnus vocabitur, he ſhall be called great,Luk.1. And againe, Propheta magnus ſurrexit inter nos, a great Prophet is riſen amongſt vs, Luk.7. Sinne maketh a man ſmall and little, vertue and holyneſſe maketh him great. No man was euer without ſinne but Chriſt: Ergo, he only was the great Prophet. The Pope nor yet any mortall man, cannot forgiue ſinne, as this Biſhop doth; nor iuſtifie as he doth: neither enter into Sancta Sanctorum with his owne blood, as hee did: therefore no mortall man can bee this great Biſhop: *Hac ille, Fox.*pag.1100.

Let vs ſee what antiquitie ſaith,Tharaſius patriarch of Conſtantinople preſident of the ſeuenth generall Councell,thus writeth,Epiſtol.ad Adrianum Papam.Nos accipientes venerandos viros legatos veſtros ad ipſam Metropolim venimus: & omnibus nobis ſedentibus,eligere nobis caput,nempe ipſum Chriſtum, viſum eſt. We togither with your reuerend Legates came to the Metropolis or chiefe Citie of Nice,and ſitting all togither, it ſeemed good to chuſe vs an head,euen Chriſt. He acknowledgeth no head of the vniuerſall Church but Chriſt.

Laſtly,in defence of this article Iohn Huſſe gaue his life: Non eſt ſcintilla apparentiæ,quod oporteat eſſe vnum caput in ſpiritualibus regens Eccleſiam: There is no apparance or likelyhood of truth, that there ought to be one head in ſpirituall things to gouerne the Church.Chriſtus ſine talibus capitibus monſtroſis per ſuos veraces Diſcipulos ſparſos per orbem terrarum,melius ſuam eccleſiam regulauit: Chriſt without ſuch monſtrous heads did better gouerne his Church by his true Diſciples diſperſed ouer the world: Articul.27.obiect. Conſtantienſ.Concil.

THE SECOND QVESTION, WHETHER PETER were the chiefe, and Prince of the Apoſtles, and aſſigned by Chriſt to be head of the Church.

The Papiſts.

37. Error. THis our aduerſaries doe ſtiffely maintaine, that he was not onely head of the Church,but of the Apoſtles alſo, *Bellarm. lib.1.de pontif.cap.*11. And the Rhemiſts doubt not to call him the chiefe and Prince of the Apoſtles,1.Cor.9.verſ.5.

*Argum.*1. We will omitte many of their waightie arguments, as out of theſe and ſuch like places: I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith ſhould not fayle: Caſt foorth thy net into the deepe, I will make thee a Fiſher of men: Peter payed toll for Chriſt and himſelfe: Peter drew the net to the land full of great fiſh: Peter onely drew out his ſworde in the defence of Chriſt. Ergo, Peter was the Prince of the Apoſtles and head of the Church. *ex concil. Baſilien. Fox.*pag.673.

Such other goodly arguments our Rhemiſts doe make: Peter did excommunicate Ananias and Sapphira: he healed the ſicke by his ſhadow. Ergo, he was the head of the Church, *Annot.*5.*Acts ſect.*5.8.Againe,Peters perſon was guarded with foure quaternions of Souldiours,*Act.*12.4.

the Church prayed for him, *Ibid. ſect.*4. Paul nameth him Cephas, 1.Cor.9.5. Ergo, he was chiefe of the Apoſtles. Are not here goodly arguments thinke you? To theſe reaſons I neede make no other anſwer, then that which our learned countrie man doth in his Annotations. You muſt, ſaith he, bring better arguments, or elſe children will laugh you to ſcorne, *Fulk. Annot. Act.*5.*ſect.*5. Let vs ſee therefore if they haue any better.

Argum.2. They take that to be a maine inuincible place for them, Matth.16.18. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I builde my Church: Ergo, the Church is built vpon Peter.

To make this argument the more ſtrong, they ſet vnder it diuers props: Firſt, why did Chriſt giue Peter this name more then to any other of the Apoſtles, to call him Peter, of Petra a Rocke, but to ſhew that he was appoynted to be the foundation of the Church? *Bellarmine cap.*17. We anſwere, Chriſt hereby ſignified, that Peter ſhould be a principall pillar of his Church, as the reſt of the Apoſtles, Epheſ.2.20. He changed alſo the names of ſome other Apoſtles, as Iames and Iohn were called Boanerges, the ſonnes of thunder, Mark.3. Therefore this was no ſuch preeminence to Peter: neither is it true that Peter was almoſt called by no other name, for he is often in the Goſpell after this called by his old name Simon, Mat.16.17. and 17.25. *Fulk. Annot. in Ioh.*1.*ſect.*7. Secondly, againe (ſaith Bellarmine) the text is ædificabo, I will build my Church: but if Chriſt be here taken for the rocke, his Church was built alreadie, for many beleeued in him. But Peter was not made the foundation of his Church, till afterward after his reſurrection, and therefore he ſaith, I will build.

We anſwere. Firſt, it is a corrupt gloſſe, to ſay the Church of Chriſt was not builded, till after the reſurrection: for ſeeing that many beleeued before in Chriſt, and made a Church, either they muſt graunt, that the Church was without a foundation, or elſe, that the foundation was changed from Chriſt to Peter. Secondly, it is taken therefore for the enlarging and increaſing of the Church of God. It followeth not, becauſe Chriſt ſaith, I will build, and his Church was begun to be built alreadie, that therefore another kinde of building muſt be excogitate: no more then, becauſe Chriſt gaue his ſpirit to the Apoſtles, Matth.10.1. and againe, Ioh.20.22. and yet biddeth them ſtay at Ieruſalem till they ſhould receiue the holy Ghoſt, Acts 1.7. that therefore they ſhould looke for another holy Ghoſt, or as though they had not receiued the holy Ghoſt before. But as the ſending of the holy Ghoſt, is meant, for the increaſe and more plentifull meaſure thereof, ſo is the building of the Church here taken for the increaſe of the building.

We yet further anſwere with Auguſtine: Super hanc petram, quam confeſſus es, ædificabo eccleſiam: vpon this rocke, which thou haſt confeſſed, will I build my Church: So that in this place is meant not Peter to be the rocke, but either Chriſt, whom he confeſſed, or his faith, whereby he confeſſed him; which commeth all to one effect. There is no great difference, whether we ſay, the Church is builded vpon Chriſt, or faith is the foundation of the Church, for faith is an apprehenſion of Chriſt: but of the perſon of Peter it can no more be vnderſtood then of the reſt of the Apoſtles, who in ſome ſenſe are called the foundation of the Church, namely in reſpect of their holy Apoſtolike doctrine vpon, the which the Church is built, Epheſ.2.20.

Tract. vlt. in Iohann.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites denie not, but here is relation alſo to the faith of Peter, but faith conſidered in his perſon. We anſwere: if they meane Peters particular faith, which was a proper adiunct to himſelfe, the vniuerſall Church cannot be built vpon that faith, ſeeing when Peter dyed, his faith alſo, as a proper accident to his perſon, ceaſed: if they vnderſtand that generall faith, whereby Peter in the name of all the reſt made this confeſſion: then they all are as well made pillars and foundations of the Church, as he, becauſe it was their generall confeſſion, Fulk. annot. in 16.*Matth. ſect.*8.

Let vs nowe ſee howe the holy Martyrs haue vnderſtood this place, Thou art Peter, &c. Firſt, Iohn Huſſe thus interpreteth this place: that Chriſt in ſaying, vpon this rocke, &c. did not purpoſe to build the Church vpon Peter, but vpon himſelfe, who is the true Rocke: for as much as Ieſus Chriſt is the onely head and foundation of euery Church, and not Peter, Fox.pag.610.*reſp. ad articul.*9.

Sir Iohn Bortwike Knight, condemned for the truth in Scotland, anno.1540. thus declareth his minde: as Abraham tooke his name of the multitude, which ſhould come of his ſeed, ſo Peter was named of the rocke; but Abraham was not the multitude it ſelfe, no more was Peter the rocke: for the Church ſhould be ſtayed vpon a weake foundation if Peter were the ground thereof, who being amazed and ouercome with the words of a little wench, did ſo conſtantly deny Chriſt, Fox. pag.1260.

Biſhop Ridley Martyr, agreeth in the ſame expoſition: Chriſt ſaid vnto Peter, vpon this rocke of thy confeſſion I will build my Church: for this beleefe that Chriſt is the ſonne of God, is the foundation of Chriſtianitie, and the foundation of the Church: Chriſts Church is not built then vpon the frailtie of man, but vpon the ſtable, and infallible word of God, Fox.p.1758.

See the conſent alſo of antiquitie: Fabianus B. of Rome, Epiſtol.3. In eccleſia ſupra petram ſtatur, dum confeſſionis ſoliditas humiliter teneatur: In the Church, we then ſtand vpon the rocke, while we hould the ſound confeſſion of faith with humilitie.

Fabianus epiſtol.ad Zenoxem imperator. vpon theſe words: Tu es Petrus, thus writeth: Super iſta confeſſione ædificabo eccleſiam meam: I will build my Church vpon this confeſſion, and the gates of hell,&c.

Concil. Baſilienſ. oration. ad Bohemos in appendice. Super hanc petram, ſcilicet fidei, ædificabo eccleſiam: I will build my Church vpon this rocke (that is to ſay) of faith. Thus we ſee, that thoſe auncient Biſhops of Rome, and former Councels haue expounded this text, no otherwiſe, then we doe now.

S. Ambroſe is a notable witneſſe in this caſe; Petrus primatum confeſſionis accepit,non honoris,&c. Peter receiued the primacie of Confeſſion,not of honour, the primacie of faith not of order, he anſwered before the other, nay for the other Apoſtles: de incarnat.cap.4. And againe,cap.5. Fides eſt Eccleſiæ fundamentum, Faith is the foundation of the Church: for it was not ſpoken of Peters fleſh,but of his faith,that the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile againſt him,&c.

And Origen hath an excellent place to this purpoſe: Tract.1 in Matth. Petra eſt quiſquis,&c. Euery Diſciple of Chriſt,that drinketh of the ſpirituall rocke,is this Peter or rocke:for if we thinke that the Church is built vpon Peter alone, what ſhall we ſay of Iohn the ſonne of thunder,and of the reſt of the Apoſtles? ſhall we dare to ſay,that the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt Reter onely?&c. Thus theſe Fathers expound this place,not of Peters perſon,but of his faith.

Argum.3. Another place,which our aduerſaries mightily vrge, are thoſe words which follow verſ.19. I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the Kingdome of Heauen; whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde in earth,ſhall be bound in Heauen: Ergo,Peter had eſpeciall iuriſdicton giuen him more then any of the reſt,Bellarm.cap.12,

We anſwere. Firſt,as Peter confeſſed in the name of all the reſt, ſo this power is giuen him not onely for the reſt (as the Rhemiſts falſely charge vs,that we make Peter a proctor for others) but togither with the reſt. Peters perſon muſt be excluded: for immediatly after he deſerued for a certaine ſlip of his perſon to be called Sathan: it were an vnfit match, the ſame perſon at the ſame time to be honoured with the glorious title of the rocke of Chriſt, and to ſuſtaine ſo great a rebuke as to be called Sathan. Secondly,here is no more promiſed to Peter then vnto all the reſt of the Apoſtles,Matth.18.18. They likewiſe haue authoritie giuen them to binde and looſe;and it is performed to them all alike,Ioh.20.23.

2 By the keyes here cannot be vnderſtoode that large iuriſdiction which the Papiſts dreame of,as not onely the authoritie and chaire of doctrine,iudgement,knowledge,diſcretion betweene true and falſe doctrine, all which we graunt together with Peter to haue been giuen to all the Apoſtles beſides: But,ſay they,hereby is ſignified the height of gouernement, the power of making lawes, of calling Councels and confirming them,of ordayning Biſhops and Paſtors,finally to diſpenſe the goods of the Church ſpirituall and temporall: All this is added without ground, neither had either Peter or any of the Apoſtles this ample authoritie,no nor the Biſhops of Rome for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt. For this plenarie power of the keyes, when they ſignifie a ſoueraigne and chiefe, and ſurpaſſing power, are ſo onely giuen vnto Chriſt, and to no mortal creature: He is ſaid to haue the key of Dauid, who openeth and no man ſhutteth; who ſhutteth, and no man openeth,Apocalyp.3.7.Fulk. Annot.16.Matth. ſect.13.

Laſtly,I will oppoſe the iudgement of the Fathers of Baſile, who alleage out of Auguſtine, that Peter receiued the keyes for the whole Church;and out of Ambroſe,that when Chriſt ſaid to Peter, paſce oues, the bleſſed Apoſtle tooke not charge of them alone, ſaith he, but togither with vs, and we togither with him,Fox.pag.675.

It ſhall not be amiſſe alſo to adioyne the opinion of the holy Martyrs,concerning the true ſenſe of this place: I will giue vnto thee the keyes,&c.

Firſt, Thomas Benet Martyr, he ſaith, that as well to the reſt, as to Peter: for Peter had no more authoritie giuen him then the other Apoſtles: or elſe the Churches planted in euery kingdome by their preaching,are no Churches. S.Paul alſo ſaith, vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles,Epheſ.2.20.that is,indifferently vpon them all,Fox.pag.1039.

Sir Iohn Bortwike confeſſor of the truth in Scotland, and condemned for the ſame; he alleageth out of Auguſtine, that Peter, when he receiued the keyes, did figurate the whole Church: for as Peter,all being demaunded,anſwered for them all, thou art Chriſt; ſo he receiued this power for them all,and in the name of the reſt,Fox.pag.1260.ſo anſwereth alſo Maſter Lambert Martyr, alleaging to that purpoſe the authoritie of Cyprian: reſponſ.ad articul.23.pag.1119.

Maſter Philpot Martyr ſaith, that Peter receiued the keyes in the name of the reſt: citing a place out of Auguſtine to that ende: Si hoc Petro ſolùm dictum eſt, non habet Eccleſia; ſi autem Eccleſia habet, quando claues accepit, totam Eccleſiam deſignauit: If it were ſaid onely to Peter, then the Church hath not this power: but if the whole Church haue this power, namely to binde and looſe; then Peter, when he receiued the keyes, repreſented the whole Church. 10. tract.in Iohann.Philpot. pag.1804.

For the meaning of this text alſo, let vs conſult with antiquitie: Concil. Aquiſgranenſ.cap.9. ex Iſidor. Cateri Apoſtoli cum Petro par conſortium honoris & poteſtatis acceperunt: the reſt of the Apoſtles togither with Peter receiued the like fellowſhip of dignitie and authoritie.

Synod.Colonienſ.ſub Adulpo: Medium 6.cap.1. vpon theſe words, Tibi dabo claues,&c. do comment thus: quam promiſſionem non ad vnum Petrum pertinere ſed in omnes apoſtolos tranſmiſſam alio loco dicit Chriſtus vbi inſinuat, Amen dico vobis,&c. Matth.18.18. Chriſt in ſaying to Peter, I will giue thee the keyes,&c. did not make that promiſe onely to Peter, but that it belongeth alſo to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Chriſt doth ſhew, Matth.18. Verilie I ſay vnto you, whatſoeuer you binde in earth, ſhall be bound in Heauen,&c. Thus alſo S. Hierome expoundeth this place, *lib.*1. aduerſ. Iouinian. But thou wilt ſay, Super Petrum fundatur Eccleſia,&c. The Church is founded vpon Peter: yet in another place, the ſame thing is done to all the Apoſtles, and all receiued the keyes of the kingdome of Heauen: Et ex aquo ſuper eos, and equally vpon them all the ſtrength of the Church is eſtabliſhed. So Origene alſo long before him interpreteth: *tract.*1.in Matth. An verò ſoli Petro,&c. Are the keyes of the kingdome giuen onely to Peter, and none of the bleſſed beſide ſhall receiue them? &c. Wherefore if this be common to the reſt, how not the other ſayings alſo, &c.

*Argum.*4. Other arguments they alleage for the primacie and preeminence of Peter, as Matth.10. He is named in the firſt place, *Bellarmine cap.*18. We anſwere, this myght be, becauſe Peter was the moſt auncient in yeares, or one of the firſt that was called: and ſo S. Hierome ſaith, asking the queſtion why Peter was preferred before Iohn, Ætati delatum eſt, quia ſenior erat: His age was preferred becauſe he was the elder. But howſoeuer it was, it is no great matter: for this order is not alway kept, as Galath.2. Paul nameth Iames firſt; Iames, Cephas, Iohn, ſaith he, verſ.9. the Ieſuites beſt ſhift is here to denie the text, ſaying; it ſhould be read, Cephas, Iames, Iohn: vnleſſe Iames be named firſt, becauſe he was Biſhop of Ieruſalem: Marke I pray you: Ergo, at Ieruſalem Peter was not before Iames, but next vnto him: therefore not prince of the Apoſtles. *Bellarm.c.*18.

Lib 1.aduerſ. Iouinian.

But for a more full anſwere as touching this obiection of the firſt naming of Peter: firſt I deny, that he is alwaies named firſt, as in the place alleaged: And againe it is euident, that the Scripture doth not perpetually obſerue the ſame order in ſuch rehearſals, as Apocal.20.19. The twelue Apoſtles are compared to twelue precious ſtones, whereof the Iaſper is the firſt, but Exod.28.20. where the twelue precious ſtones are named, which ſhould be ſet in Aarons breaſtplate, the Iaſper ſtone is the laſt: If the Iaſper for the dignitie thereof doe ſignifie Peter in the Apocalypſe, how is it placed laſt in Exodus? So then we may heere ſay with Origene who thus writeth of the order of the twelue Patriarches, Sciendum eſt, quod in ſingulis locis, &c. It is to be marked, that euery where, where the Scripture maketh mention of the Patriarches, there is great diuerſitie in the order: there is one order obſerued in their [1] natiuitie, another in their [2] going downe into Ægypt; another when they are [3] bleſſed of Iaacob; another when they are [4] numbred to doe any thing in the wildernes; another, when the land of [5] Canaan was deuided: after the ſame manner when the twelue Apoſtles are named, they are not alway ſet downe in the ſame order. Bellarmine obiecteth, that Peter euery where is named firſt, though the reſt be not ſet downe alwaies in one order, *cap.*18. Contra. So Ruben is the firſt named of all the Patriarches in thoſe fiue ſeuerall places noted by Origene. He is firſt borne, firſt entereth into Ægypt, firſt bleſſed, firſt numbred, firſt deuided: yet Ruben for all this was not the chiefe among the Patriarches: neither by this reaſon ſhall Peter be the greateſt among the Apoſtles.

[5] Ioſu.

Againe, ſay they, Peter ſtandeth vp in the election of Matthias, Acts 1. preacheth the firſt Sermon, Acts 2. Acts 15. Peter ſpeaketh firſt. We anſwere to the firſt: We denie not a primacie of order to haue been in Peter: but it followeth not, that he which ſpeaketh firſt, or giueth the firſt voyce, ſhould be the head and commaunder of the reſt. To the ſecond, we alſo graunt that Peter in zeale, promptnes and forwardnes, was not behinde any of the Apoſtles, but euen with the firſt: for in him was that ſaying of Chriſt verified vpon the woman: She loued much, becauſe much was forgiuen her, Luk.7. ſo was it with Peter, to whom Chriſt forgaue much, and therefore he loued much. To the third we anſwere, that by the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, Iames, who was (as they ſay) Biſhop of Ieruſalem, had the primacie there: how then can they now giue it to Peter? That Iames was the Biſhop of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, it is affirmed alſo by Steuen Gardener in his booke de vera obedientia, by the teſtimonie of Euſebius; and by Biſhop Stokeſly and Biſhop Tonſtal, out of Clemens Alexandrinus, who thus writeth: Petrus, Iacobus, Iohannes, poſt aſſumptionem Saluatoris, quamuis ab ipſo fuerant omnibus pene prælati, tamen non ſibi vendicarunt gloriam, ſed Iacobum apoſtolorum epiſcopum ſtatuunt: Peter, Iames and Iohn, after Chriſts aſcenſion into Heauen, although they were by him preferred almoſt before all other, yet they chalenged not that glorie to themſelues, but decreed Iames to be the chiefe of the Apoſtles: Epiſtol. ad Reginald. Polum. Fox, pag.1066.

There is another place, beſide theſe already alleaged, which our aduerſaries commonly obiect for the primacie of Peter: for that Chriſt ſhould ſay vnto him thriſe, paſce oues meas, feede my ſheepe, that is, rule and gouerne them.

To this anſwereth, firſt Walter Brute an ancient confeſſor of the truth: that Chriſt ſaid vnto him thriſe, feede my ſheepe: becauſe he preached chiefely vnto three Churches, and inſtructed them in the faith: namely, the Iewes, Grecians, and Romanes.

Doctor Tonſtal out of Cyrillus thus alleageth: that becauſe Peter had thriſe denyed Chriſt, whereby he thought, he had loſt his Apoſtleſhip, Chriſt by thriſe asking if he loued him, reſtored him to his office againe. pag. 1062. So in your decrees. p.2.c.6.q.1.c.10. Peter becauſe he denied Chriſt thriſe doth alſo confeſſe him thriſe.

Againe, S. Iohn Borthwike Knight condemned for the truth, ſaith, that to feede the flock of Chriſt ſignifieth not to beare rule or dominion ouer them: for in the ſame words he exhorteth all other paſtors to feede their flocke, 1. epiſt. 5. Whereby it appeareth, that either our Sauiour Chriſt gaue no ſuch authoritie to Peter more than to others, or that Peter did equally communicate that right to others. p. 1261. reſponſ. ad articul. 1. ſee the anſwere alſo of Maſter Bradford to the ſame effect, epiſt. ad Domin. Vanam, p. 1647.

The Proteſtants.

THat Peter had no ſuch iuriſdiction ouer the Apoſtles, as to be called the head and Prince of them: but that to them all indifferently were the keyes committed, and did all faithfully execute their Apoſtleſhip without any ſubiection of each to other, but ioyned the right hands of fellowſhip togither: we thus confirme it out of the holy Scripture, and neceſſarie arguments deriued out of the ſame.

Argum. 1. Epheſ. 2. 20. Apocalyp. 21. 14. The Church is ſaid to be built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Ergo, no primacie of power amongſt the Apoſtles, they all founded the Church.

Bellarm. cap. 11. Bellarmine confeſſeth that in reſpect of their doctrine, there was no difference betweene Peter and the reſt, for they all were firſt planters of Churches, they all preached the Goſpell by reuelation: But in reſpect of gouernment, they were not equall: they had chiefe authoritie committed to them as Apoſtles and Embaſſadors of Chriſt: But Peter, as ordinary paſtor.

We anſwere: Firſt, by his owne confeſſion the Apoſtles had chiefe authoritie as Apoſtles, but there was no higher authoritie or power then of the Apoſtleſhip. But as they were Apoſtles they were equall (ſaith the Ieſuite:) Ergo, there could be no ſuperioritie; for the calling of the Apoſtles was the higheſt in the Church. See alſo your owne decrees, where that ſentence of S. Cypriane is allowed, decr. part. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 1. c. 18. Hoc erant vtique cæteri Apoſtoli, &c. The reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame that Peter was, hauing the like fellowſhip of honour and power.

Argum. 2. To preach the Goſpell, and to haue iuriſdiction of gouernment, doe both belong to the power of the keyes: but the keyes were equally committed to all: Ergo, they had all equall power both to preach and to gouerne. That they all had the power of the keyes equally granted vnto them, we haue prooued before out of Matth. 18. 18.

2 Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth, that Iames was Biſhop and ordinarie paſtor at Ieruſalem, and ſaith with Anſelme and Thomas Aquinas, that therefore he is named firſt by Saint Paul, Gal. 2. Bellarmine cap. 19. Therefore at Ieruſalem Peter was to giue primacie to the ordinarie paſtor there.

If they anſwere, that Rome was then the chiefe citie, and therefore Peter being Biſhop of Rome was to haue the preeminence. To this we reply: that Ieruſalem was rather to be preferred in reſpect of place, which was choſen by the Lord himſelfe, to be the chiefe citie of his Church: but Rome through the tyranny and vſurpation of the Romans ouer other countries was aduanced to that dignitie, not by the election of God.

But Bellarmine anſwereth, that Peter was Biſhop of the whole Church, and ſo of Ieruſalem too. We anſwere, he now ſaith leſſe for Peter, then if he called him, as he was, the Apoſtle of the whole world: for it was more to be an Apoſtle than a Biſhop. Diuers were called in the Apoſtles times, epiſcopi, ouerſeeres, or Biſhops, that were not Apoſtles, as the paſtors of Epheſus, Acts 20. 28. Wherefore now he hath ſaid iuſt nothing: in ſeeking to aduance Peter, he hath diſgraced him, in pulling him downe from his high Apoſtleſhip, to the chaire of a Biſhop. See alſo your owne decrees, part. 3. cauſ. 24. qu. 1. c. 4. in gloſſ. Vnde cum omnibus Diſcipulis &c. Seeing that Chriſt gaue to all his Diſciples the like power of binding, and looſing, &c. Yet your owne maſter alloweth that ſaying of S. Hierome: Habent eandem iudiciariam poteſtatem alij, &c. The other Apoſtles had the ſame iudiciarie power, lib. 4. diſt. 19. c.

Argum. 3. Peter had no ſuperioritie ouer Paul, for they ioyned right hands of fellowſhip: and this allotment was made betweene them, that Paul ſhould be the chiefe of the Gentiles, and Peter of the circumciſion, Galath. 2. 9. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth. Firſt, they were ioyned as fellow-laborers in the preaching of the Goſpel: but Peter might for all this be greater in the office and power of gouerning. We anſwere: yea, but the text ſaith, that Paul only was not appointed to preach to the Gentiles, but he had the chiefe Apoſtleſhip. Now to the Apoſtleſhip belongeth, not onely the function of preaching, but the whole vſe of the keyes, and power of iuriſdiction. Ergo: in all reſpects S. Paul ouer the Gentiles had the chiefe Apoſtleſhip.

But leaſt any man ſay, that this was a humane compact amongſt themſelues, and Paul had his lot at Peters aſſignement: the text ſheweth, that the Lord himſelfe had made this diſtribution. For when they ſaw, ſaith S. Paul, that the Goſpell ouer the vncircumciſion was committed to me, verſ.7. So then the Apoſtles did but confirme by their conſent, that diſtribution, which they ſawe the Lord himſelfe had appointed.

Further ſaith the Ieſuite, the diuiſion was not ſo made, but that it was lawfull for Peter alſo to preach to the Gentiles. We anſwere, we grant it; and for Paul to preach to the Iewes; yet that diſtinction remained ſtill, that Peter was chiefe of the circumciſion, Paul of the vncircumciſion.

Againe ſaith he: but Peter had the more excellent lot, for Chriſt himſelfe firſt preached to the Iewes. We anſwere, wee deny not but that he had the firſt lot in order; for to the Iewes was the Goſpell firſt offered: but Paul had the larger and more glorious lot: the Church of the Iewes now decaying, and the Gentiles beginning to be planted in their roome. But howſoeuer it was, it cannot bee denied, but that Paul was chiefe towards the Gentiles: And therefore the Church of Rome might with better right haue deriued their authoritie from S. Paul, then from Peter: both of them they cannot make patrons of their See: ſeeing by their owne rules the Pope cannot be ſucceſſor to them both.

Heare alſo how notablie to our purpoſe S. Ambroſe expoundeth this place, writing vpon this verſe, Galath.2.9. Petrum ſolum nominat, &c. He nameth onely Peter, and compareth him with himſelfe; becauſe he had receiued the primacie to found the Church, and himſelfe was likewiſe elected to haue the primacie in founding the Churches of the Gentiles: yet ſo that both Peter might preach to the Gentiles, and Paul to the Iewes, if there were cauſe: for both of them is found to haue done both: and yet it is knowne that full authoritie was giuen to Peter in preaching to the Iewes, and full authoritie to Paul in preaching to the Gentiles.

Further, out of the ſame place, Galath.2.11. another thing commeth to be obſerued: that Peter was rebuked of Paul, and in ſuch ſort, that it appeareth there was no great inequalitie between them: for he doth it to his face openly, before all men, and at Antioch, in Peters owne Biſhoprick, as they ſay: Can it be now thought that Paul was any thing inferiour to Peter?

Cap.15.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere, that the Pope may bee rebuked of an inferiour, and ought to take it patiently, if it be done in zeale and loue.

Anſ. Firſt, we doe not ſimply thus conclude, becauſe Paul reprehended Peter, therefore he was not his ſuperiour, but becauſe of the manner, as we ſhewed: it was done in ſuch ſort, ſo plainly, ſo openly, without any ſubmiſſion or crauing of pardon, that there can appeare no inequalitie at all betweene them. Secondly, although they ſeeme here to graunt, that the Pope may bee rebuked, yet is it otherwiſe in their Canon law, which ſaith, that though the Pope doe leade innumerable ſoules to hell, no mortal man may preſume to reproue his faults, par.1.diſt.4.c.Si Papa. Fulk. annot. in Galath.2.ſect.8. And howſoeuer the Ieſuite counteth this a light argument, both Hierome and Ambroſe doe enforce it, and your owne decrees allow it, par.2.cauſ.2.quaeſt.7.c.33. Hierome ſaith: Paul doth reprehend Peter, becauſe he knew himſelfe not to be vnequall. And in the gloſſe Saint Ambroſe is thus alleaged: Which of them durſt reſiſt Peter, to whom the Lord gaue the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, niſi alius talis, but ſuch an other that knew himſelfe, by the confidence of his election, not to be vnequall.

This place in the ſecond to the Galathians is much vrged by ſome of the Papiſts themſelues againſt Peters ſupremacie; for S. Paul ſaying, that as the Apoſtleſhip of the Circumciſion was committed to Peter, ſo the Apoſtleſhip of the Gentiles was giuen to him: hereby ſheweth, that he knew no primacie of Peter ouer the Apoſtles, or the whole world, but only among the Iewes. This alſo manifeſtly appeareth, for that Peter, being ſent for by Cornelius a Gentile, durſt not goe to him without a ſpeciall viſion from God, Act.10. thereby declaring, that he had no ſuch primacie giuen him ouer the Gentiles: *Hac Tonſtall. in Concion. p.*1062.

Maſter Lambert Martyr groundeth diuers arguments out of this chapter 2. to the Galathians, that Peter was not ſuperiour to S. Paul: firſt, they ioyned with him the right hand of fellowſhip: Ergo, he was their equall and fellow. Secondly, Iames is named before Peter, which S. Paul would not haue done, who loued order, if there had been any ſuch preeminence in Peter. Thirdly, Saint Paul reproued Saint Peter to his face, which he would not haue done, except he had knowne himſelfe equall to Peter. And as Peter was here reproued by his fellow Apoſtle, ſo was he blamed generally of them of the Circumciſion, who contended againſt him, Act.11.2. And yet Peter did not alleage any preeminence or authoritie, or charge them with diſobedience, for rebuking him: Lambert pag. 1120.

Maſter Tindal holy Martyr goeth further, and ſheweth, that if there were any oddes or inequalitie at all, Saint Paul rather was of higher authoritie, then Saint Peter; becauſe he laboured and preached more than the reſt, 1. Corinth. 15. 10. and ſuffered more for the teſtimonie of Chriſt, 2. Cor. 11. 23.

Maſter Bradford holy Martyr diſproroueth the ſupremacie of Peter ouer the Apoſtles by this argument: The Apoſtles at Ieruſalem ſent Peter and Iohn to Samaria, to confirme them in the Goſpell, Act. 8. 14. Ergo, he was not their chiefe or head: for it had been an vnmannerly part for the members, to ſend their head in Embaſſage: Brad. in epiſtol. ad Domin. Vanam. p. 1647.

Iohannes Patriarch of Antioch, opuſcul. in appendice Concil. Baſilienſ. enforceth the ſame argument: Apoſtoli miſerunt ad Samaritanos Petrum & Iohannem; at maior eſt qui mittit, minor, qui mittitur: The Apoſtles ſent Peter and Iohn to the Samaritanes: but he that ſendeth is the greater, he that is ſent the leſſe. Ergo. It may bee obiected, Petrus miſſus eſt conſilio, non authoritate: Peter was ſent by their counſaile and aduice, not commaundement or authoritie: he anſwereth, that not Peter alone was ſent, but Iohn alſo. So then, as Iohn was ſent, in [illegible]e manner was Peter: the one had no greater preeminence then the other in this Embaſſage.

Argum. 4. Laſtly, what reaſon was there, why Chriſt ſhould giue the ſupremacie to Peter ouer the reſt? Chriſt was no acceptor of perſons: if he had been, Iohn ſhould haue been preferred, whom he loued moſt. If deſerts bee weighed, I thinke Peter deſerued no more then the reſt of his fellowes: Nay I thinke the wiſedome of the ſpirit, foreſeeing the queſtions that ſhould afterward ariſe in the Church about Peter, hath ſo diſpoſed, that this Apoſtles infirmities both in number more and weight greater then any of the reſt, ſhould be euidently ſet forth in Scripture. We will briefly runne them ouer, not to derogate from the bleſſed memorie of ſo excellent an Apoſtle; but a little to ſtay and bridle the prepoſterous zeale of our aduerſaries, who doe aſcribe more vnto him, then euer he would haue challenged to himſelfe.

To let paſſe the ſmaller ſlips and ſcapes of this Apoſtle, as his raſhneſſe in aduenturing beyond his ſtrength, to walke vpon the ſea, Matth. 14. Secondly, his vnaduiſed ſpeech in the mountaine, Matth. 17. Let vs make three Tabernacles. Thirdly, his ignorance, Matth. 19. in ſaying to Chriſt, how often ſhall I forgiue my brother? till ſeuen times? Fourthly, his impatiencie, as in drawing out his ſword and cutting off Malchus eare. Fiftly, his timorouſneſſe in flying from Chriſt at his apprehenſion. Sixtly, his curioſitie, Iohn. 21. in asking concerning Iohn, What ſhall this man doe? To let paſſe theſe as common infirmities: there are foure great faults which Peter fell into, much amplified, and ſtood vpon by the fathers.

1 He dehorted our Sauiour from his paſſion with theſe words, Maſter, fauour thy ſelfe, Mat. 16. and was therefore called Sathan, an aduerſarie to the death of Chriſt, and ſo to the redemption of man. Auguſtine chargeth him with great forgetfulnes, hauing made ſo notable a confeſſion of Chriſt before, and noteth him for ſome ſparkes of diſtruſt and infidelitie: Ille Petrus, qui iam eum confeſſus fuerat filium Dei, timuit, ne ſicut filius hominis moreretur, in Pſal. 138. The ſame Peter (ſaith he) which a little before had confeſſed him to be the Sonne of God, feared leaſt he ſhould die and periſh as a man.

2 In promiſing raſhly not to denie Chriſt, yea vnto death, whereas Chriſt had foretolde him of his fall before, Auguſtine noteth great preſumption: Petrus ex egregio præſumptore creber negator effectus, Epiſt. 120. cap. 14. Peter of a great preſumer, is become a deſperate denier. And hereof thus your owne decrees, par. 2. cauſ. 6. quæſt. 1. cap. 10. Petrus lapſus eſt, &c. Peter did fall, becauſe he preſumed of himſelfe, ſaying, Though other bee offended in thee, yet not I. But Origen goeth further,

Tract. 25. in Math. Non ſolum inconſideratè, ſed penè etiam impiè, &c. Peter ſaid not onely vnaduiſedly, but almoſt impiouſly, Though all men be offended, &c.

3 The third great ſinne was committed by Peter, in denying of Chriſt, and that thrice, yea with an oth, at the inſtance of a maiden, and in a very ſhort while, before the cocke crew twice, Mark. 14. 72. The Ieſuite anſwereth, that this was no hinderance to Peters primacie, but a furtherance and a confirmation of it. But whether it were a let to his primacie or not, let all men iudge, ſeeing it had been ſufficient to haue hindered his ſaluation, and deſtroyed his faith, without the great mercie of God.

Let vs heare Auguſtines iudgement of Peters fall. Some man may excuſe Peter, and ſay, that he did nothing, but as Chriſt forewarned him. What then (ſaith he) if Peter therefore did not amiſſe, Expoſit. in Pſal. 140. becauſe his fall was foretold by Chriſt: Rectè etiam fecit Iudas, qui tradidit dominum, quia & hoc prædixerat dominus? Then Iudas did well too (ſaith he) in betraying of Chriſt, for this alſo Chriſt ſhewed afore? But ſome againe may ſay: he denied not Chriſt, for he ſaid he knew not the man:

Tract. in Iohann. 66. Quaſi vero (ſaith he) qui hominem Chriſtum negat, non Chriſtum neget: As though he that denieth the man Chriſt, doth not flatly denie Chriſt. Chriſt alſo taketh away all doubts (ſaith he) when he thus ſaid to Peter, The cocke ſhall not crow till thou haſt denied me thrice : he ſaith not, till thou haſt denied the man, but me. Againe, Ipſe potius redarguit defenſores ſuos : Peter himſelfe doth confute his maintainers and defenders : Agnouit planè peccatum ſuum infirmitas Petri : Peters owne conſcience gaue him that he had ſinned, for he went out and wept bitterly. But if by this meanes his primacie was confirmed, he had occaſion to reioyce, and not to weepe. Yea he wept bitterly, his ſinne was very great : how then dare one of your ſect ſay with a blaſphemous mouth, Petrus non fidem Chriſti, ſed Chriſtum ſalua fide negauit : Peter denied not the faith of Chriſt, but his faith remaining ſafe and ſound, he denied Chriſt? The ancient writers durſt not ſo extenuate Peters fall, no nor Peter himſelfe, that wept full ſore, as theſe men preſume to doe. For firſt Origen thus amplifieth Peters fall, Non ad modicum derelictus, &c. Peter was not a little forſaken, to denie once, but he was abundantly forſaken, to denie thrice : firſt he denied him before all ; and againe he denied him not ſimply, but with an oth : thirdly, not onely with an oth, but with a ſpeciall denotation, I know not the man : Tract.35.in Math.

Copus. vide Iuel. pag 665. defenſ. Apolog.

S. Ambroſe goeth further, Hexemer.lib.5.c.24. Peter before the cocke crew falleth ; yea the third time he falleth, that you may know that it was not a ſlip only of his ſpeech, but that he was troubled in minde.

S. Hierome alſo thus writeth : de Vincul. Petri ad Euſtoch. What ſhall I doe, I haue denied my Lord and maſter? neither, as ſome thinke, haue I onely denied the man : I haue denied him to whom I ſaid, thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing God : I haue denied him whom I ſaw walking vpon the waters ; whom I heard with his call raiſing vp the dead ; whom I ſaw with Moſes and Elias, &c.

And your owne decrees : Decret.part.2.cauſ.11.quæſt.3.cap.85. The Lord ſaid not to Peter, thou ſhalt denie thee to my diſciple, but thou ſhalt denie me : wherefore he denied him, when he denied himſelfe to bee his diſciple : and what did he elſe but denie himſelfe to bee a Chriſtian? Such then and of this nature and qualitie was the fall and deniall of Peter, howſoeuer our aduerſaries goe about to ſeeke colours and defence for it.

4 The laſt fault noted in Peter was that, for the which he is reprooued of Paul, Galath.2. Tuſh (ſaith Bellarmine) it was a very ſmall and light offence. Yea, was it ſo ſmall a fault to conſtraine the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes? for this was the point, as S. Paul writeth, Galath.2.14. And Auguſtine ſaith, Petrus non obiurgatus à Paulo fuit, quòd ſeruabat conſuetudinem Iudæorum, in qua natus & educatus fuit, ſed quòd eam gentibus imponere volebat : Expoſit. ad Galat. Peter was not rebuked of Paul, becauſe he kept the cuſtome of the Iewes, wherein he was brought vp, but becauſe he would lay it vpon the Gentiles. Was this leuiſſimum peccatum, a ſmall tranſgreſſion? Saint Paul ſhould greatly haue been to blame, for rebuking Peter openly, and ſo plainly for ſo ſmall an offence, and ſhould haue done againſt his owne rule, Galath.6.1. But Peter did it of a good minde (ſaith Bellarmine.) Yea did? then he was worthie to bee excuſed, not worthie of blame, as S. Paul writeth. He might alſo doe it ignorantly and vnwittingly (ſaith he.) How can that be, ſeeing he was one that made the decree, Act.15. That no yoke ſhould be layd vpon the Gentiles, other then there expreſſed ; and now contrarie to that decree, he conſtraineth the Gentiles, Iudaizare, to play the Iewes. Theſe things doe not hang together.

Bellar. cap. 28.

The Rhemiſts ſay, that it was not an error in doctrine or iudgement here reproued in Peter, but a default onely in conuerſation : annot.Galat.2.verſ.11.ſect.9.

Contra. 1. One of your owne Biſhops Gelaſius, tom. de Anathemat. Vinculo, is of a contrarie opinion, Sanctus Petrus primus, &c. Holy Peter, the firſt of the Apoſtles, thinking that the grace of the new teſtament ſhould be ſo preached, that he depart not from the inſtitutions of the old law, did ſomething diſſemblingly, &c. and therefore his fellow Apoſtle doth worthily rebuke him. It was then an error in Peters thought and iudgement.

S. Ambroſe in 2. ad Galat. If Peter had diſſembled onely, it had been no error, &c. But this was the cauſe of the reprehenſion : Peter did not onely ſeparate himſelfe from thoſe with whom he had liued Gentile like, but he compelled them to play the Iewes alſo ; ſo that the Gentiles were ignorant which was the trueſt way. And your owne gloſſe ſaith, Decr.p.2.cauſ.2.quæſt.7.c.39. Par eſt à fide exorbitare, &c. It is all one to goe aſide from the faith, and by example or word to turne others from the faith : Ergo, this in Peter was an error in faith.

I will now conclude out of Auguſtine, as he alleageth out of Cyprian : Nec Petrus, cum ſecum Paulus de circumciſione diſceptaret, poſtmodum vendicauit ſibi aliquid inſolenter, vt diceret ſe primatum tenere : de Baptiſ.2.2. Howſoeuer it was, Peter, when Paul reaſoned thus with him, did not ſtand vpon his pantofles, and chalenge any primacie to himſelfe. But it is very like, if there had been any ſuch primacie in Peter of power and iuriſdiction, (a primacie of order we grant, as Cyprian in that place calleth Peter, primum, the firſt) that this ſharpe reprehenſion of Paul ſhould either haue bin ſpared, or elſe not done in that vehement manner.

It ſhall not be out of the way in this place, to ſee the iudgement of certaine Papiſts of great account count in their time, contrary to the opinion now receiued in the Popes Church.

Thus the Biſhop of Wincheſter reaſoneth in his booke de vera obedientia: The ſcholler ought not to be aboue the maſter: how could then Peter take that vpon him to bee chiefe, which Chriſt his maſter did ſo conſtantly refuſe?

That Peter was primus, that is, firſt and chiefe in number of them which confeſſed Chriſt, it can not be denied: for firſt he confeſſed, firſt he taught the Iewes: firſt he ſtood in defence of the veritie, and was the firſt prolocutor among them. A primacie of order wee graunt, but not a primacie of rule and dominion: he was firſt in order, but it followeth not therefore that he was the chiefe in dignitie: As it is no good reaſon, Paris is nominate the firſt of all Vniuerſities: Ergo, they are ſubiect to it.

Biſhop Tonſtal alſo in a certaine ſermon, vſeth theſe and ſuch like arguments againſt the ſupremacie of Peter. Peters perſon (ſaith he) could not bee the rocke of the Church: for then wee ſhould put another foundation of the Church, than Chriſt; which were contrarie to Saint Paul: No man may put any other foundation, then that which is put alreadie, which is Chriſt Ieſus, 1. Cor. 3.

So ſaith he, in the one and twentie chapter of the Apocalypſe, the new citie and heauenly Ieruſalem, is deſcribed by the holy Ghoſt, not with one foundation of Peter, but with twelue foundations after the number of the Apoſtles, plur. Fox. p. 1062.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING Peter his being at Rome.

THis queſtion hath two parts: firſt, whether Peter were at all at Rome or not. Secondly, whether he were Biſhop of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER PETER were at Rome.

38. Error. OVr aduerſaries would ſeeme to prooue it by theſe and ſuch like arguments.

Argum. 1. Out of that place of S. Peter 1. 5. 13. The Church that is at Babylon ſaluteth you: Babylon here (ſay they) is taken for Rome, from whence Peter wrote his Epiſtle, Bellar. lib. 2. cap. 2. de pontif. Rhemenſ. argum. in. 1. Epiſt. Petri.

We anſwere: Firſt, it is a ſillie argument for them hereby to prooue Peters being at Rome: for thus much they haue gained by it, that Rome is Babylon, and ſo the ſeate of Antichriſt, Reuel. 18. Secondly, there were two Babylons, one in Syria, the other in Ægypt, from either of which Saint Peter might date his epiſtle: and it is moſt like that he would keepe the common and knowne name of the place, that it might bee out of doubt what Church he meant. As for the name of Babylon, to bee aſcribed to Rome, though it were ſo myſtically, yet was it not ſo called: for why might not Paul as well haue written his epiſtle to the Romanes vnder that name, the Church of Babylon, as Peter wrote from thence?

Argum. 2. Againe, they alleage that ſtorie, how Peter ouercame Simon Magus at Rome, when he would haue taken his flight into the ayre, hauing made himſelfe wings, and by the prayer of Peter was brought downe againe and brake his legges, and ſo dyed: whereupon Nero being offended with Peter, would haue apprehended him; who being counſailed by the Church, would haue fled from Rome: but meeting Chriſt at one of the gates, and ſaying vnto him, Whither goeſt thou Lord? And he anſwered, I come againe to be crucified. Peter vpon thoſe words returned backe againe, and was crucified for the teſtimonie of Ieſus, Bellarm. cap. 2. 3.

We anſwere: Firſt, wee denie not that Peter was at Rome, but ſhew onely the inſufficiencie of their arguments: and againe, we moue ſuch doubts, as by them are yet vnanſwered, as afterward ſhall bee ſhewed. Secondly, concerning this ſtorie of the victorie ouer Simon Magus, they that doubt of Peters being at Rome, may alſo doubt of this, neither of them being neceſſarie to bee beleeued as articles of faith, but probable and coniecturall, as matters of ſtorie. For ſome part of Epiſtol. 80. the ſtorie is denied by Auguſtine, as how Peter faſted vpon the Saturday, the combat betweene him and Simon Magus, following vpon the Lords day after: and thereupon roſe the cuſtome of the Saturday faſt among the Romanes: Eſt quidem (ſaith he) hac opinio plurimorum, quamuis eam perhibeant eſſe falſam plerique Romani: This is (ſaith he) a probable opinion of many, (concerning Peters faſt) yet the Romanes themſelues thinke it to be falſe.

3 That concerning Chriſts apparition to Peter, ſeemeth to bee moſt vnlike of all, and ſauoureth ſomewhat of the popiſh Legends. Like vnto this are the tales of S. Chriſtopher, how he carried Chriſt, and how S. Gregorie had him for one of his gueſts at his table of hoſpitalitie: Such viſions and apparitions of Chriſt are contrarie to the Scriptures, which ſay, that the heauens muſt containe him till his comming againe. Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this meanes, wee doe compedes

Chriſto inijcere, wee fetter Chriſt in heauen. We anſwere, belike then heauen is a priſon, with the Ieſuite: God ſend all that are his ſuch a priſon at the length. Againe, Chriſt is no otherwiſe concluded and ſhut vp in heauen, then as it pleaſeth himſelfe, and as he hath appoynted ſo to be.

2 He obiecteth: that Chriſt appeared neere vnto the earth to Paul. We anſwere: Firſt, there is no ſuch thing proued out of the text, but rather the contrarie, that the voyce was heard from heauen; not neere the earth, but aboue, Act. 22. 6. Secondly, Paul heard a voyce only, he ſaw no man, neither he nor the companie with him, Act. 9. 7. 8. but onely a great light they ſaw ſhining from heauen, Act. 22. 6. 9. Therefore out of this place they cannot proue any ſuch apparition of Chriſt neere vnto the earth.

Your owne decrees alſo here are againſt you: Decr. p. 3. diſt. 2. cap. 44. Corpus domini in quo reſurrexit vno loco eſſe oportet: The bodie of our Lord, wherein he roſe, muſt bee in one place. And againe, Donec ſeculum finiatur ſurſum eſt dominus: As long as the world endureth, our Lord is aboue; that is, in the heauen: Ergo, not beneath in the earth.

Argum. 3. Peter died at Rome, his ſepulchre is to bee ſeene there to this day: Ergo, he was at Rome, Bellarm. cap. 3.

We anſwere: Firſt, it followeth not, if Peter were buried at Rome, that therefore he died there: for the tranſlation of the bones and bodies of Martyrs is no vnuſuall thing in your Church: As it followeth not, becauſe Iohn Baptiſts head, as you ſay, is to bee ſeene at S. Silueſters at Rome, that therefore he died there; ſo neither doth it follow of S. Peter.

2 Againe, how ſhall wee beleeue you that it is S. Peters ſepulchre, which is ſhewed at Rome; ſeeing you haue made ſo many mockeries alreadie, making the world beleeue, that Peters bodie is ſometime in one place, ſometime in another? Halfe his bodie (you ſay) is at S. Peters in Rome, halfe at S. Pauls, his head at S. Iohn Laterane, his neather iaw with the beard at Poicters in France, many of his bones at Triers, at Geneua part of his braine. You ſee that wee may as well doubt whether Peters bodie bee at Rome, as in any of theſe places. And ſuch as you ſee are our aduerſaries arguments for Peters being at Rome.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning Peters being at Rome: firſt, we doe not vtterly denie it, but onely affirme that he could not come thither ſo ſoone, as in the ſecond yeere of Claudius, and ſit there ſo long, namely, fiue and twentie yeeres, as they hold. Secondly, it may bee graunted that he was there, as a matter of ſtorie, not an article of faith. Thirdly, wee haue certaine doubts and arguments, about ſome circumſtances of his being there, which our aduerſaries are not able to anſwere.

Argum. 1. There is great diſagreeing amongſt the writers, concerning the time of Peters comming to Rome: Oroſius ſaith, he came thither in the beginning of Claudius raigne: Hieromy ſaith, the ſecond yeere of his raigne: other ſay, the fourth yeere: other, the thirteenth yeere: Damaſus would haue him come thither in Nero his raigne. This diſſention of writers ſheweth that the matter may be iuſtly doubted of, Fulk. in Rom. 16. ſect. 4.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere: No more doe all agree concerning the time when the world was created, nor for the ſtorie of Chriſts life, in what time euery thing was done when he ſuffered, and ſuch like: yet it followeth not, that thoſe things were not true, becauſe there is ſome diuerſitie about the time, Rhemiſt. 1. Pet. 5. 13.

We replie: Firſt, moſt of theſe things concerning the chronologie of Scripture, though it be not neceſſarie to ſaluation, yet by diligent ſearch may bee found in Scripture. Secondly, if they can ſhew any Scripture for Peters being at Rome, as we haue for the other ſtories, we will beleeue it, though the time perfectly be not knowne. But ſeeing the Scripture maketh no mention at all of his being there, and the time is vncertaine, we may worthilie doubt of it, much leſſe are bound neceſſarily to beleeue it.

Argum. 2. The ſtorie of Peters comming to Rome in the ſecond yeere of Claudius, his abiding at Rome fiue and twentie yeeres, his death and martyrdome in the 14. yeere of Nero, and the 37. yeere after Chriſts aſcenſion: we prooue out of the Scriptures to be falſe. For Peter was at Ieruſalem and in thoſe quarters round about till 18. yeeres after Chriſt: for Paul ſaw him there three yeeres after his calling, and againe 14. yeeres after that, Galat. 2. there is 17. yeeres, and one yeere was paſt before Pauls conuerſion: in all 18. yeeres: adde vnto theſe the 25. yeeres of Peters being at Rome, that maketh 43. yeeres: and ſo Peter ſhould ſuffer in Veſpaſianus raigne, and not in the time of Nero.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere: that Peter was at Rome ſeuen yeeres before the Councell held at Ieruſalem, Act. 15. which was in the 18. yeere after Chriſt: and that being expelled the citie by Claudius, with the reſt of the Iewes, he returned to Ieruſalem, and there ſpake with Paul, and after that went to Rome againe, and there ended his life.

This anſwere we ſhew to be very inſufficient. Firſt, Act. 15. 2. it appeareth that there was, as it were, a ſtanding and ſet Councell of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, of the which Peter was one: for the Church thought good to ſend vp to the Apoſtles and Elders, which were at Ieruſalem. Secondly, till the 18. yeere when this Councell was held, it ſeemeth that Peter had laboured onely or eſpecially amongſt the Iewes, of whom there were then but few at Rome: For (ſaith the Apoſtle) he that was mightie in Peter in the Apoſtleſhip ouer the circumciſion, was alſo mightie in me, Galath. 2. 8. Therefore Peter was not knowne to haue laboured vntill this time but in the circumciſion. Thirdly, afterward it is more like he went to Antioch then to Rome: for after this, Paul rebuked Peter at Antioch, Gal. 2. Fourthly, theſe are but bare coniectures of our aduerſares, and craftie euaſions without Scripture: but ſeeing we appoſe them out of Scripture, it is great reaſon they ſhould likewiſe anſwere vs out of Scripture.

Laſtly, it is but Bellarmines coniecture, & a very fable that Peter went from Rome to Ieruſalem to ſpeak with Paul, like to that tale, which Chriſtianus Maſſeus hath, Chronicor. lib. 8. of one Trophimus conuerted by Mary Magdalene, who going to Rome to ſee Peter, as he ſailed, his wife being great with childe died in trauell, and was buried with her childe in a rocke: whom S. Peter caried to Ieruſalem, and ſhewed him the holy places, and after two yeeres returning to Rome, found his childe playing at his mothers breaſt, who being raiſed as it were out of ſleepe, told her husband, how that Mary Magdalene had ſhewed her the ſame holy places, which ſhe had ſeene. I marueile the Ieſuite did not ground his conceite of Peters going to Ieruſalem from Rome vpon this fable: which of the better ſort amongſt them is reiected, as Eſpenſ. in 2. Tim. c. 4. p. 183. a.

Argum. 3. We haue diuers other obiections alſo out of the Scriptures: as firſt, that if Peter were at Rome, it is not like that Paul would leaue him out in his ſalutation in the end of his epiſtle, Rom. 16. ſent to the brethren. Our aduerſaries anſwere but very ſimply, that at that time, when S. Paul wrote his epiſtle, either Peter was not at Rome, or elſe Paul might write ſome eſpeciall letters to him by himſelfe, and this epiſtle encloſed in them: ſuch goodly coniectures they haue. But I pray you what needed S. Paul to haue written vnto the Romanes, if S. Peter, ſo faithfull and vigilant a paſtor, were continually amongſt them?

S. Ambroſe hereof thus writeth in his Commentaries vpon the 16. to the Romanes, Ad confirmationem Romanorum, &c. For the confirmation of the Romanes, all theſe, whom he ſaluteth, are vnderſtood to haue been there: but it would haue made more for their confirmation, if Peter had been ſaluted amongſt them, if he had been there. Againe, Ariſtobulus iſte congregator, &c. This Ariſtobulus, whom the Apoſtle maketh mention of, is vnderſtoode to haue been a gatherer together of the brethren: but Peter was a more principall congregator of them; therefore it is like the Apoſtle would haue remembred him, as well as Ariſtobulus.

Other places alſo of Scripture wee haue: as Philip. 2. 20. ſpeaking of Timothie he ſaith, I haue none like minded to him that will faithfully care for your matters, Coloſſ. 4. 11. Theſe onely are my workfellowes, 2. Timoth. 4. 11. onely Luke is with me: Ergo, Peter all this while was not at Rome, for Paul would not haue left him out of the number of his fellow-helpers: at the leaſt he would not haue commended Timothie, though he were a worthie young man, before him. That which Bellarmine anſwereth, is iuſt nothing: that S. Paul ſpeaketh in thoſe places onely of his domeſticall helpers, which did miniſter vnto him: when S. Paul ſpeaketh plainly of his fellow labourers; Theſe onely are my workefellowes to the kingdome of God, Coloſſ. 4. 11.

Another argument doth ariſe out of S. Pauls words, 2. Timot. 4. 16. At my first anſwering no man aſſiſted me: Ergo, it is like that Peter was not then at Rome, for he would not haue forſaken Paul. Bellarmine anſwereth, that he ſpeaketh onely of ſuch fauourers as he had in Caeſars court, that they would not make ſute for him to the Emperour. But this is a weake ſolution. Firſt, it appeareth by that which followeth, that they left him without helpe in his open Apologie or defence: they did not aſſiſt me (ſaith he) but the Lord aſſiſted me: that is, gaue me ſtrength to defend my cauſe: So that the word, aſſiſting, muſt be taken in the ſame ſenſe before, that they failed him in that, wherein God aſſiſted him, that is, in ſpeaking boldly in the defence of the truth. Secondly, it is proued by the diuers ſucceſſe that he had at his firſt and ſecond anſwering: at the firſt all left him, but at the next many were emboldened through his bonds: What to doe? More frankly to ſpeake the word, Philipp. 1. 14. Ergo, at the firſt they forſooke him, becauſe they were afraide to ſpeake the word.

I will for the ſenſe of this place be tried by your owne interpreters: as Eſpenſ. thus writeth; No man aſſiſted me, that is, as an helper both to defend me before the Prince, and to helpe the Chriſtian cauſe. And againe he complaineth, that he was forſaken of thoſe which might haue helped him: as there was a great number at that time at Rome of Chriſtians conuerted from among the Iewes, that might haue helped him. And againe, it was occaſion of great heauines to the Apoſtle, to be oppugned of ſtrangers, and not propugned by his domeſticals, but to bee bereft of all comfort, yea betrayed: in 2. Timoth. cap. 4. pag. 180. So then the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the domeſticals of Caeſars familie, but the domeſticals of the ſame faith; neither of not ſuing for him in Court, but the forſaking of the defence of the faith.

Theſe arguments, which we haue here oppoſed, are much vrged by Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, againſt Peters being at Rome: As becauſe, while Paul was priſoner at Rome, there is no mention made, that Peter all that while viſited him, who at that time, they ſay, was at Rome. Againe, S. Paul in his epiſtle to the Romanes ſaluteth many meaner perſons, then Peter was: and therefore it is not like that Peter was then at Rome; for he among the reſt ſhould not haue been omitted, but eſpecially remembred. Theſe and other ſuch places are vrged by that holy Martyr: epiſtol. ad Dom. Vanam. pag. 1648.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER PETER were Biſhop of Rome.

OVr aduerſaries would gladly bring it about that Peter was Biſhop of Rome, there enthroniſed, and ſate in the Biſhoplike chaire many yeeres, and after left it to his ſucceſſors. 39.Error.

1 The Romane faith was firſt planted by Peter, for he firſt preached to the Gentiles, Act.15.7. Ergo, he was the firſt Biſhop.

Anſ. Firſt, that Peter firſt preached to the Gentiles, it is contrary to the ſtory of the Acts: for Paul was conuerted before Peter ſaw the viſion from heauen, Act.10. before which time Peter made a great queſtion, whether it were lawfull to preach to the Gentiles. But Paul immediatly after his conuerſion preached to the Gentiles, Galath.2. therefore before Peter. Neither is there any thing to the contrarie, Act.15.7. the Gentiles beleeued by S. Peters mouth, as he ſaith, but not firſt. Secondly, that Peter firſt preached not at Rome, it is thus gathered: becauſe it is not like that the Chriſtian faith being ſpread farre abroad, could be kept from Rome the ſpace of 12. yeeres: for ſo long it was by their account, before Peter came to Rome. Againe, there were diuers that dwelled at Rome, which heard the Apoſtles ſpeake diuers tongues, Act.2. being ſtrangers then and ſoiourners at Ieruſalem: and Rom.16.7. he maketh mention of Andronicus and Iunia, which were in Chriſt before him. By theſe it is moſt like that the Chriſtian faith was firſt ſowed at Rome. Thirdly, it is more like that Paul preached at Rome before Peter: for when he came to Rome, he called the Iewes together, who ſaid vnto him, that they had heard nothing concerning him by letters, or from the brethren out of Iudea, Act.28.22. But if Peter had been there, Paul no doubt ſhould haue bin knowne at the leaſt by name. The Iewes alſo ſay vnto him, We will heare of thee what thou thinkeſt: and ſome of them were perſwaded by Paul; ſome beleeued not. It ſeemeth by this place that yͤ Iewes in Rome had not heard of the Goſpell before. But if Peter had bin amongſt them, who had an eſpeciall charge of the circumciſion, he would haue had the greateſt care of the Iewes to win them to Chriſt. Fourthly, though Peter had firſt preached to the Romanes, it would not follow that therefore he was Biſhop there: for Paul firſt founded the Church of Epheſus, yet they ſay Iohn was firſt Biſhop there: wherefore they ſhould gaine nothing by this argument, if it were true, but that Peter was the firſt preacher, and conuerter of the Romanes to the faith. Saint Ambroſe ſaith, Quia Paulus magiſter, &c. Becauſe Paul was appointed the maſter of the Gentiles, it became him to take care, to teach there where Chriſt had not been preached: in 15. ad Rom. Ergo, S. Paul preached firſt to the Romanes.

The Proteſtants.

IF we take the name of Biſhop generally for that office which hath the publike cure and charge of ſoules: in that ſenſe we deny not but Peter and the reſt of the Apoſtles may be called Epiſcopi, Biſhops, as Chriſt is called the ſhepheard and Biſhop of our ſoules, 1.Pet.2.23. But taking it ſtrictly for a Biſhop of this or that place, which is called Epiſcopus intitulatus, a Biſhop intituled, we denie that either Peter or Paul were Biſhops, Fox pag.15.

Argum. 1. Paul was Apoſtolus Gentium, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter of the circumciſion: therefore it is more like that Paul was chiefe paſtor of the Romanes, becauſe they were of the Gentiles, and part of his charge: and vnleſſe they can prooue that Paul reſigned ouer his lot vnto Peter, that he alſo ſhould be the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, as he was of the Iewes; Peter ſhould haue intruded himſelfe into Pauls charge, not in preaching to the Gentiles, (for both Paul might preach to the Iewes, and Peter to the Gentiles) but in taking vpon him to bee the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, which was giuen before to S. Paul.

Argum. 2. The Rhemiſts themſelues graunt, that the Church of Rome was founded both by Peter and Paul: Annot. in 2. Galat. ſect. 6. Biſhop Tunſtal a ſtrong champion of theirs, but varying from them in this opinion, ſhewed in a letter of his to Cardinall Poole, how in times paſt, both Peter and Paul were counted patrones of the Church of Rome, and principes Apoſtolorum, the chiefe of the Apoſtles. Euſebius ſaith, that Clement was the third Biſhop after Peter and Paul: Alexander ſucceeded in the fift place after Peter and Paul.

Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, epiſtol. 1. thus writeth: Romanam Eccleſiam beatiſſimi Petrus & Paulus ſuo Martyrio coronarunt: The bleſſed Apoſtles Peter and Paul, did crowne the Romane Church by their Martyrdome. Gelaſius alſo, Decret.de ſcripturis. Petro data eſt ſocietas beatiſſimi Pauli, & pariter ſanctam Romanam Eccleſiam Deo conſecrarunt: Vnto Peter bleſſed Paul was ioyned in ſocietie, and they together did conſecrate vnto God the Romane Church. If therefore the Biſhops of Rome challenge any preeminence of authoritie from Peter, they may doe it as well from Paul: for they both founded that Church, preached there, and both there ſuffered, Fox pag. 1066.

*Argum.*3. No Apoſtles were Biſhops: for they were diuers offices, Epheſ.4.11. he gaue ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome to be Paſtors and Doctors: Ergo, they were diuers offices, and the ſame were not Apoſtles and Paſtors or Biſhops, for both are all one. The offices were much different: Apoſtles were immediatly called of God, Biſhops and Paſtors were ordained by the Apoſtles: the Apoſtles calling was generall ouer the whole world, the Paſtors were obliged to their dioces and pariſhes and particular Churches: the office of the Apoſtles was extraordinarie, and but for a time; the calling of Paſtors was to endure euer in the Church. Wherefore it can in no wiſe bee, that the Apoſtles were Biſhops of any certaine places. Irenæus ſaith, that Fundata Eccleſia beati Apoſtoli Lino officium Epiſcopatus iniungunt: The Church of Rome once founded, the holy Apoſtles laid the charge of the Biſhopricke vpon Linus. Whereby it appeareth, that they onely retained their Apoſtleſhip inioyned them of Chriſt, *Tuſtal.ex Fox pag.*1066. It had therefore been contrarie to the commandement of Chriſt, who ſaid, Ite in vniuerſum mundum, Go into all the world: if they ſhould haue left their calling, and bound themſelues to any peculiar Church: Ergo, we conclude, that neither Peter nor Paul were Biſhops of Rome.

Eſpenſ.in 1.c.1 ad Timoth.

Tract.24.in Matth.

One of their owne writers hereunto beareth witneſſe, and ſheweth out of S. Chriſoſtome a treble difference betweene an Apoſtle and a Biſhop: Hic ſcilicet Epiſcopus per homines vocatur, &c. A Biſhop is called by men, is ſet ouer a certaine place, he is not alway certaine that he hath the ſpirit, &c. *Hom.*19. in Math. But an Apoſtle is immediatly called of God, Galat.1.1. he is ſent to preach, not to any one place, but to all Churches, as 1. Timoth.2.7. S. Paul ſaith, he was ordained an Apoſtle, that is, a teacher of the Gentiles. Thirdly, he is ſure he hath the ſpirit, not to erre: as in the ſame place, I ſpeake the truth in Chriſt, I lye not. And 1. Cor.7.40. I thinke that I haue the ſpirit of God. Wherefore it is euident, that the Apoſtles were no Biſhops properly ſo called: yet wee denie not, in a larger ſignification and vſe of the word, but that many which were but Biſhops were called Apoſtles: as Theoderet witneſſeth, They which are now called Biſhops, were in times paſt named Apoſtles: ſo Epaphroditus was the Apoſtle of the Philippians, Titus of the Cretenſians, &c. Sed præcedente tempore, &c. But afterward the name of Apoſtleſhip was left to thoſe which were the true Apoſtles, &c. Therefore taking the name of an Apoſtle properly, and ſo likewiſe of a Biſhop; we muſt of neceſſitie vnderſtand two diſtinct offices, not coincident, or compatible together: otherwiſe, as I haue ſhewed concerning the name of an Apoſtle, ſo the name of a Biſhop was diuerſly taken: for in one ſenſe Chriſt onely is called our Biſhop, 1. Pet.2.23. As Origen alſo noteth, Proprie Epiſcopus Dominus Ieſus, Our Lord Chriſt is properly our Biſhop. So the Apoſtles in a larger vſe of this name may bee called Biſhops: but as it is taken commonly for the ruler or ouerſeer of ſome particular Church, it can no way agree to the Apoſtles.

Fox. p.910.

Let vs ſee the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Iulianus Leuille Martyr at Sanſerre in France, anno 1554. denieth that Peter was euer Pope or Biſhop of Rome.

Maſter Bradford holy Martyr ſaith, It doth no more follow, Peter dyed at Rome, or Peters chaire was at Rome: Ergo, he was Biſhop there, and the ſeate of the primacie muſt needes therefore be at Rome; then this followeth, Moſes and Aaron firſt exerciſed their offices vnto their death in the wilderneſſe: Ergo, the wilderneſſe was the place of their prieſthood: or therefore the principalleſt place of the Iewiſh Church ſhould be in the wilderneſſe, Epiſt.ad Dom.Vanam. 1647.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, WHETHER THE Biſhop of Rome be the true ſucceſſor of S. Peter.

The Papiſts.

40.Error.

THey doe generally hold, that the Biſhops of Rome being lineally deſcended by ſucceſſion from Peter, haue the ſame primacie, Apoſtolike authoritie, and iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, which Peter had, *Bellarm.lib.*2.*de pont.c.*12.

Bellarm.c.12.

They are very barren and ſcant of arguments in this place to maintaine and vphold this ſucceſſion by, and in the end the Ieſuite runneth to tradition: and at the length he thus concludeth; that it is not, de iure diuino, it is not neceſſarie by the law of God, that the Romane Biſhop ſhould be Peters ſucceſſor: but it dependeth onely vpon the ordinance of Peter, and is prooued by tradition, not diduced out of Scripture. That it was neceſſarie for Peter to haue a ſucceſſor, they ſay, it is prooued out of Scripture: which we alſo graunt, that all faithfull Paſtors and Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, though they haue not their plenarie and Apoſtolike power: but that the Pope ought to be and is his ſucceſſor, it ſtandeth vpon tradition.

We ſee then the grounds of their opinion; Scripture they haue none but blinde tradition: vnleſſe therefore they could bring better ſtuffe for the Papall ſucceſſion, we will not ſpend any time in confuting nothing.

Yet Bellarmine ſeemeth thus to reaſon: A ſucceſſion in the Church is now neceſſarie in the new Teſtament, as Aaron had his ſucceſſion in the old Teſtament: but there can bee no certaine ſucceſſion now ſhewed, but in the chaire of Peter at Rome: Ergo, the Biſhops of Rome are the true ſucceſſors of Peter. For either at Antioch muſt the ſucceſſion of Peter bee, or at Rome; but not at Antioch, becauſe S. Peter remoued from thence to Rome, and there dyed, Bellar. cap. 12.

Anſw. Firſt, a locall, perſonall, and lineall ſucceſſion is not now needfull, as before vnder the law: the true worſhip of God is not now tied to perſon or place, as our Sauiour ſheweth, Ioh. 4. 21. God will be worſhipped, neither in this mountaine, nor at Ieruſalem: and by the ſame reaſon, neither at Rome, &c. Secondly, yet a ſucceſſion of doctrine, and of faithfull paſtors wee graunt, and the Church was neuer without: ſuch as the Prophet ſpeaketh of, Eſay 59. 21. My ſpirit, that is vpon thee, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeede, &c. and in this ſenſe all faithfull Biſhops doe ſucceede the Apoſtles. Concil. Aquiſgr. c. 10. Iſidor. Apoſtolis decedentibus, &c. The Apoſtles deceaſing, Biſhops haue ſucceeded, being appointed thorough the world in the ſeates of the Apoſtles. Yea S. Hierome doubteth not to ſay, that not onely Biſhops, but all other faithfull Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: ad Heliodor. Abſit vt de his, &c. God forbid I ſhould iudge ſiniſterly of them, qui Apoſtolico gradui ſuccedentes, which ſucceeding the degree of the Apoſtles, doe conſecrate the bodie of Chriſt, &c. Thirdly, there may be ſhewed a ſucceſſion to this day in Conſtantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Epheſus, as afterward ſhal appeare, and not only at Rome. Fourthly, the death of Chriſt the chiefe Biſhop is more forcible to priuiledge Ieruſalem for the chiefe ſeate, than the death of Peter at Rome maketh for the preeminence of that See before Antioch.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope or Biſhop of Rompe neither can, is, or ought to be S. Peters ſucceſſor, in his high and Apoſtolike authoritie, primacie, and iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, which Peter himſelfe neuer had: thus we declare it.

Argum. 1. The Pope, though he were Peters ſucceſſor, yet can he not receiue that from him, which he neuer had: but Peter had neuer any ſuch primacie of power, as wee haue ſhewed before, Queſt. 1. 2. Ergo, he is not herein his ſucceſſor.

Argum. 2. That primacie which Peter had, could not bee conueied to any other: namely, his primacie of confeſſion, which he firſt of all the Apoſtles did vtter concerning Chriſt, proceeding from faith, did adhere ſo to his perſon, that it could not be deriued to any ſucceſſor of his: for Peters faith was a proper adiunct to himſelfe, Argument. Tonſtalli, Fox p. 1066.

Againe, how can he haue the Apoſtolike authoritie being not an Apoſtle: but an Apoſtle he is not: for Chriſt only made Apoſtles, the Apoſtles did not ordaine other Apoſtles, Argum. Nili.

To this Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt by a diſtinction, that whereas three things are to be conſidered in an Apoſtle: firſt, that he be immediatly called of God, and inſpired to write Scripture: the ſecond, to be a founder of the Churches, where none were before: thirdly, that he haue authoritie ouer the whole Church. The firſt (ſaith he) agreeth not to the Pope, but the two other doe: for by the Pope many Churches haue been planted, and he hath authoritie ouer the whole Church, as Peters ſucceſſor, &c. Bellar. cap. 12. reſp. ad obiect. 2. Nili.

Anſw. Firſt, there bee other properties required in an Apoſtle beſide theſe, as I ſhewed before out of Chryſoſtome, whereof none agree to the Pope. Secondly, to admit theſe three conditions named by the Ieſuite, if they bee all neceſſarie to make an Apoſtle, then the Pope wanting one of them, by his confeſſion, can be no Apoſtle. Thirdly, wee denie, that either the Pope hath founded any Churches ſince the Apoſtles times, he hath peruerted many nations, conuerted none; neither are the Popes much giuen to preaching, whereby nations are begotten vnto the faith: either that he hath ſuch vniuerſall authoritie ouer the whole Church, which is the thing in queſtion. For he calling himſelfe Biſhop of Rome, and ſo fixing his chaire in a certaine place, can bee no Apoſtle: for the Apoſtles were no Biſhops of one place more then another, as I haue ſhewed, but were ſent to preach to all the world.

Secondly, he anſwereth, that not the Apoſtles, but Chriſt did conſtitute the Biſhop of Rome, to be the Apoſtolike and vniuerſall Biſhop of the whole Church.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtles were immediatly called of Chriſt; then if the Pope be of Chriſts making an Apoſtle, he muſt ſhew his immediate calling in Scripture. Secondly, Bellarmine forgetteth himſelfe: for a little before he ſaid that the Biſhop of Rome is Peters ſucceſſor; by Peters fact, not by the inſtitution of Chriſt.

3 He ſucceedeth not Peter rightly in place: for ſeeing Peter ſate at Antioch; why may not that Church challenge ſucceſſion, as well as Rome? Why might not alſo other Churches haue Apoſtolike ſucceſſion,as Alexandria from Peter and Marke,Ieruſalem from Iames, Conſtantinople from Andrew?

Further,they haue no certaine ſucceſſion from Peter: Tertullian maketh Clement the next ſucceſſor to Peter. Optatus firſt nameth Linus,then Clement: Irenaus after Peter,placed Linus,and Cletus,and Clement in the fourth. What certaintie therefore can they haue of ſo vncertaine ſucceſſion? *Fulk.annot.in Rom.*16.*ſect.*4.

Fox.pag.1120.

4 It skilleth not who commeth in the place and roume of the Apoſtles:They that will be their true ſucceſſors, muſt follow their example, and walke in their ſteps, teaching their doctrine and embracing their holy vertues. Wherefore the Pope is not Peters right ſucceſſor, ſwaruing both from his doctrine and example. Non ſanctorum filij ſunt,qui tenent loca ſanctorum,ſed qui exercent opera eorum: They are not the children of the Saints, which occupie the ſame places, but they which doe their workes, Lambert. So Bernard writing to Eugenius, chargeth him, that in reſpect of his pompe and pride,he did rather ſucceede Conſtantine,then Peter, *Iohann.Huſſ.*pag.610.

5 All good Biſhops and Paſtors are as well the Apoſtles ſucceſſors,as the Pope; nay rather then he,being a wicked man, *Iohn Huſſ.articul.*4.Fox.pag.590.Lambert pag.1120.Nay,they haue greater and more excellent titles, then to be called the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: for thoſe that walke in obedience vnto Gods commandements, our Sauiour calleth them, his ſiſters, kinsfolkes and brethren,Matth.12.50.Ergo,the Pope is not the right ſucceſſor of Peter.

Cap.de præcept.eccleſ. artic.9.B.

Laſtly,of this matter Auguſtine thus writeth: Cathedra tibi quid fecit eccleſia Romana, in qua Petrus ſedit; & in qua hodie Anaſtaſius ſedet: vel eccleſia Hieroſolymitana, in qua Iacobus ſedit, & in qua hodie Iohannes ſedet? What hath the See of Rome done vnto thee,wherein ſometime Peter ſate,and where Anaſtaſius now ſitteth? or what hath the Church or chaire of Ieruſalem committed,where ſometime Iames ſate, and Iohn now ſitteth? In thoſe words Auguſtine aſcribeth as much to the ſucceſſion of other Apoſtolicall Churches, as he doth to the ſucceſſion of the Biſhops of Rome. And therefore Caniſius craftily leaueth out the one halfe of the ſentence, concerning the Church of Ieruſalem.Neither is it true, which our aduerſaries ſay, that Peters See remaineth ſtill at Rome, when all other Apoſtolicall Sees are gone: for euen to this day the See of Antioch ſtandeth and hath a Patriarch: likewiſe the See of Alexandria. The See of Conſtantinople neuer wanted ſucceſſors to this day: nor the Church of Epheſus: In India and Æthiopia,there hath been alwayes a ſucceſſion in thoſe Churches planted by the Apoſtles, and is at this day, Fulk 2. *Theſſ.*2.*ſect.*7. Wherefore they haue no cauſe to bragge of their ſucceſſion,which is found in other places,as well as at Rome.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie: *Clement. Epiſtol.*1. Peter is brought in ſpeaking thus, Hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino,cui ſoli meæ prædicationis & doctrinæ cathedram trado. I ordaine this mā (namely Clement) to be your Biſhop,to whom only I deliuer my chaire of preaching and doctrine. Alſo in the ſame Epiſtle, Poſt me non imperitus aliquis aut indoctus, aut ignorans verbi diuini myſterium,ſuſcipiat cathedram meam: After me, let no vnskilfull or vnlearned man, or ignorant in the word, take my chaire.In this Clementine Epiſtle, (which though it force not vs, becauſe we holde it forged,yet it preſſeth our aduerſaries,being of them receiued) we ſee that he onely is Peters ſucceſſor, who ſucceedeth him in doctrine.

Pope Felix alſo thus writeth ad Petrum Antiochen. Qui participes Apoſtoli eſſe volunt, ducuntur & doctrina ipſius: They that will be partakers of the Apoſtleſhip, muſt follow the Apoſtles doctrine. But the Pope doth not embrace the Apoſtles doctrine: Ergo, he is not Apoſtolike. So alſo Symmachus,as he is alleaged in the decrees, *decr.p.*1.*diſt.*40.*cap.*1. Petrus hæreditatem innocentiæ miſit ad poſteros: Peter did leaue the inheritance of innocencie to his poſteritie: the Biſhops of Rome then, hauing loſt Peters innocencie,are not the rightfull heires of Peter.

Iohn Huſſe dyed for this article with others, for ſaying, Papa non eſt verus Petri ſucceſſor, ſi viuit moribus contrarijs Petro: The Pope is not the true ſucceſſor of Peter, if he be of contrarie manners in his life to Peter. *Articul.*14.obiect.Concil.Conſtantienſ.

THE FIFT QVESTION CONCERNING the primacie of the See of Rome.

THis queſtion hath diuers parts, which muſt be handled in their order. Firſt, whether the Biſhop of Rome haue authoritie ouer other Biſhops. Secondly, whether appeales ought to be made to Rome from other countries. Thirdly, whether the Pope be ſubiect to the iudgement of any.Fourthly,whether he may be depoſed.Fiftly,what primacie he hath ouer other Churches,and how it began.Sixtly,of the titles and names giuen to the Biſhops of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE BISHOP of Rome hath authoritie ouer other Biſhops.

The Papiſts.

41.Error. THey doubt not to ſay, that the Biſhop of Rome hath authoritie and ought ſo to haue, to ordain and conſtitute Biſhops, to depriue and depoſe them, to reſtore them likewiſe to their former dignities,and this power he exerciſeth ouer the vniuerſall Church.

Bellarm.lib.2. de Rom.pont. cap.18. *Argum.*1. The Ieſuites principall argument is drawen from certaine examples: how the Biſhops of Rome haue in times paſt,conſtituted,depoſed,and reſtored ſome Biſhops in the Greeke Church,as in the Patriarchall Sees of Conſtantinople,Alexandria,Antioch: Ergo,he hath power ouer all Biſhops.

We anſwere. Firſt,It was not done by the abſolute authoritie of the Romane Biſhops,any ſuch conſtitution, or depoſition, though perhaps their conſent and allowance were required, as Leo writeth thus to Martianus the Emperour, about the ordayning of Anatolius Biſhop of Conſtantinople: Epiſtol.54. Satis ſit, quod veſtræ pietatis auxilio & mei fauoris aſſenſu Epiſcopatum tantæ vrbis obtinuit: It is ſufficient, that by your godly helpe and my fauourable aſſent, he hath obtayned ſo famous a Biſhopricke. Whether was greater now, the helpe and furtherance of the Emperour, or the bare aſſent of Leo? Secondly, we denie not but that the Pope ſometimes, what by ſufferance of others,what by his owne intruſion,hath vſurped this power ouer other Biſhops: but this ought not to make a lawe: that which is once or twiſe done by a falſe title, cannot proue the iuſtnes of the title. Thirdly, that the Biſhop of Rome hath no ſuch authoritie, it appeareth by this, that he doth not, neither of many yeares hath conſtituted or ordayned the Patriarches of the Greeke Church: they came not vp to Rome, nor yet ſent thither for their pals as other Archbiſhops here in the Weſt parts haue done, and payed full dearely for them, being made ſlaues to the beaſt of Rome.

This appeareth notably in the Councell of Florence, Seſſ.25. for it ſo falling out, that Ioſephus Patriarch of Conſtantinople,who was there perſonally preſent, being an aged man,and wearied with long trauell, ſuddenly dyed: whereupon the Pope Eugenius the fourth, dealt with the Grecians very earneſtly, Vt nunc in ſynodo Patriarcham eligerent: That they would chuſe them a Patriarch now in the Synode: vt quem ſuffeceritis, nos confirmemus: that whom you appoynt, we may confirme,ſaith the Pope.The Grecians made him this anſwere: Se hîc Patriarcham eligere non poſſe, cum Græcis mos ſemper fuerit, in ſua eccleſia Patriarcham ſufficere, ſimulque conſecrare: They could not chuſe their Patriarch here, ſeeing it alwayes hath been the Grecians manner to chuſe the Patriarch in his own Church,and there to conſecrate him.See then,it was denyed to the Popes face, that he had any thing to doe with electing,conſecrating,or confirming the Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

The Pope indeed doth take vpon him to this day, to make Patriarches: aſſigning to one the title of Conſtantinople; to another, the Patriarchſhip of Antioch, and ſo of the reſt; but they haue onely the bare names, without either the dignitie or iuriſdiction of thoſe places: not much vnlike to a certaine cuſtome in the Emperours Court at Conſtantinople; the wanton Courtiers to make themſelues ſport, vpon ſolemne dayes were accuſtomed, aliquem è laicis inſignibus epiſcopalibus componere, qui perſonalem Patriarcham ageret: To take ſome lay man,and attyre him like a Biſhop,who ſhould counterfeit the Patriarch: which abuſe was reformed, *Synod.*8.*Conſtantin.can.*16.The like diſorder was corrected in the Councell of Baſile *Seſſ.*21.Turpem illum abuſum remouendum cenſemus, quo certis anni celebritatibus nonnulli cum mitra, baculo, ac veſtibus pontificalibus more epiſcoporum benedicunt: We thinke good that abuſe be remoued,that ſome at certaine ſolemnities of the yeare,doe take vpon them with a Miter,a ſtaffe, and other pontificiall veſtures, as Biſhops to giue bleſſing. Much like to theſe counterfeit Patriarches and Biſhops, are the Popes Patriarches,who haue nothing beſide the name and habite of Patriarches.

*Argum.*2. The Ieſuite with the reſt doe very much vrge a certaine place of *Cyprian.Epiſtol.*3.ad Cornelium: Non aliunde obortæ ſunt hæreſes, aut natæ ſchiſmata, quàm inde, quòd ſacerdoti Dei non obtemperatur, nec vnus in Eccleſia ad tempus ſacerdos Chriſti vice cogitatur: From hence ſpring hereſies and ſchiſmes, that Gods prieſt is not obeyed, and that one Prieſt or Paſtor at once in the Church in Chriſts ſtead is not acknowledged. Whereupon they would conclude, that the Pope ought to be this one chiefe Prieſt,and Paſtor in the Church: for Cyprian thus ſpeaking writeth to Cornelius Biſhop of Rome.

Anſw. We muſt vnderſtand that Cyprian at this time had to deale with the Nouatians, who both at Rome where Cornelius was, and at Carthage where Cyprian was Biſhop, diuiding themſelues from the Church,erected ſchiſmaticall Biſhops of their owne againſt the Catholike Biſhops: Vpon this occaſion Cyprian ſheweth, that there ought to be but one Biſhop, not ouer the whole vniuerſall, but in euery particular Church: for he complaineth, that this vnitie of the Prieſthood was not kept at Carthage, as well as at Rome: for thus he writeth in the ſame Epiſtle, Epiſtol.3. Caterùm dico, dico dolens, dico prouocatus, quando Epiſcopus in locum defuncti ſubſtituitur, &c. plebi ſua in Epiſcopatu quadriennio iam probatus, toties ad leonem petitus, &c. ijs ipſis diebus quibus ad te has literas feci, ad leonem denuo poſtulatus, cum talis frater à quibuſdam deſperatis & perditis extra Eccleſiam conſtitutis impugnari videtur: But I ſpeake it with griefe, I ſpeake it being prouoked, when a Biſhop is ſubſtitute in the place of the dead, &c. for the ſpace of foure yeares knowne and approued to his people, ſo often ſought for to be throwen to the lyons, yea and at that inſtant, when I wrote theſe letters to you, againe called for to the lyons: when ſuch a brother ſhall be impugned of certaine deſperate and damnable perſons, runnagates from the Church, &c. Who ſeeth not, that Cyprian here ſpeaketh of himſelfe, and not of Cornelius, who was Biſhop of Rome but two yeares and an halfe: and complaineth that euen in Carthage the right Paſtor and Biſhop was not obeyed? This place therefore ſerueth not at all for the primacie of the Biſhop of Rome.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope neither hath, nor yet ought to haue any ſuch authoritie ouer other Biſhops: but that euery one in his owne precinct and iuriſdiction, hath the chiefe charge: It is thus proued.

*Argum.*1. Peter was not chiefe, neither did exerciſe iuriſdiction ouer the twelue: Ergo, neither the Pope ought to doe ouer other Biſhops. The antecedent or firſt part is thus confirmed. The heauenly Ieruſalem, which is the Church of God, is deſcribed Apocal.21. not with one foundation onely of Peter, but with twelue foundations after the number of the Apoſtles: argument. Tun-
Fox pag.1062. ſtalli. To this purpoſe alſo he alleageth a ſaying out of Hierome contra Iouinian. All the Apoſtles receiued the keyes of the kingdome of heauen: and vpon them all indifferently and equally, is the ſtrength of the Church grounded and eſtabliſhed, *Fox.*pag.1066.

*Argum.*2. Till the yeare of the Lord 340. there was no reſpect had to the Church of Rome; but euery Church was ruled by their owne gouernment: afterward followed the Councell of Nice, wherein was decreed, that the whole Church ſhould be deuided into foure circuites or precincts; ouer the which there were foure Metropolitanes or Patriarches ſet: firſt the Biſhop of Rome: next the Biſhop of Alexandria: the third was the Biſhop of Antioch: the fourth the Biſhop of Ieruſalem: and not long after came in the Biſhop of Conſtantinople in the roume of the Biſhop of Antioch. All theſe had equall authoritie in their prouinces, and one was not to deale within anothers charge: Ergo, the Biſhop of Rome had not then the iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, *argument. Nili. plura Fox.*pag.9.

*Argum.*3. We will adioyne the teſtimonie of the fathers of Baſile, which were all of the Popiſh ſect: what haue the Biſhops been in our dayes, ſay they, but onely ſhadowes? might they not haue been called ſhepheards without ſheepe? what had they more then their Miters and their ſtaffe, when they could determine nothing ouer their ſubiects? Verely in the primitiue Church, the Fox pag.679. Biſhops had the greateſt power and authoritie: but now it was come to that poynt, that they exceeded the common ſort of prieſts onely in their habite and reuenewes. What plainer teſtimonie can we haue, then from the Papiſts themſelues?

We haue alſo the conſent of all antiquitie, the decrees of the eight generall Councels, that the Biſhop of Rome hath no ſuch preeminence or predominant power ouer his fellow Biſhops.

Concil. Nicen.1.can.6. Honos ſuus cuique ſeruetur eccleſiæ, &c. To euery Church be reſerued the honor and dignitie thereof, let the old cuſtome in Lybia, Egypt, Pentapolis, take place, Ita vt Alexandrinus Epiſcopus horum omnium habeat poteſtatem, quia & vrbis Romæ Epiſcopo parilis mos eſt: So that the Biſhop of Alexandria haue the iuriſdiction ouer all theſe Prouinces, becauſe the like vſe or manner remaineth to the Biſhop of Rome; that is, the Biſhop of Alexandria ſhall haue authoritie ouer his confines, as the Biſhop of Rome ouer his: not as Bellarmine doth odly expound it, let the Biſhop of Alexandria rule his prouince, becauſe the Biſhop of Rome hath the like cuſtome ouer the ſame prouince of Egypt, Libia, &c. for this were, idem per idem, to proue the ſame by the ſame: and the Canon ſaith, parilis mos, the like vſe: Ergo, Alexandria hath the like authoritie. But if Rome were aboue the See of Alexandria, their iuriſdiction ſhould not be like, but vnlike. And againe, let euery Church haue it owne honor. But if Rome were the commander of the reſt, the honor ſhould be onely reſerued to it, and to no Church beſide.

*Conſtantinopol.*1. the 2. general. Can.2. the former Canon of Nice is ratified.

*Epheſin.*3. general. Can.8. it was decreed, after that Zenon Biſhop of Cyprus had complained of the vſurpation of the Patriarch of Antioch, affirming, that they within the Iland did alwayes chuſe their owne Metropolitane, and that neither the Biſhop of Antioch, nec alius quiſpiam, nor any other did euer ordaine there: it was decreed, that Cyprus ſhould be exempt from the iuriſdiction of Antioch, or of any other Sea; and ſhould chuſe their Metropolitane themſelues: Ergo, much leſſe was Cyprus ſubiect to the See of Rome.

Chalcedonenſ. the 4. generall, action.16. they determine, the Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, Eiſdem primatibus honoris dignum: To be worthie of the ſame primacie of honor, which the Biſhop of Rome hath: This was decreed, though Paſchaſinus, and Lucinus the Popes Legates earneſtly withſtood it. And further in the ſame place, the matter was thus in that Councell diſcuſſed: Sedi ſenioris Romæ, propter imperium ciuitatis illius, &c. Vnto the See of the older Rome, becauſe it was the imperiall Citie, the Fathers did giue priuiledges: And by the ſame reaſon the 150. Fathers aſſembled in Conſtantinople being moued, Æqua ſanctiſſimæ ſedi nouæ Romæ, &c. Did aſcribe equall priuiledges to the moſt holy See of new Rome; thinking it reaſonable, that the Citie, which was adorned both with the imperiall ſeate, and Senate, ſhould enioy equall priuiledges with olde Rome, and in Eccleſiaſticall affaires to haue maieſtie as well as the other, and to be ſecond after the other. Out of the actes of this Councell three things may be gathered: Firſt, that both in this Synode, and in the ſecond generall Councell of Conſtantinople equall priuiledges were giuen to the See of Conſtantinople, with Rome. Secondly, that notwithſtanding, Rome for antiquitie ſake had the firſt place. Thirdly, that theſe two Patriarchall Sees had thoſe priuiledges by reaſon of the imperiall dignitie; contrarie to that, which Bellarmine beareth vs in hand, that Rome had the primacie ouer other Churches from Chriſt, and not from *Cæſar.c.*17. And yet beſide the authoritie of this Councell, in the Trullane the ſixt generall, Can.38. it was thus decreed: Siqua ciuitas à regia poteſtate innouata &c. If any Citie in reſpect of the ciuill ſtate be innouated and exalted by the princely power, that the order alſo of Eccleſiaſticall matters ſhould follow, that is, it ſhould be chiefe alſo in Eccleſiaſticall affaires, as in ciuill: wherefore it is euident, that olde Rome enioyed her priuiledges by the benefite of the Empire.

*Conſtantinop.*2. the 5. generall, action.1. the ſynode ſpeaking of Leo Biſhop of Rome, and Cyrillus of Alexandria, ſaith thus, Qui æqualiter, ab hac ſynodo, pro ſtatu orthodoxæ fidei honorati ſunt: Whom this ſynode honoreth alike, becauſe of the right faith: the ſynode giueth like honour to the Biſhops of Rome and Alexandria.

*Conſtantinop.*3. the 6. generall, which is alſo the Trullane. Can.36. Decernimus vt thronus Conſtantinopol. æqualia priuilegia cum antiquæ Romæ throno obtineat: We decree that the See of Conſtantinople enioy equall priuileges with the ancient See of Rome.

Concil. the 7. generall, action 2. Adrianus the Biſhop of Rome writeth to Tharaſius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, giuing him this ſtile, Dilecto fratri Tharaſio, vniuerſali Patriarchæ: To my beloued brother Tharaſius, vniuerſall Patriarch. We ſee then that the Biſhop of Conſtantinople had both the like ſtile and authoritie, which the Biſhop of Rome had.

*Conſtantinop.*4. the 8. generall, Can.21. Definimus, qui patriarchalibus ſedibus præſunt, omni honore dignos iudicandos: We define, that the preſidents of the patriarchall Sees are worthie all honor: and then are reckoned vp, firſt Rome, then Conſtantinople; after theſe Alexandria, Antioch, Ieruſalem: ſo that the See of Rome is but patriarchall, as the reſt: a primacie onely of order it hath, to be named before the reſt.

Thus we haue the conſent of the 8. generall Councels, to the which Auguſtine agreeth, Habet De Baptiſ. lib. 2.cap.2. omnis Epiſcopus, ſaith he, pro licentia libertatis & poteſtatis ſuæ arbitrium proprium, tanquam iudicari ab alio non poſſit, quomodo nec ipſe poteſt alium iudicare, ſed expectemus vniuerſi iudicium domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti: Euery Biſhop is priuiledged by his owne authoritie to follow his owne iudgement, neither is ſubiect to the iudgement of other Biſhops, as he is not to iudge them, but they all muſt be referred to the iudgement of Chriſt. See then in this place Auguſtine ſetteth Biſhops in the higheſt roume in the Church, and ſaith, they haue no iudge aboue them but Chriſt.

Of this iudgement alſo were the holy Martyrs: that the Biſhop of Rome had no ſuch ſoueraignty ouer other Biſhops. Thomas Benet Martyr affirmed, that the Pope of Rome was but Biſhop ouer his owne dioceſſe, and that he had no further power, Fox.pag.1039.

M. Philpot telleth Boner, that by the word of God, the Pope hath no more authoritie, then the Biſhop of London hath, Fox pag.1811. And he ſheweth further, how that Cyprian called the Biſhop of Rome his fellow Biſhop.p.1804.

The ſentence of theſe holy Martyrs ſealed with their blood, is of greater waight then many arguments: and by thoſe that loue the truth, ought much to be reuerenced, and had in great regard.

Now laſtly we will obiect againſt them the Imperiall conſtitutions, together with their owne Canons: for the firſt, *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*5.*l.*6. Honor. Theodoſ. Vrbs Conſtantinopolitan. veteris Romæ prærogatiua lætatur: The Citie of Conſtantinople hath the prerogatiue of old Rome. And *leg.*15.Leo, Anthem. Conſtantinop. Eccleſia mater noſtræ pietatis, &c. The Church of Conſtantinople the mother of our faith, and of all right beleeuing Chriſtians: And in the ſame place, the priuiledge of that Church, ante alios reſidendi, to haue the firſt ſeate, is ratified and confirmed. And whereas Bellarmine vrgeth the epiſtle of Iuſtinian written to Iohannes Biſhop of Rome, where he acknowledgeth Rome to be the head of all Churches: *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*4.*leg.*4. the ſame Iuſtinian tit. 20.*l.*1.

thus expoundeth himſelf, hauing giuen the ſame title of headſhip vnto Rome, Romam intelligimus, non ſolum veterem, ſed hanc regiam noſtram: By Rome we vnderſtand, not onely olde Rome, but this princely Citie alſo, Quæ melioribus condita eſt augurÿs: Which was firſt founded and built with more happie and proſperous beginnings. Thus we ſee that the Imperiall Citie of Conſtantinople by the lawes Imperiall was made equall to Rome. And their owne decrees alſo doe ratifie that Canon of the Chalcedon Councell, that Conſtantinople ſhould haue ſimilia priuilegia, like priuiledges to the Citie of Rome, decr.p.1.diſt.22.cap.6.

THE SECOND PART CONCERNING APpeales to be made to Rome.

The Papiſts.

42. Error. SVch, ſay they, is the preeminent authoritie of the Biſhop of Rome, that appeales may be made vnto him from all Churches in the world, and that all ought to ſtand to his ſentence and determination. For the proofe hereof they bring no Scripture, nor any ſound argument, but ſtand chiefly vpon certaine odde examples of ſome that haue appealed to Rome: which we deny not to haue been done: but our anſwere more at large is this, Bellar.lib.2.de pontif.cap.21.

1. One cauſe of theſe appeales, was both for that they which were iuſtly condemned of other Churches, found greater libertie and fauour at Rome, as Apiarius did, who being condemned in the ſixt Aphricane Councell for his deteſtable conditions, found fauour with Zoſimus Biſhop of Rome, who wrote for him to the Councell to be receiued againe. No meruaile then, if licentious fellowes, hoping to finde more fauour at Rome, did appeale thither: As alſo the ambition of the Biſhops of Rome did ſomewhat helpe forward this matter, who were as readie to receiue ſuch appeales, as others were to make them.

2 Biſhop Tunſtall doth anſwere very fully to this poynt, that, although appeales were made to Rome, yet was it not for any iuriſdiction that the See had: but this was the cauſe, partly for that there were many diuiſions and part-takings in the Orientall Churches, as alſo becauſe many were infected with hereſies, from the which the Weſt and Occidentall Churches were more free; they were content to referre the cauſe many times to the Biſhop of Rome, as being a more indifferent Iudge, and not like to be partiall, being no partie in the cauſe. Neither was their ſuit to the Biſhop of Rome ſingularly, but to the whole congregation of the Biſhops of Italie and France, or of the whole Weſt, as it appeareth by the Epiſtles of Baſile, Tunſtal.apud Fox.1067.

The Ieſuite alleageth the fourth & ſeuenth Canons of the Councel of Sardis, which he ſaith was a generall Councell conſiſting of 300. Biſhops: which ſaid Canons doe allow and authoriſe appeales made to the See of Rome, and there the cauſes to be determined, or by direction from the Biſhop of Rome.

Anſw.1. That ſuch Canons are to be found in the Councell which beareth the name of Sardis, we graunt: but that ſmall credite is to be giuen vnto thoſe Canons, which goe vnder the name of this Councell; we are led by theſe coniectures and likelihoods ſo to thinke. 1. Hoſius Biſhop of Corduba in Spayne was the author of theſe two Canons, who both might be partiall in behalfe of the Occidentall Patriarch of Rome: neither is much to be attributed to him, for his inconſtancie, becauſe he ſubſcribed to the Arimine Councell of the Arrians. 2. Whereas it is affirmed that there were preſent 300. Biſhops of the Weſt, and 76. of the Eaſt, Can. 21. we finde that there were of this number but 121. that ſubſcribed: for the Greeke went apart by themſelues, and it ſhould ſeeme that many Biſhops of the Latin Church departed alſo: this Canon therefore had not the conſent of the Greeke Church. 3. That there are diuers Canons forged vnder the name of this Councell, of the which it is like thoſe are, it appeareth by the preface to this Councel, where we reade thus: Sunt aliæ 40. regulæ, quæ per Oſium Epiſcopum Cordubenſem currunt, quæ titulantur tanquam 20. Epiſcoporum apud Sardicam, &c. There be beſide theſe 40. other rules, which paſſe vnder the name of Oſius Cordubenſ. which are entituled, as decreed by the Biſhops in Sardis, which the Grecians haue not, but are found onely among the Latines.

Anſw.2. We haue many decrees and Canons of better Councels, to oppoſe againſt this tumultuous conuenticle of Sardis.

Fabian Biſhop of Rome Epiſtol.3. Semper ibi cauſa agatur, vbi crimen admittitur: Let alwayes the cauſe be heard there, where the crime is committed.

Concil.Conſtantinopol.1.Can.4. Manifeſtum eſt, quod per ſingulas prouincias, prouincialis ſynodus adminiſtrare & gubernare omnia debeat: It is manifeſt, that in euery Prouince, a prouinciall Synode ought to rule and determine euery matter. Then what neede appeales to be made to Rome?

Carthaginenſ.3.Can.28. Placuit vt Epiſcopi trans mare non proficiſcantur: We thinke it good, that Biſhops ſhould not trauell ouer the ſea: that is, to make or proſecute appeales.

Mileuitan.Concil.can.22. Ad tranſmarina qui putauerit appellandum, à nullo intra Africam in communione nione ſuſcipiatur : He that thinketh to appeale beyond the ſea, let him not be receiued to the communion within any part of Africa.

*Leo. Epiſtol.*82.ad Anaſtaſium, Biſhop of Theſſalonica : he reproueth the ſaid Biſhop, for citing peremptorily one Atticus a Biſhop to come before him, and compelling him, iter aſperum & periculis plenum per inuias niues agere, to take a bitter iourney, and dangerous, through ſnow, and vnknowne wayes, in ſo much that ſome of his companie periſhed by the way. As this was a fault in him; ſo hath it been in diuers Popes, that haue cauſed many in the depth of winter, with perill, yea loſſe of life, to obey their citations.

*Conſtantinopol. general.*8.*can.*26. Liceat Epiſcopis prouocare ad Patriarcham, ſi crediderint ſe iniuſtitiam pati à Metropolitano, à quo litibus finis imponatur : It ſhall be lawfull for the Biſhops to appeale to their Patriarch, if they be wronged by their Metropolitane, and the Patriarch ſhall end the ſtrife. There neede not then any further appeale to Rome.

The Proteſtants.

THat appeales ought not to be made to Rome, but that all matters and controuerſies may beſt be ended and determined at home, where they doe ariſe : It is thus confirmed.

1 This matter was notably handled, anno 420. in the ſixt Councell of Carthage, where Auguſtine was preſent, with Proſper and Oroſius: To this Councell Pope Zozimus ſent his Legate with certaine requeſts, of the which this was one, that it might be lawfull for Biſhops and prieſts to appeale from the ſentence of their Metropolitanes, and alſo of the Councell to Rome : alleaging for himſelfe a decree of the Nicene Councell. The Councell of Carthage ſent forthwith to the Patriarches of Conſtantinople, Antioch and Alexandria, for a copie of the Councell of Nice, wherein no ſuch Canon was found, that appeales ſhould be made to Rome : but the contrary ; for in the ſixt Canon of that Councell, it was found how all matters, and all perſons Eccleſiaſticall, both Biſhops and others were committed to their Metropolitanes. Vpon this decree the Councell of Carthage drew out certaine reaſons why appeales ſhould not be made to Rome : Firſt, it is not otherwiſe to be thought, but that the grace of God is as readie at hand in one prouince as in another. Secondly, there is no need to ſeeke any outlandiſh helpe : for the partie grieued may appeale to a prouinciall or generall Councell. Thirdly, it were not equall nor right to appeale from the Councell to the Biſhop of Rome : for it is not like that God will inſpire his truth vnto the Biſhop, and deny it to a multitude congregated in his name.

Fourthly, no forraine or outlandiſh iudgement can be ſo vpright or iuſt : becauſe the witneſſes cannot be preſent, being hindred by infirmitie of ſexe, age, ſicknes, by whom the truth ſhould be diſcuſſed.

Vpon theſe reaſons the Councell concluded, that neither any appeales ſhould be made to Rome : neither that Legates ſhould be ſent from Rome for deciding of matters : And this anſwere they made to Zozimus firſt, then to Bonifacius and Celeſtinus, that in ſhort time one ſucceeded another. And for all the Biſhop of Rome his abſolution, Apiarius was againe called coram, and brought to confeſſe his fault.

Now out of the Acts of this Councell, and their reaſons alleaged we conclude, that it is not fit, conuenient nor reaſonable, that appeales ſhould be made to Rome.

The Ieſuite anſwereth, that appeales were forbidden to be made by prieſts to Rome, not by Biſhops. This is but a vaine ſhift, for the reaſons of the Councell are generall againſt all appeales. And one of Pope Zozimus his requeſts, which the Councell iudged to be vnreaſonable, and therefore would not yeeld to it, was generall, that it might be lawfull for Biſhops and prieſts to appeale from the ſentence of their Metropolitanes, and alſo from the Councell to the See of Rome : the Ieſuites ſurmiſe therefore is falſe, that the Councell onely prouided againſt the appellation of prieſts to Rome, and not of Biſhops, Concilior. tom. 1. Concil. Carth. 6.

But whereas Pope Zozimus is charged with forgerie, for corrupting of the Canons of the Nicene Councell : Bellarmine doth buſilie beſtirre himſelfe to preſerue the credite of his great maſter, and ſo the reſt of that ſide, but all to little purpoſe.

Firſt, in the 20. Seſſion of the Florentine Councell, where the Biſhops of the Greeke Church were preſent with their Emperor, Marcus Biſhop of Epheſus affirmed that Zozimus had corrupted the Nicene Councell; for the copies ſent from Cyrillus of Alexandria, and Proclus Patriarch of Conſtantinople contained no ſuch thing, as was alleaged by Zozimus, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould be called vniuerſall, or Oecumenicall Biſhop; and ſo concludeth that the Biſhop of Rome did ſend falſum decretum, a falſe decree vnto the Synode. Againſt him roſe vp Iohannes the Prouinciall, affirming that to be falſe that was reported of Zozimus, and that the Greeke copies were corrupted rather, for Athanaſius did write to Marcus Biſhop of Rome for the true copie of the Nicene Councell, which the Arrians had burned at Alexandria. But Bellarmine himſelfe reiecteth this anſwere, as vntrue, for that Marcus was not then liuing, when the Arrians (Athanaſius being expulſed) burned the bookes : and therefore Athanaſius could not write to a dead man.

And againe, if Marcus (ſaith he) had ſent the true copies to Athanaſius, then the copies kept at Alexandria, would not haue varied from that, which Zozimus ſent afterward. Thus Bellarmine confuteth the allegation of the Prouinciall, *cap.*25. therefore he hath deuiſed two other eſpeciall anſwers beſide. Firſt, he ſaith, that many Canons of the Nicene Councell are wanting, and theſe cited by Zozimus might be ſome of them. Contra. It is very like, that more Canons, then are now extant, were agreed vpon in the Nicene Councell, as Gregorie 10. ſent to the King of Armenia for a true copie of the Nicene Councell, which was thought to be all extant in that tongue: yet the Church of Rome neuer receiued but 20. Canons, amongſt the which, that of Zozimus cannot be found, ſo ſaith Stephanus one of your Popes, *diſtinct.*16.*can.*13.

Secondly, theſe Canons cited by Zozimus were not extant in the Councell of Nice, but of Sardis, which were both taken for one Councell, and of like authoritie; and therefore the Canons of the one might be taken for the other.

Contra. Firſt, theſe two Councels could not be taken for one, there being at the leaſt twentie yeares betweene; nor of like authoritie, the Councell of Sardis not hauing the conſent of the Greeke Church, as I haue ſhewed. Secondly, the Canons of the Nicene which are wanting, are thought to haue been inſerted into the Councell of Antioch, not this of Sardis, as Stephanus thinketh, *diſt.*16.*c.*13. And therefore they had better reaſon to miſtake that Councell, rather then the other for the Nicene. Thirdly, all that the Ieſuite hath ſaid, if it were as he affirmeth, doth but excuſe the Pope from wilfull corruption of the Councell, and imputeth it to his ignorance: but I will ſpend no longer time about this matter.

*Argum.*2. We can bring the decrees of a latter Councell, then this of Carthage: for in the Councell of Baſile it was decreed, that no actions or controuerſies ſhould be brought from other countries to be pleaded at Rome, which were more then foure daies iourney diſtant from the ſaid court of Rome, a few principall matters onely excepted, apud Fox p.697.

*Lateranenſ. Concil. ſub Innocent.*3.*cap.*37. Statuimus, ne quis vltra duas diætas extra ſuam dioiceſim per literas apoſtolicas ad iudicium trahi poſſit: We ordaine, that no man ſhould be drawne by letters Apoſtolicall (he meaneth Citations from Rome) aboue two daies iourney out of his owne dioceſſe.

*Argum.*3. This alſo is flatly contrarie to the rule of the Apoſtle, that appellations ſhould be made out of the Church a farre off. Is it ſo, ſaith he, that there is not a wiſe man amongſt you, no not one that can iudge amongſt his brethren? 1. Cor. 6. 5. Ergo, euery Church hath wiſe men ſufficient in it, whereby their controuerſies may be ended.

4 Auguſtine alſo thus writeth concerning this matter, *Miltiades Epiſcopus Romanus, non ſibi vſurpauit iudicium de cauſa Ceciliani, ſed rogatus imperator iudices miſit Epiſcopos, qui cum eo ſederent, epiſt.*162. Miltiades Biſhop of Rome did not vſurpe or take vpon himſelfe to iudge the cauſe of Cecilian, but the Emperour being requeſted, ſent other Biſhops, that ſhould ſit and determine the cauſe together with him. Out of theſe words firſt we note, that it had been vſurpation and preſumption for the Biſhop of Rome to haue taken vpon him the iudgement of this matter, not belonging vnto him, vnleſſe the Emperour had committed it. Secondly, that Miltiades did not ſuffer other Biſhops to ſit with him, as Bellarmine imagineth: but he could not otherwiſe chuſe, for they were ioyned in commiſſion by the Emperour, to be iudges as well as he. Thus we ſee what ſmall ſhew or colour of title the Pope hath, to heare or receiue appeales from other countries.

Laſtly, concerning the vnlawfulnes of appeales to Rome, we haue the full conſent and determination of the Clergie of England, in King Henry the 8. his daies, aſſembled then in the Conuocation houſe: in the which number of them which conſented and ſubſcribed, were Stephen Gardener, Tonſtal, Stokeſly, Boner, Heth, and other, which were Archpapiſts in thoſe dayes, with many other: In a certaine inſtrument therefore, whereunto they ſubſcribe, they proteſt againſt the Pope, for receiuing of forraine appellations in this maner: The Popes, ſay they, doe tranſgreſſe their owne profeſſion made in their creation: for they in their creation doe make a ſolemne vow and promiſe, inuiolably to obſerue and keepe all the ordinances made in the firſt eight generall Councels: among the which it is eſpecially prouided and enacted, that all cauſes ſhall be determined in the ſame prouince where they began, vid. plur. Fox p.1064.

Let vs ſee both the Imperiall and pontificiall conſtitutions concerning the inhibiting of appeales to be made a farre off.

*Cod. lib.*3.*tit.*23.*leg.*3.Diocletiane: Actor debet ſequi forum rei, That the plaintife muſt ſue in the court of the defendant; that is, where he dwelleth. And *lib.*2.*tit.*47.*l.*2. the ſame Dioclet. Quamcunque cauſam agendum, &c. What cauſe ſoeuer a man hath in hand, he muſt goe to the Preſident of that prouince, where they haue their dwelling, whom he impleadeth. Thus euen by the light of nature, this Heathen Emperour could ſee what was right and reaſonable in this caſe.

The Chriſtian Emperours alſo haue decreed the ſame, as *Conſtantin. Cod. lib.*3.*tit.*14.*leg.*1.Terminos prouinciarum non cogantur excedere: That widowes, pupils, impotent, and ſicke perſons ſhould not bee called out of their owne prouince, no not by warrant from the Emperour. And concerning Eccleſiaſtical perſons, Leo and Anthemius enacted thus: Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.31.Vt ſacerdotes cuiuſcunque gradus,&c. That prieſts, of what degree ſoeuer, ſhould not bee called to forren Courts. Which law is generall for all Clergie men, of what degree ſoeuer: which taketh away the Ieſuites cauillous anſwere, that it was forbidden inferiour prieſts, but not Biſhops, to appeale to the Court of Rome.

Their owne Canons herein are agreeable to the Ciuill law: Decret.part.2.cauſ.3.quaeſt.6.c.1.Fabianus, ibi cauſa agatur, vbi crimen admittitur: The cauſe muſt bee handled, where the crime was committed. And cap.2. Accuſatum non oportet alibi, quam in foro ſuo audiri: That he which is accuſed, ſhould not elſewhere be iudged but in his owne Court. Can.17.Sixtus, Si quis Clericus,&c. If any Clergie man bee accuſed of what crime ſoeuer, in the ſame prouince where the partie accuſed remaineth, the action muſt bee followed. Here is no exception made of Biſhops, nor any reſeruation for the See of Rome, as in ſome other Canons may be found. Thus wee ſee that the Biſhop of Rome in arrogating to himſelfe this authoritie to receiue appeales from all the parts of the world, doth therein contrarie to the Imperiall, and Pontificiall lawes.

Let the conſtant iudgement and practiſe of the holy Martyrs alſo bee ſeene: Iohn Huſſe being wrongfully condemned in the Councell of Conſtance, appealeth not from them to the Pope, but to the tribunall ſeate of Chriſt, Fox p.611.

Biſhop Cranmer appealeth from the ſentence of the Pope to a generall Councel: thereby ſhewing what he thought of appeales made to Rome.

Maſter Philpbot, when one Curtop obiected, how that Irenaeus went vp to Rome vnto Victor then Biſhop there, to aske his aduice about the excommunication of certaine heretikes, and therby would proue the Popes ſupremacie, and prerogatiue in receiuing of appeales: he anſwereth, This fact (ſaith he) of Irenaeus, maketh no more for the ſupremacie of the Pope, then mine hath done, which was at Rome, as well as he, and might haue ſpoken with the Pope, if I had liſt, and yet I would none in England did fauour his ſupremacie more then I, &c. pag.1803.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE POPE be ſubiect to the iudgement of any.

The Papiſts.

43.Error. THe Pope neither can nor ought to be iudged either of the Emperour, or any other Secular or Eccleſiaſticall Magiſtrate, no not of any generall Councell, Bellar.cap.26. Nay, he ſhould doe iniurie vnto God, to ſubmit himſelfe to the iudgement of any, Iacobat. ex Tilhemann.de pontif. Rom.err.34.

Beſide certaine blinde Canons and conſtitutions, and a few examples grounded vpon the inſolent practiſes of Popes, they haue no other arguments either out of Scripture, or drawne from reaſon, to confirme this their vnreaſonable opinion withall.

Argum.1. Bellarmine reaſoneth thus: The Prince is not to bee iudged by the common-wealth, but is greater then his kingdome: the Pope is the prince of the Church. Ergo.

We anſwere: Firſt, concerning the Princes high and ſoueraigne authoritie, we will not now diſpute: wee make it not infinite, the word of God muſt bee a rule and ſquare both of Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall iudgement. Secondly, it is ſufficient for vs here to anſwere, that the Ieſuite hath ſaid nothing: for this which he aſſumeth for a reaſon, is the greateſt matter in queſtion betweene vs; and ſo great an vntruth he hath vttered, that he is conſtrained to leaue Scripture, and ſeeke helpe elſewhere. But he ſhall neuer, by any good reaſon, or ſufficient authoritie proue, that the Pope hath any ſuch princedome in the Church, as he would beare vs in hand, or as the prince hath in the common-wealth.

Argum.2. Bellarmine alleageth a decree of the Sinueſſane Councell: Nemo vnquam iudicauit pontificem: prima ſedes non iudicabitur à quopiam: Neuer any man iudged the Pope: the firſt ſeate ſhall not be iudged of any.

Anſ. 1. By this decree the Biſhop of Rome is no more exempted from iudgement, then all Biſhops are by that decretall of Pope Pius 1. Epiſt.1.decretal. Epiſcopi à Deo ſunt iudicandi, ipſo Domino exemplum dante, quando per ſeipſum non per alium ſacerdotes ementes & vendentes eiecit è templo: The Biſhops muſt be iudged of God: whereof the Lord himſelfe giueth vs an example, when by himſelfe and not another, he caſt out the prieſts that bought and ſold out of the temple. But Bellarmine here hath found out an anſwere for vs: Epiſcopum non poſſe iudicari niſi à Deo, dico intelligi debere, in rebus dubijs & occultis: That a Biſhop is not to bee iudged but of God, I ſay, it muſt be vnderſtoode, in ſecret and doubtfull matters, lib.2.de Roman.pontif.cap.16.reſponſ.ad Cypriani locum: So we anſwere concerning the Pope, that he is left to Gods iudgement, only in ſecret matters.

2. Concerning the Councell Sinueſſane, notwithſtanding thoſe words which are thruſt in in

And againe,if Marcus (ſaith he)had ſent the true copies to Athanaſius, then the copies kept at Alexandria, would not haue varied from that, which Zozimus ſent afterward. Thus Bellarmine confuteth the allegation of the Prouinciall,*cap.*25. therefore he hath deuiſed two other eſpeciall anſwers beſide. Firſt,he ſaith,that many Canons of the Nicene Councell are wanting, and theſe cited by Zozimus might be ſome of them. Contra. It is very like,that more Canons,then are now extant,were agreed vpon in the Nicene Councell, as Gregorie 10. ſent to the King of Armenia for a true copie of the Nicene Councell, which was thought to be all extant in that tongue : yet the Church of Rome neuer receiued but 20. Canons, amongſt the which; that of Zozimus cannot be found,ſo ſaith Stephanus one of your Popes,*diſtinct.*16.*can.*13.

Secondly,theſe Canons cited by Zozimus were not extant in the Councell of Nice, but of Sardis,which were both taken for one Councell,and of like authoritie;and therefore the Canons of the one might be taken for the other.

Contra. Firſt,theſe two Councels could not be taken for one, there being at the leaſt twentie yeares betweene;nor of like authoritie, the Councell of Sardis not hauing the conſent of the Greeke Church,as I haue ſhewed. Secondly, the Canons of the Nicene which are wanting, are thought to haue been inſerted into the Councell of Antioch,not this of Sardis, as Stephanus thinketh,*diſt.*16.*c.*13. And therefore they had better reaſon to miſtake that Councell,rather then the other for the Nicene. Thirdly, all that the Ieſuite hath ſaid, if it were as he affirmeth, doth but excuſe the Pope from wilfull corruption of the Councell, and imputeth it to his ignorance : but I will ſpend no longer time about this matter.

*Argum.*2. We can bring the decrees of a latter Councell, then this of Carthage : for in the Councell of Baſile it was decreed,that no actions or controuerſies ſhould be brought from other countries to be pleaded at Rome,which were more then foure daies iourney diſtant from the ſaid court of Rome,a few principall matters onely excepted, apud Fox p.697.

*Lateranenſ. Concil.ſub Innocent.*3.*cap.*37. Statuimus,ne quis vltra duas diætas extra ſuam dioiceſim per literas apoſtolicas ad iudicium trahi poſſit: We ordaine, that no man ſhould be drawne by letters Apoſtolicall (he meaneth Citations from Rome) aboue two daies iourney out of his owne dioceſſe.

*Argum.*3. This alſo is flatly contrarie to the rule of the Apoſtle, that appellations ſhould be made out of the Church a farre off. Is it ſo,ſaith he, that there is not a wiſe man amongſt you,no not one that can iudge amongſt his brethren? 1.Cor.6.5. Ergo, euery Church hath wiſe men ſufficient in it,whereby their controuerſies may be ended.

4 Auguſtine alſo thus writeth concerning this matter, *Miltiades Epiſcopus Romanus, non ſibi vſurpauit iudicium de cauſa Ceciliani, ſed rogatus imperator iudices miſit Epiſcopos,qui cum eo ſederent, epiſt.*162. Miltiades Biſhop of Rome did not vſurpe or take vpon himſelfe to iudge the cauſe of Cecilian,but the Emperour being requeſted,ſent other Biſhops,that ſhould ſit and determine the cauſe together with him. 2. Concerning the Councell Sinueſſane, notwithſtanding thoſe words which are thruſt in in the end of the Councel,it is certaine that Marcellinus Biſhop of Rome,for ſacrificing to Idols,was iudged and condemned of the Councell, as may appeare by theſe circumſtances : Firſt, Marcellinus was brought before the Councell,and appeared foure times, twice denying his fault, and caſting it vpon others,the third time he excuſeth his fault,that he did not ſacrifice, Sed tantùm grana leuatis manibus ſuper prunas combuſſi : I did onely lifting vp my hands caſt incenſe into the fire : the fourth time,he falleth flat vpon the ground confeſſing his fault,and ſaying,Peccaui coram vobis : I haue ſinned before you all. Secondly, there were 72.witneſſes produced againſt him; for the Councell ſaith,In 72.comparentibus damnabitur præſul : A Prelate muſt bee condemned by 72.witneſſes. Whereto then ſerueth this ſtreight examining,the often appearing of Marcellinus,and the producing of witneſſes,if he were not iudged? Thirdly,and yet the thing is made more manifeſt; in that one Quirinus a Biſhop ſtanding vp in the Councell, ſaid thus : Infudiſti cor tuum pontifex malitia : Thou haſt(O Biſhop) filled thy heart with malice : propterea ego non recedam de ſynodo, donec purpureum cor tuum manifeſtetur : therefore I will not riſe from the Synode, before thy ſtained heart bee made manifeſt. And then it followeth, Ibi ergo iacentem & moram facientem damnarunt: They condemned Marcellinus lying vpon the ground. How can it be denied now,but that Marcellinus was both rebuked and condemned in this Councell?

Argum.3. The Rhemiſts thus argue,out of that place of the Apoſtle, 2.Corint.8.5.They gaue themſelues firſt to the Lord,then to vs : therefore (ſay they) the principall reſpect next after God,is to be had of the Miniſters of religion,in all temporall and ſpirituall duties,Annot.in hunc locum.

Anſ. It is true that the Miniſters of God, teaching according to his will, as the Apoſtle here ſaith,ought of all men principally to be heard : yet this excludeth not the ſoueraigne authoritie of the Prince ouer all perſons,to whom the Apoſtle elſewhere exhorteth euery ſoule to be ſubiect, Rom.13.1.The Apoſtle then in this place ſpeaketh of ſpirituall inſtruction, not of ciuill adminiſtration.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope, as well as other eccleſiaſticall perſons, ought to bee, and is by right ſubiect to the iudgement and authoritie of the Emperour, King,Prince, or other ſupreame Magiſtrate, and may alſo by generall Councels be corrected and cenſured,thus it is proued.

Argum.1. Peter was iudged of Paul,Galat.2.and of him iuſtly reproued : Ergo,the doings of the Pope may be iudged and cenſured.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that it was not iudicialis cenſura, but fraterna correptio, it was no iudiciall cenſure,but a brotherly reprehenſion.

We replie : Firſt, publike cenſure and reprehenſion is a part of eccleſiaſticall iudgement and diſcipline,therefore Peter being publikely rebuked, was thereby iudged alſo of Paul. Secondly, the queſtion is not onely concerning publike and open iudgement, but whether it bee lawfull to call the Popes doings into queſtion, and whether his decrees are abſolutely to be receiued without any ſcanning or diſcuſſing,or making any doubt thereof: for this we hold, that it is the dutie of all Chriſtians to examine and trie the truth of all things, which they are to receiue and to beleeue,though they ſit not formally and iudicially, as in Conſiſtories,to iudge their ſpirituall paſtors : ſo the Berœans iudged of the Apoſtles doctrine : ſo may the Popes decrees bee examined and iudged. Thirdly,the Ieſuite graunteth that the Pope may bee rebuked and brotherly reproued : but the Extrauagant denieth it,Non eſt,qui audeat dicere,domine cur facis ſic? None dare ſay vnto him, ſir why doeſt ſo?

Argum.2. Euery ſoule muſt be ſubiect to the higher powers : Ergo,the Pope,Rom.13.1. Bellarmine anſwereth,that the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh of all ſuperiours both ſpirituall and temporall: and therefore it cannot bee concluded,that the Pope ought to obey, but he muſt bee obeyed,becauſe he is alſo a ſpirituall power.

We replie : S.Paul in this place ſpeaketh onely of the Ciuill Magiſtrate. Firſt, he calleth them ἄρχοντες,Princes, which is not meant of Eccleſiaſticall or Church gouernours, nor ſo taken in any place of Scripture. Secondly,they are ſaid to beare the ſword. Thirdly,tribute is paid to them: thoſe things agree not to Eccleſiaſticall gouernours : ſo the Ieſuite is anſwered.

Thus Maſter Bradford holy Martyr ſometime anſwered to this place : Let euery ſoule (ſaith the Apoſtle) be ſubiect to the ſuperiour power: and he ſheweth what power,qua gladium geſtet,which beareth the ſword : which is not the ſpirituall,but the temporall power. And in the ſame place he declareth out of Chryſoſtome,how that Biſhops,Prophets, Apoſtles, ought to be obedient to temporall Magiſtrates,Fox p.1607.

Saint Chryſoſtome out of this place inferreth , that all men both Prieſts and Monkes, as well as temporall men, Whether thou be an Apoſtle,ſaith he,an Euangeliſt, or Prophet,&c. ought to be ſubiect to the higheſt power.

Their owne Maſter of the Sentences expoundeth this place of the ſecular power, Sciendum eſt Apoſtolum loqui de ſeculari poteſtate,&c.lib.2.diſt.44.c.

*Argum.*3. S.Peter alſo exhorteth, as the Apoſtle doth here, that they ſhould be ſubiect to euerie humane creature, 1.Pet.2.13.that is, to the temporall gouernour.

To this place, Innocentius 3.firſt thus anſwereth, as he is alleaged *Decret.Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*33.*c.*6. that ſpirituall perſons are not here vnderſtood: for by the ſame reaſon (the Apoſtle naming euerie humane creature, to whom they ſhould bee ſubiect) they ſhould ſubmit themſelues to euerie ſeruant.

Contra. Who ſeeth not how wilfully blinde this Pope is: for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of euery man ſimply, but of men in authoritie: as Bellarmine confeſſeth, Humanæ creaturæ poteſtatem habenti: For by that reaſon, not onely ſpirituall perſons, but temporall ſhould bee ſubiect to euerie meane perſon.

Secondly, Bellarmine vnderſtandeth, by euery humane creature, as well the power ſpirituall, as temporall, though a ſpeciall inſtance be giuen of the King, *cap.*29.*reſp.ad argum.*3.

Contra. I will here oppoſe againſt Bellarmine the contrarie iudgement of the Rhemiſts, who vpon that place Rom.13.1.thus write: S.Paul here (as S.Peter doth 1.chap.2.) expreſſely chargeth euery man to bee ſubiect to his temporall Prince. And againe, by humane creature, 1.Pet.2.13. they vnderſtand the temporall Magiſtrate elected by the people, in their Annotations vpon that place.

Thirdly, our Rhemiſts yeelding this place to be vnderſtood onely of the temporal Magiſtrate, yet denie that this commaundement is giuen to ſpirituall men, but affirme that the King is called moſt excelling; in reſpect of other his inferiour miniſters and officers, not in reſpect of Popes, Biſhops, Prieſts, &c.

Contra. Firſt, the Rhemiſts affirme S.Paul, Rom.13.and S.Peter in this place to haue both one meaning: but there by euery ſoule, all perſons as well ſpirituall as temporall are vnderſtood: Ergo, it muſt bee ſo taken here. Secondly, S.Peter would haue all them to bee ſubiect, to whom he writeth: but he writeth to ſpirituall Paſtors and Elders, chap.5. Ergo, they alſo muſt bee ſubiect, and in reſpect of them alſo is the King moſt excelling. Thirdly, they haue power ouer all euill doers to puniſh them, verſ.15. but there are ſuch in the Clergie. Ergo.

See alſo the conſent of antiquitie. Marcellinus, as we heard before, was condemned in the Sinueſſane Councell. Sixtus 3.being accuſed of one Baſſus, a Councell thereupon being aſſembled at the commaundement of Valentinianus the Emperour, Cum magna examinatione per iudicium ſynodicum à 56.Epiſcopis purgatur: After great examination, is purged by 56.Biſhops, by the iudgement of the Synode: ex libr.pontificial.

Symmachus being accuſed of Feſtus and Probinus, two Senators of Rome, aſſembled 115.Biſhops, Et facta ſynodo purgatur à crimine: And by the Synode is purged of the crime, ex pontificial.

*Concil.Ilerdenſ.decret.*3.ex Gratiano: Mention is made how Leo Biſhop of Rome in the Church of S.Peter, in the preſence of the Emperour Charles, the Clergie and the people, did purge himſelfe by his oth.

Pelagius being accuſed that he was acceſſarie to the death of Vigilius the Pope, did purge himſelfe vpon his oth, ex pontificial. So Leo 3.Paſchalis 1. Leo 4. were alſo purged by their oth.

The Councell of Conſtance iudged and depoſed Pope Iohn 23. The Councell of Baſil Eugenius the 4. If Popes then haue been examined in Councels, accuſed, and brought to their purgation, and condemned: then is there no queſtion, but that they are ſubiect to iudgement.

See alſo your owne decrees, *part.*2.*cauſ.*2. *quæſt.*7.*cap.*41. Leo 4.doth ſubmit himſelfe in theſe words to the Emperour Lodouicus: If we haue done any thing incompetently, &c. Veſtro & miſſorum, &c. we will amend it according to your iudgement, and of thoſe whom you ſend.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER THE Pope may be depoſed from his Papacie.

The Papiſts.

44. Error. SOme of them hold that the Pope ought not, neither can bee depoſed for hereſie; becauſe it is not poſſible for the Pope to fall into hereſie: Sic Pighius. The Ieſuite confeſſeth this to be a probable opinion: but himſelfe defendeth it not. He alleageth alſo the opinion of Caietanus, that the Pope may bee depoſed for manifeſt and apparant hereſie. Bellarmines opinion is this: that the Pope cannot be depoſed for any cauſe but hereſie: and not for all hereſie, but that which is manifeſt and apparant: neither is he then depoſed by any act of the Church, but is of himſelfe depoſed, and ceaſeth any more to bee Pope: So the Church may afterward puniſh him, but he is then no Pope, for as ſoone as he is become an heretike, his Popedome in the very act is gone from him, *Bellarm.cap.*30.

He reaſoneth thus: A manifeſt heretike is not ſo much as a member of the Church, much leſſe can he be Pope, who, they ſay, is the head of the Church: and therefore in ſuch a caſe the Pope is depoſed without any ſentence: and if afterward the Church proceede againſt him, they doe not iudge the Pope; for he had loſt his Papacie before.

We anſwere: Firſt, if a manifeſt heretike be actually depoſed, it is by the ſecret iudgement and ſentence of God: for by no other authoritie can he bee depoſed, as they hold: but before God manifeſt hereſie, and cloſe and ſecret hereſie is all one: therefore the Pope is alſo actually depoſed for ſecret hereſie, and not onely for manifeſt: And ſo ſome of the Papiſts thinke, as Iohann. de Turre cremata. Secondly, what call you manifeſt hereſie? or how is he knowne to bee a manifeſt heretike? Can he be an heretike before he bee conuinced? ſhall iudgement paſſe againſt him vncondemned? A murtherer is a dead man by law, yet he liueth till iudgement paſſe vpon him: ſo is the Pope being an heretike, yet Pope, till he be iudicially proceeded againſt; as a murtherer dead by right is in act yet liuing, till by law he is depriued of his life. An heretike, ſaith S. Paul, after two or three admonitions auoyd: that is, ſaith the Ieſuite, he is now ipſo facto excommunicate, before the ſentence of the Iudge. Be it ſo, but he muſt firſt be admoniſhed, and if he ſtill continue obſtinate, then he is a manifeſt heretike: ſo before the Pope can be knowne to bee a manifeſt heretike, he muſt be found obſtinate; he cannot be obſtinate, vnleſſe he refuſe to bee admoniſhed; if he bee admoniſhed, then is he iudged. Thirdly, an heretike ceaſeth not to bee a prieſt, (as they ſpeake) no not after hereſie is knowne, for manifeſt heretikes may baptiſe. The Donatiſts in Auguſtines time were manifeſt heretikes, and yet the Church did not baptiſe againe after them: If a manifeſt heretike ceaſe not to bee a prieſt, neither ceaſeth he to bee Pope; there is like reaſon of both: for if an heretike, becauſe he is not a member of the Church, cannot be a Pope, neither alſo can he retaine the prieſthood.

Caietan.

Laſtly, who ſeeth not what bare and friuolous ſhifts thoſe are? one ſaith, the Church may iudge the Pope, not as he is Pope, but in reſpect of his perſon: another ſaith, that they may iudge the man which was Pope, but he is then no Pope, becauſe his hereſie tooke from him the Papacie. Why maſters what iugling is here? is the Pope one thing, and the Popes perſon another? By the ſame reaſon you may ſay, that the Pope neither eateth, nor drinketh, nor ſleepeth, nor dyeth, and ſo make a God of him, becauſe it is the Popes perſon that doth all this, and not the Pope. And by this ſhift you make no difference betweene an heretike Biſhop, or heretike Prieſt, and heretike Pope: for by the ſame reaſon, none of them all ſhall be ſubiect to the iudgement of the Church: for wee may ſay, that a manifeſt heretike, whether Biſhop or Prieſt, hath loſt by that very act of falling into hereſie, his Prieſthood and Biſhopricke, and then is neither Biſhop nor Prieſt. And ſo you may conclude altogether, that neither Pope, Biſhop, nor Prieſt can bee depoſed for hereſie.

The Proteſtants.

WE doubt not to ſay, that the Pope both lawfully hath been depriued ſometime by the Emperour, ſometime by generall Councels, not onely for hereſie, but for other notable crimes, and may ſtill bee proceeded againſt by the ſame right, as well as any other Biſhop or Prelate.

1. Diuers examples we are able to bring foorth, how the Pope hath been depoſed for other crimes, beſide hereſie. Pope Iohn the 13. was depoſed in a generall Councell by the conſent of Otho the Emperour, for other matters beſide hereſie: as that he ordained Deacons in a ſtable, that he committed inceſt with two of his ſiſters, that playing at dice, he called to the diuell for helpe, that he defloured virgins, that he lay with Stephana his fathers concubine, likewiſe with Rainera and Anna, and her Neece: for theſe beaſtly parts and ſuch like, he was depoſed: there was no hereſie obiected againſt him. And thinke you not he was worthily vnpoped? yet the Papiſts think no: for they admit no cauſe of depriuation but hereſie. This diuelliſh Pope, through the harlots of Rome (for he was well beloued of them) recouered his Popedome againe; but at the length the Lord himſelfe diſplaced him: for in the tenth yeere of his Popedome, being found without the citie with another mans wife, he was ſo wounded of her husband, that within eight daies after he dyed, Fox p. 159.

Fox. pag. 160.

Boniface the 7. tooke Pope Iohn the 15. who was made Pope a little before, and he expelled, yet recouering the Papacie by force, he tooke him, put out his eyes, and threw him in priſon where he was famiſhed. Likewiſe was Iohn the 18. ſerued by Gregorie the 5. his eyes were thruſt out firſt, and he afterward ſlaine. I marueile how our Catholikes can excuſe theſe furious outrages of their ghoſtly fathers of Rome!

In the Councel of Brixia, Gregorie the 7. was depoſed, not for hereſie, but for other abominable vices: as maintaining of periurie and murthers; for following Diuinations and Dreames, Sorcerie and Necromancie, Fox p. 181. Pope Iohn the 23. depoſed in the Councell of Conſtance: Eugenius in the Councell at Baſil: yet neither of them for hereſie. And yet our aduerſaries would ſtill make vs beleeue, that Popes cannot be depoſed for any crime but hereſie.

2. We can haue no better argument, then from our aduerſaries themſelues. It is a ſport to ſee what diuers opinions they hold, and doe runne as it were in a maze, not knowing which way to get out. Pighius thinketh, that the Pope cannot poſſibly fall into hereſie, and therefore for no cauſe may be depoſed. Some other thinke, that the Pope for ſecret and cloſe hereſie is actually depoſed of God, and may alſo be depoſed and iudged of the Church: thus holdeth Iohan. de Turre cremat. Caietanus is of opinion, that for manifeſt and open hereſie the Pope is both alreadie by right depoſed, and may alſo actually be depoſed of the Church. But Bellarmine confuteth all theſe. There is a fourth opinion moſt groſſe: that the Pope neither for ſecret nor open hereſie, is either alreadie of right depoſed, or may be actually depriued of the Church. Laſtly, commeth in the nice and daintie Ieſuite with his quirkes and quiddities, who ſaith, that the Pope in caſe of manifeſt hereſie, ceaſeth to bee Pope, and is euen now depoſed: and if after the Church proceede againſt him, they iudge not the Pope, for now he is no Pope. Which opinion how abſurd it is, I haue declared before.

That the Pope may be depoſed for other crimes then hereſie, beſide the practiſe of former times, as wee haue ſhewed before, wee haue alſo the decrees of Councels. The fathers of Baſil alleaged theſe places of Scripture: If thy eye, hand or foote offend thee, cut it off. Euery tree that bringeth not forth good fruite is caſt downe, &c. Alſo our Sauiour ſaith, Euery branch that bringeth not foorth good fruit, my father will cut off, Ioh. 15. Vnprofitable ſalt is good for nothing, but to be caſt forth, &c. Hence they conclude, that an offenſiue and wicked Pope, may bee depoſed and caſt forth as an vnprofitable branch: ex Ænea Syluio.

Againe, the ſame Councell ſaith, Epiſtol. ſynodal. Concilium Conſtantienſe Benedictum propter ſchiſma: Iohannem 23. propter deformitatem vitæ depoſuit: The Councell of Conſtance depoſed Benedictus for ſchiſme: Iohn 23. for the deformitie of life.

But if they anſwere as they do, that this Councell of Baſil was ſchiſmaticall: (which I marueile how they can ſay, ſeeing it was congregate by the Popes authoritie) what will they ſay to the Councell of Lateran. ſub Iulio. 2. ſeſſ. 5. where it was decreed, that if the Pope were choſen by Simonie, vt huiuſmodi electio nulla exiſtat, that his election ſhould ſtand voyd as none at all, and he holden for no Pope: and that it ſhould bee lawfull for his ſubiects, ab obedientia eius diſcedere, to caſt off all obedience.

So then, the Pope may be depoſed for Simonie, which though it be there termed ſimoniaca hæreſis, the ſimoniacall hereſie, yet it is not ſo properly, but rather a fault in manners, then an error in faith.

They haue alſo this rule in their owne law, Extrau. commun. lib. 5. tit. 8. cap. 1. The Pope thus writeth againſt a certaine Biſhop whom he depoſed for his enormous life, Illud ſolum æſtimamus ſalubre remedium, &c. We count that an holeſome remedie, that where we cannot take away, velle, a mans euill will, we ſhould take away his, poſſe, his power to doe euill. Why ſhould not this rule as well take place in a wicked Pope, as in an impious Biſhop?

THE FIFT PART, CONCERNING THE ORIginall and beginning of the primacie of Rome.

The Papiſts.

THey doe boldly affirme without any ground, that the primacie of that See hath his beginning from no other but Chriſt: they are the Ieſuites owne words, Romani pontificis eccleſiaſticum principatum, authore Chriſto, principium accepiſſe: That the princely dignitie of the Biſhop of Rome, acknowledgeth no other author or beginner thereof, but Chriſt, Bellar. cap. 17. lib. 2. 45. Error.

Argum. 1. They would build the primacie of the Romane Church vpon certaine places of Scripture: as Matth. 16. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I build my Church. Luk. 22. I haue praied for thee Peter, that thy faith ſhould not faile. Ioh. 21. Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: Ergo, Peter and Peters ſucceſſors haue their primacie from Chriſt, Bellarm.

To theſe places Tunſtal and Stokeſly, two popiſh Biſhops, yet in this poynt holding the truth, did properly make anſwere in their epiſtle ſent to Cardinall Poole.

To the firſt: They affirme out of the ancient expoſitors, that it is meant of the faith which was then firſt confeſſed by the mouth of Peter, and not of Peters perſon. Further, confirming out of S. Paul, that neither Peter, nor no creature beſide, could bee the foundation of the Church: for no other foundation can any man lay (ſaith the Apoſtle) beſides that which is laid, Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3.

To the ſecond they anſwere: That Chriſt ſpeaketh onely of the fall of Peter, which he knew in his godly preſcience, giuing an inkling vnto him, that after his fall he ſhould bee conuerted and ſtrengthen his brethren: for if it were meant alſo of Peters ſucceſſors, they muſt firſt faile in faith, and after confirme their brethren.

To the third: The whole flocke of Chriſt was not committed to Peter to feede: for he himſelfe teſtifieth the contrary, exhorting all Paſtors to feede the flocke of Chriſt,which was giuen them in charge by Chriſt,as it followeth in that place: when the chiefe ſhepheard ſhall appeare,ye ſhall 1.Pet.5. receiue the incorruptible Crowne of eternall glory. He calleth not himſelfe the chiefe ſhepheard,but onely Chriſt. It is euident therefore (ſay they) that your 3. Scriptures ment nothing leſſe, then ſuch a primacie ouer all,Fox pag.1067.

Argum.2. There can be no time aſſigned ſince Chriſt(ſay they) when this primacie ſhould begin,nor no author named that brought it in : Ergo,it muſt needes be attributed to Chriſt,he muſt of neceſſitie be found the author thereof.

We anſwere : the time may be aſſigned, the authors named, when, and by whom this pretenſed and vſurped authoritie was brought in,as euen now we will ſhew.

The Proteſtants.

THat the vſurped iuriſdiction of Rome tooke not the beginning from Chriſt,nor his Apoſtles, neither was heard of for many yeeres after: we thus are able to proue it.

1 Before the Nicene Councell, which firſt deuided the regiment of the Church into foure Patriarchall ſeates : Rome had ſmall or no preeminence.So Æneas Syluius witneſſeth,who afterward was Pope of Rome, and called Pius the ſecond : *Ante Nicenum concilium ſibi quiſque viuebat,& ad Romanam eccleſiam paruus habebatur reſpectus,Epiſt.*301.Before the Nicene Councell, euery Biſhop liued to himſelfe; there was no great reſpect had to the Church of Rome. What more euident teſtimonie can we haue then of a Pope himſelfe ? Yet the Ieſuite ſaith, that it is falſe in part, which he writeth. He is ſomewhat mannerly, in making him but halfe a lyer : yet I wonder that he will confeſſe any vntruth at all in his ghoſtlie fathers words,*Bellarm.cap.*17.*lib.*2.

Secondly, in the Councell of Nice there was no primacie of power giuen to Rome ouer the whole Church : but the other Patriarches of Alexandria,Antioch,Ieruſalem, were priuiledged in like manner in their confines, as the Biſhop of Rome was in his : They had all equall authoritie giuen them in their owne prouinces: Sic Tonſtall.Stokeſl.ad Poolum.

Thirdly,afterward there was a certaine primacie of order graunted vnto the Patriarch of Rome aboue other Patriarches ; as to haue the firſt place, to ſit firſt, to giue his ſentence firſt. One cauſe hereof was, for that Rome was then the Emperiall and chiefe citie in all the world : this reaſon Fox.pag.9. was rendered in the Councell of Chalcedon,*Can.*28. Another cauſe thereof was,the ample priuiledges and immunities, which the Emperours endowed it withall, as Conſtantine the Great, and Gratianus the Emperour made a lawe, that all men ſhould retayne that religion,which Damaſus of Rome,and Peter Biſhop of Alexandria did hold.

A third cauſe was, the vnquiet eſtate of the Greeke Church, who often voluntarily referred their matters to the Biſhop of Rome, as being leſſe partiall and a more indifferent iudge, they themſelues being diuided and rent into ſectes. And hereupon, and other like cauſes it came about, Fox.pag.18. that the Biſhop of Rome a little ſtepped aboue his fellow Patriarches ; but yet had no ſuch preeminent authoritie,as to command them.

Fourthly, the Popes of Rome being thus tickled with vaine glorie,becauſe they were reuerenced of other Churches, many matters were committed vnto them,and their conſent required vnto the decrees of Councels, when they were abſent. Hereupon they labored euery day more and more to aduance that See, taking euery ſmall occaſion that might helpe forward their ambitious deſire, till Anno.606. or ſomewhat after, Boniface the third obtained of wicked Phocas the Emperour(who murthered his Maſter the Emperour Mauritius and his children,to come to the Empire,and was after ſlaine himſelfe of Heraclius that ſucceeded him)of him,I ſay,Boniface for him- Fox.pag.120. ſelfe and his ſucceſſors obtained,to be called vniuerſall Biſhops ouer the whole Church : and the See of Rome to haue the preeminence aboue all other Churches in the world.

Afterward in Pope Zacharie his time, the proud and inſolent iuriſdiction of Rome was eſtabliſhed by Pipinus King of France,who aſpired to the Crowne,and obtayned it by the ſaid Popes meanes, firſt depoſing Childericus the rightfull King, and diſpenſing with the oath which the French men had made before to *Childericus,Caluin.Inſtitut.*4.*cap.*7.*ſect.*17.

Thus then it ſufficiently appeareth, that the primacie of Rome,which it now vniuſtly challengeth ouer other Churches, is not of any ſuch antiquitie, as they would beare the world in hand, neither that it had the beginning from Chriſt : but both the time when,and the authors by whom it began,may be eaſily aſſigned.

Argum.2. We neede no better argument, to proue that the primacie of Rome hath not his originall from Chriſt, then the Ieſuites owne confeſſion. Firſt he ſaith, that it doth not depend of Chriſts iuſtitution, but ex Petri facto, of Peters fact, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould be rather Peters ſucceſſor, then the Biſhop of Antioch, or any other ; It is not iure diuino, ſaith he, by Gods law : neither is it, ex prima inſtitutione pontificatus, quæ in Euangelio legitur, of the firſt inſtitution whereof we reade in the Goſpell. And againe, Romanum pontificem ſuccedere Petro,non habetur expreſſe in ſcripturis : It is not expreſly ſet downe in Scripture, the Biſhop of Rome ſhould ſucceede

Peter: but it is grounded only vpon that tradition of Peter. Nay he ſaith further, that Peter needed not to haue choſen any particular place for ſucceſſion, and he might as well haue choſen Antioch as Rome: Ergo, neither is the ſucceſſion of Rome grounded vpon Scripture, neither any commandement of Chriſt: for then Peter could not haue had free choice to appoint his ſucceſſor where he would himſelfe, as the Ieſuite ſaith, if he had had any eſpeciall direction or commandement from Chriſt. So then, marke I pray you, they cannot proue out of Scripture, that the Biſhop of Rome ought to ſucceed Peter in the chiefe Biſhopricke, but onely that Peter had the chiefe Biſhopricke committed to him and his ſucceſſors in generall, whoſoeuer they ſhould appoint: Ergo, the Biſhops of Rome by their owne confeſſion can alleadge no Scripture, inſtitution, or commandement of Chriſt, for the primacie of the Church to be annexed to the See of Rome: and yet againſt their knowledge they will alleage Scripture to colour the matter withall, *Bellarm.lib.*2.*de. pontif.cap.*17.

That the iuriſdiction and primacie of Rome is not grounded vpon Scripture, but rather vpon cuſtome and continnance of time, it is thus proued by conſent of antiquitie, *Nicen.*1.*can.*6. Quia epiſcopo Romanæ vrbis parilis mos eſt: Let the Patriarch of Alexandria bee chiefe in his prouinces, &c. becauſe the Biſhop of Rome hath the like cuſtome or manner. And it is not to be thought, that thoſe two generall Councels of Conſtantinople, and Chalcedon, would haue made the See of Conſtantinople equall in authoritie to Rome, if the primacy of Rome had been grounded vpon Scripture.

Againe, what the cauſe is that ſome cities haue had ſpirituall iuriſdiction ouer others, we finde *Trullan.ſynod.can.*38. Si qua ciuitas à regia poteſtate innouata eſt, quoad ciuilem & publicam formam, eccleſiaſticarum quoque rerum ordo conſequatur: If any citie be changed or aduanced in reſpect of the ciuill eſtate, the eccleſiaſticall order or gouerment muſt follow: that is, be aduanced together with it. This reaſon was rendred, *Concil. Chalcedonenſ. action.*16, why they aduanced the See of Conſtantinople, Rationabiliter iudicantes, imperio & Senatu vrbem ornatam, æquis ſenioris regiæ Romæ priuilegijs frui, & in eccleſiaſticis, ſicut illa, maieſtatem habere negotijs: We thinke it reaſonable, that the citie which is adorned with the Senate and Empire ſhould haue the like priuiledges to the elder princely citie Rome, and of the like maieſtie in eccleſiaſticall buſines. By the ſame reaſon alſo was Rome aduanced at the firſt, becauſe it was the ſeat of the Empire: the beginning then of the primacie therefore was not from any commandement of Chriſt, but by the conſtitution of men.

Auguſtine ſaith: Secundum honorum vocabula, quæ iam eccleſiæ vſus obtinuit, epiſcopatus preſbyterio maior eſt. The office of a Biſhop is aboue the office of a Prieſt, according to the names of honour, which the Church by cuſtome hath obtained. If then the difference of thoſe two offices, both named in Scripture, did ariſe rather, and ſpring of the cuſtome of the Church, which thought it good to diſtinguiſh them for auoyding of ſchiſme, and is not grounded vpon the authoritie of Scripture: much leſſe can the Pope (whoſe neither name, nor office is expreſſed in Scripture) fetch from thence any ſhew of proofe, for his vſurped primacie.

M. Tindal holy Martyr, condemned for this and ſuch other articles, for ſaying that the Pope had no other authoritie from Chriſt but to preach onely: articl. 22. *Fox.*pag. 1251. Sir Iohn Bortwicke Knight, condemned for the Goſpell, thus witneſſeth: Peter could not giue that which he had not, as any lordly dominion, or ſuch like; but he gaue vnto his ſucceſſors that which he had, that is, carefulnes ouer the congregation, *Fox.*pag. 1263. articl. 6.

The Popes lordly ſupremacie then hath not the beginning from Chriſt, neither is warranted by Scripture.

And here will I put them in minde of their owne rule: as Innocentius the third hath ſet it downe: *decret. Gregor.lib.*5.*tit.*7.*cap.*12. Oſtendat pro vocatione operationem miraculi, &c. Let him ſhew for his calling the operation of a miracle, or ſome ſpeciall teſtimonie of Scripture. So then, if the Pope can ſhew any miracle, or ſpeciall warrant out of Scripture, for his primacie and ſuperioritie, we will beleeue him.

THE SIXT PART OF THIS QVESTION, CONCERNING the proud names, and vainglorious titles of the Pope.

The Papiſts.

Bellarmine ſetteth downe to the number of fifteene glorious names which haue been of olde 46. Error.
giuen (as he ſaith) to the biſhop of Rome, whereby his primacie ouer other Biſhops is notoouſly knowne; but the principall are theſe: He is called the Pope and chiefe father, the prince of Prieſts, or high Biſhop, the Vicar of Chriſt, the head of the Church, the Prelate of the Apoſtolike See, vniuerſall Biſhop. Theſe ſixe names or titles they do appropriate to the See of Rome. *Bellarm. de Roman.pontif.lib.*2.*cap.*31.

The Proteſtants.

WE will ſhew by Gods grace, that theſe ſixe ſeuerall titles and names aforeſaid, are either ſuch, as ought not in their ſenſe to be attributed to any Biſhop, nor any mortall man; or els were common in ancient times as well to other Biſhops as to him of Rome.

1 For the firſt name of Pope, it is deriued from the Greeke word πάππας, which in the Syracuſane language, is as much as, Father: which name was indifferently giuen to other Biſhops, which were famous in the Church for their vertue and learning: As Cyprian, Epiphanius, Athanaſius, were called Papa, Popes: Auguſtine ſaluteth Aurelius Preſident of the ſixte Councell of Carthage, by the name of Pope, Epiſtol.77. Fox pag.8.

Sophronius Biſhop of Ieruſalem writing to Sergius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, calleth him, Papam beatiſſimum, & Papam deo honorabilem, Moſt bleſſed and honorable Pope, Conſtantinopol.6. action.11. So in the ſixte Councel of Carthage, chap.4. the Synod calleth Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, Sanctum Papam, holy Pope. Eutiches, who was but a Prieſt and an Abbot, is called Pappas, Pope, ſynod. Conſtantinopl. ſub Flauiano.

Bellarmine cannot deny, neither dare he for ſhame, that this name Pope hath been giuen to other Biſhops; but he hath deuiſed three ſhifts to helpe him at a pinch: firſt, ſaith he, the Biſhop of Rome onely hath vſed to be called the Pope abſolutely, and without any addition, but others with adding of their name.

Contra. The abſolute title of Pope hath been giuen alſo to others, and therefore Bellarmines ſurmiſe is falſe: as Hierome writing to Theophilus Biſhop of Alexandria ſaith thus, Adnitere Papa amantiſſime & beatiſſime: Doe your endeuour, moſt bleſſed Pope, &c. he ſaith not Pope Theophilus, but abſolutely moſt bleſſed Pope. tom.3.

Secondly, the Biſhop of Rome onely hath been called vniuerſall Pope, and no other Biſhop, Bellarm.

Contra. Firſt, neither hath this proude name in the better times, and purer ages of the Church, been attributed to the Biſhops of Rome, but rather by them condemned: as Gregorie calleth it a proude title to be named vniuerſall Pope, and reproueth Eulogius Biſhop of Alexandria, for ſo writing vnto him, diſt.99.cap.5. Secondly, yet it may be ſhewed, that after ambition ſet foote into the Church, other Patriarches haue been called by this name: as Concil. Conſtantin.6. act.13. Cyrus Patriarch of Alexandria calleth Sergius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, thrice bleſſed paſtor of paſtors, and father of fathers, the vniuerſall Patriarch: and yet Bellarmine without all ſhame ſaith, that this title of Pater Patrum, Father of Fathers was neuer giuen to any but the Pope.

Thirdly, ſaith he, the Biſhop of Rome hath been alwaies called Pope of others; but he himſelfe neuer called any other by that name.

Contra. Firſt, therein appeareth the pride of that See, that diſdained to giue vnto other Biſhops thoſe titles, which others thought them worthie of, becauſe they would appropriate them to themſelues. Secondly, yet I find, though not the Pope, yet the Church of Rome, which is the Popes See, hath giuen this title to other Biſhops: as after the death of Fabianus, the Presbyterie of Rome thus write to Cypriane, calling him moſt bleſſed, and glorious Pope, as may be ſeene in their epiſtle.

Likewiſe, thoſe two epithetes of the Pope, as to be called, Beatiſſimus & ſanctiſſimus pater: Moſt holy and bleſſed father, were vſed in the ſtile of other Biſhops: Proſper in his Epiſtle to Auguſtine, twiſe calleth him Dominum beatiſſimum Papam: Lord, moſt bleſſed Pope, Tom.7. Hierome calleth Epiphanius, Beatum Papam, Bleſſed Pope, Ad Euſtach. Fabiol.

This alſo was the ſtile of the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Sanctiſſimo atque beatiſſimo Oecomenico Patriarchæ Iohanni Conſtantinopol.&c. To the moſt holy and bleſſed vniuerſall Patriarch, Iohn of Conſtantinople: Conſtantinop.5.action.1. Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, writing to one Rufus a Biſhop, Epiſt.2. ſaith thus, Hæc & alia, quæ neceſſaria fore cognouimus, tuæ ſanctitati nolumus denegare: Theſe and other things which we knew to be neceſſarie, we would not denie to your holines: at this time it is a cleare caſe, that the Biſhop of Rome did not appropriate to himſelfe this title of holines.

De origine anim.2.1. De origine anim.lib.1. cap.2. Auguſtine writing to Petrus the Presbyter, or Prieſt, being no Biſhop, yet thus ſaluteth him: Ad ſanctitatem tuam ſcripſit: He hath written to your holines. Nay, in his booke dedicated to Renatus a lay man, neither Prieſt nor Biſhop, thus he writeth, Hinc angor, quòd ſanctitati tuæ minus quàm vellem cognitus ſum: This grieueth me, that I am not ſo well knowne to your holines as I deſire. If then theſe titles of holines and bleſſednes were not onely giuen to Biſhops, but Prieſts alſo, yea vnto lay men of vertuous and holy life; what colour or ſhew of reaſon can our aduerſaries haue, to make them proper to the Biſhop of Rome?

But if the Biſhop of Rome will haue this title of holines truely giuen vnto him, let him follow that wholſome ſaying, aſcribed to Clement. epiſtol.1. Nemo velit dici ſanctus, antequam ſit, ſed prius ſit vt verius dicatur: Let no man deſire to be called holy, before he be indeed, but let him firſt be holy, ly, that he may more truely ſo be called : the ſame ſentence alſo is found, Conſtantinop.6.cap.6.

See alſo the iudgement of Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr : articul.23. Papa non debet dici ſanctiſſimus ſecundum officium, quia ſic & Rex diceretur ſanctiſſimus, &c. The Pope ought no more to be called moſt holy becauſe of his office, then the King in reſpect of his office.

2 The ſecond name is Prince of Prieſts, or high and chiefe Biſhop : which title, if it be taken for a chiefe power, dominion, and ſoueraigntie, is proper onely to Chriſt the chiefe ſhepheard, 1.Pet.5.4. and cannot in that ſenſe agree to any man.

It was alſo decreed Carthaginenſ.3.can.26. in this maner, Primæ ſedis Epiſcopus non appelletur princeps ſacerdotum aut ſummus ſacerdos, ſed tantùm primæ ſedis Epiſcopus : Let not the Biſhop of the firſt See be called the prince of Prieſts, or chiefe Prieſt, but onely Biſhop of the firſt See.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this Canon did onely binde the Biſhops of Africa, it doth not extend to the Biſhop of Rome.

Anſw. It appeareth Can.47. that the Canons of this Councell were confirmed by Boniface Biſhop of Rome. For to that end the Councell determineth to write vnto him, and the reſt of the Biſhops of the weſt Church : but it is certaine, that this Councell was receiued and authorized in the ſixt generall Trullane Synode, Can.12. how then can the Biſhop of Rome be exempted from the decrees of generall Councels, which binde the whole Church, and euery part thereof? And againe, this Canon is approued in their owne decrees, diſt.99.c.3. how then can they refuſe it?

But if this name be vſed onely as a title of excellencie and commendation, ſo was it in times paſt aſcribed to other excellent and famous Biſhops, as Ruffinus lib.2.cap.26. calleth Athanaſius, Pontificem maximum, chiefe Biſhop : yea it was in common giuen to all Biſhops; as Anacletus Biſhop of Rome in his ſecond Epiſtle writeth thus : Summi ſacerdotes, id eſt, Epiſcopi, à Deo iudicandi ſunt : The high Prieſts, that is, Biſhops (ſaith he) are to be iudged of God. If it be taken further for the excellencie of the miniſterie of the Goſpell, and the worthy calling of Chriſtians, in this ſenſe the title of ſummum ſacerdotium, of the high Prieſthood, is attributed to all Miniſters Eccleſiaſticall, both Biſhops and others : ſo Fabianus Biſhop of Rome vſeth this name. Yea, the holy Apoſtle calleth all the people of God βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα, a princely, royall, or chiefe prieſthood : Ergo, the Biſhop of Rome hath no eſpeciall or proper intereſt in this name.

Fox p.12.col.1

3 The third name is, to be called the Vicar of Chriſt vpon earth. Where we are to vnderſtand, that in reſpect of the ſpirituall regiment and Kingdome of Chriſt, he needeth no Vicegerent vpon earth : for, I am with you (ſaith he) to the end of the world : he himſelfe is alway preſent in power, and needeth not in that reſpect, that any man ſhould ſupplie his roume. Petrus ſcriba Martyr. Fox pag.906. If we doe take it for a word of office and publike adminiſtration, ſo the Magiſtrate may be called the Vicar of Chriſt, in gouerning the people according to the word of God : In which ſenſe Eleutherius Biſhop of Rome, writing to Lucius King of the Britaines, calleth him the Vicar of Chriſt; and therefore in his owne Kingdome had power out of the word of God to eſtabliſh lawes, for the gouernment of the people.

Fox pag.107.

Thus alſo writeth Anaſtaſius Biſhop of Rome, to Anaſtaſius the Emperor, titul.6. Præſtantiam veſtram velut vicarium, Deus præſidere iuſſit in terris : God hath commaunded or appointed your worthines, as his Vicar, to be preſident in earth. So all Biſhops, Paſtors and Miniſters in ancient time were called the Vicars of Chriſt in preaching, praying, binding and looſing in the name and power of Chriſt. So Auguſtine ſaith, or whoſe worke elſe it is, that Omnis antiſtes eſt Chriſti vicarius : Euery paſtor and prelate (and not the Pope onely) is the Vicar of Chriſt.

Quæſt. ex vnoque.127.

Euſebius Biſhop of Rome teſtifieth the ſame, Epiſtol.3. Caput Eccleſiæ Chriſtus eſt; Chriſti autem vicarij ſacerdotes ſunt, qui vice Chriſti legatione funguntur in Eccleſia : The head of the Church is Chriſt, and the Prieſts or Miniſters are Chriſts Vicars, who in Chriſts ſtead doe performe his embaſſage in the Church. This is alſo confeſſed by our Rhemiſts, annot. in 2.Cor.5.18. that the Biſhops and prieſts of the Church are for Chriſt, and as his miniſters, that is, his Vicars. Nay, Auguſtine maketh yet a more generall vſe of this word : he ſaith that, Homo imperium Dei habens, quaſi vicarius eius eſt : That man by creation being made Lord of the creatures, doth therein repreſent God, and is as his Vicar vpon earth. So then, all miniſters are the Vicars of Chriſt; the ciuill Magiſtrate likewiſe, in ſome good ſenſe, may be ſo called : yea in reſpect of the creatures, man generally is vpon earth in Gods ſtead : Ergo, this name cannot be appropriate to the Pope of Rome.

Quæſt.106.

Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr ſaith, articl.12. Nemo gerit vicem Petri vel Chriſti niſi ſequatur eum in moribus : No man can be Peters or Chriſts Vicar vnleſſe he follow him in life and maners. The Pope therefore is not Chriſts Vicar vnleſſe he imitate Chriſts holy life, which I would he did. One of your owne Popes alſo ſaith, Iohann.22. Extrau.lib.3.tit.2.c.5. Vicarius Chriſti ipſius actibus ſe tenetur conformare : Chriſts Vicar muſt conforme himſelfe to Chriſts actes and example : Which ſeeing the Pope doth not, he cannot be Chriſts Vicar, or Vicegerent.

4 It is alſo too huge a name for the Pope or any mortall man to beare, to be called the head of the vniuerſall Church; this is a name onely due vnto Chriſt, neither doe the Scriptures acknowledge any other head, but him, Epheſ. 1.22.4.15. But (ſay they) we doe not make the Pope ſuch an head, as Chriſt is, but onely a miniſteriall head ouer the militant Church vpon earth, Rhemiſt. 1. Eph. 22.

We anſwere: Firſt, Ergo, the Pope by your owne confeſſion is not head of the vniuerſall Church, whereof the triumphant Church in heauen is a part; nor yet of Purgatorie, but onely of 1 that part which is in the earth. Secondly, the Rhemiſts confeſſe that the Church in no ſenſe can be called the bodie of the Pope: Ergo, the Pope cannot be any waies the head of the vniuerſall Church, Annot. in 1. Epheſ. 22. Thirdly, the Fathers of Baſile vſed this argument: The head of the 2 body being dead, the whole bodie alſo dieth; but the whole Church doth not periſh with the Pope: Ergo, he is not properly the head of the Church, Fox pag. 675.

Further, in the ſame Councell, Iohannes Patriarch. Antiochen. in appendic. concil. thus reaſoneth,
Nec dici poteſt caput Miniſteriale vniuerſalis eccleſiæ, nam caput eſſe denotat praeminentiam, quam mi-
3 niſter non habet ſupra dominam: Neither can the Pope be ſaid to be the miniſteriall head of the vniuerſall Church: for to be an head argueth a preeminence, which the Miniſter hath not ouer his Miſtreſſe.

Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. lib. 2. cap. 9. Eccleſiam cum capite ſuo Chriſto vnam conſtat eſſe perſonam: The 4 Church and Chriſt the head thereof make but one perſon. But ſo doe not the Pope and the Church: therefore he cannot be the head thereof.

Adde vnto theſe the witneſſe of the holy Martyrs, Iohn Huſſe articul. 20. The Pope if he be a 5 wicked man, cannot be the head of the Church, ſeeing he is not ſo much as a member thereof: the ſame reaſon vſeth that bleſſed Biſhop and Martyr, M. Hooper, examination 3. Fox. pag. 1507.

6 Maſter Rogers holy Martyr: Chriſt onely doth all in vs all, which is the true property of the head, which is a thing, that all the Biſhops of Rome ſhall neuer doe, pag. 1486.

Vpon theſe reaſons, which I haue produced, being ſixe in number, it may be ſtrongly concluded, that the Pope in no ſenſe can be the head of Chriſts Church: which proude title ſeemeth to haue miſliked ſome of your Popes: as Clemens the fift, in the Councell of Vienna thus writeth, Clementin. lib. 2. tit. 9. c. 1. Sacroſancta Romana eccleſiæ caput Chriſtus redemptor, &c. Chriſt our redeemer is the head of the ſacred Romane Church, and the Romane Biſhop our Redeemers Vicar. So then he is onely the head of the Church that redeemed it; the Pope is but the heads Vicar, not the head it ſelfe.

If it ſhall be further obiected, that the Biſhop of Rome hath been called in times paſt, caput Epiſcoporum, the head of all other Biſhops: we anſwere, that it was but a title of excellencie and commendation, not of dominion and power: as London is called the head or chiefe Citie of England, yet are not other cities of the land ſubiect vnto it, or vnder the iuriſdiction thereof. But we ſhall haue occaſion more fully to diſcuſſe this matter afterward.

5 They would haue the Pope called the Prelate of the Apoſtolike See: the Rhemiſts ſay further, that the Papall dignitie is a continuall Apoſtleſhip, Annot. 4. Epheſ. ſect. 4.

We anſwere: Firſt, if they call thoſe Churches Apoſtolicall, whoſe firſt founders were the Apoſtles, then the See of Antioch, Alexandria, Conſtantinople, are as well Apoſtolicall as Rome.

Concil. Nicen. 2. action. 1. Retinentes locum Apoſtolicorum thronorum Orientalis dioiceſeus: They which occupie the roume of the Apoſtolike thrones of the Eaſt dioceſſe.

And this the Ieſuite denieth not, lib. 2. de pontifice cap. 31. But he maketh this difference: firſt, ſaith he, when we ſay the Apoſtolike See abſolutely, not adding either of Epheſus, or Antioch, the See of Rome is vnderſtoode: but the other Apoſtolike Sees are ſo called with reſtraint to the place. Anſw. That this is falſe which the Ieſuite ſaith, it is proued thus: Siricius Biſhop of Rome, epiſtol. 4. can. 1. decreeth thus, Extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolica, hoc eſt, primatis, nemo audeat ordinare: Let no man ordaine (Biſhops he meaneth) without the knowledge of the Apoſtolike See, that is, ſaith he, expounding himſelfe, of the Primate of the Prouince, not vnderſtanding thereby the Biſhop of Rome, but the Primate or Metropolitane.

Coucil. Aurelianenſ. cap. 1. Clodonaus the King writeth thus to the Biſhops, which were 33. in number, there aſſembled, Dominis ſanctis & Apoſtolica ſede digniſſimis: To my holy Lords, moſt worthy of the Apoſtolike See. He calleth all their Sees Apoſtolicall according to the decree Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 9. ex Iſidor: Apoſtolis decedentibus ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi, &c. The Biſhops ſucceed the Apoſtles, and are placed through the world in ſedibus Apoſtolorum, in the Apoſtles Sees. In theſe places which I haue cited, the Apoſtolike See is named abſolutely, and yet the See of Rome not vnderſtood thereby. Bellarmines ſecond exception is this, that the Pope is not onely called Prelate of the Apoſtolike See, Sed munus eius Apoſtolatus, His office an Apoſtleſhip: ſo are not other. Anſwere. This is one of Bellarmines toyes, for ſeeing Apoſtolicus, and Apoſtolatus, are coniugata, and where the one is, there muſt be the other; if other Biſhops be as well Apoſtolicall as he, they haue alſo an Apoſtleſhip as well as he.

Secondly, thoſe Churches are Apoſtolicall, which hold the Apoſtolike faith: ſo is not the See of Rome Apoſtolicall, being departed and gone backe from the auncient Catholike faith: but thoſe Churches where the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt is truely preached, are indeed Apoſtolike.

Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr thus witneſſeth: it was neither for the priuiledge of the See or perſon, that the See and Biſhop of Rome were called Apoſtolike, but for the true trade of Chriſts religion taught and maintayned in that See, Fox.pa.1775. Thus alſo writeth Agatho Biſhop of Rome to Conſtantine the Emperour, Væ mihi eſt, ſi veritatem Domini mei, quam Apoſtoli prædicarunt, prædicare neglexero: Woe is vnto me, if I neglect to preach the trueth of my Lord, which the Apoſtles preached.

Thirdly, how can the Pope be an Apoſtle, or haue Apoſtolike authority, ſeeing he preacheth not at all, much leſſe to the whole world, wherein conſiſted the office of an Apoſtle? Neither can he ſhew his immediate calling from Chriſt, as all the Apoſtles could: for ſeeing he challengeth the Apoſtolike office by tradition from S. Peter, and not by commandement from Chriſt; he can in no wiſe be counted an Apoſtle, or his office an Apoſtleſhip: for the Apoſtles ordayned onely Euangeliſts and Paſtors, they had not authoritie to conſecrate and conſtitute new Apoſtles. Our aduerſaries for this their Apoſtleſhip, can finde nothing in Scripture, not for a thouſand yeares after Chriſt in the ancient writers, Fulk.annot.in Epheſ.4.ſect.4.

6 Concerning the title of vniuerſall Biſhop, it was thus decreed in the ſixte Councell of Carthage, as it is alleadged by Gratian: Vniuerſalis autem nec Romanus pontifex appelletur: No not the Biſhop of Rome is to be called vniuerſall. In Gregorie the firſt his time, Iohn Patriarch of Conſtantinople, obtayned of the Emperour Mauritius to be called vniuerſall Patriarch: but Gregory would not agree thereunto, calling him the forerunner of Antichriſt, that would challeng ſo proud a name, Gregor.lib.4.Epiſtol.32.

Diſtinct.99.

Bellarmine and other of that ſect doe anſwere, that Gregory found fault with this title, becauſe Iohn of Conſtantinople would haue been Biſhop alone, and none other to be beſide him, but all other onely to be his deputies and Vicars.

Lib.2.de pont. cap.31.

To this we reply: Firſt, Iohn did onely challenge a ſuperioritie ouer other Biſhops, not to be Biſhop alone; for this had been a thing impoſſible. Secondly, if Iohn had ſought any ſuch thing, it is not like that the Chalcedon Councel and the Emperour would haue yeelded to ſo vnreaſonable a matter as they did. Thirdly, Eulogius Patriarch of Alexandria doth call the ſaid Gregory vniuerſal Pope, which name he vtterly refuſeth: and yet Eulogius had no ſuch meaning to make him Biſhop or Patriarch alone, but onely to giue him a preeminence aboue the reſt.

Fox.pag.13.

Fourthly, this may appeare to be ſo by that which Leo writeth Epiſtol.53, concerning Anatolius Patriarch of Conſtantinople: to whom this preeminence was granted in the Chalcedon Councel. Nimium ſuperbum eſt, vt vnius creſcat dignitas, tot metropolitanorum impugnare primatus: It is too proud an enterpriſe, to impugne the primacie of ſo many Metropolitanes, to increaſe the dignitie of one. Pelagius the ſecond thus writeth alſo againſt Iohn of Conſtantinople, who challenged to be called vniuerſall Biſhop: Si ſummus patriarcha vniuerſalis dicitur, patriarcharum nomen cæteris derogatur: epiſtol.1.decretal. If the chiefe Patriarch be called vniuerſall, then the title of patriarchſhip is taken from the reſt. By theſe teſtimonies it appeareth, that theſe ambitious prelates had no meaning to ſpoyle the reſt of their Epiſcopall dignitie, but onely to haue the primacie and preeminence before them. For the title of vniuerſalitie doth onely derogate to the dignitie of Patriarches, and primacie of Metropolitanes.

This modeſt and humble Biſhop of Rome Gregory, of whom we ſpake before, in ſteade of the title, Vniuerſall, brought it into the Popes ſtile to be called ſeruus ſeruorum Dei, ſeruant to Gods ſeruants: Ergo, we conclude with Gregory, that this title, Vniuerſall, is an Antichriſtian name, and that it hath miſliked the auncient Biſhops of Rome themſelues; and how other Patriarches and Biſhops haue challenged that ambitious name and title, as well as the Popes of Rome. And it hath been acknowledged and yeelded vnto them, as Conſtantinop. general.5. action.1. Iohn Biſhop of Conſtantinople is called Oecomenicus Patriarcha, Oecomenicall, or vniuerſall Patriarch. Conſtantinop.general.6.action.13. Cyrus Biſhop of Alexandria writeth thus to Sergius Biſhop of Conſtantinople: Ter beatiſſimo, benigno paſtori paſtorum, patri patrum, vniuerſali patriarchæ Sergio: To the thriſe bleſſed paſtor of paſtors, and Father of Fathers, the vniuerſall Patriarch Sergius. And leaſt it might be ſaid that theſe Patriarches doe but dally and gloſe one with another, we finde that Pope Adrian writeth thus to Tharaſius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, Dilecto fratri vniuerſali Patriarchæ: To my beloued brother the vniuerſall Patriarch, &c. Nicen.2.action.2.

We conclude therefore, that this title to be called vniuerſall Biſhop or Patriarch, neither was in times paſt, nor is now properly or of right belonging to the See of Rome.

Laſtly, ſee the iudgement of ſome Papiſts themſelues of this poynt: Eckius a ſtout popiſh champion ſaith thus diſputing againſt Luther, that the Biſhop of Rome ought not to be called vniuerſall Biſhop, but Biſhop of the vniuerſall Church: Fox.pag.848.

Concil. Baſilienſ. epiſtol. ſynodal. 8. Romanus pontifex eſt vniuerſalis Eccleſiæ miniſter non dominus: The Biſhop of Rome is a ſeruant or Miniſter of the vniuerſall Church not a Lord or Biſhop. They graunt not ſo much as Eckius doth. Biſhop Longland cutteth him yet ſhorter, ſaying, There is no vniuerſall Biſhop but Chriſt: the Biſhop of Rome and all other Biſhops, are but vnderlings and vnworthie ſuffraganes to this Biſhop Chriſt. Fox. pag. 1100.

THE SIXT QVESTION, WHETHER THE Pope may erre, or not.

The Papiſts.

47. Error. THey deny not but that both the Pope by himſelfe, and togither with a whole Councell, may be deceiued in matters of fact, that is, in hiſtoricall poynts, and the truth of things that are done, becauſe it dependeth of the teſtimonie and information of men; but in matters of faith and doctrine, the Pope determining with the Councell, is not ſubiect to error: yea, the Pope by himſelfe alone decreeing any thing concerning faith cannot be deceiued, Bellarm. lib. 4. de pontific. cap. 13. No nor yet in precepts of manners preſcribed to the Church by the Pope, is there any feare or danger of error, cap. 5. Yea, it is probable (ſaith he) that the Pope, not onely as Pope, cannot erre, but not as a priuate perſon, is it like he ſhould fall into hereſie, or holde any obſtinate opinion contrary to the faith? cap. 6.

Argum. 1. Luk. 22. 31. Simon, I haue prayed for thee, that thy faith faile not. Chriſt here praieth for Peter, and his ſucceſſors, that they might not at any time erre, or bee deceiued in matters of faith, Bellarm. cap. 3. Rhem. annot. in Luk. 22. ſect. 11.

We anſwere: Firſt, this was a particular prayer for Peter, that his faith ſhould not faile in that great and dangerous tentation, into the which our Sauiour foreſaw he ſhould fall: For if it were to be vnderſtood of Peters ſucceſſors, they alſo muſt firſt be ſifted by Sathan as Peter was, and denie Chriſt, and ſo being conuerted ſtrengthen their brethren: if they will vnderſtand one part of Peters ſucceſſors, I pray you, why not all? Secondly, our Sauiour praieth likewiſe for all his Apoſtles, that they might be ſanctified in the truth; yea for all, that ſhould beleeue by their preaching: yet is not euery Chriſtian priuiledged from all error of faith. Thirdly, after this Peter himſelfe erred, and was reprehended of S. Paul.

Argum. 2. The high Prieſts that ſate in Moſes chaire were priuiledged not to erre: as Caiphas though a wicked man, and in ſome ſort an vſurper, had ſome aſſiſtance of God for vtterance of the truth, Ioh. 11. 51. Ergo, much more now are the chiefe paſtors of the Church free from error, Bellarm. cap. 3. Rhem. Luc. 22. ſect. 11.

We anſwere: the high prieſts had no ſuch priuiledge, for ſome of them fell into ſtrange errors: Vriah the high prieſt ſet vp an Idolatrous Altar at the Kings commandement, 2. King. 16. Eliaſhib was ioyned in affinitie with Tobiah the Ammonite, contrarie to the law of God, Nehem. 13. 4. And concerning Caiphas, though at this time he ignorantly ſpake the truth, yet was he a Sadducee, and condemned Chriſt. And if Caiphas example proue any thing, being (as you ſay) but an vſurper of the Prieſthood, it maketh as well for vſurpers of the Papall See, that they alſo ſhould be priuiledged from error.

Bellarmine and the reſt doe much vrge that place of Cyprian, epiſtol. 1. ad Cornelium: Non cogitant eos eſſe Romanos, quorum fides Apoſtolo prædicante laudata eſt, ad quos perfidia habere non poſſit acceſſum: They remember not that they are Romanes, whoſe faith is ſo commended euen by the Apoſtle himſelfe, vnto whom falſehood or vntruth can haue no acceſſe. Alſo Euſebius B. of Rome ſaith, In Eccleſia Catholica extra maculam ſemper eſt Catholica ſeruata religio: In the Catholike Church, the Catholike Religion hath alwaies been kept without ſpot.

Lucius B. of Rome alſo thus writeth, Vt in exordio normam fidei Apoſtolicæ ab authoribus ſuis percepit, ſic illibata fine tenus manet: As in the beginning it receiued the Apoſtolike faith from the authors thereof, ſo it remaineth vncorrupted to the end, Epiſtol decretal.

Anſw. Firſt, as for the teſtimonies of the Biſhops of Rome, they doe not greatly moue vs: for who ſeeth not that they might be partiall, in iudging of their owne Church? Cyprians teſtimonie, a welwiller of the Romane Church, though not of that Church, carrieth greater waight with it. Secondly, they all here alleaged, haue eſpeciall relation to former times, and commend the conſtancie of the Romane faith: for vntill Cyprian and Lucius time, and ſomewhat after, the Biſhops of Rome were faithfull men, impugners of hereſies, holy Martyrs: for as yet Marcellinus had not fallen: and therefore they could doe no leſſe, then commend their continuance in the Apoſtolike faith, during ſo many yeeres of perſecution. And for the time to come, they ſpeake not definitely as Prophets, but iudge charitably as brethren, that they hope well, that the Church of Rome, which had held out ſo long, would haue held out to the end. Thirdly, Euſebius ſaith, that in the Catholike Church the Catholike faith ſhall alwaies remaine: ſo then as long as the Church of Rome was Catholike, not departing from the doctrine of the Apoſtles, they were ſure to haue the Apoſtolike faith: and thus Cyprian alſo and Lucius, with the reſt that ſo ſpeake, muſt bee vnderſtood. So a popiſh champion himſelfe teacheth vs to vnderſtand them: Quod dicitur, Eccleſia Romana ſemper immaculata permanſit, & permanebit, intelligi debet verum, quamdiu ligabit & ſoluet iuſtè, claue non errante: Where it is ſaid, the Church of Rome hath remained and ſhall continue vnſpotted, to make it true, we muſt vnderſtand, ſo long as it bindeth and looſeth iuſtly, the key not erring: Iohan. Patriarch. Antiochen. opuſcul. in appendic. Concil. Baſilienſ.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Popes and Biſhops of Rome haue not onely erred in manners, but euen in faith; and not onely priuately and perſonally as men, but publikely and iudicially as Popes; that they haue by their publike and open preaching, defence, allowance, and conſent approoued and eſtabliſhed erronious, and ſome hereticall opinions: thus wee truſt to make it plaine and euident to all men.

1 Peter erred: Ergo, the Pope may, though he were Peters ſucceſſor. Firſt, Peter erred in denying of Chriſt. The Ieſuite anſwereth: firſt, he began not yet to be the chiefe Biſhop, which he entered not into till after the reſurrection, when Chriſt ſaid vnto him, Feede my ſheepe, Ioh. 21. therefore all this while he might erre. A goodly anſwere: I pray you tell me, was not the Church before Chriſts paſſion, and after, built vpon the ſame rocke? I trow they cannot denie it: but Peter was not the rocke before, therefore not after.

If he were therefore called a rocke becauſe of his confeſſion of Chriſt, why ſhould he not then rather, ſtraight after his confeſſion, take poſſeſſion of his office, then immediatly after his deniall of Chriſt? Surely this is but a ſilly ſhift. Secondly, ſaith the Ieſuite, Peter failed in charitie when he denied Chriſt, not in faith, cap. 3. and if he failed in faith, he loſt the confeſſion of faith, and not faith it ſelfe.

We anſwere: Firſt, can a true faith then bee ſeparated from loue by your doctrine? The Apoſtles knew no ſuch faith: Saint Iames ſaith, it is a dead faith that is without the workes of loue, and the faith of diuels, that is, no faith, Iames 2.17.19. If then Peters loue failed, his faith alſo failed. Secondly, we do not ſay that Peters faith was loſt and vtterly extinguiſhed, for Chriſt praied for him, but whether it were an error in faith which Peter fell into: for it is not all one to erre in faith, or cleane to loſe faith. Thirdly, he loſt the confeſſion of faith, he denied Chriſt in word: Ergo, he denied the faith, howſoeuer he thought in heart: for theſe two are the principall fruites of faith, to Beleeue with the hart, and Confeſſe with the mouth, Rom. 10. and where either of theſe is wanting, there cannot bee a right faith: for he that putteth away a good conſcience, maketh ſhipwracke alſo of faith, 1. Tim. 1.19. But the Ieſuite I ſee hath a queazie ſtomacke, let him cough vp luſtily, and ſay with one of his fellowes, Petrus non fidem Chriſti, ſed Chriſtum ſalua fide negauit: Peter denied not the faith of Chriſt, but his faith remaining ſound and whole, he onely denied Chriſt. Loe, here is new popiſh diuinitie, that a man may denie Chriſt, and yet not denie the faith.

Alan.Cop.

Secondly, Peter erred in conſtraining the Gentiles to doe as the Iewes. Bellarmine ſaith, it was an error in example and conuerſation, not in faith or doctrine, cap. 7.

We anſwere: Firſt, in this example of Peter there was alſo included an error in faith: for how ſhould the Gentiles better know Peters iudgement, then by his example, by the which they fell into an error of faith, and were conſtrained to conforme themſelues like to the Iewes: thinking that the Iewiſh ceremonies were neceſſarie to be retained? Secondly, S. Paul himſelfe ſaith, they went not the right way to the truth of the Goſpell: Ergo, they erred from the truth of the Goſpell, and ſo in faith. Thirdly, the Diuines of Paris doe attribute to Peter an error in faith, Fulk. annot. 4. Galat. ſect. 9.

Thus teſtifieth alſo Gelaſius, Tom. de anathematis vinculo. S. Petrus ſic exiſtimans noui teſtamenti gratiam prædicandam, vt à legis veteris non recederet inſtitutis, quædam per ſimulationem legitur geſſiſſe: S. Peter thinking that the grace of the new Teſtament was ſo to bee preached, that he ſhould not notwithſtanding leaue the inſtitution of the old law, is read to haue committed ſomewhat by diſſimulation. It was therefore an error in opinion, which afterward the ſame Gelaſius calleth, imbellis inſcitia, his impotent vnſkilfulnes: Saint Peter therefore failed not onely in his examples, but in his knowledge and iudgement.

2 We can produce many examples of the Popes, which haue erred iudicially, namely, openly haue maintained errors. To let paſſe Marcellinus, who ſacrificed to Idols, as a ſlippe of his perſon, and he afterward repented him of his fall: yet by the way the Ieſuite is deceiued, that thinketh it probable, that the Popes particular perſon cannot fall into hereſie: here you ſee Marcellinus fell into Idolatrie.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Marcellinus was no heretike, Niſi actu externo ob metum mortis: But onely in an externall act for feare of death.

Contra. That Marcellinus failed not only in committing of an vnlawful act, but erred in iudgement, it appeareth in the proceſſe againſt him in the Sinueſſane Councell: for thus Marcellinus at the firſt excuſed himſelfe, Non Dijs ſacrificaui, ſed tantùm grana leuatis manibus ſuper prunas combuſſi: I did not ſacrifice (ſaith he) to the Gods, but onely lifting vp my hands, burnt incenſe ouer the coales. But what is this elſe, I pray you, then to offer ſacrifice to Idols?

Liberius ſubſcribed to the Arrians, conſented to the condemnation of Athanaſius: as teſtifieth Hierome, confeſſed by Nicholaus Cuſanus, and Alphonſus de caſtro, both Papiſts, Iuel. pag. 164. defenſ. Apolog.

Lib. 6. de loc. cap. vlt.

Honorius 1. conſented to the hereſie of Sergius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who was a Monothelite, and held, that there were not two wils or operations in Chriſt, and ſo deſtroyed the two natures. That Honorius was a Monothelite, Melchior Canus a Papiſt confeſſeth: he was condemned for an heretike in the 6. 7. and 8. generall Synodes. Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Councels are corrupted, or they might be deceiued in iudgement, as in a matter of fact: or that Honorius onely miſliked the ſpeech, to ſay there were two willes in Chriſt, and not the thing. See what poore ſhifts here be to make Honorius no heretike, and yet all will not be: for one of your owne Popes Leo 2. writing to Conſtantinus the Emperour, accurſed Honorius amongſt other Monothelite heretikes: We accurſe (ſaith he) the inuentors of this new error, Theodorus, Cyrus, &c. and Honorius, which did not lighten the Apoſtolike Church, with the doctrine of Apoſtolike tradition, but by prophane treaſon endeuoured to ſubuert the immaculate faith. Thus Honorius in a principal article of the faith erred, not in his priuate opinion onely, but in his publike defence.

Adrianus 2. Biſhop of Rome, whatſoeuer the Ieſuite ſaith to the contrarie, putteth all out of doubt: as it may appeare Conſtantinop. general. 8. action. 7. for he writeth thus: Licet Honorio ab Orientalibus poſt mortem anathema ſit dictum, ſciendum tamen eſt, quia ſuper hæreſi fuerat accuſatus, propter quam ſolum licitum eſt iunioribus maiorum ſuorum motibus reſiſtere: Although Honorius were accurſed or condemned of the Eaſt Church after his death, you muſt vnderſtand that he was accuſed of hereſie, for the which onely it is lawfull for the inferiours to reſiſt the doings of their ſuperiours. Here a Pope himſelfe plainly confeſſeth, that Honorius his predeceſſor was an heretike.

Pope Stephen the 6. tooke vp Formoſus bodie, and cut off two fingers of his right hand, and buried him againe in a lay-mans Sepulchre. Then followed Romanus the 1. Theodorus the 2. Iohannes the 9. and reſtored Formoſus with his decrees, iudging him to be lawfull Biſhop. After them commeth Sergius the 3. who tooke vp the bodie againe, cut off the head, and caſt it into Tyber. The Ieſuite anſwereth, that Stephanus and Sergius erred onely in a matter of fact. A goodly cloake to couer the filthineſſe of their ghoſtly fathers withall.

But by your leaue a little: doe you not hold it to be an article of faith to beleeue the Pope to bee the head of Chriſts Church? Then was it an article of faith to hold that Formoſus was right Pope, for at that time there was no other: Ergo, Stephanus and Sergius erred in faith, defining the contrarie.

All that you can ſay, is this: that it was not yet determined and decreed for an article of faith, ſo to beleeue: ſee, I pray you, theſe mens faith is pinned vpon Popes ſleeues. Why maſters, the rule of faith is certaine, you cannot make new articles of faith now, but onely declare and explane thoſe that are: as one of your owne Popes well ſaith; Articuli fidei habent probari ex ſcripturis: The articles of faith muſt be proued out of Scripture, and are contained in the Symbole. Ioan. 22. Extra. tit. 14. cap. 5. But doe you not thinke that theſe iolly Popes, that would rake the dead out of their graues, for their holineſſe might deſerue at Gods hand, to haue a priuiledge not to erre in faith?

Gregorius 3 epiſtol. ad Bonifacium thus determineth, Virum vxore infirmitate correpta, & non valente ei debitum reddere, aliam ducere, &c. The husband if his wife be taken with any infirmitie, ſo that ſhe cannot performe her due vnto him, may marrie another. Pope Nicholas 1. de matrimon. can. 6. decreed cleane contrarie: They that were ſound when they married, and afterward fall into any infirmitie: ob hanc infirmitatem coniugia talium diſſolui non poſſunt: becauſe of this infirmitie their mariage muſt not be diſſolued. One of theſe muſt needes be in error: for one ſaith, that becauſe of the infirmitie of the wife, mariage may bee diſſolued: the other ſaith contrarie. Neither doth Bellarmine helpe the matter, in ſaying, that Gregorie ſpeaketh of a continuall impotencie and weakenes of nature, and ſo the mariage was, ex errore contractum, contracted of error and ignorance: and ſuch kinde of mariages may lawfully bee looſed, being indeede no mariages: Hæc ille. Contra. But it is plaine that Gregorie ſpeaketh of infirmitie or ſicknes, that the wife is taken withall, correpta, not that was continually vpon her: and howſoeuer it is, both theſe Popes vſing the ſame word, Infirmitie, and ſo meaning the ſame thing, cannot be excuſed from contrarietie.

Nicholaus 1. de baptiſmo decret. 1. alloweth baptiſme made onely in the name of Chriſt, without expreſſe mention of the Trinitie: which is a manifeſt error, and contrarie to the Scripture, Math. 28. 19. Bellarmines anſwere is, Eum non definiendo ſic dixiſſe, ſed vt particularem doctorem: That he ſpake this not definitiuely,but as a particular Doctor. Contra. A weake defence : for where elſe is the Popes definite ſentence to be found,but in his decrees publiſhed to the whole world,as this is? and it is placed amongſt your owne Canons,Decret.par.3.diſt.4.cap.24.

*Alexander 3.Lateranenſ.concil.part.6.cap.*8.forbiddeth mariage to be made, *cum ſorore ſponſæ defunctæ,*with her ſiſter that was eſpouſed and betrothed,and is now dead.

*Benedictus part.6.cap.*27. determineth cleane contrarie : Qui vnam ſororem deſponſauerit, ſi eam non cognouerit,poteſt aliam ſororem ſibi matrimonio copulare: He that hath eſpouſed to himſelfe one ſiſter,if he haue not knowne her,may marrie the other ſiſter.

*Alexand.ibid.cap.*8. Matrimonium contractum per verba de præſenti cum alio initum diſſoluendum indicat: He iudgeth matrimonie contracted with one by words of the preſent tence,and yet made with another,to be voide. Benedictus determineth contrarie, *cap.*28. for the caſe is put of one R. that was contracted with one *Mary,*by words of the preſent tence,and nothing wanted but ſolemnization of the mariage : afterward the ſaid *R.*marieth another: If there be no other let (ſaith he) beſide this mutuall conſent and contract, Secunda matrimonia inuiolabiliter obſeruanda iudicamus: We giue ſentence that the ſecond mariage hold. Now one of theſe Popes, the one being ſo contrarie to the other, muſt needes be in an error.

Syluester the ſecond was a Necromancer and a Coniurer, and therefore fallen from the faith. Bellarmine ſaith,he was a good man,and all are fables and lyes that are tolde of him : and becauſe he was cunning in Geometrie , that ignorant age ſtraightwaies iudged him to bee giuen to Necromancie.

Thus we may take the Ieſuites word,if we will. But the ſtorie is reported by authors of better credit then Bellarmine: as *Iohannes Stella, Platina, Petrus Premonſtratenſ. Nauclerus, Antoninus. Fox pag.*167.

Anastaſius was a Neſtorian heretike,whoſe hereſie was this,that there are,as two natures,ſo alſo two perſons in Chriſt, *Alphonſ.de caſtro lib.*1.*de hæreſib.cap.*4.

Celestinus is reported by Laurentius Valla a Canon of Rome, to haue been a Neſtorian heretike,de donation.Conſtantin.

Now commeth in Pope Hildebrand, or rather Heldebrand, for he was a very brand of hell fire ; called Gregory the ſeuenth : Of whome Benno writeth thus : that he poyſoned ſixe Popes his predeceſſors to make himſelfe a way to the Popedome : that he was a Coniurer,a rayſer of Diuels,and in his rage he caſt the ſacrament into the fier.But ſaith Harding our countrey man,though vnworthily,Benno was his enemy,and wrote of diſpleaſure:and Bellarmine thinketh that ſome Lutherane was the author of the booke,which goeth vnder the name of *Benno,*who was Cardinal in this Hildebrands time. But Benno onely doth not thus report of him : he was openly twiſe for the ſame crimes condemned in Councell : firſt at Wormes : then after depoſed in the Councell at Brixia in Italie, and Pope Clement the third elected to ſucceede him. And the ſaid Gregory died in exile, of whome Antoninus reporteth, that before his death, he repented him of his inſolency ſhewed toward the Emperor Henry the fourth ; whom with his wife and young child bare foote, and bare legd,he had cauſed three dayes together, in extreame froſt and colde, to waite at his palace gates at *Canuſium,*before he could ſpeake with him. Yet this Hildebrand for all theſe inſolent, cruell, and diſhoneſt parts,is commended by our papiſts, Harding, Bellarmine and other,for a deuout Catholike man,who did all things of a zeale to the Church. By this you may iudge,whom our aduerſaries count a Catholike man.

Defenſ.Aplog.

Pope Iohn the 22. affirmed, that the ſoules lye in a traunce till the day of iudgement,and feele neither payne nor ioye. *Harding,*and likewiſe Bellarmine anſwere, that this was an error, but no hereſie. Yet in the vniuerſitie of Paris,it was condemned for hereſie,as Gerſon writeth. Againe ſaith Harding, he held it onely as a priuate opinion. But Maſſæus ſaith, that Pope Iohn preached this hereſie and ſent out preachers to maintaine it. He was condemned (ſaith he) with his error by the diuines of Paris in the preſence of Philip the French King, before he was Pope, when he was yet but a priuate Doctor. But the contrary is proued by Biſhop Iewel, that he was Pope 13.yeares before Philip was King, *Iuel.defenſ.Apolog.*pag.667.

Pope Iohn the 23. denied the life to come, and the reſurrection of the bodie : And this hereſie was openly obiected againſt him in the Councell of Conſtance. Bellarmine and Harding before him, anſwere, that he was not the rightfull Pope, for there were three at that time, and therefore might erre. But Platina ſaith,that he was choſen at Bononia, by the conſent of all the Cardinals, *ex Iuel.*pag.671.

Laſtly, Pope Engenius the fourth was condemned and depoſed as an heretike in the Councell of Baſile. Where the Ieſuite hath no other anſwere,then by condemning the Couucell as Schiſmaticall,to acquite the Pope, *lib.3.de pontif.cap.*14.

By theſe examples it may appeare to the indifferent reader, that it is no rare nor impoſſible thing,for the Popes of Rome to erre,yea become playne heretikes. And as for that ſhifte of the Ieſuite, ſuite, that they are no longer Popes, when they openly begin to teach hereſie, this is as Alphonſus De hæreſib. lib.1.cap.4. ſaith, In re ſeria verbis velle iocari, to dally with words in a ſerious and earneſt matter. And ſo euery Biſhop ſhall be as well priuiledged as the Pope, and cannot fall into hereſie: for why may we not ſay that a Biſhop, when he is knowne to be an heretike, ceaſeth to be Biſhop any longer, as the Pope is no longer Pope; and ſo as long as he remayneth Biſhop, cannot poſſiblie be an heretike? Surely this is but paltrie and beggarly ſtuffe.

Neither haue we named all the Popes, that are found to haue erred publikely, and iudicially: as Lucius doth allow marriages made without conſent of parents; de raptorib.cap.cum cauſa: Euariſtus before him defineth ſuch not to be lawfull marriages, but rather, ſtupra & adulteria, whoredomes and adulteries, epiſt.1. One of theſe two decreeing thus contrarie each to other, muſt needes be in an error. Oldendorpius, and Duarenus doe thinke that Lucius is in an error, and they thinke right: but Antonius Delphinus to iuſtifie the practiſe herein of the Popiſh Church, doth impute the error to Euariſtus.

Innocentius the 1. did definitiuely hold, that it was neceſſarie for infants to receiue the Communion, which is a manifeſt error: Auguſtine ſo writeth of him, who was in the ſame error himſelfe, cont.Iulian.lib.1.cap.2.

Innocentius againe writing to Decentius, affirmeth that none of the Apoſtles did preach in Italie, France, Spaine, Africa, but Peter, and whom he ſent, decr.p.1.diſt.11.c.11. which one of your owne writers ſaith is contrarie to Saint Pauls epiſtles, and the ſtorie of the Actes, Eſpenc.in 2.Timoth.p.177.

Nicholas the 4. did define publikely, that neither Chriſt or his Apoſtles had any thing in property, Sext.decret.lib.5.tit.12.c.3.

Iohn the 22. defineth this aſſertion to be hereſie, for any man to ſay, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles had nothing, Extrau.tit.14.cap.4.

And to conclude, it is a rule in their owne law: Error cui non reſiſtitur approbari videtur: Error, that is not reſiſted, is approued, Extrau.Iohann.tit.5.c.3. And by theſe reaſons, few of the Popes ſhall be free from error, who haue ſuffered, thorough their idle and voluptuous life, many errors and hereſies to grow vp vnder their noſe without checke.

Let vs ſee what a generall Councell hath determined of this matter, Concil.Baſilienſ.epiſtol.ſynod. 8. This priuiledge, ſay they, not to erre, hath not been granted, communi lege, by a common or perpetuall law to any, not to the Angels, for many of them fell; not to our firſt parents, for they were deceiued: Non ſummis pontificibus, quorum nonnulli in hæreſes & errores lapſi eſſe dicuntur, & leguntur, Not vnto the chiefe Biſhops, for many of them are read to haue fallen into error and hereſie.

The teſtimonie of the glorious Martyrs is this: Maſter Bilney holy Martyr, accuſed and condemned for this article with others, that he ſhould ſay, That theſe fiue hundred yeeres there hath been no good Pope, nor in all the time paſt we can finde but fiftie; for they haue neither preached, nor liued well, &c. But till now haue borne the keyes of Simon, &c. Fox.pag.1001.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr: I thinke verely that ſo long as the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles were perſecuted and martyred (he meaneth the 30. Biſhops of Rome, that were put to death for Chriſt,) there were good Chriſten men, and no longer: pag.1252. If the Popes haue hardly been good Chriſten men this long time, much leſſe haue they been freed from error.

De Baptiſ.lib. 2.cap.3. Laſtly, Auguſtine is not a whit afraid to ſay, Epiſcoporum literas per ſermonem ſapientiorem cuiuſlibet in ea re peritioris, & per aliorum epiſcoporum grauiorem authoritatem, & per concilia licere reprehendi, ſi in eis à veritate deuiatum ſit. That the decrees of all Biſhops whatſoeuer (not excluding Popes) may be corrected either by the ſentence of wiſer men in that point, wherein they erred, or by the better aduiſed ſentence of other Biſhops, or by Councels may bee reuerſed, where they doe erre. Ergo, it is poſſible for Popes, by his iudgement, to erre.

A PART OR APPENDIX OF THIS QVESTION, whether the Church of Rome may erre or not.

The Papiſts.

48.Error. THey doe not onely affirme that the Pope cannot erre, but that the Church of Rome alſo cannot be deceiued in matters of faith, ſo long as the Apoſtolike See remaineth there, which, they ſay, is like there to remaine to the end of the world. Bellarmin.lib.3.de pontif.cap 4. Hereupon Panormitane doubteth not to ſay, that he would preferre the iudgement of the Cardinals of Rome, before the iudgement of the whole world: this he ſaid, ſtanding vp in the Councell of Baſile, Fox. pag.669. ex Ænea Syluio.

Argum.1. The Rhemiſts vpon thoſe words of S.Paul, Rom.1.5. your faith is publiſhed through the whole world, doe thus inferre: See (ſay they) the great prouidence of God in the preſeruation of the Roman common faith. In times paſt the Romane faith and Catholike all one: Ergo, that See cannot erre in faith.

We anſwere: they muſt proue their Romiſh faith and Popiſh religion, to be the ſame which was prayſed and commended by the Apoſtle, or elſe they gaine nothing: but that ſhall they neuer doe.

Argum.*2. So long as the Apoſtolike See remaineth at Rome, it ſhall be preſerued from error, but that is like there to remaine till the worlds end: for it onely remaineth, when all other Apoſtolike Sees are gone: and it is very probable, that if this See could haue been ouerthrowen, it ſhould haue been done by the incurſion and inuaſion of the Gothes, Vandals, Turkes, the emulation of Princes, diuiſions and ſchiſmes of Popes themſelues: yet for all this it ſtandeth ſtill, and hath ſo continued almoſt 1600. yeeres, and ſhall ſo continue ſtill. Ergo, the Romane Church cannot erre. Bellarm.lib.2.cap.4.Rhemiſt.annot.in 2.Theſſal.2.ſect.9.

We anſwere: Firſt, it is a great vntruth, that all other Apoſtolike Sees are gone, for there is a ſucceſſion at Antioch, Alexandria, Conſtantinople, Epheſus, euen at this day. Secondly, it is falſe, that the See of Rome hath continued in that religion it now profeſſeth, which indeede is no religion, but ſuperſtition and hereſie, theſe 1600. yeeres: for firſt till Gregories time, which was 600. yeeres after Chriſt, none of the Popes would be called vniuerſall Biſhops: and it was more then 300. yeeres, from Gregory the firſt to Sylueſter the ſecond, when Sathan is thoughtfully to be let looſe: for he by the diuell was aduanced to the papacie: All theſe yeeres therefore you muſt ſtrike off in your account. Thirdly, that the See of Rome, which is the ſeate of Antichriſt, hath continued many yeeres, we grant: for it is the iuſt iudgement of God vpon the world, becauſe they loued not the truth, that they ſhould be deluded a long time, and deceiued by Antichriſt, and beleeue lies: ſo did S. Paul propheſie, 2. Theſſ. 2. 10. 11. And we grant alſo that that Antichriſtian See ſhall in ſome ſort remaine till the comming of Chriſt, whom he ſhall deſtroy with the brightnes of his appearing, as S. Paul ſaith. You haue gained therefore nothing by this, but that Rome is the ſeate of Antichriſt.

The Proteſtants.

It is euident and plaine, and neede not much proofe, that the Romane Church, as alſo any particular viſible Church, may not onely erre in faith, but fall cleane away into hereſie and Idolatrie, as we ſee it come to paſſe in the Church of Rome.

Argum.*1. The Church of Rome hath no better aſſurance of their continuance, then the Church of the Iewes had before Chriſt, no nor yet ſo great, for they were a peculiar and choſen nation. But Iudah fell and tranſgreſſed, and committed idolatrie in the raigne of Ahaz and therefore the prophet Eſay complaineth and ſaith, from the ſole of the foote to the head, there is nothing ſound chap. 1. verſ. 6.

Neither are they better then the Church of Epheſus was in S. Iohns time, who was as able (I thinke) to keepe that Church from error, as the Pope is to keepe Rome: yet the Lord threatneth to remoue his candleſticke from amongſt them, vnleſſe they did amend, Reu. 2. 5. Ergo, the Church of Rome may erre.

Argum.*2. The Pope may erre, as we haue before ſhewed: Ergo, the Church of Rome: for the Apoſtolike See, as they ſay, is the cauſe that no error can approch or come neere them. Therefore (me thinketh) the Ieſuite committeth a foule abſurdity, in ſaying, the Church of Rome cannot ſo much as erre perſonally, and yet they grant that the Pope may erre perſonally. So by this reaſon the body ſhould haue a greater priuiledge then the head: the Church of Rome ſhould be freer from error then the Pope, who ſhould preſerue it from error: this ſure is a great abſurditie in Popiſh diuinity, Bellarm.cap.*4.

3 It is confeſſed by our aduerſaries themſelues, that the Church of Rome may erre: as the Councell at Rome vnder Adrian the ſecond erred, ſaith the Ieſuite, in determining Honorius to be an heretike, one of his predeceſſors, chap. 11.

The Councell of the Italian Biſhops at Brixia erred in condemning Gregory the ſeuenth, who was, if you will beleeue Harding, a vertuous and an holy man: Nay Paulus Iouius a popiſh Biſhop Lib.20.fine. confeſſeth, that Adrianus the ſixte was made Pope, mira & pudenda Senatorum factioſorum ſuffragatione, through the ſtrange and ſhamefull ſuffrages of factious Cardinals, becauſe they preferred a ſtranger before their owne order.

But our aduerſaries haue a tricke, to ſhift off all this that hath been ſaid: They erred in a matter of fact, not in any poynt of faith. Yet they cannot ſo cloſely conuey the matter away: for Panormitane euen in ſuch queſtions alſo preferreth the iudgement of the Cardinals before the whole Fox.pag.669.
world, ſpeaking in the defence of Eugenius, who was chalenged in the Councell of Baſile, for the diſſolution of the Councell, which he did (ſaith Panormitane) with the aduice of the Cardinals: whoſe iudgement he ſo much eſteemeth in this matter, which concerned not faith, namely, for the diſſoluing of the Councell.

Appendix.Concil.Baſil.ex opuſc.Iohan.Patriarch.Conſtantinop. We reade thus, Quod dicitur, eccleſia Romana ſemper immaculata permanſit, & permanebit, intelligi debet verum, quamdiu ligabit iuſtè, claue non errante. Whereas it is ſaid, the Church of Rome hath alwayes remained vnſpotted, and ſhall ſo continue ſtill, it muſt bee vnderſtood to make it true, ſo long as ſhee bindeth iuſtly, the key not erring. Their ſentence is therefore, that the Church of Rome may erre in diſpenſing of the keyes, &c.

Saint Hierome writing againſt Vigilantius ſaith, Galliam ſolam hareſeωn monſtra non habuiſſe: That onely France of all Churches was free from hereſie. In ſaying onely France, the Church of Rome is not excepted: and this ſaying of S. Hierome is approued by one of your owne writers, Eſpenc. in 1. ad Timoth. p. 383.

The ſame father alſo miſliketh a certaine cuſtome, or abuſe rather of the Romane Church, that Deacons were preferred before Prieſts, and ſaith, they did not, rectè facere, doe that which was right, they were therfore in an error. And this ſentence is inſerted into their owne decrees, diſt. 93. cap. legimus.

Againe, Decr. part. 2. cauſ. 35. quaeſt. 9. cap. 6. Nicholaus, ſententia Romanæ ſedis, &c. The ſentence of the See of Rome may be changed into a better: Ergo, that See may erre and be deceiued.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, OF THE SPIRITVALL iuriſdiction and power of the Biſhop of Rome.

THis queſtion hath two parts: the firſt, whether the Biſhop of Rome haue a coactiue and conſtraining power to make lawes to binde the conſcience, and to puniſh the tranſgreſſors. Secondly, whether other Paſtors and Biſhops haue their iuriſdiction immediatly from God, or from the Pope.

Other queſtions alſo there are, which belong to this matter, as whether the Pope bee the chiefe Iudge in controuerſies of faith, which we haue alreadie handled, entreating of the perfection and authoritie of the Scriptures: as alſo whether it be in the Pope to ſummon, diſſolue, and confirme Councels, which hath been ſufficiently declared before, in the controuerſie concerning Councels. Concerning other queſtions, as the canonizing of Saints, which they ſay appertaineth to the Pope, the election and confirmation of Biſhops, pardons and indulgences, we ſhall haue fitter occaſion to deale in them, in their ſeuerall places and controuerſies. At this time we purpoſe onely to touch theſe two poynts aforeſaid, of the Popes eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE POPE may make lawes to binde the conſcience, and puniſh the tranſgreſſors thereof iudicially.

The Papiſts.

49. Error. THat the Pope hath ſuch authoritie, to make lawes for the whole Church, which ſhall binde vnder paine of damnation, as well as the lawes of God, it is the generall opinion of the Papiſts, Fox 981. articul. 13. & pag. 1101. articul. cont. Lambert. 29. But they put in this clauſe, ſo they bee not vniuſt lawes nor contrarie to the diuine law, Bellarm. cap. 15. And yet they ſay that the Pope may make lawes, hauing not the authoritie nor warrant of Scripture, neither is it neceſſarie for theſe lawes to be expreſſed or diduced out of Scripture. And theſe lawes are not onely of externall rites and orders of the Church, but euen of things neceſſarie to ſaluation, Bellarm. cap. 15. in reprehenſ. Caluini. Yea he addeth further, that in matters not neceſſarie to ſaluation, he cannot be diſobeyed without deadly ſinne, and offence of conſcience, cap. 16. loc. 1. Bulla Leonis 10. aduerſus Lutherum, Fox. pag. 1283. col. 1.

Argum. 1. The Apoſtles preſcribed a law concerning the abſtaining from blood, things ſtrangled, and offered to Idols, concerning the which Chriſt gaue them no precept. But this law did bind the people in conſcience: for euery where the Apoſtles gaue ſtreight charge, for the keeping of the decrees, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the Apoſtles commanded no new thing, but the ſame which they themſelues were taught of Chriſt, that they ſhould take heede of offence: the Chriſtians therefore were not bound in conſcience any further to keep the decrees concerning ſuch things, then for auoyding of ſcandall and offence. Secondly, for afterward the offence being taken away, the law alſo ceaſed: and Saint Paul giueth libertie, notwithſtanding this law, to eate things offered to Idols, if it might be done without offence, asking no queſtion (ſaith he) for conſcience ſake, 1. Cor. 10. 27. which Epiſtle it is certaine was written after that decree of the Apoſtles, Act. 15. 29. Ergo, their conſciences were not hereby obliged and bound.

1 Bellarmine replieth to the firſt, that though the end of the Apoſtles precept was to auoide offence, yet the precept it ſelfe was as touching the not eating of things offered to Idols, ſtrangled and blood: as the end of the Morall law, as not to ſteale, not to kill, is charitie: yet the law bindeth vs not onely to that end, but to abſtaine alſo from killing and ſtealing: *cap.*16.*reſponſ ad Caluin.loc.*5.

Contra. Bellarmine here ſheweth either his wilfull ignorance, or raſh ouerſight, making no difference betweene things indifferent, and euill of their owne nature: for to kill, to ſteale, are euill in themſelues and ſimply forbidden, and not onely for offence: to eate or not to eate, this or that, are indifferent in themſelues, and not vnlawfull but in reſpect of the offence, which followeth.

2 Bellarmine to the ſecond point anſwereth, that this law of the Apoſtles is now abrogated, not becauſe the offence ceaſeth, but becauſe the law vniuerſally is determined: as for example, the end of faſting is to tame the fleſh rebelling againſt the ſpirit, which reaſon ſhall ceaſe after the reſurrection, and then alſo the law of faſting ſhall no more be needfull.

Contra. Father Robert Bellarmine maketh here a long diſcourſe, and would ſeeme to ſay ſomewhat, and yet it proueth iuſt nothing: and if he ſay any thing, it maketh for vs: for as the law of faſting ſhall then ceaſe, when the reaſon and end thereof ſhall ceaſe: ſo this law of the Apoſtles is vniuerſally abrogate, becauſe there is no more feare or danger of offence, which was the reaſon of the making of this decree.

3 To the place alleaged out of S. Paul to the Corinthians, he hath theſe anſweres: firſt, that when S. Paul did ſo write to the Corinthians, that decree of the Apoſtles began then to bee abrogate. But he himſelfe miſliketh this anſwere, and therefore it neede no further confutation: and his reaſon is good, that the law did yet hold, becauſe the reaſon of the law, that is to auoid offence, was not yet remoued. Secondly, it may be thought, ſaith he, that as yet the decree of the Apoſtles was not come to the Corinthians, and therefore the Apoſtle ſo writeth.

Contra. Firſt, the decree was generally preſcribed to all the Gentiles conuerted to God, and not to them of Antioch onely, as Iames determineth, Act. 15. 19. And therefore ſeeing it concerned the Corinthians as well as other Churches, he ſpeaketh without ground, to ſay, that it was not yet deliuered to the Church of the Corinthians. Secondly, admit the Corinthians knew it not, S. Paul yet did know it, and therefore he would not haue written any thing contrarie to the decree which he knew, though they knew it not.

*Argum.*2. It is neceſſarie to haue ſome lawes, beſide the diuine law, for the gouernment of the Church: for the word of God is too vniuerſall, neither is ſufficient to direct euery particular action: therefore other eccleſiaſticall lawes muſt bee added: but euery good and neceſſarie law hath a coactiue and conſtraining power, and bindeth the conſcience to obedience: Ergo, the conſtitutions of the Popes and Councels, which are the onely eccleſiaſticall lawes, do binde the conſcience, *Bellarm.cap.*16.lib.4.

Anſw. Firſt, the word of God containeth all neceſſarie rules to ſaluation: wherefore all lawes of the Church concerning matters of faith, are but explanations, and interpretations of the rules of faith ſet forth in Scripture, if they be godly lawes, and ſo are not the lawes of men but of God, and doe binde the conſcience to the obſeruation thereof: as the lawes of the Church, which commaund Chriſtians to reſort to the congregation to heare Gods word, and reuerently to receiue the Sacraments, are the very ordinances and commaundements of Chriſt, who enioyned his Apoſtles to preach, and baptize, and his faithfull people to heare and to be baptized, and therefore in conſcience wee are bound to the obedience hereof. Secondly, there are other eccleſiaſticall lawes appointed for the publike order of the Church, concerning externall rites and circumſtances of perſons and place, as the houres of prayer, the forme of the Leiturgie and publike ſeruice, the times fitteſt for the celebration of the Sacraments, and ſuch like. Theſe and ſuch like conſtitutions doe not binde in conſcience abſolutely, in reſpect of the things themſelues, which are indifferent, but in regard of that contempt, and offence which might follow in the not keeping of them: contempt to our ſuperiours, whom we ought in all lawfull things to obey: offence, in grieuing the conſcience of our weake brethren. So that euen theſe conſtitutions alſo which are made according to the rules of the Goſpell, that is, vnto edification, to the glorie of God, and for auoyding of offence, doe neceſſarily binde vs in conſcience, not conſcience of the things themſelues, which are but external, but conſcience of obedienee to our Chriſtian Magiſtrates, and conſcience in taking heede of all iuſt offence: *ſic Caluin. Inſtitut.lib.*4.*cap.*10.11.

3 But we are not, God be thanked, driuen to any ſuch ſtreight, that if there be neede of any ſuch eccleſiaſticall lawes, we ſhould runne for ſuccour to the Popes beggerly decretals. (And yet ſuch Canons, as were in force amongſt them, agreeable to the rules of the Goſpell, we doe not refuſe.) But if there bee want and penurie of good lawes, euery Church hath as full authoritie, to make decrees and ordinances for the peace and order, and quiet gouernment thereof, not as the Pope of Rome hath ouer the vniuerſall Church (for that by right is none, or if it bee, it is but an vſurped power) but as the Biſhop of Rome hath in his owne Biſhoprick and dioces.

The Proteſtants.

WHat our ſentence is of this matter, it doth partly appeare by that which wee haue alreadie ſaid: that the Pope hath no power ouer the whole Church, and therefore can make no lawes to binde the conſcience or otherwiſe for the ſame, for it belongeth not to his charge. Secondly, wee ſay, that neither he, nor any eccleſiaſticall gouernment beſide, can make lawes of things neceſſarie to ſaluation, other then thoſe which are in Scripture contained. Thirdly, all eccleſiaſticall lawes made concerning externall rites, and publike order, doe not otherwiſe binde the conſcience, then in regard of our obedience due to Chriſtian Magiſtrates in lawfull things, and for auoyding of ſcandall and offence: But in reſpect of the things commaunded, ſuch lawes doe not binde: Caluin.loc.prædicto.

*Argum.*1. Saint Iames ſaith, There is one law-giuer which is able to ſaue and to deſtroy, chap.4.12. He therefore onely maketh lawes to binde the conſcience, that is able to ſaue and to deſtroy: but that cannot the Pope doe: Ergo, Caluin.argum.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the lawes of men doe binde vnder paine of damnation, in as much as God is offended and diſpleaſed with their diſobedience, and ſo iudgeth them worthie of puniſhment, *cap.*20. All this we graunt, that the lawes of men being good lawes, doe binde in conſcience in reſpect of the contempt and diſobedience to higher powers, but not in reſpect of the things commanded, which in their nature are indifferent. The Ieſuite ſhould haue ſaid; that God is offended not onely for their diſobedience, but ſimply for not doing the things commaunded, which he durſt not ſay: As when the Magiſtrate for ſome profitable and politike end commaundeth vpon ſome daies abſtinence from fleſh, it is not the eating or not eating of fleſh, that ſimply diſpleaſeth and offendeth God; but the contempt of the law, and wilfull and obſtinate diſobedience to the Magiſtrate: for otherwiſe the vſe of the creature is free and indifferent.

Cap.15.lib.4. de pontif. *Arg.*2. We will beate the Ieſuite with his own ſtaffe: he ſaith not, that all lawes do bind the conſcience, but onely iuſt lawes, in the which foure conditions are required. Firſt, that they be made for ſome profitable end: ſo are not popiſh lawes which nouriſh ſuperſtition, and haue no edifying, and ſome of them doe commaund plaine idolatrie, and open impietie, as the worſhipping of Images, the adoration of the Maſſe, and ſuch like. Secondly, ſaith he, they muſt not bee contrarie to Gods law; but ſuch are many of their ordinances, yea the moſt of them. Thirdly, they muſt be made by him that hath authoritie: therefore none of the Popes lawes binde the vniuerſall Church, for it is not ſubiect to him. Fourthly, the forme and manner of impoſing ſuch lawes muſt be orderly: but their lawes are moſt diſordered, impoſed vpon the Church violently, without their conſent, or any good proceeding. Thus you ſee, euen by their owne confeſſion, their lawes cannot binde.

One thing more I muſt needes tell them of. If they would needes haue their lawes to bind men in conſcience, they ſhould haue made fewer of them: now they are ſo many, that if the breach of them were an offence of conſcience, do men what they could, they ſhould daily make ſhipwrack of their conſcience. It is a true ſaying that is reported of one Thomas Arthur, a good Chriſtian, it is an homely ſpeech, becauſe the matter was ſomewhat homely, yet he did hit the marke. Like as (ſaith he) croſſes were ſet vp againſt the walles of London, that no man ſhould piſſe there; and while there were but a few, men for reuerence of the croſſes, would not piſſe againſt the wall: but when in euery corner they ſet vp croſſes, men of neceſſitie were faine to piſſe vpon the wall and croſſes too. So (ſaith he) if there had been fewer lawes of the Church, they would haue been better kept: but now they are ſo many, that men cannot chuſe but breake them. Fox pag.999.

*Argum.*3. The Pope hath no power to correct the tranſgreſſors of his lawes ouer the whole Church: Ergo, he cannot make lawes to binde the whole Church. The argument followeth, for he that hath abſolute power to make lawes, hath alſo power to command obedience to the lawes ſo made. And your owne law ſaith, Iuriſdictio nullius videretur momenti, ſi correctionem aliquam non haberet: That iuriſdiction is nothing worth, that hath no conſtraining power, *Innocen.*3.*decr.Greg. lib.*1.*tit.*29.*cap.*28.

The firſt is thus prooued: the Pope indeede hath taken vpon him many times to thunder out his excommunications againſt other Churches: but it was an vſurped and tyrannicall power, and many times reſiſted, and controuled.

Fox pag.41. Pope Victor, anno 200. would haue excommunicate the Eaſt Churches about the keeping of Eaſter, but he was ſtaied by Irenæus. The Councell of Conſtance did ſend out excommunications againſt Pope *Benedict.ſeſſ.*36.

In the Councell of Baſil, Pope Eugenius cited Cardinall Iulian, with the reſt of the fathers there aſſembled, to come to Bononia, vnder great penaltie: they likewiſe cited Eugenius vnder the like penaltie, either to come or ſend to Baſil. Fox pag.668.

Pope Leo the 10. in his fumiſh Antichriſtian Bull, excommunicated and condemned Luther. Luther with better right pronounceth ſentence of excommunication againſt him, being an aduerſarie to Chriſt, in theſe words: According to the power and might, that the ſpirit of Chriſt, and efficacie of our faith can doe in theſe our writings, if you ſhall perſiſt ſtill in your furie, wee condemne you together with this Bull and all the decretall, and giue you to Sathan, to the deſtruction of the fleſh, that your ſpirit in the day of the Lord may be deliuered: in the name, which you perſecute, of Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. Fox pag. 1286.

Thus you ſee what ſmall force there is of theſe popiſh leaden Buls, and preſumptuous excommunications: for it falleth out iuſtly by them, as the Wiſeman ſaith, As the Sparrow and Swallow by flying eſcape, ſo the curſe cauſeleſſe ſhall not come. Now ſeeing therefore the Pope faileth of power and ſtrength to ſee his lawes executed in the vniuerſall Church, it cannot be that his lawes ſhould vniuerſally binde.

Prou.26.2.

Laſtly, let Auguſtine ſpeake: he thus defineth ſinne, Peccatum eſt dictum, factum, vel concupitum contra legem æternam Dei: Sinne is any thing done, ſaid, or coueted againſt the law of God: therefore the tranſgreſſion ſimply of the law of man is not ſinne; but as thereby alſo the law of God is tranſgreſſed: Ergo, ſimply it bindeth not the conſcience: for ſinne onely bindeth and toucheth the conſcience.

Contra Fauſtum lib.22. cap.27.

We haue alſo a moſt cleere teſtimonie of a prouinciall Councell, *ſynod. Moguntin. cap.*48. which I will ſet downe whole as it ſtandeth, as very pertinent to this place: Etſi hoc in præceptis diuinis non continetur, quod maiorum noſtrorum conſtitutiones iubent, tamen vt maioribus obediamus (ſaltem in ijs, quæ legi diuinæ non aduerſantur) diſerti iuris diuini eſt: vnde per occaſionem talium conſtitutionum tranſgreſſores grandis peccati rei ſunt, dum ex contemptu, aut cum ſcandalo charitatem violant, quorum vtrunque per ſe peccatum mortale operatur: alioqui eccleſia conſtitutiones ſuas charitati, & neceſſitati libenter ſubmittit: Although it be not expreſſely contained in the word of God, which the conſtitutions of our fathers doe commaund: yet that wee ſhould obey our Elders, eſpecially wherein they are not contrarie to the law of God, it is the expreſſe word of God: whereupon they, which are tranſgreſſors of ſuch conſtitutions, are guiltie of a great ſinne, in ſo much as doing it of contempt and by giuing of offence, they violate charitie: for the lawes of the Church muſt ſubmit themſelues to the rules of charitie and neceſſitie. This decree ſheweth, that the Church, or the gouernours thereof, are not to commaund lawes not warranted by Gods word: and that they binde vs to obedience no otherwiſe, then in reſpect of contempt, and offence which may be giuen: which is all one with that, which we affirmed before.

We haue alſo witneſſe of both the lawes: firſt Iuſtinian the Emperour thus writeth: Leges condere ſoli imperatori conceſſum eſt, &c. It is onely lawfull for the Emperour to make lawes: *Cod. lib.*1. *tit.*17. *leg.*11. If onely for the Emperour, then the Pope hath no authoritie to make lawes.

Their owne law alſo conſenteth with vs: Vrban 2. in his decree as it ſtandeth *in Gratiano part.*2. *cauſ.*19. *quæſt.*2. *cap.*2. alleageth the ſame place of Scripture, which wee produce for this matter, 2. Cor. 3. Where the ſpirit of God is, there is libertie; and if you be led by the ſpirit, you are no more vnder the law, &c. Ergo, we are not bound in conſcience to obey humane lawes, which infringe the libertie of the ſpirit, as the ſuperſtitious pontificiall lawes doe.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that wee are freed from Moſes ceremoniall lawes, but not from the obedience of Prelates, *reſp. ad argum.*5.

Contra. Firſt, if we be freed from the yoke of Iewiſh ceremonies, which were inſtituted of God, and were profitable for the time, much more are we deliuered from popiſh ceremonies, which are meere humane inuentions, and had neuer any good vſe. Secondly, Vrbanus in the former decree inferreth the contrarie, that the libertie of the ſpirit doth exempt men from the obedience of Prelates: for he thus concludeth, after he had alleaged a certaine diſtinction, of publike law, and priuate, calling that publike, which is ordained by the gouernours of the Church; that priuate, which is written in the heart of man by the ſpirit out of the word, which is of more force then the other: and the publike (ſaith he) ought to giue place to the priuate. Then he thus reſolueth, Whoſoeuer is led by this ſpirit, though his Biſhop do gainſay, eſt liber noſtra authoritate, is pronounced free by our authoritie.

Againe, there is another decree of *Vrban. cauſ.*25. *quæſt.*1. *cap.*6. Inde nouas leges condere poteſt, &c. The Biſhop of Rome may make lawes, where the Euangeliſts and Prophets haue ſaid nothing: but where our Lord or the Apoſtles, &c. haue defined any thing, there the Romane Biſhop cannot make a new law, &c. But now many of the Popes lawes are found to commaund many things directly contrarie to the Scriptures.

Let vs adde the ſeale of the Martyrs, maſter Bilney Martyr: As touching the multitude of lawes S. Auguſtine in his time did much complaine: and Gerſon alſo who marueiled, that wee could by any meanes liue in ſafetie among ſo many ſnares of conſtitutions, when as our forefathers being pure before their fall, could not obſerue one onely precept. Fox pag. 1000.

Maſter Lambert Martyr: If it be true, which is written in the decrees, that lawes bee neuer confirmed, till they be approoued by the common manners of them that ſhall vſe them, then cannot the Popes lawes binde all Chriſtian men; for the Greekes and Bohemians will neuer admit them: *pag.*1116.*reſp.ad articul.*29. Whereupon we conclude, that the Pope cannot make lawes to bind the whole Church.

THE SECOND PART OF THIS QVESTION, whether all Biſhops doe receiue their eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction from the Pope.

The Papiſts.

50. Error. THey denie not but that the power of order, as they call it, which conſiſteth in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is equally diſtributed to all Biſhops; and that they, as well as the Pope, doe receiue it immediatly by their conſecration, of God: but the power both of externall iuriſdiction, which ſtandeth vpon eccleſiaſticall cenſures, conſtitutions and decrees, and internall iuriſdiction, which is exerciſed in binding and looſing, is deriued, ſay they, from the Pope to all other Biſhops.

*Argum.*1. God tooke of the ſpirit that was in Moſes, and diſtributed it among the ſeuentie Numb.11.16. Elders, that were choſen to beare the burthen of gouernment with Moſes, and to be his helpers: the Lord tooke of his ſpirit, not by diminiſhing it, but by deriuing of his vertue to the reſt: but the Pope is now in the roume and place of Moſes in the Church: Ergo, from him to the reſt is this authoritie deriued.

Anſw. Firſt, Moſes example was extraordinarie, he was a figure of Chriſt, not of the Pope, Deut.18.verſ.15. The Pope might with better right ſtand vpon Aarons example, who was high Prieſt, not lay claime to Moſes office, who was the Prince and Captaine of the people: for the Pope, I trow, would bee chiefe Biſhop, and not Emperour too. Secondly, the meaning is not that God deriued Moſes ſpirit to the reſt: but beſtowed the like gift of propheſying vpon them, as Moſes had: ſurely neuer any mortall man had the ſpirit in ſuch abundance, that it could bee deuided into ſeuentie portions, and one Prophet to make many. The like phraſe is vſed, 2.King.2.15. where the Prophets ſaid, that the ſpirit of Eliah did reſt on Eliſha, that is, God endued him with an excellent ſpirit of propheſying, as Elias had. If they will vnderſtand this place alſo of deriuing of ſpirits; how then ſhall that bee taken in the ninth verſe where Eliſha praieth, that his ſpirit might be doubled vpon him? If his ſpirit were deriued from Eliah, how could it bee doubled vpon him? how could it be multiplied and increaſed? how could he haue more then was in the fountaine or originall, ſeeing he receiued all from thence?

3 What maketh this place, I pray you, for the power of externall iuriſdiction? Here it is ſaid that God gaue of his ſpirit to ſeuentie Elders and rulers of the people, and enabled them for their office; endued them with wiſedome, and knowledge, and dexteritie in iudging of the people: this maketh nothing for their purpoſe, vnleſſe they will alſo ſay, that there is a ſecret influence of knowledge and wiſedome deriued from the Pope to al other Biſhops, whereby they are made able to execute their office. But (I trow) they will not ſay ſo: for Alphonſus de caſtro truly ſaith of the Popes of Rome, Conſtat plures eorum adeo eſſe illiteratos, vt grammaticam penitus ignorent: It is certaine that many of them were ſo vnlearned, that they hard and ſcant knew their grammar.

4 The argument followeth not from one particular countrey, as this was of the Iewes, to the vniuerſall Church: that becauſe the ſeuentie Elders receiued iuriſdiction from Moſes (yet that cannot be prooued out of this place; for they were Rulers before, and commanders of the people, they were now but inwardly furniſhed, and further enabled) yet it were no good reaſon, that therefore the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters ouer the whole Church, ſhould receiue their power from one.

5 Neither doth it follow, that becauſe the Prince and ciuill Magiſtrate may beſtow ciuill offices, create Dukes, Earles, Lords, conſtitute Iudges, Deputies, Lieutenants, by his ſole authoritie; that by the ſame reaſon Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters ſhould receiue their power and office from their ſuperiours: for although the Church from ancient time hath thought it good, to make ſome inequalitie & difference in eccleſiaſticall offices for the peace of the Church; yet the ſuperiours haue not ſuch a ſoueraigne and commanding power ouer the reſt, as the Prince hath ouer his ſubiects.

*Argum.*2. If Biſhops and paſtors ſhould haue their iuriſdiction immediatly from God, and not from man, all Biſhops ſhould haue an equall iuriſdiction: but now we ſee it to be otherwiſe, that one Biſhop is ſet ouer one towne, another ouer twentie: therefore it is moſt like they haue their iuriſdiction from men, not immediatly from God: *Bellarm.argum.*4.

Anſw. 1. We doe not affirme, that the Biſhops, Paſtors and Miniſters of the Church haue their iuriſdiction, office or calling immediatly from God, as the Apoſtles, Prophets and Euangeliſts had; for ſuch callings were extraordinarie, and are now ceaſed in the Church: but that by right of their conſecration and receiuing of orders, according to the godly cuſtome & practiſe of that Church where they liue, mediately by the hands of thoſe, to whom in the name of the whole Church that care is committed: yet by the commaundement of God, they are appoynted to their ſeuerall offices and functions.

2 It followeth not, if they all haue their authoritie and power from God, that they ſhould be all of an equall degree: for we ſee that there are diuers degrees in the ciuill ſtate, there be Emperours, Kings, Dukes, all chiefe in their owne ſeignories, and all haue their calling from God; as S. Paul teacheth, Rom. 13.7. to ſome tribute, to ſome cuſtome, to ſome feare, to ſome honor belongeth. Here are diuers degrees, yet they are all ordained of God, verſ. 1. Yea in the ſame kingdome, immediatly by the hands of the Prince, ſome are created Earles, ſome Lords, ſome Knights, yet are their degrees vnequall. In the natural bodie the head immediatly conueyeth a ſenſitiue power to the organes of the ſight, the hearing, the taſt, and of the other ſenſes; yet are they not all of the ſame excellencie. And yet to make it more plaine; the Apoſtles, Prophets, Euangeliſts were immediatly called of God, yet were the Apoſtles in degree before the reſt: the Ieſuites argument then is not well knit togither.

3 One Biſhop (ſaith he) hath one towne, another hath twentie, &c. But this is nothing to the purpoſe; we ſpeake of the calling of Biſhops, and he of their prouinces and circuites: the largenes of their iuriſdiction, maketh not their degree higher; a Biſhop may haue a larger dioces then an Archbiſhop, as the Biſhop of Linolne hath then the Archbiſhop of Canturburie: yet, I trow, an Archbiſhop is before a Biſhop. We muſt diſtinguiſh then betweene Epiſcopatum, & dioiceſin, the office of a Biſhop, and his dioceſſe, his calling, and his title or dignitie: there may be a Biſhop without a dioceſſe, as a Miniſter without a charge; though neither of them be fit or conuenient: for it is contrarie to the Canon, that any man ſhould be abſolutely ordayned without a title. Chalced. concil. can. 6. But I ſpeake of that which is practiſed, not which ought to be. S. Paul ſaith, he that deſireth Epiſcopatum, the office of a Biſhop, &c. there was then Epiſcopatus, the calling of a Biſhop, though as yet no dioceſſe aſſigned, no title or dignitie annexed. So then we conclude thus: as touching the titles, dignities, honors belonging to the calling of Biſhops, as to be ſet ouer this Citie or that, this dioceſſe or another, they haue it by the donation of the Prince: as that good Emperor Frederike telleth Pope Adrian the fourth, Quicquid regalis papatus veſter habere dignoſcitur, largitione principum donatur: whatſoeuer princely dignitie your papacie hath, it is giuen by the liberalitie of princes.

And as for the office and iuriſdiction it ſelfe, it is not deriued from Rome, but in euery Church the ſpirituall paſtors thereof haue as full authoritie from God to ordaine and appoint Biſhops, Paſtors, Doctors, teachers, neceſſarie for the gouernment thereof, as the Biſhop of Rome hath, if he were a good Biſhop in his owne dioceſſe: therefore though we ſhould graunt the Ieſuites concluſion, that the calling of Biſhops is from men, which in our meaning we deny not; yet he hath gained nothing: for it followeth not, if from men, then from the Pope, as we haue ſhewed: and better arguments the Ieſuite hath none, then we haue ſeene.

The Proteſtants.

THat Biſhops haue not their Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction from Rome, but doe as well enioy it by right of their conſecration, election, inſtitution, in their owne precincts, circuites, prouinces, cities, townes; yea, as the Pope doth in his Biſhopricke, and by much better right, if they be good Biſhops, and louers of the truth: thus briefely it is proued.

Argum. 1. The Apoſtles had not their iuriſdiction from Peter, but all receiued it indifferently from Chriſt: this the Ieſuite doth not barely acknowledge, but proueth it by argument, againſt the iudgement of other Papiſts, chap. 23. Ergo, neither Biſhops are authoriſed from the Pope, though he were Peters ſucceſſor: for if he were (to grant it for diſputations ſake) he is no more to the Biſhops of the Church, then Peter was to the Apoſtles. If he gaue not the keyes to the Apoſtles; neither doth the Pope S. Peters ſucceſſor, to the Biſhops, the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: for they may with as great right challenge to be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, as he can to be S. Peters.

Bellarmine anſwereth, there is great difference betweene the ſucceeding of Peter by the Pope, and the ſucceſſion of the other Apoſtles in Biſhops: the Pope ſucceedeth Peter, not as Apoſtle, but as the ordinarie paſtor of the whole Church: the other Apoſtles were not ordinarie paſtors; and therefore the Biſhops cannot properly ſucceede them, for the Apoſtles had iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, they had power to found Churches, to write Canonicall bookes of Scripture, they had the gift of tongues, and of miracles, but Biſhops haue none of theſe. Againe, one is ſaid ſuccedere præcedenti, to ſucceede one that goeth before: the Biſhops then cannot be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, becauſe they were in the Apoſtles times.

Anſwere, to the firſt part concerning Peters ſucceſſion: firſt, let this be remembred, that the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that the Pope doth not ſucceede Peter, vt Apoſtolo, as an Apoſtle: then how commeth it aboute, that the Sea of Rome is called Apoſtolicall, and the Pope chalengeth to be called Apoſtolike, and ſaith his office is Apoſtolatus, a very Apoſtleſhip: from whence hath he this, ſeeing he hath nothing to doe with Peters Apoſtleſhip? Bellarmine, I thinke, will here beſhrew himſelfe. Secondly, hee cannot ſucceede Peter, as ordinarie paſtor of the whole Church, for ſo was hee neuer; and that power which he had ouer the whole Church, as other Apoſtles had, as the Ieſuite himſelfe confeſſeth, was Apoſtolike, not paſtorall: for that commiſſion, Goe teach all nations, Matth.28.19. And ye ſhall be witneſſes vnto me, to the vttermoſt parts of the earth, Act.1.8. was giuen to all the Apoſtles, and was therefore Apoſtolicall: of any other ſuch large and generall commiſſion giuen to Peter alone, we reade not. Wherefore, if the Pope neither ſucceede Peter as Apoſtle, which Bellarmine graunteth, nor as generall paſtor, as we haue proued: it will be found, that he is not Peters right ſucceſſor at all, as in deede he is not.

To the ſecond part we anſwere: firſt, that the Apoſtles were not properly ordinarie paſtors, we eaſely graunt; for they had charge of the whole Church, and were not tyed and limited to any one certaine place: yet Bellarmine againſt himſelfe in this place els where confeſſeth it, that Iames was paſtor & Epiſcopus, paſtor and Biſhop of Ieruſalem, lib.1.de pontifice,cap.26. Yet the argument followeth not, the Apoſtles calling was extraordinarie, and they had extraordinarie giftes; therefore they could haue no ſucceſſors: for it is not neceſſarie that the ſucceſſor ſhould haue all which his predeceſſor had: the Apoſtles ſucceeded the auncient Prophets. Ioh.4.38. You are entred into their labours, yet was their calling diuers: yea the Apoſtles were in Chriſts ſtead, 1.Cor.5.20. yet was there more in Chriſt, then in his Apoſtles. Secondly, we ſay then, that as the Apoſtles had extraordinarie giftes, as to pen Scripture, to worke miracles, and ſo had an extraordinarie calling; ſo had they ordinarie giftes, as of teaching, exhorting, admoniſhing, yet after a more excellent manner: the Biſhops then and paſtors of the Church, though they ſucceede them not for their extraordinarie giftes, yet are properly their ſucceſſors in feeding, teaching, and inſtructing, which giftes were not ſo extraordinarie in the Apoſtles, but that they were to continue vnto their poſteritie, as the Lord ſaith by his Prophet, My ſpirit that is vpon thee, and my words, which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeede, nor of thy ſeedes ſeed, from henceforth for euer, Iſay.59.21.

Thirdly, to Bellarmines laſt argument we anſwere: firſt, that it cannot be ſhewed, that there were any ſuch Biſhops, as he ſpeaketh of in the Apoſtles time, ſeeing the names of Epiſcopus and Preſbyter, of Biſhop and Elder are confounded in the Apoſtles writings, as the Ieſuite elſe where confeſſeth: Againe, the ſucceſſor and predeceſſor may be both at one time, as Valerius Biſhop of Hippo yet liuing, appointed Auguſtine his ſucceſſor, and Auguſtine appointed Eradius. And if it were not ſo, that the ſucceſſor might be aſſigned in the predeceſſors life, the Pope were like to haue a colde ſuite of it: for S. Peter, if there be any credit in thoſe records, *Clement. epiſtol.*1. ordayned Clement his ſucceſſor, while he liued. Clementem hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino, cui ſoli meæ prædicationis & doctrinæ cathedram trado: I ordaine this Clement to be your Biſhop, to whom only I leaue my chayre of doctrine; Notwithſtanding then, any thing which the Ieſuite hath yet ſaid, or is able to ſay, the Biſhops and Paſtors of Chriſts Church, doe as properly ſucceede the Apoſtles, as the Biſhop of Rome ſucceedeth Peter; yea with better right, vnleſſe he did embrace S. Peters doctrine.

*Argum.*2. The Apoſtles gaue no power or iuriſdiction to the Elders and Paſtors, whom they ordained, Act.20.28. Take heede to the flocke, ouer the which the holy Ghoſt hath made you Biſhops or ouerſeers: and Epheſ.4.11. He hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Paſtors and teachers. So then the paſtors and teachers, though ordained by the Apoſtles, yet had their calling and office from God and not from the Apoſtles: much leſſe now can they receiue their power from any, no not from the Pope: for he is no Apoſtle, no nor Apoſtolike man, hauing left the Apoſtolike faith.

To theſe places Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſpirit of God did appoint Biſhops and paſtors, but yet immediatly by the hands of the Apoſtles: And ſo God now alſo conſtituteth and ordayneth Biſhops, but immediately from the Pope, or his aſſignes.

Contra: in the giuing of orders two things are to be conſidered, the externall rite and ceremony outwardly vſed in the admittance of thoſe that are conſecrated and ſet apart for the holy functions, and the office and function it ſelfe whereto they are ordained. Concerning the externall rite and outward act, it is done and performed by men; ſuch was the impoſition of hands vſed by the Apoſtles: but if we reſpect the power and efficacie of the office it ſelfe, it is not conferred by men; but God concurreth with the Churches externall act, in enabling thoſe men to their ſpirituall office, whom the Church hath ſet apart. The Apoſtles layed on their hands in the ordaining of Biſhops or Paſtors, but their office they receiued of God: that externall rite was onely an outward teſtimonie of the Church, that ſuch men were marked and ſealed of God, for that office, as 1.Tim.4.14. Timothy his gift was giuen by propheſie, that is, by the reuelation of the ſpirit ſpeaking by the prophets, but with laying on of the hands: this was the outward ſigne and teſtimonie of the Church, that the ſpirit had ſet ſuch men apart. A liuely example hereof we haue, Act. 13.2. ſeparate me, ſaith the holy Ghoſt, Barnabas and Saul to the worke, whereunto I haue called them. Here they haue their office and euery part thereof immediately from God: then it followeth, verſ. 3. they laid on their hands. This is the outward approbation and conſent of the Church, which giueth them not their office, but onely ſealeth and confirmeth it outwardly vnto them. So ſaith S. Paul, 2. Tim. 1. 14. that worthie thing, which was committed vnto thee, keepe through the holy Ghoſt, &c. Hence we reaſon thus, that whereby men are kept, maintayned and vpheld in their eccleſiaſticall office, is the beginner and author thereof: but by the ſpirit of God are eccleſiaſticall officers preſcribed in their office and miniſterie. Ergo. The argument ſtill remaineth ſound and good, that if the Apoſtles gaue no power or iuriſdiction to Paſtors or Elders, but it was the ordinance of God, much leſſe hath the Pope right to doe it. Let vs ſee what antiquitie ſaith, Auguſtine thus writeth, Solus Chriſtus habet authoritatem, & praeponendi nos in eccleſia ſua gubernatione, & de actu noſtro iudicandi. de baptiſ. 2. 2. Onely Chriſt hath authoritie (ſaith he) to preferre vs to the gouernement of the Church, and to iudge of our doings: The paſtors then of the Church haue the keyes of the ſpirituall regiment from Chriſt himſelfe, not from the Pope, or any other.

Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 9. ex Iſidoro: Apoſtolis decedentibus ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi, qui ſunt conſtituti per totum mundum in ſedibus Apoſtolorum: The Apoſtles being departed, Biſhops ſucceeded them, and were placed throughout the world in the Apoſtolike Sees.

Concil. Senonenſ. decret. morum. 38. It is affirmed, Apoſtolorum ſolos Epiſcopos ſucceſſores, & ideo illis ſolam impoſitionem manuum reſeruatam: That Biſhops are the onely ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles: and therefore to them onely is the impoſition of hands reſerued. Hereupon we inferre, that whatſoeuer Biſhops haue, they doe receiue it not from the Pope, but by reaſon of their ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles.

We want not here the teſtimonie of their owne writers: as Franciſcus Victoria, in Relect. 2. de poteſtate Eccleſiae. quaeſt. 2. Alphonſus de caſtro, lib. 2. cap. 24. Theſe Popiſh writers are of this iudgement, that both the Apoſtles, and likewiſe Biſhops haue their iuriſdiction immediately from God.

Their owne Canons alſo for this matter are againſt them: Anacletus ſaith, that Biſhops ſucceede the Apoſtles; diſt. 22. 2. Vrbanus, Apoſtolorum locum tenent: They are in the place of the Apoſtles, diſt. 68. cap. 6. Innocentius, They are the Apoſtles Vicars: decret. Gregor. lib. 1. tit. 15. cap. 1. And Clemens the 5. ſaith, They are Chriſts Legates, Clementin. lib. 5. tit. 8. c. 1. If Biſhops then be the ſucceſſors, and vicegerents of Chriſt and his Apoſtles; then it followeth, that from them, and not from the Pope, they haue their iuriſdiction.

This doctrine hath been ſealed by the blood of holy Martyrs. Maſter Philpot ſaith, by the word of God the Pope hath no more authoritie then the Biſhop of London hath; as Peter had no more authoritie, then euery one of the Apoſtles had, Fox pag. 1811.

THE EIGHT QVESTION, OF THE TEMPORALL iuriſdiction and power of the Biſhop of Rome.

THis queſtion hath two parts: firſt, whether the Pope in reſpect of any ſpirituall iuriſdiction, haue alſo the chiefe ſoueraigntie in temporall and ciuill matters; and ſo to be aboue Kings and Emperors. Secondly, whether the Pope, or any Biſhop, may be the chiefe Lord and Prince ouer any Countrie, Citie, or Prouince.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE POPE DIRECTLY or indirectly haue authoritie aboue Kings and Princes.

The Papiſts.

51. Error.
Innocent. 3. in decretal.

THe Papiſts of former times were not aſhamed to ſay, that the Pope is the Lord of the whole Church: as Panormitane in the Councell of Baſile, Fox pag. 670. Yea, Pope Innocentius the third ſaid, writing to the Emperor of Conſtantinople, that as the Moone receiued her light from the Sunne, ſo the imperiall dignitie did ſpring from the Pope: and that the Papall dignitie was ſeuen and fortie times greater then the imperiall: yea, Kings and Emperors are more inferior to the Pope then lead is to golde, Gelaſius diſtinct. 96. And Clemens 5. likewiſe ſaith, Nos regis ordinarius iudex: That he was the ordinarie iudge of the King of Sicile: Et temporalia ſua à nobis & ſub nobis tenet: And he holdeth his temporals of vs and vnder vs, not of the Emperor, Clemens. lib. 2. tit. 11. Thus in times paſt the arrogant Popes did chalenge power directly and ordinarilie ouer Kings and Emperors. But our later Papiſts aſhamed of their forefathers arrogancie, in words ſeeme to abate ſomewhat of their proud ſentence, but in effect ſay the ſame thing: For they confeſſe that the Emperor hath his office and calling of God, and not from the Pope: neither that the Pope directly rectly hath any temporall iuriſdiction: but indirectly he may depoſe Kings and Princes, abrogate the lawes of Emperours, and eſtabliſh his owne: hee may take vnto himſelfe the iudgement of temporall cauſes, and cite Kings to appeare before him: Yet not directly (ſaith the Ieſuite) as he is ordinarie Iudge ouer the Biſhops and whole Clergie; yet indirectly, as hee is the chiefe ſpirituall Prince, he may do all this, if hee ſee it neceſſarie for the health of mens ſoules. And ſo in effect, by their popiſh indirect meanes, they giue him as great authoritie, as euer hee vſurped or challenged, Bellarmine lib.5.cap.6.

Argum.1. The Eccleſiaſticall and ciuill power do make but one bodie and ſocietie, as the ſpirit and the fleſh in man: Now the eccleſiaſticall power, which is as the ſoule and ſpirite, is the chiefe part, becauſe it is referred to a more principal end, namely the ſafetie and good of the ſoule: the other is as the fleſh to the ſpirit, and reſpecteth but a temporall end, as the outward peace and proſperitie of the common-wealth: Ergo, the ſpirituall power is chiefe, and may commaund the other. Bellarmine cap.7.

Anſw. Firſt, it is a very vnfit and vnproper ſimilitude, to compare theſe two regiments to the ſoule and the bodie: for by this meanes, as the ſpirit giueth life to the bodie, and euery part thereof, ſo the ciuill and temporall ſtate ſhoud receiue their office and calling from the Eccleſiaſticall, which the Ieſuite himſelfe denieth, and ſo directly the one ſhould rule the other: for the ſoule directly I trow, not indirectly moueth the bodie and gouerneth it. But if we wil ſpeake as the Scripture doth, we make all but one bodie: and it is the ſpirit of Chriſt, who is the head, that giueth effectuall power to euery part. Epheſ.4.15.16.

2 It is falſe, that the ciuill magiſtracie concerneth the outward and temporall commoditie onely: for vnto Princes alſo is committed the chiefe care of religion and the worſhip of God: They are to ſee true religion aduanced, yea to watch ouer Eccleſiaſticall miniſters, and to charge them to looke to their offices: the Prince is Gods miniſter, for the wealth both of the ſoules and bodies of his ſubiects: And therefore S. Paul exhorteth to pray for Kings and gouernours, that we may liue (not onely) a peaceable life, but in all godlineſſe and honeſtie, 1.Tim.2.2. Ergo, it is part of the Magiſtrates office, as to procure the peace of the people, ſo to haue a care of their godly life. Wherefore it is falſe, as the Ieſuite ſuppoſeth, that the chiefe end of the ciuill gouernment, is onely outward and temporall: Ergo, his argument is nothing worth.

Argum.2. Azariah the high Prieſt droue Vzziah the King out of the temple, when he would haue burned incenſe, and cauſed him to goe out of the citie and dwell apart, 2.Chron.26. Iehoiada likewiſe depoſed Athalia, 2.King.11. Ergo, the Pope may depoſe wicked and vngodly Princes, Bellarm.cap.8.

Anſw. Firſt, we deny, that there is now, or ought to be any ſuch high prieſt in the Church of God, to haue the chiefe authoritie in ſpirituall matters, as there was in the law: for he was the type and figure of Chriſt, who is our high Prieſt, and chiefe Biſhop. Secondly, theſe examples doe not excuſe the Popes tyrannie, who hath depoſed rightfull Kings and Emperours, and better then himſelfe: as Pope Zacharie depoſed Childericus the French King, and ſet vp Pipinus: Gregorie the ſeuenth ſet vp Rodolphus againſt Henricus the fourth, the Emperour. Pope Paſchalis the ſecond ſet vp the ſonne of the ſaid Henricus againſt his father. But we will anſwere more particularly to theſe examples.

To the firſt. Firſt, it was not the ſole act of Azariah the high Prieſt, but there were 80. prieſts that ioyned with him beſide, and they all ſpake to the King: this example therefore maketh nothing for the ſole authoritie of the Pope, who ſaith, that he may depoſe the Emperour himſelfe, without any Councell, Innocent.4. Secondly, they did not depoſe Vzziah: they onely withſtoode him according to the law of God, becauſe he vſurped the Prieſts office: ſo ought faithfull Biſhops and paſtors euen to reproue the greateſt Magiſtrates, for the manifeſt contempt, and open breach of Gods law: neither did they conſtraine the King to goe forth, before they ſaw the iudgement of God vpon him: for the text ſaith, they compelled him to goe forth, becauſe the Lord had ſmitten him, they ſaw the leproſie to riſe vp in his face, verſ.20. This therefore was the extraordinarie iudgement of God, and not of the high Prieſt. Thirdly, he was not depoſed from the kingdome, though he dwelt alone: his ſonne did execute the office onely for him, and raigned after him: for being a leper, by the law he was to dwell apart, Leuit.13.46. Here was nothing done (we ſee) by the ſole authoritie of the high Prieſt, but they had the manifeſt and direct law of God, vnto the which their Kings alſo were ſubiect.

To the ſecond example we anſwere. Firſt, Athaliah was a tyrant and an vſurper, and ought not to raigne, and therefore was iuſtly depoſed. Secondly, Iehoiada did it not by his owne power, but aſſembled the Fathers and Princes of the land, 2.Chron.22.2. He ſhewed them the young King, and they made a couenant with him. Iehoiada onely gaue directions (the King being now knowne vnto them) vnto the Captaines and gouernours. Thirdly, they had the flat word of God for that action, The kings ſonne muſt raigne, as the Lord hath ſaid, concerning the ſonnes of Dauid, nid, verſ.3. So when the Pope hath any ſuch warrant from God, he may doe as Iehoiada did.

*Argum.*3. I muſt not here forget the goodly arguments vſed by Boniface 8. in his decretall, for the ſuperioritie of Popes aboue Kings and Emperours: *Extrau. commun. lib.*1. *tit.*8. Firſt, Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Paſce oues meas, Feede my ſheepe: but the Emperour is one of his ſheepe: Ergo, he is committed to Peter.

Anſw. Firſt, here is a manifeſt begging of the thing in queſtion: for whatſoeuer was ſaid to Peter, belongeth not to the Pope. Secondly, here is a new expoſition of theſe words, Feede my flocke, that is, the Pope may depoſe Emperours, and excommunicate them, tread vpon their neckes, exempt their ſubiects from their fealtie, and all by vertue of theſe words. Thirdly, as Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: ſo Peter ſaith to all paſtors, Feede the flocke of Chriſt, 1. Pet. 5. Then by the ſame reaſon all paſtors ſhould haue ſuperioritie to Kings.

2 The Apoſtles ſaid to Chriſt, behold two ſwords, it is enough ſaith Chriſt, not too much: Ergo, there are two ſwords in the Church, the temporall and ſpirituall, Boniſ. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, who ſeeth not how abſurdly that place is abuſed, whereas both Chriſt anſwered, and the Apoſtles made the queſtion of two materiall ſwords, which were found in the companie. Secondly, S. Peter was reprooued for handling the ſword: Ergo, wee may better conclude, that the Pope (his ſuppoſed ſucceſſor) hath nothing to doe with the ſword. Thirdly, if theſe two ſwords prooue any thing, they make no more for the Church of Rome, then for any other Church.

3 The Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 13. 1. The powers that be, are, ordinata, ordained of God: but there can bee no order, vnleſſe one ſword were vnder another: the temporall vnder the ſpirituall: Boniſac. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, he cauilleth about the word, Ordained: for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of any order, that the powers haue one vnder another, but of the ordinance which they haue from God. Secondly, but if they will enforce this expoſition, it maketh for the ſuperioritie of the Ciuill Magiſtrate, that beareth the temporall ſword, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh plainly, verſ.4.

4 The Apoſtle ſaith, The ſpirituall man iudgeth all things, 1. Cor. 2. 15. Ergo, the Pope iudgeth the Emperour, Boniſ. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of this groſſe expoſition: for the Rhemiſts in their Annotations dare not ſo expound the ſpirituall man: but he is the ſpirituall man, that is led by the ſpirit of God, which the Pope is not led by: and therefore is not ſpirituall according to the Apoſtles meaning. Secondly, Kings and Emperours, that are faithfull, and beleeue in Chriſt, are as well ſpirituall men in the Apoſtles ſenſe, as beleeuing Biſhops. Theſe and ſuch like arguments not worth rehearſing, much leſſe confutation, their ſtout champion Boniface vſeth in that place.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope, or any other perſon eccleſiaſticall, hath no manner of temporall iuriſdiction either directly or indirectly ouer Kings, Princes, Emperours, but ought of right to be ſubiect to them and their lawes: it is thus proued.

*Argum.*1. By the ſame reaſon whereby the Ieſuite proueth, that the Pope directly hath no temporall iuriſdiction, we will conclude, that neither indirectly can he haue any, and ſo none at all. Chriſt, while he liued vpon earth, tooke vpon him no temporall iuriſdiction, either directly or indirectly: he refuſed to be a King, Ioh. 6. Nay he would not be a Iudge in ciuill matters, as in deuiding the inheritance, being thereto required, Luk. 12. 13. He paied poll money, Math. 17. he did ſubmit himſelfe to the iudgement of Pilate an heathen Iudge. Therefore ſeeing Chriſt vſed no ſuch temporall iuriſdiction, neither can any Miniſter of Chriſt: For the ſeruant is not aboue the maſter; onely Antichriſt dare preſume beyond the example of Chriſt.

This argument drawne from our Sauiour Chriſt his example, is notably vrged by that good Emperour Fredericke, writing thus to that proud Pope Adrian the 4. Cum ille noſter & veſter inſtitutor nihil ab homine rege accipiens, tamen pro ſe & Petro cenſum Caſari perſoluit, exemplum vobis dedit, vt vos ita faciatis: Seeing Chriſt, both our founder and yours, did take nothing of the King, but paid tribute to Caſar for himſelfe and Peter, he gaue you an example to doe the like.

Bellarmines beſt anſwere in this place is, that Chriſt in refuſing to deuide the inheritance, ſignified, Ne pontifices minutis & vilibus officijs occupentur: That Prelates ought not to occupie themſelues in baſe and inferiour offices.

Contra. Firſt, I pray you is it ſo baſe a place to bee Iudge of inheritance? I appeale to Weſtminſter Hall, what ſubiect can haue a more honourable place, then to bee called to the ſeate of iudgement? Or if this were ſomewhat baſe, Chriſt alſo refuſed to bee a King, I trow the Ieſuite thinketh that to bee no vile or beggerly calling. Secondly, more then this, Chriſt did not onely refuſe theſe ciuill honours, but paid tribute, whereby he acknowledged his obedience, as man, to the Ciuill ſtate. We may iudge the weaknes of their cauſe, by the feeblenes of their anſweres.

*Argum.*2. The fathers of Baſil doe vrge that place of S. Peter, 1. Epiſt. 5. 2. againſt Panormitane, who had vnaduiſedly ſaid, that the Pope was Lord of the Church. But the Apoſtle ſaith, Feede the flocke of Chriſt; not by conſtraint, but willingly; not as lords ouer the Lords inheritance, verſ. 3. But the Pope contrariwiſe vſeth all forcible, conſtraining, and tyrannicall meanes, killing, ſlaying, impriſoning, depoſing thoſe that will not obey him: who calleth himſelfe chiefe Lord and Magiſtrate of the whole world: Surely this is Antichriſt, and not the Miniſter of Chriſt, or ſucceſſor of Saint Peter, whoſe counſell he refuſeth to follow and obey.

Argum. 3. Let but the ſtories of former times be ſearched: there we ſhall finde how wickedly and inſolently the Popes behaued themſelues towards Kings and Emperours: Pope Alexander cauſed Henry the ſecond to doe penance for Beckets death, and to bee diſpled of the Monkes. Innocent the third cauſed King Iohn to kiſſe the feete of the Biſhop of Canturburie his owne ſubiect. Alexander the third did tread vpon Emperour Fredericke his necke. Pope Innocent ſpoyled Fredericke the ſecond of his Empire, cauſed him to bee poyſoned, and his ſonne Conradus to be beheaded: and theſe Emperours were depoſed by the Popes in order, Henricus 4. Henricus 5. Frederick 1. Philippus Otho the 4. Frederick 2. and Conradus his ſonne.

It is not good, they ſay, to put a ſword into a mad mans hand: and thinke you not, that theſe Popes vſed the temporall ſword very diſcreetly, which they thus vſurped, making fooles and ſlaues of Emperours, as Pope Adrian did, that rebuked Frederick the firſt, becauſe he held his ſtirrup on the wrong ſide, and did excommunicate him, for ſetting his name before the Popes in writing? The very inſolent, diuelliſh, and Antichriſtian practiſe of this their temporall power, ſheweth from what originall it commeth, euen from the father of pride.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith, writing vpon thoſe words, Rom. 13. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher powers: Si quis putat, quia Chriſtianus eſt, non ſibi eſſe vectigal reddendum aut tributum, aut non eſſe exhibendum honorem debitum eis, qui hæc curant poteſtatibus; in magno errore eſt: If any man thinke, becauſe he is a Chriſtian, that he is not bound to pay tribute and taxe, and yeeld due honour to the temporall powers (for of ſuch Auguſtine ſpeaketh) he is in a great error. If all then are ſubiect to the temporall Magiſtrate that are Chriſtians, then all Biſhops and Eccleſiaſticall perſons, yea the Pope himſelfe, if he be a Chriſtian: Ergo, the Emperour is not ſubiect to him.

Epiſtol. Leodienſ. contra Paſchal. 2. Omnis anima poteſtatibus ſublimioribus ſubdita, qui hoc omni animæ præcipit, quem à ſubiectione terrenæ poteſtatis excepit? Let euery ſoule (ſaith the Apoſtle) be ſubiect to the higher powers; he that inioyneth this to euery ſoule, whom doth he exempt from the ſubiection of the earthly power? Ergo, the Pope alſo is ſubiect.

Agatho Biſhop of Rome writeth thus to Conſtantinus the Emperour: Secundum piiſſimam iuſſionem manſuetudinis veſtræ, pro obedientia, quam debuimus, dirigimus præſentes conſamulos noſtros: As your clemencie hath moſt godly commaunded vs, according to the obedience which wee owe, wee haue ſent theſe our fellowe ſeruants. And againe, Omnes nos exigui eccleſiarum præſules, veſtri Chriſtiani imperij famuli: We all the poore prelates of Churches, ſeruants of your moſt Chriſtian Empire. Here the Pope himſelfe doth confeſſe himſelfe to be the Emperours ſeruant, and to owe him homage: what more euident teſtimonie can we haue?

Further, we haue teſtimonie of their owne law: diſt. 8. cap. 1. Per iura regum, &c. Temporall poſſeſſions are enioyed by the lawes of Princes: Ergo, the Pope holdeth his temporals of Kings, not they their kingdomes of him. Diſtinct. 10. cap. 9. Leo 4. thus writeth to Lotharius the Emperour, Præceptis veſtris imperialibus, &c. We promiſe and profeſſe for euer to keepe and obſerue your imperiall precepts, &c. And if any man tell you otherwiſe, ſciatis eum pro certo mendacem, hold him for a lyer.

Likewiſe Gelaſius ibid. c. 11. Quis autem leges principum, &c. Who will ſay that the lawes of princes ought to be contemned? &c.

Diſtinct. 97. Bonifac. 1. thus writeth to Honorius the Emperour: Angeretur pluribus, &c. The Mother Church would bee much grieued, if ſhe were not ſecure and aſſured of your helpe in all her cauſes, and had not preuailed in ſuppreſſing of Idols, correcting of Heretikes by your faithfulnes, &c. This Boniface writing with a better ſpirit, then Bonifate 8. whoſe goodly arguments wee ſaw before, calleth for aſſiſtance of the Emperour, euen for the redreſſe of Eccleſiaſticall matters. Thus wee ſee, that of ancient times Popes did not commaund, but were commaunded rather of Emperours; that they did not preſcribe lawes to them, but rather yeelded obedience to imperiall lawes. And a later Extrauagant decreeth, Vt non ſint regnatæ amplius eccleſiæ Romanæ ſubiecti, quam antea, &c. That Kings ſhould be no otherwiſe ſubiect to the Church of Rome, then they haue been in times paſt: Clemens 5. Extrau. commun. lib. 5. tit. 7. cap. 2. Wherefore the Pope doth contrary to his owne law, in challenging ſuch ſuperioritie ouer the Emperour, which of ancient time hath not been due.

Let Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr put to his ſeale: By the Scripture the King is chiefe, and no forraine perſon in his owne realme aboue him: there is no ſubiect but to a King: I am a ſubiect, I owe my fidelitie to the Crowne; the Pope is contrarie to the Crowne; I cannot obey both, &c. Fox pag. 1874.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS PART, WHETHER the Pope haue power to excommunicate Emperours and Kings,&c.

The Papiſts.

WE neede not ſeeke farre to know their opinion for this matter,for the continuall practiſe of Popes and popiſh Biſhops, in taking vpon them moſt arrogantly to excommunicate Emperours and Kings, doth euidently ſhew what their iudgement is. Gregorie 3.did excommunicate Leo Iſaurus Emperour of Conſtantinople,becauſe he pulled downe Images:ſo did his predeceſſor Gregorie 2.before him. Gregorie 7. did thunder out his mercileſſe curſes againſt Henricus 4.Emperour. Adrian 4.and after him Alexander 3.moſt wicked and inſolent Popes,did perſecute the good Emperour Frederick,with their cruell excommunications. Innocent.3.did excommunicate King Iohn,and interdict the whole Realme of England. And according to the Antichriſtian practiſes of their predeceſſors,the Popes that haue been of late,haue breathed out,as a vaine blaſt and bladder crack,their vniuſt excommunications againſt our renowmed Soueraigne, and moſt bleſſed of God,Queene Elizabeth.

Yea not onely the Popes haue thus farre preſumed,but their inferiour Biſhops haue malepartly pricked forth, by their excommunications, to buffet Princes, and pull them by the eares: As Odo Archbiſhop of Canturburie did ſuſpend Edwine the King from the Church, and Dunſtane afterward did inioyne King Edgar ſeuen yeeres penance,Fox pag.156. So the Biſhops threatned to excommunicate King Henrie the 3.vnleſſe he would expell the ſtraungers out of the land,Fox pag.280.Let vs ſee how theſe iolly ſtirring Prelates can iuſtifie their doings.

*Argum.*1. Azariah is brought forth for an example,who being chiefe Prieſt, when King Vzziah offered to burne incenſe in the temple vpon the Altar, conſtrained him haſtily to depart, 2.Chron.26.20.The like power why may not the Pope Biſhops haue now to excommunicate Kings?

Anſ. Firſt, it was not Azariah his act onely, whatſoeuer was done at this time, but there were 80.Prieſts ioyned with him,ſufficient to make a lawfull Synode or Councell. Secondly, their intent was not by violence to thruſt Vzziah out of the temple, but onely to admoniſh him,and reproue him for his preſumption, verſ.18. they ſaid vnto him, it pertaineth not to thee Vzziah to burne incenſe,&c. And this they might lawfully doe,as Iohn Baptiſt rebuked Herod for his inceſt: And as it is the part of all faithfull Biſhops,not to ſpare, in dutie and reuerence, to tell Kings and Princes their faults; ſo did Ambroſe deale with Valentinian the Emperour, *Theodoret.lib.*3.*cap.*11. Britannio a Scythian Biſhop with the Emperour Valens who was an Arrian,*Theodoret.lib.*4.*cap.*35. Iſaachus Monachus alſo thus ſaid to yͤ ſame Emperor going in warfare againſt the Barbarians,Quò proficiſcere, bello ſuſcepto aduerſus Deum? Whither goeſt thou, ſeeing thou haſt waged battell with God? Theoderet.4.34. He ſaid alſo further to him,Redde Eccleſias orthodoxis: Reſtore the Churches which thou haſt taken from them of the right faith. The Emperour thereupon bid him be apprehended,dealing with him, as Ahab plaied with Micaiah the Prophet: but he anſwered,Non es reuerſurus,niſi eccleſias reddideris: Thou ſhalt not returne,vnleſſe thou doe reſtore them: And ſo indeede it came to paſſe. This zeale and boldnes in good Biſhops is not to be miſliked, but much to be commended,and wiſhed in the Biſhops of our time.

3. Azariah conſtraineth not Vzziah to depart, before the leproſie appeared in his face, then was he thruſt out, for they had the expreſſe word of God ſo to do, Numb.5.2. So if the Pope had the expreſſe commaundement of God to excommunicate Kinges, and if it might appeare that they are firſt excommunicate of God,as the Lord ſet a marke of leproſie in Vzziah; it might be as lawfull for him ſo to do, as it was then for Azariah: but ſuch commandement we are ſure the Pope hath none, nor yet is he ſo acquainted with Gods ſecrets, as to know who are reiected before him.

*Argum.*2. S.Ambroſe example is much vrged in this caſe, who inioyned Theodoſius the Emperour penance, for a certaine murther and ſlaughter of the people made at his commandement, and would not admit him to receiue the Lords Supper,ſaying thus vnto him, Iſtaſne adhuc ſtillantes iniuſtæ cædis cruore manus extendes,& ſanctiſſimi Domini corpus prehendes? Doeſt thou ſtretch out theſe thy bloudy hands, to apprehend the moſt holy body of our Lord? *Theodoret lib.*3.17.

*Anſw.*1. Ambroſe, in not admitting the Emperour without repentance of that bloudy act to the Lords Supper,and in refuſing himſelfe to miniſter to him in that caſe, did not amiſſe if he had ſtayed there, hauing ſo farre the word of GOD. Ierem.15.19. Separate mee the precious from the vile: and 1.Timoth.5.22.Be not partaker of other mens ſinnes. 2. But in that he tooke vpon him by his ſole authoritie to cenſure the Emperour, and to inioyne him penance, he ſomewhat exceeded his limits: and yet, though this act might proceed (in Ambroſe ſo holy a Biſhop) from an extraordinary ſpirit,which I denie not; yet the Emperour is rather to be commended for his humilitie, in ſubmitting himſelfe to his order, (for it is written of him, that Lachrymas effudit coram Eccleſia, & tempus pœnitentiæ præſcriptum impleuit: He ſhed teares before the Church, and fulfilled the time ſet for his penance. Ruffin.lib.2.cap.33.) Such alſo was Theodoſius modeſtie, that at another time being excommunicate, à leui homuncione, of a light cock-braine fellow, becauſe he graunted him not that thing, which he requeſted,he would not enter into the Church, before he had bin of the ſame partie abſolued; Theodoret lib.5.cap.37. Theodoſius lowlineſſe therefore, and ſubmiſſion to Ambroſe cenſure, doth not proue the lawfulneſſe thereof, no more then his modeſtie here doth allow the inſolent fact of a ſaucie malapert prieſt. 3. Though we admit Ambroſe act to be lawfull, yet doth it not authoriſe the Popes vniuſt proceedings: for that cenſure was laid vpon the Emperour vpon iuſt cauſe, a haynous murther committed; but the Pope doth excommunicate Kings for well doing, as Gregorie the 3. did to Leo the Emperour, for pulling downe of images; and for the moſt part of ſtomacke, for Gregory the 7. had no other cauſe againſt Henrie the 4.nor Alexander the 3.againſt Fredericke. 4. If Ambroſe example proue any thing, it doth authoriſe other Biſhops as well as him of Rome, to excommunicate Emperours of themſelues.

The Proteſtants.

ALthough wee do not altogether exempt Princes from Eccleſiaſticall cenſures, for they are, though chiefe and principall, yet parts and members of the Church: yet we thinke,that againſt all other perſons, beſide the ſupreame and ſoueraigne Magiſtrate, though of neuer ſo high place, the cenſures of the Church may more ſafely and with better right be extended, and applied: as B.Groſthead that good Biſhop of Lincolne, hauing excommunicated a prieſt for incontinencie, becauſe after 40.dayes the Sheriffe refuſed to apprehend him, as it was his dutie, excommunicated him likewiſe, Fox.p.285. But as concerning excommunicating of Kings and Princes, we thinke that neither the Pope, nor any Biſhop in the world by their ſole authoritie haue power to do it.

*Argum.*1. Paulus orari vult pro regibus malis. 1.Timoth.2. S.Paul would haue vs pray for euill kings. This is our onely remedie that we haue againſt ſuch: Nec talis à nobis repellendus eſt armis contra eum ſumptis, ſed precibus ad Deum ſumptis: Neither is ſuch an one to be reſtrained by weapons taken vp againſt him,but prayers made vnto God for him: Epiſtol.Leodienſ.cont.Paſchal.2. As Ambroſe ſaid well, if he could there haue kept him, Arma noſtra preces & lachrima: Our weapons are onely teares and prayers. Againſt the ſoueraigne power no violent meane is to be vſed: Ergo, not excommunication.

*Argum.*2. The wiſe man ſaith, Prou.26.2.Maledictio immerita non aduentura eſt:A curſe cauſeleſſe or vndeſerued ſhall not come. Malach.2.Maledictionibus veſtris benedicam: I will bleſſe that you curſe. And their owne law ſaith, Neminem ligare debet ſententia iniuſta: An vniuſt ſentence bindeth not: Et excommunicatus non poteſt excommunicare:An excommunicate perſon cannot excommunicate. Therefore we feare not the Popes curſe or excommunication, becauſe it is vniuſt: and he excommunicateth vs, as the Phariſes did the Apoſtles, becauſe wee ſpeake in the name of Chriſt:and he himſelfe ſtandeth as an excommunicate perſon before God, being an Apoſtata and ſlidebacke from the trueth.

*Argum.*3. *Concil.Toletan.4.can.*74. It was decreed, that the Kinges of that countrie which ſhould exerciſe crueltie againſt the people, Anathematis ſententia condemnentur: Should be anathematized, or held accurſed.*Concil Toletan 6.can.*3. If the King ſhould violate his faith which he gaue,not to ſuffer the Iewes to infringe the Catholike faith, Sit anathema in conſpectu Dei: Let him bee accurſed in the ſight of God. Theſe decrees of anathematizing Kings were not made by any one or two,but in the firſt were aſſembled all the Biſhops of the prouinces of Hiſpania, and Galicia,the King Siſcenandus alſo himſelfe was preſent, with the chiefe of his Nobles and gaue conſent: In the ſecond there were aſſembled 52.Biſhops,the King Chintillanus and his Nobles. Hereby then may appeare what was the practiſe of thoſe times, that nothing ſhould bee attempted by any ſingular authoritie againſt the higheſt powers,but by conſent of all the ſtates, and in the generall Seſſion of Parliament,as it were.

Maſter Lambert holy Martyr, thus alſo giueth his opinion of this matter: The Pope ought not to denounce excommunications of his owne proper head and affection onely, but with the conſent of other gathered with him in Chriſts name: for ſo vſed Saint Paul when hee did excommunicate the man of Corinth,&c. And the ſame forme declareth the Goſpell, Matth.18. Dic Eccleſiæ,Tell it to the Church or congregation: ſo that ſuch excommunication ought to be done, as me thinketh,by the congregation aſſembled together with their Paſtors, whoſe aduice they ought principally to eſteeme and follow,if it be vertuous and godly:*Fox.pag.1113.reſponſ.ad articul.*24. Hence we conclude, that neither Pope nor any Biſhop by their ſole authoritie can excommunicate Princes.

que reuoluerit, patenter inueniet, quod aut minimè aut difficilè poſſint reges excommunicari: admoneri quidem poſſunt, increpari, argui, à diſcretis viris: quia quos Chriſtus in terris rex regum vice ſua conſtituit, damnandos & ſaluandos ſuo iudicio reliquit: If any man will take paines to looke ouer the old and new Teſtament, and the acts thereof, ſhall readily finde, that Kings either hardly or not at all ought to be excommunicate: they may be admoniſhed, rebuked, aduiſed diſcreetly, and wiſely, and not elſe: for thoſe whom Chriſt the King of Kings hath ſet in his ſtead in the earth, to bee ſaued or damned, he hath reſerued it for his owne iudgement. And theſe, which did thus write, were of the popiſh Church, though herein they miſliked the practiſe of the Popes. And one of their late writers approueth the foreſaid epiſtle, and alleageth out of the ſame, how that Gregorie 7. called Hildebrand, was the firſt, contrarie to all antiquitie, that did, ſacerdotalem lanceam contra Imperatoris diadema leuare, lift vp the ſpirituall launce againſt the Crowne of the Emperour: Eſpenc. 1. *Timoth.pag.*275.a. The ſame author hath theſe words, Magiſtratui collo non bello, patientia, non violentia, patiendo, non agendo reſiſtendum eſt: The Magiſtrate muſt bee reſiſted, not by ſtroke, but yeelding the necke; by patience, not violence; by ſuffering, not practiſing: *ibid.pag.*276.f. Whereby he inſinuateth, that nothing ought to be attempted againſt Princes, no not by excommunicating of them, for that were to practiſe, not to be patient.

I thinke alſo, their owne Extrauagant condemneth the cruell practiſe of popiſh Prelates in enterditing of Kings and their kingdomes, as Boniface 8. thus decreed: *Extrau. commun. lib.*5.*tit.*10. *cap.*2. Prouide attendentes, &c. Wee conſidering, that many are too forward in denouncing of interdictions, whereupon it commeth to paſſe, that the Eccleſiaſticall Sacraments are not adminiſtred, the ſeruice of God ſuſpended, &c. Wee doe prouide by this edict, that no prouince, citie, caſtle, territorie, goe vnder the interdict, for any quantitie or ſumme of money, by the Lord thereof vnpaied, &c. We haue then their owne teſtimonie againſt them.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning S. Peters patrimonie, whether the Pope may be a temporall Prince.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay that it is not againſt the word of God, that the Pope ſhould be both a temporall and 52.Error.
eccleſiaſticall Prince, and that both the ſwords of ſpirituall and eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction Bellarm.lib.2.
doe belong vnto him: and that he is the right heire of S. Peters patrimonie: to him belongeth as cap.9.
chiefe Lord the Imperiall citie of Rome, the pallace of Laterane, Capua alſo and Apulia are his: Fox.pag.93.
*diſtinct.*96.Conſtantin.

1 Moſes (ſaith the Ieſuite) was both Prieſt and Prince: ſo was Heli 1. Sam. 4. He iudged Iſrael fortie yeeres: ſo were alſo the Macchabees, Iudas, Ionathan, Simon: yea Melchiſedech long before Moſes, was Prieſt and King: Ergo, the Pope is lawfully both chiefe Biſhop, and chiefe Prince alſo, and Lord of that which he now poſſeſſeth, *Bellarm.cap.*9.

Anſ. Concerning Melchiſedech; who knoweth not, that he being King and Prieſt, was a liuely figure of our Sauiour Chriſts ſpirituall kingdome and prieſthood? Heb. 7. And as yet the offices of the ſpirituall and temporall gouernment were not diſtinguiſhed: for all the Patriarches, Abraham, Iſaack, Iacob, and the reſt were ſacrificers, therefore wee cannot borrow any examples from them for this matter.

Moſes alſo did offer ſacrifice to God, and was chiefe iudge both in ſpirituall and temporall affaires vnto the people, vntill ſuch time, as when by Gods commaundement, Aaron was choſen to the prieſthood, vnto whom the charge of ſacrifices and vnto his ſonnes was committed: ſo Moſes remained ſtill prince of the people, whom Ioſua ſucceeded, and Aaron was inueſted to the Prieſthood, and ſo the offices were diſtinct. This example therefore of Moſes is extraordinarie, and proueth not. Leuit.8.9.

Concerning the time when Ely iudged Iſrael, which was in the daies of the Iudges, we muſt vnderſtand, that the gouernment of Iſrael was very diſſolute, and men were left to themſelues to doe almoſt what themſelues liſted: as Iudg. 17. we reade that Micah ſet vp an Idoll in his houſe, and the reaſon is rendered, there was no King in Iſrael, but euery man did that which ſeemed good in his owne eyes. Likewiſe the tribe of Dan offered violence to Micah, and robbed him, Iudg. 18. For there was no King in Iſrael, verſ. 1. The Leuites wife was moſt ſhamefully abuſed by the Gibeonites: for there was no King, chap. 19. 1. The men of Beniamin tooke them wiues by force: for they had no King, chap. 21. 25. So you ſee that both religion was corrupted, and the manners of the people grew to be outragious; and all becauſe there was no perfect diſtinct gouernment, there was no King in Iſrael.

In Ely his time, the word of God was precious, 1. Sam. 3. 1. Great was the ignorance of the whole land: the licentiouſneſſe alſo of his ſonnes was a great offence to all Iſrael, and brought a great decay of godlines with it, 1.Sam.2.17.23. Yea they cauſed the people through their euill example to ſinne, verſ.24. Wherefore Ely his houſe was iudged of God for his remiſnes in gouernment, in not correcting his ſonnes, chap.3.13. And he that cannot rule his owne houſe, how ſhould he care for the Church, 1.Tim.3.5. It cānot now be proued by the example of Ely, that the ciuill gouernment was annexed to the prieſthood by the Lords appoyntment: but it is rather to be aſcribed to the corruption of thoſe times: for hauing no King nor Captaine ouer them, they were driuen of neceſſitie to come to the high Prieſt, vnto whom the iudgement of many matters was committed by the law of God, Deut.17.8. Leuit.13.2. But the prieſthood, and the ciuill Magiſtracie were two diſtinct things alwayes from the time of the law eſtabliſhed.

It is then no good argument, which is drawne from the practiſe and example of thoſe corrupt times: And yet we ſay not, that theſe offices were ſo diſtinct, but that the Lord might raiſe vp ſome extraordinary Prophet, as he did Samuel, who to reſtore iuſtice and religion decayed, might for a time both iudge the people and offer ſacrifice, as we ſee he did.

As for the examples of the Macchabees, they moue vs not, you muſt bring better ſcripture for your purpoſe: ẏ authority of thoſe bookes bind vs not: and againe we ſee they did contrary to the law, in taking vpon them both offices: for the prieſthood was annexed to the poſteritie of Aaron for euer, Num.3.10. and the ſcepter was not to depart from Iuda till Chriſt came, Gen.49.10. As the Lord alſo had promiſed to Dauid, that the kingdom ſhould remaine in his ſeede, 2.Chro.22.3.

Laſtly, Gelaſius that famous Biſhop of Rome ſhall anſwere the Ieſuites argument, whoſe authoritie I truſt he will not deny. Thus he writeth, Tom. Anathematis. Ante aduentum Chriſti quidam figuraliter adhuc in carnalibus actibus conſtituti, &c. Before the comming of Chriſt, ſome figuratiuely in carnall and earthly actes were both Kings and Prieſts: ſuch an one was Milchiſedech: which the diuell alſo imitated in his members, ſo that the Pagane Emperors would alſo be called chiefe prieſts: But after that Chriſt was come, both the true King and Prieſt, neither was the Emperor any more called by the Prieſts name, neither did the Prieſt challenge the kingely ſtate. So Chriſt hath diſtinguiſhed both offices by their proper actes, and dignities, that both Chriſtian Emperors, as touching eternall life ſhould neede the helpe of prieſts, and they in temporall things ſhould vſe the benefite of Imperiall decrees.

Thus then according to this fathers ſentence, it followeth not, that becauſe before Chriſts comming, both powers were vnited in ſome figuratiuely, therefore it ſhould be ſo now: nay he ſaith, that ſince Chriſts comming, this confuſion of the prieſtly and Kingly office, is in Sathans members onely to be found: an hard ſentence againſt the Biſhop of Rome, by a former Biſhop of Rome, which maketh him chalenging the vſe of both ſwordes, no better then a limme of the diuel.

Argum.2. Conſtantine the Great gaue vnto the Pope the chiefe gouernment of the Citie of Rome, and other Lordſhips in Italie, yea the ſoueraigntie ouer the Weſt parts: why then is it not lawfull for him to enioy his gift? Bellarm. lib.5. cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, the donation of Conſtantine ſeemeth to be forged: for if Conſtantine reſigned to Silueſter the politicall dominion of the Weſt parts, how could he then haue diſtributed his Empire amongſt his ſonnes, as the Weſt part to one, the Eaſt to the ſecond, the middle part to the third? Againe, the Donation ſaith, that Conſtantine was baptiſed at Rome by Silueſter before the battaile againſt Maximinus, and that then the patrimonie was giuen: but it is certaine by ſtories that he was baptiſed at Nicomedia, by Euſebius Biſhop there, in the 31. yeere of his raigne: wherefore it ſeemeth to be a forged and deuiſed thing. plur. apud. Fox. pag. 105.

Fox. proteſta. ad Angl.

2 Æneas Siluius ſaith, that Mathilda, a noble Dutches in Italie, gaue thoſe lands to the Pope, which are called S. Peters patrimonie: how then can it be true, that they were giuen by Conſtantine? Thirdly, the popiſh doctors and Canoniſts confeſſe, that Conſtantines grant is not ſo much to be counted a donation, as a reſtitution of that which tyrannouſly was taken from him: but he hath his power ſpirituall and temporall immediatly from Chriſt. You ſee then that they themſelues make no great reckoning of Conſtantines donation. Antoni. ſumma, maior. 3. part.

Agathon Biſhop of Rome, long after Conſtantines time the Great, thus writeth to Conſtantine another Emperor of that name, Hanc Romanam vrbem ſeruilem veſtri Chriſtianiſſimi imperij: This Romane citie ſeruile or ſubiect to your moſt Chriſtian Empire, &c. Ergo, it was not exempted from ſubiection to the Empire, as Conſtantines forged donation granteth.

Fox pag. 791. 793.

Yet if Conſtantinus that good Emperor had bin ſo minded, to haue beſtowed the imperial dignitie vpon the Biſhop of Rome; there remaineth a great queſtiō, whether he ought to haue accepted of it or not; nay he ſhould haue refuſed it: for the temporall ſword belongeth not to ſpirituall gouernors: At the leaſt it had been a charitable part, not to haue ſuffered the Emperor to diſinherite his owne ſonnes, for to enrich the See of Rome; as Auguſtine very well ſaith, Qui vult, exhæredato filio, eccleſiam hæredem facere, quærat alterum, qui ſuſcipiat, non Auguſtinum, immo Deo propitio nullum inueniat. He that would make the Church his heire, and defeat his own children, let him ſeeke ſome bodie elſe, to accept of his gift: ſurely Auguſtine will not, nor I truſt any honeſt man beſide.

The

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, we willingly grant, that the Church may inioy thoſe temporall poſſeſſions, which haue been of old granted vnto it for the better maintenance thereof, ſo they be not abuſed to riot and exceſſe: as the Leuites beſide their tithes, had their cities and fieldes. Numb. 35. Secondly, the iudgement of Eccleſiaſticall matters doth of right appertaine to the Church, as Amariah the Prieſt was the chiefe in all matters of the Lord, 2. Chron. 19. 11. Thirdly, we doe not vtterly exclude ſpirituall perſons from temporall cauſes: but as the ciuill Magiſtrate hath his intereſt in ordaining of Eccleſiaſticall lawes, ſo ſpirituall perſons ought not to be ſtrangers from the ciuill ſtate; being meete men for their knowledge and conſcience to be conſulted withall, and conferred with, and to be ioyned in Councell with the Magiſtrate in difficult matters: as we reade, Deut. 17. 8. How the high Prieſt, and chiefe iudge, did ioyne in mutuall helpe and aſſiſtance. But that any ſpirituall perſon may be a temporall prince, and haue the chiefe gouernment of both ſtates, and handle both ſwordes, we ſay it is contrarie to the word of God: for in theſe three pointes ſtandeth chiefly the office of the prince, In making and ordaining ciuill lawes, in hauing power of life and death, in proclaming of warre, and waging of battaile: with none of theſe ought Eccleſiaſticall perſons to deale, as we will now ſhew in order.

Argum. 1. Concerning the making of ciuill lawes and ſtatutes, though the Eccleſiaſticall bodie, according to the ancient cuſtome of this land, haue their ſuffrage and voyce, and doe giue conſent: yet the chiefe ſtroke, in allowing, confirming, and enacting of ſuch lawes is in the prince, and cannot agree or be matched with any ſpirituall office.

S. Paul ſaith, Who is ſufficient for theſe things? that is, for the worke of the Miniſterie, 2. Cor. 2. 16. If therefore ſpirituall perſons ſuffice not to execute to the full, their ſpirituall charge, though they ſhould bend all their ſtudie and care that way, much more inſufficient ſhall they be, if they be entangled in temporall affayres, for the well guiding and ordering whereof a whole man likewiſe is ſcarce ſufficient.

Againe (ſaith he) No man that warreth, entangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life, 2. Tim. 2. 4. By affaires ſecular here are not only vnderſtoode (as the Ieſuite imagineth) merchandiſe, traffick, buying, ſelling, and ſuch like, but the care and charge alſo of ciuill gouernment, of making lawes and orders for the ciuill ſtate, which muſt needes be a great let to the ſpirituall buſines, and require greater ſtudie and labor, then the other baſer workes which are named. To this Auguſtine agreeth: Quo iure (ſaith he) defendis villas? Vnde quiſque poſſidet quod habet? Iure humano, iure imperatorum: quare? quia ipſa iura humana per imperatores & reges ſeculi Deus diſtribuit generi humano. tract. in Iohann. 6. By what law doeſt thou defend thy poſſeſſions? by the law of man, the law of the Emperors: for theſe humaine lawes, by Gods ordinance are giuen vnto men by the Emperors and Kings of the world. See then, ciuill lawes, and humane conſtitutions are giuen and made, not by the Pope, Prieſt, or any other Prelate, but onely by Kings and Princes, and the ciuill magiſtrates.

So alſo ſaith the Ciuil law, Cod lib. 1 tit. 20. leg. 2. Imperatori ſoli leges condere conceſſum eſt: It is onely lawfull for the Emperour to make lawes: Iuſtinian. Likewiſe their owne Canons affirme the ſame, decret. Gregor. lib. 4. tit. 17. cap. 7. Alexand. 3 ad Regem pertinet non ad Eccleſiam de talibus poſſeſſionibus iudicare: It belongeth to the King not to the Church to iudge of ſuch poſſeſſions.

Argum. 2. It were a monſtrous and an vnnaturall thing, that any Eccleſiaſticall gouernour, ſhould haue power of life and death: for hee hath no better right to the ciuill ſworde, then the Prince to the Eccleſiaſticall ſword: and if it be not lawfull for the ciuill Magiſtrate to excommunicate, which is as the ſpirituall ſword, and the greateſt cenſure of the Church; no more is it to be ſuffered, that by the authoritie or commaundement of any Eccleſiaſticall perſon, any man ſhould be put to death.

The high Prieſt was not to deale with matters of blood, which touched the life: but the offenders were brought to the gates of the Citie, where the Magiſtrates ſate, Deut. 17. 5. Not to the Temple, where the Prieſt miniſtred. Nay, wee ſee, that in the moſt corrupt times of the Iewiſh Common-wealth, namely, when they put our bleſſed Sauiour to death, the prieſts did not challenge any ſuch power: It is not lawfull (ſay they) for vs, to put any to death, Ioh. 18. 31. But that power was in the temporall Magiſtrate, as Pilate ſaid to Chriſt: Knoweſt thou not, that I haue power to crucifie thee, and power to looſe thee? Ioh. 19. 10. Ergo, the Pope cannot be a temporall Prince, to haue power of life and death. And it is contrary to your owne Canons: decret. p. 2. cauſ. 23. qu. 8. c. 20, Gregor. Quia Deum timeo, in mortem cuiuſlibet hominis me miſcere formido: becauſe I feare God, I dare not entermeddle with the death of any. Likewiſe cauſ. 33. q. 2. c. 6. Nicholaus, Eccleſia gladium non habet, niſi ſpiritualem; non occidit, ſed viuificat: The Church hath no ſword but the ſpiritual; it killeth not, but giueth life. Now, whereas the examples of Phinehes, that killed the adulterer and adultereſſe; and of Samuel, that hewed Agag in pieces with his owne handes, might be vrged; their owne gloſſe thus anſwereth: Miracula veteris Teſtamenti ſunt admiranda: The miracles of the old Teſtament are worthie rather of admiration, then fit for our imitation: for many things were permitted then, which are prohibited now. And a little before: Nathan, when he reproued the King, did execute his owne office, he did not vſurpe the Kings office, he did admoniſh him to repent, he did not giue ſentence of death againſt him, as an adulterer, &c. Cauſ.*2.*qu.*7.cap. 41.*gloſſ.

But it will here be anſwered, as Boniface 8. hath decreed, Sext.decretal.lib.*3.*tit.*24.*c.*3. That a Cleargie man hauing temporal iuriſdiction, may without feare of irregularitie, commit the iudgement of death to his Bailiffe and Miniſter &c. To the which replie, that this notwithſtanding is contrary to the ancient Canons alledged before, that a Cleargie man ought not to meddle, or intermingle himſelfe with matters of blood: but now he muſt meddle, giuing authoritie to others to do it. For the authoritie of him that commaundeth, is greater, then of the Miniſter.

Argum.*3. If the Pope be a temporall Prince, then he may wage battell, which although the Ieſuite dare not plainely affirme, yet it followeth neceſſarily vpon his aſſertion: for it is lawfull for any temporall Prince to make warre: And it hath been the common practiſe of Popes and popiſh Prelates ſo to do.

Fox.p.446.

There were great and bitter battailes fought betweene Vrbane the ſixt, and the Antipope Clement, in the which on the one ſide there were 5000. ſlaine. Fox.pag.434. Henry Spenſer a luſtie yong blood, Biſhop of Norwich, was the Popes Captaine generall in France: where hee ſacked the towne of Grauenidge, and put man, woman, and child to the ſword.

Fox.p.798.

So Pope Iulius caſt his keyes into the Riuer Tybris, and tooke himſelfe to his ſword: waged many battels, and at the laſt was encountred withall by Lewes the French King, vpon Eaſter day: where there was of his armie ſlaine, to the number of 16000. But theſe warlike affaires of the Pope miſliked the Papiſts themſelues: for he was therefore condemned in the Councell of Turone in France, Anno.1510. We may ſee how well theſe furious Popes do follow the rule of Chriſt, who commanded Peter to put vp his ſword into his ſheath: If it were not lawfull for Peter to ſtrike with the ſword, how is it lawfull for the Popes, that, I am ſure, dare not challenge more to themſelues, then was lawfull for Peter? Thus wee ſee how abſurd a thing it is, that the Pope ſhould be a temporall Prince.

Let vs examine antiquitie for this poynt, Concil.Conſtantin.*5.*action.*1. Antimus the Biſhop of Trapezuntium was complained of to the Councell, that he ſhould affirme, Magnitudinem & dignitatem ſacerdotij non ſpiritualem eſſe animarum curam, ſed quendam ciuilem principatum: That the dignitie of the Prieſthood conſiſteth not in the ſpirituall care of ſoules, but in a ciuill kinde of Princedome. Of this heretical iudgement ſeemeth the Biſhop of Rome to be, which then miſliked the whole generall Councell.

*Concil.Toletan.*11.*can.*6. His à quibus domini ſacramenta tractanda ſunt, iudicium ſanguinis agitare non licet: They by whom the Sacraments of our Lord ought to be handled, ought not to meddle with the iudgement of blood: Ergo, they can be no temporall Princes, for to ſuch belongeth the iudgement of death and life.

This truth haue the holy Martyrs ſealed, William Swinderby condemned for Gods truth, I ſay, if the Pope holde men of armes, &c. to venge himſelfe on them that offend him, and giues remiſſion of ſinnes to them that fight, and ſlay them that contrarie him, as men ſaid he did by the Biſhop of Norwich, not putting his ſworde into his ſheath, as God commaunded Peter, he is Antichriſtus: for he doth contrarie to the commandement of Ieſus, that bad Peter forgiue his brother ſeauentie ſith ſeuen ſith, &c. Fox.pag.470.

I thinke it not amiſſe in the laſt place to adioyne the ſentence of a popiſh Biſhop, Aegidius Viterbienſ. vttered in an oration which he made before Iulius the ſecond. The foreſaid warlike Pope in the Councell of Laterane, beginning thus, To the reformation of the Church as many other things, ſo eſpecially the late loſſe of our armie ought to ſterre vs vp: which I thinke hath fallen out by the diuine prouidence, Quò armis eccleſiæ alienis freti cederemus, vt ad noſtra redeuntes victores euaderemus: noſtra arma ſunt pietas, religio, ſupplicationes, To the end that while we vſe ſtrange and forreine weapons we ſhould giue place, and taking our owne ſhould returne victorers: our proper armour is godlines, religion, prayer: Remember, ſaith he, the warre that Moſes had with Amalech, Videbis populum armis fidentem, deo charum, vinci ſemper; contrà ſemper vincere precibus ſupplicantem, You ſhall ſee the people euen beloued of God, while they truſt to their weapons, alwayes to be ouercome: but while they are in their prayers, to be themſelues ouercommers. Thus he is bold to reproue the Pope euen to his noſe (and he doth it without checke) for his warlike humour and diſpoſition.

And indeede herein they doe contrarie to their owne Canons, as diſt.*36.3. *Moſes ad bella non vadit, &c. Moſes goeth not to warre, he fighteth not againſt the enemies: but what doth he? he prayeth: and the people ouercome. Wherefore it is a Biſhops part to pray, &c.

Againe, cauſ.*23.*c.*1.*Ioann.*8. *Terram defendere, &c. To defend the countrie, to deale with warre, belongeth to the terrene power. Ibid.c.*3.*Innocentius, Chriſt being taken of the Iewes, when Peter had ſtriken off ones eare, he forbiddeth him to ſmite; giuing an example to all Biſhops, not to vſe carnall weapons, &c.

*Ibid.cap.*19. Pope Nicholas findeth fault with certaine Biſhops, which kept watch and ward vpon the Sea coaſts againſt the Pirates: Militum Chriſti eſt Chriſto ſeruire: It is the part of Chriſts ſouldiours to ſerue Chriſt, &c.

Thus wee ſee how vniuſtly the Popes of Rome, and contrarie to their owne Canons, challenge to be temporall princes; which their ambition hath much miſliked ſome of their owne writers: as a ſober and graue author of their ſide giueth an inſtance in the Biſhop of Wirceburge, who euer ſince Charles the great, hath borne both the chiefe eccleſiaſticall, and temporall office there; and vpon feſtiuall daies hath the ſword carried before him: and the Biſhops there lie buried, with a naked ſword in the one hand, and a paſtorall ſtaffe in the other. The ſame author ſheweth the iuſt iudgement of God vpon that See, how as they gouerned by the ſword contrarie to their calling, ſo diuers of them periſhed by the ſword.

Eſpenc.in 1.ad Tim.p. 269.a.

I cannot here omit to rehearſe two merrie conceits vttered vpon this occaſion, one by a countrie fellow, of the Biſhop of Colone bearing the perſon both of a Biſhop and a Captaine: Velim diſcere, &c. I would faine know, ſaith he, when the diuell ſhall carrie this Captaine to hell, whom you repreſent, whither then the Biſhop ſhall goe? The other by a ſouldiour of the Cardinall Ballua ſent by Lewis the 11. to take muſter of the ſouldiours at Paris: O prudent King, ſaith he, you haue ſent this Cardinall, Biſhop of Ebroike, to muſter your ſouldiours, ſend me alſo to his dioces to make prieſts: for I can doe that as well, as he the other. Thus we ſee that this popiſh ambition was derided euen of the common and ſimple people. And thus I conclude this place with that ſaying of S. Ambroſe: Non conuenit vnum hominem duplicem profeſſionem habere: It is not fit for one man to haue a double profeſſion or calling.

THE NINTH QVESTION, OF THE PREROGATIUES OF THE POPE.

BEſide theſe priuiledges and immunities of the See of Rome, which hitherto we haue ſpoken of both in ſpirituall and temporall matters, there are other prerogatiues, which haue been in times paſt giuen to the Biſhops of Rome, moſt blaſphemous and wicked, which the Papiſts of this age are aſhamed of, and therefore paſſe them ouer with ſilence: for Bellarmine ſaith nothing of them: We will therefore ſpare our labour in confuting of them, they are ſo groſſe and abſurd, but onely bring them forth, that the godly reader may vnderſtand the abomination of the whore of Babylon.

There are three monſtrous and ſhamefull prerogatiues, which the Canoniſts aſcribed to the Pope in times paſt: and they are theſe; his power diſpenſatiue, his power exemptiue, his power tranſcendent, ſo we will call them at this time.

1 His prerogatiue in diſpenſing was wonderfull: it would offend a Chriſtian eare, to heare what his groſſe Canoniſts are nothing aſhamed to ſay, Papa poteſt diſpenſare contra ius diuinum: The Pope may diſpence againſt the law of God, contra ius natura, againſt the law of nature: contra Apoſtolum, againſt the Apoſtle, contra nouum teſtamentum, againſt the new Teſtament: Nay, Papa poteſt diſpenſare de omnibus praeceptis veteris & noui teſtamenti: The Pope may diſpence with all the Commaundements both of the old and new law. What intollerable blaſphemies are here? The practiſes alſo of Popes are agreeable hereunto: for did not the Court of Rome diſpence with King Henry the eights mariage with his brothers wife? but that vngodly diſpenſation at the laſt was ouerthrowne: and it was well concluded by act of Parliament, anno 1533. That no man had authoritie to diſpence with Gods lawes.

Symmachus Biſhop of Rome hereunto agreeth, concluding thus: Roman. ſynod.6. Non licet Imperatori vel cuipiam pietatem cuſtodienti aliquid contra mandata diuina praeſumere, nec quicquam quod Euangelicis propheticiſque & Apoſtolicis obuiat, agere: It is not lawfull for the Emperour, or any other that holdeth the true religion, to preſume any thing againſt Gods commaundements, or to doe that, which doth contrarie the writings of the Prophets or Apoſtles.

Likewiſe Fabiane: He that feareth God will not attempt any thing againſt the Goſpel, Apoſtles, or Prophets, *cauſ.*11.*quaeſt.*3.*cap.*95.

*Marcellin.cauſ.*25.*quaeſt.*1.*cap.*8. Stare non valet, &c. It cannot ſtand, which is done againſt the Euangelicall or Apoſtolicall doctrine.

Adde the iudgement of Biſhop Latimer holy Martyr: If it be of God, Quis poteſt diſſoluere, niſi qui videbitur deo repugnare? Who can diſſolue it, vnleſſe he will ſeeme to reſiſt God? Fox p.1750.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr; That the Biſhop of Rome had no authoritie to diſpence with the word of God, and Scripture, Fox pag.1861.

is to iudge or accuſe him of any crime,either of adulterie,murther,ſimonie,or ſuch like. If he fall into adulterie,or homicide,he cannot be accuſed;but rather excuſed,by the murthers of Sampſon, thefts of the Hebrues, the adulterie of Iacob: As Ozıah was ſtricken for putting his hand to the Arke inclining, no more muſt ſubiects rebuke their Prelates going awry : by the inclination of the Arke,the fall of Prelates is vnderſtood. This generally is the opinion of the Canoniſts: but the Ieſuites doe holde the contrarie, that it is lawfull, euen for an inferiour Prieſt to rebuke the Pope,Rhemiſt.Annot.in 2.*Galath.ſect.*8.Wherefore,ſeeing they confute themſelues,they need not any other refutation.

Reade antiquitie, you ſhall finde, that the Popes doings haue been called in queſtion : When Bonifacius 1.was choſen Pope,and one Eulalius by his confederates was ſet vp againſt him,Valentinianus and Honorius the Emperours,the better to haue their right and title examined,commanded,vt ambo exirent ciuitate, that both of them ſhould voide the citie. Afterward Symmachus and Laurentius contended about the Popedome, the Senators made relation to King Theodoricus,deſiring him,Vt viſitationem daret ſedi Apoſtolicæ: tunc rex dedit Albinæ ciuitatis Epiſcopum, to ſend a viſitation to the Apoſtolike See: and the King ſent the Biſhop of Albin,as viſitor thither.By thoſe and ſuch other examples it appeareth,that the Biſhops of Rome in times paſt haue not been without check and controulment.

3 Concerning the third power,which we call Tranſcendent: one ſaith, that, Non minor honor Papæ debetur,quàm Angelis: That there is no leſſe honour due to the Pope,then to Angels. Another ſaith,Papatus eſt ſumma virtus creata, The Popedome is the higheſt power that was created of God,aboue Angels,or Archangels. Againe,thoſe words of the Pſalme,Thou haſt put all things vnder his feete,as ſheepe and oxen,fowles of the ayre,fiſhes of the ſea : they thus blaſphemouſly applie to the Pope; by ſheepe and oxen,vnderſtanding men liuing vpon the earth; by the fowles of the ayre,the Angels in heauen, whom they ſay, the Pope may commaund ; by the fiſhes, the ſoules in purgatorie : Ouer all theſe the Pope(ſay they)hath abſolute power,who may,if it pleaſe him,releaſe all purgatorie at once. What horrible blaſphemies are here? Yet our Rhemiſts and other Ieſuites are ſomewhat more modeſt,which confeſſe that the Pope is but Chriſts Vicar in the regiment of that part which is on the earth,*Annot.*1.*Ephe.ſect.*5. Seeing then they confute themſelues,we will not further trauaile herein,but proceede.

Zozimus decret. Contra ſtatuta patrum condere aliquid,vel mutare, nec huius quidem ſedis poteſt authoritas: To make or change any thing againſt the decrees of the fathers, not this ſeate hath authoritie : Ergo, the Pope is not higher then Angels,being inferiour vnto men his predeceſſors.

The like iudgement the ancient Biſhops of Rome were of,that it was not lawful to depart from the decrees of their predeceſſors : *Diſt.*11.*cap.*3.Iulius calleth it, Satis indignum, a very vnworthie thing ſo to doe. Nicholaus: Ridiculum & abominabile dedecus: A ridiculous and abominable ſhame, *diſtinct.*12.5. Damaſus ſaith, That the violaters of the Canons,*blaſphemi ſunt in ſpiritum,*doe commit blaſphemie againſt the ſpirit: *cauſ.*25.*quæſt.*1.*cap.*5. *Gregor.Euerſor,non conſtructor,*He is a deſtroyer,not a builder,*cauſ.*25.*quæſt.*2.*cap.*4. Iulius calleth it preſumption,*ibid.cap.*11. And leſt that other might ſeeme to bee tied by theſe Canons to the obſeruation of the ancient decrees,and the Pope to be exempted: Pelagius ſaith peremptorily, Ne pontifex ab his diſcedendi licentiam,&c. That not the Pope,though he would,ſhould be ſuffered to depart from the ſtatutes of his predeceſſors, *ibid.c.*21. Now then from hence we conclude : firſt,that ſeeing the Pope hath no power to change the former decrees,much leſſe can he diſpenſe againſt the word of God. Secondly,ſeeing he muſt obſerue the rules of his predeceſſors,he is not exempted from all iudgement. Thirdly,ſeeing that he is inferiour to the ancient Biſhops,in that he muſt be ruled by their orders, he is much leſſe inferiour to the Angels.

THE TENTH QVESTION, CONCERNING Antichriſt,and whether the Pope be that great aduerſarie vnto Chriſt.

THis queſtion is diuided into many parts. Firſt,whether Antichriſt ſhall be ſome one ſingular man.Secondly,of the time of his comming and continuing. Thirdly, of his name. Fourthly, of what nation or kinred he ſhall come. Fiftly, where his place and ſeate ſhall be. Sixtly, of his doctrine and manners. Seuenthly,of his miracles. Eightly,of his kingdome and warres.Ninthly, whether the Pope bee the very Antichriſt. This then is a moſt famous queſtion, and worthie throughly to be diſcuſſed,euery point therefore muſt be handled in order.

The Papiſts.

56.Error.

THey hold that Antichriſt, whoſe comming is foretold in the Scripture,ſhal be one particular man,not a whole bodie,tyrannie,or kingdome,as the truth is,*Bellarm.cap.*2.*lib.*3.

*Argum.*1. They vrge the words of our Sauiour,Ioh.5.43. I come in my Fathers name, and ye re- ceiue me not; if another come in his owne name, him will ye receiue. Here Chriſt, ſay they, ſpeaketh of another that ſhall come, namely Antichriſt: for here one is oppoſed to one, namely, Antichriſt to Chriſt, not a Kingdome to a Kingdome, or ſect vnto ſect, but one perſon to another, Bellarmine cap.2.lib.3.

Anſw. Firſt, here is not ſo much an oppoſition of perſons, as there is of doctrine, as to preach in the name of God, and to preach in the name of men: and though Chriſt be the chiefe doctor and teacher, that came in the name of his Father; yet all true preachers beſide, doe come in the ſame name: for ſo our Sauiour ſaith of his Apoſtles, He that receiueth you, receiueth me, and he that receiueth me, receiueth him that ſent me. Matth.10.40. Therefore, he that receiueth the Apoſtles, receiueth God: they alſo then do come in the name of Chriſt: and ſo Chriſt and all the faithfull make but one, Iohn 17.21.

2 Neither doth Chriſt here ſpeake of one ſpeciall enemie, but of all falſe prophets; for it is not vnuſuall in the Scripture, in the ſingular number to expreſſe a multitude being of the ſame kinde, as Iohn 10.11.12. There is a compariſon betweene Chriſt the true ſhepheard, and the hireling: where, by the name of hireling, all falſe ſhepheards, and ſpirituall theeues are vnderſtood, and ſo is it in this place: therefore they cannot conclude out of this place, that Antichriſt ſhal be but one man.

*Argum.*2. An other proofe is out of 1.Ioh.2.18. the Antichriſt ſhall come, ὁ ἀντίχριστος, the Greeke article, ὁ, expreſſeth ſome ſingular notable perſon, Bellarmine ibid.

Anſw. It is falſe. The Greeke article doth not alwaies in Scripture aſſigne ſome particular perſon: as Matth.4.4. Man ſhall not liue by bread onely: the Greeke text hath ὁ ἄνθρωπος, the man, and yet is it vnderſtood not of any one man, but of all in generall, ſo 2.Tim.2.17. The man of God, that is, euery faithfull Miniſter, or good Chriſtian, yet is it expreſſed with the article. Fulke Annotat.2.Theſſ.2.ſect.8.

*Argum.*3. Apocal.13.18. It is the number of a man: the proper name of Antichriſt is ſet downe: Ergo, but one man, Bellar.ibid.Rhemenſ.2,Theſſ.2.ſect.8.

Anſw. The name here myſtically deſcribed, which ſhall containe 666. in number, for ſo the Greeke letters χ. ξ. ς. do ſignifie beeing numbred, doth not expreſſe any particular name of one man, but rather of the whole ſocietie and bodie of Antichriſt: for it is ſaid to be the number of the beaſt. Now by the beaſt is vnderſtood the Romane Empire, the name whereof is λατεινος, Latinus, which letters do ariſe in computation to the whole number of 666. And this name Irenæus thinketh to agree beſt to this place. Further, ſeeing the Rhemiſts themſelues by the beaſt do vnderſtand the vniuerſall companie of the wicked, Reuel.13.verſ.1. And this is the name or number of the beaſt: it muſt be vnderſtood, by their owne confeſſion, of a company and congregation, and not of one ſingular perſon.

The Proteſtants.

THat Antichriſt, which is interpreted an aduerſary, or againſt Chriſt, ſhall not be one man, (as the Papiſts imagine, that the Popes might be diſburdened and diſcharged of this name, who are many) but that it is a whole body, company and ſynagogue, and a ſuceeſſion of heretikes, we do thus proue it.

Argument. Bezæ.

1 The myſterie of iniquitie wrought in Paules time, then was there a way in preparing for Antichriſt, 2.Theſ.2. But it is vnpoſſible for one man to continue from Paules time to the end of the world: Ergo, Antichriſt is not one man, but a ſucceſſion of heretikes.

Firſt Bellarmine anſwereth, that as Chriſt is ſaid to haue come ſince the beginning of the world in his forerunners the Prophets and Patriarches, but yet came not in perſon, till he tooke fleſh: ſo Antichriſt ſtraight after Chriſts aſcenſion began to worke in his forerunners alſo, but ſhall not come in perſon till toward the end of the world. cap.2.reſp.ad.1.argument.Bezæ.

Cont. 1 The compariſon betweene Chriſt, and Antichriſt in this behalfe, is not good: for Chriſt is ſaid to haue come in the Prophets, becauſe vnto them Chriſt did communicate his ſpirit: and therefore Chriſt is ſaid in his ſpirit to haue preached by Noah. 1.Pet.3.19. But Antichriſt being but a mortall man, can not giue of his malignant ſpirit to his forerunners: for this is not farre from the phrenſie of the Manichees, to make Antichriſt the beginning of euil, as Chriſt is the author of good; that as Chriſt the head doth giue influence to his body, ſo Antichriſt an other head ſhould alſo inſpire his members. Secondly, but if they will make a good compariſon, as Chriſt is the head of his Church, and the Prophets and Apoſtles his Miniſters; ſo the Diuell is the ring-leader of the wicked, and the Antichriſts and falſe prophets his chiefe worke-men: and in this ſenſe Apocal.13.7. Michael, that is Chriſt, and his Angels are ſaid to fight againſt the Dragon, that is, the diuel and his angels: And as Chriſt ſince the beginning of the world did ſpeake in his ſeruants the Prophets, ſo the diuell alſo from the beginning ceaſed not to worke in his miniſters; and ſo he began to worke the myſterie of iniquitie againſt the Goſpel in the Apoſtles time. But to ſay, that as he which ruled the true Prophets by his ſpirite was incarnate afterward, and came in his owne perſon; ſo he that miſled the falſe prophets, ſhall alſo come in his perſon, were to make Antichriſt a diuell incarnate: for it was the diuell that wrought in heretikes and falſe teachers.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe: if the myſterie of iniquitie began in Paules time, that is, the kingdome of Antichriſt; and you will needs make Rome the ſeate of Antichriſt: belike Saint Paul and Saint Peter were the Antichriſts, for there were no Biſhops of Rome beſide at that time.

Anſw. Firſt, that Antichriſt began then to worke euen in Rome, it cannot be denied, ſeeing the Papiſts confeſſe, that Simon Magus firſt broched his hereſie there, and that Peter calleth Rome Babylon. It is not neceſſarie, that the myſterie of iniquitie ſhould ſo ſoone creepe into the very chaire of the Paſtors, and Biſhops: that ſhould come to paſſe in the full reuelation of Antichriſt: It is ſufficient that it wrought cloſely amongſt the falſe Apoſtles: wherefore the Ieſuits obiection concerning Peter and Paul, is ridiculous.

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, that there muſt come a departing or Apoſtaſie and generall falling from the faith: for ſo an apoſtaſie ſignifieth, a relinquiſhing of the faith, not a departure from the Romane Empire, or Antichriſt himſelfe, as Bellarmine would haue it: ſo the word is vſed by S. Paul elſe where, 1.Tim.4.1. ſome, ſaith he, ἀποστήσονται, ſhal fall away, or play the apoſtataes from the faith: and ſo one of your owne writers expoundeth it, à veritate in errorem deſciſcent; they ſhal fall from the trueth into error: Eſpenc.in hunc locum. Common vſe alſo of ſpeech ſo taketh it: Iulian the Emperour is knowne by the name of Apoſtata, for forſaking of the Chriſtian faith: Antiquitie alſo hath ſo vſed the word. Alexander patriarch of Alexandria, thus writeth in his Epiſtle as touching the Arrians: Egreſſi ſunt viri è noſtra parochia, docentes apoſtaſiam, quam recte quilibet præcurrere ſuſpicetur Antichriſtum: There be certaine fellowes gone forth out of our precincts, teaching apoſtaſie (that is, corrupting the right faith) which any man would thinke did forerun Antichriſt. Whereas then the Rhemiſts affirme, that moſt of the ancient fathers do ſo vnderſtand Apoſtaſie for a defection from the Empire: it is certaine, that Tertullian, Chryſoſtome, Auguſtine, Primaſius with others do expound it for a defection from the faith. *Fulke annot.5.in 2. Theſſ.*2. Yea and the Rhemiſts ſo take it. ibid.annot.6.

Now this generall falling away from the faith cannot be accompliſhed in one man, but it ſheweth a whole bodie or companie, whereof Antichriſt is the head, one man of ſinne ſucceeding another by ſucceſſion: and this apoſtaſie cannot be wrought at one time, but it ſhall come to paſſe in ſeuerall ages: for how is it poſſible, that at once ſuch a generall Apoſtaſie ſhould be? Ergo, Antichriſt ſhall not be one particular man, Argum.Caluini. Neither can the Ieſuite thus ſhift off the argument, to ſay, that this generall Apoſtaſie is but a preparation to the kingdome of Antichriſt, not that he ſhal then be preſently come: for S. Paul ioyneth both theſe together: There muſt come a departing firſt, that the man of ſinne be diſcloſed, verſ.3. So that this very apoſtaſie and departing ſhall be a diſcloſing and manifeſt declaration of Antichriſt.

*Argum.*3. Ioh.3.7. The Apoſtle ſaith: Many deceiuers are come into the world, which confeſſe not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh: the ſame is the deceiuer and the Antichriſt. Marke then, one deceiuer is many deceiuers: one Antichriſt many Antichriſts, 1.Ioh.2.18. Ergo, Antichriſt ſhall not be one man, but many, *Argument, Ful. Annot.2.Theſſ.2.ſect.*8.

De ciuitat. Dei.20.19.

Auguſtine ſheweth, how that in his time this place of S. Paul was not expounded of any one man, but of a whole bodie: Nonnulli non ipſum principem, ſed vniuerſum quodammodo corpus eius, ſimul cum ſuo principe hoc loco intelligi Antichriſtum volunt: Some (ſaith he) doe take Antichriſt not for the head alone, but for the whole bodie and multitude togither with their prince. And their coniecture is this: becauſe theſe words verſ.7. He which withholdeth, are vnderſtood of the Empire and Emperors of Rome, which were many: ſo the man of ſinne, which is deſcribed as in the perſon of one, may fitly be vnderſtood of a ſucceſſion of many.

Bernard ſaith, 2. *In conuerſion.Paul.ſerm.*1. Iniquè agunt & cæteri contra Chriſtum, multique ſunt noſtris temporibus Antichriſti: There be diuers other that doe wickedly againſt Chriſt, and in our times there be many Antichriſts. Againe, *Cantic.ſerm.*33. Miniſtri ſunt Chriſti, & ſeruiunt Antichriſto, They are the Miniſters of Chriſt, and ſerue Antichriſt: how could Antichriſt be in Bernards dayes, ſome hundred yeeres ſince, yea many Antichriſts, if Antichriſt ſhould be one man? So alſo one of your later writers: Bruno thus witneſſeth writing vpon the 4. of the 1. to Tim. verſ.1. Apoſtolum de Antichriſto inſtruentem, &c: That the Apoſtle giuing inſtruction concerning Antichriſt, doth inſinuate that the members a long time goe before the head: but if Antichriſt were one ſingular man, his head and members muſt go togither.

Likewiſe out of your owne Canons: *diſtinct.23.cap.*1. Nicholaus defineth him to be Antithriſt, that is elected to the Papacie by Symonie. He noteth not any particular Pope, but any whoſoeuer, that ſhould be ſo elected.

Antichriſts. Yea, here I will oppoſe the iudgement of the Rhemiſts, who therein are contrary to themſelues: yet thus they write, annot.7.in 17. Apocal. that the ſeuen heads are ſeuen Kings, or Kingdoms, fiue were then paſt, the ſixt was the ſtate of the Empire then preſent, the ſeuenth ſhould be Antichriſts ſtate, &c. As then they take the ſixt head not for any particular perſon, but for the State of the Emperours, who were many; ſo by their expoſition the ſeuenth head muſt be taken not for a particular perſon, but for a State and Gouernement.

Let vs adde the ſeale of the holy Confeſſors and Martyrs, *Iohn Wicliff.articul.*37. Eccleſia Romana, ſaith he, eſt ſynagoga Sathanæ: The Church of Rome is the ſynagogue of Sathan. *Iohn Huſſe Concil.Conſt.ſeſſ.*11. Papa eſt patronus Antichriſti, non ſolum illa ſimplex perſona ſed multitudo Paparum &c. eſt Antichriſti perſona compoſita monſtroſa: The Pope is the patron of Antichriſt, not any one ſingle perſon, but the multitude of wicked Popes, &c. is the monſtrous compound bodie of Antichriſt. THE SECOND PART, WHETHER ANTICHRIST be yet come, and how long he ſhall continue.

The Papiſts.

THe Romiſh Ieſuites doe hold that Antichriſt is not yet come, neither can they tell when he ſhall come: But this they ſay boldly, that Henoch and Elias, who liue all this while in Paradiſe, ſhall come immediately before Antichriſt; and that Antichriſt, when he is come, ſhall raigne but three yeeres and an halfe, and then ſhall the world end, *Bellar.cap.*4.*lib.*3.*de pontif. Rhemiſt.*11. *Apocal.ſect.*2.4. 57. Error.

*Argum.*1. The Romane Empire muſt vtterly be deſtroyed and layd waſte before Antichriſt come: as S.Paul ſaith, That which withholdeth muſt firſt be taken away, 2.Theſ.2.7. that is, the Roman Empire. But the Empire yet remaineth: for the Emperor is knowen by name, and there are alſo prince electors of the Empire: Ergo, Antichriſt is not yet come. *Bellarm.cap.*5.

Anſw. It is true that the Romane Empire, while it retained and kept the ancient dignitie, maieſtie and power thereof, was an hinderance and let to the tyrannie of Antichriſt; but when it began to decay, then Antichriſt ſet in his foote. Firſt, it was not neceſſary therefore that the Empire ſhould vtterly be extinguiſhed, but ſo much only taken away, namely, the ancient honor and imperiall maieſtie thereof, as hindered Antichriſt: and ſo we find, that the Romane Empire was more then halfe decayed, when Antichriſt crept into Rome.

As firſt when Conſtantine the great, *an.*312. left the citie of Rome, and fixed his imperiall ſeate at Conſtantinople, in the Eaſt, the maieſtie of the Empire was much impayred, the Biſhop of Rome taking occaſion by the abſence of the Emperor to rule ouer the weſt Churches. The next pul from the Empire was betweene the yeere 700. and 800. Conſtantinus 1. Biſhop of Rome firſt offered his feete to be kiſſed of the Emperor Iuſtinian, and moſt inſolently tooke vpon him to excommunicate Philippicus Bardanes Emperor after Iuſtinian, becauſe he could not away with Idols, *anno.*715.

Gregorie the third likewiſe for the ſame cauſe did excommunicate Leo the Emperor, and tranſlated the cuſtodie of the Church from the Grecians to the French nation, *anno.*740. Zacharias firſt tooke vpon him to depoſe and ſet vp Kings: as he depriued Childericus King of France of his kingdome, and ſet Carolus Martellus in his ſteade, *anno.*750. Stephanus the ſecond firſt preſumed to be carried vpon mens ſhoulders: vnto him Pipinus King of France yeelded the exarchate or ſoueraignty of Rauenna, held his ſtirrop, and led his horſe by the bridle, *anno.*752. Afterward Carolus King Charlemaines ſonne, confirmed vnto Adriane 1. the former graunt of Pipinus, and beſids gaue vnto him, the dutchie of Foroiulium, Beneuentum, and *Spoletum, anno.*796. Leo 3. proclaimed Charles the great Emperor, and ſo ſpoyled the Emperor of the Weſt of the better halfe of his kingdome, *anno.*800.

From this time forth the maieſtie and ancient dignitie of the Empire began daylie to decreaſe: Iohn.13. made a decree that the Emperor ſhould be crowned of the Pope, *anno.*964. Otho the Emperor confirmed to Leo the eight whatſoeuer before graunted by Pipinus or *Carolus, anno.*966. *Iohn.*14. brought vnder his papall regiment the kingdome of *Poole, anno.*973. Steuen the ninth obtayned Millaine: Vrbanus the ſecond ſet foote into Spaine, *anno.*1090. Vnder Innocentius the ſecond the Kingdome of Sicilie was made part of S.Peters patrimonie, *anno,*1140. Eugenius the third ſubdued Norway to the papall profeſſion, *anno.*1152. Alexander the third decreed that none ſhould be King of England, vnles he were firſt nominated and called of the Pope, *anno.*1180. Sub Lucio the third the Armenians ſubmitted themſelues to the papall iuriſdiction, *anno.*1185. Vnder Vrbane the third, Liuonia came vnder their yoke, *anno.*1187. Vnder Innocentius the third, the kingdome of Arragon was made tributarie to the Pope, *anno.*1216. Vnder Nicolas the third, the countrey of Romandiola and Bononia, was brought vnder the Popes ſubiection, *anno.*1280.

And to put the matter out of all doubt: Bonifacius the eight did one day ſhew himſelfe in his pontificals, as a Pope; another, in his imperiall robes, as an Emperor by vſurpation, *anno.*1300. Clemens the fift made a decree that the Emperor ſhould receiue the name and right of the Empire from the Pope, and the Emperor being dead, till a new elect, the imperiall power to remaine in the Popes hand, *anno.*1314. Clement the ſixt crowned Charles the fourth vpon this condition, that he ſhould neither ſtay in Rome, nor in any part of Italie: the ſame Charles to procure the ſucceſſion of the Empire to his ſonne, did morgage to the Prince-Electors the chiefe reuenues of the Empire, and ſurrendred the free cities, which were neuer ſince redeemed, *anno.*1350. And thus by degrees was the Empire weakned: and as Antichriſt daylie gathered ſtrength, ſo the imperiall dignity fayled, and was empayred.

Secondly, the imperiall power muſt in ſome ſort be reſtored by Antichriſt: for the Pope vſurped the ſame authority which the Emperors had, yea greater: for the whore is deſcribed ſitting vpon the beaſt, Apocal.17. which is the Empire: and therefore it is ſaid, verſ.8. The beaſt that was, and is not, and yet is: for the ancient Empire both is, and is not: It is, becauſe the power thereof is tranſlated to the Pope: it is not, that is, not in that kingly manner, as it was in times paſt. Apocal.13.12. The beaſt that roſe out of the earth with two hornes like a lambe, did all that the firſt beaſt could doe before him: that is, the power of the Empire was in the Pope. Thirdly, Apocal.13.15. It is ſaid, that the image of the beaſt remayned, and that the other beaſt gaue a ſpirit vnto the image of the beaſt: So is it at this day, the name and image of the Empire remaineth, but the maieſtie and power is gone: And who giueth life to the image but the Pope? he confirmeth and ratifieth the election of the Emperour. Wherefore, this rather is an argument that Antichriſt is alreadie come, becauſe nothing but the image of the beaſt remaineth.

*Argum.*2. Antichriſt ſhall raigne three yeeres and an halfe: but if he were already come, he muſt needs haue raigned diuers hundred yeeres already, *Bellarm.cap.*8.

They proue this raigne of Antichriſt for this ſhort ſeaſon, out of thoſe places of Dan.7,25. A time, times, and halfe a time: and Apocal.12.14. alſo it is deſcribed by dayes 1260. dayes, and by moneths 11.2. two and fortie moneths: which all come to one reckoning, and make three yeeres and an halfe.

Anſw. Firſt, the time is alſo ſet downe by the name of three dayes and an halfe, Apocal.11.11. How then is it likely, that 1260. dayes and three dayes and an halfe, ſhould ſignifie the ſame time? And ſeeing the Rhemiſts themſelues, by the thouſand yeeres Apocal.20.1. do vnderſtand all the time of the new Teſtament till Antichriſts raigne, and ſo take it for an vncertaine and indefinite number, they can not in any reaſon ſo ſtrictly expound this account of dayes. And as they take the other number indefinitely, ſo diuers of the fathers expound this number of dayes; as Beda vnderſtandeth all the time of Chriſtianitie: Rupertus, ſo long as the Church endureth perſecution: Haymo, for all the time from the aſcenſion of Chriſt, till the end of the world. *Fulke. annot.*12. *Apoc.*2. Secondly, with much better ſenſe are theſe times applyed by our learned and painefull countrieman Maſter Fox, to the great perſecution vnder the Emperors, which continued 294. yeeres, which time is myſtically ſignified by 42. moneths, taking euery moneth for a ſabboth of yeeres. And the reſt of the numbers agree hereunto: for 1260. dayes make three yeeres and an halfe, that is, moneths 42. and three dayes and an halfe make houres 42. So taking euery houre in the dayes, and euery moneth in the yeeres for a ſabboth of yeares, there ariſe 294. yeeres, which was the iuſt time of the perſecution from the death of Iohn Baptiſt, vnto the end of Licinius the tyrant and perſecutor. This account, I ſay, better agreeth with the truth of the hiſtorie, then their imagined computation. Thirdly, if it ſhould be taken, as they expound it, for ſo ſhort a time, then very little of the prophecie in the Apocalyps is yet fulfilled: for the reuelation, for the moſt part, conſiſteth in ſetting downe the reigne and Kingdome of Antichriſt with the circumſtances thereof: as of the time of his tyrannizing ouer the Church chap.11.12. of his marke and myracles chap.13. of the plagues, which ſhould be powred out vpon the world vnder his kingdome chap.16. the deſcription of the whore, which is Antichriſt chap.17. the ouerthrow of Babylon, prophecied of in chap.14. fulfilled and accompliſhed, chap.18. So that if wee take our aduerſaries ſtrict expoſition, the whole prophecie of the Reuelation almoſt ſhall bee brought within the compaſſe of three yeeres and an halfe, which is not to be admitted: for ſo little of the Apocalypſe ſhould be yet fulfilled ſeeing their preciſe three yeeres and an halfe are not yet come. And againe, it is certaine that the Apocalypſe is a generall prophecie of the ſtate of the Church from Chriſts leauing the earth to his comming againe: and it tooke beginning euen from Iohns time: for things are ſhewed to him ſhortly to bee done, chap.1.verſ.1. and the time is at hand, verſ.3. So that we doubt not but the moſt part of that propheticall reuelation is alreadie accompliſhed, compliſhed, as it may appeare in comparing the viſions reuealed in that booke together, and in applying the hiſtories done to the prophecie there contained.

And againe, there is no prophecie beſide this of 42. moneths, which can be applied to the great perſecution in the primitiue Church: wherefore it is not like that the Lord would leaue his Church without ſome comfort, in forewarning them of thoſe great troubles which immediatly enſued. But if theſe prophecies, which are wreſted by the Papiſts, did not foretell of thoſe perſecutions, then are they vtterly forgotten in that booke: which is not like, it being the greateſt trial that euer the Church had.

4 The 1260. daies mentioned, Apocal. 12. 16. cannot be taken preciſely for ſo many naturall daies, but we are to vnderſtand ſo many propheticall daies, that is, a day for a yeere: for this both agreeth to the phraſe of Scripture, and the propheticall cuſtome and practiſe: as Numb. 14. 34. After the number of fortie daies wherein you ſearched out the land, euen fortie daies, euery day for a yeere, ſhall you beare your iniquitie. Likewiſe, Ezech. 4. 5, 6. Thou ſhalt beare the iniquitie of the houſe of Iuda fortie daies, a day for a yeere I haue giuen thee. Alſo the current of time and courſe of hiſtorie approueth the ſame; that 1260. yeeres are determined for Antichriſts raigne vntill his ouerthrow: for whether wee begin the account from the yeere 261. when Paulus Samoſatenus reuiued that foule hereſie, in denying Chriſt to bee God, and ſo was a forerunner of Antichriſt; adding hereunto 1260. yeeres, we come to the yeere 1521. when Luther began to impugne the Antichriſtian doctrine: Sic Balæus in vita Leon. 10. Or whether we count from the yeere 300. when Conſtantine the great left the imperiall citie of Rome to the Popes diſcretion, which made an open way to Antichriſt, adding here alſo 1260. yeeres, we fall into the yeere 1560. when according to the propheſie, Reuel. 11. 13. the tenth part of the Antichriſtian citie, as of Abbeyes, Nunries, Monaſteries was deſtroyed, as in England, Scotland, Germanie, and other countries. The Ieſuites liberall wreſting then of this number of daies, is not any way to be admitted.

5 We ſay laſtly, that wee are not curiouſly to ſearch into times and ſeaſons, which the Lord hath not reuealed: Onely this we learne, that the time of affliction being ſet downe by daies and moneths, the faithfull ſhould hereby be comforted, knowing that the time of their trouble is limited of God, and is but ſhort in reſpect of the kingdome of Chriſt.

Argum. 3. The Lord ſaith, Matth. 24. that thoſe daies ſhall be ſhortned, leſt no fleſh ſhould be ſaued. But how can the time bee ſhort, if it ſhould laſt ſome hundreds, or a thouſand of yeeres? Bellarm. cap. 8. Rhemiſt. annot. Mat. 24. ſect. 6.

Anſ. Firſt, that place verſ. 22. is properly vnderſtood of the calamitie of the Iewes, which if it had continued any longer, the nation of the Iewes had been vtterly deſtroyed. Secondly, yet notwithſtanding the raigne of Antichriſt is ſhort, in reſpect of the eternall kingdome of Chriſt: yea the whole time from his aſcenſion vntill his comming againe, is counted but ſhort. Apocal. 22. 20. I come quickly: And S. Peter ſaith, That a thouſand yeeres before God is as one day, and one day as a thouſand yeeres, 2. Pet. 3.

Argum. 4. Chriſt preached but three yeeres and an halfe: therefore Antichriſt ſhall be ſuffered to preach no longer.

Anſ. Firſt, yet Chriſt was thirtie yeeres old when he began to preach, and ſhewed himſelfe before, though not ſo openly; as when he was twelue yeere old he diſputed with the Doctors in the temple: he was alſo acknowledged for the Meſſiah in his natiuitie. If Antichriſt then muſt in this reſpect be correſpondent to Chriſt, he muſt alſo be knowne to bee thirtie yeeres vpon earth, before he be fully manifeſted. Secondly, though Chriſt himſelfe preached no longer, yet he ſent his Apoſtles, who preached many yeeres after: we doe not therefore oppoſe the perſon of Antichriſt, whom we denie to be a ſingular man, to Chriſt; but the kingdome of the one to the other. Now by their owne reaſon, it followeth, that becauſe the kingdome of Chriſt endured many yeeres, and yet doth, that therefore Antichriſts kingdome muſt likewiſe.

Other demonſtrations the Ieſuite hath to proue that Antichriſt is not yet come: as, becauſe the Goſpell is not yet preached to all the world, cap. 4. Bellarm. Helias and Henoch are not yet come, who are certainly looked for, cap. 6. There ſhall bee a moſt grieuous and terrible perſecution vnder Antichriſt, which is not yet paſt, cap. 7. But theſe arguments ſhall be anſwered in another place towards the end of this worke, when we come to ſpeake of the appearing of Chriſt to iudgement.

The Proteſtants.

THat Antichriſt ſhall raigne but three yeeres and a halfe, wee take it for a meere fable, and a very popiſh dreame: whereas on the contrarie ſide, we are able to ſhew both that Antichriſt is alreadie come, and hath tyrannized in the world theſe many yeeres.

Argum. 1. We will make it plaine by demonſtration, that Antichriſt hath been in the world many yeeres agoe, by the propheticall places of Scripture. Firſt, it is ſaid, the number of Antichriſt is 666.Apocal.13.18. So, anno 606. or thereabout, Boniface the 3. obtained of Phocas the Emperour to be called vniuerſall Biſhop. Thus ſaith Illyricus, Chytræus.

Paulinus diaconus lib.18.

And if wee take our account from that time when Pompeius the great tooke the Scepter from the Iewes,according to Iacobs prophecie, that *before the Scepter went from Iuda, the Sonne of God ſhould not come,*Geneſ.49.10. which fell out in Cicero his Conſulſhip, ſixtie yeeres before Chriſts natiuitie: Then ioyning to this number,606. wee finde Bonifacius in the yeere 666 at which time many ſtrange and prodigious ſights appeared,diuers Sea-monſters were ſeene,and a terrible blazing ſtarre was deſcried. Alſo Gregorie 1.the immediate predeceſſor of this Boniface, doubted not to call him Antichriſt,that tooke vpon him to be called vniuerſall Biſhop,as this Boniface did. All theſe ſignes did foreſhew,that Antichriſt was euen now borne into the world.

Further,if we begin at the yeere of the Lord 97.at which time Iohn wrote the Apocalypſe, and counting 666.yeeres,we ſhall come to the time of Pipinus,whom the Pope made King of France, and he againe much inlarged the iuriſdiction and authoritie of the Pope. And yet more euidently,about the yeere of the Lord 666.the Latin ſeruice was commanded to be vſed in all countries ſubiect to the See of Rome,by Pope Vitalianus: and about the ſame time, Conſtantius the Emperour remoued the ancient monuments of the Empire to Conſtantinople, and left the citie to the Popes pleaſure,Ful.annot.in 13.*Reuel.ſect.*10.

Another prophecie wee haue,Reuel,20.3. that after one thouſand yeeres Sathan muſt bee let looſe.Euen ſo,a thouſand yeeres after Chriſt,Pope Silueſter a great coniurer,hauing made a compact with the diuell,obtained the Papacie: and not long after him came in Gregorie the 7.a great Sorcerer alſo and Necromancer: Sic Lutherus.

But becauſe it is not to bee thought, that Sathan was bound during that great and long perſecution vnder the Romane Emperours, wee muſt begin the account of the thouſand yeeres, from the end of the perſecution,which continued 294.yeeres: vnto that adde a thouſand,ſo haue we the yeere of our Lord 1294.about which yeere Boniface the 8.made the ſixt booke of the Decretals,confirmed the orders of Friers,and gaue them great freedomes: with this number agreeth Daniel his 1290.daies,Dan.12.11. Alſo ſomewhat before this time,anno 1260.the orders of Dominicke and Franciſcane Friers began firſt to be ſet vp by Honorius the 3. and Gregorie the 9. And ſo haue we the 1260.daies,which are ſet downe, *Apocal.*12.*plura apud Fox.pag.*398.

*Argum.*2. If Antichriſt ſhould raigne but three yeeres and an halfe, as our aduerſaries teach, and then immediatly that time being expired,the world ſhould end: then it is poſſible to aſſigne the time of our Lord Chriſt his comming to iudgement,ſo ſoone as Antichriſt is reuealed. But the Goſpell ſaith,*that of that day and houre knoweth no man,no not the Angels in heauen,*Matth.24.36.Yet theſe good fellowes take vpon them to be wiſer then the Angels: for they dare ſet downe the very day of Chriſts comming; which ſhall bee, as Bellarmine preſumptuouſly imagineth, iuſt 45. daies after the deſtruction of Antichriſt. And to this purpoſe he abuſeth that place of Dan.12.11. where mention is made of 1290.daies,that is,as he fondly interpreteth,three yeeres and an halfe, the iuſt time of Antichriſts raigne: But bleſſed is he that commeth (ſaith the Prophet) to 1335.daies: that is,ſaith Bellarmine,to 45.daies after the deſtruction of Antichriſt; and then Chriſt commeth, *cap.*9. What intolerable boldnes and preſumption is this, contrarie to the ſaying of Chriſt,to attempt to declare the very houre of his comming?

Againe,the prophecie of Daniel had no ſuch meaning: for he onely ſpeaketh of the afflictions of the Church,before the comming of Chriſt, as Iohn prophecieth of the troubles that came after. Daniel therefore in that place receiueth inſtructions concerning the cruell perſecution of the Iewes vnder Antiochus Epiphanes,the beginning, and the end thereof: There are three times reuealed vnto him.

Dan.7.25. The firſt is of a time,two times,and halfe a time,or rather the diuiding of time; or as Tremellius more agreeable to the Hebrue, a part or parcell of times: ſo long ſhould the temple bee defiled, and the abomination ſet vp in the temple,that is, three yeeres and certaine daies: And ſo it came to paſſe,for this deſolation began in the temple the 145.yeere of the raigne of the Greekes,the 15. day of the moneth Caſleu,1.Macchab.1.57.when Antiochus cauſed the daily ſacrifice to ceaſe, and incenſe to be burnt to Idols:And iuſt three yeeres and ten daies after,which is to be reckoned for the od parcell of times, anno 148.the 25.day of Caſleu, they began to offer ſacrifice in the temple according to the law,1.Macchab.4.52.

The ſecond time reuealed,is of 1290.daies,Dan.12.11.which maketh three yeeres,ſeuen moneths and odde daies: which is the time counting from the deſolation, when as the ſacrifices ſhould be reſtored,and confirmed by the Kings graunt, and letters Patents: which accordingly came to paſſe,anno 148.the 15.of the moneth Xanthicus, which was the laſt moneth but one,as it is recorded,2.Macchab.11.33.

The third time is deſcribed by daies,1335.Dan.12.12. Bleſſed is he that ſhould liue to ſee that time: namely,when the Church of the Iewes ſhould fully be deliuered by the death of Antiochus, which was in the beginning of the next yeere, which was 149. 1.Macchab.6.16. Thus wee ſee theſe times were fully accompliſhed vnder the tyrannie of Antiochus: wherefore theſe prophecies being once fulfilled, they cannot bee drawne to ſignifie any other time, but by way of ſimilitude and compariſon.

Neither is that any thing worth, which the Ieſuite obiecteth out of S.Paul, 2.Theſſ.2.8. Then ſhall the wicked man be reuealed, whom Chriſt ſhall conſume with the ſpirit of his mouth: As though preſently after the reuelation of Antichriſt Chriſt ſhould come. And therefore Antichriſt muſt not be expected or looked for before the end of the world: for the whole time from the firſt comming of Chriſt to his ſecond, is in the Scripture called nouiſſima hora, the laſt times, 1.Ioh.2.18. And therefore Antichriſt, at what time ſoeuer he is reuealed after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, he commeth in the laſt times: whoſe vtter ruine and deſtruction ſhall be reſerued for the glorious appearing of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh.

*Argum.*3. Whereas the Scripture ſaith, that Sathan muſt be bound for a thouſand yeeres, and after let looſe againe, Apocal.20.2. And it is plaine, that the thouſand yeeres ſince Chriſt are expired more then fiue hundred yeeres ago: It followeth hereupon that Antichriſt is alreadie come: for he muſt be reuealed with the looſing of Sathan. Our aduerſaries haue nothing to anſwere but this, that by this 1000.yeers, a certaine time is not meant, but the whole ſpace during the time of the new Teſtament, till the comming of Antichriſt, *Rhemiſt.Reuel.*20.*ſect.*1. To whom we anſwere, that by the ſame reaſon, neither ſhall their 42.moneths ſhew any certaine time, but the whole ſpace ſo long as Antichriſt ſhall raigne. And this number of moneths, as of daies, weekes, houres, the Scripture euery where taketh myſtically in prophecies: but when thouſands or hundred yeeres are mentioned, they are alwaies taken literally: as Iſai.7.8. it is prophecied that Ephraim, that is, Iſrael, ſhould vtterly ceaſe to bee a people within 65.yeeres, which euen ſo came to paſſe, counting from the fourth yeere of the raigne of Ahaz King of Iuda, to the 25. yeere of Manaſſes, when the remnant of Iſrael was carried away.

Iſai.16.14. In three yeeres as the yeeres of an hireling, that is, preciſely ſo many, the glorie of Moab ſhall be deſtroyed. Iſai.21.16. Yet a yeere according to the yeeres of an hireling, and all the glorie of Kedar ſhall faile. In all theſe places hirelings yeeres are vnderſtood, that is, ſo many common yeeres, as ſeruants doe vſe to be hired for.

Let vs adioyne the teſtimonie of antiquitie: *Cyprian epiſtol.*3.ad Cornelium: Antichriſti iam propinquantis aduentum conantur imitari: They, ſpeaking of the Nouatian heretikes, doe imitate Antichriſt, who is now approching and drawing neere.

*Paſchal.*2.anno 1100. held a Councell at Rome againſt the Biſhop of Florence, who affirmed Antichriſt then to be borne: *Epiſtol.Leodienſ.contra Paſchal.*2. Ecce ſolutus eſt Sathanas habens iram magnam: Behold Sathan is broke looſe, hauing great wrath. Anno 1390. Pope Vrbane the 6. and Clement 7. being both Popes at once, did thunder out one againſt another, calling each other ſchiſmatike, heretike, Antichriſt.

Whom now may wee beleeue rather for this matter then the Popes: for Antichriſt may beſt iudge of himſelfe?

We haue alſo the iudgement of one Heutonius a Papiſt, againſt their dreame of three yeeres and an halfe, who thus writeth in his preface to his tranſlation of Arethas: It is not poſſible that Antichriſt, in ſo ſhort a time of three common yeeres and an halfe, ſhould obtaine ſo many kingdomes and prouinces.

Adde the ſeale of holy Martyrs: Maſter Bilney; Sathan, as the Scripture witneſſeth, hath been now let looſe theſe 500.yeeres, as it is written in the Apocalypſe, After a thouſand yeeres Sathan ſhall be let looſe, Fox pag.1003. Maſter Tindall holy Martyr, ſaith, That ſince the firſt 30.Biſhops of Rome that died Martyrs, there haue been 204.Popes, and hardly foure to bee found among them good Chriſtian men.pag.1252.

All theſe agree together, that Antichriſt hath bin many yeeres alreadie reuealed to the world: and therefore this new deuice of three yeeres and an halfe, is but a meere forgerie.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE name, character, and ſigne of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

THey ſtoutly affirme, that Antichriſt ſhal be one particular man; conſequently they alſo hold, that he ſhal haue a certaine name, as Chriſt is called Ieſus, ſo Antichriſt muſt alſo haue a proper name: but what that name ſhall be, no man can tell, vntill he come: but it ſhall conſiſt of certaine letters, that in number make ſixe hundred ſixtie ſixe, *Bellar.cap.*10.*Rhemiſt.annot.Apocal.*13.*ſect.*10. 58.Error.

1 Apocal.13.18. Count the number of the beaſt, for it is the number of a man, and his number is 666.

Hereupon they conclude, that Antichriſt ſhall haue a certaine name, which containeth that number, Bellarm.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, it is the number of the beaſt, and yet of a man: Ergo, it cannot be the name of any one man: for by the beaſt, the Ieſuites themſelues vnderſtand a companie or multitude, Rhemiſt. Apocal. 13.*ſect.*1. Wherefore it muſt be ſuch a name as agreeth to a company or ſucceſſion of men, and ſuch is the name Latinus, as afterward we will ſhew. Secondly, it muſt be a name by number, ſhewing the time, not an idle number ſignifying nothing; the time of his comming is ſet downe to be 666. But the name of their Antichriſt cannot ſhew any ſuch time, ſeeing there are yeeres more then twice 666. gone alreadie, and yet they ſay, their Antichriſt is not yet come.

*Argum.*2. Antichriſt ſhall haue a name, as Chriſt had: but it is not neceſſarie to bee knowne, otherwiſe then Chriſt his name was: which was deſcribed by Sibil by the number of 888. as Antichriſts is by 666. yet was not his name, Ieſus, perfectly knowne before his comming, neither is it neceſſary that Antichriſts ſhould before that time. Ieſus, in Greek letters thus, ιησους, maketh as you ſee 888. *Bellam.cap.*10.

ι.	10.

	888.

Anſ. Firſt, you muſt prooue Antichriſt to bee one ſingular man as Chriſt was, and then ſtriue for his name. Secondly, you doe euill to match Sibils prophecie, and Iohns reuelation together, as though her coniecture of the name of Chriſt, by the number of 888. were of like authoritie with Iohns prophecie, of 666. Thirdly, that the name of Ieſus is deſcribed by one of the Sibils by the number 888. it is euident. And Auguſtine alſo maketh mention of others verſes, which goe vnder the name of Sibill, the firſt letters whereof doe make this title or name both in the Greeke and Latin, ἰησοῦς χρειστὸς υἱὸς θεοῦ σωτήρ: Ieſus Chriſtus filius Dei ſaluator: Ieſus Chriſt the ſonne of God our Sauiour, *Auguſt.cont.Iudæos & Pagan.cap.*16. But theſe prophecies of Chriſt, which goe vnder the name of Sibill, may bee doubted of: for it is not like that out of the Church among the Gentiles there could be found more euident predictions of the Meſſiah, then in the Church of the Iewes in the true Prophets writings: and if the Prophets of God, ſpeaking by the ſpirit of God, did not foreſee or foretell the name of Ieſus, how could the Sibils, ſpeaking by a ſpirit of diuination, bee able to declare it? But becauſe the teſtimonie of the Sibils is alleaged by graue authors againſt the Iewes and Pagans, I ſpare to ſpeake of the vncertaintie of them. Fourthly, if Antichriſts name were as well knowne, as Chriſts name was before his comming, no man could be ignorant of him: for the names of Chriſt were particularly expreſſed by the Prophets, as euen now ſhall bee ſhewed.

The Proteſtants.

WE affirme by the warrant of Scripture, that as it is a meere fable, that Antichriſt ſhall be one ſingular man: ſo of the like truth is it, that he ſhall be knowne by ſome notorious name: neither can any ſuch thing be gathered, Apocal. 13.18.

*Argum.*1. If there ſhould come ſuch a notorious wicked perſon into the world, who onely ſhould deſerue to be called Antichriſt, it is not vnlike, but that the ſpirit of God ſpeaking of his name, both could and would alſo haue expreſſed it: As Ioſias was deſcribed by name, 1.King.13.2 and Cyrus, Eſai 44.28.45.1. long before either of them came into the world. And why, I pray you, might not this prophetical Euangeliſt, haue named Antichriſt, as well as Sibilla foretold the name of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt?

Againe, Chriſts names were prophecied of and knowne before: One name of his is to bee called a Nazarite, ſo the people call him, Matth.21.11. a prophet of Nazareth. This name the Prophet hath, Iſai 11.1. he calleth him, Netſer, in Hebrue it ſignifieth a branch. Another name of his, is King of Iſrael, Ioh.12.13. prophecied of by Zach.9.9. Chriſt alſo was ſaluted by the name of the ſonne of Dauid, Mat.21.9. Mark.10.48. for the Iewes did generally hold, that the Meſſiah ſhould be called by the name of Dauid, according to the ſaying of the Prophets: as Ezech.34.24. My ſeruant Dauid ſhall be their prince. And 37.35. My ſeruant Dauid ſhall be their prince for euer. And againe, Ierem.30.9. They ſhall ſerue the Lord their God, and Dauid their King: which place Rabbi Ionathas doth thus tranſlate, Obedient Dauidi Meſſiæ regi ſuo: They ſhall obey Dauid the Meſſiah their King.

Further, he was knowne by the name Meſſiah, or Chriſt, before he came, Ioh.4. The woman of Samaria ſaid, I know well that Meſſiah ſhall come, which is called Chriſt, verſ.25. This name was reuealed to Daniel, 9.25. he is called Meſſiah the prince.

But will our aduerſaries ſay, his name Ieſus was not knowne before his comming? Yes, euen that name alſo hath ſome euidence out of the Prophets: for Ieſus, or Ieſua, is all one, and ſignifieth a Sauiour: of the which name we reade Zachar.3. where mention is made of Ieſhua the hie Prieſt, who was a type of our Sauiour Chriſt, and bare his name, for verſ.5. a Diademe is ſet vpon his head: which muſt needes be vnderſtood of Ieſus Chriſt, our high Prieſt. Againe, he is called Hoſanna, Ioh.12.13. which ſignifieth the ſame that Ieſus, and both are deriued from the ſame roote:

tranſlated,Saue vs. Which name wee finde in the 118.Pſalme,verſ.25. And Auguſtine ſeemeth to gather the ſame name out of the prophecie of Habakuck.3.3.Sanctus veniet de monte Pharan: The holy one ſhall come from the mount Pharan: that is, ſaith he, of the ſame name whereof he was,which was ſent from Pharan,Numb.13.1.that is,*Ioſua,*who alſo is called *Ieſus,*Heb.4.8. and at that time alſo was his name chaunged,when he was ſent from Pharan,as Auguſtine in the ſame place noteth,*lib.16.cont.Fauſtum Manich.c.*19.20.He is there alſo called *Hoſhea,*Num.13.8.which is the very name conſiſting of the ſame letters and points in the Hebrue,which is giuen to Chriſt, Matth.21.9.according to the prophecie,Pſal.118.verſ.25.for there they ſalute him thus, *Hoſheangna,*Saue vs.

Laſtly,if the name Ieſus Chriſt were reuealed to Sibilla an heathen prophetesſe,how can it be that the Prophets of God were ignorant of it? Therefore by their owne argument, ſeeing Chriſts names were knowne before his comming,why ſhould not Antichriſts in like manner,if he ſhould be ſome one ſingular notorious man?

*Argum.*2. We can bring forth a name,which in all reſpects agreeth with that deſcription, Apocal.13.18.which is a name both of a man and of the beaſt, that is, of a companie,or ſucceſſion of men,which ſheweth the time of Antichriſts birth,namely, the yeere 666.which doth fitly agree with the manners and properties of Antichriſt,which was alſo the name ſometimes of a man, and that is the name *Latinus,*by which name one of their firſt Kings were called,which in Greeke letters λατεινος, ſheweth in account, the number 666. and ſo doth the name of Rome in Hebrue —רומיית, romiijth, which alſo was the name of one of their Popes called Romanus, who was Pope about the yeere 900.about which time they began to be in their ruffe. And one of their owne writers Barthol.Caranza the Epitomizer of the Councels thus teſtifieth of thoſe times: Iam tunc cœperat pontificum virtus & integritas deficere: And euen then began the vertue and integritie of the Biſhops of Rome to faile and decay. And, *eccleſia Italica,*in Greeke letters doe make the ſame number.

We ſee then,that all things doe well agree to this name:firſt,that it ſignifieth the whole Latin Church or Empire,and ſo is the name of the beaſt. Secondly,it ſheweth the time 666.about which yeere Pope Vitalianus compoſed the Latin Seruice, and enioyned all nations to vſe no other. Thirdly,it properly agreeth with the Antichriſtian practiſe of Rome; which is called the Latin Church. And contrarie to S.Pauls rule they haue brought an vnknowne tongue, which edifieth not, into the ſeruice of God: yea they preferre it before the Greeke and Hebrue, making the Latin tranſlation of the Scriptures onely authenticall, as it was concluded in their Tridentine chapter. And they doe ſo much extoll their Latin text, as the ſetter forth of the Complutenſe edition is not aſhamed in his preface to write,that he hath placed the Latin text betweene the Hebrue and the Greeke,as Chriſt betweene the two theeues. What Church then in the whole world but theirs,can be called the Latin Church? Fourthly,it alſo maketh much for vs,that wee haue a conſent of names: for λατεινος, εκκλησια ιταλικη, and in Hebrue romiijth, doe all make the ſame number, and doe note the Latin, Romane,or Italian Church.

But they obiect:Firſt,that Latinus maketh not that number with i. but Lateinus with ει.A great matter: wherein they ſhew their ignorance,as though the Greeke diphthong, ει. be not vſually expreſſed by a ſingle i. in Latin,as we ſay,Αντιοχεια, Antiocheia in Greeke, and Αλεξανδρεια, Alexandreia, with ει. diphthong: in Latin, *Antiochia, Alexandria,*with ſingle i. for the cities of Antioch, & Alexandria: this therefore is a ſmall quarrell. But marke,I pray,what a poore ſhift this is: If this ſmall letter ε. bee but admitted, the Pope is made Antichriſt: ſo wee haue found out Antichriſt,ſauing one ſmall letter.

2 There are many names beſide, that make that number,as τειταν, αρνουμαι, and others: nay the Rhemiſts ſay,that Luthers name,in the Hebrue;and *Bellarmine,*that Dauid Chytraus his name,doe expreſſe that number of 666. But what of all this? there is none of theſe names, vnto the which the three properties aforeſaid doe agree,as they doe vnto *Latinus,*as to betoken the whole bodie of Antichriſt, to ſhew the time of his birth, and deſcribe the qualities of his kingdome, as the word Latinus doth: yet this we do not ſay,that this is the very name which is meant in that place, and that the prophecie can haue no other meaning, but to ſhew how ridiculous their interpretation is,and how much neerer ours commeth to the truth. And concerning Luthers name,it can not make that number,vnleſſe they chaunge the letters,and make it Luderus: and ſo it is an eaſie matter by chopping and chaunging of letters to bring any name to that number. And againe,the Rhemiſts doe cleere Luther in this behalfe that he is not Antichriſt, *Apocal.*13.*sect.*10.

Antiquitie alſo approoueth this name, as Irenæus lib.5.de hæreſib. Teſtimonium perhibentibus his, qui facie ad faciem viderunt Dominum,&c. And theſe bearing teſtimonie, that face to face haue ſeene S.*Iohn,*and by reaſon teaching,how that the number of the beaſts name doth containe 666. after the Grecian reckoning, by the letters that are therein. And though this father in that place preferreth the name Teitan,before others,as very like to be the name of Antichriſt : yet firſt he approueth the name Lateinus,ſaying,*Valde veriſimile eſt:*It is very like to be this name,becauſe the Latines now doe raigne. And Irenæus might be deceiued in the other name Teitan, becauſe Antichriſt was not yet reuealed:but ſince the reuelation of Antichriſt,it is now eaſie to diſcerne which of theſe two names doth beſt agree to the prophecie.

Now further for theſe two points,that the name prophecied of in the Apocalypſe,is ſo a name, as that it deciphereth alſo a certaine number of yeeres:and that it is not a ſpecial or proper name of any one man,we haue the teſtimonie of ſome of their owne writers.

For the firſt, Lyranus vpon this place is a witneſſe, that although he take not Mahomet to bee Antichriſt,yet thinketh his death falling out in the yeere 666. to be ſignified in this number. For the other, Primaſius,and many other of their ſide, thinke that ἀντικος, that ſignifieth,contrarie ſhall be the name of Antichriſt,which is no proper,but a generall name of oppoſition to Chriſt,as Antichriſt is. Likewiſe Rupertus thinketh, that the name of Antichriſt (that is, of that one ſingular man)is not contained in this number : who hath another myſticall interpretation of the name, which is nothing to the purpoſe : and therefore I omit it.

The holy Martyrs thought that Antichriſt ſhould not be ſet forth by any ſuch notorious name: *Wiclif.& Iohan.Huſſ.*That there were diuers diſciples of Antichriſt,Popes,Cardinals,Patriarches, Monkes,Chanons,Friers,&c.*articul.*12.All theſe make but one Antichriſt,hauing ſeuerall names and places.

OF THE CHARACTER OR SIGNE and badge of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

59.Error. THey doe hold that Antichriſt ſhall haue a certaine outward marke or character, which he ſhall cauſe to be printed in the right hands,and foreheads of all both ſmall and great,that do belong to his kingdome, Apocal.13.16. But this marke is not yet knowne, no more then his name is : onely this they are ſure of, that the Pope hath not Antichriſts character, but rather the character of Chriſt, the ſigne of the croſſe which he cauſeth to bee ſigned in the foreheads, *Bellarm.cap.*11.

*Argum.*1. Antichriſt muſt in all reſpects be contrarie to Chriſt : for as he ſeeth his Image and Crucifixe adored,ſo ſhall he ſet vp his owne image to be worſhipped: and therefore as Chriſtians now doe beare in their foreheads the ſigne of the Croſſe which is Chriſts marke,ſo he ſhall inuent another marke contrarie to Chriſts : and he will make his name and the letters thereof ſacred,as now the name of Ieſus is worſhipped among Chriſtians,*Rhemiſt.Apocal.*13.*ſect.*7.

Anſw. Firſt, where haue you learned, that roodes and images are to be adored and worſhipped ? or doth not the word of God teach the plaine contrarie ? Pſal.115.8.9. O Iſrael truſt in the Lord: but they that worſhip images are like vnto them : he therefore that truſteth in an image cannot truſt in God. Againe,where learne you to make an Idol of the letters or ſillables of Chriſts name,to cauſe men to carrie it in their caps,and bowe their knee vnto it ? thinke you that S.Paul, when he ſaith, that all things doe bowe the knee to the name of Ieſus, yea of things in heauen, Philip.2. that he meant, that euen the Angels doe ſtoup and make obeiſance, when they ſee the name of Ieſus written in a glaſſe window ? Or who taught you that the ſigne of the Croſſe is to be borne vpon mens foreheads; and that with croſſing of the forehead, we are preſerued from daunger ? S.Paul, you know, hath no ſuch meaning, when he ſaith, He bare in his bodie the markes of the Lord Ieſus, which were nothing elſe, but the ſignes and tokens of his perſecutions, as whippings, ſtoning,and ſuch like in his fleſh : Galat.6.17. Neither, when he ſaith, He reioyced in nothing but the Croſſe of Chriſt, whereby he was crucified to the world, verſ.14. hath he any relation to the Croſſe in the forehead ? for it were a miracle, that a man by croſſing his forehead, ſhould ſtraightwayes crucifie and mortifie his affections. Nor yet did our Sauiour ſpeake of this marke, where he ſaith, that they which will follow him muſt take vp his croſſe,Mark.8.34. for in that place by taking vp the croſſe, he meaneth, nothing elſe but the forſaking and denying of our ſelues. So it is plaine, that in the Scripture you finde not this ſuperſtitious ſigne of the croſſe in your foreheads.

2 Where you ſay, that you doe honour the Character of Chriſt, as his name, and the ſigne of the Croſſe : You doe euen ſo honour Chriſt, as the ſouldiers did that gaue him a reede for a Scepter, and thornes for a Crowne, and bowed themſelues in mockage : So you doe leaue Chriſt certaine badges and ſignes of his kingdome ; but indeede you ſpoyle him of it, and of his prieſthoode too, making other mediators beſide him, and other ſacrifices propitiatorie beſide his. What doe you elſe now, in bowing the knee to the name and ſillables of Ieſus, and ſpoyling him of his honour, but with the ſouldiers in mockage to bow vnto Chriſt ? And I pray you, how doe you honor the name of Chriſt, when you make a ieſt of the name of Chriſtian ? for in Italie it is a word of reproch,taken,for an idiote or foole.

3 We are ſo farre from thinking, that the characters of Chriſts name, and the ſignes of the Croſſe ſo ſuperſtitiouſly vſed among Papiſts are the markes of Chriſt, that we take them rather to be the viſible markes of Antichriſt: for beſides the inuiſible characters of Antichriſt, whereof we are to ſpeake afterward, that he ſhall vſe alſo ſome viſible markes, and what thoſe markes are we doe learne where the text ſaith, The marke of the beaſts name, Apocal. 14. 11. and the marke of the number of his name, Apocal. 15. 2. as it is in the originall: Now the number of the beaſts name, is expreſſed by theſe three Greeke letters χ. ξ. ϛ. Apocal. 13. 18. Hence are deriued the abuſed characters of Chriſts name, χ. ρ̃. ϛ. for χριϛος: the firſt letter and the laſt in the beaſts name χ. ξ. ϛ. and in theſe abuſed characters χ. ρ̃. ϛ. are all one; and the middle character ρ. with his crowne thus, ρ̃. cannot more fitly be expreſſed by any letter, then the middle in the beaſts name, ξ. Thus we ſee that theſe characters χ. ρ̃. ϛ. ſo ſuperſtitiouſly abuſed by the Papiſts, which they vſed in their rings, amulets, tablets, in their caps and garments, doe iſſue out of the beaſts name, and ſo are markes of Antichriſt.

In like manner did they abuſe the ſigne of the croſſe, attributing vnto it the power, efficacie, and merite of Chriſts death, as though the very ſigne of the croſſe were able to ſanctifie thoſe that were croſſed, and to preſerue them from ſpirituall danger.

And theſe ſuperſtitious markes of the croſſe, had their beginning from the beaſts name: for the firſt letter χ. is a croſſe, the middle letter ξ. in Latin X. is alſo a ſideling croſſe, the laſt letter ϛ. contayneth both σ. and τ. two Greeke letters, whereof the latter is called an headleſſe croſſe: and thus it appeareth plainly, that the markes whereby they ſay, they honor Chriſt, are rather a diſhonor to him, and are in very deede the cogniſance of Antichriſt.

4 We anſwere, that the ſigne whereby Chriſtians are marked, are not externall, but internall: We are ſealed by the ſpirit of God, Epheſ. 4. 30. The outward ſignes are none other, but the two Sacraments of baptiſme and the Lords ſupper: by the right adminiſtration whereof the congregations of the faithful are knowen. But of this, more ſhal be ſpoken in the Antitheſis, or Antidotum, in the declaration of our opinion.

The Proteſtants.

BY the character or marke of Antichriſt, we doe not ſo much vnderſtand any viſible ſigne or badge to be printed in the righthand or the forehead, as the Ieſuite imagineth: as though he ſhould brand all his ſubiects in the hande or forehead: as that hereby is meant and ſignified chiefly the ſociety and communion, whereby they ſhall be ioyned to Antichriſt, by giuing vnto him their fidelitie, oth, and obedience, agreeing together in the ſame corruption of faith, and doctrine. This is Antichriſts badge or cogniſance, Fulk. Apocal. 13. ſect. 7. There are alſo outward markes of their coniunction with Antichriſt: as the ſhauing of prieſts, and greazing them with oyle: ſuch are the receiuing of holy bread, the wearing of beades, the annoynting with Chriſome, the croſſing of themſelues, as we haue before ſhewed. But the proper note and character, is the oth and profeſſion of fealty and obedience.

Argum. 1. Antichriſt, ſay they, ſhall bring in another contrary character, to diſgrace the ſigne and character of Chriſt, namely the croſſe in the foreheads: But Chriſt hath appoynted no ſuch viſible character, neither are true Chriſtians knowne by any ſuch: therefore alſo the character of Antichriſt is no ſuch thing: the antecedent is proued thus.

1 The people of the Iewes had no ſuch outward badge, who were more charged with outward obſeruations, then Chriſtians are: Circumciſion was the only ſigne of the couenant to them, Geneſ. 17. 11. which was one of their chiefe Sacraments, in place whereof Baptiſme is enioyned vs: Ergo, much leſſe are we to be knowne by any other outward badge.

2 This place Apocal. 13. is taken out of Ezech. 9. where the Angell is commaunded to ſet a marke vpon the foreheads of them that mourne: but that was no viſible externall marke, for it was ſhewed the Prophet in viſion: Ergo, neither is it to be taken ſo in this place.

3 We grant the Sacraments are badges and markes of our profeſſion: which markes the Pope, the onely Antichriſt hath defaced, by bringing in fiue other Sacraments, and cleane changing, polluting and altering, the right Sacraments which Chriſt inſtituted: for they haue brought into baptiſme, chriſme, ſalt, oyle, ſpittle, and ſuch traſh; into the Euchariſt, adoration, tranſubſtantiation, ſacrifice, with ſuch like: ſo that herein he ſheweth himſelfe Antichriſt, and hath altered the true markes of Religion.

Argum. 2. It appeareth by the effect what is the Character of Antichriſt: The text ſaith, It was not lawfull for any to buy or ſell, but he that had the marke or the name of the beaſt: No more was it lawfull for any to haue trafficke amongſt the papiſts, but he that acknowledged the Popes croſſe keyes, or made himſelfe a member of the Romiſh Italian Church: Nay they ſay, he is not of the Church, that acknowledgeth not the Pope to be head of Chriſts Church, Fulk. Apocal. 13. ſect. 7.

The Ieſuite obiecteth: Firſt, this oth of fidelitie and coniunction cannot be that character; for it muſt be in the right hand or forehead. Anſw. We haue alreadie declared, that it is too childiſh to take theſe words literally, as though all Antichriſts ſubiects ſhould carie brands in their foreheads or hands. Secondly, ſaith he, many doe both buy and ſell amongſt them, that haue not made profeſſion of their fealtie to Rome, as the Iewes, *Bellarm.cap.*11. Anſw. Yea no maruaile, for Antichriſt is an enemie onely to Chriſt: all other people he can brooke well enough beſide good Chriſtians: tell me I pray you, whether our Merchants be admitted to trafficke ſafely in Spaine, if their religion be knowne? The ſeruants of God amongſt you, can neither enioy, houſes, lands, libertie, or life: which yoke alſo was laid a long time vpon this land, till it pleaſed God to haue mercy on vs: for the which his name be bleſſed.

Thirdly, Againe, many yeeres agoe, euen in Auguſtines and Ambroſe his time, all Churches were ioyned to Rome, before Antichriſt was yet reuealed. Ergo, This is not the Character of Antichriſt, Bellarm.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, they were ioyned then in common conſent of religion, not as ſubiects by compulſion, but voluntarie; becauſe at that time, Rome in the chiefeſt pointes of Religion was in the right faith. Secondly, but of late dayes in the Councell of Conſtance, not yet two hundred yeeres agoe, it was made an article of faith, to beleeue, that the Pope was the head of the Vniuerſall Church: yea about the yeere 600. the title of vniuerſall Biſhop firſt began to be appropriate to Rome: whereby was inſinuated, that all Churches in the worlde ſhould be vnder the obedience thereof.

Laſtly, we haue the teſtimonie of one of their Popes themſelues, who ſaith plainely, that he is the forerunner of Antichriſt, which would be called Vniuerſall Biſhop. *lib.*4.*epiſtol.*32. and writing
Gregory.1. to Eulogius of Conſtantinople he calleth this title of Vniuerſalitie, ſuperbæ appellationis verbum, a proude name. And Pelagius 2.1.decretal.contra Iohannem Conſtantinop. ſaith thus, Nullus Patriarcharum tam profano vtatur vocabulo, he termeth it a prophane name. See then by his teſtimonie, the title of Vniuerſalitie, and exacting of obedience of other Churches, is a prophane and proud title, and in very deed the character and marke of Antichriſt.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr, maketh this an infallible ſigne of Antichriſt, *Becauſe he aduanceth himſelfe aboue all other creatures: Fox.*pag.1874. and would haue all to depend vpon him. Maſter Bradford calleth him Antichriſt, that arrogated to himſelfe, *to be called the ſupreme head of the vniuerſall Church,*pag.1626.epiſtol.ad Londinenſ.

THE FOVRTH PART, CONCERNING the generation and originall of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

60.Error. THey do reiect thoſe old fancies concerning Antichriſt, as that he ſhould be borne of a Virgin by helpe of the diuell, that he ſhould haue the diuell to his father: that he ſhould be a diuell incarnate: or that he ſhould be Nero raiſed from the dead. Refuſing theſe fables, they haue found out one as fooliſh: Our Rhemiſts hold, that Antichriſt ſhall be borne of the tribe of Dan. Bellarmine dare not ſay ſo, but he thinketh that he ſhall come of the Iewes ſtocke, and be circumciſed, and be taken of the Iewes for their Meſſiah, *cap.*12.

*Argum.*1. That he ſhall come of the tribe of Dan: thus they would proue it, Gen.49.17. Dan ſhall be a ſerpent by the way, biting the horſe heeles: Ierem.8.16. The neying of his horſes is heard from Dan. And Apocal.7. where 12. thouſand of euery tribe are reckoned, onely Dan is left out, becauſe (belike) Antichriſt ſhould come of that tribe, *Rhem.*2.*Theſ.*2.*ſect.*8.

Anſw. Bellarmine confuteth all theſe reaſons: the firſt he ſaith with Hierome to be vnderſtood of Sampſon; who came of the tribe of Dan: the ſecond place is of Nabuchadnezzars comming to deſtroy Ieruſalem, as Hierome alſo expoundeth it: to the third he ſaith, that Ephraim is left out as well as Dan: yea and ſo is Manaſſeh too: becauſe the tribe of Ioſeph is named for his two ſonnes: but Dan is left out becauſe Leui is reckoned in his place. We may ſee now, how well they agree, when one Ieſuite confuteth another, *Bellarm.cap.*12.

*Argum.*2. Bellarmine ſtandeth much vpon that place, Ioh.5.43. If another come in his name, him will ye receiue: but ſaith he, the Iewes will receiue none but of their owne kinred, and whom they looke for to be their Meſſiah. Ergo, Antichriſt muſt come of the Iewes. ibid.

He alſo vrgeth that place of the Apoſtle 2. Theſſ.2.11. God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, to beleeue lies: which he vnderſtandeth of the Iewes, that ſhal be readie to receiue Antichriſt for their Meſſiah: and indeed ſaith, Antichriſt ſhall come eſpecially for the Iewes, to delude and deceiue them.

*Anſw.*1. This place we haue ſhewed before, *part.*1. of this queſtion, to be vnderſtood of falſe prophets amongſt the Iewes, ſuch as mention is made of, Act.5. as Theudas and Iudas, and not of any one falſe prophet: ſo Iohn 10. where Chriſt compareth himſelfe, which is the true ſhepheard, with the hireling, he vnderſtandeth all hirelings, though he ſpeake in the ſingular number. Secondly, and if it ſhould be vnderſtood onely or ſpecially of their imagined Antichriſt, then it would follow, that the Iewes as yet haue receiued none comming in their owne name, but haue as it were, kept themſelues in ſuſpence, refuſing Chriſt, and yet hearing none other. Which were very abſurd, that this ſaying of Chriſt hath not been verified vpon the Iewes theſe 16. hundred yeeres. Thirdly, and Chriſts ſpeech is eſpecially directed to that generation, that ſeeing they refuſed Chriſt, yet they followed other ringleaders, or ſectmaſters, that deceiued them.

And concerning the other place, we anſwere. Firſt, that it is not ſpoken onely or ſpecially of the Iewes, but of all vnbeleeuers, who through the hardneſſe of their heart ſhould be readie to receiue Antichriſt: and ſo the Rhemiſts expound it, in their annotations vpon this place: and the Apoſtle doth giue inſtructions as touching Antichriſt, not to the Iewes, but to the beleeuing Gentiles, to whom he writeth, ſaying in the 3. verſ. Let no man deceiue you &c.. Secondly, that Antichriſt ſhall come chiefely to ſeduce the Iewes in the end of the world, is contrary to the Apoſtle Rom. 11. which prophecieth of the generall calling of the Iewes, not of their generall ſeducing: and this aſſertion of the Papiſts; that the Iewes Meſſiah is yet to come, doth harden their hearts, and nouriſh them in their blind hope and fooliſh conceit.

The Proteſtants.

THat it is a very fable and couſening deuice of heretikes, to make men beleeue that Antichriſt ſhall come of the tribe of Dan, or of the ſtocke of the Iewes, thus we ſhew it.

*Argum.*1. It is out of doubt, that the nation of the Iewes ſhall be conuerted vnto God, and mercy ſhall be ſhewed againe to the remnant of Iſrael, Rom. 11. 25. confeſſed alſo by the Papiſts. And hereof Origen ſo many yeeres ſince, hath written very confidently, though doubtful and vncertaine in many things beſide. Firſt, Homil.6. in Numer. ſpeaking of the marriage of Moſes with a woman of Ethiopia, how Miriam his ſiſter for murmuring againſt it became leprous, and was ſhut 7. dayes out of the Campe: he thus applieth the Storie by the mariage with the Ethiopian, vnderſtanding the calling of the Gentiles: and by the excluding of Miriam, the reiection of the Iewes: Veruntamen hæc lepra &c. But this their ſpirituall leproſie ſhall not remaine euer, but when as the weeke of the world is accompliſhed, ſhe ſhall be brought againe to the tents: that is, the Iewes ſhall returne to the Church.

Againe *homil.*18. vpon thoſe words of *Balaam.c.*24.17. I ſhall ſee him, but not now: i. nouiſſimis temporibus cum plenitudo gentium introierit: That is, in the laſt times, when the fulneſſe of the Gentiles is come in, and all Iſrael beginneth to be ſaued. Thus he writeth of the generall calling of the Iewes toward the end of the world. But if one come, which ſhall reedifie the temple, and reſtore the ſacrifices and circumciſion, ſuch an one, as the Iewes ſhall take for their Meſſiah: who ſeeth not, that by this meanes the Iewes will be more hardened, hauing now their owne hearts deſire, their temple, Meſſiah, circumciſion: and their conuerſion would be greatly hindred, nay quite and cleane ouerthrowne?

*Argum.*2. If Antichriſt ſhould come of the Iewes, it is like that his ſeat ſhould be at Ieruſalem, and that the Temple ſhould be built againe by him: but that cannot be, for the Temple, as Daniel prophecieth, ſhall lie deſolate euen vnto the end, Dan. 9. 27. Ergo, he ſhal not come of the Iewes. More of this in the next part.

Beſide the Prophecie of Daniel, we haue the warrant of our Sauiour Chriſt, that the temple of Ieruſalem ſhall not be reedified. Matth. 24. 2. a ſtone ſhall not be left vpon a ſtone: Which Prophecie was not onely accompliſhed in the deſtruction of the old temple, but then alſo, when in Iulian the Apoſtata his time, the Iewes being by him encouraged to build the temple, what was built in the day, was caſt downe in the night; and beſide a fire fell from heauen, that conſumed the worke and workemens inſtruments: which Cyrillus Biſhop of Ieruſalem then ſeeing, applied vnto that euent, this prediction of our Sauiour. *ſic Socrates lib.*3.*c.*17. The like ſucceſſe let them looke for, that ſhal attempt the like againe. Further there is an imperiall law made by Theodoſ. that the Iewes ſhould not attempt to build any Synagogue vnder the paine of confiſcation of all their goods and loſſe of their life: and the lawe beginneth thus: Hac valitura in omne æuum lege ſancimus: They make it an eternal law, to hold as long as the world ſtandeth. *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*12.*l.*17. How then is it like that the temple ſhould be built, there being ſuch reſtraint againſt Synagogues? And in the ſame law it is forbidden, that the Iewes ſhould haue any honour, or beare any office, or execute any place of Iudgement. Wherefore ſeeing the Nation of the Iewes is deſpiſed and contemptible, and by a perpetuall law kept from riſing to any honor: it is vnlike, that from them ſhould ſpring ſuch a mightie Monarch, as they imagine Antichriſt to be.

Bernard witneſſeth with vs: Beſtia illa in Apocalypſi, cui datum eſt os loquens blaſphemias, & bellum gerere cum ſanctis, Petri cathedram occupat, tanquam Leo paratus ad prædam, The beaſt in the Apocalypſe, to whom a mouth was giuen to ſpeake blaſphemies, and to make warre with the Saints, doth occupie Peters chaire, readie as a Lyon to his pray: *Epiſtol.*126. But we reade not, that euer any Iew was Pope of Rome to ſit in Peters chayre. Concil.Toletan.4.can.65. The Iewes are there called, Miniſtri Antichriſti, The Miniſters and ſeruants of Antichriſt: and ſo in deede the Popes haue vſed them in diuers ſeruices: And therefore Gregory the ninth, in deſpite of all Chriſtian Princes did giue the Iewes great immunities, anno.1240. And who knoweth not that the papiſts haue begged many of the Iewiſh ceremonies: as the yeere of Iubile was inſtituted by Bonifacius.8. anno.1300.and many other beſide.

Fox.pag.1775.

Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr ſaith,that the See of Rome for the contrarie of Religion and diuerſitie of doctrine from the Apoſtles, is the ſeate of Antichriſt, and the Biſhop of the ſame,that maintaineth the abhominations thereof, is Antichriſt himſelfe in deede. But none of the Iewes were euer Biſhops of Rome.

THE FIFT PART, CONCERNING THE ſeate and place of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

61.Error.

Bellarmine holdeth opinion, that Antichriſt ſhall haue his imperiall ſeate at Ieruſalem, and reedifie and build againe the temple,yea for a while commaund circumciſion to be vſed and obſerued,*Bellarm.cap.*13.*lib.*3.*de pontif.Rhemiſt.*2.*Theſſa.*2.*ſect.*11.

Argum.1. Apocal.11.8. The Citie of Antichriſt is called the great Citie where our Lord was crucified.But Chriſt was crucified at Ieruſalem,Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt,it cannot be ſo vnderſtood,for verſ.2.Ieruſalem is called the holy Citie,verſ.8.This great Citie is called Sodome and Ægypt: how can the ſame Citie be capable of ſuch contrarie names? How can that be called an holy Citie, where the abomination of deſolation ſhall be and the ſeate of Antichriſt?

Secondly, *Auguſtine in Apoc.homil.*8. vnderſtandeth by the great Citie and the ſtreetes thereof, the middeſt of the Church: And by the great citie very fitly is vnderſtood the large iuriſdiction of the Pope, who ſaith,he is head of the great citie and Catholike Church: Whoſe ſeate we ſee is at Rome,by authoritie of which citie Chriſt was put to death:and by Antichriſt the Pope,Chriſt alſo is perſecuted in his members,*Fulk.annotat. Apocalypſ.*11.*ſect.*2.S.Hierome alſo doubteth not to call Rome, Maledicam ciuitatem:The curſed citie:ad Principium: and Sodome,in his Epiſtle to Lucinus.

Argum.2. Apocal.17.16.The ten hornes,that is,ten Kings, amongſt whom the Romane Empire ſhall be deuided,ſhall hate the ſcarlet whore,that is,Rome,and burne it with fire: how then ſhall it be the ſeate of Antichriſt? Bellarm.

Anſw. The text is plaine, that the ſame kingdomes, that before had giuen their power to the beaſt, and were ſubiect to the whore of Babilon, ſhall after make her deſolate, and eate her fleſh: which thing we ſee in part to be accompliſhed already, that many princes haue redeemed their necks from Antichriſt his yoke,*Fulk.Apocal.*17.*ſect.*3. It is not neceſſarie therefore to be done all at one time,but one after another.

Arg.3. 2.Theſſ.2.He ſhal ſit in the temple of God:but at that time the Iewes only had a temple, the Chriſtians yet had none,and yͤ Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Church of God, did of purpoſe refraine this name,leaſt the Church of Chriſtians ſhould be thought like the Iewes Synagogue, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt,the Iewiſh temple ſhall not be built againe,as Daniel propheſieth,9.27. And how can it be built in ſo ſhort a ſpace, ſeeing Antichriſt, as they ſay, muſt raigne but three yeeres and an halfe? and to what purpoſe,ſeeing he will aboliſh all ſacrifices? Secondly, though it ſhould be built againe,nay if it were ſtanding now,for the exerciſe of Iewiſh ſacrifices,it could not be called the temple of God.Thirdly,by the temple therefore is meant the viſible Church,that which ſometimes was a true viſible one, as the Church of Rome, and after ſhould be ſo taken, reputed and challenged,as it is at this day by the papiſts: So ſaith Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, That wicked man ſitteth in the Temple of God,that is,the Church,for it cannot be vnderſtood of Mahomet, or any out of the Church, but of ſuch as beare rule in the Church, *pag.*1616.diſputat.cum Ciceſtrenſ. Neither haue the Papiſts hereby any aduantage,as though the Pope ſate in the very true Church: for it is not the true Church indeede, but ſo reputed and taken by them. But he is ſaid to ſit in the temple,that is the Church of God, both becauſe there ſometime hath been a viſible Church, and as yet they doe retaine the name and ſhadow of the Church,and becauſe he challengeth to be the head of the Church,and his office to be chiefly eccleſiaſticall and of the Church. Fourthly, though there were no materiall temples of the Chriſtians in Pauls time, what of that? Fiftly, he ſpeaketh not here of any ſuch materiall temple, but of the Church of God: neither doth S.Paul in this ſenſe refuſe to vſe the name of temple,as 1.Corinth.3.verſ.16.and 6.verſ.19.and in other places. Sixtly,the Rhemiſts doe allow the interpretation of S.Auguſtine and S.Hierome, who expound the temple ſpoken of by the Apoſtle,not for the temple of the Iewes,but for the Church of God: from the which Antichriſt (ſay they) ſhall reuolt and become an Apoſtata: *ſect.*12.in 2.*Theſ.*1.But whereas in the ſame place they would hereupon conclude that the Pope is not Antichriſt, chriſt,becauſe he is in the Church,and ſo ſhall not Antichriſt. To this we anſwere, that the Pope though he remaine in ſome outward ſhew of the Church, yet is departed from the true doctrine of the Church, and ſo become an Apoſtata.

The Proteſtants.

THat Rome is the ſeate and place of Antichriſt, beſide that the Rhemiſts confeſſe ſo much that Antichriſt ſhall raigne there, *Annot. Apocal.*17.*ſect.*4. we proue it thus.

*Argum.*1. Babylon is the ſeate of Antichriſt,who is called the great whore of Babylon, Apocal.17.5.Rome is Babylon: Ergo,the ſeate of Antichriſt.

Obiect. It was Babylon,while it was gouerned and ruled by heathen Emperors;but the Church was not then called Babylon,Bellarm.

Anſ. Firſt,Ergo,by your owne confeſſion,Rome ſhall be the ſeate of Antichriſt, ſeeing by Saint Iohn it was called Babylon: for that citie,which then did beare rule ouer the earth, Apoc.17.18. was Rome,and the ſame is Babylon,ver.5.and Babylon is the citie of the great whore:Ergo,Rome is the citie or ſeate of Antichriſt who is that great whore.Secondly, it was not onely called Babylon in the time of the Heathen, but euen of Chriſtian Emperors. Auguſtine ſaith,it is Occidentalis Babylon,the Babylon in the Weſt parts,& prioris filia Babylonis,and daughter to the firſt Babylon. And S.Hierome ſaith,Dum in Babylone verſarer: While I liued in Babylon,and was a tenant to the ſcarlet whore: Præfat. ad Paulinian. He thus ſpeaketh in the time of Chriſtian Emperours, not doubting euen then alſo to call Rome Babylon. Thirdly,Saint Iohn doth not onely prophecie of the crueltie of the terrene ſtate,but of the falſe prophet Antichriſt,he ſhould alſo vſurpe an eccleſiaſticall gouernment there. For as the terrene ſtate of the Emperours for their crueltie is compared to a Leopard and a Lion,Apocal.13.2. ſo the eccleſiaſticall ſtate of the Popes is reſembled to a Lambe with two hornes ſpeaking in hypocriſie, pretending holines,yet practiſing tyrannie, verſ.11.

Obiect. Secondly,they obiect that by the damnation of the great whore, is vnderſtood the finall deſtruction of all the companie of the reprobate,*Rhemiſt. Apocal.*17.1.

Anſ. The damnation vniuerſally of the wicked is deſcribed chap.20.and therefore this place muſt be vnderſtood of Antichriſt,and his adherents:and very fitly doth the name of whore agree to that See, for once a whore indeede was Pope there, called Ioane the eight. Which ſo wringeth the Papiſts,that they haue no other ſhift but impudently to denie it.

*Argum.*2. That citie, which hath names of blaſphemies, and is full of abominations, is the ſeate of Antichriſt the great whore,Apocal.17.3. but this is the citie of Rome.Ergo.

Firſt,that Rome is the citie full of names of blaſphemie,being called eternall,and yet but temporall, Hierome teſtifieth,lib.2.cont.Iouinian. Scriptam in fronte blaſphemiam: Thou haſt raſed out, by the confeſſion of faith,the blaſphemie written in thy forehead.Here it is anſwered,that Rome was the place of blaſphemie, while it was heatheniſh: but ſince the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith it is not,as Hierome here ſaith,Bellarm.

Contra. Firſt,it is ſufficient for this matter,that Hierome affirmeth Rome to be that citie which is full of blaſphemie. Secondly,as he here affirmeth that for that preſent Rome was cleered from blaſphemie, becauſe of the faith of Chriſt: ſo elſewhere he ſheweth, that the damnation of the great whore,that is the citie of Rome,is yet behinde,according to the prophecie, Reuel.17.1. as it followeth in the ſame place, That curſe, which our Sauiour hath threatned thee in the Apocalypſe,thou maiſt eſcape by repentance. So then in his iudgement,ſeeing the damnation of the whore was not then fulfilled,at that time the whore had not ſhewed her ſelfe.

Secondly,that Rome alſo is the citie of abominations, the ſame author beareth witneſſe: He calleth it the citie, in qua palma vitiorum, that may beare the bell for all kinde of vice: ad Principium. And againe,The citie of pompe,leacherie,delicacie,*vbi humilem eſſe miſeria eſt:*where humilitie is counted miſerie: ad Marcellam. Thus he ſpake of Rome being at that time Chriſtian: but who ſeeth not how much more it is degenerate now?

*Argum.*3. Wee haue another argument out of the ſame chapter, verſ.9.The ſeuen heads are ſeuen mountaines, on which the woman ſitteth. But there is no citie in the world notoriouſly knowne to ſtand vpon ſeuen hils but Rome: Ergo,it is the ſeate of Antichriſt.

Obiect. The text is,They are alſo ſeuen Kings: ſo the ſeuen heads, or ſeuen hils, ſignifie ſeuen Kings: for there ſhall be ſo many chiefe Empires which ſhall perſecute the Church, there are fiue paſt: Egypt,Canaan,Babylon,the Perſians, Grecians, the ſixt, the Romes, which in part ſtandeth yet,the ſeuenth ſhall be Antichriſt,*Rhemiſt. Apocal.*17.*ſect.*7.

Anſ. Firſt,the ſeuen heads are expounded to be both ſeuen hils and ſeuen Kings:the Scripture vſeth not to expound one hard and obſcure thing by an harder and more obſcure,as to ſay,ſeuen heads are ſeuen mountaines, that is, ſeuen Kings: for wee were neerer the ſenſe before: and the terme of heads doth more fitly reſemble Kings,then mountaines. Secondly,the ſeuen kings are more fitly taken for ſeuen principall gouernours of the Romanes, as Kings, Tribunes, Conſuls, Decemviri, Dictators, Emperours, Popes: for by theſe ſeuen orders hath the common-wealth bin gouerned firſt and laſt, Fulk. ibid.

Obiect. Rome is not now built vpon ſeuen hils, it ſtandeth in the plaine in Campo Martio, Sander. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, you haue then no right to Peters Chayre, for when he ſate at Rome, the citie ſtood vpon ſeuen hils. Secondly, though the Pope now hath remoued his palace to the Vaticane, on the other ſide of the riuer; yet he did ſit for many yeeres in Laterane, vntill the time of Pope Nicholas the ſecond, who was almoſt 1100. yeeres after Chriſt. Thirdly, though the Pope hath remoued his palace vpon pleaſure beyond the riuer, yet his See is not remooued: for vpon euery one of thoſe hils there are Monaſteries, and Chappels, and ſuch like monuments to be ſeene to this day. In mount Cælius there is the Monaſterie of Gregorie the firſt, the Cathedrall Church of Laterane. In mount Auentine, the Monaſteries of Sabine and Boniface. In the mount Exquilinus the Minſter of S. Maria maior, the ruines of S. Cyriacus Church, which is yet a title of a Cardinall. The mount Viminalis hath the Church of S. Laurence. The mount Capitoline hath an houſe of Friers, called Ara cœli. The mount Palatine the Church of S. Nicholas. The mount Quirinalis hath Saint Maria de populo. Wherefore though the Popes perſon be remoued a little aſide, yet the popiſh religion is exerciſed, and relickes of ſuperſtition are to be found in euery one of thoſe hils. Wherefore we nothing doubt to conclude, but that Rome is that citie vpon ſeuen hils, and ſo the principall ſeate of Antichriſt.

Let vs ſee antiquitie: Epiſtol. Leodienſ. contra Paſchal. 2. anno 1107. Ait Petrus in Epiſtola, ſalutat vos eccleſia, quæ eſt Babylone collecta, &c. Peter ſaith in his epiſtle, the Church, which is at Babylon, ſaluteth you: Hitherto I vnderſtood Babylon to ſignifie Rome, becauſe of the idolatrie thereof in thoſe times: but now my wofull experience teacheth me ſo to expound it, that Peter ſaying, the Church at Babylon, &c. did foreſee the horrible confuſion and diſſenſion, which is there at this day. So then Rome was not onely Babylon then, but it is alſo Babylon now.

We haue alſo here the euident teſtimonie of our aduerſaries themſelues: It may well bee, ſay they, that as the perſecuting Emperours did principally ſit in Rome; ſo Antichriſt ſhall haue his principall ſeate there, though others thinke, that Ieruſalem rather ſhall be his principall citie: Rhemiſt. annot. in 17. Apocal. ſect. 4. And againe, whereas they confeſſe that the great citie, which is the whore, is old Rome, ibid. ſect. 9. and that the ſeuenth head of the beaſt, whereupon the whore rideth, is Antichriſts ſtate, ibid. ſect. 7. it muſt of neceſſitie follow, that Antichriſt is one of the heads of the Romane ſtate. Their only euaſion here is, that euen then, when Antichriſt ſhall ſit in Rome, the Church there ſhall not be Antichriſt, Rhemiſt. ſect. 4.

Contra. Antichriſts ſtate ſhall either be the Imperiall Romane ſtate, or Eccleſiaſticall: but not the Imperiall for theſe reaſons: Firſt, they themſelues confeſſe that Antichriſt ſhall not come as long as the Romane Empire ſtandeth, ſect. 7. Secondly, the Romane Empire is now weakened, and nothing remaineth but the name and image thereof: ſo that it is not like to bee that, which ſhall trouble and vexe the world. Thirdly, euen when Nero and Domitian and other perſecuting Emperours gouerned, when as the Emperours had neuer greater power, nor yet malice or crueltie; yet euen then the Empire was an hinderance to the comming of Antichriſt: and therefore Tertullian giueth this as a reaſon, why the Chriſtians did pray for the Romane perſecuting ſtate, Quod vim maximam vniuerſo orbi imminentem, &c. Becauſe that wee know, that the great trouble and vexation of the whole world, threatning the end thereof, and horrible miſeries, is hindered by the flouriſhing of the Romane Empire, Apolog. cap. 32. If that then the Imperiall ſtate cannot be Antichriſt, it muſt needes follow that the Papall and Eccleſiaſticall ſtate in Rome, which hath the exerciſe of both ſwords there, and the chiefe gouernment thereof, is the very ſtrength and head of Antichriſts kingdome.

Heare the teſtimonie of an holy Martyr: The whore is that citie, ſaith Iohn, which hath the empire of the Kings of the earth, Apocal. 17. Now what citie is there in all the world, that, when Iohn wrote, had the rule of the kingdomes of the earth, but onely the citie of Rome, &c. Biſhop Ridley, pag. 1779.

THE SIXT PART, CONCERNING THE doctrine of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

62. Error. THeir opinion is, that Antichriſt ſhall be an open and manifeſt aduerſarie to Chriſt, and that he ſhall aboliſh all worſhip of God, and all religion, Rhemiſt. annot. 2, Theſſ. 2. ſect. 10. Bellarmine draweth all the doctrine of Antichriſt to theſe foure heads. Firſt, he ſhall denie Ieſus to bee Chriſt, and aboliſh the Sacraments inſtituted by Chriſt. Secondly, he ſhall make himſelfe Chriſt. Thirdly, he ſhall make himſelfe God, and be adored as God. Fourthly, he ſhall aboliſh all other worſhip,both true and falſe,yea the worſhip of Idols. Wherefore(ſaith he)the Pope cannot bee Antichriſt,that doth none of theſe things,*cap.*14. Of theſe now in their order.

*Argum.*1. Antichriſt ſhall vtterly denie Chriſt,1.Ioh.2.22.and 4.3. Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not,that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: this is the ſpirit of Antichriſt: *Ergo,*Antichriſt ſhall altogether denie Chriſt.

*Anſ.*Firſt,the Rhemiſts ſay,that this is not a marke for all times, to know an heretike by, but it was onely for thoſe times,to confeſſe Chriſt to be come in the fleſh. This is a ſurer note now(ſay they)that whoſo confeſſeth not Chriſt to be really preſent,and to be ſacrificed in the Maſſe,is not of God,*Rhemiſt.annot.1.Ioh.4.ſect.*2. Where I will not ſtand to note the preſumption of theſe Papiſts,that will correct and amend the Apoſtles rule, to know Heretikes by,which ſerueth for all times: and ſo Auguſtine taketh it. But here firſt I oppoſe our Rhemiſts iudgement againſt *Bellarmine:*for they denie that this place ſerueth to deſcribe Antichriſt,belonging onely to the Apoſtles times: Bellarmine ſaith,it doth moſt properly decipher Antichriſt.

Serm. de verbis Apoſtoli 33.

2 The great Antichriſt ſhall denie Chriſt no otherwiſe, then other Antichriſts and heretikes did in the Apoſtles time: for they are all Antichriſts,1.Ioh.2.18.and he giueth one rule to know them all by,verſ.22. But the Antichriſts then denied not Chriſt apertly,but couertly:*Ergo,*ſo ſhal the great Antichriſt.

The firſt is true,that the old heretikes did not plainly denie Chriſt to be come in the fleſh: but ſome denied his humanitie, ſome his diuinitie, ſome his perſon. Auguſtine ſaith, Arriani hoc negant,licèt verbis fateantur: The Arrians denie that Chriſt is come in the fleſh,though they confeſſe it in word:for he that doth not confeſſe that Chriſt is equall vnto God,denieth Chriſt in the fleſh; and ſo of other heretikes. The ſecond alſo is as true: that Antichriſt, who is no other but the Pope,ſhall alſo cunningly and couertly denie Chriſt;for he that denieth the offices of Chriſt, denieth Chriſt: As Auguſtine ſaith of Peters deniall, Quicquid eius negauit,ipſum negauit,Tract.in Iohan.66.Whatſoeuer he denied of or belonging to Chriſt,he denied Chriſt. So the Pope denieth Chriſt to bee our Prophet,King,and Prieſt: His propheticall office he defaceth, and in effect denieth,in diſgracing the Scriptures,ſaying,they are imperfect,and containe not all matters neceſſarie to ſaluation, that their authoritie bindeth vs not without his allowance: His Kingly office, in making himſelfe Chriſts Vicar and Vicegerent vpon earth,in making new lawes, Sacraments, ordinances, beſide Chriſts,as neceſſarie to ſaluation as the rules of the Goſpell: His Prieſthood, in ſetting vp a new propitiatorie ſacrifice in the abominable Maſſe, beſide the onely ſacrifice of attonement vpon the Croſſe,in making other mediators and interceſſors,beſide Chriſt: and ſuch like,whereof we ſhall haue occaſion to intreate afterward more at large: Ergo,the Pope in denying the offices of Chriſt,denieth Chriſt,and ſo is Antichriſt.

*Argum.*2. He ſhall make himſelfe Chriſt and Meſſiah,which the Ieſuite would prooue out of Iohn 5.verſ.43. If another come in his owne name, him will ye receiue: But the Pope commeth not in his owne name,but in the name of Chriſt,he calleth himſelfe Chriſts Vicar:*Ergo,*he cannot be Antichriſt,Bellarm.

*Anſ.*Firſt,it is not neceſſarie that Antichriſt ſhould openly profeſſe himſelfe to bee Chriſt, in name,but he ſhall doe it,*opere,*indeede,and that cloſely and couertly: for thoſe whom Chriſt calleth,*pſeudochriſtos,*falſe Chriſts, Matth.24.23. Iohn calleth Antichriſtos, Antichriſts, 1.Ioh.2.18. Falſe prophets therefore are falſe Chriſts, and Antichriſts: yet all thoſe falſe prophets and heretikes did not in name and outward profeſſion make themſelues Chriſts.

2 The Pope of Rome in effect maketh himſelfe Chriſt: for who but Chriſt is the head of the Church? who but Chriſt is ſuperiour to the Angels, and to commaund them? who but Chriſt can make Sacraments and articles of faith? But all this the Pope taketh vpon himſelfe to doe: yea the Ieſuite is not aſhamed to ſay,that he hath the ſame office which Chriſt had being vpon earth, lib.5.de pontif.cap.4. And whereas they ſay, the Pope commeth in the name of Chriſt: it ſhall as much profit him (it being not in truth, but in colour onely and ſhew) as it ſhall profit the falſe prophets to ſay in the day of the Lord,Haue not we in thy name prophecied,and caſt out diuels? Mat.7. 22.23. to whom Chriſt ſhall make anſwere, Verily I know you not.

*Argum.*3. Antichriſt ſhall openly name himſelfe God, and commaund men to worſhip him as God,2.Theſſal.2.4. But this doth not the Pope: *Ergo,*he is not Antichriſt,Bellarm.

Anſ. Firſt,if Antichriſt ſhould be ſuch an one,you might haue found amongſt the Emperours of Rome diuers Antichriſts: for ſuch an one Caligula was,that commaunded temples to be erected in his name,and his images to be ſet vp to be worſhipped, yea in the temple at Ieruſalem. Secondly,S.Pauls words will not beare any ſuch ſenſe: he ſhall ſit, ὡς θεὸς, as God: and your vulgar Latin hath *oſtendens ſe tanquam ſit Deus,*ſhewing himſelfe as though he were God,that is,in deede and effect,not in open profeſſion: for he ſhould ſit and be worſhipped in the temple as God:how then can it be called the temple of God,being thus a temple of moſt groſſe idolatrie? Bellarmine here taketh vpon him to correct the text,and ſaith it muſt not bee read, ὡς θεὸς, as God, but, ὅτι θεός, that he is God, both contrarie to the Greeke originall, and the Latin vulgar tranſlation, which readeth, he ſhall ſhew himſelfe as God, in ſuch ſenſe as I haue ſhewed. Thirdly, the Pope in effect maketh himſelfe a god vpon earth: for he can diſpence againſt the law of nature, the law of God, againſt both new and old Teſtament: as wee haue ſhewed before, Queſt. 9. of this Controuerſie: yea Bellarmine ſaith, he may by his Apoſtolike authoritie diſpence with the precepts of the A-Extrauag. poſtles, cap. 14. He is able to change the nature of things, and of nothing to make things to be, of wrong to make iuſtice, &c. Pope Nicholaus diſtinct. 96. Yea it is ſaid of the Pope, that he is neither God nor man, but a middle thing betweene both: Pope Boniface. I pray you then what is he? he Agrippa. is no Angell, for he is aboue them, and commandeth them: Papa Angelis præcipit, the Pope commandeth Angels. He muſt then either be a God or a Diuell, by your owne confeſſion, chuſe which you will: Nay they do make him a plaine God: Es alter Deus in terris, another God vpō earth: and they ſalute him by theſe names, Dominus Deus noſter Papa, our Lord God the Pope. Thus it is proued, that the Pope, both by his deeds as alſo by his titles, doth make himſelfe God vpon earth.

Argum. 4. Antichriſt (ſay they) ſhall take away all worſhip, yea of Idols, and ſhall commaund nothing to bee worſhipped but himſelfe, 2. Theſſ. 2. 4. the word is σεβάσματα, numina, all things that are worſhipped. But ſo doth not the Pope, for he prayeth to Saints, adoreth the bodie of Chriſt on the altar. Ergo. Bellarm. cap. 14. Rhemiſt. 2. Theſ. 2. ſect. 10.

Anſ. Firſt, the text proueth not, that he ſhall take away all Idols, or things worſhipped, but ſhall exalt himſelfe againſt them, and make ſmall account of them. The place alſo of Daniel is plaine, 11. 37. He ſhall not regard the God of his fathers, nor care for any God, but ſhall magnifie himſelfe aboue all: and in his place ſhall he honour the God Mauzzim, and the God which his fathers knew not, ſhall he honour with gold and ſiluer. Out of this place wee gather two things: firſt, that Antichriſt ſhall bring in a ſtrange God, which his fathers neuer knew: ſo hath the Pope inuented a breaden god, which he honoureth with gold and precious ſtones, making more account of it, then of any Image or relick whatſoeuer. Secondly, yet he ſhall magnifie himſelfe aboue all ſuch Gods, Images, Roodes, Shrines, and the like, yea aboue his owne breaden god; ſo doth the Pope: for he rideth vpon mens ſhoulders, when his breaden god is carried vpon an hackney: he exalteth his throne aboue the altar, the Croſſe is carried on the right hand of the Emperours ſwords and ſcepters, but is laid vnder his feete: In the yeere of Iubile, he beateth vpon the gates of Paradiſe with a golden hammer, Fulk. annot. 2. Theſ. 2. 10. So then howſoeuer like an hypocrite hee ſeeme to adore his breaden god, yet indeede doth he magnifie himſelfe aboue it.

Bellarmine hath no other ſhift to foyſt off our arguments, but theſe: he ſaith, this Mauzzim is like enough to bee the diuell himſelfe, whom Antichriſt ſhall worſhip: but he careth neither for ſiluer nor gold: or elſe it is himſelfe. And how I pray you can a man worſhip himſelfe? or elſe, ſaith he, it is ſome ſtrong caſtle where he ſhall lay his ſiluer and gold: or elſe you know not what, Bellarm. 14.

2 That Antichriſt ſhall not aboliſh Idols of ſiluer and gold, but rather commaund the people to worſhip them, as the Pope now doth, it is plaine, Apocal. 9. 20.

The Rhemiſts obiect, that he ſpeaketh here againſt the heathen Idols, which is here called the worſhip of diuels.

Anſ. Firſt, in this place Iohn ſpeaketh of the end of the world, in the opening of the ſeuenth ſeale: and the Idols of the Heathen were aboliſhed long agoe: Neither is there any knowne nation in the world that hath worſhipped Idols of gold, ſiluer, braſſe, ſtone, or wood, but the Papiſts, for theſe many yeeres. Secondly, all worſhippers of Images, doe worſhip diuels: for Idolatrie is a ſeruice inuented by the diuell, and that which is ſacrificed to Idols is offered to diuels, 1. Cor. 10. 20.

The Proteſtants.

THat Antichriſt ſhall not in outward ſhew bee an open enemie to Chriſt, but ſecretly and cloſely, and vnder pretence of religion take away all religion: thus we make it plaine.

1 Theſe places alleaged before doe prooue it, Ioh. 1. 2. 18. the Antichriſt, and the Antichriſts, ſhall be enemies all alike: but the Antichriſts in S. Iohns time were couert enemies. Ergo, ſo ſhall the great Antichriſt. And as Antichriſts forerunners were, ſo himſelfe ſhall bee: but they ſhall ſpeake lyes through hypocriſie, and giue eare to the doctrine of diuels, 1. Timoth. 4. 1, 2. that is, as one of your owne writers expoundeth it, Qui Chriſtianorum ſibi appellatione impoſita, contraria docent: Which taking vpon them the name of Chriſtians, doe teach things contrarie, Eſpenc. in hunc locum. And this place is vnderſtood of the forerunners of Antichriſt, and ſo interpreted by Lyra one of your owne authors: Ergo, alſo Antichriſt himſelfe ſhall pretend one thing, and teach another, and vtter his lyes through hypocriſie.

Argum. 2. Saint Paul calleth it the myſterie of iniquitie, 2. Theſſ. 2. 7. and he ſhall come in all deciueableneſſe of vnrighteouſneſſe, verſ. 10. and God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſion, to beleeue lyes, verſ. 11. All this prooueth that Antichriſt ſhall worke cloſely, cunningly, myſtically, by deceiuing, by deluſion, not by open enimitie, and prophanenes, or by violence and tyrannie onely, as the Papiſts imagine.

*Argum.*3. Antichriſt ſhall be the greateſt enemie to Chriſt and his kingdome, that euer was in the world. But he is a greater enemie that pretendeth friendſhip, and yet is a foe, that vnder the name of Chriſt perſecuteth the Chriſtian faith, then he that openly deſtroyeth it, making no ſhew of religion: as Dauid complaineth, Pſalm.41.9. Yea my familiar friend whom I truſted, which did eate of my bread, hath lift vp his heele againſt me. This was accompliſhed in Iudas, who betrayed Chriſt with a kiſſe, who was the greateſt enemie of Chriſt, ſinning againſt his owne knowledge and conſcience: Euen ſo they now a daies, are the greateſt enemies that Chriſt and the Church hath, that betray Chriſt with a kiſſe, which name themſelues the Church of God, and yet make hauock of the Church.

*Argum.*4. S.Paul alſo ſheweth, that Antichriſt, vnder colour of religion, ſhall be an enemie to religion and the Church: for he ſhall ſit in the temple of God, that is, take vpon him the name and title of the Church, and yet an aduerſarie vnto it. For he that publikely taketh away the exerciſe of religion, cannot be ſaid to ſit in the Church of God; as the heathen perſecuting Emperors did, and Iulian the Apoſtata: but this agreeth better to one, that by bearing Chriſts name, ſhall wound the Chriſtian faith, and this is the Pope. Origen writeth to the ſame purpoſe: Qui ſimulat veritatem, &c. He that diſſembleth the truth, wreſting the Scripture to prooue falſe doctrine, he it is that is an enemy, & ſuper Cathedram ſcripturarum ſedet, and ſitteth aboue the chaire of the Scriptures, *Tract.*27.in Matth. And thus the Pope of Rome taketh vpon him to diſpence, contrarie to the Goſpels and Apoſtles: which firſt Bellarmine impudently denieth, that euer the Pope in word or deede tooke vpon him ſo to diſpence: the contrarie I haue proued before, Queſt.9. Secondly, ſaith he, if he doe diſpence with the poſitiue precepts of the Apoſtle, he doth it, iuxta Apoſtolum, according to the Apoſtle, that is, according to his Apoſtolike authoritie.

Contra. Firſt, he muſt ſhew his authoritie out of Scripture, that he hath power to diſpence againſt Scripture, but that ſhall he neuer doe: but the Apoſtle ſheweth the contrarie, that he is accurſed, that taketh vpon him to teach any other doctrine, then the Apoſtle taught, Galath.1.9. Here all power and authoritie to diſpence againſt the Apoſtle is cut off for euer.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith as much, that Antichriſt ſhal come with deceiueable doctrine, and ſhew of righteouſneſſe: Quid expaueſcimus in Antichriſto, niſi quia nomen ſuum honoraturus eſt, & Domini De verb. docontempturus? Quid aliud facit, qui dicit, ego iuſtifico? Quid aliud eſt dei ignorare iuſtitiam, & ſuam vel- min. ſecund.
le conſtituere, quam dicere, ego iuſtifico, ego ſanctifico? What other thing doe wee feare in Antichriſt, Iohan. ſer. 45.
but that he ſhall honour his owne name, and contemne Chriſts? What elſe doth he, which ſaith, I doe iuſtifie, I make holie? What is this but to deſtroy the righteouſneſſe of God, and to bring in his owne?

Marke now I pray you, if all this be not true of the Pope of Rome: for he taketh vpon him to iuſtifie, to ſanctifie, to diſpence with mens ſinnes for an hundred, yea a thouſand yeeres: to rid ſoules out of Purgatorie: nay, to commaund Angels to carrie their ſoules to heauen, that dye in their pilgrimage to Rome, as Pope Clement the 6. did: what is this elſe but to ſay, Ego iuſtifico, ſan- Iuel. p. 595.
ctifico, I iuſtifie, I ſanctifie? And who I pray you, doth ſo, if Auguſtine may be iudge, but Antichriſt? But thus the Pope doth: Ergo, he is Antichriſt.

And to conclude, ſuch an enemie is the Pope, as Leo the 1. ſpeaketh of, *Epiſt.*81. Pro fide vos agere creditis & fidei contraitis: Eccleſiæ nomine armamini, & contra Eccleſiam dimicatis: Ye thinke ye worke for the faith, and ye goe againſt the faith: you are armed with the name of the Church, and yet fight againſt the Church.

I will adde the teſtimonie of an holy confeſſor of Gods truth Walter Brute: That the Popes come in the name of Chriſt it is manifeſt, ſaying, that they are his principall Vicars vpon earth: wherefore ſeeing they make themſelues the chiefe friends of Chriſt, and yet doe iuſtifie many lawes contrarie to the Goſpell of Chriſt, it is plaine that they are in earth the moſt principall Antichriſts, becauſe there is no worſe plague or peſtilence, then a familiar enemie. Fox pag.482.

THE SEVENTH PART, CONCERNING the miracles of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

ANtichriſt, they ſay, ſhall be a Magitian, and worke ſtrange ſignes and wonders by the power of the diuell: and theſe three miracles by name ſhall be wrought by him: He ſhall cauſe fire to come from heauen, and make the image of the beaſt to ſpeake: and thirdly, he ſhall faine himſelfe dead and riſe againe, *Bellarm. cap.*15. 63. Error.

1. He ſhall by the helpe of the diuell cauſe fire to come downe from heauen, as it is Apocalypſe 13.13.

Anſw. Firſt, it is a great queſtion whether the diuell haue any ſuch power to bring downe fire from heauen: for the Ieſuite himſelfe remembreth the ſtorie 1.King.18. How Baal his prieſts would haue fetched downe fire from heauen, but they could not: onely Elias did it: and he that will doe the like, muſt haue Elias his ſpirit, as Chriſt ſaith, Luk.9.55.

*Concil.Bracarenſ.1.can.*8. It was decreed thus: Si quis credit, quod diabolius tonitrua, fulgura, tempeſtates, ſiccitates ſua authoritate facit, ſicut Priſcillianus docet, anathema ſit: If any man beleeue, that the diuell of himſelfe can raiſe tempeſts, thunder, lightning, drought, as Priſcillianus teacheth, let him be accurſed. How therefore can Antichriſt, who worketh by Sathan, doe that which Sathan himſelfe cannot doe?

Secondly, It is very groſſe to vnderſtand this literally: for the whole chapter is myſticall, of the beaſt with ſeuen heads, of another beaſt with two hornes, and all the reſt. But three wayes Antichriſt may fitly be ſaid to bring fire from heauen. Firſt, by fire the holy Ghoſt may be vnderſtood, as Matth.3. and Act.2. The ſpirit appeared in fierie tongues: ſo Antichriſt and his miniſters make men beleeue, that they doe conferre the holy Ghoſt, as in conſecration, in abſolution of ſinners, and ſuch like. Secondly, the Popes thunderbolts of excommunication, are reſembled to fire, whereby he hath made the whole world afrayd in times paſt, as though he could cauſe the heauens to fall vpon men: yea, to make the matter more likely, the Pope vſeth burning Tapers in excommunicating men, which with violence are throwne downe as though God himſelfe did rayne fire from heauen vpon them. And this is the terrible manner of their excommunication: there are three candles burning ſet vp; and then they begin to accurſe them, whom they excommunicate, bodie and ſoule to the diuell: and let vs, ſay they, quench their ſoules in hell fire, if they be dead, as this candle is put out (and with that they put out one of the candles:) If they be aliue, let vs pray, that their eyes may be put out, as this candle is, and ſo the ſecond candle goeth out, and that all their ſenſes may faile them, as this candle looſeth his light, and ſo the third candle goeth out. Behold, here is the fire which the Pope and his popelings doe bring from heauen. Sic Bullinger.ſerm.60.in Apocalypſ. Adde vnto theſe their fierie ceremonies, their fierie iugling trickes alſo, as Cardinall Benno reporteth of Gregory the ſeuenth, that great Sorcerer: Cum vellet, manicas ſuas diſcutiebat, &c. When he liſt, he would ſhake his ſleeues, and out flew ſparkes of fire, &c. Thirdly, the Dragon is ſaid, Apocal.12.4. with his tayle to draw many ſtarres from heauen: that is, many excellent men, as ſtarres in gifts and knowledge, ſhall be deceiued by the Pope, and be wonne vnto him: yea the Pope himſelfe is a Starre fallen from heauen to the earth, from heauenly doctrine to earthly tradition, Apocal.9.1. Thus Antichriſt alſo may be ſaid to fetch fire from heauen.

Fox.pag.1038.

2 The ſecond miracle, he ſhall cauſe the Image of the beaſt to ſpeake, which the Ieſuite vnderſtandeth literally, that is, groſſely.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine and our Ieſuites doe not here agree: for Bellarmine ſaith, that theſe two miracles ſhall be wrought by Antichriſt himſelfe, to fetch fire from heauen: and to cauſe the Image to ſpeake. But the Rhemiſts ſay, this other beaſt, is another falſe Prophet, inferiour to Antichriſt, which ſhall alſo worke wonders, ſuch an one as Caluin, ſay they: where they ſhew their malice, more then learning; for Caluin, they know, tooke not vpon him to worke myracles, Annot. Apocal.13.ſect.3.

2 This cauſing the Image to ſpeake hath a better meaning: The Image of the beaſt is the ſhadow of the olde ſtately Empire of Rome, which was erected by the Pope: for the Weſt parts wanted an Emperour the ſpace of three hundred yeeres from Auguſtulus time till Pope Leo the third, who made Charles the great King of France, Emperour: And at this day is there nothing in the Empire, but onely a name, title and Image: for neither hath the Emperour the Imperiall authoritie, which is in the Pope, nor the Imperiall kingdomes, vnleſſe he haue them of his owne. And the Pope onely maketh this Image to ſpeake, for vnleſſe hee doe confirme the election of the King of the Romanes, he is not thought worthie the name of Emperour, Bullinger.ibid.

Auentin.lib.4.

3 And yet we deny not, but that they both haue and may make Images ſpeake either by the helpe of the diuell, as Dunſtane cauſed a Roode to ſpeake; or by iugling, as the Roode of grace by gimmals was made to roule the eyes, moue the lips, and ſuch like, in King Henries dayes.

3 The third miracle that Antichriſt ſhall worke, is to faine himſelfe dead, and to riſe againe, Apocal.13.3.

Anſw. There can be no ſuch thing gathered out of the text. Firſt, the words will not beare it: the text is, that one of the heads was wounded to death, and the wound was healed: which cannot be ſo meant, as though he fayned himſelfe dead: but he receiued a wound indeede.

2 The ſenſe is myſtical, as thorough the whole chapter: Firſt, it is ſaid, that the ſeuenth head was wounded to death: but reuiued againe; that is, the ſeuenth gouernment of the Romanes in the Popedome: for the Popacie had many times deadly blowes, and yet was healed againe, eſpecially when there were three Popes togither, at Rome, in France, and the third in Spayne: But this wound was cunningly healed vp in Pope Martin the fift, in the Councell of Conſtance, the other three being depoſed. *Sic Bullinger Serm.*59. Secondly, it is ſaid verſ. 14. that the beaſt whoſe Image remained, had the wound of a ſworde, and yet liued: which is vnderſtood of the Romane Empire, reuiued and quickened by the Pope.

The Proteſtants.

IT is true that Antichriſt ſhall worke ſignes and wonders by the power of Sathan, 2. Theſſ. 2. but lying ſignes, both becauſe they ſhall be done to confirme lyes, neither ſhall they be ſuch as the Prophets wrought, but many of them but cunning and couſoning ſleights of iuglers. And for ſuch wonders we neede not to ſearch farre, the Popiſh Church is full of them: where els then ſhould we looke for Antichriſt?

1 There haue been of the Popes themſelues Sorcerers and Coniurers, ſuch an one Antichriſt ſhall be, ſaith Bellarmine. Silueſter the ſecond came vp to the Papacie by the helpe of the diuell, as we haue before ſhewed. Gregory the ſeuenth was condemned in the Councell of Brixia for a Coniurer: and Benno a Cardinall in thoſe dayes thus writeth of him: that on a time he ſending two of his ſeruants for a certaine Sathanicall booke, charging them not to looke into it; they notwithſtanding looked into it, and preſently a great multitude of diuelliſh ſpirits were round about them; who were inſtant vpon them to knowe why they were called for: the ſeruants being at the firſt aſtoniſhed, yet comming to themſelues, enioyned them to plucke downe certaine high walles neere to Rome: and ſo they came to their maſter, Fox.pag.176. What other Antichriſt now neede wee looke for? If he muſt be a Coniurer, we may here make our choyce. Beſide theſe two, Platina and other writers make mention of 20. Popes that bound themſelues as ſlaues to the diuell.

2 We are not ignorant, what lyes and fables are reported by the Papiſts of the myraculous acts of their popiſh Saints, of the which we haue ſpoken before: As how Dunſtane appeared to a cripple, that came to his Tombe to be helped of his lameneſſe: How Plegildus a prieſt ſaw and handled the ſhape of a childe vpon the Altar, which after he had kiſſed returned agayne to the likeneſſe of bread. How a certaine Iewes boy tolde his father that he ſaw a childe broken in peeces vpon the Altar and diſtributed among the Chriſtians: and the boy for that, was caſt into a furnace of fire, and was preſerued from the fire by the Virgin Mary, which appeared to him, and ſpred her garment ouer him. Many ſuch either lyes and fables, or workes of diuels the popiſh Church hath: what neede we therefore doubt, but that it is the Antichriſtian Church?

Fox.pag.1148.

3 Auguſtine ſaith, Saint Paul calleth them lying wonders, either becauſe Antichriſt ſhall deceiue men per phantaſmata, with iugling ſleights, or becauſe, ad mendacia pertrahet credituros, by his wonders he ſhall make them beleeue lyes. But in which ſenſe they are ſo called, it ſhall appeare when Antichriſt is come ſaith he: and indeede it is now apparant; for our aduerſaries haue plentie of both kindes, both myracles wrought indeed by the diuell, and many pretie iugling feates beſide.

De ciuitat. Dei lib. 20. cap. 19.

Theſe lying fables and forged miracles, which the Popes worke by, are euident ſignes of their Antichriſtian profeſſion: For Antichriſt ſhall come with the power of Sathan with ſignes and lying wonders, 2. Theſſ. 2. 9. Stories ſhew this to bee true: Leo the third confirmed by his decree, that the bloud which iſſued out of a woodden Crucifix at Mantua, was the very bloud of Chriſt, anno. 800. Anno. 1470. one Alanus a drowſie dreaming Monke forged this blaſphemous tale, how the Virgin Marie came into his Cell, kiſſed him, drew out her breaſts, and eſpouſed her ſelfe to him: and theſe and ſuch like Monkiſh tales went for currant in thoſe dayes. Not much vnlike to the wicked practiſe of Polychronius a Monothelite heretike, who affirmed before the whole Councell Conſtantinop. 6. action. 15. that a certaine beautifull young man appeared vnto him, and taught him to ſay that there was but one will in Chriſt: and gaue him this for a ſigne, that he ſhould lay the ſchedule of his confeſſion vpon a dead bodie, and ſo raiſe it to life: The Councell hearing him, immediatly cauſed a dead bodie to be brought, but Polychronius muttering ouer the ſame a great while, could doe nothing, and ſo was condemned of the Councell for a lyar and an heretike.

Many ſuch fabulous miracles popiſh bookes are full of: ſuch are, in the iudgement of a graue writer of their ſide; Petrus Venetus his catalogue of the Saints, and the Martyrologue of Huſſuardus the Monke: Multis ſcatent quiſquiliys: Theſe bookes (ſaith he) are ſtuffed with much paltrie ſtuffe. Yea, the liues of the fathers, vnworthie of Ieromes name, are full of ſuch fabulous narrations: ſic Eſpence in 2. *Timoth.p.*151.C. Seeing then that the popiſh Church is full of lying ſignes and miracles, where is Antichriſt more like to be found, then there?

Tharaſius well ſaid therefore Nicen. 2. Miracula non credentibus data ſunt, ſed ijs, qui in incredulitate verſantur: Miracles are not for thoſe that beleeue, but for incredulous perſons. The incr[illegible]ulitie then of Papiſts better appeareth not, then by their inſatiable deſire, and ſuperſtitious vſe of miracles.

Fox.pag.1025. Adde vnto theſe the beleefe of Iohn Tewkeſbury confeſſor of the truth: Antichriſt is not an outward thing that is a man, that ſhould ſuddenly appeare with wonders, as your forefathers talked of him, but Antichriſt is a ſpirituall thing,&c.

THE EIGHT PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning the warres, and kingdome of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

64.Error. BEllarmine* ſaith, that Antichriſt ſhall make great battailes againſt the Saints, and ſhall conquer the whole world: firſt, by craft he ſhall aſpire to the kingdome of the Iewes: Secondly, he ſhall fight with three kings, of Lybia, Egypt, Æthiopia. Thirdly, with a great armie he ſhall perſecute the Chriſtians throughout the world; and this ſhall be the battaile of Gog and Magog, *Bellarm.cap.*16.

*Argum.*1. That he ſhall craftily aſpire to the kingdome, he proueth it out of Dan.11.21. where it is propheſied of one that he ſhall obtaine the kingdome by flatteries.

Anſw. This propheſie of Daniel, as likewiſe the whole chapter, was hiſtorically accompliſhed in Antiochus Epiphanes, who defrauded Seleucus his brothers ſonne of the kingdome, and circumuented his elder brother Demetrius: ſo that it being once fulfilled, it cannot be wreſted to any other ſenſe: of Antichriſt it cannot be ment; for here is a ſucceſſion of Kings deſcribed, verſ.19. One is ſaid to be ouerthrowne, that is, Seleucus, but not in battaile, for he was poyſoned, verſ.18. There another is ſaid to be ouerthrowne and to be no more found, that is, Antiochus magnus. But Antichriſt cannot ſucceed any in the kingdome of the Iewes: for he ſhall be their firſt King, as the Papiſts imagine.

*Argum.*2. He ſhall (ſaith Bellarmine) ouercome three Kings, of Lybia, Egypt Æthiopia, Dan.11.43. and this horne ſhall remoue three other hornes, Dan.7.8.

Anſw. This alſo muſt needes be vnderſtood of Antiochus Epiphanes: and they are two propheſies. Firſt, he is called a little horne, becauſe he was not heire to the kingdome: he remoueth three other hornes: for by his meanes Ptolemæus Philopater was caſt out of the kingdome in his fathers time Antiochus the great: his brother Seleucus poyſoned, his ſonne Demetrius diſinherited, Tremell. Dan.7.20. The ſecond propheſie was alſo accompliſhed by Antiochus, who ouercame Egypt, and the countries adioyning.

Of Antichriſt it cannot bee vnderſtood: for the firſt propheſie ſpeaketh of a beaſt with ten hornes, which muſt bee vnderſtood of one kingdome and monarch, and by the ten hornes ten Kings are ſignified: for ſo was Antiochus Epiphanes the tenth from Seleucus: here then is a ſucceſſion of Kings: but Antichriſt ſhall not ſucceed any.

*Argum.*3. The Ieſuite ſaith, that Antichriſt with a great armie ſhall vexe the whole world, and that ſhall bee the battaile of Gog and Magog propheſied of, Ezech.38.39. and Apocal.20.

Anſw. The propheſie of Ezechiel was fulfilled in the time of the Macchabees, when as Gog and Magog, that is Antiochus, with the helpe of the Syrians and Scythians and other countries, moleſted the people of God: for verſ.23. chap.39. the Prophet ſpeaketh of the captiuitie of Iſrael, from the which they ſhould at that time be deliuered. And againe, the Lord would not leaue his Church, which at that time endured great afflictions at the hands of the heathen, comfortleſſe: but if theſe propheſies of Ezechiel and Daniel concerned them not, then ſmall had been their comfort. Laſtly, the Iewes may with as good reaſon vnderſtand the propheſies concerning Chriſt, of their Meſſiah, whom they yet looke for, as you may theſe propheſies concerning the enemies of the Church, of your Antichriſt.

The other propheſie alſo is fulfilled, Apocal.20.8. how Gog and Magog from the foure corners of the earth, ſhall compaſſe the tents of the Saints: for by Gog and Magog, is vnderſtood the whole multitude of the enemies of the Church both within and without, as Turkes, Papiſts, infidels, which all haue agreed togither at times and in their turnes, though enemies amongſt themſelues, to afflict the people of God.

And yet more particularly *Anno.*1300. the Church of God began to bee moleſted with the armies of Gog and Magog: when Boniface the eight ſhewed himſelfe in his Emperiall robes, and ſo was the Gog in the Weſt; and Ottomannus was crowned Emperour of the Turkes, Magog in the Eaſt.

And if you will needes alſo haue the other two propheſies fulfilled againe, being once before accompliſhed: they agree fitly to the Turkiſh Empire: for Mahomet by craft and ſubtiltie aſpired to a kingdome, and in ſhort time he ouerran Egypt and Lybia, with other parts of Africa.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie that there ſhall come any ſuch Antichriſt: or that it is poſſible for him to wage battaile with the whole earth. We grant that the Antichriſt of Rome hath warred with the Church, poyſoning it with corrupt doctrine, and perſecuting the ſame by fire and ſword: which his rage is well ſlaked now, God be praiſed, in many places, and his tyrannie ouerpaſt: miſerable were the ſtate of the Church, if it ſhould endure ſuch a brunt againe.

*Argum.*1. It is impoſſible, that Antichriſt in ſo ſhort a time as three yeeres and an halfe, ſhould conquer all nations, and be Monarch of the whole world, burne and ſacke Rome, and driue out the Pope, as the Papiſts grant themſelues, Bellarm.lib.*4.*cap.*3.*de pontifice. A man can not in that ſpace trauaile through the whole world, much leſſe conquer it. See the iudgement of one Hentonius a papiſt of this matter before par.*2.*qu.*10.

And ſeeing Antichriſt ſhall begin at Ieruſalem, make his habitation there, and haue an ende there: (for, ſay they, he ſhall be ſlaine in Mount Oliuet, Gloſſ.ſup.Apocal.) It is not like that in his owne perſon he ſhould conquer the world: neither can it be thought that he ſhall do it by his deputies, for then they ſhould be the Antichriſts, and not he. See what a Labyrinth you are fallen into, out of the which you cannot wind your ſelues.

*Argum.*2. Antichriſt is not deſcribed in Scripture as a warriour, or warlike man ſitting harneſſed in his tent; but like an hypocrite aduancing himſelfe in the temple; not comming with engins of warre, but deluding and deceiuing with falſe miracles, and lying ſignes, 2.Theſſal.2. Not with Harolds of armes openly proclaiming warre: but he ſhall worke in a myſterie, Apocal.17.5. Wherefore it is but a popiſh dreame and fancie, that Antichriſt ſhal be ſuch a mighty warriour: yet we denie not but that diuers of the Popes haue beene warriours; but that was beyond the commiſſion of Peters croſſe keyes.

Thirdly, they haue no ground of this their opinion out of Scripture: for neither Ezechiel nor Daniel maketh for them, prophecying of the ſtate of the Church before Chriſt: nor yet the Apocalypſe, the prophecie of Gog and Magog being accompliſhed in the greateſt part already. Wherefore away with theſe miſtie clowdes of your brain-ſicke inuentions: they ſhall not be able to abide the lightſome ſun-beames of the trueth.

Laſtly, if Antichriſt by his warlike and bloody diſpoſition may be diſcerned, wee ſhall finde him no where ſooner then in Rome: Boniface 8. ſhewed himſelfe openly in his Emperiall robes with the ſword carried before him: Iulius the 2. threw Peters keyes into Tyberis, and drew out his ſword: and vnder this Pope, as Chronicles make mention, in the ſpace of ſeuen yeeres were two hundred thouſand men ſlaine by continuall warre. Alexander Farneſius Cardinal, Pope Paulus the 3. his Captaine generall againſt the Lutheranes, gaue out theſe threatning wordes, that he would ſhed ſo much blood of the Lutheranes, that their horſe might ſwimme therein.

Such furious and Antichriſtian outrages of Popes, are contrarie to the decrees of antiquitie: Synod.Francicaſ.Seruis Dei armaturam portare, pugnare aut in exercitum pergere prohibemus: We forbid the ſeruants of God (he meaneth Clergie men) to beare armour, to fight, or go to battell.

Concil.Agathenſ.decret.ex Gratian.Non licet Epiſcopo, &c. It is not lawfull for a Biſhop to ſmite any with his hands, much leſſe with his ſword.

Maſter Rogers holy Martyr iudgeth the Church of Rome Antichriſtian, becauſe of their tyrannicall lawes, and maintenance thereof by cruell perſecution, Fox.p.*1488.

THE NINTH AND LAST PART OF THIS queſtion, whether the Pope be Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

THis queſtion pincheth our aduerſaries very ſore, that we ſhould touch their head ſo neere, as to make him Antichriſt. For this being once knowne, we need not labour much about other matters: for Antichriſt with all his doctrine muſt not be heard, but abhorred of the Church. 65.Error.

They therefore, craftily foreſeeing this, do take great paines to deliuer the Pope out of this danger, and haue found out many ſtarting holes, but all to ſmall purpoſe: yea their forefathers ſeeing the matter ſo plaine, and almoſt put out of doubt, gaue ſtreight charge in the late Councel of Laterane to all Preachers, that none ſhould dare once to ſpeake of the comming of Antichriſt. This argueth a guiltie conſcience. But yet they face out the matter, and ſay, the Pope cannot be Antichriſt: their arguments are none other then thoſe we haue heard, being eight in number.

1 Antichriſt ſhall be one ſingular man: the Popes haue beene many, part.*1.*of this queſtion. Secondly, he ſhall raigne but three yeeres and an halfe: but the Pope hath continued many hundred yeeres, part.*2. Thirdly, he ſhall be knowne by his name: the Popes haue ſundry names, part.*3. Fourthly, he muſt come of the ſtocke of the Iewes: but there was neuer yet any Iewe Pope, part.*4. Fiftly, his ſeate muſt be at Ieruſalem: the Popes is at Rome, part.*5. Sixtly, he ſhal manifeſtly deny Chriſt: ſo doth not the Pope, ſay they, part.*6. Seuenthly, he ſhall do ſtrange miracles, as bring downe fire from heauen, cauſe Images to ſpeake, part.*7. Eightly, he ſhall wage great battels, and conquer all the world, part.*8. which cannot agree to the Pope: Ergo, hee is not Antichriſt.

Anſw. To theſe eight arguments, we haue before anſwered ſeuerally; ſhewing how fabulous, ridiculous, and impoſſible our aduerſaries aſſertions are, without ground of Scripture, ſhew of reaſon, or colour of argument. Wherefore we will not trouble the Reader with needleſſe repetitions, deſiring him to haue recourſe to that which hath beene already ſaid.

Argum.9. Further the Rhemiſts do thus reaſon: Antichriſt ſhall exalt himſelfe aboue all, that is called God. 2.Theſſ.2.4. So doth not the Pope, who is ſo farre from exalting himſelfe aboue God, that he prayeth to Saints, kneeleth before the altar, adoreth the Euchariſt. annot. 2.Theſ.2.4. & ibid. ſect, 10.

Anſ. Firſt the Pope in hypocriſie maketh ſhew of a ſuperſtitious kind of deuotion, yet is in truth the Prince of Pride: for as he calleth himſelfe Seruum ſeruorum; Seruant of ſeruants; yet hath made Kings his ſlaues: ſo alſo, though he ſeeme to be a worſhipper of Saints, yet hee taketh vpon him more then either Angell or Saint, as to forgiue ſinnes, to deliuer ſoules from Purgatorie, to diſpenſe with the Scriptures. Secondly, as touching the adoration of the Euchariſt, therein hee ſheweth his pride, in adoring his owne inuention; and beſide hee honoureth his breaden god with Maſſe ſeruice for his owne aduantage, becauſe it is ſo gainfull vnto him: and yet what account he maketh of it may appeare, when his throne is ſet higher then the altar; and in proceſſion, he rideth on mens ſhoulders, when the hoſt is carried vpon a palfreyes backe.

Argum.10. Sathan muſt be bound a thouſand yeeres, and afterward let looſe; and then Antichriſt ſhall come, whoſe kingdome ſhall increaſe, and faith decreaſe toward the end of the world. But if the Pope be Antichriſt, who hath beene theſe thouſand yeeres in the Church, then Antichriſt ſhould raigne while Sathan is bound, which can not be, and his kingdome waxe weaker toward the end of the world contrary to the Scripture, which ſaith, that at Chriſts comming, faith ſhall ſcarce be found in the earth, &c. Rhemiſt. ſect. 7.20. Apocal.

Anſw. Firſt we ſay not that Antichriſt hath beene 1000. yeeres in the Church, but began to be reuealed 1000. yeers after Chriſt in Silueſter 2. who by Necromancy obtained the Papacie, and in Boniface 3. who did iuſtifie the error of Purgatorie and Inuocation of Saints. So that Sathans looſing and Antichriſts raigning ſhall fall out together, that is at the expiration of the thouſand yeeres. Secondly, it is more agreeable to the Scriptures, that the kingdome of Antichriſt ſhall be weakened toward the end of the world: God ſhal firſt conſume him with the breath of his mouth, that is his word, as alreadie, thankes be to God, the preaching of the Goſpell hath ſhaken the walles of Babylon: but hee ſhall perfectly be deſtroyed by the brightneſſe of his Comming. 2. Theſſ.2.8. And though faith generally ſhall decay in the ende of the world, becauſe iniquitie ſhall abound: yet faith ſhall remaine in the true members of Chriſt, that are in continuall expectation of his comming.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope of Rome is very Antichriſt, and that all the qualities and properties which the Scripture deſcribeth Antichriſt by, do fitly agree vnto his perſon: and that we are not therefore to expect and looke for any other Antichriſt: Thus by teſtimonie of Scripture, and ſufficient reaſons deduced out of the ſame, we truſt it ſhall appeare to all men.

Argum.1. The firſt place of Scripture is Dan. 11. Where many notes and markes are declared proper to Antichriſt, yet eſpecially ſet forth to deſcribe Antiochus Epiphanes, who might be very well a type and figure of Antichriſt, who was then to come.

1. Verſe 36. It is ſaid, He ſhall do what him liſteth. This is moſt true of the Pope: his will muſt ſtand for reaſon, Diſtinct. 96. cap. ſatis. If the Pope ſhould draw infinite ſoules to hell, no man is to ſay vnto him, Sir, why do you ſo? Diſtinct. 40. Heere Bellarmine hath but this poore ſhift to ſay, that it is meant onely of publike iudgement, that no man is by authoritie to call the Pope to account: but yet a brotherly admonition may be vſed. But who ſeeth not that the words are generall: Nemo debet ei dicere: No man ought to ſay vnto him: neither Iudge, nor other?

2 He ſhall magnifie himſelfe againſt God, and ſpeake blaſphemous things againſt God: hath not the Pope done ſo? Of him it is ſaid, that God and the Pope haue but one Conſiſtorie: I am able to do almoſt all that God can do, Fox. pag. 785. articul. 192. I am aboue all and in all: Hoſtienſ. Nay, that Dominion and Lordſhip which Chriſt had in earth, but habitu, in habite, the Pope hath actu, in act and in deed. Againe, as we reade, the earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof, and as Chriſt ſaith, all power is giuen mee in heauen, and in earth: ſo is it to be affirmed, that the Vicar of Chriſt hath power on things celeſtiall, terreſtriall, infernall, apud Fox. p. 791. col. 1. Now let the diſcreet Reader iudge, whether this fellow doth not magnifie himſelfe, and ſpeake blaſphemouſly againſt God.

3 He ſhall proſper till the wrath be accompliſhed: So hath the Pope had but too good ſucceſſe; he hath ſubdued Emperours, and made them his ſeruants, trode vpon their necks, made them ſerue at his table, crowned them with his feete, made them hold his ſtirrop, and leade his horſe by the bridle. But we do hope that his date is out, and that he ſhall proſper no longer.

4 Verſ.37. He ſhall not care for the God of his fathers : No more doth the Pope : for hee hath inuented and erected a new breaden god, which he worſhippeth, hangeth vp in Churches, carieth about in proceſſion, being but a peece of bread. This breaden god amight, his forefathers neuer knew.

5 He ſhal not care for the deſires of women: So he prohibiteth lawfull marriage, permitteth adulteries, and the vnnaturall luſt of Sodomites. Bellarmine firſt denyeth the text, which is faithfully tranſlated according to the Hebrew. Secondly, he ſaith, the place is meant literally and properly of Antiochus, who was giuen to the pleaſures of women.

Anſw. Firſt, if it be meant literally of Antiochus, then can it not be meant literally of your Antichriſt : If Antiochus be but a type of Antichriſt, then can you not neceſſarily conclude out of this place : for types proue not, vnleſſe they be diuine, that is, appoynted of God to be types, which you cannot ſhew for this place : See then, the beſt arguments that you haue for your Antichriſt, out of the propheſies of Daniel and Ezechiel, are proued nothing worth. Secondly, as Antiochus was giuen to vnlawfull deſires of women, ſo is the Pope : yet might he be an enemie to chaſt and holy mariage, and ſo is the Pope. And by the way let it be noted, that the Ieſuite picketh quarrels with Scripture, and maketh it falſe : for the text ſaith, He, that is, Antiochus, ſhall not care for the deſires of women. Yes (ſaith the Ieſuite) he ſhall be giuen to the pleaſures of women, cleane contrarie to the text, Bellarm. cap. 21.

6 Verſ.38. He ſhall honour his god Mauzzim, that is, a god of power and riches, with golde ſiluer, precious ſtones : Both of theſe are moſt true of the popiſh religion : for their god hath brought them great riches, lands, treaſure, poſſeſſion: by their idolatrous Maſſes, they haue greatly enriched themſelues, wherein their breaden god playeth the chiefe part : and therefore they doe worſhip him againe with gold, ſiluer, precious ſtones : what rich Corporals, and Altarclothes, Copes, Veſtiments of veluet, ſilke, wrought with golde, are ſeene in their Churches? what gilding of Roodes, and Roodlofts, garniſhing of Idols, what rich Crucifixes of ſiluer, of gold, beſet with pearle and precious ſtones?

This deſcription therefore of Daniel, as you ſee, doth in euery reſpect agree with the conditions and properties of Antichriſt of Rome, Argument. Illyrici.

Argum.2. Secondly, S. Pauls deſcription in euery poynt alſo is verified in the Pope. Firſt : He ſhall exalt himſelfe aboue God, and all that is called God, 2. Theſſ. 2.4. So the Pope challengeth the full authoritie of Chriſt, as we haue ſhewed before, and exalteth himſelfe aboue Emperours, which are called gods vpon earth : yea they haue taken the iuſt proportion of inequalitie betweene the Pope and Emperour : for the Pope is 47. degrees aboue the Emperour, as the Sunne is 47. degrees bigger then the Moone, Innocent. 3. in. decretalib.

2 He ſhall ſit in the temple, that is, in the Church : ſo the Pope nameth himſelfe head of the Church, and hath the keyes, as he braggeth, both of heauen and hell. Therefore the Turke cannot be that Antichriſt, becauſe he is out of the Church : and ſo in truth is the Pope, but yet he challengeth to him and his the name of the Church.

3 The myſterie wrought in Pauls time, and afterward encreaſed : ſo not long after the Apoſtles time, the Biſhops of Rome began to lift vp their heads aboue other Churches, as Zozimus falſified the Councell of Nice, and ſent to the 6. Councell of Carthage, to haue it there confirmed, that it might be lawfull to ſend vp appeales to Rome.

4 Antichriſt ſhall come with lying ſignes : So hath the Pope done, as experience proueth, and we haue ſhewed before.

5 Verſ.11. God ſhall ſend ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhall beleeue lyes. And in time of Poperie, men indeede were ſo ſtrongly deluded, that the father perſecuted the ſonne, the ſonnes ſet fire to their father, yea the husband was made a witneſſe againſt the wife, the wife againſt her huſband, and ſeruants accuſed their maſters. Theſe things are ſo well knowne in ſtories, that I neede not come to particulars.

6 Antichriſt is called a wicked man, and a man of ſinne, verſ.3.8. And where ſhall you finde more wicked men, then among the Popes? Silueſter the ſecond gaue his ſoule to the diuell to obtaine the Papacie, Fox. pag.167. Benno reporteth of Hildebrand, that he poyſoned ſixe Popes to come to the Popedome. Pope Stephen and Sergius, tooke vp the bodie of Formoſus, and mangled it, cutting off his head and fingers, and ſo caſt it into Tibris, Fox. p.120. Much vnlike to one of their predeceſſors Sixtus the third, who tooke the bodie of Baſſus his enemie being dead, who had accuſed him before, embawmed it, and buried the ſame with his owne hands. We haue heard before, what a holy Father Pope Iohn the thirteenth was, he lay with his owne ſiſter, and with his fathers Concubines, playing at dice called for the diuell, was ſlaine in adulterie. And was it not, I pray you, a common prouerbe in England? He that goeth to Rome once, ſeeth a wicked man; he that goeth twiſe, learneth to know him; he that goeth the third time, bringeth him home with him Fox. pag.841,

That Antichriſt that man of ſinne ſitteth in Rome, it might eaſily be proued by a particular induction : for ſinne being the tranſgreſſion of the lawe, as Saint Iohn defineth it, 1. Epiſt. chap. 3. verſ. 4. If we ſhall ſhewe how the Pope of Rome hath notoriouſly tranſgreſſed the lawe and euery part thereof, who will doubt but that he is that man of ſinne, and ſo conſequently Antichriſt.

Ex Balæi chronico de actis pontif.

The firſt Commandement : Thou ſhalt haue no other gods, &c. Among other corruptions, forbiddeth all prophanenes and infidelitie, all confederacie or ſocietie with the diuell : for the firſt we haue diuers examples of Popes : Boniface the eight when Porchetus Archbiſhop of Genua came to him to receiue aſhes in a publike ſolemnity, he caſt aſhes into his eies and ſaid, Memento homo, quia Gibellinus es, &c. Remember man that thou art of the faction of the Gibellines, and ſhalt returne to duſt. Was not here great deuotion ? Gregory the twelft pulled a certaine preaching Carmelite Frier out of the pulpit and caſt him into priſon, becauſe he perſwaded the Popes, who were then deuided, to vnitie. Innocentius the eight was ſeene for the moſt part to ſleepe in the time of diuine ſeruice. Iulius the ſecond caſt S. Peters keyes into Tyberis in great diſdayne, ſaying, Seeing Peters keyes did not ſerue his turne, he will try what Pauls ſword can doe. Leo the tenth is reported to haue ſaid to Cardinall Bembus : Quantum nobis profuit fabula iſta de Chriſto: How much hath this fable or tale of Chriſt aduantaged vs ? And ſuch hath been the pietie and deuotion of our holy fathers of Rome.

Concerning the ſecond point, their familiaritie with the diuell, the two forenamed examples of Silueſter and Gregorie are able to certifie vs. Benedictus the 9. about the ſame time, was accuſtomed to call vpon euill ſpirits, and could by his diuelliſh enchantments, cauſe any woman whom he liked, to come vnto him. Paulus the 3. was a ſorcerer and enchaunter : hee gaue vnto a certaine noble Matrone a little hallowed braſen ball to hang about her necke, which ſhould ſhield her from certaine moleſtations : he made Dyoniſius Serutta a notable Necromancer, Cardinall, thereby ſhewing his affection to that profeſſion. And many other of the Popes were giuen to theſe diuelliſh ſtudies, to the number of 22. ex Balæo, Platina, & alijs.

The 2. Commandement: Thou ſhalt make to thy ſelfe no grauen image, &c. How the Popes haue tranſgreſſed this law, their practiſe to this day ſheweth, who are more giuen to idolatrie and worſhip of images, then any knowne Nation vnder the Sunne. Conſtantinus the 1. decreed that images ſhould be worſhipped in Churches. Bonifacius the 4. begged of wicked Phocas Emperour, the Church in Rome called Pantheon, and in ſtead of Cybele an Ethnicke Goddeſſe, there placed the image of the Virgin Marie to be adored. Leo the 3. iudged certaine forged bloud which iſſued out of a woodden Crucifix, to be the true blood of Chriſt, and ſo to be adored.

The 3. Commandement : Thou ſhalt not take the Name, &c. Here blaſphemie is forbidden. Diuers of the Popes haue been moſt horrible blaſphemers : Iulius the 3. is a notable example hereof: who being forbidden of his Phiſition to eate ſwines fleſh, on a time called for it, more ſwiniſh himſelfe, with great indignation and blaſphemie, ſaying, giue me my porke, All diſpetto de Dio: in deſpite of God. At another time, at ſupper miſſing the colde peacocke, which he commanded to be kept for him, he began to curſe and ſweare, and being admoniſhed by ſome of his Cardinals, not to be moued ſo for a trifle : he added further, If God were angry with Adam for an apple, may not I much more for a peacocke, being his chiefe Vicar vpon earth : ex Balæo, & alijs. Alexander the fift being at the poynt of death, ſaid thus to the Cardinals, My peace I giue vnto you, my peace I leaue with you. Thus moſt blaſphemouſly abuſing the holy ſpeech of Chriſt, and appropriating it to himſelfe. Paulus the fourth ſaid thus to his fellow Ieſuites, whoſe ſect he is ſaid to haue founded, going to Rome, to be in the eye and ſight of the world, Whither I goe, you cannot come: blaſphemouſly abuſing Chriſts ſpeech to his owne purpoſe. Thus they are found grieuous tranſgreſſors of this law.

The 4. Commandement: Remember thou keepe holy, &c. Yet Alexander the ſixt vpon feſtiuall dayes gaue himſelfe to heare Plautus Comedies, and to be preſent at other playes : his feſtiuall exerciſe was, from Hadrianes Mount to behold the gay harlots, and braue bawdes and ſtrumpets that paſſed by : ex Balæo de actis pontific.

The 5. Honour thy father and mother, &c. Yet Paulus the third poyſoned his mother and his nephew, that the whole inheritance of the Farneſians might come vnto him. And concerning the publike and common parents, Emperours and Kings and ciuill Magiſtrates; they were neuer more diſhonored then by Popes : Alexander the third did tread on Henry the Emperors necke. Adrian made him hold his ſtirrup. Diuers of them cauſed Emperours to kiſſe their feete. Paſchalis the ſecond raiſed vp Henry the fift moſt vnnaturally againſt his owne father, to depoſe him from the Empire. Innocentius the third ſet vp Otho againſt the Emperour Philip, by whom he was ſlaine. Innocentius the fourth hired one Manfredus to poyſon the Emperor Frederick. Such honor haue the Popes ſhewed to their earthly parents.

The 6. Thou ſhalt not kill. Iohn the 13. did thus vſe his Cardinals, ſome had their eyes pulled out, ſome their tongues, ſome their fingers cut off. Gregorie the 7. poyſoned, by wicked Brazutus meanes, ſixe Popes in order, to come himſelfe to the Papacie. Vrbane the 6. put fiue of his Cardinals into ſackes, and drowned them. Alexander the 6. commaunded Antonius Mancinellus his tongue, and both his hands to be cut off, becauſe he made an oration inuectiue againſt his impure life. Paulus the 3. poyſoned his owne ſiſter, whom he had knowne carnally, becauſe ſhe loued other better then him: the ſame Pope alſo poyſoned Fulgoſius and Contarenus two Cardinals, that began ſomewhat to fauour the Goſpell.

The 7. Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie. As for ſimple fornication, it was no rare thing in the Popes chaire. Iohn the 13. committed vncleannes with Rainera and Anna, two widowes. Iohn the 23. was accuſed, Concil. Conſtantienſ. ſeſſ. 11. for defiling of virgins. Paulus the 3. entiſed a noble virgin to follie, promiſing her mariage.

The Popes many of them haue been adulterers. Gregorie the 7. retained Mathilda the Counteſſe, hauing forſaken her husband Earle Azon. Paulus the 3. was found with Nicholas Quercaus his wife, who gaue him a wound, which was ſeene till his dying day.

But what will ye ſay, if theſe holy fathers haue fallen into horrible inceſt? Iohn the 23. was accuſed in the foreſaid Councell, to haue knowne carnally his brothers wife. Alexander the 6. (oh moſt horrible impietie!) did lye with his own daughter Lucretia. Paulus the 3. that filthie wretch, vſed carnally his ſiſter, daughter Conſtantia, and Neece. Neither ſtayed they here in theſe outragious luſts, which were not yet againſt the naturall vſe, but fell alſo into helliſh vnnaturall filthines, into that abominable ſinne of Sodomitrie. Iulius the 2. did abuſe two noble youths that were ſent to Rome by the French Queene to bee inſtructed. Iulius the 3. had his Ganymedes, to whom, beſide the reſt of his Cardinals leaue, he gaue a red Hat. Neither did they onely in their owne filthie perſons practiſe this wickedneſſe, but permitted it alſo to others. Sixtus the 4. erected a Stewes in Rome for both ſexes: he gaue licence to his two nephewes Cardinals, and their houſehold, in the three hot moneths of the yeere, Iune, Iuly, Auguſt, to vſe maſculine venerie. Alexander the 6. gaue leaue to Pet. Mendoza Cardinall, to vſe his owne baſtard ſonne as his ſpouſe: ex Baleo, & alijs. Who hearing now of theſe filthie abominations of that ſtrumpet of Babylon, will not eaſily graunt Antichriſts ſeate to be there?

The 8. Thou ſhalt not ſteale. Notwithſtanding this, Boniface the 7. carried away all S. Peters treaſure at Rome, and fled to Conſtantinople. Iohn the 18. as Platina ſaith, In pontificatu fuit fur & latro, behaued himſelfe in his Papacie as a theefe and a robber. As for iniuſtice and oppreſſion, which is alſo a kind of theft, nothing with the Popes was more common. Zacharias Pope put Childericus King of France from his kingdome, and gaue it to Pipinus. Adrian the firſt, Charlemaine King of France being dead, diſinherited Bertha his wife with her two ſonnes, and gaue the kingdome to Charles their vncle: and many ſuch other examples might be alleaged.

The 9. Thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe, &c. Yet this notwithſtanding, Vigilius accuſed Siluerius Biſhop of Rome falſely, that he would haue deliuered Rome to the Gothes: Siluerius was therefore depoſed, and Vigilius ſet in his place, who was iuſtly called to account by Theodora the Empreſſe, for that he had promiſed to reſtore Anthemius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, excommunicated by his predeceſſors, and afterward refuſed to doe it: ex pontifical. For this is alſo a breach of this law, not to performe the oth, or promiſe made, which with the Popes was not daintie. Paſchal the 2. confirmed by an oth to Henry the 5. the imperiall right of inueſting Biſhops: but afterward reuoked it againe. And as they were thus perfidous themſelues, ſo they gaue counſell to others: Eugenius the 4. perſwaded Vladiſlaus King of Hungarie to break his league made with Amurathes the great Turke, which was to his owne ruine, and of all Chriſtendome. Alexander the 6. betraied Gemes Baiazetes the great Turks brother, that did flye to Rome for ſuccour, and being therto largely hired by the great Turke, procured him to be poyſoned.

The like treacherous part played Alexander the 3. long before this with Frederick the Emperour, who ſent his counterfeit to the Sultane, againſt whom he warred, whereby the Emperour was taken: but the Sultane his enemie dealt honourably in deliuering him, whereas the Pope, his pretended friend, plaied a right Iudas part. The Popes their predeceſſors, though bad enough, yet were aſhamed of ſuch Iudaical practiſes: Nicholas 1. when Michael the Emperour ſent to him, to deliuer one Theognoſtus, which was fled to the Pope for reliefe, made this anſwere: Nolumus, deo volente, Iudæ proditori ſimiles eſſe, &c. We will not be like the traitor Iudas, nor be more wicked then the Pagans: for you may remember how one of your predeceſſors ſent to the King of the Agarenes, to haue one deliuered, but it was not granted: Epiſtol. ad Michael. Thus we ſee by the Popes owne teſtimonie, that they which betray ſuch as of truſt commit themſelues vnto them, doe excedere paganorum nequitiam: are more wicked then the heathen: but ſuch were ſome of the Popes.

The 10. Thou ſhalt not couet, &c. The couetouſnes of Popes hath been inſatiable, as it may appeare by the infinite treaſure which they heaped together. Iohn the 23. is ſaid to haue gathered 205000.crownes. Calixtus the 3. left to his ſucceſſor,an hundred and fifteene thouſand duckets, which he had ſcraped together by his Indulgences.Leo the 10.ſent his Indulgences abroade with this commiſſion,that whoſoeuer would giue ten ſhillings,ſhould deliuer a ſoule from the paines of Purgatorie : the Popes chiefe factor for this merchandiſe,was one Simon a Frier Franciſcane of Millaine,who by this meanes gathered ſuch infinite ſummes of mones,that he offered in one day aboue 1200000.duckets for the Popedome. And no marueile if the Popes did grow ſo infinitely rich,for all things were put to ſale : as ſpirituall liuings, Biſhoprickes, benefices, &c. The Archbiſhop of Canturburie was wont to pay to the Pope tenne thouſand florence for his firſt fruites, and fiue thouſand for the vſe of his pall:ſo did the Archbiſhop of Yorke.Iohn the 23.exacted the tenths of Eccleſiaſticall liuings. Vrbanus the 6. the firſt fruites. Innocentius the 7.more vnreaſonable then they,would haue had halfe the fruites of Benefices, ex Baleo. Cardinalſhips alſo were ſold. Leo the 10. made 31.Cardinals in one day , getting thereby vnreaſonable ſummes of money. The Pope offered the Empire to ſale : as Alexander the 3.tooke money of Alphonſus King of Spaine for the Empire,and afterward ſold it to another. Yea the Popedome it ſelfe hath bin ſet to ſale : Benedictus the 9.ſold the Papacie to Gregorie the 6.for fifteene hundred pound. Yea honeſtie and all is ſaleable at Rome : the reuenewes of the harlots in Rome amounteth yeerely to 40.thouſand pound,*Conſul.Chronic.de actis Paul.*3. To conclude this place, conſidering this vnſatiable thirſt of the Popes,the Greekes,anno 1330.or thereabout, made a fit anſwere to the Pope, who had ſent to them before,telling them that Chriſt had but one Church,and he was the head thereof: their anſwere is this : Potentiam tuam ſummam erga tuos ſubditos firmiter credimus,ſuperbiam tuam ſummam tolerare non poſſumus, auaritiam ſatiare non valemus: Your tyrannie toward your ſubiects we eaſily beleeue,your infinite pride we cannot beare,nor ſatiate your couetous deſire: *ex actis Iohan.*23. Thus haue I ſhewed by the way the generall corruption that raigneth in the Papall chaire of peſtilence, and the wicked vſage of that ſinfull ſeate,ſo that in no place in the world,neither amongſt the Turkes or Infidels can the man of ſinne be ſooner found,then there. Let vs now proceede.

*Argum.*3. The third place wee doe take out of the Apocalypſe,chap.9.where is a plaine ſtorie ſet downe of the Pope.

1 Verſ.1. He is a ſtarre fallen from heauen : he is departed from the ancient faith of Rome to ſuperſtition and idolatrie.

2 He hath the key of the bottomleſſe pit : who giueth the croſſe keyes in his armes but the Pope? Who ſaith he may euacuate all Purgatorie at once, if he will,but he? Who ſaith,he may, Pleno iure currus animarum plenos ſecum ad tartara detrudere: By full right, carrie downe to hell with him chariots loden with ſoules? *cap.ſi Papa.diſtinct.*42. Is not this the Pope? Who then more fitly may be ſaid to haue the key of the bottomleſſe pit?

3 There ariſe out of the bottomleſſe pit a great flocke of Locuſts,that is,the innumerable ſort of begging Friers : for they are in euery reſpect deſcribed : Firſt,compared to Locuſts for their number,verſ.3. There were an hundred diuers ſorts of Friers,Fox pag.260. Secondly, they had power giuen them for fiue moneths : that is,as Walter Brute expoundeth it, taking a moneth for thirtie daies,and a day for a yeere,as it is prophetically taken,an hundred and fiftie yeeres:for ſo long it was from the beginning of the Friers vnder Innocent the 3.anno 1212.to the time of Armachanus, who preached, diſputed, and wrote againſt the Friers, about anno 1360. Fox pag.414. Thirdly,they ſhall ſting like Scorpions, not ſlay all at once, but venome and poyſon the conſcience with the ſting of their peſtilent doctrine. Fourthly,other parts alſo of the deſcription agree, as verſ.7. They are as horſes prepared to battaile, that is, ſtoute and ambitious, their haire as the haire of women,that is,they ſhall be effeminate,and giuen to the luſts of the fleſh : their teeth as the teeth of Lions: they by valiant begging ſhall deuoure the portions of the poore : as it was well proued in King Henrie the 8.daies,in the Supplication of beggars, that the ſumme of the Friers almes came to a great ſumme in the yeere : for the fiue orders of Friers had a penie a quarter for euery one of euery houſeholder throughout England, that is, for them all twentie pence by the yeere : Suppoſe that there be but tenne houſeholds in euery towne,and let there be twentie thouſand pariſhes and townes in England ; it will not want much of twentie thouſand pound. Thus had they Lions teeth,that is,conſuming and deuouring. Laſtly,they haue a King,verſ.11.whoſe name is Abaddon,a deſtroyer : for the Pope,their chiefe prince and patrone,hath by his Antichriſtian doctrine laid waſte the Church of God, Argument.Chytræi.

*Argum.*4. The fourth place of Scripture wee will take out of the 17.of the Apocalypſe,there the ſeate of Antichriſt is deſcribed. Firſt,verſ.5.It is called Babylon,the citie which raigneth ouer the Kings of the earth,verſ.18. This can be no other but Rome,which then had the Empire of the whole world : as Walter Brute, holy confeſſor of Gods truth, witneſſeth: In the daies of S.Iohn the whole world was ſubiect to the temporall Empire of the citie of Rome, and afterward it was ſubiect to the ſpirituall Empire or dominion of the ſame, Fox pag.499. Secondly, It is the citie built vpon ſeuen hils or mountaines, verſ.9. that is no other but Rome. Thirdly, the whore, which is Antichriſt, ſhall ſit vpon the beaſt with ſeuen heads and ten hornes, that is, ſhall ſucceede the Empire, and haue the authoritie thereof: ſo hath the Pope. Fourthly, the ten hornes, that is, the Kings of the earth ſhall giue their authoritie to the beaſt, but afterward ſhall deuoure her fleſ Euen ſo the Kings of the earth, by their ſword, maintained the authoritie of the Pope. But no being taught by the Goſpell, they are made the Lords free men, and begin to ſubdue their necke from his yoke.

*Argum.*5. The fift place is, 1.Iohn 2.22. Who is a lyar, but he that denieth that Ieſus is Chriſ the ſame is Antichriſt that denieth the father and the ſonne.

Euen ſo the Pope of Rome, though not openly and apertly, yet cloſely and ſubtilly is an enmie vnto the whole Trinitie: He exalteth himſelfe aboue God the father; becauſe he taketh vpon him to diſpence not onely againſt the law of nature, but againſt the law of God, the morall law, and againſt the precepts both of the old and new Teſtament: but a law cannot be diſpenſed withall, but by the ſame authoritie, or greater.

Againſt Ieſus Chriſt he exalteth himſelfe, and all his offices; he denieth him to be the only Prophet, ſaying, the Scriptures are vnperfect, and that their traditions are alſo neceſſarie to ſaluation. Againe, he maketh other bookes Scripture, then thoſe which are Canonicall. His kingly office he doth arrogate to himſelfe, in making lawes to binde the conſcience, in ordaining other Sacraments, in graunting Indulgences and Pardons, and ſaying that he is the head of the Church. His Prieſthood he is an enemie vnto, conſtituting another prieſthood after the order of Melchiſedech, then that of our Sauiour Chriſt, which begun vpon the Croſſe, and remaineth ſtill in his perſon, being incommunicable to any other creature: yet they make euery ſacrificing prieſt to be of the order of Melchiſedech. He impugneth the office of the holy ſpirit, counting that prophane which the holy Ghoſt hath ſanctified, as mariage and meates: arrogateth in all things the ſpirit of truth not to erre: applieth the merits of Chriſts paſſion after his owne pleaſure, by pardons, Indulgences, by ceremonies and Sacraments of his owne inuention, Fulk. 2.Theſſ.2.ſect.10. Ergo, we conclude out of S.Iohn, that ſeeing he denieth Ieſus to be Chriſt, he is Antichriſt.

Argum.6. Sixtly, Saint Paul ſaith, that Antichriſt ſhall be an aduerſarie, ἀντικείμενος. 2.Theſſ. 2.verſ.4. An aduerſarie in doctrine, teaching cleane contrarie to the Goſpell of Chriſt: ſo doth the Pope.

1 The Scripture ſaith, wee ought to put our truſt onely in God, and not in man, Ierem.17.7. and to call vpon God onely in the day of trouble, Pſal.50.15. and to worſhip him in ſpirit and truth, Ioh.4.24. The Papiſts ſay cleane contrarie, that we muſt call vpon Saints, and beleeue they can helpe vs, and they teach vs to fall downe before Images, which are ſtockes and ſtones.

2 The Goſpell teacheth, that we are freely ſaued by Ieſus Chriſt, without workes, which neither merit remiſſion of ſinnes, nor eternall life: for eternall life is the free gift of God, Rom.6.23. And our ſinnes are forgiuen vs freely, becauſe they are not imputed, Rom.4.6. They affirme cleane contrarie, that by our merits wee may deſerue heauen: and that vita æterna, is merces bonorum operum, that eternall life is the reward of good workes. But Saint Paul ſaith, it is a free gift, *Bellarm.cap.*23.

3 The Goſpell teacheth vs, that we ſhould grow vp to an aſſurance of our election, 2.Pet.1.10 and with boldnes to call vpon the name of God, Heb.4.10. The Papiſts ſay, we ſhould bee kept alwaies in doubt, and it is preſumption to be aſſured of the fauour of God.

4 The Goſpell ſaith, that not onely externall acts, but euen ſecret thoughts are ſinne, yea the very concupiſcence of the fleſh to be ſinne, Geneſ.6.5. Rom.7.7. They denie that concupiſcence and euill thoughts are ſinne, vnleſſe they be voluntarie, and haue the conſent of the will, ibid.

5 The Goſpell teacheth, that it is impoſſible for any man to keepe and performe the lawe of God, Rom.8.7. Luk.17.10. They doubt not to ſay, that a man by grace may fulfill the law, and by fulfilling of it deſerue heauen.

6 Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament in both kinds; and Paul, 1.Cor.11. giuing a direction concerning the Sacrament, not onely to the Paſtors and Miniſters, but to the whole Church of Corinth, doth rehearſe the inſtitution in both kindes: but the Papiſts doe miniſter but in one kinde to the people.

7 The Goſpell ſaith, that the Church is builded vpon Chriſt, and he is the onely foundation thereof, 1.Cor.3.11. The Papiſts hold that Peter firſt, and now the Pope, whom they make his ſucceſſor, is the foundation of the Church, Argument.Chytræi. And thus we ſee, the Pope in his doctrine is a plaine aduerſarie to Chriſt, and therefore Antichriſt.

*Argum.*7. The ſeuenth argument, Apocalypſe 17.1. Antichriſt is called the great whore: And here we are to note the ſingular prouidence of God, who ſuffereth not one iot of his word to fall to the ground: for euen ſo verily, anno 853. next after Leo the 4. there was a right whore elected Pope called Iohn, or if you will, Ioane the 8. who ſate in the Papacie two yeeres, ſixe moneths; and o time being with childe, fell in labour in the middeſt of a ſolemne proceſſion. Whereupon the was a certaine Image of a woman with a childe ſet vp in the ſame place where the Pope was eliuered: And euer ſince the Popes, when they goe to Laterane, doe ſhun that ſtreete, being yet ne neerer way, abhorring that fact and the memorie thereof. There was alſo long after a chayre of Porphyrie ſtone kept in Laterane, with an hole in the middeſt, wherein the new elected Pope was wont to ſit to haue his humanitie tried, Iuel.pag.428.Defenſ.Apol.

Obiect.1. Harding, and ſince him Bellarmine obiect, that there was neuer any ſuch Pope, becauſe he is not regiſtred in the Popes Calendar.

Anſ. No, they left her out for ſhame, as Marianus Scotus writeth. Againe, Biſhops names haue vpon ſundrie occaſions been left out: as Chryſoſtomes name was ſtriken out, vpon diſpleaſure, out of the table of the Biſhops of Conſtantinople: So Pope Cyriacus is not reckoned in the Calendar of the Popes, and yet he was one of them.

Obiect.2. Whereas it is ſaid, that this Pope Ioane was firſt ſtudent at Athens, and afterward profeſſed at Rome: Harding denieth, that at Athens then there was any place for ſtudents, but all was barbarous, and ſo ſaith Bellarmine; neither that at Rome there was any open profeſſion of letters at that time.

Anſ. Firſt, anno 680. the Biſhop of Athens was at a Councel at Conſtantinople, called Synodus ſexta, anno 742. at the ſecond Councell of Nice, there were many Biſhops of Greece preſent: and Pope Ioane followed, anno 853. and how ſhould Athens afterward become barbarous, being inhabited all this while by Chriſtians? for it was not taken of the Turks before anno 1440. Secondly, me thinkes it is a diſcredit for Rome, that there ſhould bee there vnder the Popes noſe no profeſſion of learning, and that there ſhould bee there no Vniuerſitie of Students, where the vniuerſall Biſhop ſate. But Theodoricus Niemus, ſometime the Popes Secretarie, ſaith, ſhe read a Lecture two yeeres at Rome.

Obiect.3. It is not like that God would ſuffer Saint Peters chayre to bee polluted by a woman, Harding.

Anſ. You preſume too much of Gods prouidence, hauing no ſuch promiſe. Why might not a woman as well creepe into S. Peters chayre at Rome, as one did into S. Andrewes of Conſtantinople? as Bellarmine confeſſeth: what priuiledge hath one more then the other? And why might not a woman as well be Pope, as Popes made by women? as Iohn the 11. got the Popedome by Theodora that harlots meanes: Iohn the 12. was made Pope through the helpe of Marogia that notorious ſtrumpet. For the whore of Babylons ſeate was then, as reaſon would, gouerned by ſtrumpets, the like by the like: So was Victor the 3. elected Pope, at Mathilda that noble harlots ſuite. But to put the matter out of doubt, Mantuan that elegant Poet, writeth thus of Pope Ioane:

> Hic pendebat adhuc ſexum mentita virilem
> Fœmina, cui triplici phrigiam diademate mitram
> Extollebat apex, &c. lib.3.
>
> Here did as yet, in ſhew a man, a woman ſit,
> Whoſe head a tripled coſtly Crowne did fit.

Caranza alſo the epitomizer of the Councels, doth aſſigne vnto this whore of Babylon, 2. yeers, one moneth, foure daies; ſo long did ſhe occupie that chayre of peſtilence. Platina alſo reporteth the ſame ſtorie, an author of their owne.

Obiect.4. As for the chayre (ſaith Harding) it is a fable: but Bellarmine more modeſtly graunteth there is a chayre of Porphyrie, but to another purpoſe, to ſhew the Popes humilitie, not to trie his humanitie. Againe, Harding ſaith it is a lye, that the Popes refraine to goe that way. But Bellarmine, that knoweth Rome better then he, denieth not that the Pope ſo doth, but not for any ſuch hainous fact there committed, but becauſe it is a ſtrait way, and is not fit for his traine. And as for the Image, Harding ſaith, it repreſenteth no ſuch thing, but is rather like one of the great ragged ſtones at Stonage: Bellarmine denieth not, but there is ſuch an Image, but it ſeemeth not to be the picture of a woman, but rather of ſome heathen prieſt going to ſacrifice. We ſee how handſomely they agree in their anſweres: And no marueile, for if one lyer is many times contrarie to himſelfe, how ſhould two lyers agree? But theſe men goe onely by coniectures: wee haue their owne writers againſt them: for Theodoricus Niemus ſaith, there is ſuch an Image that reſembleth ſuch a thing, and that the Popes will not goe that way in proceſſion to this day vpon that occaſion. And as for the chayre of Marble to that vſe, to ſearch the Pope, Sabellicus reporteth it, Ænead.9.lib.1.

In this one example we may ſee the boldnes of our aduerſaries, which are not aſhamed to deny ſo famous a ſtorie, being reported by Sabellicus, Leonicus Chalcondyla, Marianus Scotus, that liued about the yeere 1028. Sigebertus Gimblacenſ. anno 1100. beſide thirteene Hiſtoriographers, as they are quoted by Biſhop Iuel, and of them all not one a Lutherane. It is almoſt as foule a ſhame for them to denie ſo manifeſt and plaine a thing, as it is a great blot to their ſucceſſion, that a whore ſate ſometimes in the Papall chayre. Thus then by euident demonſtration it appeareth, that the Pope is the whore of Babylon, and ſo conſequently very Antichriſt.

*Argum.*8. He that was letted and hindered from comming while the Empire ſtood, and ſhall bee reuealed after the diſſolution of the ſame, is Antichriſt: ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, 2.Theſſ.2.6. You know what withholdeth, &c. So much alſo is confeſſed by the Rhemiſts, *Apocal.*17.*annot.*9. But this is the Pope, who was hindered from his princely ſupremacie or tyrannie rather in the Church, by the flouriſhing ſtate of the Empire: and ſince the decay thereof, the Papacie hath increaſed. Firſt, by the abſence of the Emperour in the Eaſt parts, the Pope incroched in the Weſt. Secondly, the Empire was weakened by tranſlating of it from the Greekes to the French, from the French to the Germanes. Thirdly, whereas Rome was ſubiect to the Emperour, now he is excluded and beareth onely a vaine title to bee called, Rex Romanorum. Fourthly, whereas the Emperour bare ſtroke in the election of the Pope, now he hath nothing to doe with it. Fiftly, whereas the Imperiall ſtate went by ſucceſſion, now it is conferred by election, by the Popes deuice, that paſſing from one kingdome to another, by ſhifting of places it might bee weakened: So that now it is plaine that there remaineth nothing but an image and ſhadow of the Empire; ſo that the Empire being thus defaced, Antichriſt muſt needes be reuealed: And who ſhould he be, but he, that hath incroched vpon the Imperiall right and poſſeſſions, which is the Biſhop of Rome?

*Argum.*9. He is Antichriſt, and ſo called, which impugneth Chriſts kingdome in earth, that is, the ſpirituall regiment which he appointed in his Church, and the forme of gouernment ordained therein, applying all to himſelfe by ſingular tyrannie. For which cauſe Athanaſius calleth Conſtantius the Emperour, an Arrian, Antichriſt, for making himſelfe principem Epiſcoporum, prince of Prieſts, &c. which alſo impugneth Chriſts Prieſthood in earth, &c. he is Antichriſt, *Rhemiſt. totidem verbis ſect.*13. 2.*Theſſ.*2. But the Pope impugneth both the kingdome and prieſthood of Chriſt: Ergo, he is Antichriſt.

Firſt, he impugneth the kingdome of Chriſt, which is either externall, or internall, that is, ſpirituall: for the externall gouernment of the Church, which Chriſt hath appointed by making ſome Apoſtles, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and Doctors, &c. Epheſ.4. the Pope hath arrogated all to himſelfe: who challengeth to bee called vniuerſall Biſhop, prince of Prieſts, which Athanaſius condemned in Conſtantius as an Antichriſtian title. And concerning the title of vniuerſalitie, Gregorie 1. thus writeth: Farre from all Chriſtians hearts be this name of blaſphemie, in which the honour of all Prieſts is taken away, while it is challenged of one man to himſelfe, *Lib.*4.*epiſt.*32. So then the Pope hath taken away the externall gouernment of the Church, by applying all to himſelfe. And concerning the ſpirituall regiment of the Church, which is more properly the kingdome of Chriſt, he hath incroched vpon that alſo; both by preſuming to diſpence againſt the law of God, by aboliſhing the inſtitution and right vſe of the Lords Supper, in taking vpon him to forgiue ſinnes, and to abſolue from the paine and the fault: with ſuch like intolerable preſumptions.

Secondly, he impugneth the Prieſthood of Chriſt, both concerning his ſacrifice, in offering vp Chriſt daily in the Maſſe, as though his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe were not ſufficient; as alſo as touching his mediation, in making other mediatours and interceſſors beſide Chriſt, as though he were not the alone able and ſufficient Mediatour. So then, ſeeing the Pope moſt notoriouſly doth impugne both the kingdome and prieſthood of Chriſt, he is certainly Antichriſt.

Laſtly, in the tenth place, their owne witneſſes ſhall ſpeake: Bernard ſaith, Beſtia de Apocalypſi, cui datum eſt os, loquens blaſphemias, Petri Cathedram occupat: The beaſt in the Apocalypſe, to the which a mouth was giuen ſpeaking blaſphemies, doth occupie Peters chayre. Ioachim Abbas ſaith, Antichriſtus iampridem natus eſt Romæ: Antichriſt a good while ſince was borne at Rome. The Biſhops in the Councell at Reynſpurge ſay thus: Hildebrandus Papa, ſub ſpecie religionis, iecit fundamenta Antichriſti: Hildebrand vnder colour of holineſſe, hath laid a foundation for Antichriſt. Nay, long before any of theſe, Gregorie the 1. firſt of all the Gregories, and the beſt of all the Popes that haue followed him, thus prophecied of his ſucceſſors: Ego fidenter dico, quòd quiſquis ſe vniuerſalem ſacerdotem vocat, vel vocari deſiderat, in elatione ſua Antichriſtum præcurrit: I ſpeake it confidently, that whoſoeuer calleth himſelfe vniuerſall prieſt, or deſireth ſo to bee called in the pride of his heart, is the forerunner of Antichriſt. But the Popes of Rome are now called vniuerſall Biſhops or Prieſts: Ergo, they are either Antichriſts, or the forerunners of Antichriſt. But it is not like that Antichriſt ſhould haue ſo many forerunners, and ſo many yeeres, almoſt a thouſand ſince Boniface the 3. was firſt called vniuerſall Biſhop: Ergo, Antichriſt is alreadie come, and hath been a good while: and where elſe ſhould he be, but there where his forerunners were, namely, at Rome?

Epiſtol.125.

Lib.6. epiſt.30

We want not here the witneſſe of their owne law in this caſe for the triall of this point, who ſhould be Antichriſt:

Firſt, Nicholaus 2. decreeth him to be Antichriſt that was elected or made Pope by ſimonie, De-

*cret.23.cap.1.*but ſo was Gregorie the 6.made Pope,giuing to his predeceſſor Benedict the 9. 1500. pounds: and as things goe now a daies it was good cheape.

Secondly,*Diſtinct.79.cap.1.Nichol.2. Qui ſine concordi electione,&c.*He that is inthronized Pope without the Canonicall and concording election of the Cardinals, is not Apoſtolicall,but Apoſtaticall. But when Iohn 23.was made Pope, and two more beſide, a Gregorie and a Benedict,the Cardinals concorded not in their election: *Ergo,*the Pope then was an Apoſtata.

Thirdly,*Cauſ.6.quæſt.7.cap.3.Gregor.7.*thus decreed,that if any Biſhop granted tithes or oblations, laicalibus perſonis,ſeu conſanguineis, to lay perſons,or his kinſemen, inter maximos hæreticos, & Antichriſtus non minimus haberetur, he ſhould bee counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes,and not the leaſt Antichriſt. But the Biſhop of Rome hath done this,by whoſe deuice many portions of tithes haue bin appropriate to lay perſons: *Ergo,*he is an heretike and Antichriſt.

Fourthly,Decret.par.2.cauſ.24.quæſt.1.cap.25. that ſaying of S.Hierome is approued: Qui Christi non eſt,Antichriſti eſt: He that is not of Chriſt, is of Antichriſt. Sixtly,Ibid.cap.11.Hadrian. Anathema, quicunque regum: He is an anathema, or accurſed, that doth violate the decrees of Kings.But ſo doth the Pope,whoſe Canons doe euery where impugne the Ciuill conſtitutions.Ergo.

Seuenthly, Cauſ.35.quæſt.5.cap.3.Gregor. Vxorem propinqui mei,&c. The wife of my kinſeman I muſt hold as neere vnto me, as if ſhe were my kinſewoman in the ſame degree,&c. whoſoeuer thinketh otherwiſe is Antichriſt. But the Pope ſo thinketh, that permitteth a brother to marrie his brothers wife,which is as neere as his owne ſiſter by this Canon: *Ergo,*he is Antichriſt.

Eightly,Decret.part.3.diſt.3.cap.12. Qui die ſabbati, &c. They that forbid to worke vpon the Suturday,prædicatores Antichriſti, are the preachers of Antichriſt. But ſo doth the Pope, that enioyneth Saturdaies to be as ſtrictly kept holy daies,as the Lords day.Ergo.

Let vs ſee in the laſt place the glorious teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs and confeſſors of Gods truth: Walter Brute proueth the Pope to be Antichriſt by this argument: He which eſtabliſheth his lawes,allowing warres and the ſlaughter of men in the warres,as well of Chriſtians, as of Infidels; doth he not iuſtifie things contrarie to the Goſpell and law of Chriſt? therefore he is Antichriſt: but this doth the Pope,&c.Fox pag.487.

Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr: The way of Antichriſt is wickedneſſe and ſinne, of the which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh to the Theſſal.&c.pag.617. But in Rome, euen in the Popes chayre, all abomination,as pride,couetouſneſſe,ſimonie,are to be found,pag.628.*Ergo,*the Pope is Antichriſt.

Thomas Bilney holy Martyr: The Pope ſitteth in the temple of God: for the conſcience of man is the temple of the holy Ghoſt: as S.Paul ſaith,1.Cor.3.The temple of the Lord is holy,which is you: but the Pope ſitteth in the conſcience, counting them guiltie of death,that breake his conſtitutions: therefore ſitting in the temple as God, he is Antichriſt,pag.1002.

Maſter Tindall Martyr: The Pope inferring a neceſſitie of thoſe things, which Chriſt leaueth free and indifferent,what doth he elſe,but make himſelfe Antichriſt? pag.1251.

For this truth alſo many beſides gaue their liues: Thomas Benet burned at Exceter, for ſaying the Pope is Antichriſt,pag.1037. Iohn Stilman burned in Smithfield for the ſame, p.815. Maſter Rogers holy Martyr,for affirming the Romiſh Church to be the Church of Antichriſt,p.1488.

Now therefore ſeeing we haue ſo many witneſſes, the Scripture,reaſon,experience,authorities to proue the Pope Antichriſt: who will either be ſo ſimple, as ſeeing ſo good grounds, not to beleeue it; or ſo ſcrupulous, hauing ſuch certaine euidence,to doubt thereof? And thus at the length, by Gods gracious aſſiſtance,we haue finiſhed and brought this great queſtion concerning Antichriſt,to an end; as alſo the whole controuerſie as touching the Biſhop or Pope of Rome.

THE FIFTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING SPIRITVALL PERSONS, COMMONLY CALLED THE CLERGIE.

HAuing now ſufficiently handled the controuerſie of the chiefe member of the Militant Church, which our aduerſaries ſay is the Pope, wee muſt come in the next place to ſpeake of the middle parts, which are thoſe whom they call Clericos, Clerkes, and they are of two ſorts; Secular, which haue any publike function in the Church; or Regular, which liue according to ſome rule, and they are called Monachi, Monkes. Firſt then of their ſecular Clerkes.

This Controuerſie containeth ſixe queſtions.

1 Of the name and title of Clerkes or Clergie men.

2 Concerning the election of Biſhops and Miniſters: firſt, of all in generall: ſecondly, of the election of the Biſhop of Rome.

3 Concerning Eccleſiaſticall orders: firſt, in generall: ſecondly, of the difference of Biſhops and other Miniſters: thirdly, of Cardinals.

4 Concerning the keyes of the Church, and the power of binding and looſing: the queſtion diuided into foure parts.

5 Concerning the mariage of Miniſters: three parts of the queſtion.

6 Of the maintenance of the Church by tithes: in two parts.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING the name of Clerkes or Clergie men.

The Papiſts.

66.Error. THis name Clergie, in Latin, Clerus, is a name made proper to the Spiritualtie, by vſe of antiquitie, and agreeably to Scriptures: they are ſo called, becauſe they are the Lords lot, and conſecrate to the diuine ſeruice: the reſt are called popular, or lay men, which meddle not with any function of the Church.

*Argum.*1. This word (ſay they) hath been vſed by all antiquitie, and thereby Church Miniſters onely ſignified: Ergo, it is a fit and decent name, *Bellarm.lib.*1.*de Clericis,cap.*1.Rhemenſ. 1.*Pet.*2.3.

Anſ. Firſt, the Fathers vſed this name Clergie, but not as it is now vſed of the Papiſts, which do hereby as it were exclude the people of God from the Lords inheritance, counting them as Aſſes and Dogs, in reſpect of the Clergie: as one of their owne writers thus complaineth; Quomodo excuſandi vel ferendi hodierni in eccleſia præſules, &c. How can the Prelates of theſe daies bee excuſed, or ſuffered, which doe rule ouer men as beaſts in the Northerne parts, (he meaneth the Lapiani, and Pilapij people of thoſe countries) which doe lay ſuch grieuous yokes vpon thoſe ſimple people, as ſtray ſheepe, hauing no paſtor, that they cannot ſubmit themſelues to the Lords ſweete yoke, &c. Eſpenc.in 1.*Timoth.p.*312.f. Such diſtinction betweene the Clergie and Laitie the fathers neuer allowed: they vſed it as a ciuill indifferent name, for an outward diſtinction of their callings, not as a name of more holines, and ſo we refuſe it not.

2 What though by cuſtome and continuance this name hath been ſomewhat abuſed, wee will learne herein to ſpeake of the Scriptures, and not of men.

*Argum.*2. Secondly, wee miſlike this name (ſay our aduerſaries) becauſe wee would haue no difference betweene the people and Clergie, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſ. It is a great ſlander: becauſe we make no ſuch difference, as they doe, as to make the Clergie onely Gods lot and portion, and to count the people as vnholie, and to preferre euerie ignorant doltiſh Maſſe prieſt, before the beſt and deuouteſt of the people: therefore they imagine we make no difference at all. We do diſtinguiſh the calling of the one, and the other: none of the lay ſort to be ſo hardie as to meddle with the word or Sacramentes, which are committed to the Miniſters, which you notwithſtanding permit them to do: and the people euery where to reuerence their Paſtors, and to yeelde due obedience vnto them. But that the calling of the one before God in it ſelfe, is more meritorious then the other; that wee doe not, neither dare affirme.

*Argum.*3. The Leuites in the time of the law, were ſeuered out from the reſt of the Lords people, and he was their lot and inheritance, and they the Lords lot. Deut. 18.2. And as the Leuites were then, ſo are the Miniſters of the Goſpell now, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, the Lord is rather ſaid to be their lot, becauſe they had the Lords portion, and liued of the Altar, then they are ſaid to be the Lords lot: for the whole Nation was holy vnto God, and a kingdom of Prieſts, Exod. 19.6. Secondly, it followeth not, that becauſe there was a legall and ceremonial difference then between the Prieſts and the people, that therfore it ought to be ſo now: Nay rather the contrarie followeth, becauſe there was ſuch a difference then, that therefore the Prieſthood of the law being ceaſed, there ought to be none ſuch now: for Chriſt hath made vs all Kings and Prieſts to God his Father, Apocal. 1.6. And wee are all a royall Prieſthood and holy Nation, 1. Pet. 2.9. Now, though there be a difference of callings amongſt men, yet before God we are all Prieſts alike; and there is but one Prieſt for vs all to Godward, euen Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

The Proteſtants.

THe name of Clerks, or Clergie men, if it be not vſed as a name in it ſelfe of greater holineſſe and merite, and ſo be in effect a proud excluding of the reſt of Chriſtians from the Lords inheritance; we refuſe it not, though there are better names and titles, to call the Miniſters of the Goſpell by: yet being taken as it is in Poperie, we do vtterly refuſe and reiect it.

Firſt, 1. Pet. 5.3. The Apoſtle exhorteth the paſtors and teachers to feede the flocke of Chriſt, non vt dominantes Cleris: Not as Lords ouer Gods Cleargie and inheritance. Here S. Peter calleth the whole flocke, the Clergie: wherefore it appeareth, that this difference was not knowne in the Apoſtles time of lay and Clergie men. And it is againſt all ſenſe, that Saint Peter ſhould vnderſtand here the inferiour Miniſters, and ſo exhorteth the ſuperiour Paſtors and Biſhops to looke to their Clergie, as the Rhemiſts would haue it. For S. Peter writeth not onely to Biſhops, but to all Presbyters, paſtors or Elders, verſe 1. Secondly, verſ. 3. That which he calleth the Clergie, or heritage, he expoundeth in the ſame verſe to be the Lords flocke: but the Clergie in their ſenſe is not the whole congregation or flocke. Thirdly, the Apoſtle would haue them to feed the flock, that is, to teach and inſtruct them, but he was farre from allowing an ignorant Clergie, that need to be inſtructed and catechiſed, ſuch as for the moſt part the popiſh Clergie is.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe: that it may be granted alſo that the name of Clergie in ſome ſort, agreeth to the people, as being the Lords heritage; but in a more excellent manner is it giuen to thoſe which ſerue at the altar: as all the Iſraelites were the Lordes heritage, yet the Leuites are more ſpecially ſo called. Bellarmine lib. 1. de Clericis. cap. 1.

Contra. Firſt, if the people then may be called the Clergie, then is not this name peculiar to eccleſiaſticall perſons, which is the thing now in queſtion. Secondly, there is no ſuch legall difference now betweene the Prieſt and people, as was vnder the law, betweene the Leuites and other tribes: for Chriſt hath now made vs all kings and prieſts to God his Father. Apocal. 1.6. Thirdly, we denie not, but that the Miniſters of the Goſpel haue a more excellent office, then lay men, in reſpect of the policie and order of the Church, but not more meritorious in it ſelfe before God.

*Argum.*2. Neither ſhall we find this word Clerus, the Clergie, properly applied to the Miniſters, throughout the new Teſtament, let our aduerſaries brag neuer ſo much of ſcripture as they do. Galat. 6.6. S. Paul vſeth theſe names of difference, κατηχοῦν, κατηχούμενος, the teacher, and he that is taught: and 1. Corinth. 14.16. λαλῶν, the ſpeaker, and ἰδιώτης the priuate or vnlettered man. So that all their names are giuen in reſpect of their outward miniſterie and calling, not in regard of any difference before God. For before the Lord, as there is neither Græcian nor Iew, bond nor free, male nor female; ſo neither is there Clerke or lay man.

Gal. 3.28.

*Argum.*3. S. Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 12.20. There are many members, yet one bodie, &c. verſe 13. By one ſpirit are we all baptized into one body, &c. Like as then the parts of the ſame body, though they haue diſtinct offices, and one more excellent then an other, yet no parte is deſpiſed or vnneceſſary, but are all knit to the ſame head, and are partakers of the ſame life and ſpirite: ſo is it in the members of the Church, their offices are diuers in the bodie of the Church, but all vnited by one and the ſame ſpirite to the head Chriſt: if they be all one bodie, then conſequently one entire inheritance of Chriſt. Auguſtine thus writeth concerning this name, Cleros, qui ſunt in eccleſiaſtici miniſterij gradibus ordinati, ſic dictos puto, quia Matthias ſorte electus eſt, in Pſal. 67. Clerkes, which ſerue in the Minſterie, I thinke, were ſo called, becauſe Matthias was choſen by lot. See then, they are not called Clerkes, ſo much becauſe they are the Lords lot, but becauſe they are allotted and choſen out of the people for that ſeruice: as the Leuites are called the peoples gift, Numbers 18.6. and the Prieſts office an office of ſeruice ; not of more merite or holineſſe, or an office of Lordly preeminence, but of miniſterie and ſeruice. Auguſtine therefore hath a notable ſaying: Non nos digni, qui pro vobis oremus; vos indigni, qui pro nobis oretis, *Pſal.*68. We are not onely worthie to pray for you, and you vnworthie to pray for vs: Auditoribus ſuis, quibus verbum prædicauit, ſe commendauit Apoſtolus, ibid. The Apoſtle commendeth himſelfe to their deuout prayers, to whom he preached. By this their error is confuted, that thinke the prayer of a Prieſt to be the rather heard for the merite and dignitie of his calling, howſoeuer elſe hee be affected in his prayer. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that a prayer not vnderſtood profiteth by the vertue of the worke wrought, and the office of the Prieſthood, *Annot.*1.*Corinth.*14.*ſect.*10.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie, Concil. Aquiſgranenſ.ex Iſidor. Clericos hinc appellatos doctores noſtri dicunt, quia Matthias ſorte electus eſt: Our doctors hold that Clerkes are ſo called, becauſe Matthias was choſen by lot: not that they were by any ſuch lot of difference ſeuered from the reſt of the people. So is the name Clergie expounded in the Ciuill law. *lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*32.*authentic.*3.1.Cleros dicitur &c. They are ſo called, becauſe they muſt be choſen by lot, as Matthias, that is, by diuine election, not humane knowledge: So *decret.*21.*c.*1.the like notation is giuen out of Iſodor.

Colonienſ.part.2.cap.2. Clerici dicuntur, quia de ſorte domini ſunt, &c. Non quidem quòd à ſorte domini laicos ſecludamus, omnes enim qui Chriſto per Baptiſmum & fidem concorporati ſumus populus acquiſitionis eius ſumus, ſed quòd Clerici peculiari quadam ratione miniſterio Dei & Eccleſiæ dedicati ſunt: Clerkes are ſo called becauſe they are of the Lords lot, not that wee do exclude the lay ſort from Gods lot, for all that by Baptiſme and faith are incorporate into Chriſt, are the people of God, but becauſe Clerks after a more peculiar manner are conſecrate to the Miniſterie of God and his Church. This Councel preferreth Clerks before others, onely in reſpect of their outward function in the Church, not for any greater merite or holineſſe.

The ſeale of the holy Martyrs and confeſſors of Gods truth followeth: Walter Brute holy confeſſor: of the Chriſtian prieſthood Chriſt in expreſſe words ſpeaketh but little, To make any difference betweene the prieſts and the reſt of the people; neither yet doth he vſe this name of ſacerdos, or preſbyter *in the Goſpel, but ſome he calleth diſciples, ſome Apoſtles, &c. And S. Paul ſpeaking of Prieſts to Timothie and Titus, ſeemeth not to me to make any difference betweene the prieſts and the people, but that he would haue them to ſurmount other in knowledge and perfection of life, Fox.*pag.496.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: All Chriſtian people in Scripture are called prieſts, as Apocal.1. *He hath made vs kings and Prieſts to God his father: yet ought not all to preach in generall conuentions, yet priuately are they bound for inſtruction of their ſeruants, children, kinsfolke, &c. Fox.*pag.1111. *reſponſ.ad articul.*22.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING THE election and inſtitution of Biſhops and Paſtors.

THis queſtion hath two parts: Firſt, of the election generally of Paſtors and Miniſters: Secondly, of the election of the Biſhop of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE election generally of all Biſhops and Paſtors.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay, that the election of Biſhops neither belongeth to the Clergie, nor the people, but wholly appertaineth to the Biſhop of Rome: as for the people, they haue (they ſay) nothing at all to doe in the election of their Paſtors, or ordaining of them, that neither their ſuffragium, conſilium, or conſenſus, ſuffrage, counſell, or conſent is to be required, *Bellarm.de clericis lib.*1. *cap.*7.&.8. 67. Error.

*Argum.*1. That the people are to be vtterly excluded, thus they would proue it: Aaron was onely elected of Moſes, without conſent of the people: ſo were the Apoſtles by our Sauiour: Ergo, the peoples conſent is not required, Bellarm.

Anſw. Who ſeeth not, that there is great difference betweene ordinary and extraordinary callings? ſuch as the calling of the Apoſtles was, and Aarons at the firſt, though the office of the high Prieſt afterward became ordinary. Alſo it followeth not, the Apoſtles were choſen without conſent of the people, when there were yet no faithfull and Chriſtian congregations, and becauſe they were paſtors of the whole world: Ergo, as well the peoples conſent may be wanting in the election of ordinary Biſhops and Paſtors, which haue their peculiar and proper charges, and there being now many faithfull and well inſtructed congregations. It is one thing to appoint Paſtors for the Church not yet planted, and another thing to conſtitute them in a Church alreadie reformed and inſtructed: for we reade of nations that haue been conuerted to the faith, by thoſe that had no calling of the Church, as a great nation of the Indians was by Ædeſius and Frumentinus, *Ruffin.lib.*1.9.and the Iberians by a captiue woman,*Ruffin.*1.10.

*Argum.*2. The people cannot iudge, who are fit to be paſtors, and their elections are tumultuous,as we may reade,how in the election of Damaſus there were 137,perſons ſlaine;and therefore it is not meete,nor conuenient, that the matter ſhould be committed to the people, either to elect,or ordaine: but whatſoeuer they did in times paſt, it was either by ſufferance or negligence of the Biſhops,*Bellarm.cap.*7.

Anſw. Firſt,meere popular elections were neuer allowed in any well ordered Church,neither was the allowance of their paſtors wholly referred to the people,neither did they beare the chiefe ſtroke, but the election was moderated by the wiſedome and grauitie of the Clergie, *Fulk.Tit.*1. *ſect.*2. Secondly, the queſtion is not betweene vs, concerning the ordaining of paſtors, for that belonged onely to the Elderſhip,and was done by laying on of their hands,1.Tim.4.14.but concerning the electing and chuſing of them.Thirdly,neither doe we diſpute, whether it be conuenient and neceſſarie at all times, but whether it be lawfull: for neither doe we affirme, that it is of the eſſence and ſubſtance of the calling of miniſters to be choſen by the voyces of the people: as though they were no miniſters, but vſurpers and intruders that are not ſo called: but whether it hath been at any time,and may yet be lawfull,to require the conſent of the people. Fourthly,it is falſe,that the people had this right by vſurpation,or els ſufferance of the paſtors:for Cyprian ſaith, it did,*De diuina authoritate deſcendere,lib.*1.*Epiſtol.*4.That this cuſtome was grounded vpon diuine authoritie, yea it was eſtabliſhed by the lawes of Kings: as there was a law made by Lodouicus Pius King of France, that Biſhops ſhould be ordayned by the free election of the Clergie and the people.

*Argum.*3. Therefore (ſay they) elections of Biſhops ought to be at the Popes aſſignement: for vnto Peter was committed the care of the vniuerſall Church, when hee badde Peter feede his ſheepe. Hereupon they are bold to affirme, that we haue neither true Biſhops nor Miniſters,becauſe they are not lawfully ſent, that is, as they interprete it, from the See Apoſtolike, *Bellarm. lib.*1.*cap.*3.8.*Rhemiſt.Rom.*10.*ſect.*5

Anſw. Firſt, the charge giuen to Peter beareth no ſuch ſenſe:that becauſe Chriſt bad him feede his ſheepe, therefore he and his ſucceſſors ſhould onely haue authoritie to conſecrate Miniſters: for if Peter had it by this graunt, other Elders and Paſtors had it in like ſort, to whom it as well appertained to feed the flocke of Chriſt, 1.Pet.5.2. And againe not Peter onely,but the reſt alſo of the Apoſtles did ordaine and conſecrate Paſtors and Elders, as it ſhall be ſhewed afterward.

Secondly,neither is it a good reaſon to condemne our Miniſterie,becauſe it hath not the Popes allowance: for euery Church hath a lawfull calling within it ſelfe, without ſending to forraine Prelates for their approbation. And if you aſke vs by whome our Miniſters were firſt called,ſeeing there were none but popiſh Biſhops in euery Church: we anſwere; that ſome had their calling in the popiſh Church, which afterward being more effectually called of God, became profitable teachers of the Goſpell. Neither is it neceſſarie, that the Church ſhould alwayes be bound to an ordinarie calling; when as the ſtate of the Church is ſo corrupted, and the gouernment thereof,that no good calling can be obtained: for then the Lord raiſeth vp ſome extraordinarily for the reformation of the Church, ſuch as we doubt not, but Luther was. In which and the like caſes, the ordinarie impoſition of hands by the Paſtors of the Church, being heretikes and idolaters, as it was in time of poperie,is not to be expected or ſtayed for, Plura apud Fulk.annot. Rom 10.*ſect.*5.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning election or choiſe to be made by the people,we are to put three caſes.Firſt,meere popular elections, wherein the people by multitude of voyces ſhould carry all away, are in no caſe, nor at any time to be allowed. Secondly, for the people to giue their voices in elections, which are moderated and gouerned by the graue and wiſe Paſtors and Elders, it hath been vſed in times paſt,and may be againe,and is in ſome places, where the ſtate of the Church, the condition and qualitie of the people will beare it. Thirdly,though the people neither beare ſway in the election,nor giue their ſuffrages and voyces,yet it is conuenient and requiſite,that their conſent ſhould be had, and publike teſtimonie: for the Miniſters ſhould bee ſuch as haue a good report of all, 1.*Tim.*3.7. *Fulk. Act.*14.*ſect.*3. But as for the Pope, let him keepe himſelfe, as a Biſhop in his owne Dioceſſe, hee hath nothing to doe with ordayning or electing of Miniſters in other Churches.

*Argum.*1. Numb.20.27.Eleazar was made Prieſt in Aarons place,in the ſight of all the congregation: Ergo, Miniſters ought to be ordained publikely in the ſight of the congregation: not in corners or priuate places, as they vſed to doe in time of Poperie: yea it is recorded of Pope Iohn the thirteenth, that he ordained Deacons in a ſtable. And herein they offended manifeſtly againſt their owne rules. For their decree is, Nullus inuitis detur Epiſcopus,ſed Clerici & plebis conſen-

pap.diſtin.63.
cap.cleri.

ſus & deſiderium requiratur: Let no Biſhop be thruſt vpon any againſt their wils, but let the conſent and deſire of the people and Clergie be knowne.

*Argum.*2. We haue the example of the Apoſtles, Act.1.& 6.14.23. When Matthias was elected, the whole multitude was called together: and Act.6. the deacons were choſen by the whole multitude: Ergo, the people had an intereſt in times paſt in the election of Church officers: and this example of the Apoſtles may ſafely and lawfully be followed of the Church, when time and place ſerueth.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, the election of Deacons and Paſtors is not all one, neither is there the like reaſon. Anſw. They are both publike officers for the good of the Church; and therefore if the people haue any intereſt in the one, why not in the other? Secondly, this was done by the grant and ſufferance of the Apoſtles. Anſw. Yea the Apoſtles called them together, but by the direction of the holy Ghoſt: as Act.15. when the Church was aſſembled together vpon another occaſion, it is ſaid, it ſeemed good to vs, and the holy Ghoſt. Againe, in the election, beſide impoſition of hands, prayer was vſed, which was a chiefe part of that action: but the people had their intereſt in publike prayers, as being part of the congregation, and were not admitted thereunto at the pleaſure and will of men: wherefore it is not true, that it was a meere grant of men, that the people might be preſent at elections, but it ſo ſeemed good to the Apoſtles thereto directed by the ſpirit of God.

Now, whereas Bellarmine gaue vs this anſwere before, concerning the election of Deacons, that the reaſon is not alike betweene them and Paſtors: we do oppoſe the election of Matthias into the place of Iudas, no Deacon, but an Apoſtle, that it was done by the conſent and ſuffrage of the whole Church. Ergo the conſent of the people is requiſite in the election of Miniſters.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Firſt, this was done not of neceſſitie, but by toleration from Peter.

Contra. Three things are ſet downe, which were done in this action by the whole aſſembly. verſ.23. They preſented two: verſ.24. They prayed: verſe 26. They gaue forth their lottes: if any one of theſe was by permiſſion or ſufferance, then the reſt alſo: if they preſented by leaue, then they prayed alſo by licence, which were very abſurd. Againe, it is too great boldneſſe for them to imagine a licence granted from Peter, where the Scripture maketh no mention of any ſuch thing; and to the Apoſtles here aſſembled, which in commiſſion were equall vnto Peter.

Secondly, ſaith he, this was not ſo much an election, as a poſtulation or requeſt vnto God, that one might be choſen in Iudas place.

Contra. There is both an election and a poſtulation: the election is of two, which were preſented out of the whole number; the poſtulation is, that God would declare his will concerning thoſe two, which of them ſhould haue Iudas Apoſtleſhip.

Thirdly, ſaith he: one example doth not proue a thing to be de iure diuino: by diuine right. Bellarmine ibid.

Contra. Firſt, as one precept of Scripture as well proueth, as many precepts of the ſame thing: ſo alſo one act and example of the Apoſtles is of diuine authoritie, as well as many in the ſame caſe: for their actes proceeding of the ſame ſpirite, are euery one of the ſame power: vnleſſe they will ſay, the Apoſtles erred in ſome of their actes, wherein they were directed by the ſpirit of God, as they were in this, and by the warrant of Scripture. Secondly, if one example out of Scripture proue not the lawfulneſſe of the act; then both Chriſts fact in whipping out of the Temple, and Paules reprehenſion of Peter may be doubted of, being both but once done; and many other things beſide, whereof we finde but ſingle examples in Scripture: which were a great blaſphemie to ſay. Thirdly, yet to ſatisfie them to the full, we haue more then one example for the election of the people: as Act 6. The Deacons were ſo elected: act.14.23. Elders ordayned by election in euery citie.

*Argum.*3. But as for the right of elections in the Pope, it hath no ſhew of reaſon: for be it that Peter had onely the right of conſecration amongſt the Apoſtles, you doe but flatter your ſelues in thinking, that whatſoeuer right was in Peter, it muſt needes be in the Pope: for he is not Peters ſucceſſor, as we haue ſhewed before at large. But we will hold you rather to this point: that all the Apoſtles had as full right to ordaine and conſecrate by laying on of handes, as Peter had. Looke Act.6.6.& Act.13.3.&.Act.14.23. And if the Pope cannot haue all that which Peter had, much leſſe can he be capable of that which Peter neuer had.

*Argum.*4. We haue had good experience in England, of the Popes great diſcretion and wiſedome, in collation of ſpirituall preferments, and ordaining of Biſhops. About *anno.*1253. the Pope wrote a very imperious and commanding letter to the good Biſhop of Lincolne, Robert Groſthead, to beſtow a Canonſhip in Lincolne vpon his nephew, a boy; for ſo Popes call their baſtards: but he ſuffered the repulſe for that time. In the time of Edward the third, and Richard the ſecond, a certificate was ſent vp into the Chauncerie, of ſuch Eccleſiaſticall dignities, as were poſſeſſed by ſtrangers not inhabiting the land: and there were found aboue fourtie Deanries, Archdeconries and prebends, and thoſe not the worſt, ſome worth one hundred, ſome two hundred, nay ſome foure hundred pound by the yeere; the Archdeaconrie of Canturburie was valued at ſeuen hundred Florences by the yeere, which a Cardinall of Rome had: And there were aboue a dozen Cardinall reſiant at Rome, that had at once the beſt and richeſt dignities in the land: beſide a great ſort of Italian prieſts, and others, that were beneficed in England. By this it may appeare, what good choiſe the Pope-holy father of Rome was wont to make in beſtowing Church dignities: and it were pittie but he ſhould haue the ordering of them ſtill, he did ſo wel diſpoſe of them when he had them.

5 Let Auguſtine ſpeake, who growing now old, was deſirous to knowe his ſucceſſor while he liued: he went not to Rome for the matter; but aſſembling the Church together at Hippo where he was Biſhop; in the preſence of two Biſhops beſide, and ſeuen Presbyters or Elders, Aſtante clero & frequenti populo, The whole Clergie, and a great ſort of people ſtanding by: Auguſtine himſelfe began firſt and ſaid, Preſbyterum Eradium mihi ſucceſſorem volo: I would haue Eradius Presbyter to be my ſucceſſor. Afterward, hearing how the people did approue and like of his motion, he deſired them to ſubſcribe to that which was done, Rogo vt dignemini geſtis ſubſcribere, qui poteſtis. And when they held their peace, he vrged them further, ſaying, Hîc mihi reſponſione veſtra opus eſt, de hac aſſenſione aliquid acclamate: I muſt needes haue you make ſome anſwere, and teſtifie your conſent by your acclamation: A populo acclamatum eſt, fiat, fiat, dictum vicies quinquies: The people cryed out, let it be as thou haſt ſaid, let it be, and this was repeated fiue and twentie times, Auguſtin. Epiſtol. 110. By this example it appeareth, though the people made not the choyſe, yet their conſent was demaunded. And thus a Biſhop was elected, and no word ſent vp to Rome at all.

Breuicul.collation.2.cap.5.

Neither was it the cuſtome of the Church ſo to doe in thoſe dayes: for whereas the Donatiſts obiected againſt Cecilianus Biſhop of Carthage, becauſe he ſtayed not to be ordained of the chiefe Biſhop of Numidia, Vt princeps Epiſcopus à principe ordinaretur: That one chiefe Biſhop might be ordained of another: Auguſtine anſwered, that there was another cuſtome of the Catholike Church, Vt non Numidiæ, ſed propinquiores Epoſcopi, Epiſcopum eccleſiæ Carthaginis ordinarent: That not the Biſhop of Numidia, but thoſe Biſhops that were neereſt at hand, ſhould ordaine the Biſhop of Carthage. So we ſee, they were not onely bold to chooſe an inferiour Biſhop, as was Eradius of Hippo, without the Popes conſent: but they would aduenture to ordaine a chiefe Metropolitane Biſhop euen of Carthage, without the Popes leaue.

The teſtimonie of antiquitie herein is plentifull: Anacletus epiſtol.2. Eiectionem ſummorum ſacerdotum ſibi Dominus reſeruauit, licèt electionem illorum bonis ſacerdotib, & ſpiritualib. populis conceſſiſſet: God hath reſerued to himſelfe the eiection or depoſition of the chiefe prieſts, though he hath granted the election of them to good miniſters, and faithfull people.

Concil. Carthaginenſ.3. can.22. Nullus ordinetur Clericus non probatus vel Epiſcoporum examine, vel populi teſtimonio: Let none be ordained a Clergie man, vnleſſe he be firſt examined of the Biſhop, or approued by the teſtimonie of the people.

Leo epiſtol.90. cap.1. Nulla ratio ſinit, vt inter epiſcopos habeantur, qui nec à Clericis ſunt electi, nec à plebib. ſunt expetiti. There is no reaſon, that they ſhould be counted Biſhops, which are neither choſen of the Clergie, nor deſired of the people.

Concil. Parrhiſienſ. can.8. Nullus ciuib. inuitis ordinetur epiſcopus, niſi quem populi & Clericorum electio pleniſſima quæſierit voluntate: Let no Biſhop be ordained againſt the will of the people or citizens, but ſuch an one, as the Clergie ſhall chooſe, and the people deſire. By theſe teſtimonies of Councels, and of the Biſhops of Rome themſelues, and many more, which might be alleadged, it doth and may further appeare; that the intereſt of election is not in the Pope, but that in former times both the voice of the Clergie and aſſent of the peoples was required.

We haue here alſo teſtimonie of both the lawes: for although tumultuous, turbulent and meere popular elections are condemned, as Cod. lib.9. tit. 30. *l.*2. Leo the Emperour made a law, that he which did tumultuouſly gather voices of the multitude to obtaine any dignitie, ſhould both looſe the place he ſought, and be ſeuerely puniſhed likewiſe. diſtinct.63. c.6. Non eſt permittendum turbis, &c. The election of Clerkes muſt not be left to the multitude. 1. decret. Gregor. lib.1. tit.6. c.2, Electus ad clamorem populi. &c. He that is choſen by the confuſed noyſe of the people muſt not be confirmed: for the rude multitude may eaſily be corrupted.

Although then meere popular elections are not to be approued: yet that both the whole Clergie and the people ought to giue conſent in the election of their Paſtors, it is conſonant to both the lawes: *Cod. lib.1. tit.6. leg.*11. Arcadius, ad eccleſiam ſunt promouendi. &c. They muſt be preferred to the gouernment of the Church, that are of the ſame citie, as (they no doubt) which are beſt knowne to the people.

Now the Canon law is moſt pregnant, not onely requiring the preſence of the people, as reſpecting their deſire, but their conſent alſo and election. diſtinct.61. c.13. Nullus inuitis detur Epiſcopus, pus: No Biſhop ought to be thruſt vpon a people againſt their will; the conſent of the Clergie and people muſt be required: *Celeſtin.diſt.*63.11. Gelaſius, Vniuerſi in vnum conſentiant: All muſt conſent to elect one: *cap.*12.Stephan.Conuocato Clero & populo: The Clergie and people beeing called together, let ſuch an one be choſen &c. and many ſuch Canons there are beſide.

The holy Martyrs alſo conſent with vs. Thomas Benet: if the Biſhop of Rome would doe all things after Gods ordinance, then would I beleeue him to be a good Biſhop ouer his owne Dioces, and to haue no further power. Fox.pag.1039.

Maiſter Philpot holy martyr: By the word of God the Biſhop of Rome hath no more authoritie, then the Biſhop of London hath, pag.1811. He hath therefore no right to meddle in the election of other Biſhops, that belong not to his charge.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the election of the Pope.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay, that the ſureſt and ſafeſt way and ſimply the beſt, is that which is now vſed, to chooſe the Pope by, namely, by the Colledge of Cardinals: That whoſoeuer is by two parts of the ſayd Cardinals elected, is rightly the ſucceſſor of Saint Peter, and the vndoubted Pope of Rome.

68. Error.

Argum.1. None can better iudge who is fitteſt for the papacie, then they which are the Popes Counſellers, and know the affaires of the Church. Ergo, the Cardinals the meeteſt men. *Bellarm. lib.*1 de Clericis.cap 9.

Anſw. Firſt, you take that for graunted, which we inſtantly deny, that the Cardinals of Rome are alwayes the wiſeſt and moſt learned: as though a Cardinals hat doth bring with it ſuch aboundance of vertue and learning: nay a title of a Cardinalſhip is ſooner obtayned by fauour then deſert, by maſſes of money, then weight of learning. And good reaſon, ſeeing that the Cardinals make a gaine of the papacie: For an Aſſe loaden with golde ſhall ſooner enter into the Caſtle of Saint Angell, then any other comming with a cart loade of bookes: they that reade Cardinall Wolſeyes inſtructions ſent to Steuen Gardiner at Rome, what great promiſes of money and preferment, may eaſily vnderſtand the diſpoſition of the Pope-holy Electors of Rome: Seeing they make a gayne of the Pope, why ſhould he not ſet Cardinalſhips to ſaile? For if Iacobus Archbiſhop of Mentz payed 27000. florences for his pall, what thinke you a Cardinals hat is to be valued at, which is a higher degree, then either Biſhop or Archbiſhop?

Fox.pag.992.

We ſay then, that there may be wiſer and more learned men of the Clergie in Rome then the Cardinals: and that the whole Clergie may better iudge, then a few ambitious Cardinals, and are freer from corruption: And as concerning the affaires of the Church, Biſhops are like to know better, what appertaineth to the office of a Biſhop, then Prieſts and Deacons, as moſt of the Cardinals are.

Secondly, how fit the Cardinals for the moſt part are, to manage the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church, it may appeare by the notable choice, that the Popes haue made of their aſſiſtants. Sixtus the fourth made Petrus Ruerius his nephew a Cardinall, a young man of 26. yeeres: who in ryot and wantonnes in two yeeres ſpent vpon harlots two hundred thouſand crownes, and dyed miſerably being waſted and conſumed by his inordinate luſt.

Ex Balæo, Functio & alijs.

Leo the tenth was made Cardinall, being but thirteene yeeres olde, by Innocentius the eight: Paulus the third made Alexander Farneſius his ſonne or baſtard Cardinall being a very youth, to whom he appointed a Tutor and gouernor. Iulius the third brought Innocentius a ſtripling his minion, into the order of the Cardinals, who when they ſaid vnto him, What doe you ſee in this young man, worthy of this honor? he anſwered, what did you ſee in me, when you choſe me to be Pope? Thinke you not now that theſe Cardinals, both for their youth, being void of experience, and for their lewd diſpoſition, being without any good inclination, were very meete and fit perſons to be employed in the waightie regiment of the Church?

Argum.2. It appeareth by the continuance to be the beſt: for it hath now endured foure hundred yeeres: and by the effect, for the See of Rome hath neuer been freer from Schiſmes, then ſince this order was taken for the Popes election, Bellarm.cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, how can it be of ſuch long continuance, ſeeing by your owne confeſſion, it exceedeth not foure hundred yeeres? Nay who will not graunt, that the ancient order of electing the Biſhop of Rome by the whole Clergie, and conſent of the people of Rome, with the confirmation of the Emperour, which laſted a thouſand yeeres, till this new deuice came in place, was farre more ancient and durable? Secondly, how well the Cardinals election hath kept the See of Rome from Schiſme, experience of former times teacheth vs: In Pope Vrbanus time the ſixt, there were two Popes many yeeres together; and one did ſo deadly purſue the other, that Pope Vrbane at once cut off fiue of the Cardinals heads: might they not haue great ioy, thinke you,in chooſing ſuch a Fox.pag.434. Pope ? In the time of Pope Iohn the 23. there were three Popes at once. In the Councell of Baſile Pope Eugenius was depoſed, and counted an heretike. And yet for all this, the Cardinals are the onely preſeruers and maintainers of the peace of the Apoſtolike See.

The Proteſtants.

Though it doe not greatly concerne vs, what manner of election is vſed at Rome: (for vnto vs the election of the meaneſt Biſhop in the land is as much, yea and more, then the glorious enthronizing of the Pope:) yet it ſhall not be amiſſe briefly to ſhew, how theſe great antiquaries are become enemies of antiquitie, refuſing the ancient manner of election, which was vſed in Rome for 1000. yeeres together, namely, that the Biſhop there ſhould be elected by the whole Clergie,with the conſent of the People and confirmation of the Emperor.

*Argum.*1. It is a plaine caſe, that till the yeere 685. in all their elections they waited for the authoritie of the chiefe Magiſtrate, the Emperour, or the deputie of Italie. But then came in the conſtitution of Conſtantine the fourth, that their elections ſhould be firme without the conſent of the Emperor. Yet for all this conſtitution, *anno.*810. Pope Adriane gaue vnto Carolus magnus full authoritie to elect the Biſhop of Rome: and *anno.*961.Leo the ninth,made the ſame grant to Otho firſt Germane Emperour. This continued in force till Alexander the ſecond his time, who was elected firſt without the Emperours conſent, but afterward repenting of it, he proteſted openly, that he would be no longer Pope vnleſſe he had the Emperors conſent; and thereupon he was depoſed by Hildebrand, and throwne into priſon. This was more then 1000.yeeres after Chriſt: ſince that time the Emperour hath been excluded,and ſhut out from their elections: But all this while notwithſtanding,though the Emperours conſent ſometime was not neceſſary,yet the Clergie of Rome,and the people retained their ancient priuiledge ſtill. So we ſee by this new erection of the Colledge of Cardinals, there is great iniurie offered to three eſtates, the Emperour, the Fox.pag.4.5. Clergie of Rome,the people.

*Argum.*2. This new forme of election hath not ſtood continually in force, ſince it was firſt founded. For in the Councell of Conſtance,*ſeſſ.*40.they proceeded to the election of a new Pope, not ſtaying for the reſt of the Cardinals, but appointing other electors in their roume. In the Councell of Baſile,the Duke of Sauoy was elected Pope, by other electors, then Cardinals: Nay there was but one Cardinall,namely Arelatenſis;the reſt were Biſhops,Doctors,and others. And though they will ſay perchance that this Pope was choſen in a ſchiſme,for they hold the Councell of Baſile to be ſchiſmaticall: yet they cannot,neither doe denie, but that Pope Martin the 5.who was choſen at Conſtance,was rightfully Pope.

Gregorie the 7.was eſtabliſhed in the Papacie, and yet not one of the Cardinals conſented to his election. Iohn the 24.became a Pope after this manner: When the Cardinals were aſſembled together to chuſe them a Pope, they deſired him to nominate whom he would to bee Pope,for they feared him: then he made this anſwere, Date mihi chlamydem Petri, & ego dabo Pontifici futuro, Giue me S.Peters robe or cloake,and I will giue it to him that ſhall be our Biſhop: and ſo he put it vpon his owne ſhoulders,and ſaid,Behold your Pope,ex Balæo,Functio,& alijs. Thus wee ſee that the Popes and Papiſts themſelues haue been the chiefe ouerthrowers and peruerters of this new forme of election by the Cardinals.

3 In Auguſtines time the reſt of the Biſhops of Italie neere vnto Rome,ſhould ſeeme to haue had ſome intereſt in the election of the Biſhop: Romanæ eccleſiæ Epiſcopum non ordinat Epiſcopu aliquis Metropolitanus,ſed de proximo Oſtienſis Epiſcopus: The Biſhop of Rome is not ordained by any Metropolitane,but by the Biſhop of Oſtia that is neere at hand,*Breuicul.collation.lib.*2.*cap.*5.

Other monuments alſo of antiquitie wee haue for this matter: When as Syluerius was made Pope without the Emperours conſent, Sacerdotes ſecundum morem antiquum non ſubſcripſerunt: The Clergie men, according to the old cuſtome, refuſed to ſubſcribe to his election: anno 537.ex pontifical.

Hadrianus 1.anno 796. gaue vnto Charles the Emperour, poteſtatem eligendi Papam, power to chuſe the Pope. Gregorie the 4. confirmed the ſame graunt,anno 830. and refuſed to bee Pope,till the Emperour had confirmed his election.

Alexander the 2. who a little before in a Councell held at Mantua,had decreed that the Pope ſhould be choſen onely by the Cardinals; yet afterward repented him, and publikely in a ſermon profeſſed, that he would not continue in the Papacie without the Emperours licence. Gregorie the 7.the greateſt enemie to the Imperiall crowne and dignitie,who vtterly excluded the Emperour from the election of the Pope,yet lying on his death-bed repented him, and deſired a Cardinall to goe to the Emperour,and craue pardon of him for all the wrongs he had done him: Sic Antoninus,Vincentius,de actis huius Papæ.

We haue alſo euident teſtimonie herein of their owne law, that the Biſhop of Rome ought not to be elected without the conſent of the Emperour,the Clergie,and people.

Firſt, for the right and authoritie of the Emperour in the election of the Pope: Hadriane, with the conſent of a great Synode, conſiſting of an 153. Biſhops and Abbots, aſſembled in the palace of Laterane, did giue vnto Charles the Emperour, poteſtatem eligendi pontificem, power to chuſe the Biſhop of Rome, diſt.63.ca.22. So likewiſe Leo Biſhop of Rome in a Synode at Rome, with the conſent of the Clergie and people of Rome, did giue the ſame authoritie to Otho the Emperour, diſt.63.ca.23.

And for the conſent of the whole Clergie, and not of the Cardinals onely, we reade, diſt.79.c.1. Nicholaus 2. in this manner, Si quis Apoſtolicæ ſedi, &c. If any man be inthronized into the See Apoſtolicall, without the generall conſent of the Cardinals, and of other religious Clerks, he is not Apoſtolicall, but an Apoſtata.

And thirdly, the intereſt of the people together with the Clergie in the election of the Pope, is warranted by their owne Canons: Cauſ.7. quæſt.1.ca.5. Cornelius was choſen, de Clericorum pene omnium teſtimonio, de plebis, quæ tunc affuit ſuffragio, &c. by the teſtimonie of the Clergie, and the ſuffrage of the people, that was preſent. And diſtinct.26.ca.1. there is a latter decree of Pope Nicholas, that beſide the choice of the Cardinals, reliquus Clerus & populus ad conſenſum nouæ electionis accedat: the reſt of the Clergie and people ſhould giue conſent to the new election. Thus wee ſee that this new deuice of electing the Pope by Cardinals, is againſt the ancient practiſe of the Church and their owne Canons.

Iohn Wicklif holie confeſſor, was condemned for ſaying, that the election of the Pope by Cardinals, was inuented and brought in by the diuell, *articul.*40. Seeing then we haue both the teſtimonie and practiſe of Popes to the contrarie, againſt this manner of election by Cardinals, and the truth alſo ſealed by holy men; we haue no reaſon but to reiect and diſcommend the ſame.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING THE degrees and orders of Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters.

This queſtion hath three parts: firſt, of the ſeuen degrees of popiſh prieſthood. Secondly, of the difference and diſtinction of Biſhops and other Miniſters. Thirdly, of the inſtitution of Cardinals, a new degree of the popiſh Clergie.

THE FIRST PART OF THE SEVEN degrees or orders Eccleſiaſticall.

The Papiſts.

Though they haue diuers degrees of dignitie in the Church, as Popes, Cardinals, Patriarches, Primates, and ſuch like: yet they make but ſeuen Eccleſiaſticall orders, which are conferred ſolemnely by certaine rites and ceremonies by their Biſhops: And they are theſe, Oſtiarij, doore-keepers, Exorciſtæ, Exorciſts, Lectores, Readers, Acolythi, Attenders, Subdiaconi, Subdeacons, Diaconi, Deacons, and the higheſt degree, Sacerdotes, Prieſts; vnto the which all the other are but riſes and ſteps. All theſe they maintaine to bee eccleſiaſticall orders, and to bee retained in the Church, Bellarm.cap.11.Rhemiſt.1.Tim.3.ſect.7. 69. Error.

They haue no proofe nor warrant out of Scripture, for theſe friuolous orders, but onely a ſhew of antiquitie, as they alleage certaine Canons out of the 4. Councell of Carthage, where ſuch offices are reckoned vp, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, to let paſſe this, that the Councell may bee ſuſpected for the credit thereof, ſeeming wholy to be patched out of the Popes decrees. And whereas Auguſtine with other is ſaid to haue ſubſcribed to this Councell, therein appeareth ſome forgerie: for *Can.*104. it was thus decreed, Crimine adulterij notabuntur, &c. They are touched with the crime of adulterie, that hauing deuoted themſelues vnto God, doe afterward runne to ſecular mariage. Yet Auguſtine is of another iudgement, Non ipſæ nuptiæ talium damnandæ iudicantur: The mariages of ſuch we condemne not or diſanull, but their fraudulent purpoſe, de Bon.viduitat.cap.9. But he that ſaith, ſuch are adulterers, diſanulleth their mariage: therefore Auguſtine would not againſt his owne iudgement haue agreed to this Canon. Secondly, we denie not but they had ſuch offices, as Readers, to reade the text of the Scriptures; Exorciſts to caſt out diuels, which was an extraordinarie gift for the time; Acoluthiſts, yong men appointed to attend vpon the Biſhop for their better inſtruction; Doore-keepers, that kept the entrie of the Church, that no heathen perſon or excommunicate ſhould enter. But theſe were both diuers offices, then are now appointed for them in the popiſh Church: for they make them now, all or the moſt, miniſters and ſeruitors for the idolatrous ſeruice of the Maſſe, which in thoſe daies was not heard of: neither though there were ſuch offices and ſeruices in the Church, were they made orders and degrees of the Miniſterie. Thirdly, they had other offices beſide, which now are not in vſe, no not amongſt the Papiſts: for they had alſo ſingers, labourers, bourers,confeſſors,diggers or Sextons. *Concil.Carthag.*4.*can.*12.there is an eight degree of Pſalmiſts added. *Concil.*1.ſub Sylueſtro 1. there is another order found out, which are there called cuſtodes Martyrum,keepers of the Martyrs. There were alſo foſſarij,diggers and labourers, as appeareth in the Epiſtle of Ignatius. So that if you will make all thoſe offices vſed in time paſt in the Church,ſo many orders of the miniſterie,you muſt make ten or eleuen; more, then you doe acknowledge,or vſe in your Church.

The Proteſtants.

THe queſtion is not betweene vs and our aduerſaries in this place, concerning the titles and dignities annexed to the Miniſterie, as of Biſhops, Archdeacons, Deacons, Prouoſts, but of the ſeuerall orders of the Miniſterie: For Biſhops and other Miniſters doe not differ in order, but in office of gouernment. They hold that there are ſeuen ſeuerall ſuch orders, which haue their ſeuerall rites of conſecration,and peculiar offices in the Church allotted them. But we content our ſelues with thoſe orders onely and degrees as neceſſarie, which the holie Scripture hath commended.

*Argum.*1. As for the names and offices of Subdeacons, Readers, Exorciſts,Acolythi,Doorekeepers,we haue no ſuch warrant out of the Scripture, to make them orders of the Church: and therefore we condemne them. All neceſſarie orders for the edifying and building of the Church, the Scripture hath preſcribed vs,Epheſ.4.11.there are all offices ſet downe needfull for the doctrine,inſtruction,and edifying of the Church,*Fulk.Epheſ.*4.*ſect.*4. Wherefore away with theſe popiſh orders,inuented by men. But as for other offices and ſeruices, which ſhall be thought meete for the affayres and buſines of the Church,they may be retained and kept,but not as new orders of the Miniſterie.

*Argum.*2. Theſe offices are firſt Idolatrous, as they are now vſed among the Papiſts: for the Deacons,Subdeacons,Acolythi,were to attend vpon the Prieſt at Maſſe. Secondly,ſome of their offices were ridiculous;as to ſweepe the Church,to driue out dogs,and to hold a flye-flap of Peacocks feathers,to keepe the flyes from falling into the Communion cup. Thirdly, they were diſtinguiſhed,by ridiculous ornaments and attire, which were proper to euery one of them: as it ſhall appeare now in their deſcription.

Clemens conſtitut.lib.8. cap.15.

From the Prieſt when he was degraded,they tooke the Chalice,patine,and hoſt,that he ſhould haue no power any more to offer ſacrifice: they ſcraped his nayles with a peece of glaſſe, and ſo tooke away his annoynting: and laſtly, they tooke away his prieſtly ornaments, the Cheſile, which ſignified charitie; the Stole, that repreſented the ſigne of our Lord. From the Deacons in their degradation,they took firſt the booke of the Goſpels,and ſo all power to reade the Goſpels: Then they tooke away his Dalmatike,a ſigne of his Leuiticall office, and the white Stole behinde his backe that ſignified innocencie.

From the Subdeacon they tooke the booke of the Epiſtles,that he ſhould haue no more power to reade them; alſo the emptie Chalice, and Subdeacons veſture: his office was to ſerue and miniſter to the Deacons at the Altar.

The Acolythi did light the candles in the Church, and brought wine and water to the Altar in pitchers and bottels: and in his degradation there was taken from him, an emptie flaggon or bottle,and a candleſticke,with a waxe candle put out.

The order of exorciſme was taken away, by depriuing him from power to reade in the booke of exorciſmes.

From the Reader they tooke the booke of Church-lectures or leſſons. Laſt of all, from the Doore-keeper was taken the keyes of the Church: And ſo was he depriued of all power to open or ſhut the Church doores,and to ring the bels, *Ex Fox pag.*2134.

Thus we ſee, how much theſe offices are degenerate from the ancient vſe: Firſt,they are all but Miniſters and attendants for the abominable ſacrifice of the Maſſe, which in thoſe daies was not knowne: for the Acolythus or waiter waiteth vpon the Subdeacon, the Subdeacon vpon the Deacon, and all of them vpon the Prieſt at Maſſe. Secondly, whereas then the Exorciſts had a peculiar grace of God to caſt out diuels: their Exorciſts doe but reade certaine exorciſmes in bookes: their Readers onely reade the text of Scripture; now they reade the Legends of popiſh Saints. Then in time of perſecution,when Chriſtians aſſembled in the night,the waiters had the charge to light the candles: but now they doe light them at noone day.

*Argum.*3. Theſe offices haue not been in vſe theſe many yeeres among the Papiſts themſelues: for many times the Sexton or his boy,doe execute the charge both of Acolythiſts, Oſtiaries and Readers,yea of Deacons and Subdeacons alſo,when the Prieſt with his boy can diſpatch a Maſſe. Neither are theſe orders retained amongſt them, for any ſpeciall ſeruice or office,but onely as preparatories,and ſteps and degrees to the prieſthood,*Fulk.annot.*1.*Timoth.*2 *ſect.*7.

Let vs now conſult with antiquitie: Damaſus ſometime Biſhop of Rome, thus ſaith: Non amplius,quàm duos ordines,&c. Wee know but two orders to haue been among the Diſciples of our Lord: that is, 12. Apoſtles, and 70. Diſciples, Epiſtol.4. And it followeth, Vnde iſte tertius proceſſerit, ignoramus: From whence this third order hath proceeded, wee know not. And that which is brought in without reaſon, muſt bee rooted out, diſtinct.68.ca.5. If Damaſus miſliked of a third order, much more of ſixe or ſeuen new orders: and theſe being inuented without any cauſe or reaſon, by his rule muſt be extirped and rooted out.

And what is to be thought of theſe popiſh degrees, the Councell of Colen aduiſeth vs: Part.3. cap.31. Iam eò ventum eſt, vt 4. illi minores ordines Oſtiarij, Exorciſtæ, Pſalmiſtæ, Lectores, præter nomen nihil in eccleſia retinerent, illorumque loco tenues aliquot homines laici per eccleſiæ prælatos minoris compendij gratia ſubrogantur: It is now come to paſſe, that the foure leſſe orders of Doore-keepers, Exorciſts, Pſalmiſts, Readers, beſide their name, haue no other office in the Church, and in their ſtead ſome ſillie poore fellowes of the lay ſort are appointed by the prelates, by a more compendious way. How then call you thoſe orders, which haue a name without office, and whereof the lay ſort are capable, as it is now practiſed in poperie?

Let vs further ſee how theſe ſeuen popiſh orders may ſtand by their law: Cod.lib.1.tit.5.l.3. Honorius. In eccleſia non debet eſſe maior numerus, &c. There muſt not bee a greater number in the Church, then the goods thereof or reuenewes will ſuffice to maintaine: but few Churches are able to maintaine ſo many orders, nay ſome Churches haue not left ſo much, as to keep one poore Vicar; how then ſhould ſo many vnneceſſarie orders be maintained?

And concerning their owne Canons, beſide the decree of Damaſus alleaged before, diſt.68.c.5. the like decree hath Innocent.3.decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.14.ca.9. Sacros ordines dicimus diaconatum & preſbyteratum, &c. Sacred orders wee call Deacons and Presbyters, for theſe two the Primitiue Church is found onely to haue had: and in the ſame place he denieth Subdeacons to be numbred amongſt the ſacred orders. The very like words hath the Maſter of Sentences, lib.4.diſt.24.l. That the Primitiue Church had but two orders: & de his ſolis præceptum Apoſtoli habemus: and the Apoſtle giueth charge concerning no more, &c.

Now concerning theſe orders in particular: Firſt, that the office of Doore-keepers is not now neceſſarie, but had then ſome vſe, when as Iewes and Gentiles dwelt amongſt Chriſtians: ſee the iudgement of your owne writer, Eſpenc.1.Tim.p.226 g. And in the ſame place he ſheweth out of Chryſoſtome, how it belonged to the office of the Deacon, to admit into the Church, and ſhut out. Alſo your owne Maſter of Sentences ſaith, that Chriſt tooke this office vpon him, when he whipped the buyers and ſellers out of the temple: and that Chriſt, when he ſaid, I am the doore, ſhewed himſelfe to bee the doore-keeper, lib.4.diſt.24.f. But if Chriſt were a doore-keeper, what reaſon haue they to make it the leaſt office in the Church?

The ſecond degree is of Readers; which is not a diſtinct office in the Church: for in ſome places it was the office of the Deacon, in ſome of the Miniſter, in ſome it belonged to the Biſhop to reade the Scriptures, eſpecially on Feſtiuall daies, Hiſtor.tripart.lib.9 cap.39. And Chriſt, whom your Maſter ſaith did fulfill the office of a Reader in his owne perſon, after he had read in the booke did interprete and expound it: ſo that to reade Scripture and expound it, doth belong to the ſame office. And though we denie not, but that it is lawfull, and many times conuenient, for one to reade, and another to preach, as Saint Paul did, Act.13.15. yet for this cauſe they need not bring in a new office into the Church of onely Readers.

The third degree is of Exorciſts: whoſe office was to exorcize infants in baptiſme, that were vexed of euill ſpirits, by adiuring them. Firſt, we ſay that this miraculous gift is now ceaſed in the Church, and the bare name and title thereof onely remaineth. Secondly, this office of exorcizing, S. Chryſoſtome ſaith belonged vnto Deacons: ſic Eſpenc.1.Timoth p.227.i. ſo that a ſpeciall office needed not for that ſeruice. Thirdly, and Origen ſaith, Iudaicum eſt adiurare dæmonia: It was a cuſtome among the Iewes to adiure ſpirits, Tract.35.in Math. And your owne gloſſe ſaith, that Salomon found out a certaine kinde of exorcizing, diſtinct.21.c.1. then can it not bee an office of the Goſpell. Fourthly, Iſidore ſaith, it belonged to Exorciſts to looke to the fabrick and ruines of the Church, de Eccleſiaſt.offic.cap.13. So that they themſelues are vncertaine what the office of Exorciſts ſhould be.

The fourth degree is of Acolythiſts, which are interpreted followers: for ſo the Greeke word ἀκόλουθος, ſignifieth, whoſe office (they ſay) is to attend vpon the lampes or lights of the Church. Firſt, whereas your Maſter ſaith, that they in the old Teſtament did ſhew a forme of this office, that dreſſed the lampes in the temple, lib.4.diſt.24.f. then can it not bee a calling in the new Teſtament, being inſtituted in the old. Secondly, he ſaith in the ſame that Chriſt did beare this office, where he ſaith, I am the light of the world: by the ſame reaſon the Apoſtles alſo were Acolythi, to whom Chriſt ſaid, you are the light of the world. Who ſeeth not what ſimple grounds they haue of their ſuperſtitious and ſuperfluous offices? Thirdly, theſe Acolythi, or Miniſters or attendants, were ſuch as waited vpon the Biſhop in his domeſticall offices, both for greater honour, and to auoide further ſuſpition, they being alwaies witneſſes of the Biſhops acts: which function of the Acolythi, Bellarmine ſaith, that Caluin found out of his owne braine: yet is the ſame alleaged by Eſpenc. out of the Canons, 1.Timoth.p.215.b.

Fiftly, concerning the office of Subdeacons: firſt it is certaine, that they were employed as cariers of letters vnder the Biſhops, by whom they ſent their epiſtles and meſſages, as Eſpenc. ſheweth out of S. Cyprian, Comment.in 1. *Timoth p.*214.a. But this was no Eccleſiaſticall function, and therefore they were no Eccleſiaſtical officers. Secondly, I haue ſhewed before out of the decree of Innocentius, that Subdeacons in times paſt were not counted amongſt the ſacred orders.

Thus we ſee what ſmall warrant the Church of Rome hath for theſe fiue ſuperfluous orders: as for the other degrees of Deacons and Miniſters, wee refuſe them not, though wee denie them to haue any ſuch office to ſerue at the Maſſe Altar: whereof I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake afterward in the Controuerſie as touching the Sacrament of Order: and therefore of purpoſe I doe forbeare in this place.

What the holy Martyrs their opinion was of theſe popiſh orders, and their ridiculous apparell, it appeareth by Doctor Taylor holy Martyr, who when the Biſhop came to degrade him, vtterly refuſed to put on the popiſh prieſtly garments, calling them apiſh toyes, and toying trumperie, fit for boyes to laugh at, Fox pag. 1324.

Biſhop Ridley Martyr, in the like caſe alſo refuſed, calling the aforeſaid veſtures, whereby the popiſh orders are diſtinguiſhed, fooliſh and abominable, and too fond for a vice in a play. pag. 1768.

Biſhop Cranmer alſo, as Boner was buſie in degrading him from the higheſt degree to the loweſt, he mildly ſaid, All this needed not, I had my ſelfe done with this geare long agoe, pag. 1883. Wherefore together with theſe holy Martyrs, wee condemne theſe deuiſed degrees of popiſh orders, with their fooliſh appurtenances, as ſuperſtitious, abominable, and Antichriſtian.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE DIFFErence of Biſhops and other Miniſters.

The Papiſts.

70. Error. WE differ from them in two points: Firſt, they ſay, that Biſhops are not onely in a higher degree of ſuperioritie to other Miniſters, but they are as Princes of the Clergie, and other Miniſters as ſubiects, and in all things to bee commaunded by them. Secondly, they affirme that Biſhops are onely properly Paſtors, and that to them onely it doth appertaine to preach, and that other Miniſters haue no authoritie without their licence or conſent, to preach at all, and that not principally or chiefly, but ſoly and wholy to them appertaineth the right of conſecrating and giuing orders.

For the firſt, for the princely authoritie of Biſhops, whom they would haue obeyed in al things; they wreſt theſe and ſuch like places of Scripture, as 2.Cor.1.9. I write vnto you, to know whether you will be obedient in all things: Ergo, they muſt be abſolutely obeyed.

Anſ. The Apoſtle challengeth onely obedience in ſuch things, as he ſhould commaund agreeable to Gods word: For if I my ſelfe (ſaith he) preach another Goſpell, hold me accurſed, Gal.1. Fulk.annot.1.Cor.2.ſect.3.

Argum.2. Againſt an Elder receiue no accuſation vnder two or three witneſſes, 1.Tim.5.19. Ergo, the authoritie of Biſhops is abſolute and princelike: Videmus Epiſcopum iudicem eſſe preſbyterorum, proinde verum principem: We ſee the Biſhop is the iudge of the Elders: Ergo, a prince ouer them, *Bellar.cap.*14.

Anſw. Firſt, it followeth not, Biſhops haue iuriſdiction and authoritie ouer other Miniſters: Ergo, they are princes ouer them. Can there be no preeminence and ſuperioritie in the Church, but it muſt needes be princelike? Is euery iudge a prince ouer thoſe, which are brought before him to be iudged? 2. Timothie had no ſuch princelike authoritie, for here it is reſtrained and limited, a rule is ſet downe by the Apoſtle which he muſt obſerue: Ergo, his authoritie was not abſolute. Thirdly, S. Paul was ſo farre offe from making Timothie a prince in the Church at Epheſus, that he would rather haue him not to rebuke, but to exhort the Elders as fathers, the younger men as brethren, chap.5.1. Where now is his princely authoritie become, whereas he maketh his ſubiects (as our aduerſaries call inferior Miniſters) his fathers and brethren?

71. Error. For the ſecond, they reaſon thus: the Apoſtles properly had the preaching of the word committed vnto them, Act.6. For other were choſen to attend vpon tables: the Apoſtles alſo onely had the right of laying on of hands, Act.14.23. Ergo, It is proper onely to Biſhops to preach, and to ordaine, who are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, *Bellarm.cap.*13.& 14.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine denieth that Biſhops doe properly ſucceede the Apoſtles, de pontifice lib.4.25. becauſe he would magnifie the Pope his ghoſtly father aboue all Biſhops: but now forgetting himſelfe, he ſaith, Epiſcopi propriè ſuccedunt Apoſtolis, Biſhops doe properly ſucceede the Apoſtles, poſtles, chapter.14. and ſo by this reaſon euery Biſhop hath as full authoritie as the Pope. Secondly, euery godly and faithfull Biſhop is a ſucceſſor to the Apoſtles, wee deny it not, and ſo are all faithfull and godly paſtors and Miniſters: for in reſpect of their extraordinarie calling, miraculous giftes and Apoſtleſhip, the Apoſtles haue properly no ſucceſſors, as maſter Benbridge Martyr ſaith, that hee beleeued not Biſhops to bee the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles, for that they bee not called as they were nor haue that grace: Fox. pag.2046. artic.6. That therefore, which the Apoſtles were eſpecially appointed vnto, is the thing, wherein the Apoſtles were properly ſucceeded; but that was the preaching of the Goſpell: As Saint Paul ſaith, hee was ſent to preach, not to baptize, 1.Corinthians 1.17. This alſo the prophet Eſay ſheweth, where hee ſaith in the name of the Lord: My words, which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeede, nor of thy ſeedes ſeede. Eſay 59.verſe 21. The promiſe of ſucceſſion, wee ſee, is in the preaching of the word, which appertaineth as well to other paſtors and Miniſters, as vnto Biſhops, as afterward ſhall bee declared. Againe, ſeeing in the Apoſtles time Epiſcopus, and Preſbyter, a Biſhop, and a Prieſt, were neither in name nor office diſtinguiſhed, as Maſter Lambert Martyr proueth by that place of Saint *Paul,Tit.*1. where the Apoſtle calleth them Biſhops,verſ.7.whom before verſ.5.he had named Presbyters,Prieſts, or Elders. To this agreeth the Councell *Aquiſgranenſ. cap.*8. collecting thus out of this place: Paulus Apoſtolus Preſbyteros, vt verè ſacerdotes, ſub nomine Epiſcoporum adſeuerat: Paul the Apoſtle doth affirme the Elders or Preſbyters to be true Prieſts or Paſtors vnder the name of Biſhops. It followeth then that either the Apoſtles aſſigned no ſucceſſion, while they liued, neither appointed their ſucceſſors, or that indifferently all faithfull Paſtors and Preachers of the Apoſtolike faith, are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors.

Fulk.Annot. Ioh.20.ſect.3.

Thirdly, at that time when the Deacons were elected, the congregation was at Ieruſalem, neither were there as yet any other Paſtors ordained; and therefore the Apoſtles onely attended vpon preaching of the word: but afterward when they had ordained Paſtors in other Churches, to them alſo fully was committed the word of reconciliation, Epheſ.4.11. Chriſt hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Paſtors and teachers: So that Paſtors and teachers, though ordained firſt by the Apoſtles, yet had their calling of God: and together in their calling, authoritie and commiſſion to preach; neither being once ordained, needed they to expect any further licenſe from the Apoſtles.

And as for the right of ordayning and impoſition of hands, though it were chiefly in the Apoſtles, yet the Paſtors and Elders together with them layde on their hands, Act.13.4. Yea the Rhemiſts confeſſe as much, that when a Prieſt is to be ordered, the reſt of the Prieſts together with the Biſhop do lay on their hands, *Annotat.1.Timoth.*4.18. What doth this elſe ſignifie, but that they haue ſome intereſt in ordayning together with the Biſhop?

The Proteſtants.

First, though we doe admitte, that for auoyding of Schiſme, the Church hath thought it meete, there ſhould be difference in degree and a ſuperioritie among Miniſters, yet your princely dominion which you doe vrge, in no wiſe muſt be admitted.

*Argum.*1. It is contrarie to the rule of Chriſt, Luk.22.25. The Kings of the nations are Lords ouer them, and they that haue authoritie ouer them, are called benefactors. Here our Sauiour forbiddeth, that there ſhould be any ſuch princelike and pompous preeminence among eccleſiaſticall perſons, as there is among ſecular and ciuil gouernors. A ſuperioritie may be graunted, but not as the Prince is ouer his ſubiects: it was ſo in time of poperie, that the people were halfe ſubiects to the Prince and halfe ſubiects to their ſpirituall gouernours: But though we acknowledge other eccleſiaſticall fathers and paſtors, yet we are ſubiects onely to our Prince.

*Argum.*2. S.Peter alſo is flat againſt this princely rule and dominion, Feede the flocke, (ſaith he) not as Lords ouer Gods heritage, but that you may be enſamples, 1.Pet.5.3. But are not they, I pray you, Lords ouer the flocke, that challenge to be Princes?

Let vs ſee what antiquitie ſaith: *Concil. Carthag.4.can.*34. Epiſcopus in quolibet loco ſedens, ſtare preſbyterum non patiatur: Whereſoeuer the Biſhop ſitteth, hee muſt not ſuffer a ſimple prieſt to ſtand before him: and this canon is confirmed in the decrees: *diſtinct.*95.*c.*9. Againe, *can.*35. Epiſcopus in conſeſſu preſbyterorum ſublimior ſedeat, intra domum verò collegam preſbyterorum ſe eſſe cognoſcat: The Biſhop in the aſſemblie of Prieſtes, ought to ſit in the higheſt place; but within the houſe, let him know that hee is but their fellow. This canon alſo is ratified in the decrees. *diſt.*95.*c.*10. Theſe ancient Canons, as they gaue vnto Biſhops ouer their brethren ſome preeminence to auoyd confuſion, ſo they allow them not a princely or lordly authoritie, to ſtay their ambition. See alſo for this point, your owne decrees: *diſtinct.*95.*c.*7. Epiſcopi ſe ſacerdotes eſſe nouerint.&c. Let Biſhops know, that they are Miniſters, not Lords; let them honour their Clergie, as the Clergie, that they againe may be honoured of them, as Biſhops. And againe, *Cauſ.*8.*qu.*1. *c.*20. Illud inferendum eſt,&c. This may be alledged againſt thoſe, Qui de Epiſcopatu intumeſcunt:

which do ſwell with pride becauſe they are Biſhops, thinking that they haue gotten not a miniſteriall, but an imperiall office. &c.

Fox. pag.454.

Secondly, concerning the power of preaching, we affirme, that euery Paſtor once ordayned, hath ſufficient authoritie to preach in his owne flocke and charge, as Iohn Huſſe notably proued to their face out of a certaine gloſſe in the fift booke of the decretals, that when as the Biſhop ordayneth any prieſt, he giueth him alſo therewithall authoritie to preach. We denie not, but when there is iuſt occaſion, this authoritie may be reſtrained by the Church gouernours, and ſo alſo may an euill Miniſter be ſuſpended from his whole miniſterie. But the power before ſpoken of, he hath at his firſt receiuing of orders: We thus ſhew it.

Whatſoeuer belongeth to the office of a Miniſter ſet ouer a flocke or charge, hee receiueth the power thereof when he is ordayned: But to preach the word, belongeth to the office of ſuch: for preaching is properly the feeding of the people.

But ſee the abſurditie of the Papiſts: they ſay it is not proper to the Prieſthood to preach, but onely to haue power to ſacrifice the body of Chriſt: But it is proper to the Biſhop, ſay they, to preach. We anſwere: Firſt, then the Biſhop is properly the paſtor of euery flocke and congregation in his dioceſſe, for he that properly feedeth, is properly the Paſtor: And he that is properly the Paſtor, hath the charge of ſoules properly; yea more, then hath the particular Paſtor: for he is improperly their Paſtor, but as it were the Biſhops ſubſtitute and Vicar. But what Biſhop in the worlde is able to beare ſo great a burthen, to haue the eſpeciall and proper charge of all the ſoules in his dioceſſe? It is not to be denyed, but he hath a charge of their ſoules, as a Chriſtian Prince alſo hath in ſome reſpect of his ſubiects: but to ſay, he is the proper Paſtor, and hath the proper and principall charge of ſoules in teaching and feeding of them (for the queſtion is now of preaching, not of gouerning) who is able to abide it? Secondly, but our Rhemiſts tell vs another tale, that many that are not able to preach, are meete enough to be Biſhops. 1. Timoth.5. *ſect.*13. Ergo, it is not proper to Biſhops neither to preach. I pray you then, for whom is it proper? if neither for Biſhops nor inferiour paſtours, then for none. Thirdly, they make but ſeuen orders of Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, and the prieſthood is the chiefe: for a Biſhop and a Prieſt make but one order, as Bellarmine confeſſeth chapter 11. But to none of all theſe orders it is proper to preach: for ſeeing it is not proper to the prieſt, none of the inferiour orders can challenge it. See then what goodly orders theſe are, which leaue the very chiefe part of the miniſterie vndone, which is the preaching of the word. I thinke their meaning is, that this preaching is not ſo neceſſary a dutie, but may be well ſpared in the Church.

Fox. pag.453.

*Argum.*2. That which a man is bound to do vnder paine of the curſe of God, that hee may lawfully performe in due order without the leaue of men: but a woe is layd vpon them that preach not the Goſpell, where they are bound, 1. Corinthians 9.16. Ergo. Argument. Wicliffi.

*Argum.*3. A man is bound to giue corporall almes to the poore, the needie, the hungry, the thirſtie, neither is he to craue leaue of any: Ergo, much more to teach the ignorant, to comfort the weake, and doe other dueties appertayning to his charge. Argum. Wicliffi.

To theſe agree the decrees of former times: *Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap.*8. ex Iſidor. Preſbyteris, ſicut epiſcopis, diſpenſatio myſteriorum Dei commiſſa eſt; præſunt enim Eccleſiæ Chriſti & in confectione dominici ſanguinis &c. conſortes cum epiſcopis ſunt, ſimiliter & in doctrina populorum, & officio prædicandi, &c. Vnto Prieſts, as well as to Biſhops, is committed the diſpenſation of Gods myſteries, for they are ſet ouer the Church of God, and are partakers with Biſhops, both in the confection of the ſacrament of Chriſts bloud, &c. and in the teaching of the people, and office of preaching.

*Conſtantinop.*8. *can.*8.9. It was decreed thus, that whereas Photius the ſchiſmaticall Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who did vſurpe that See, did extort writings from the Clergie, vnder their owne hands, wherein they promiſed to cleaue to him, and he againe gaue them writings, authorizing them thereby to preach: the Councell thereupon thus determined, Vt liceat omnibus idoneis docere liberè ſine facultate per chirographas, That it ſhould be lawfull for all that were fit to preach without licenſe vnder hand writing.

Likewiſe in their owne decrees, *diſtinct.*95. *c.*6. we thus reade: Nemo hinc Epiſcoporum iraſcatur &c. Let not the Biſhops from henceforth be offended, if the Presbyters or Miniſters exhort the people, if they preach in the Church, &c. He that wil not haue them to do that, which is commanded of God, let him ſay, is any man greater then Chriſt? if the Miniſter do conſecrate the bodie of Chriſt, and bleſſe the Sacrament, ought he not to pronounce the bleſſing vpon the people? And it followeth in the ſame place. Thus by your commandement (ô vnequall prelates) the Miniſter of God doth looſe his office, is depriued of the vſe of his tongue, he is maymed, he hath onely the name of a Miniſter, but the fulneſſe and perfection thereof, which appertaineth to his conſecration, he holdeth not: much more followeth in the ſame place, which may be applyed againſt gainſt popiſh Biſhops,that cut the inferior Miniſters ſhort of the better part of their office,which is to preach the word of God.

Againe: ibid.diſtinct.95.c.7. Peſſimæ conſuetudinis eſt: It is a very bad cuſtome in certaine Churches,for Prieſts to hold their peace in the preſence of the Biſhops,as though they did either enuie, or ſcorne to heare them, contrary to the Apoſtle which ſaith, If any thing be reuealed to another ſitting by, let the firſt keepe ſilence. Thus farre that decree out of S.Hierome.

Maiſter Lambert Martyr. It is lawfull for all Prieſts freely to preach the word, and that at all times,in al places,and to al perſons,although they be not ſent:for al ſuch are choſen to be preachers, and therefore ſent:for of this ſpeaketh Gregory in his paſtorals,ſaying,Prædicationis officium ſuſcipit,quiſquis ad ſacerdotium accedit: Whoſoeuer taketh prieſthood vpon him,taketh vpon him alſo the office of preaching: Fox.pag.1111.reſponſ.ad articul.22.

Maiſter Tindall Martyr, there is but one eſpeciall office that pertayneth to thine orders, and that is to preach the word of God.pag.1253.

Concerning the power of giuing orders: As S.Paul ſpeaketh of the laying on of his hands,2. Tim.1.6. ſo he maketh mention of impoſition of hands by the Elderſhip, 1.Tim.4.14. And the Rhemiſts vpon that place miſlike not the practiſe of the Church,that their Prieſts doe lay on their hands together with the Biſhop vpon his head that is to be ordayned.

Concil. Carthaginenſ.4.can.3. Omnes preſbyteri, qui præſentes ſunt, manus ſuas iuxta manum epiſcopi, ſuper caput preſbyteri ordinandi teneant, Let all the Prieſts that are preſent, hold their hands next to the Biſhops hand vpon his head that is to be ordained.Againe can.24. of the ſame Councell. Epiſcopus ſine concilio Clericorum Clericos non ordinet: The Biſhop muſt not giue orders, but in the preſence and aſſemblie of the Clergie. By this then it is manifeſt, that impoſition of hands doth not wholy and ſolie belong vnto the Biſhop, ſeeing the reſt of the Elders were wont to lay on their hands likewiſe, or the Biſhop in the name of the reſt, Fulk.annot.Tit.1.ſect.2. So that the Elders were not excluded.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS PART, WHETHER THE difference betweene Biſhops and other Miniſters be grounded vpon the Law of God,and inſtitution of the Apoſtles.

The Papiſts.

BEllarmine affirmeth, that the iuriſdiction of Biſhops, as now it ſtandeth in their Church, and the difference betweene them, and other Presbyters, is, iure dinino, grounded vpon the Law of God, and of ſuch neceſſitie, that he holdeth the contrary to be hereſie, and thoſe to be heretikes, that hold this difference to ariſe rather of a politike conſtitution of the Church to auoyd Schiſme, then of the inſtitution of the Apoſtles: lib.1.de Clericis c.14. Yea they hold them to be no Churches at all, which are not vnder the gouernement of Biſhops, but of other ouerſeers, and ſuperintendents: Sanè ego,nec eccleſiam ibi intelligere poſſum &c. Surely I ſee not(ſaith one)how there can be any Church, where there is no Biſhop: Eſpenc.in 1.Tim.194.b. And ſo is it in a late decree of theirs out of the Councel of Paris: diſtinct.93.c.8. Nulla ratione Clerici &c. They in no wiſe are ſaid to be Clerkes,or prieſts, that are not gouerned vnder the diſcipline of any Biſhop; for ſuch the Church in former time called Acephali, men without an head: Which decree if it be ſo vnderſtood, that no Church ought to be without an head,that is, ſome commendable forme of diſcipline and gouernement, then may it well be receiued: but if it be taken ſtrictly, that no Church can be without ſuch Biſhops, as they haue; this were both to condemne the Churches of Geneua, and Scotland, and diuers in Germanie,which haue Superintendents, and no Biſhops at all;as alſo the Church of England, that hath Biſhops, but not ſuch, as theirs are. Let vs ſee ſome of their arguments, for the neceſſary difference and preeminence of Biſhops by the law of God.

Argum.1. In the old Teſtament, there was the high Prieſt as chiefe, vpon whoſe ſentence euery matter depended, and other inferior prieſts vnder his obedience: in the new Teſtament, Biſhops are as the high Prieſts then; and presbyters now, as the inferior prieſts then. Ergo, by the Law of God there is a difference. Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the high Prieſt in the Law was a figure of Chriſt, who is the high Prieſt of the new Teſtament, and chiefe Shepheard. 1.Pet.5.4. and therefore this type being fulfilled in Chriſt,cannot properly be applyed to the external Hierarchie of the Church. Secondly, if euery Biſhop be this high Prieſt, then haue you loſt one of your beſt arguments for the Pope, whom you would haue to be the high Prieſt in the Church. Thirdly, a difference notwithſtanding we grant of prioritie and order,but not of princely dominion, both in the Prieſts of the old law,and the Miniſters of the Goſpel. Fourthly,it is vntrue,that all things were gouerned onely at the will of the high Prieſt, for the other Prieſts alſo were his aſſiſtants, and did debate matters in Councel with them. And this was that συνέδριον, the Sanedrim or Councel, Act.5.34. wherein together with the high Prieſts were aſſembled other Elders alſo, called Preſbyteri, Presbyters, Act.4.8.23. And this one of your owne writers confeſſeth: Et Synagoga, & poſteà Eccleſia ſeniores habuit, &c. Both the Synagogue and afterward the Church had certaine Elders, without whoſe counſell, nothing was done: which Seigniorie, by what negligence it was growen out of vſe, S. Ambroſe modeſtly confeſſeth hee knew not; Eſpenc.in 1.*Timoth.c.5.verſ.*1. Fiftly, S.Hierome reaſoneth thus, that if Moſes, qui potuit ſolus præeſſe: that if Moſes, who might himſelfe onely haue beene Ruler of the people, yet choſe vnto him 70. Elders, together with whom hee iudged the people: ſo ſhould Biſhops and Presbyters in commune regere; gouerne the Church in common, imitating Moſes; Hierom Euag. If Moſes had partners in the gouernement of the ciuill ſtate, there is no queſtion, but the high Prieſt had likewiſe in the eccleſiaſticall.

*Argum.*2. Chriſt ordayned 12. Apoſtles, and 70. Diſciples beſide, betweene whom there was great difference; the Biſhops ſucceed the Apoſtles, the Prieſts come in the place of the Diſciples: Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine here diſputeth not to the point, for he is not onely to proue a ſimple difference and diſtinction, which we graunt: but a Princely preeminence, which hee ſhall neuer ſhew. Secondly, not onely Biſhops, but all faithfull Paſtors and Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: as Ignatius witneſſeth epiſtol.ad Trallianos. Subditi eſtote &c. Be ye ſubiect to the Colledge of the Presbyters, as to the Apoſtles of the Lord: though in the ſame place he compare the Biſhops to Chriſt, the prieſts to his Apoſtles, as noting a difference; yet it is ſufficient, for that purpoſe we alledge it, that they alſo are reſembled to the Apoſtles. Thirdly, that Prieſts ſucceed in the place of the Apoſtles, and that Deacons are in ſtead of the 70. Diſciples: and not, as he ſaith: thus it is euident out of their owne decrees, diſtinct.68.c.5. Damaſus, non amplius, quàm duos ordines, &c. We reade but of two orders among the Diſciples of Chriſt, that is, of the twelue Apoſtles and the 70. Diſciples: And who are now in the place of thoſe, Innocentius ſheweth, *decret.Greg.lib.*1 *tit.*14. *c.*9. Hos ſolos Primitiua Eccleſia &c. The primitiue Church onely had theſe two ſacred orders, of Prieſts and Deacons. Fourthly, his argument concludeth not, Apoſtles were aboue Diſciples: Ergo, Biſhops &c. vnleſſe he do aſſume thus, but Biſhops are Apoſtles: which is denied by Ignatius, who though he were neere to the Apoſtles time, being the third Biſhop of Antioch after Peter, and had ſeene Chriſt after his reſurrection; yet writing to the Antiochians, ſaith, Hæc non vti Apoſtolus pracipio: I do not command theſe things as an Apoſtle.

*Argum.*3. S.Paul ſaith to Timothie: Receiue no accuſation againſt an Elder but vnder two or three witneſſes: 1.Timoth.5. Here Timothie Biſhop of Epheſus, is made iudge of the Prieſts and Miniſters: Ergo, in the Apoſtles time a difference. &c. Bellarm.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, it may be doubted whether Timothie were ſo ordayned by the Apoſtle Biſhop of Epheſus, as now a Biſhop is ſet ouer his dioceſſe: for then the Apoſtle would neuer haue called him ſo often from his charge as he doth, and employed him in the ſeruice of other Churches; as he ſendeth him to Corinthus, 1.Cor.6.10. to the Theſſalonians to confirme their faith, 1.Theſſ.2.2. and to other Churches beſide. It is moſt like, that Timothie had the place and calling of an Euangeliſt, whoſe office was to ſecond the Apoſtles in their miniſterie, and to water that, which the Apoſtles had planted. And that the calling of Euangeliſts and Biſhops, which were Paſtors, was diuers, it appeareth by S.Paul Epheſ.4.11. He hath giuen ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors &c. And that Timothie was ſuch an Euangeliſt, it may be gathered, for that the Apoſtle biddeth him do the worke of an Euangeliſt. 2. Timoth.4.5. Secondly, and againe, ſeeing that Timothie was ordayned by the authoritie of the Elderſhip, 1.Timoth.4.14. which they themſelues tranſlate the Prieſthood; and the Rhemiſts expound it of the ancient practiſe of the Church, when the Prieſts together with the Biſhop lay their hands vpon him that is ordained: *ex Concil.Carthag.4.c.*3. and ſo alſo Iohan.Gropperus their owne bird doth vnderſtand it; to whom alſo conſenteth Eſpenc. in his Commentarie vpon that place: how then could Timothie be a Biſhop ſtrictly and preciſely taken, being ordained by presbyters? Thirdly, but to admit that Timothie was a Biſhop, or at the leaſt, which is all one to the matter in hand, greater then a Biſhop: yet cannot he conclude from hence the princely preeminence ouer prieſts as their ſubiects, and an abſolute and plenarie power in them, the other excluded: for he biddeth Timothie not to rebuke, but to exhort the Elders as Fathers; which Epiphanius vnderſtandeth of elder Miniſters: whereby he giueth no princely dominion to Timothie, but a brotherly ſuperioritie in gentle admonition. Againe, where he ſaith, receiue no accuſation &c. though he ſpeake by name to Timothie, directing his ſpeech to him as the chiefe, yet he excludeth not the reſt: as the holy Ghoſt writing to the Angels and chiefe Paſtors of the ſeuen Churches, Apocal.2.3. implieth the reſt of the Miniſters and Church there, as may appeare by the matter of the Epiſtles, wherein the faults of the whole Church are reproued, and their vertues commended. Neither can it be gathered by thoſe words of the Apoſtle, Lay hands ſuddenly vpon no man, &c. that Timothie had this ſole power in himſelfe: for the Apoſtle would not giue that to him, which he did not take to himſelfe, who aſſociated vnto him the reſt of the Preſbyterie in the ordaining of Timothie, 1.Tim.4.14. but he ſpeaketh to him as the chiefe. Wherefore whatſoeuer yet hath been alleaged, this champion hath failed in the proofe of the princely Monarch of his mitred Biſhops by the worde of God: I will come now to deliuer our owne opinion.

The Proteſtants.

OF the difference betweene Biſhops and Prieſts there are three opinions: the firſt of Aerius, who did hold that all Miniſters ſhould bee equall, and that a Biſhop was not, neither ought to be ſuperiour to a Prieſt, neither that there was any difference at all betweene them: which opinion of his, was counted among other hereſies: *Auguſtin.de hæreſib.cap.*53. *Ephiphan.hæreſ.*75. The ſecond opinion in the other extreame is of the Papiſts, as we haue ſeene, that would haue not only a difference, but a princely preeminence of their Biſhops ouer the Clergie, and that by the word of God: and they vrge it to bee ſo neceſſarie, that they are no Churches, which receiue not their pontificall hierarchie. The third opinion is betweene both, that although this diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts, as it is now receiued, cannot be directly proued out of Scripture; yet it is very neceſſary for the policie of the Church, to auoid ſchiſmes, & to preſerue it in vnitie: Of this iudgement B.Iewel againſt Harding ſheweth both Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and Hierome to haue been; *Defenſ. Apolog.pag.*248. And amongſt the reſt Saint Hierome thus writeth: Apoſtolum perſpicuè docere,&c. That the Apoſtle teacheth euidently, that Biſhops and Prieſts were the ſame: Yet he holdeth this diſtinction to be neceſſarie for the gouernment of the Church: Quòd vnus pòſt electus eſt, qui cæteris præponeretur, in ſchiſmatis factum eſt remedium: That one afterward was choſen, to bee ſet ouer the reſt, it was done to be a remedie againſt ſchiſme: ad Euag. To this opinion of Saint Hierome ſubſcribeth Biſhop Iewel in the place before quoted, and a moſt reuerend Prelate of our Church yet liuing, in theſe words: I know theſe names bee confounded in the Scriptures, but I ſpeake according to the manner and cuſtome of the Church euer ſince the Apoſtles time, *Defenſ. anſw.admonit.pag.*383. Which ſaying is agreeable to that of S. Auguſtine: Secundum honorum vocabula quæ eccleſiæ vſus obtinuit,&c. According to the names of honour, which the vſe or cuſtome of the Church hath obtained, a Biſhop is greater then a Prieſt. So that Auguſtine himſelfe, who was no Aerian. doth ground this diſtinction rather vpon ancient cuſtome, then the Scripture. Now then of theſe three opinions, the two firſt we reiect, the one of the Papiſts we haue alreadie confuted; the other of Aerius commeth now to be examined; the third followeth by our arguments to be confirmed.

Epiſt.19.ad Hieron.

That Aerius was iuſtly condemned of the Church for bringing in a popular equalitie of Miniſters into the Church (though he deſerued not for this opinion onely, to be counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes) thus we make it plaine.

*Argum.*1. There was an order and prioritie amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, though in reſpect of their Apoſtleſhip they were all of one authoritie: much more therefore ſhould there bee an order and degree amongſt the Miniſters of the Church, who are inferiour to the Apoſtles.

The firſt part is thus proued: Act.1. The prioritie of ſpeaking is giuen to Peter, in the election of Matthias. Act.15. The definitiue ſentence is pronounced by S.Iames. Galath.2.7,8. Saint Paul is ordained the chiefe Apoſtle of the vncircumciſion, and Saint Peter of the circumciſion. And amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, ſome were counted the chiefe and eſteemed as pillars, as Iames, Cephas, Iohn, Galath.2.2.9. We alſo graunt, that Peter, when he confeſſed Chriſt for and in the name of the reſt, had a primacie of order, and a prioritie at that time, who alſo for and in the name of the reſt firſt receiued the keyes of the Church. And thus much Cyprian acknowledgeth: Hoc erant cæteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus,&c. The reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame that Peter was, hauing like fellowſhip of power and honour: but the beginning is from one, that the Church may appeare to be one, de ſimplicit.prælator. Wherefore if that among the Apoſtles an order and prioritie may bee graunted, how much more amongſt other Miniſters is a difference to bee admitted?

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, God hath ordained in the Church, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, thirdly teachers, then them that doe worke miracles, after that the gifts of healing,&c. The Apoſtle here aſſigning to ſome the firſt place, to others the ſecond, to ſome the third, and ſo to the fift, euidently ſheweth, that there was a difference, and a preeminence in the gifts and callings of the Church. And ſeeing it cannot be denied, but that the Apoſtles were chiefe and ſuperiour to all other Miniſters: it followeth, that the Apoſtles themſelues allowed a ſuperioritie in the Miniſters of the Church. And although their calling was extraordinarie, and therefore they were the chiefe; yet after their calling ceaſed, and they were tranſlated, an order ſtill for gouernment was to remaine in the Church.

*Argum.*3. 1.Cor.14.33. the Apoſtle ſaith, God is not the author of confuſion, or diſorder: but to haue a popular equalitie amongſt the Miniſters, were the next way to bring in confuſion, if none ſhould bee ruled or directed by other. As S.Hierome well ſaith, Si tollis ordinem tabernaculi: If you with the high Prieſts were aſſembled other Elders alſo, called Preſbyteri, Presbyters, Act.4.8. 23. And this one of your owne writers confeſſeth: Et Synagoga, & poſteà Eccleſia ſeniores habuit, &c. Both the Synagogue and afterward the Church had certaine Elders, without whoſe counſell, nothing was done: which Seigniorie, by what negligence it was growen out of vſe, S. Ambroſe modeſtly confeſſeth hee knew not; Eſpenc.in 1.*Timoth.c.*5.verſ.1. Fiftly, S. Hierome reaſoneth thus, that if Moſes, qui potuit ſolus præeſſe: that if Moſes, who might himſelfe onely haue beene Ruler of the people, yet choſe vnto him 70. Elders, together with whom hee iudged the people: ſo ſhould Biſhops and Presbyters in commune regere; gouerne the Church in common, imitating Moſes; Hierom Euag. If Moſes had partners in the gouernement of the ciuill ſtate, there is no queſtion, but the high Prieſt had likewiſe in the eccleſiaſticall.

Argum.2. Chriſt ordayned 12. Apoſtles, and 70. Diſciples beſide, betweene whom there was great difference; the Biſhops ſucceed the Apoſtles, the Prieſts come in the place of the Diſciples: Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine here diſputeth not to the point, for he is not onely to proue a ſimple difference and diſtinction, which we graunt: but a Princely preeminence, which hee ſhall neuer ſhew. Secondly, not onely Biſhops, but all faithfull Paſtors and Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: as Ignatius witneſſeth epiſtol.ad Trallianos. Subditi eſtote &c. Be ye ſubiect to the Colledge of the Presbyters, as to the Apoſtles of the Lord: though in the ſame place he compare the Biſhops to Chriſt, the prieſts to his Apoſtles, as noting a difference; yet it is ſufficient, for that purpoſe we alledge it, that they alſo are reſembled to the Apoſtles. Thirdly, that Prieſts ſucceed in the place of the Apoſtles, and that Deacons are in ſtead of the 70. Diſciples: and not, as he ſaith: thus it is euident out of their owne decrees, *diſtinct.*68.*c.*5.Damaſus, non amplius, quàm duos ordines, &c. We reade but of two orders among the Diſciples of Chriſt, that is, of the twelue Apoſtles and the 70. Diſciples: And who are now in the place of thoſe, Innocentius ſheweth, *decret.Greg.lib.*1 *tit.*14. *c.*9. Hos ſolos Primitiua Eccleſia &c. The primitiue Church onely had theſe two ſacred orders, of Prieſts and Deacons. Fourthly, his argument concludeth not, Apoſtles were aboue Diſciples: Ergo, Biſhops &c. vnleſſe he do aſſume thus, but Biſhops are Apoſtles: which is denied by Ignatius, who though he were neere to the Apoſtles time, being the third Biſhop of Antioch after Peter, and had ſeene Chriſt after his reſurrection; yet writing to the Antiochians, ſaith, Hæc non vti Apoſtolus præcipio: I do not command theſe things as an Apoſtle.

Argum.3. S. Paul ſaith to Timothie: Receiue no accuſation againſt an Elder but vnder two or three witneſſes: 1.Timoth.5. Here Timothie Biſhop of Epheſus, is made iudge of the Prieſts and Miniſters: Ergo, in the Apoſtles time a difference. &c. Bellarm.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, it may be doubted whether Timothie were ſo ordayned by the Apoſtle Biſhop of Epheſus, as now a Biſhop is ſet ouer his dioceſſe: for then the Apoſtle would neuer haue called him ſo often from his charge as he doth, and employed him in the ſeruice of other Churches; as he ſendeth him to Corinthus, 1.Cor.6.10. to the Theſſalonians to confirme their faith, 1.Theſſ.2.2. and to other Churches beſide. It is moſt like, that Timothie had the place and calling of an Euangeliſt, whoſe office was to ſecond the Apoſtles in their miniſterie, and to water that, which the Apoſtles had planted. And that the calling of Euangeliſts and Biſhops, which were Paſtors, was diuers, it appeareth by S. Paul Epheſ.4.11. He hath giuen ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors &c. And that Timothie was ſuch an Euangeliſt, it may be gathered, for that the Apoſtle biddeth him do the worke of an Euangeliſt. 2. Timoth.4.5. Secondly, and againe, ſeeing that Timothie was ordayned by the authoritie of the Elderſhip, 1.Timoth.4.14. which they themſelues tranſlate the Prieſthood; and the Rhemiſts expound it of the ancient practiſe of the Church, when the Prieſts together with the Biſhop lay their hands vpon him that is ordained: *ex Concil.Carthag.*4.*c.*3. and ſo alſo Iohan.Gropperus their owne bird doth vnderſtand it; to whom alſo conſenteth Eſpenc. in his Commentarie vpon that place: how then could Timothie be a Biſhop ſtrictly and preciſely taken, being ordained by presbyters? Thirdly, but to admit that Timothie was a Biſhop, or at the leaſt, which is all one to the matter in hand, greater then a Biſhop: yet cannot he conclude from hence the princely preeminence ouer prieſts as their ſubiects, and an abſolute and plenarie power in them, the other excluded: for he biddeth Timothie not to rebuke, but to exhort the Elders as Fathers; which Epiphanius vnderſtandeth of elder Miniſters: whereby he giueth no princely dominion to Timothie, but a brotherly ſuperioritie in gentle admonition. Againe, where he ſaith, receiue no accuſation &c. though he ſpeake by name to Timothie, directing his ſpeech to him as the chiefe, yet he excludeth not the reſt: as the holy Ghoſt writing to the Angels and chiefe Paſtors of the ſeuen Churches, Apocal.2.3. implieth the reſt of the Miniſters and Church there, as may appeare by the matter of the Epiſtles, wherein the faults of the whole Church are reproued, and their vertues commended. Neither can it be gathered by thoſe words of the Apoſtle, Lay hands ſuddenly vpon no man, &c. that Timothie had this ſole power in himſelfe: for the Apoſtle would not giue that to him, which he did not take to himſelfe, who aſſociated vnto him the reſt of the Preſbyterie in the ordaining of Timothie, 1.Tim.4.14. but he ſpeaketh to him as the chiefe. Wherefore whatſoeuer yet hath been alleaged, this champion hath failed in the proofe of the princely Monarch of his mitred Biſhops by the worde of God: I will come now to deliuer our owne opinion.

The Proteſtants.

OF the difference betweene Biſhops and Prieſts there are three opinions: the firſt of Aerius, who did hold that all Miniſters ſhould bee equall, and that a Biſhop was not, neither ought to be ſuperiour to a Prieſt, neither that there was any difference at all betweene them: which opinion of his, was counted among other hereſies: *Auguſtin.de hæreſib.cap.*53. *Ephiphan.hæreſ.*75. The ſecond opinion in the other extreame is of the Papiſts, as we haue ſeene, that would haue not only a difference, but a princely preeminence of their Biſhops ouer the Clergie, and that by the word of God: and they vrge it to bee ſo neceſſarie, that they are no Churches, which receiue not their pontificall hierarchie. The third opinion is betweene both, that although this diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts, as it is now receiued, cannot be directly proued out of Scripture; yet it is very neceſſary for the policie of the Church, to auoid ſchiſmes, & to preſerue it in vnitie: Of this iudgement B. Iewel againſt Harding ſheweth both Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and Hierome to haue been; *Defenſ. Apolog.pag.*248. And amongſt the reſt Saint Hierome thus writeth: Apoſtolum perſpicuè docere,&c. That the Apoſtle teacheth euidently, that Biſhops and Prieſts were the ſame: Yet he holdeth this diſtinction to be neceſſarie for the gouernment of the Church: Quòd vnus pòſt electus eſt, qui cæteris præponeretur, in ſchiſmatis factum eſt remedium: That one afterward was choſen, to bee ſet ouer the reſt, it was done to be a remedie againſt ſchiſme: ad Euag. To this opinion of Saint Hierome ſubſcribeth Biſhop Iewel in the place before quoted, and a moſt reuerend Prelate of our Church yet liuing, in theſe words: I know theſe names bee confounded in the Scriptures, but I ſpeake according to the manner and cuſtome of the Church euer ſince the Apoſtles time, *Defenſ. anſw.admonit.pag.*383. Which ſaying is agreeable to that of S. Auguſtine: Secundum honorum vocabula quæ eccleſiæ vſus obtinuit,&c. According to the names of honour, which the vſe or cuſtome of the Church hath obtained, a Biſhop is greater then a Prieſt. So that Auguſtine himſelfe, who was no Aerian, doth ground this diſtinction rather vpon ancient cuſtome, then the Scripture. Now then of theſe three opinions, the two firſt we reiect, the one of the Papiſts we haue alreadie confuted; the other of Aerius commeth now to be examined; the third followeth by our arguments to be confirmed.

Epiſt.19.ad Hieron.

That Aerius was iuſtly condemned of the Church for bringing in a popular equalitie of Miniſters into the Church (though he deſerued not for this opinion onely, to be counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes) thus we make it plaine.

*Argum.*1. There was an order and prioritie amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, though in reſpect of their Apoſtleſhip they were all of one authoritie: much more therefore ſhould there bee an order and degree amongſt the Miniſters of the Church, who are inferiour to the Apoſtles.

The firſt part is thus proued: Act.1. The prioritie of ſpeaking is giuen to Peter, in the election of Matthias. Act.15. The definitiue ſentence is pronounced by S. Iames. Galath.2.7,8. Saint Paul is ordained the chiefe Apoſtle of the vncircumciſion, and Saint Peter of the circumciſion. And amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, ſome were counted the chiefe and eſteemed as pillars, as Iames, Cephas, Iohn, Galath.2.2.9. We alſo graunt, that Peter, when he confeſſed Chriſt for and in the name of the reſt, had a primacie of order, and a prioritie at that time, who alſo for and in the name of the reſt firſt receiued the keyes of the Church. And thus much Cyprian acknowledgeth: Hoc erant cæteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus,&c. The reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame that Peter was, hauing like fellowſhip of power and honour: but the beginning is from one, that the Church may appeare to be one, de ſimplicit.prælator. Wherefore if that among the Apoſtles an order and prioritie may bee graunted, how much more amongſt other Miniſters is a difference to bee admitted?

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, God hath ordained in the Church, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, thirdly teachers, then them that doe worke miracles, after that the gifts of healing,&c. The Apoſtle here aſſigning to ſome the firſt place, to others the ſecond, to ſome the third, and ſo to the fift, euidently ſheweth, that there was a difference, and a preeminence in the gifts and callings of the Church. And ſeeing it cannot be denied, but that the Apoſtles were chiefe and ſuperiour to all other Miniſters: it followeth, that the Apoſtles themſelues allowed a ſuperioritie in the Miniſters of the Church. And although their calling was extraordinarie, and therefore they were the chiefe; yet after their calling ceaſed, and they were tranſlated, an order ſtill for gouernment was to remaine in the Church.

*Argum.*3. 1.Cor.14.33. the Apoſtle ſaith, God is not the author of confuſion, or diſorder: but to haue a popular equalitie amongſt the Miniſters, were the next way to bring in confuſion, if none ſhould bee ruled or directed by other. As S. Hierome well ſaith, Si tollis ordinem tabernaculi: If you take away the order of the tabernacle, if all ſhould be as one mixt bodie, and as the ſaying is, ἓν κόνιον, one heape of duſt, or as we ſay, an hodgepoch: then to ſmall purpoſe are Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, &c. lib.2.aduerſ.Iouinian. His meaning is, that like as where a building is not diſtinguiſhed into the parts, but lieth altogether in a rude heape, it falleth quickly to ruine and duſt: ſo the Church being without order, ſoone commeth to confuſion. Wherefore as the Apoſtle concludeth, Let all things be done comely and in order, 1.Cor.14.40: So, whoſoeuer goeth about to breake the order of the Church, as Aerius, or whoſoeuer elſe, is a diſturber. And this may ſuffice by the way for the confutation of Aerius ſchiſmaticall opinion. Now for the confirmation of Hieromes iudgement.

*Argum.*1. S.Hierome alleageth diuers places of Scripture, to ſhew that a Prieſt and a Biſhop in the Apoſtles times were all one: as Act.20.verſ.17. thoſe whom the Apoſtle calleth Elders or Preſbyters, verſ.28. he nameth Biſhops, or ouerſeers. Tit.1.5. I left thee in Crete for this cauſe, to ordaine Elders or Prieſts: and then he ſheweth what manner of perſons the Elders ſhould be, ver.7. for a Biſhop muſt bee blameleſſe, &c. Likewiſe S.Peter, 1.epiſt.5.1. exhorteth the Preſbyters or Prieſts to feede the flocke, ἐπισκοποῦντες, that is, ouerſeeing, from whence the name of Epiſcopus, a Biſhop, is deriued. Hence he concludeth thus, Idem ergo preſbyter & Epiſcopus, &c. Therefore a Biſhop and Prieſt are all one. Hieron.ad Euag.

To theſe teſtimonies of Scripture diuers anſweres are framed: Firſt, Epiphanius anſwereth, that the Apoſtle calleth Biſhops Prieſts, becauſe in many Churches, for the want and penurie of ſufficient Miniſters, there were no Prieſts but Biſhops, who alſo did the office of Prieſts.

But Bellarmine miſliketh this anſwere: for the Apoſtle in his epiſtle to the Philippians, writeth to the Biſhops and Deacons there, 1.chap.verſ.1. but in one citie there could be but one Biſhop: and it is more like that there might be many Prieſts, then Biſhops, in one citie.

Secondly, Theodoret anſwereth, that in the Apoſtles time the Biſhops were called Apoſtles, and the Prieſts Biſhops, as Epaphroditus is called the Apoſtle of the Philippians, 2.Philip.25. and therefore the office of Prieſts is deſcribed vnder the name of Biſhops.

Anſ. Firſt, it is more probable, that Biſhops ſhould bee called Apoſtles after the Apoſtles time, then while they liued, becauſe that while the Apoſtles remained, the calling of Biſhops is not thought then to haue been ſo neceſſarie as afterward: but yet after the Apoſtles were departed, the ancient Biſhops refuſed to bee called Apoſtles, as before I ſhewed in Ignatius. And S. Cyprian thus writeth, Me nullius ſuadela poteſt inclinare, &c. No man can perſwade me, that there are now other Apoſtles, &c. de ſingularitat.clericor. Secondly, concerning the inſtance of Epaphroditus, he is called their Apoſtle, that is, meſſenger, becauſe he brought the beneuolence of that Church vnto S.Paul, Philipp.4.18. and ſo this word, Apoſtle, is taken both in the Ciuill and Canon law, in ſo much, that letters dimiſſorie graunted in the cauſe of appeale, by him, from whom the appeale is made, are called (Apoſtoli) letters of diſmiſſing, or ſending the cauſe to him, to whom the appeale is made, *Decret.p.2.cauſ.2.quæſt.6.ca.24.ſext.decret.lib.2.tit.*15.*c.*1. Thirdly, we denie not, but that the Miniſters and Paſtors of the Churches were alſo called Apoſtles, in reſpect of their paſtorall office, 1.Cor.8.23. but not in that ſenſe, as the 12. Apoſtles were ſo called, but in a larger ſenſe and more generall vſe of the word: As the word Deacon or Deaconſhip is likewiſe taken ſometime ſtrictly for a ſpeciall office of the Church, as Act.6. there were ſeuen Deacons elected; ſometime more largely for any office, or miniſterie, as the Apoſtleſhip is called διακονία, Act.1.25. a Deaconſhip; and Timothie an Euangeliſt is called a Deacon, that is, a Miniſter, 1.Theſſal.3.2. As the Apoſtles then in a generall acception of the word were called Deacons, ſo wee denie not but that Biſhops and Paſtors might bee called Apoſtles. Fourthly, that none in the Apoſtles time were vſually and properly knowne by that name, but the twelue onely, to whom were afterward adioyned Paul and Barnabas, it is manifeſt out of the Scripture, Luk.6.13. Chriſt choſe twelue, whom he named Apoſtles: the name therefore of Apoſtle, muſt be of Chriſts giuing. And Saint Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.12.verſ.28. Epheſ.4.11. that God hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Paſtors and Doctors: and all are not Apoſtles, verſ.29. If then ſome were Apoſtles, not all, ſome other Paſtors, the Paſtors were not Apoſtles. This anſwere therefore is inſufficient.

Thirdly, Michael Medina a Papiſt thinketh, that both Hierome, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Chryſoſtome, were in the ſame hereſie with Aerius.

This erronious iudgement of his is confuted by Bellarmine: and it may eaſily bee diſproued. Firſt, ſeeing Auguſtine with the reſt held Aerius to bee an heretike, how could they condemne that for an hereſie in him, which they themſelues maintained? Secondly, it is not like that the Church, which hath condemned that for hereſie in Aerius, would tolerate it in the reſt. Thirdly, there is great difference betweene Aerius opinion, and theirs: for he would haue no difference at all betweene a Biſhop and a Prieſt: the fathers allowed a difference, holding it to be profitable for the peace of the Church: they onely affirmed, that this diſtinction was rather authorized by the ancient practiſe of the Church, then by any direct place of Scripture.

Fourthly, Bellarmine alleageth the opinion of one Delphinus a popiſh writer, lib.2.de Eccleſ. that by the ſentence of Hierome, in the beginning the ſame men were both Biſhops and Prieſts, not that the office of both was the ſame, but that then both were ioyned together in one man; and afterward, ſome were made Biſhops onely, ſome Prieſts only.

Bellarmine alſo confuteth this opinion, and ſheweth, that Hierome his meaning was, that the office of a Biſhop and a Prieſt in the Scripture are taken to bee all one, and not for that they might be, or were ſometime in one man: for thus Hierome ſaith, epiſt.ad Euag. Quid facit excepta ordinatione,&c. What doth a Biſhop, beſide giuing of orders, that a Prieſt doth not? And againe, Communi preſbyterorũ conſilio,&c. The Church was gouerned in time paſt by the common counſell or aduice of the Preſbyters. Whereby it is cleere that Hierome ſpeaketh not of the perſons, but of the office. And yet more plainly, Epiſcopum & preſbyterum vnum eſſe, aliud nomen officij,&c. That a Biſhop and a Prieſt are all one, the one being a name of office, the other of age. So he thinketh the office to be the ſame, the names diuers.

The fift and laſt anſwere to the places of Scripture propoſed is Bellarmines: who thinketh that in the Apoſtles time the names of Biſhops and Prieſts were confounded, being common to all Miniſters; but that the offices and functions themſelues were diſtinguiſhed.

Anſ. Firſt, Saint Hierome ſheweth out of Saint Paul, 1.Timoth.3. where he deſcribeth the office of a Biſhop, that not only the name of a Biſhop and a Prieſt was taken for the ſame, but the office alſo: becauſe the Apoſtle requireth the ſame properties and qualities in them both: De preſbytero reticetur, quia & in Epiſcopo preſbyter continetur: There is no mention made of a Prieſt, becauſe he is contained vnder a Biſhop, Hieron.Euag. And in the ſame Epiſtle he vrgeth that place, Tit.1.5.7. where the Apoſtle doth not only giue the name of Biſhops to Prieſts, but requireth the ſame gifts and qualities in them both. Secondly, S. Chryſoſtome vſeth the ſame reaſon, Hom.11.in 1.ad Timot. Inter Epiſcopum & preſbyterum intereſt ferè nihil,&c. There is almoſt no difference betweene a Biſhop and a Prieſt, becauſe that vnto Prieſts the care of the Church is committed, and that, which the Apoſtle ſaid of Biſhops, doth agree vnto Prieſts. Thirdly, Saint Ambroſe alſo vpon the ſame ground thus writeth: Comment.in 1.Timoth.3. Poſt Epiſcopum diaconatus ordinationem ſubiecit,&c. He doth place the ordination of a Deacon after a Biſhop: why? becauſe there is but one ordination of a Biſhop and a Prieſt: for both of them is a Miniſter (Sacerdos) yet the Biſhop is the firſt among the Prieſts. Fourthly, likewiſe *Concil.Aquiſgran.cap.*8. in theſe words out of Iſidore they conclude thus: Vnde ad Timotheum de ordinatione,&c. Hereupon the Apoſtle writing to Timothie of the ordination of a Biſhop and a Deacon, ſpeaketh nothing of Prieſts, becauſe he comprehendeth them vnder the name of Biſhops: ſecundus etenim gradus penè coniunctus eſt primo: for the ſecond degree is almoſt all one with the firſt. Thus by the iudgement of theſe learned fathers, there was ſmall difference, as betweene the names; ſo betweene the offices of Prieſts and Biſhops in the Apoſtles time. And thus much concerning the teſtimonies of Scripture.

*Argum.*2. Archbiſhops and Primates haue the ſame right of iuriſdiction ouer other Biſhops, which Biſhops haue ouer ſimple Prieſts: but their authoritie and iuriſdiction is rather grounded vpon the ancient cuſtome of the Church, then any Apoſtolical iniunction or inſtitution in Scripture. Ergo.

The ſecond part of the reaſon is proued by the authoritie of S. Hierome, or who elſe was the author of the booke de 7.Ordinib. Propter hoc eſt nuper Epiſcopalis electio,&c. For this cauſe alſo, that is the preſeruing of vnitie, the election of the Biſhop is referred to the Metropolitane,&c. and now the chiefe Prieſts begin to endure another Prieſt aboue them, non ex iure, ſed neceſſitate, rather of neceſſitie, then equitie. Alſo the decree of Nicholaus the Pope, Can.3.de Patriarch. Primates vel Patriarchas nihil habere priuilegij,&c. We doe determine, that Primates and Patriarches haue no priuiledge before other Biſhops, niſi quantum, but as farre as the ſacred Canons doe graunt, and ancient cuſtome of old time hath giuen vnto them. This alſo is affirmed by that reuerend and learned Prelate B. Iewell out of *Hierome, Defenſ. Apolog.p.*123. that Biſhops are ſubiect to Primates rather by continuance of cuſtome, then by precept of Scripture.

*Argum.*3. Biſhops are ſaid to ſucceede the Apoſtles, as S. Cyprian witneſſeth, lib.2.epiſt.10.ad Cornel. Hoc vel maxime frater,&c. Brother, wee muſt chiefly labour for this, that we may retaine vnitie, deliuered by our Lord and his Apoſtles to vs their ſucceſſors. But a ſucceſſor commeth not in place, till the predeceſſor be gone: Decret.part.2.cauſ.7.quæſt.1.c.5. Viuente Epiſcopo,&c. As long as the Biſhop liueth, no man can ſucceede him. And *Can.*41. In vna Eccleſia,&c. There cannot bee two Biſhops in one place: Ergo, the Apoſtles could haue no ſucceſſors while they liued: and they being the chiefe Paſtors and Biſhops of euery Church, there could be no other beſide them. And although they might commit the chiefe ouerſight of ſome Churches to ſome ſpeciall men in their abſence, as to Timothie at Epheſus, to Titus in Creta: yet could they not then be ſaid properly to be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors; and the Apoſtles yet being aliue, the office of Biſhops was leſſe needful, as a reuerend Prelate hath written. So then I conclude out of the Councell Aquiſgran.cap.9.ex

Iſidor. Apoſtolis decedentibus, ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi: The Apoſtles deceding or departing, the Biſhops ſucceeded. Wherefore it is probable, that while the Apoſtles liued, Biſhops were not in their full office, but after their departure.

*Argum.*4. If the diſtinction of Biſhops and prieſts were by the commandement and inſtitution of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, it ſhould neceſſarily be enioyned vnto all Churches: for all the precepts and ordinances of Chriſt and his Apoſtles are of neceſſitie to be kept. 2.Theſſ.2.15. Hold the ordinances which you haue beene taught, &c. But this cannot without preiudice of many reformed Churches, be affirmed, which haue no Biſhops, though they haue other Ouerſeers in their ſtead: And although it can not be denied, but that the gouernmēt of biſhops according to the vſe of the primitiue Church, is very profitable for the preſeruing of vnitie; yet dare we not condemne the Churches of Geneua, Heluetia, Germanie, Scotland, that haue receiued an other forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernement: as the Papiſts proudly affirme all Churches, which haue not ſuch Biſhops as theirs are, to be no Churches: Wherefore I cannot conclude that this ſpeciall forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernement; is abſolutely preſcribed in the word: for then all thoſe Churches, which haue not that preſcript forme, whether of Biſhops, or other, ſhould be condemned as erroneous Churches. So then here is the difference betweene our aduerſaries the Papiſts and vs: they ſay it is of neceſſitie to ſaluation, to be ſubiect to the Pope, and to Biſhops and Archbiſhops vnder him, as neceſſarily preſcribed in the word: but ſo do not our Biſhops and Archbiſhops, which is a notable difference betweene the Biſhops of the popiſh Church, and of the reformed Churches: *defenſ.anſw.admonit.p.*382. Wherefore, as we condemne not thoſe reformed Churches, which haue retained an other forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernement; ſo neither are they to cenſure our Church, for holding ſtill the ancient regiment of Biſhops, purged from the ambitious and ſuperſtitious inuentions of the popiſh prelacie. Let euery Church vſe that forme, which beſt fitteth their ſtate: in externall matters euery Church is free, not one bound to the preſcription of another, ſo they meaſure themſelues by the rule of the word: for if any Church ſhal ſeeme to preſcribe vnto an other in thoſe things, wherein they are left free, that ſaying of the Apoſtle may be fitly applied againſt them, 1.Cor.14.36. Did the word of God ſpring from you, or came it vnto you onely? God may giue vnto one Church wiſedome out of the word, to know what is beſt for their ſtate, as well as to another. And ſo I conclude this point, with that ſaying of S. Auguſtine to the Donatiſt Biſhops: Tenete, quod tenetis &c. Hold, that which you hold; you haue your ſheepe, I haue my ſheepe, be not troubleſome to my ſheepe, I am not troubleſome to yours, *expoſit.2.in Pſal.*21. So may we ſay to our ſiſters the reformed Churches, and they likewiſe to vs: let them hold that gouernement they haue, we do not moleſt them in their courſe, neyther let them moleſt vs in ours.

Thus hitherto haue I ſhewed the grounds of Hieroms opinion concerning the diſtinction of Biſhops and other Miniſters, which is alſo ratified by their owne decrees, diſtinct.95.c.5. Olim idem erat, &c. In times paſt a Prieſt was the ſame, that a Biſhop: and before that by the inſtinct of the diuell ſectes entred into Religion, communi presbyterorum concilio; The Church was gouerned by the common councell of the Presbyters: and diſtinct.93.c.24. quod poſteà vnus electus eſt. &c. that afterward one was choſen to be preferred before the reſt, it was done to be a remedie againſt ſchiſme: likewiſe that ſaying of Auguſtine, ſecundum honorum vocabula; That according to the titles of honor, which the vſe of the Church hath obtained, a Biſhop is greater then a Prieſt; is confirmed, *par.2.cauſ.2.qu.7.c.*34. And ſo their owne decrees conclude this matter againſt themſelues, diſtinct.95.c.5. Sicut ergo preſbyteri &c. As Prieſts therefore do know, that they by the cuſtome of the Church are ſubiect to him, that is ſet ouer them; ſo let Biſhops vnderſtand, that they alſo by the ſame cuſtome, rather then by vertue of the Lords diſpenſation, are greater then Prieſts &c. But Hierome thus writing, giueth no encouragement to inferior Miniſters, to caſt off the yoke of their ſuperiors: but exhorteth them willingly to ſubmit themſelues; Sta ſubiectus pontifici &c. Be ſubiect to thy Biſhop, and receiue him, as thy ſpirituall father. Likewiſe he exhorteth Biſhops, Honorent clericos &c. let them honour their Clergie, as the Clergie, that their Clergie may honor them, as their Biſhops, diſtinct.95.c.7. And thus the ſame learned father concludeth with his exhortation to them both: that they not reſpecting their titles, ſhould labour together for peace, and to profite the Church: Quomodò in legionibus & exercitu &c. Like as in the armie, ſome are Generals, ſome Centurions, ſome Tribunes, but the battell being once ioyned, titles of honor ceaſe, onely valour is required: ſo in this field and battell, wherein we fight againſt the diuell, not names and titles are to be ſought for, but godly endeuour &c. lib.1.aduerſ. Iouinian. that whether Biſhops as ſuperiors, or Miniſters as inferiors, they muſt ioyne together in the Lords worke, like as the Captaine and ſouldier fight together, the Maſter builder and the labourer build together.

Now to conclude this whole queſtion, and to ſpeake diſtinctly of euery point, that it may appeare how farre this difference in Eccleſiaſticall functions is diuine, and wherein humane: this I iudge may ſafely without any contradiction be affirmed, that in this diſtinction of the Miniſters of the Church, there is ſomewhat apoſtolicall, ſomewhat alſo politicall: and in the popiſh Prelacie, ſomething alſo antichriſtian and diabolicall: as I will now briefely ſhew in euery point, by particular induction.

Firſt, in the calling of Biſhops, as they are now ordained in ſome reformed Church, there is ſomewhat diuine and Apoſtolicall: for it cannot be denied, but that to haue order in the Church, and to haue diuerſitie of degrees and miniſtrations, to auoide confuſion, proceedeth from the inſtitution of Chriſt: And thus farre the preface to the 21. diſtinction may be receiued and allowed; which thus determineth, Maiorum & minorum ſacerdotum, &c. The diſtinction of the greater and leſſe Miniſters tooke beginning from Chriſt in the new Teſtament, who did inſtitute 12. Apoſtles as the greater and higher ſort of Miniſters, and 72. Diſciples as the leſſe. This then we ſay, is agreeable to the inſtitution of Chriſt, that there ſhould be not a popular equalitie, but a conuenient ſuperioritie and prioritie in the Miniſters of the Goſpell, as S. Paul alſo ſheweth, 1. Cor. 12. 28. firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, &c. as I haue proued at large before.

Secondly, there is ſomewhat politicall: and that of two ſorts, as touching the policie Eccleſiaſticall, and Ciuill.

To the Eccleſiaſticall policie in the aduancing of the dignitie of Biſhops theſe things doe appertaine: Firſt of all S. Hierome ſaith of confirmation committed onely to Biſhops, Diſce hanc obſeruationem ad honorem potius eſſe ſacerdotij, &c. Know that this obſeruation is rather for the honour of their prieſthood, then by neceſſitie of any law, Hieron. aduerſ. Luciferian.

Secondly, the Councell of Aquiſgrane, ca. 8. ſaith, that the ordination and conſecration of Miniſters is now reſerued to the chiefe Miniſter, ſolum propter authoritatem, onely for authoritie ſake, leaſt that the diſcipline of the Church being challenged by many, ſhould breake the peace of the Church.

Thirdly, the author of the booke vnder Hieromes name de 7. ordinib. ſaith, that the conſecration of Virgins, which is not now in vſe in the reformed Churches, was reſerued to the Biſhop, for concord ſake.

Fourthly, the iuriſdiction of the Church, which in time paſt Hierome ſaith was committed to the Senate or Colledge of the Presbyters, was afterward, to auoide ſchiſme, deuolued to the Biſhop: Diſtinct. 95. 5. Antequam, &c. Before ſects entered into religion, the Church was gouerned by the common councell of Presbyters. And of this Senate mention is made in the decrees: Cauſ. 16. quæſt. 1. c. 7. Senatum Romani, &c. As the Romanes had their Senate, by whoſe counſell euery matter was diſpatched; ſo we haue our Senate the companie of Elders.

Fiftly, S. Ambroſe ſaith, 1. Timoth. 3. Epiſcopi & preſbyteri, &c. A Biſhop and a Presbyter haue but one ordination: for they are both in the Prieſthood. Whereby it may appeare, that the ſpeciall conſecration of Biſhops was ſince ordained for the dignitie of that calling. And S. Hierome ſaith, That in the Church of Alexandria, the Presbyters did make choiſe of one, whom they placed in a higher degree, and called him their Biſhop; like as if an armie ſhould chooſe a Generall, or the Deacons ſhould chooſe an induſtrious man, whom they make their Archdeacon, Hieron. ad Euagr. So it ſhould ſeeme that the very election of a Biſhop in thoſe daies without any other circumſtance, was his ordination.

Sixtly, in Hieromes time it was lawful for Prieſts and Miniſters to preach without further licence obtained from the Biſhop: as it may appeare diſtinct. 95. c. 6. Qui non vult preſbyteros, &c. He that will not haue a Miniſter to do that, which is commanded him of God (that is to preach) would be greater then Chriſt, &c. And afterward: Wherefore let it bee lawfull for them to doe that in the Churches, which they are ſuffered to doe at Rome, in Creete, Cyprus, Italie: nay, which is more in heauen. But ſince, to ſtay the humour of contentious and ſchiſmaticall preachers, it hath ſeemed good to the Church to referre the allowance of preachers to the Ordinarie: according to the decree of the Laterane Councell, ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 3. Præter authoritatem, &c. He that preacheth priuately or publikely without the authoritie of the Biſhop, let him be excommunicate.

Seuenthly, for the better diſtinction of the offices, and diſcerning of their perſons, it hath been thought meete by the Church, that Biſhops ſhould haue their ſeuerall habite and attire: Concil. Aquiſgran. c. 113. out of Auguſtine: Offeratur mihi birrhum pretioſum, &c. If a coſtly garment bee offered me, it may become a Biſhop, though it beſeeme not Auguſtine, a poore man borne of poore parents, ſuch a garment as a Presbyter or Deacon may weare, ſuch an one will I haue, &c. Though Auguſtine in modeſtie refuſe to weare a Biſhops habite, yet it may bee gathered, that ſome veſture was ſeemely in them, that became not inferiour Miniſters.

Eightly, diuers other conſtitutions haue been made in Eccleſiaſticall policie, for the maintaining of the dignitie of Biſhops: as Cauſ. 2. quæſt. 5. c. 1. that an oth ſhould not bee miniſtred to a Biſhop, but in a matter of faith: and whereas one common witneſſe was not taken to bee ſufficient in any cauſe: Cauſ. 4. quæſt. 3. cap. 3. yet the teſtimonie of a Biſhop was ſufficient, Cauſ. 11. qu. 1. c. 36. Likewiſe two or three witneſſes were receiued againſt a Presbyter, Cauſ. 2. quæſt. 4. c. 1. but a Biſhop could not be condemned by fewer then twelue Biſhops, ibid. cap. 3. Theſe and ſuch like immunities haue been in Eccleſiaſticall policie annexed to the dignitie of Biſhops.

So alſo the Ciuill ſtate hath augmented and inlarged the priuiledges and immunities of Biſhops, which they haue rather by the munificence of Princes, then by diuine authoritie: and this was the aſſertion of Marſilius Patauinus, that, wherein Biſhops are greater then ſimple Prieſts, and Primates then Biſhops, illud ex gratuita,&c. that it proceeded from the franke gift of the Prince, Præfat.in concil.Senonenſ.

As firſt, the diuiſion of Prouinces and Cities, vnto Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the limitation of their iuriſdiction was brought in by the conſent of Princes: as diſtinct.99. Prouincia &c. Prouinces were for the moſt part diuided before the comming of Chriſt, &c. And where of late the ſecular Primates were placed, to whom appeales were made, when they could not trauell to the Emperours Court, there now Eccleſiaſticall Primates are ſeated, &c.

Secondly, the reuenewes and lands of Biſhoprickes haue been giuen by deuout and religious Princes vnto Biſhops and their ſucceſſors, and diuers imperiall lawes haue been made in fauour of the maintenance of the Church: as Cod.lib.8.tit.54.l.34.Iuſtinian. That a gift exceeding three hundred ſhillings, being made without inſinuation, that is, inrolling and recording of it, ſhould not be good, but to the Church. And leg.35. A ſimple gift without ſtipulation, or tradition, that is, vnleſſe it were either deliuered, or warranted, was not good, but to the Church. Likewiſe, Cod.1. tit.5.l.19. Whereas the preſcription of twentie or thirtie yeeres might bee vrged againſt a priuate man, the Church might lay claime to the poſſeſſions thereof after an hundred yeeres. And thus by the fauourable lawes and bountifull gifts of Princes, the reuenewes of Biſhops haue been inlarged.

Thirdly, the titles of honour annexed to Biſhoprickes, as that they are created Barons, and made Lords of the Parliament houſe here in England, haue been beſtowed by the liberalitie of the Kings of this realme, not yet aboue 400. yeeres ſince. And whereas by the Imperiall law Aduocates were made equall to Knights, as may appeare by the law of Leo: Cod.lib.2.tit.7.leg.14.Non minus prouident,&c. They which take vpon them the defence of cauſes, doe no leſſe profit mankinde, then if they did defend their countrie by warre and weapons. By the ſame reaſon alſo ſpirituall Paſtors ſhall bee preferred before both, which doe not defend mens bodies as Captaines, nor their goods as Aduocates, but watch ouer their ſoules. And as it followeth in the ſame law: Nec enim ſolos noſtro imperio militare credimus,&c. Neither doe we thinke that they onely fight for our Empire, that vſe ſwords and ſhields, but aduocates alſo, &c. yea and much more ſpirituall Paſtors doe fight and ſtriue by their ſpirituall weapons of teares and prayers. So that by the equitie of this law, the Paſtors of mens ſoules are not to be held inferiour to Lords and Knights.

Fourthly, the iudgement of matrimoniall and teſtamentarie cauſes, and of other ſuch like matters, hath been reſerued vnto Biſhops by the Ciuill and Imperiall authoritie, as may appeare by theſe particular graunts:

1 Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.28.Anthemius made this law, that if a ſtranger dyed, giuing towards the redeeming of captiues, if he appointed no executor, the Biſhop of the place ſhould take vpon him to execute the Teſtators will to the foreſaid vſe, &c.

2 Cod.lib.6.tit.54.leg.10.authentic. If a ſtraunger dye inteſtate, his goods ſhall be deliuered to the Biſhop to be kept for the next heire.

3 Cod.lib.1.tit.7.leg.1.Valentinian. It is referred to the care of Biſhops, that victuals be not ſold at exceſſiue prices in the time of dearth.

4 Cod.lib.1.tit.7.leg.10.Honor. It is committed to the Biſhops to call vpon the Iudges, that the priſoners be prouided for.

5 Ibid.leg.12. It belongeth to Biſhops, to take order for captiues redeemed, that they bee not wronged, or moleſted after their returne.

6 Ibid.leg.11. Biſhops haue charge to ſee the bookes of Sorcerie burned, and what other bookes ſoeuer tending to impietie.

7 Ibid.leg.18. If a man confeſſe he haue receiued a piece of money, in hope thereof, being promiſed it onely, and afterward receiue it not, he may make his complaint before the Biſhop of that place.

8 Lib.3.tit.1.leg.14.authentic. If the Ordinarie Iudge be ſuſpected, the Biſhop of the place ſhall heare the cauſe together with the Iudge, and ſo determine it.

9 Lib.3.tit.43.leg.15.Iuſtinian. A law is made againſt dice-play, and the charge thereof is committed to Biſhops.

10 Cod.Theodoſian.lib.tit. de Epiſcopal.indic.leg.1. It was lawfull to any man in the wager of law, yea vpon the point of ſentence, to referre his cauſe to the iudgement of the Biſhop, and they were to ſtand vnto it, though his aduerſarie gainſaied.

Thus wee ſee alſo how in Ciuill policie the dignitie of Biſhops, by the fauour of Chriſtian Emperours, hath been inlarged: And hitherto I haue ſhewed, what is to bee iudged politicall in the diſtinction of Biſhops from the reſt of the Clergie,both as touching the Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall policie.

Now in the laſt place I will briefly declare, what hath been brought in beſide the firſt institution of Biſhops,by ambition and pride into the popiſh prelacie.

Firſt, the Biſhops of ancient time were diligent preachers, Diſtinct.43.c.5. Nicholaus: Diſpenſatio,&c. The diſpenſation of the heauenly ſeede is committed to vs; woe vnto vs, if he ſow it not,if we hold our peace. But they allow vnpreaching prelates,and ſay,that want may bee recompenced with other gifts of gouernment,*Rhemiſt.annot.1.Tim.5.verſ.*17.

Secondly,Biſhops in times paſt did ſhew themſelues humble and lowly in their apparell, diet, familie:For apparell, Auguſtine ſaith,*Fateor vobis de precioſa veſte erubeſco,&c.*I confeſſe vnto you, I am aſhamed of a coſtly garment,it becommeth not this profeſſion; *ex concil.Aquiſg.ca.*113. For diet,order was taken: *Lateran.ſub Alexand.c.*10.that Prelates, tria tantùm fercula haberent,ſhould haue but three diſhes of meate. And concerning their traine, it was decreed, *Concil. Baſilienſ.append.ca.*4. That Cardinals ſhould haue but tenne Patriarches,eight Archbiſhops, ſixe to goe before them in the ſtreete, whether they went a foote, or on horſebacke. But now who ſeeth not, how farre the ambition of popiſh prelates hath exceeded theſe ancient rules: for coſtlines of apparell,their Clergie hath been ſo wanton,that they were conſtrained to decree, that none of the Clergie ſhould weare any guilt ſpurres,or buttons,or ſhoe bands of gold;*Concil.Lateran.ſub Innocent.3.cap.*16. Ruerius the Cardinall vnder Sixtus 4.did weare cloath of gold, and vſed bed couerings of gold,and had ſiluer baſons for his priuie vſe: And their ſtatelines was ſuch,that vpon feſtiuall daies,the Biſhop comming forth in proceſſion, would be carried vpon mens ſhoulders; againſt the which vſe there is a decree extant, *Concil.Bracarenſ.3.can.*5. And thus hath the popiſh prelacie degenerated from the ancient ſimplicitie.

Thirdly,in former time Biſhops depended not as ſeruants and ſubiects one vpon another, but were as the chiefe Paſtors in their ſeueral Churches and charges. Diſtinct.93.ca.24.Vbicunque fuerit Epiſcopus,&c. Whereſoeuer a Biſhop is,whether at Rome, Eugubium, Conſtantinople, they are all of the ſame merite or worthines, and of the ſame prieſtly authoritie. But now popiſh prelates are all ſubiects and ſlaues to the Pope,being bound vnto him by oth of obedience and fealtie.

Fourthly,Biſhops of former times had their ſingular circuites and dioceſes allotted them in ſuch ſort, that they might themſelues haue the ouerſight of them: for they were bound by the Canons to viſit euery pariſh Church euery yeere in their dioceſſe, *cauſ.10.quæſt.10.c.11. ex concil.Toletan.*4. And againe, *Extrauag. commun. lib.1.tit.6.c.1.Ioann.*22. ſheweth a reaſon why he diuided certaine dioceſes ſome into two,ſome into more,Quod in earum ſingulis ſingulorum vultus nequibat,vt deceret, vnicus paſtor inſpicere,&c. Becauſe one Paſtor or Biſhop, was not able to know the face of euery one: that is, to haue a particular knowledge of the pariſhes in his dioceſſe. But ſince thoſe times, popiſh prelates haue ambitiouſly ſought to inlarge their dioceſſe, and to incroach vpon the limits of others, reſpecting more the largenes of their iuriſdiction, then the diſcharge of their Epiſcopall dutie. This enormitie miſliked ſome of their owne Popes and chiefe patrones: and therefore Iohn 22. diuided the Biſhopricke of Tholouſe into fiue dioceſes,*Extrau.commun.lib.3.tit.2.c.*5. giuing this reaſon thereof, Quia durum erat & difficile,&c. Becauſe it was an hard and difficult matter,that in ſo large a dioceſſe recourſe ſhould be had to one man,&c.

Fiftly,the Biſhops of the Primitiue Church were readie to forgiue,and were full of mercie, and did make interceſſion to the Magiſtrate for offenders,yea for ſchiſmatikes; as *Cauſ.23.quæſt.5.c.*1. Auguſtine is a mediatour to Marcellinus for the Donatiſts: Sic ſuccenſe iniquitati,&c. So puniſh iniquitie,as you forget not humanitie. And Cyprian excellently ſaith, *lib.1.epiſtol.*3. Remitto omnia,&c. I remit euery thing, I diſſemble many things; yea ſinnes committed againſt God,I doe not ſtrictly examine; yea in remitting of offences I my ſelfe do almoſt offend. But popiſh prelates are of a contrarie ſpirit, who were moſt cruel ſuckers of the blood of the Saints,condemning them to death,and deliuering them ouer to the ſecular power to be executed,as the high prieſt did Chriſt to Pilate to be crucified: contrarie to their owne Canons, *Cauſ.33.qu.3.diſt.1.c.*23. Qui hominem tradidit,&c. He that deliuereth or betraieth a man,killeth him,as our Lord ſaith, He hath the greater ſinne that hath deliuered me vnto thee.

Sixtly, in the former ages of the Church, Chriſtian Biſhops did not hold themſelues exempt from the ſecular power; *Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.34.Omnes,&c.* All,of what condition ſoeuer, whether Biſhops or Clerkes,or Monks, are ſubiect,iuriſdictioni præſidali,to the iuriſdiction of the preſident. But now popiſh prelates challenge a priuiledge to be freed from the Ciuill iuriſdiction,according to the proude decree of *Boniface,cauſ.11.qu.1.ca.*8. Nullus Epiſcopus, That no Biſhop ſhould bee conuented before a ſecular Iudge neither in ciuill nor criminall cauſes.

Seuenthly, in elder times a Biſhop could not, ſine concilij examine deijcere preſbyterum, without the examination of a Councel depriue a Prieſt,*Concil.Hiſpalenſ.2.can.*7. Solus honorem dare poteſt,&c. The Biſhop may conferre Prieſthood alone,but he cannot take it away alone,*diſtinct.67.c.*2.

and the ſame is ratified by Innocentius 3.decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.7.ca.2. But of late daies popiſh Ordinaries tooke vpon them,ex officio, in their Conſiſtories, by their ſole authoritie, to depriue the Miniſters of the Goſpell both of their liuing and life to,contrarie to their owne Canons.

Eightly,the ancient Biſhops did account of Prieſts as of their colleagues,diſtinct.95.c.10. And, Concil.Carthag.4.c.34.it was decreed, that a Biſhop ſitting ſhould not ſuffer a Presbyter to ſtand before him. But the popiſh prelates challenge to be Princes and Lords ouer their Clergie, as wee haue ſeene before,and call the Clerkes vnder their iuriſdiction,their ſubiects.

Ninthly,the Biſhops of former times did admit Prieſts to ſit in councell, and giue voices with them,Decret.p.1.diſtinct.95.c.6. Preſbyteri intereſſe ſacerdotum concilio,&c. It was lawfull in times paſt for Prieſts to be preſent in the councell of Biſhops,&c. But now the contrarie is practiſed by popiſh prelates,who doe proudly exclude their Clergie from giuing voice in their Synodes, and doe iuſtifie their doing therein.

Tenthly,the Biſhops of the Primitiue Church did not take vpon them the iudgement of ſecular matters: Cauſ.11.qu.1.c.29. Neque iudicem,&c.Chriſt hath not appointed thee either a iudge, or inquiſitor of ſecular buſines. Likewiſe, Decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.50.c.4. Alexander 3. decreed, Ne Clericus iuſticiarius fiat principis,&c.That a Clergie man ſhould not be adminiſtrator of iuſtice to the Prince.And againe,ibid.c.5.he thus writeth: Cantuarienſ. Archiepiſcop. Ne quis ſacerdos officium habeat vicecomitis,aut præpoſiti ſecularis,&c. That no Biſhop ſhould beare the office of a Vicount,or of a ſecular gouernour. But it was an vſuall thing for popiſh prelates to bee Lord Treaſurers and Chancellors vnto Kings,and beare other more ſecular offices.

Hitherto as I haue ſhewed,how popiſh prelates haue ſwarued from the ancient Canons; ſo will I briefly declare,how they haue degenerated from that perfect paterne and forme of a Biſhop,according to S.Pauls deſcription,1.Timoth.3.

11 Firſt, S.Pauls Biſhop might be the husband of one wife: which is not ſo to bee vnderſtood, as though he could bee no Biſhop that had been twice married,but not ſuch an one as had two or three wiues at once, according to the corrupt vſe of the Iewes, and ſo S.Hierome expoundeth it, as ſhall be ſhewed afterward: it was lawfull then in the Primitiue Church for Biſhops to be maried. And in the Councel of Gangra,rehearſed alſo in the decrees,diſt.28.c.15.it was decreed vnder paine of anathematiſme,that no man ſhould make any difference betweene a maried and vnmaried prieſt. But the practiſe of popiſh prelates is otherwiſe,who cannot abide honeſt matrimonie,yet haue been knowne to reſort vnhoneſtly to concubines: as two of their Biſhops,that were at the Councell of Trent,were ſlaine being deprehended in adulterous acts,ex Proteſtat.Concionat. German.aduerſ.concil.Tridentin.

12 Secondly, S.Paul requireth,that his Biſhop ſhould be vigilant and diligent in his charge: and accordingly the Canons of the Church haue prouided,Sardicenſ.can.14.Epiſcopus,&c. That a Biſhop ſhould not be abſent from his Church aboue three Lords daies.And Concil.Carthag.5.can.5. Placuit vt nemini,&c.No Biſhop ſhall haue licence,leauing his Cathedrall Church, to make his abode in any other Church,no not within his dioceſſe. And it is memorable, which is recorded of Pope Gregorie 11.that as he admoniſhed a Biſhop to goe home to his Church, and he againe replying,ſaid: Why he, that was to giue example to others,did not returne to Rome; for at that time the Pope had his ſeate in France: the Pope thereupon remoued his Court to Rome out of France,where the Popes had ſoiourned by the ſpace of 74.yeeres. But now it is vſuall for popiſh prelates,both Cardinals and others, to follow the Popes Court, and very ſeldome to viſite their Churches.

13 Thirdly, S.Pauls Biſhop muſt be giuen to hoſpitalitie: ſo likewiſe the ancient Canons require, diſtinct.83.c.1.Epiſcopus pauperibus, The Biſhop muſt miniſter meate and raiment to the poore that are not able to labour with their owne hands,&c. But it hath been the vſe of ſome popiſh prelates,in ſtead of the poore and impotent,to keepe Horſes,Hawkes,and Hounds: as William Longchampe,Chancellor and chiefe Iuſtice to King Richard the 1. is reported to haue brought with him where he lodged,in any Religious houſe or other,ſuch ſuperfluitie of Horſes,Dogs, and Hawkes, that the place was worſe three yeeres after, Fox.pag.246.ex Matth. Pariſienſ. Likewiſe Lodouicus Cardinal Aquileg vnder Eugenius 4. is ſaid of the goods of the Church to haue kept in the ſtead of the poore,horſe and hounds,ex Balæo & alijs.

Fourthly,S.Pauls Biſhop muſt be διδακτικὸς,a man of ſufficiencie,apt to teach,both able and willing: but of willingnes and diligence in preaching ſee before artic.1. So alſo their decrees,diſtinct.36.c.2.Zozimus: Qui eccleſiaſticis diſciplinis,&c. He that is not endued with eccleſiaſticall learning,ought not to be preferred to be a Biſhop,&c. Decret.49.c.2.Cæcum offert,&c. He offereth a blind ſacrifice, that admitteth one that is vnlearned. But ſuch ignorant popiſh prelates did and doe yet abound amongſt them; ſuch as the Biſhop of Cauaillon was, who thus ſaid to the Merindolians,That it was not neceſſarie to ſaluation to vnderſtand the articles of the Creede: for there were many Biſhops, and Doctors of Diuinitie, whom it would trouble to expound the pater noſter and the Creed.*Fox p.*949. Such an one alſo was the Biſhop of Dunkelden in Scotland, who finding great fault with Thomas Forret Martyr, becauſe hee preached euery Lordes day to his Pariſhioners, ſaid vnto him; I thanke God, I neuer knew what the old and new Teſtament was, I will know nothing but my portous and pontifical. Of theſe words roſe a common by-word in Scotland, yee are like the Biſhop of Dunkelden, that knew neither old nor new Law, *p.*1266.ex Regiſtris Scotiæ. And leaſt that this ſingular ignorance might ſeeme onely a perſonall fault in this Biſhop, he ſaith in the ſame place; We are not ordained to preach, ſpeaking of the popiſh prelacie it ſelfe: and no maruell, that their Biſhops were ſo ignorant; for Alphonſus ſaith, that diuers of the Popes were ſo ignorant, that they knew not their Grammar. Yet it is contrary to their owne Canons, *decret.Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*14.*c.*15. *Honor.*3. deposeth a Biſhop, ob defectum Grammaticæ: Becauſe he knew not his Grammar, neither had read ſo much as Donatus.

15 Fiftly, S.Pauls Biſhop muſt not be αἰσχροκερδὴς, giuen to filthie lucre, according alſo to their owne canons, *Cauſ.*10.*qu.*3.*c.*7. In lucris animarum, &c. Let the Biſhops ſeeke rather the lucre of mens ſoules, then to pray vpon their goods. But who liſt to reade the grieuances exhibited by the States of Germanie, at the aſſemblie of Norenberge, anno 1523. ſhall ſee how the practiſes of popiſh Prelates tended all to this ende, to rake commoditie to themſelues: they made gaine of marriages, of pardons, excommunications, hallowing of Churches, chriſtening of belles, burials, licenſing of concubines, *Fox.p.*862. they made gaine of dedicating of Churches, giuing of orders, for the which a prouiſo was made, they ſhould take nothing, *concil. Cabilonenſ. ſub Carol.cap.*16. Biſhops exacted yeerely penſions of their Clergie, which is prohibited in the ſame councell, *cap.*17. they let out their iuriſdictions to farme, which enormitie is redreſſed, *concil. Lateranenſ.p.*1.*c.*15. And in the councell held at Oxford vnder Stephen the Archbiſhop, it was decreed, that no Archdeaconrie or other ſpirituall office ſhould be let out to farme: they alſo made gaine of licences to teach; which is forbidden, *concil.Lateranenſ.p.*1.*c.*18. Pro licentia docendi &c. That no man ſhould take any thing for a licence to teach &c. In theſe, and many ſuch like things, their greedie couetouſneſſe appeareth, contrary to the Apoſtles rule.

16 Sixtly, S.Paules Biſhop muſt be, ἐπιεικὴς, gentle, courteous, not cruell, and vncharitable in purſuing euery offence, and that vnto death. But the practiſe of theſe bloudie popiſh Biſhops hath been too well knowne in England: their owne law ſaith, that when a Clerke is degraded, effectual interceſſion muſt be made for him, vt citra mortis periculum, &c. that he might be puniſhed without danger of death, *decret.Greg.lib.*5.*tit.*40.*c.*27.*Innocent.*3. And concerning lay-men, they ſhould proteſt, quòd pœnam ſanguinis &c. That they deſire not or intend their bloud, *ſext. decret. lib.*5.*tit.*4.*c.*2.*Bonif.*8. But it is certaine, in the late perſecutions here in England, they intended nothing els but blood.

17 Seuenthly, S.Paules Biſhop muſt be, ἄμαχος, a man not giuen to fight, or contend, not warlike: and their canons agree. *Cauſ.*23.*qu.*8.*c.*19.Nicholaus, Epiſcopi non debent militaribus. Biſhops muſt not be occupied in militarie affaires: but popiſh biſhops haue often, and yet do take vpon them to be Captaines, and Generals of the field; as I haue giuen an inſtance before in Hugh Spencer biſhop of Norwich, who was Pope Vrbane the 6. his Champion, to warre againſt the Antipope; and in Cardinall Ballua, who was chiefe Muſter maſter vnder *Lodouic.*11. And a Cardinall at this time, or very lately, was the King of Spaine his Lieutenant generall in the Low countries.

Eightly, S.Paules Biſhop muſt be, φιλάγαθος, a louer and patrone of good men, Tit.1.8. as your owne Canons alſo, *diſt.*86.*c.*14. Primùm opereris &c. Firſt of all do good to the houſhold of faith: it is a great ſinne, if a faithfull man do want, and thou knoweſt of it: but popiſh Prelates were perſecutours of good men, as Sanpaulinus for reprouing one for ſwearing, was ſuſpected for a Lutherane, and ſuffered at Paris, anno 1551. *Fox p.*904. Tomkins was a godly man, who, when any man came to him about any buſineſſe, would alwayes begin with prayer, yet was he moſt cruelly handled of Boner, firſt his hand burned, afterward all his bodie, *p.*1534. And their owne conſcience wil tell them that Maſter Bradford was an holy and innocent man, yet by them cruelly ſlaughtered: by theſe, and infinite examples more, we may ſee how well they loued good men.

18 Ninthly, S.Pauls Biſhop muſt be, δίκαιος, iuſt, Tit.1.8. But their proceedings were moſt vniuſt and indirect: firſt their owne law ſaith, Ne iudicium fiat in tenebris &c. That no Iudgement ſhould be giuen ſecretly, in the darke &c. *decret.Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*29.*c.*24. Yet their Spaniſh inquiſition is all in ſecret and ſilence, nothing done openly, till the Innocents are brought forth to execution. Againe, *Cauſ.*2.*qu.*8.*c.*3.Eutychian. Qui crimen intendit &c. He that wil accuſe muſt come openly into iudgement &c. Their owne law in capital matters enforceth an accuſer to be produced, but they haue proceeded vnto ſentence of death without eyther accuſer or witneſſe. Againe, their owne law ſaith, Innocentes ad paria cum nocentibus: Innocentes ſhould not haue like puniſhment to offenders, *extrau.commun.lib.*3.*tit.*9.*c.*1.*Ioan.*23. But they haue condemned Innocents, as children, madde men, and ſuch as recanted, and ſubmitted themſelues, as afterward *Error.*105. of this firſt Centurie, it followeth to be declared more at large.

20 Tenthly, and laſtly, S.Pauls Biſhop muſt not be ἀνυπότακτος, diſobedient, or rebellious, Tit.1.7. which qualitie, as the Apoſtle requireth in the ſame place in the children of Biſhops, that they ſhould be obedient and dutifull; ſo much more is it requiſite in Biſhops themſelues to be ſubiect to their higher powers alſo, as the Apoſtle teacheth, Rom.13.1. And hereunto agree their owne Canons, *cauſ.*11.*qu.*1.*c.*20. Iſtud eſt &c. This is that, which we require of you, that you ſend vnder ſafe cuſtodie Paulus Biſhop Aquileienſ. and the Biſhop of Millaine to the moſt gentle Emperour &c.Gregor. This Canon ſubiecteth Biſhops to the ciuill Maieſtie: yet popiſh Prelates haue continually ſhewed them ſelues ſtubburne againſt their Soueraignes; as Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury did worthily procure the Kings diſpleaſure, which was Henry the 2. and thereupon was exiled, becauſe he would not yeeld obedience to the Kings lawes, but conditionally, Saluo ordine ſuo, Sauing the priuiledges of his order: ſee the ſtorie, *Fox.p.*207. Such another ſtout Champion, was William Longchampe, Chauncellour and chiefe Iuſtice, and Viceroy to King Richard the 1. while hee was at the ſiege of Ieruſalem: who being in his ruffe, regarded not the Kings letters ſent vnto him, but impriſoned, and otherwiſe ſhamefully vſed the Kings brother, cauſing him to be haled and drawne through the myre in the ſtreets. plur. apud Fox.p. 247. Like vnto theſe was Hugo Biſhop of Lincolne, who traiterouſly ioyned with Lewes the French Kings ſonne againſt King Iohn, and afterward Henry the 3. his ſonne; and therefore was put to a fine of 1000. marks for his Biſhopricke: ſee more p.258. And other ſuch like trecherous prankes this popelike Biſhop played againſt his Soueraigne, and for his manly actes was canonized a Saint in the Popes kalendar, as trayterous Becket was before; and this is that goodly ſaint Hugh, that ſhould haue his day the 17. of Nouember, whereat the Papiſts ſtorme, that we place the Coronation of her Maieſtie, in his ſtead: which ioyfull Day, God graunt we may yet many yeers ſolemnize as we do, to the glory of God. And thus haue I ſhewed how far popiſh Prelates haue departed from the firſt inſtitution of a Biſhop: And thus much concerning the diſtinction and degree of Biſhops, both what therein is diuine and Apoſtolicall, what humane and politicall.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE office and title of Cardinals.

The Papiſts.

72.Error. B*Ellarmine* would faine haue the office of Cardinals, as ancient as the Apoſtles times: and the name to be worthily appropriated to the See of Rome, that as the Pope himſelfe by his prudence and holines, is, tanquam cardo Eccleſiæ, to the Church as the hingell to the doore, vpon the which it is turned and borne vp: ſo his Counſellers and aſſiſtants ſhould be called Cardinals, hauing the care of the Vniuerſall Church: but the Ieſuite, beſide ſome vaine ſhew of mothworne antiquitie, hath not one good argument to proue the name, and office of Cardinals, to be either ancient or commendable. Their eſpeciall office, as they are Cardinals, is to elect and chuſe the Pope, and to be aſſiſtant vnto him in Counſell, for the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church, and in this reſpect the Cardinals are preferred before Biſhops. *Bellarm.cap.*16.

For the firſt, he ſheweth the office of the Cardinals in being aſſiſtant to the Pope in the affaires of the Church to be moſt profitable and commodious in three reſpects.

Firſt, that by this meanes the Pope hath his ſenate or Councell alwaies readie, with whom he may conſult euerie day if he will for the affaires of the Church: Secondly, for that Biſhops could not be aſſembled without detriment of their Churches, from the which they cannot be conueniently abſent. Thirdly, the Cardinals are more exerciſed and experienced in matters of State.

Contra. Firſt, for the ſpace of 800. yeares by his owne confeſſion, but as the truth is, a thouſand yeares, the Church of Rome was gouerned by the counſell and aduiſe of the Clergie there without theſe Cardinals; and it was as well gouerned or better, then ſince: why might not the Pope content himſelfe as well with that courſe, as his predeceſſors? Secondly, the Pope buſieth himſelf with more then he need, to entermeddle with other Churches, of which vnneceſſary buſines if he would exonerate himſelf, he ſhuld as little need a Colledge of Cardinals as other Biſhops, if he would holde himſelfe contented with his owne dioceſſe. Thirdly, ſome of your Cardinals are Biſhops, and haue dioces, all of them haue titles belonging to their charge, therefore they can no better be abſent, then Biſhops without detriment of their Churches. Fourthly, and whereas he ſaith Cardinals are exerciſed in State matters: in deede they know too much of Princes ſecrets: neither is it their calling to ſtudie ſuch matters, but ought rather to giue themſelues to preach the Word according to their office: and as for the managing of Ciuill and State buſines, it belongeth to the Senate of Rome: they ſhould onely deale with Eccleſiaſticall affaires.

For the ſecond: though Biſhops in reſpect of their Epiſcopall iuriſdiction are before Cardinals, yet they for the regiment of the vniuerſall Church, and for that they onely elect the vniuerſall Biſhop, are preferred before Biſhops, *Bellarm.cap.*14.

Contra. Firſt, in that Cardinals meddle with the buſines of the vniuerſall Church, therein they are but intruders: for euery dioceſſe ſhould be left to the proper Biſhops thereof. Secondly, againe, in that they take vpon them to elect the Pope, they are but therein vſurpers, and doe apparant wrong to three ſtates, the Emperour, Clergie, People, as I haue ſhewed before. Thirdly, it is contrarie to the ſeuenth Canon of the Trullane Councell; that a Deacon in any office of the Church, ſhould be preferred before a Presbyter, and ſo conſequentlie, not a Cardinall Deacon ſhould in that behalfe be excepted.

The Proteſtants.

THat neither the name of Cardinals, as proper to Rome, is ancient, nor their office, or either of them lawfull or commendable, but vſurped and Antichriſtian: thus briefly it is ſhewed.

1 In Auguſtines time it was a common name, vſually applyed, both in the good and euill part, to chiefe and principall men of any place, or ſect: as he calleth the ringleaders of the Donatiſts, Cardinales Donatiſtas, Cardinall or captaine Donatiſts, *de baptiſm.lib.*1.*cap.*6. Surely, if it then had been onely due to the aſſiſtants of the Romane Biſhop, Auguſtine had been much to blame to applie the name to Heretikes. Alſo there were not onely Cardinals in the Church of Rome, but in other Churches alſo, as *diſt.*71.*c.*5. Gregorie giueth licence to the Biſhop of Naples, ad Gratianum cardinandum, to make one Gratian a Cardinall of that Church. And *diſt.*74.*c.*6. the ſame Gregorie licenceth the Biſhop of Syracuſe, conſtituere preſbyterum Cardinalem, to make one Coſmas a Presbyter Cardinall there. Onuphrius alſo a witneſſe of their owne, doth teſtifie for vs in this point, that Cardinall prieſts, and Cardinall deacons were ſo called, becauſe they were ſet ouer other Prieſts and Deacons of the ſame Church: de Cardinal.titulis. So then this name or title of Cardinalſhip is not proper or peculiar to the Church of Rome.

2 Auguſtine thus writeth to Hierome, Quamuis ſecundum honorum vocabula, ſaith he, Epiſcopatus preſbyterio maior ſit, tamen in multis rebus Auguſtinus Hieronymo, minor eſt. Epiſtol. 19. Though according to the cuſtome of the Church, a Biſhop be greater then a Prieſt, yet Auguſtine a Biſhop in many things is inferior to Hierome a Prieſt. Now Hierome was a Prieſt of Rome, and a Cardinall, as ſome of our aduerſaries thinke, and therefore they picture him commonly in a red gowne and habit of a Cardinall: yet you ſee Auguſtine as a Biſhop was before him, though for his great learning he putteth himſelfe behind him.

Bellarmine here telleth vs very boldly, that Hierome was a Prieſt of Antioch, not of Rome, though he helped Damaſus to write letters there: and therefore Auguſtine doubted not to preferre a Biſhop in degree before him. *c.*14.

Contra. Firſt, whereas he alleageth the 61. epiſtle of Hierome, to proue him a Prieſt of Antioch, there is no ſuch thing: but he onely ſaith, Ego Antiochiam deſerui, &c. I left Antioch. Secondly, herein Bellarmine is contrarie to the common opinion and tradition of their Church: for they vſe commonly to picture Hierome with a red Hat and gowne, like a Cardinall of Rome. Thirdly, this bold aſſertion of his without ground is contrarie to Hierome himſelfe, who thus writeth, Præfat.ad Paulinian. Dum in Babylone verſarer, & purpuratæ meretricis, &c. While I was conuerſant in Babylon, and a tenant to the purple whore, I began to mutter ſomewhat of the holy Ghoſt: but the whole Senate of the Phariſees gainſaid me, &c. and I ſtraightway returned to Ieruſalem, &c. By this it appeareth, that Hierome was not onely a young ſcholler at Rome, but then began to bee a profeſſor, and diſputer, and moſt like to haue entered into orders: for without a calling he would not haue offered himſelfe to publike conference and diſputation; and when he left Rome, immediatly he went to Ieruſalem, and there continued: It is not like then he could bee a Presbyter at Antioch. Fourthly, Hierome himſelfe condemneth that diſorder at Rome for Deacons to bee preferred before Prieſts: Quid mihi profers vnius vrbis, &c. What doe you tell me of the cuſtome of one citie? Hieron.Euagrio. Fiftly, Auguſtine alſo in another place complayneth of one Falcidius a Deacon of Rome, qui duce ſtultitia, ſaith he, diaconos preſbyteris coæquare contendit: Who being led or caried away with folly, did goe about to make Deacons equall vnto Prieſts. Quæſt.vet. & nou.Teſta. 101. Is not the ſame folly now generally practiſed in Rome, or a greater? for they doe not onely preferre Cardinall deacons before Prieſts, but euen before Biſhops and Archbiſhops: in Auguſtines time this was counted a great follie.

Laſtly, if we looke backe into former times, we ſhall find, that neither the office, nor dignitie of the Cardinals, nor any part thereof, is of any great antiquitie.

As concerning their office, it is to be aſſiſtant to the Pope in the regiment of the vniuerſall Church, and to make choyce of a new when the See is voyd: As for the firſt it was impugned, an. 402. by the ſixte Councell of Carthage, who writ thus to Celeſtinus Biſhop of Rome concerning the ſending abroad of his legates: Executores veſtros Clericos quibuſq; potentibus nolite mittere, nolite concedere, ne fumoſum typhum ſeculi in eccleſiam Chriſti videamur inducere: They of the Clergie your agents, we pray you ſend not, neither grant at euery great mans requeſt, leaſt the ſecular vainglorious pompe ſhould be brought into the Church: Their meaning is, that it was not ſeemely for a Biſhop to ſend foorth his legates and meſſengers, as temporall princes haue their ambaſſadours.

*Anno.*1159. Fredericke that famous Emperour ſent this meſſage to Adriane the fourth: Cardinalibus veſtris ciuitates noſtræ non patent, quia non videmus eos prædicatores, ſed prædatores; non pacis corroboratores, ſed pecuniæ raptores, &c. We ſhut vp our cities againſt your Cardinals, becauſe we ſee that they preach not, but pray vpon the people; they doe not ratifie peace, but rake together pence. Non orbis reparatores, ſed auri inſatiabiles corroſores, They doe not repaire the world, but empaire their wealth.

Now concerning the other part of their office in electing the Pope, it is but an vſurpation, and that of no great antiquitie: for in times paſt the Clergie and people of Rome were wont to chooſe their Biſhop and the Emperour confirmed him. But afterward as the ambition of the Popes increaſed, ſo alſo by degrees the ancient forme of election was altered: Firſt, *anno.*817. the Emperour was excluded by Stephanus the fourth, from the election of the Pope, but not from his conſecration: then came Paſchalis the firſt, who depriued the Emperor of all right either in electing, or conſecrating the Biſhop of Rome. For by his ſubtill allurement the Emperour Lodouicus reſigned his intereſt in ſuch elections to the Romanes. After him Adrianus the third, Leo the ninth, Alexander the ſecond, Gregory the ſeuenth, Calixtus the ſecond, did one after another as by violence thruſt the Emperour from hauing any authoritie in electing the Pope: thus was the Emperour excluded. As for the conſent of the people it was cleane cut off, *anno.*1000. by Pope Iohn 19. The Clergie yet had their voice, which was empaired at the firſt, when Nicholas the ſecond made a decree, that the Pope ſhould not be choſen without the conſent of the Cardinals *an.*1060. but afterward it was altogether taken away by Alexander the ſecond, who decreed, that the Pope ſhould be choſen onely by the Cardinals: And about this time the Cardinals began to grow in credite.

Concerning the dignitie of the Cardinals, and their priuiledges, they are but very young: *An.*1245. it was firſt deuiſed by Innocentius the fourth, that Cardinals ſhould weare red hats and robes, and ride vpon their footeclothed and ſtrapped horſe. *Anno.*1538. when Paulus the third held the papacie, a complaint was made to the Pope about ſome abuſes of the Cardinals, and one chiefe was this, that the Cardinals did hold certaine Biſhopricks, whereas Cardinalatus officium, & Epiſcopi officium incompatibilia ſunt, the office of a Cardinall, and of a Biſhop are vnmatchable: ſic Contaren. Sadolet. Polus, Cardinales, ſuggeſtion. ad Paulum. 3.

Now whereas the Cardinals though they be but Deacons, do ſit aboue Prieſts, Biſhops, and Archbiſhops: this alſo doth ouerthrowe the ſeuenth Canon of the ſixt generall Councell Trullane, which determineth thus, Statuimus vt diaconus, in quouis ſit eccleſiæ officio ante preſbyterum non ſedeat: We enact, that a Deacon, in what place or office of the Church ſoeuer, doe not ſit before a Prieſt.

Laſtly, that the office and calling of Cardinals, as it is now currant in Rome is altogether vnlawfull, and againſt all antiquitie, I will produce their owne witneſſes, that haue found out theſe ſeuerall faults in the Cardinals.

Firſt, that they buſie themſelues altogether with ſtate matters, neglecting the office of preaching, to the which they are called. Eſpenc. thus writing to the Cardinall of Lorraine, ſaith: Væ ac male tibi futurum: Woe and euill ſhall be vnto you, if you doe not proceed to preach the Goſpell. But ſome man will ſay, auaunt with this thy neceſſitie of preaching? and not much better one ſaid vnto me of a mitred Biſhop, now an hatted Cardinall: Wouldeſt thou haue a Biſhop, or Cardinall preach? I pray you, who elſe, &c. and yet this prelate was of their number, that would be called reuerend Fathers, Vicars of Chriſt, ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles: ſic Eſpenc. præfat. ad Carol. Lotharing.

Secondly, they are reproued for haunting the Courts of Princes, and leauing their owne charges: and they take vpon them, ad inſtar proconſulum, like to the old Romane Proconſuls: for ſo is the decree of Clemens 4. ſext. decret. lib. 1. tit. 15. c. 2. to haue their circuites and prouinces. Of this matter thus freely the ſame author vttereth his minde: Sicut me miſit pater, &c. As my father ſent me, ſaith Chriſt, ſo ſend I you, not gouernours of politicall, but reformers of eccleſiaſticall matters; Paſtors, not theeues; not Potentates, but Euangeliſts; not law-makers, but law-keepers; not Captaines of ſouldiours, but fiſhers of men, Eſpenc. ibid.

Thirdly, he findeth fault, becauſe many beardleſſe youths were made Cardinals: as alleaging an ancient Canon of Syluester, he thus inferreth: Eccleſia Romana &c. In times paſt the Church of Rome had no Cardinals vnder 60. yeeres old: which Canon would now be reuiued, there being in theſe daies ſo many beardleſſe, or but yong bearded Cardinals, Eſpenc. commentar. in 1. *Timoth. p.*238.b.

Fourthly, the Cardinals of Rome are ſome them, no fewer alwaies then ſixe Cardinall Biſhops:

by which meanes the Churches, whereof they are Biſhops, are neglected: which alſo is contrarie to their owne Canons, *Decret.Gregor.lib.*1.*tit.*5.*c.*3.Innocentius 3. would not ſuffer a Cardinall of Rome to be Biſhop of Rauenna, though he were deſired of the Clergie there, quia præſentia eius vtilior,&c. becauſe his preſence is more profitable to the Church of Rome, then Rauenna.

Fiftly, another notable abuſe in Cardinals is this, that whereas ſome of them are but Deacons, yet they ſit and take their place before Prieſts and Biſhops. Hereof complained Bernard in his time to Engenius the Pope, *de conſiderat.lib.*4. Ridiculè miniſtri veſtri,&c. It is very ridiculous, that your Miniſters or Deacons take vpon them to be preferred before your Prieſts. To this effect alſo their owne decrees, *diſt.*93.*c.*15.Non oportet,&c. It becommeth not a Deacon to ſit in the preſence of a Prieſt. *Ibid.c.*17. Diaconi, Let Deacons know that they are the Prieſts miniſters, as well as the Biſhops. But leaſt it might be here anſwered, that all Deacons of other Churches are tied to this rule, but the Cardinall deacons of the Church of Rome are exempted: it followeth, *diſt.*93. *c.*26.Pracipimus,&c. We commaund, that no Deacon, in what dignitie or office ſoeuer he is, ſhall ſit before a Prieſt. So likewiſe, *part.*2.*cauſ.*2.*qu.*4.*c.*2. Præſul non damnabitur,&c. A Prelate ſhall not be condemned but with 72. witneſſes; a Cardinall prieſt with 44. a Cardinall deacon of the citie of Rome with 27. witneſſes. By this Canon a ſimple Prelate or Biſhop is preferred before a Cardinall prieſt or Deacon. Thus wee ſee how enormous, vnlawfull, and repugnant to the Canons the office of Cardinals is: but I haue ſtaied too long in this argument, I will therefore proceede.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING THE keyes of the Church, committed for the execution to the paſtors and gouernours thereof.

THis queſtion hath foure parts. Firſt, wherein the authoritie of the keyes conſiſteth: ſecondly, to whom they are committed: thirdly, whether there is abſolute power of binding and looſing in the Church, or miniſterially only: fourthly, whether they that haue the diſpenſation of the Keyes, doe alwayes neceſſarily bind and looſe before God: of theſe in order.

THE FIRST PART, WHEREIN THE AVTHORITY and power of the Keyes conſiſteth.

The Papiſts.

BY the Keyes and power of binding and looſing, they chiefly and principally vnderſtand the cenſures of the Church, as Excommunications, Anathematiſmes, ſuſpenſions, Degradations, and the whole Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction, *Rhem.Annot.Matt.*16.*ſect.*14.*Bellar.lib.*1.*de pontif.cap.*13. Secondly, they tye remiſſion and retayning of ſinnes to their imagined and deuiſed ſacrament of penance, ſaying, that where Chriſt gaue authoritie to remitte ſinnes to his Apoſtles, Ioh. 20.23. he inſtituted the ſacrament of penance, *Rhemiſt. Iohn.*20. *ſect.*3. The ſacrifice alſo and ſacraments of the Church, ſay they, are miniſtred for remiſſion of ſinnes, *Rhemiſt.*2.*Corinth.*5.*ſect.*3. Thirdly, they ſeeme to grant in words, that by preaching alſo of the Goſpell, ſinnes are retained, and remitted, ibid. but they make ſmall account thereof: for as we haue heard, they make it not of the eſſence of their prieſthood to preach, neither doth it properly appertaine vnto that office: yea, ſay they, abſolution cannot be rightly ſought for at the prieſts hands, but by confeſſion of our ſinnes, which is done in penance. *Rhem.Ioh.*20.*ſect.*5. This then is their opinion, that by their deuiſed ceremony and Sacrament of penance, ſins are properly forgiuen, and that the preaching of the word is not thereto neceſſary. 73.Error.

Their chiefe argument is, by abuſing that place, Iohn 20.23. where they ſay Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament of penance, when he gaue power to his Apoſtles to remit and retaine ſinnes.

Anſw. Firſt, your Sacrament of penance, is neither grounded vpon this, nor any other place of Scripture: here in the words of Chriſt there is no inſtitution of a Sacrament, becauſe there is no viſible element giuen, whereunto the word being added, may make a Sacrament. Secondly, here the commiſſion is but renewed, which was granted before to his Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors, Matth.18.18.Fulk. Annot.Iohn 20. *ſect.*3.

The Proteſtants.

THe keyes of the Church, that is, the power to binde and looſe ſinners, to open or ſhut vnto them the kingdome of God, conſiſteth both in the external diſcipline and gouernment of the Church lawfully executed according to the word of God, as alſo in preaching of the Goſpell, by aſſuring in Chriſts name all faithfull and penitent perſons remiſſion and forgiuenes of their ſinnes, and in denouncing and threatning the wrath of God againſt the diſobedient and impenitent: Alſo as the Sacraments are ioyned to the word, as ſeales and pledges of the promiſes thereof, glorious pompe ſhould be brought into the Church: Their meaning is, that it was not ſeemely for a Biſhop to ſend foorth his legates and meſſengers, as temporall princes haue their ambaſſadours.

*Anno.*1159. Fredericke that famous Emperour ſent this meſſage to Adriane the fourth: Cardinalibus veſtris ciuitates noſtræ non patent, quia non videmus eos prædicatores, ſed prædatores; non pacis corroboratores, ſed pecuniæ raptores, &c. We ſhut vp our cities againſt your Cardinals, becauſe we ſee that they preach not, but pray vpon the people; they doe not ratifie peace, but rake together pence. Non orbis reparatores, ſed auri inſatiabiles corroſores, They doe not repaire the world, but empaire their wealth.

Now concerning the other part of their office in electing the Pope, it is but an vſurpation, and that of no great antiquitie: for in times paſt the Clergie and people of Rome were wont to chooſe their Biſhop and the Emperour confirmed him. But afterward as the ambition of the Popes increaſed, ſo alſo by degrees the ancient forme of election was altered: Firſt, *anno.*817. the Emperour was excluded by Stephanus the fourth, from the election of the Pope, but not from his conſecration: then came Paſchalis the firſt, who depriued the Emperor of all right either in electing, or conſecrating the Biſhop of Rome. For by his ſubtill allurement the Emperour Lodouicus reſigned his intereſt in ſuch elections to the Romanes. After him Adrianus the third, Leo the ninth, Alexander the ſecond, Gregory the ſeuenth, Calixtus the ſecond, did one after another as by violence thruſt the Emperour from hauing any authoritie in electing the Pope; thus was the Emperour excluded. As for the conſent of the people it was cleane cut off, *anno.*1000. by Pope Iohn 19. The Clergie yet had their voice, which was empaired at the firſt, when Nicholas the ſecond made a decree, that the Pope ſhould not be choſen without the conſent of the Cardinals *an.*1060. but afterward it was altogether taken away by Alexander the ſecond, who decreed, that the Pope ſhould be choſen onely by the Cardinals: And about this time the Cardinals began to grow in credite.

Concerning the dignitie of the Cardinals, and their priuiledges, they are but very young: *An.*1245. it was firſt deuiſed by Innocentius the fourth, that Cardinals ſhould weare red hats and robes, and ride vpon their footeclothed and ſtrapped horſe. *Anno.*1538. when Paulus the third held the papacie, a complaint was made to the Pope about ſome abuſes of the Cardinals, and one chiefe was this, that the Cardinals did hold certaine Biſhopricks, whereas Cardinalatus officium, & Epiſcopi officium incompatibilia ſunt, the office of a Cardinall, and of a Biſhop are vnmatchable: ſic Contaren. Sadolet. Polus, Cardinales, ſuggeſtion. ad Paulum. 3.

Now whereas the Cardinals though they be but Deacons, do ſit aboue Prieſts, Biſhops, and Archbiſhops: this alſo doth ouerthrowe the ſeuenth Canon of the ſixt generall Councell Trullane, which determineth thus, Statuimus vt diaconus, in quouis ſit eccleſiæ officio ante preſbyterum non ſedeat: We enact, that a Deacon, in what place or office of the Church ſoeuer, doe not ſit before a Prieſt.

Laſtly, that the office and calling of Cardinals, as it is now currant in Rome is altogether vnlawfull, and againſt all antiquitie, I will produce their owne witneſſes, that haue found out theſe ſeuerall faults in the Cardinals.

Firſt, that they buſie themſelues altogether with ſtate matters, neglecting the office of preaching, to the which they are called. Eſpenc. thus writing to the Cardinall of Lorraine, ſaith: Væ ac male tibi futurum: Woe and euill ſhall be vnto you, if you doe not proceed to preach the Goſpell. But ſome man will ſay, auaunt with this thy neceſſitie of preaching? and not much better one ſaid vnto me of a mitred Biſhop, now an hatted Cardinall: Wouldeſt thou haue a Biſhop, or Cardinall preach? I pray you, who elſe, &c. and yet this prelate was of their number, that would be called reuerend Fathers, Vicars of Chriſt, ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles: ſic Eſpenc. præfat. ad Carol. Lotharing.

Secondly, they are reproued for haunting the Courts of Princes, and leauing their owne charges: and they take vpon them, ad inſtar proconſulum, like to the old Romane Proconſuls: for ſo is the decree of Clemens 4. ſext. decret. lib. 1. tit. 15. c. 2. to haue their circuites and prouinces. Of this matter thus freely the ſame author vttereth his minde: Sicut me miſit pater, &c. As my father ſent me, ſaith Chriſt, ſo ſend I you, not gouernours of politicall, but reformers of eccleſiaſticall matters; Paſtors, not theeues; not Potentates, but Euangeliſts; not law-makers, but law-keepers; not Captaines of ſouldiours, but fiſhers of men, Eſpenc. ibid.

Thirdly, he findeth fault, becauſe many beardleſſe youths were made Cardinals: as alleaging an ancient Canon of Syluester, he thus inferreth: Eccleſia Romana, &c. In times paſt the Church of Rome had no Cardinals vnder 60. yeeres old: which Canon would now be reuiued, there being in theſe daies ſo many beardleſſe, or but yong bearded Cardinals, Eſpenc. commentar. in 1. *Timoth. p.*238. b.

Fourthly, the Cardinals of Rome are ſome them, no fewer alwaies then ſixe Cardinall Biſhops:

by which meanes the Churches, whereof they are Biſhops, are neglected: which alſo is contrarie to their owne Canons, Decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.5.c.3. Innocentius 3. would not ſuffer a Cardinall of Rome to be Biſhop of Rauenna, though he were deſired of the Clergie there, quia præſentia eius vtilior,&c. becauſe his preſence is more profitable to the Church of Rome, then Rauenna.

Fiftly, another notable abuſe in Cardinals is this, that whereas ſome of them are but Deacons, yet they ſit and take their place before Prieſts and Biſhops. Hereof complained Bernard in his time to Engenius the Pope, de conſiderat.lib.4. Ridiculè miniſtri veſtri,&c. It is very ridiculous, that your Miniſters or Deacons take vpon them to be preferred before your Prieſts. To this effect alſo their owne decrees, diſt.93.c.15. Non oportet,&c. It becommeth not a Deacon to ſit in the preſence of a Prieſt. Ibid.c.17. Diaconi, Let Deacons know that they are the Prieſts miniſters, as well as the Biſhops. But leaſt it might be here anſwered, that all Deacons of other Churches are tied to this rule, but the Cardinall deacons of the Church of Rome are exempted: it followeth, diſt.93. c.26. Pracipimus,&c. We commaund, that no Deacon, in what dignitie or office ſoeuer he is, ſhall ſit before a Prieſt. So likewiſe, part.2.cauſ.2.qu.4.c.2. Præſul non damnabitur,&c. A Prelate ſhall not be condemned but with 72. witneſſes; a Cardinall prieſt with 44. a Cardinall deacon of the citie of Rome with 27. witneſſes. By this Canon a ſimple Prelate or Biſhop is preferred before a Cardinall prieſt or Deacon. Secondly, they tye remiſſion and retayning of ſinnes to their imagined and deuiſed ſacrament of penance, ſaying, that where Chriſt gaue authoritie to remitte ſinnes to his Apoſtles, Ioh. 20.23. he inſtituted the ſacrament of penance, Rhemiſt. Iohn.20. ſect.3. The ſacrifice alſo and ſacraments of the Church, ſay they, are miniſtred for remiſſion of ſinnes, Rhemiſt.2. Corinth.5. ſect.3. Thirdly, they ſeeme to grant in words, that by preaching alſo of the Goſpell, ſinnes are retained, and remitted, ibid. but they make ſmall account thereof: for as we haue heard, they make it not of the eſſence of their prieſthood to preach, neither doth it properly appertaine vnto that office: yea, ſay they, abſolution cannot be rightly ſought for at the prieſts hands, but by confeſſion of our ſinnes, which is done in penance. Rhem. Ioh.20. ſect.5. This then is their opinion, that by their deuiſed ceremony and Sacrament of penance, ſins are properly forgiuen, and that the preaching of the word is not thereto neceſſary. 73.Error.

Their chiefe argument is, by abuſing that place, Iohn 20.23. where they ſay Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament of penance, when he gaue power to his Apoſtles to remit and retaine ſinnes.

Anſw. Secondly, here the commiſſion is but renewed, which was granted before to his Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors, Matth.18.18. Fulk. Annot. Iohn 20. ſect.3.

The Proteſtants.

THe keyes of the Church, that is, the power to binde and looſe ſinners, to open or ſhut vnto them the kingdome of God, conſiſteth both in the external diſcipline and gouernment of the Church lawfully executed according to the word of God, as alſo in preaching of the Goſpell, by aſſuring in Chriſts name all faithfull and penitent perſons remiſſion and forgiuenes of their ſinnes, and in denouncing and threatning the wrath of God againſt the diſobedient and impenitent: Alſo as the Sacraments are ioyned to the word, as ſeales and pledges of the promiſes thereof, ſo by the right adminiſtration of the Sacraments together with the preaching of the word, ſins are retained or remitted.

The Rhemiſts therefore doe vs great iniurie, in falſely charging of vs, that we ſhould hold that the ſpirituall power of the Church ſtandeth onely vpon the preaching of the word; whereas we grant, that it is exerciſed alſo in the Eccleſiaſticall gouernment of the Church, both in puniſhing, excommunicating and cenſuring of offenders, which is the binding of them, and in releaſing and abſoluing them againe, which is the other power of looſing: Rhemiſt.2. Corinth. cap.10. ſect.1. Leauing now this part of ſpirituall power in Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, which is not in this place in queſtion betweene vs, we muſt touch that other part, which is exerciſed in the word and ſacraments.

1 That the Sacraments doe bind and looſe, it is proued out of the word of God: they doe binde, Whoſoeuer eateth and drinketh vnworthily, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, 1. Cor. 11.29. They doe alſo looſe, As oft as ye ſhall eate this bread, and drinke this cup, you ſhew the Lords death till he come, verſ.26.

But here is a double caution and condition to be annexed. Firſt, that all Sacraments worke not this effect, but onely thoſe of Chriſts inſtitution, which are but two, baptiſme and the ſupper of the Lord: for Paul ſaith, I haue receiued of the Lord, that which I deliuered vnto you, 1.Cor. 11.23. If the Apoſtles would not, neither might deliuer any Sacraments, but thoſe which were inſtituted of Chriſt, what great preſumption is it in any other to doe it? Secondly, we muſt not thinke, that remiſſion of ſinnes is neceſſarily tied to the Sacraments, as though there could be no remiſſion without them, for the grace of remiſſion may be effectuall in the name of Chriſt, by the preaching of the word without a Sacrament, Ioh.20. ſect.4. Fulk. For the word may be preached without a Sacrament, but the Sacrament cannot be miniſtred without the word: for that were as though a man ſhould deliuer a ſeale without a writing. Neither is it our meaning, that as the Rhemiſts cauil with vs, the Sacrament cannot be adminiſtred without a ſermon of the death of Chriſt: for though that were alwayes to be wiſhed, yet where it cannot be had, there muſt and ought to be a briefe ſhewing and declaration of the death of Chriſt out of the word, ſo oft as the Sacrament is adminiſtred, as it is obſerued in our Church, Fulk. annot. 1. Corinth. 11 ſect. 15.

And as touching this conueniencie, and in ſome ſort neceſſitie of hauing ſermons and admonitions before the Sacraments, our aduerſaries haue no cauſe to miſlike our opinion, ſeeing it hath been of late yeeres by themſelues in ſome of their Councels ſo decreed: As in the Councell of Colen, anno. 1549. Parochus ſub adminiſtrationem cuiuſlibet ſacramenti ſacra concione breuiter populum admoneat, quid ea in re agatur: Let the pariſh Paſtor in the adminiſtration of euery Sacrament briefly admoniſh the people, what is done therein. Likewiſe, Synod, Auguſtenſ. anno. 1548. Volumus populum, quid in cuiuſque ſacramenti collatione agatur in concionibus et ſacramentorum adminiſtratione frequenter doceri: We would haue the people taught often in ſermons, and in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the meaning thereof: now to returne to the matter.

2 We muſt take heed, we conceiue not thus, as though the Sacrament gaue grace by the worke wrought, and that by the very vſe, forme, and externall act of the Sacrament we obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes, as the Rhemiſts would beare vs in hand, 1. Corinth. 11. ſect. 15. But the Sacraments are onely effectuall to the worthy receiuers, and to the worthy receiuing, faith is requiſite, as S. Paul willeth all men to examine themſelues, 1. Corinth. 11.28. which is, as he himſelfe interpreteth it, to proue whether they be in the faith, 2. Corinth. 13.5. Theſe conditions then being obſerued, we deny not, but that there is an exerciſe of the keyes euen in the Sacraments.

But chiefly and principally, is this power diſpenſed by the preaching of the word, as S. Paul ſaith, We are the ſauour of death vnto death, vnto ſome: there is the binding: And to other the ſauour of life vnto life: there is the looſing, 2. Corinth. 2.16. So our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, He that refuſeth me, the word that I haue ſpoken, ſhall iudge him in the laſt day, Ioh. 12.48. Here is the power of binding. Againe, the truth ſhall make you free, Ioh. 8.32. Here is the power of looſing. Who therefore can doubt of this, that the preaching of the word is the moſt proper and principall way and meane, for the exerciſing of this Eccleſiaſticall power? for ſeeing faith is the key of heauen, thereby we haue free acceſſe vnto the throne of grace, Rom. 5.2. and faith commeth by hearing, Rom. 10.17. and hearing by the word: It remayneth that by the word the keyes are diſpenſed.

Auguſtine alſo ſubſcribeth vnto this: for ſpeaking of reformation of life and repentance with remiſſion of former ſinnes, thus he ſaith, Quid empturus es vt facias, quæ emplaſtra quæſiturus? ecce cùm loquor, muta cor, & factum eſt, quod tam ſæpe & tam diu clamatur, vt fiat. in Pſal. 63. What medicine or plaiſter wilt thou buy to heale thy ſinne? Behold euen now, while I preach vnto thee, change thy heart, and it is alreadie done, which we ſo often call vpon you to be done. See then by the preaching of the word our heart is changed, our life amended, and our ſinne remitted.

Thus alſo it was decreed Concil. Colonienſ. part. 10. cap. 6. Nihil gladio illo ſpiritus, qui eſt verbum

Dei, potentius ad deyciendos, ac viciſſim conſolandos animos noſtros, &c. Nothing is more mightie or powerfull either to caſt down, or againe to comfort our ſoules,then the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God: to caſt downe is to binde,to comfort,that is to looſe.

Their owne Canons alſo here helpe vs: *Cauſ.*33.*diſtinct.*1.*c.*50.Verbum dei dimittit peccata,&c. The word of God doth forgiue ſins,&c. And *diſtinct.*20.*c.*1.There were two keyes giuen to *Peter, clauis ſcientiæ,*the key of knowledge to diſcerne,clauis poteſtatis, and the key of power to binde or looſe. And this is confirmed, *Extrau.Ioann.tit.*14.*c.*5. Reſtat quod ad aliquid definiendum,&c. It remaineth,that to determine the buſines of the Church,both keyes are neceſſarie,the key of diſcerning,and the key of determining,&c. that like as the materiall eye doth direct the materiall key, ſo the ſpirituall eye of knowledge,&c. Whereupon I conclude, that if ſpirituall knowledge bee one of the kyes,and true knowledge cannot be had without the word; *For the not knowing of the Scriptures is the cauſe of error,*Mark.12.24. then it doth neceſſarie follow, that the keyes conſiſt in the knowledge of the word.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this doctrine; Walter Brute: The keyes of the kingdome of heauen are not knowledge to diſcerne,and power to iudge,becauſe theſe nothing auaile in baptiſme, by the which the kingdome of heauen is opened: therefore in my iudgement it ſeemeth,that the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, are faith and hope; for by faith in Ieſus Chriſt,and hope in him for remiſſion of ſinnes we enter the kingdome of heauen,Fox p.492. But faith commeth by the word: *Ergo,*in the power of the word doe the keyes conſiſt.

George Wiſehart holy Martyr: I ſay,that an vnlearned man not exerciſed in the word of God, &c.whatſoeuer ſtate or order he is of,hath no power to binde or looſe, ſeeing he wanteth the inſtrument,by which he bindeth or looſeth,that is to ſay,the word of God,pag.1270.

THE SECOND PART, TO WHOM THE authoritie of the keyes is committed.

The Papiſts.

THe authoritie and power of excommunication,ſay they,is not in the whole Church, but onely in the Prelates: neither was the power of binding and looſing giuen vnto the whole Church: but in their owne name,not in the name or right of the Church,doe the Paſtors and Prelates exerciſe this power,*Rhemiſt.*1.*Corinth.*5.*ſect.*3. *Bellarm.lib.*1.*de Clericis cap.*7. The Church is ſaid to binde and looſe, becauſe the Prelates doe binde and looſe, as a man is ſaid to ſpeake,and ſee,though he onely ſpeake with the tongue,and ſee with the eyes. 74.Error.

*Argum.*1. They ſeeme to proue it by S.Pauls example, 1.Cor.5. I abſent in bodie, but preſent in ſpirit, haue decreed: Saint Paul vſeth here his Apoſtolike power, in ſending his letters and Mandatum, to haue the inceſtuous perſon excommunicate: *Ergo,*the right was in him and not in the Church,and ſo conſequently in the Biſhops his ſucceſſors.

Anſ. Firſt,Saint Paul ſendeth no Mandatum, but ſheweth his Apoſtolike power, in decreeing the inceſtuous perſon worthie of excommunication, and requiring the ſame to be executed by the Church,*Fulk.*1.*Cor.*5.*ſect.*2. Secondly,though Paul gaue the ſentence,yet was it done both in the power of Chriſt and the name of the whole Church: for he had decreed onely that he ſhould be excommunicate: it was not actually done: but to the due performing thereof there is required the congregating of the Church in Chriſts name,the preſence of Paul in ſpirit by his Apoſtolike power,and that it ſhould be done in the name of Chriſt. All this ſheweth,that Paul gaue ſentence in the name of the whole Church. Thirdly, the words of the text are plaine, that the power was giuen to the whole Church: for that power, whereby he was deliuered to Sathan,was the power of Ieſus Chriſt,1.Cor.5.4. but the power of the Lord Ieſus was committed to the whole congregation: When ye are gathered together and my ſpirit,in the name of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt: that is,in the power of the Lord Ieſus. So that this place which they vrge for themſelues, affordeth a better argument for vs.

*Argum.*2. Paul (they ſay) by the preeminent power of his miniſterie, pardoneth the inceſtuous perſon whom he had excommunicate,Rhemiſt.argument.in 1.ad Corinth.

Anſ. The text is plaine,that he conſenteth the Church ſhould pardon him,2.Corinth.2.10.To whom you forgiue any thing I forgiue alſo. Here not Paul onely,but the whole Church pardoneth.

Againe,the Ieſuites ſimile may be returned vpon his owne head: for as the eye and tongue in the bodie are but inſtruments of the life and power of the ſoule,which quickeneth the whole bodie: ſo the gouernours of the Church doe execute the diſcipline of the Church by the ſpirit of Chriſt,which is giuen to the whole bodie.

The Proteſtants.

THe authoritie of excommunication pertaineth to the whole Church, although the execution and iudgement thereof, to auoide confuſion, bee committed to the gouernours of the Church, which exerciſe that authoritie, as in the name of Chriſt, ſo in the name of the whole Church, *Fulk.totidem verbis,annot.*1.*Cor.*5.*ſect.*3.

*Argum.*1. Matth.18.17. If he will not heare thee, tell the Church: This place prooueth, that although the exerciſing of the keyes be referred to the gouernours of the Church; yet the authoritie and right is in the whole Church: for the keyes were giuen to the whole Church. The Paſtors and gouernours, though they bee excellent and principall members of the Church, yet are they improperly called the Church, Argument.Illyrici.

Their anſwere here commonly is, that dic eccleſia, tell it to the Church, may bee vnderſtood of the Prelates of the Church: yea Bellarmine will haue it beare this ſenſe, that to tell the Church, is to referre it to the ſentence of the Pope: So that in effect he maketh the Pope the Church.

Anſ. Firſt, that the Prelates and Paſtors of the Church, haue the adminiſtration of the keyes committed vnto them for order ſake, wee denie not: yet the right and power thereof reſteth in the whole Church: and to them offences are to bee brought, as the miniſters and officers of the Church. Secondly, how ridiculous a gloſſe that is, that, dic eccleſia, ſhould be all one as to ſay, dic Papa, tell it to the Pope, as though one man ſhould bee the Church. Saint Hierome ſheweth in the like caſe concerning a great man in his time, Iohn Patriarch of Ieruſalem: An tu ſolus eccleſia es,&c. Are you onely the Church, that whoſoeuer offendeth you, is ſtraightway excluded from Chriſt? ad Pammach. aduerſ.Iohann.

*Argum.*2. We conclude the ſame alſo out of S. Pauls words, 1.Cor.2.21. All things are yours, whether Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, whether things preſent, or things to come, and ye are Chriſts, and Chriſt Gods: Ergo, whatſoeuer power is in the Church, it is the Churches, not onely the common vſe and the benefit thereof, (becauſe it may be anſwered, that although the keyes be onely granted to the Prelates, yet they vſe them to the good of the Church) but the right alſo and poſſeſſion thereof, euen as the Church is the inheritance and proper poſſeſſion of Chriſt.

3 Auguſtine conſenteth: *Eccleſia, quæ fundatur in Chriſto, claues ab eo regni cœlorum accepit in Petro. Tract.in Iohann.*124. The Church, which is founded vpon Chriſt, receiued in Peter the keyes of the kingdome of heauen: But the whole Church, and not onely the Paſtors, is founded and builded vpon Chriſt: Ergo.

Interrelig.Caſarea.cap.9. Ad Eccleſiam pertinet verbum dei, pertinent ſacramenta, pertinent claues ligandi & ſoluendi: Vnto the Church appertaineth the word of God, the Sacraments, the keyes alſo of binding and looſing. From hence we reaſon thus, to whom the word and the Sacraments belong, to the ſame alſo appertaine the keyes: but they belong to the whole Church: Ergo.

And yet more euidently out of their owne decrees: *Cauſ.*24. *qu.*1.*c.*6. Petrus quando,&c. Peter, when he receiued the keyes, ſignified the whole Church: Si hoc Petro,&c. for if it were ſaid onely to Peter, then the Church doth it not: but if the Church binde and looſe, &c. And *cap.*20. Domus eccleſia,&c. The houſe of the Church receiued the keyes. And your Maſter of Sentences, *lib.*4.diſt. 19.c. out of Hierome: Habet omnis eccleſia in Epiſcopis & presbyteris: The whole Church hath this power in Biſhops and Prieſts: that is exerciſed by them, yet the power is in the whole Church.

Walter Brute holy confeſſor of Gods truth, who liued in the raigne of Richard the ſecond, thus teſtifieth with vs: In the 20. of Iohn our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Receiue you the holy Ghoſt, whoſe ſinnes you remit, they are remitted,&c. Seeing therefore that all Chriſtians that are baptized in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, receiue the holy Ghoſt, it appeareth that they haue power giuen them of Chriſt, to remit ſinnes, Fox pag.492. His argument is this: to whom the holy Ghoſt is giuen, to them alſo is giuen the power and right of binding and looſing: but to the whole Church and all faithfull Chriſtians is the holy Ghoſt giuen: Ergo,&c. And therefore the Paſtors and Miniſters doe execute this power in the name of the whole Church.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE PASTORS of the Church haue any abſolute power to remit ſinnes, otherwiſe, then as Miniſters onely.

The Papiſts.

75.Error. They ſpare not to ſay, that Prieſts haue full right to remit ſinnes, and are not miniſters onely thereof, and diſpenſers, but haue full power as Chriſt had, and he that doubteth of their right herein, may as well doubt whether Chriſt had authoritie as man to remit ſinnes, *Rhemiſt.annot. Ioh.*20.*ſect.*3. And againe, they call it an expreſſe power and commiſſion, yea a wonderfull power which is giuen vnto prieſts to remit ſinnes, and therefore it followeth neceſſarily, that men ſhould ſubmit themſelues to their iudgement, for releaſe of their ſinnes, *Annot.Ioh.*20.*ſect.*5.

*Argum.*1. They reaſon thus out of our Sauiours owne words, Ioh.20.21. As my father hath ſent me, ſo I ſend you. He ſheweth his fathers commiſſion giuen to himſelf, and then in plaine termes moſt amply imparteth the ſame to his Apoſtles: But Chriſt had full right to remit ſinnes: Ergo, alſo the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors: for they haue the ſame power that Chriſt had, *Rhemiſt.annot.Ioh.*20.*ſect.*3.

Anſ. Firſt, it is great preſumption, and ſpoken without any ground, to ſay, that Chriſt, by ſending his Apoſtles into the world, gaue them as full, large, and ample commiſſion, as he himſelfe had: for neither the Pope, in whom remaineth, as they ſay, the Apoſtolike authoritie, by their owne confeſſion, can doe all that Chriſt did, as to ordaine and inſtitute Sacraments: and Chriſt (ſay they) might forgiue ſinnes without the Sacraments, which the Pope cannot doe, and ſo conſequently neither the Apoſtles, whoſe full iuriſdiction he hath, in this behalfe, *Bellarm.de pontif.lib.*5.*cap.*4. Secondly, the power here granted to the Apoſtles, is in the name of Chriſt, to declare and pronounce remiſſion of ſinnes, according to the will of God, not properly in their owne power to releaſe or abſolue ſinners.

*Argum.*2. He breathed vpon them, and gaue them the holy Ghoſt, verſ.22. Therefore he that denieth the Prieſts authoritie to forgiue ſinnes, he muſt denie the holy Ghoſt to be God, and not to haue power to remit ſinnes, *Rhemiſt.ibid.ſect.*4.

Anſ. What a blaſphemous conſequent is this? The holy Ghoſt hath abſolute power to forgiue ſinnes: Ergo, the Apoſtles alſo, and all other prieſts haue the ſame power. Firſt, by this meanes they make no difference betweene the fulnes of power in our Sauiour Chriſt, and the communication of that power to other Miniſters: of Chriſt it is ſaid, that the Spirit was not giuen him by meaſure, Ioh.3.34. and that the holy Ghoſt dwelleth in him bodily: but it were great blaſphemie ſo to ſay of any man, Apoſtle or Miniſter beſide, which haue receiued of the ſame grace, but not in the like meaſure that Chriſt hath; but the ſpirit is giuen to euery one in meaſure, as they haue need in their ſeuerall places and callings. Secondly, though wee ſhould graunt, that the Apoſtles had the full authoritie of Chriſt actually to remit ſinnes, which they ſhall neuer proue, yet it may bee doubted, whether all Miniſters, whom they call Prieſts (which name we refuſe not, if it bee taken according to the ſenſe of the originall word Preſbyter, and not for a ſacrificing prieſthood) haue as full power, in this caſe, as the Apoſtles had, nay it is plaine they haue not: for the Apoſtles and other in the Primitiue Church, had power to diſcerne ſpirits, 1.Cor.12.10. and after a ſtrange manner to exerciſe power ouer their bodily life, as Peter did vpon Ananias and Sapphira, Act.5. Yet we rather ſtand vpon this point, that neither the Apoſtles nor any other Miniſters haue power actually to remit ſinnes, then onely as diſpenſers and ſtewards in the name of Chriſt.

The Proteſtants.

AL the power of binding and looſing committed to the Apoſtles and to the Miniſters of the Word and Sacraments, is, by declaring the will and pleaſure of God out of his word, both to pronounce forgiuenes of ſinnes to al, that are truly penitent, and the retaining of them to the obſtinate and impenitent, *Fulk.annot. Ioh.*20. *ſect.*3. So that Miniſters are not made iudges in this caſe, but onely as the Lords ambaſſadours, to declare the will of God out of his word.

*Argum.*1. There is a notable place for this purpoſe, 2.Cor.5.18. God hath reconciled vs vnto himſelfe through Ieſus Chriſt, and hath giuen vs the miniſterie of reconciliation. So then Chriſt is the onely author of reconciliation, the Apoſtles are but miniſters: how then ſay the Rhemiſts that Chriſt himſelfe is but a miniſter alſo of our reconciliation, yet a chiefe miniſter, whereas the Apoſtle maketh him the author? God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, verſ.19. We are but ambaſſadours for Chriſt, and pray you in Chriſts ſtead, to be reconciled vnto God. This then is the office of Miniſters, not to reconcile men vnto God, but to pray them to bee reconciled through Chriſt: Chriſt onely is the reconciler, they but miniſters of reconciliation: they are but meſſengers and ambaſſadours, onely to declare their princes pleaſure; their commiſſion is certaine, beyond that they cannot goe. Wherefore that is a blaſphemous decretall, and cleane contrarie to the Scripture, which is aſcribed, but falſely, to Pontianus Biſhop of Rome, which ſaith, that God hath Prieſts ſo familiar, that by them he forgiueth the ſinnes of others, and reconcileth them vnto him. But S. Paul ſaith, that God onely by Chriſt reconcileth vs vnto himſelfe.

*Argum.*2. Auguſtine doth very freely vtter his minde concerning this matter, who putteth this obiection: If men doe not forgiue ſinnes, then it ſhould ſeeme to be falſe which Chriſt ſaith, Whatſoeuer you binde in earth is bound in heauen. He anſwereth: Daturus erat Dominus hominibus ſpiritum ſanctum, &c. God was to giue vnto men the holy Ghoſt, by whom their ſinnes ſhould be forgiuen them. Spiritus dimittit, non vos; ſpiritus autem Deus eſt: Deus ergo dimittit, non vos: The ſpirit therefore remitteth ſinne, and not you: And this is recited in the decrees, *Cauſ.*2.*qu.*1.*cap.*82. the ſpirit is God; God forgiueth ſinnes, and not you. Here is one argument, God onely forgiueth ſinnes: Ergo, not man. Againe, Quid es homo niſi ager ſanandus? vis mihi eſſe medicus? mecum quære medicum: O man what art thou that takeſt away my ſinnes, but a ſicke man thy ſelfe? wouldeſt thou be my Phiſition? nay, let vs both together goe ſeeke a Phiſition that may heale vs. Loe, another argument: He cannot be a Phiſition to others, that needeth a Phiſition himſelfe: he cannot reconcile others to God, who hath himſelfe neede of a reconciler. Further, he ſaith: Qui dimittit per hominem, poteſt dimittere præter hominem: non enim minus eſt idoneus per ſe dare, qui poteſt per alium dare: He that can forgiue ſins by man, can forgiue alſo without man: for he may as well forgiue by himſelfe, as he can do it by another. Here is then the third argument: If man doe actually forgiue ſinnes, then Chriſt ſhould not forgiue ſinnes without man: for the whole power is committed to man. Yea, the Rhemiſts affirme the ſame, that it is neceſſarie we ſhould ſubmit our ſelues to the iudgement of the Prieſt for releaſe of our ſinnes: if it be neceſſarie, then ſinnes cannot be remitted without the Prieſt: then is Chriſts power limited, he cannot forgiue without man, which is contrarie to that Auguſtine affirmeth here.

To this agreeth the Councell Cabilonenſ. ſub Carolo. can. 33. in theſe words: Confeſſio quæ Deo fit, purgat peccata; quæ ſacerdoti fit, docet, qualiter ipſa purgentur peccata: Deus enim ſalutis & ſanitatis largitor & author, plerunque hanc præbet ſua potentia inuiſibili adminiſtratione, plerunque medicorum operatione: The confeſſion which is made to God, purgeth our ſinne; that which is made to the prieſt, ſheweth how our ſinne ſhould bee purged: for God the author and giuer of health and ſaluation doth many times ſaue by his inuiſible power, and many times by the worke or labour of the Phiſition. Hence we learne, that the Miniſter doth heale the ſinnes of the ſoule no otherwiſe then the Phiſition doth cure the diſeaſes of the bodie, that is, miniſterially onely: and that he actually forgiueth not ſinnes, but onely ſheweth and declareth how they are forgiuen.

We haue plentifull teſtimonie from their owne Canons: Decret. p. 2. cauſ. 11. qu. 3. c. 87. Petra tenet, &c. It is the rocke (that is Chriſt) which retaineth ſinnes, the rocke remitteth ſinnes. Part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 141. Nemo tollit, &c. No man taketh away ſinne but onely Chriſt, which is the Lambe that taketh away the ſinne of the world.

Their Maſter of Sentences alloweth that ſaying of S. Ambroſe: Ille ſolus peccata, &c. He onely forgiueth ſinnes, that died for our ſinnes, lib. 4. diſtinct. 18. d. And againe, ibid. f. Sacerdotibus tribuit poteſtatem, &c. Chriſt giueth power to Prieſts to binde and looſe, that is, oſtendendi, &c. to ſhew or declare that they are bound, or looſed: like as the Prieſts in the law had power to diſcerne betweene leper and leper. And diſtinct. 19. c. Sacerdotes non propria virtute, &c. Miniſters doe not bleſſe by their owne power, but as they beare the figure of Chriſt, that is, repreſent Chriſt: Ergo, the Miniſters of the Church not iudicially, but miniſterially onely forgiue, or retaine ſinnes, that is, only declare them ſo to be.

This truth hath been ſealed by the blood of holy Martyrs: George Carpenter burned in Bauaria, anno 1527. for this article with others, that he did not beleeue that a Prieſt could forgiue a mans ſinnes: that is, by any actuall or inherent power in himſelfe.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: I ſay, that onely Chriſt looſeth a ſinner, which is contrite, by his word and promiſe, and the Prieſt doth nothing but ſhew and declare that word. And this teſtifieth S. Paul in the 2. to the Corinthians, ſaying, God hath reconciled vs vnto him through Chriſt Ieſus: See it is God that through Chriſt, looſeth our ſinne. And he hath (quoth S. Paul) ordained vs miniſters of the ſame attonement. See how Chriſts Apoſtles called not themſelues the authors of binding and looſing, but Miniſters, Fox pag. 1105.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER STRAIGHTwaies whatſoeuer be looſed or bound by the miniſterie of men vpon earth, be ſo in heauen.

The Papiſts.

76. Error. AN expreſſe power (ſay they) is giuen vnto Prieſts to remit and retaine ſinnes: And Chriſt promiſeth, that whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer they forgiue, they are forgiuen of God, and whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer they retaine, they are retained of God, Rhemiſt. annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 5. Whereby this appeareth to bee their opinion, which is manifeſt alſo by the practiſe of their Church, that at the will and pleaſure of euery Prieſt exerciſing the keyes vpon earth, men are bound and looſed in heauen.

They ground this their opinion vpon the generalitie of the words: Whoſoeuers ſinnes you remit, they are remitted, Ioh. 20. 23. And Matth. 18. 18. Whatſoeuer you binde in earth, ſhall bee bound in heauen.

Anſ. Theſe places are not ſo to be vnderſtood, as though God were bound to ratifie euery decree of men vpon earth: for firſt this power is giuen to all lawfull Paſtors which doe hold the Apoſtolike faith, not to Idolatrous, ignorant, and blaſphemous prieſts, ſuch as moſt, if not all, of the popiſh ſort are. Secondly, they muſt decree in the earth according to Gods will: Wherefore Ioh. 20. 22. firſt Chriſt breatheth his ſpirit vpon his Apoſtles, and then giueth them their commiſſion: ſignifying hereby, that they muſt execute this power as they ſhall be directed by Gods ſpirit: and Matth. 18. 20. it followeth, that they muſt bee aſſembled in the name of Chriſt; that is, according to Chriſts rule and the direction of his word, they muſt binde and looſe, and not at their owne diſcretion.

The Proteſtants.

THat no ſentence or decree of men bindeth or looſeth before God in heauen, but that which is pronounced according to the will and pleaſure of God, and by the warrant of his word, the Scripture euery where teacheth vs.

*Argum.*1. Prouerbs.26.2. As the ſparrow by flying eſcapeth, ſo the curſe that is cauſeleſſe ſhall not come. Iſai.5.20.Woe vnto them that ſpeake good of euill, and euill of good. He that iuſtifieth the wicked and condemneth the iuſt, they are both an abomination to God, Prou.17.15. Wherefore a Prieſt binding a penitent man, and looſing a wicked man, doth flatly tranſgreſſe the law and rule of Gods word: neither ſhall his ſentence be ratified in heauen.

*Arg.*2. In ſaying that whoſoeuers ſins the Prieſt bindeth or looſeth, his ſentēce ſtandeth in effect before God, they muſt needes admit one or both of theſe abſurdities: either to grant, that a Prieſt cannot erre in diſpenſing of the keyes, which were too ſhamefull a ſaying, to giue ſo great a priuiledge to euery ignorant and ſimple prieſt, (ſuch as their Church hath great ſtore of) which no mortall man can haue; Saint Paul giueth warning to Timothie, who was more then a common or ordinarie Miniſter, that he lay not his hands ſuddenly vpon any, ad 1.*Timoth.*5.*verſ.*22. But if Timothie, ſo excellent a man, had been free from erring in executing his function, this exhortation of S. Paul had been needleſſe and ſuperfluous:

Or elſe, they muſt ſay that the iudgement of mens ſoules is committed vnto them: for if, looke, how they pronounce vpon men on earth, euen ſo it fareth with them before God; then the ſaluation and damnation of men dependeth of their ſentence. But the Scripture ſaith, Doe not iudge thy brother, for we ſhall all appeare before the iudgement ſeate of Chriſt, Rom.14.10. Men therefore are not iudges to pronounce who are ſaued or damned, but the iudgement muſt bee committed to Chriſt.

But who knoweth not that the popiſh Church doth arrogate vnto themſelues this power, to define who are Saints in heauen, and whoſe ſoules are tormented in hell? Thus they dealt with Iohn Huſſe; hauing condemned him, they ſet a crowne of paper vpon his head pictured with diuels, ſaying vnto him: Now we commit thy ſoule to the diuell. At the burning of that worthie ſeruant of God and bleſſed Martyr Iohn Frith, one Doctor Cooke, a foule mouthed Papiſt, bid the people to pray no more for him, then they would for a dogge. And thus they take the Lords office out of his hand, in taking vpon them to be iudges of men.

*Argum.*3. I will conclude with Auguſtines words, he ſaith, that ſinnes are forgiuen, or not forgiuen: non ſecundum arbitrium hominum, ſed ſecundum arbitrium Dei, & orationes ſanctorum: not after the will and pleaſure of men, but according to the will of God, and at the prayers of deuout and holy men.

With Auguſtine accordeth all antiquitie, *Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap.*37. Tunc vera eſt abſolutio præſidentis, cùm æterni arbitrium ſequitur iudicis, vt Lazarum prius Chriſtus mortuum viuificauit, qui viuus egreſſus poſtea à diſcipulis ſolutus eſt: Then the Rector abſolueth aright when he followeth the will of the eternall Iudge, as Chriſt firſt did reuiue Lazarus being dead: and then bad his Apoſtles looſe him.

Nicholaus 1.epiſt.ad Michaëlem: Qui ligati ſunt ligare, & qui ipſi mortui ſunt alios mortificare non poſſunt: They cannot binde others that are bound themſelues, nor mortifie others being dead themſelues. But many prieſts themſelues are dead and bound in their ſinnes; how then can they binde others?

*Leodienſ.epiſtol.cont.Paſchal.*2. Dicimus cum Gregorio ligandi & ſoluendi poteſtate ſe priuat, qui ſubiectos pro ſuo velle, non eorum merito ligat, aut ſoluit: We ſay with Gregorie, he doth depriue himſelfe of the power of binding and looſing, which doth binde or looſe his inferiours after his owne fancie, not according to their deſert.

This alſo is the ſentence of their decrees; *Cauſ.*11.*qu.*3.*c.*46.Gelaſius: Neminem poteſt iniqua grauare ſententia: An vniuſt ſentence can hurt no man: therefore he neede not deſire to be abſolued from that ſentence, wherewith he is not bound. *Cap.*62.Gregor. Tum vera eſt abſolutio, &c. Then the abſolution of the Preſident or Prelate is good, when he followeth the will of the internall iudge.

Likewiſe the Maſter of Sentences, *diſtinct.*18.*lib.*4.h. Interdum, qui foras mittitur, &c. Sometime he that is thruſt out of the Church is within, and he that is within is out of the Church.

Walter Brute holy confeſſor, ſheweth how that Prieſts taking vpon them to bee iudges of men, doe more then Chriſt did in the daies of his fleſh, who would not take vpon him to be a iudge, or to puniſh ſinners according to the quantitie of their ſinnes, but hath reſerued that for his ſecond comming: And againſt ſuch he applieth that ſaying of S. Paul, 1.Cor.4. Iudge not before the time, vntill the comming of the Lord, who ſhall diſcloſe the ſecrets of hearts, &c. Fox pag.492.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: The declaration or miniſterie of the Prieſt doth not any thing auaile to looſe any perſon, vnleſſe he that ſhould bee looſed giue credence vnto the word miniſtred or ſhewed by the Prieſt, Fox pag. 1105. Ergo, the ſentence of the Prieſt doth not abſolutely binde.

THE FIFT QVESTION, CONCERNING the lawfulnes of mariage in Miniſters.

THis queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether it bee expedient or requiſite that all Miniſters ſhould be tyed vnto ſingle life. Secondly, whether men twice married are to be admitted into the Miniſterie. Thirdly, whether Miniſters hauing entered into holy orders, ought to renounce the ſocietie of their wiues before married.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER IT BE lawfull for Miniſters to marrie.

The Papiſts.

77. Error. BEllarmine confeſſeth, that ſingle life is not impoſed vpon Miniſters by the law of God, for there is no precept either in the old or new Teſtament, that forbiddeth Miniſters to marrie: but it is a poſitiue law of the Church, moſt ancient and moſt iuſt, kept and obſerued euen ſince the Apoſtles time. And therefore it is not now lawfull for Miniſters to marrie, cap. 18. lib. de Clericis.

Argum. 1. 1. Timoth. 2. 3. The Apoſtle ſaith, that no man that warreth, entangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life: But to bee married and to haue care of houſehold, are counted amongſt the affaires and buſines of this life: Ergo, a Miniſter who is the Lords ſouldier, ought not to entangle himſelfe therewith, Bellarmine.

Anſ. Firſt, the Ieſuite before confeſſed, that they had no Scripture againſt Miniſters mariage, how is it then, that now he pleadeth Scripture? Secondly, wee muſt put the Ieſuite in minde of his owne expoſition of this place, lib. 5. de pontif. cap. 10. where, this place being alleaged againſt the temporall dominion [illegible] Eccleſiaſticall perſons, he anſwereth, that this place onely forbiddeth negotiationes, and mercimonia, merchandiſe and trafficke in the world, not regimen politicum, politicall regiment. If then the politicall care of a Citie, Prouince, or Common-wealth bee no impediment, in his iudgement, to the ſpirituall warfare: much leſſe without all queſtion is the domeſticall care of one familie, the charge of wife and children. Thirdly, we vtterly denie, that marriage is an hinderance or let to the calling of Miniſters: nay, we ſay, that it is an helpe and comfort to thoſe that haue not the proper gift of continencie.

Argum. 2. Saint Paul would not haue women admitted to be widowes of the Church, that had a purpoſe to marrie, 1. Timoth. 5. 11. much leſſe they that are married ſhould bee admitted to miniſter the Sacrament, Rhemiſt. annotat. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, the reaſon is not alike: for ſuch women as had no husbands were fitteſt for the ſeruice of the Church, becauſe they were free from other domeſticall attendance, as wiues are not, which muſt waite of their husbands: but mariage in this behalfe is no impediment to Miniſters, but rather an helpe, while they haue one at home that careth for their domeſticall affayres. Secondly, if the maried eſtate be not fit to miniſter or receiue the Sacrament, then in thoſe churches where they receiued the Sacrament euery day, there ſhould haue been no mariage at all. Thirdly, Saint Paul would haue no widow choſen vnder 60. yeeres, in which age, the heate of luſt being abated, there is no neede of mariage: but the caſe is otherwiſe in Miniſters, who in the ſtrengh of their age are admitted, and had neede of that remedie, if they be not endued with the gift of continencie. But if it were ſo, that a Miniſter ſhould not bee admitted before 70. or 80. yeeres, which in a man is no more, in reſpect of procreation, then 50. or 60. in a woman, the iniunction then of ſingle life would not ſeeme ſtreight. Thus then is this argument anſwered.

Argum. 3. The Ieſuite giueth diuers inſtances, wherein mariage is a let and impediment to Miniſters: As, it hindereth their prayer, their preaching, their almes and liberalitie to the poore, for they haue wife and children to care for, Bellarmine.

Anſw. Firſt, belike you eſteeme of marriage, as of an vnholy and vnpure thing, that a man can neither pray, not do the office of a Chriſtian, perfourming the dutie to his wife: and indeed one of your companions calleth mariage a prophanation of ſacred orders. Greg. Martin. diſcouer. cap. 15. ſect. 11. Whereas the Apoſtle calleth it an honourable ſtate, Hebr. 13. And it was inſtituted in Paradiſe, whereas before the fall of man there was no vncleane thing. Secondly, we denie not, but that abuſe of mariage both in Miniſters and other lay-men, is an impediment to all holy actions: and therefore S. Paul giueth generall counſell to all, both Miniſters and others, that they which haue wiues ſhould be as though they had none, 1. Corinth. 7. 29. that is, ſhould liue ſoberly in mariage, and not giue themſelues to the wantonneſſe of the fleſh. Thirdly, neither doth mariage hinder hoſpitalitie: for S. Paul requiring that a Miniſter ſhould be harborous, 1. Timoth.3.2. giueth alſo rules concerning the gouernement of his familie, his wife and children. verſ.4.11. For to whom may he better commit the care of houſhold affaires then to his wife? And that familie which is guided by a carefull and godly huſwife, wee ſee by experience, to yeeld more reliefe to the poore, and giue entertainement to ſtrangers, then thoſe houſes which haue none. And where it is obiected, that Miniſters will care altogether for their children: It hath bin ſeene that ſingle prieſts in time of Poperie, haue been more couetous and greedie to enrich their kindred, then maried Miniſters haue cared for the prouiſion of their children. And hereupon diuers Canons were made to reſtraine their couetous deſires to aduance their kinred; as *Cauſ.*12. *qu.*1.*c.*27.*Pelag.*2. Nulli Epiſcopor.&c. It ſhall not be lawfull for any Biſhop, to conuert the moueable or immoueable thinges of the Church to his owne vſe. *Cauſ.*16.*qu.*7.*c.*3. *Gregor.*7. decreeth againſt ſuch Biſhops, as did conferre oblations vpon their ſeruitors, and kinſmen. And as for a moderate care to be taken to make prouiſion for wife and children, your owne Canons allow it, *Cauſ.*12.*qu.*1.*c.*19. Epiſcopi de rebus proprijs &c. Biſhops may leaue to their heires, their owne gotten goods: and *c.*21. Poteſtatem habeat moriens &c. A Biſhop dying hath power to diſpoſe of his proper goods to whom he will; Fortaſſis vxorem habet &c. It may be he hath a wife, children, kinſemen, or ſeruants &c.

*Argum.*4. Single life by the Apoſtle is preferred before the married eſtate, and therefore fitteſt for Miniſters: for hee that is married careth for the things of the world, 1. Corinth.7.33. Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Firſt, ſingle life is preferred before mariage, in all men, and not onely in Miniſters: And therefore as lay-men are not bound to ſingle life, though it be in it ſelfe more conuenient; ſo neither ought miniſters to be. Secondly, though a thing in it ſelfe be beſt, yet is it not vniuerſally beſt for euery man: as riches are better then pouertie, becauſe they are Gods bleſſing; yet is it not beſt for euery man to be rich; God ſeeth it good, that ſome men ſhould be poore: So ſingle life is the beſt for thoſe that haue the gift of chaſtity, that can with a quiet conſcience liue ſingle: otherwiſe matrimony were much better: for Saint Paul, that wiſheth that euery one would liue ſingle as he did, yet afterward ſaith, It is better to marry then to burne. So that by the Apoſtles iudgement, to marrie is beſt for him that hath not the gift of continencie, Iewel. pag.232. defenſ. Apolog.

*Argum.*5. Winchester reaſoneth thus, As a father may forbid certaine of his children to marrie, ſo may a King in his kingdome forbid certaine of his ſubiects to marrie, that is, all the Prieſts of the Realme, Fox. pag.1793.

Anſw. Firſt, the father hath no ſuch power to keepe his child from mariage, if neede require: for the fathers will herein dependeth vpon the neceſſitie which his childe hath to marrie, as S. Paul teacheth, 1. Cor.7.37. Secondly, that which the word of God hath left free for all men, by the law of the prince cannot be reſtrained; and if the King may forbid marriage to any, he may as well enioyne laymen ſingle life, as prieſtes: but ſuch a law to reſtraine the lay ſorte from mariage, were manifeſt tyrannie, and therefore the other reſtrainte would ſeeme hard and vniuſt. Thirdly, by this argument it appeareth, that theſe cruell prohibitions of marriage, are built vpon the lawes onely and ordinances of men, neither warranted by Gods word, nor allowed by the ancient practiſes of the Church, as our aduerſaries would beare vs in hand.

Bellarmine here countenanceth out this matter with great ſhew of antiquitie; and firſt he produceth diuers Canons of Councels, which I will briefly take a view of. Firſt, *Ancyran.concil.c.*10. it was decreed, that Deacons in their ordination not proteſting that they would marrie, ſhould not be ſuffered afterward; but if they did proteſt to marrie, they might, for they are therein diſpenſed with by the Biſhop.

Anſw. Firſt, this Canon maketh more againſt them for Miniſters mariage, which is here vpon proteſtation permitted, which is not ſuffered now in the popiſh Church. Secondly, if the Biſhop may diſpenſe with mariage of Miniſters, then is it not a diuine or apoſtolicall, but an humane and politicall deuiſe. Thirdly, it is not the diſpenſation of the Biſhop, that maketh mariage free, but the libertie granted by the Apoſtle, which is not to be abridged; as *diſtinct.*27.*c.*5. it is alledged out of the Toletan councel, that ſubdeacons being asked in their ordination, of their deſire or purpoſe of mariage, ſhould not be denied, conceſſam ab Apoſtolo licentiam; the licence granted vnto them by the Apoſtle. Fourthly, Marriage was then free by proteſtation, but now, velit nolit, will they, nill they, the decree of Pope Martin is in force, a man is not left to his choiſe, *decret. Martin. Cauſ.*27.*qu.*1.*c.*8. Why do they then alledge antiquitie, and yet take away the priuiledge of antiquitie?

Secondly, he obiecteth the councell of Neocæſarea. *can.*1. Preſbyter ſi vxorem &c. If a Presbyter marrie a wife, he ſhall be depoſed from his order.

Anſw. Firſt, this Canon may be ſuſpected, for how is it like that the Greeke Church would decree againſt the mariage of prieſts, ſeeing that Stephanus before this affirmeth in his decrees; Aliter ſe habet Orientalis &c. The Eaſt Churches haue an other tradition then the Romane Church? for their prieſts, deacons and ſubdeacons are coupled in marriage: either Stephanus muſt be accuſed of vntruth, or this Synode of forgerie. Secondly, though this Synode permit not prieſts to take new wiues, yet they forbid them not to retayne their old, can. 8. He that keepeth an adulterous wife, muſt not miniſter: they might then keepe a wife, not an adultereſſe. Thirdly, this Synode can. 7. ſeemeth to condemne ſecond mariage: they forbid the Miniſter conſentire, to conſent to ſecond mariage, or to be preſent at the marriage feaſt. Fourthly, this Synode was prouinciall, conſiſting of 17. Biſhops, and ſeemeth to be of no great authoritie.

Thirdly, he vrgeth the Nicene councel 1. which was generall, can. 3. Interdixit ſancta Synodus: The ſacred Synode forbiddeth a Biſhop, Prieſt or Deacon, to haue any woman in their houſe, beſide their mother, ſiſter, Aunt: a wife is not here mentioned.

Anſw. Firſt, this Synode forbiddeth them to haue, mulierem extraneam, vel ſubintroductam, any ſtrange woman, ſecretly or by ſtealth brought in, beſide thoſe, which are named: now, the wife is no ſtrange woman, and therefore not forbidden. Secondly, if the Councell had concluded againſt marriage, they had done contrarie to the ancient tradition, which was, and is yet in force in the Greeke Church, as Stephanus ſaith in his decree, which is not like. Thirdly, Socrates lib. 1. c. 8. reporteth how that the Synode would haue decreed againſt the mariage of Miniſters, but was ſtayed by Paphnutius, who ſhewed the inconuenience thereof, whoſe ſentence the whole Synode commended: and therefore it cannot be, that any ſuch thing was decreed. Fourthly, the Canons of the Nicene councel may be ſuſpected, that they are not the right Canons; for Athanaſius ſayth, there were 70. canons of this Synode, diſtin. 16. c. 12. but now there are but 20. And cap. 13. Stephanus ſaith, that many of them are loſt: and beſide it appeareth to be ſo, becauſe there is not one Canon extant againſt the Arrian hereſie, for the which the ſynode was chiefely aſſembled: as alſo another notable thing concluded in the Nicene, was as touching the vniforme obſeruation of Eaſter, whereof there is not any mention in theſe 20. Canons: ſo that it is very like that theſe ancient Canons are changed and altered, and as ſome haue been left out, ſo other are put in their ſtead Fourthly, the Trullane Synode being the 6. generall, can. 6. decreeth, that neither Biſhops, prieſts, deacons or ſubdeacons, ſhould after their Ordination take them wiues.

Anſw. Firſt, this Synode can. 13. permitteth Prieſts and Deacons to haue the companie of their wiues, whom they married before, and thoſe that would ſeparate them, they decree to be depoſed: and this the Synode agreed vpon, though they knew the cuſtome of the Romane Church to be contrary; ſo that this Synode maketh as much for the mariage of Miniſters, as againſt it. Secondly, Bellarmine, though he now be contented to vrge this Councell againſt vs, yet at other times, taketh to himſelfe great libertie to confute and reiect it: And indeed it ſeemeth to be of no great authoritie: for can. 2. they allow the Canon of Cyprian for rebaptizing of heretikes: And this Synode hath beſide ſome ridiculous Canons, as can. 56. they forbid the eating of cheeſe and egges in Lent; can. 67. Damnamus eos &c. Wee do condemne them, that do by any kind of act dreſſe the bloud of beaſts, and ſo eate it: they forbid the eating of puddings. Thirdly, can. 55. this Synode preſcribeth a law to the Romane Church, that whoſoeuer ſhould faſt Saturdayes, ſhould be depoſed: if this Synode ſerue their turne againſt mariage, it ſerueth our turne as wel againſt their ſaturday faſt. Fourthly, can. 12. this Councel forbiddeth Biſhops the companie of their wiues, contrary to the 5. Canon of the Apoſtles, and they take vpon them in direct words, to correct the Apoſtles Canons: Non diuinis Apoſtolis &c. We do not contrary the Apoſtles, thus decreeing, but willing to bring the Church to a better order, &c. They do take vpon them to make better orders for the Church, then the Apoſtles, which is great preſumption. We ſee then, what is to be thought of this Councell, yet it maketh as much for vs, as againſt vs.

Fiftly, hee obiecteth Carthag. 2. can. 2. Carthag. 5. can. 3. & concil. African. can. 37. in all which Canons, Biſhops, prieſts, deacons, are enioyned to abſtayne from their wiues.

Anſw. Whether ſhall we take to be of greater authoritie, the Canons of the Apoſtles, or the canons of councels, generall Synodes or prouincial? The 6. Canon of the Apoſtles decreeth Biſhops and Prieſts to be excommunicate if they refuſed their wiues: Trullan. 6. generall. can. 13. decreeth them to be depoſed, that forbid Prieſts or Deacons the companie of their wiues: they only reſtrayne Biſhops. But theſe Africane councels make a generall reſtraint for Biſhops, prieſts and deacons. Secondly, they notwithſtanding giue libertie to all other degrees, ſubdeacons, and other; as African. can. 37. Cateros autem Clericos &c. But other of the Clergie wee will not haue compelled to forbeare their wiues, but let the cuſtome of euery Church be obſerued: but afterward ſubdeacons alſo were reſtrayned. Thus we ſee how theſe Councels are contrary one to an other.

Sixtly, hee produceth *concil.*1. *ſub Silueſt.can.*1. *Arelatenſ.*2.*can.*2. *Turonenſ.*2.*can.*20. *Agathenſ.c.*9. *Aurelianenſ.*3.*can.*2. in all which Canons it is not permitted, that any of the Clergie from ſubdeacons vpward, ſhould either marrie wiues, or companie with their wiues, if they had any.

Anſ. Firſt, ſome of theſe Synodes are thought to be depraued and corrupted: as firſt, the councel held at Rome vnder Silueſter; firſt, it beginneth with a lie, *can.*1.that Conſtantine was baptized by Silueſter, whereas other ſtories ſay, that he was baptized by Euſebius Biſhop of Nicomedia. *Theod.lib.*1.*c.*32. Secondly, this Councell is ſaid to haue been celebrate the very ſame time, that the Nicene councel was held; and that Conſtantine was preſent, and ſubſcribed to this councel, and 133. Biſhops of the Greeke Church beſide: but how could they be there, and here to at the ſame time? Thirdly, *c.*1.it is decreed, that none of the lay ſort ſhould be preſent, and yet *cap.*10. Calphurnius Preſident of the Citie, was preſent and ſubſcribed. Fourthly, this Synode beareth date *cap.*20. 3.Calend of Iune, when Conſtantinus and Priſcus or rather Criſpus were Conſuls: the Nicene beareth date when Paulinus and Iulianus were Conſuls, which was the yeere after: ſo that this ſynode by this account, ſhould go before the Nicene, which is vntrue, for that was the firſt generall, and the Epitomizer of the Councels confeſſeth in theſe words, In exemplaribus &c. In the copies of this Romane ſynode there is intolerabilis deprauatio, an intolerable deprauation: Barthol. Caranza. Fiftly, if there were ſo many Biſhops of the Greeke Church preſent, it is not like that they would agree to any ſuch Canon contrary to the cuſtome of their owne Church. Sixtly, *can.*2 Silueſter approueth all the acts of the Nicene Councell, whereof this was one, that they would not preſcribe ſingle life to the Clergie at the motion of Paphnutius, how then is it like that he would decree the contrary in this Romane Synod? Seuenthly, the inhibition for the mariage of ſubdeacons was not generall, no, not in the Latine Church, till Gregorie his time: for in Sicilie til then they had a cuſtome for their ſubdeacons to marrie: as it may appeare *diſtinct.*32.c. But ſuch a cuſtome contrary to a decree of a general Councel at Rome could not haue ſo long continued.

Concerning the ſecond Councell of Arles: firſt, I anſwere, that many things therein may bee thought to be forged; for it is ſaid to haue been celebrate in the time of Sylueſter: yet *Can.*28. mention is made of the Vaſenſian Councell, which was held vnder Leo 1. aboue an hundred yeere after. Secondly, *Can.*3. this Councell onely inhibiteth the companie of women, à gradu Diaconatus, from the degree of Deaconſhip and vpward: ſo that Subdeacons are exempted. Thirdly, it giueth leaue, that they may haue, in ſolatio ſuo, for their ſolace in their houſe, their mother, ſiſter, daughter, neece, & vxorem conuerſam, and their wife conuerted: But what ſolace ſhould they haue in their wiues, if it were not lawfull to enioy them as their wiues.

Now to the Councell of Turone we anſwere: Firſt, it doth mitigate certaine Canons made before againſt the mariage of the Clergie. *Can.*2.Vt ſacerdos, vel Leuita, &c. That a Prieſt or Deacon, that begetteth children, ſhould not be barred from the Communion, as our predeceſſors haue decreed: but we willing to moderate the ſtrictnes of this conſtitution, doe decree, that ſuch bee not promoted to a higher degree. Thus it doth appeare to be but an humane conſtitution, which they did ſometimes mitigate, ſometimes aggrauate as they thought good. Secondly, in the decree againſt Miniſters mariage, they doe abuſe that place of Scripture, qui in carne ſunt, They that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God: which hath no ſuch meaning: and in their ſenſe then, none that are maried, that is in the fleſh, can pleaſe God. They alſo call maried Miniſters, coinquinatos, & contaminatos, defiled and contaminate: but contrarie the Apoſtle calleth, the mariage bed vndefiled, Hebr.13.4. I thinke the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of ſuch ſtuffe. Thirdly, it was but a prouinciall Councell of eight Biſhops, and of no great authoritie.

Concerning the Councell of Agatha, we anſwere: Firſt, it hath diuers Canons againſt ſome ſuperſtitions of Poperie: as *Can.*19. they admit no women to profeſſe ſingle life before 40. yeeres. *Can.*56. they condemne the idle life of Monkes. *Can.*61. they count it inceſt for a man to marrie his coſine germane, or brothers wife, contrary to the practiſe of the Church of Rome. If this councell ſerue their turne againſt vs in this point of mariage, we will oppoſe it againſt them in the reſt. Secondly, they onely enioyne Prieſts and Deacons to abſtaine from their wiues, no mention is made of Subdeacons. Thirdly, *Can.*10. they allow Miniſters to haue their neece with them in the houſe, and by the Popes law a man may marrie his neece, though the woman cannot marrie her nephew. Now, who ſeeth it not how vnreaſonable a thing it is, that a ſtrange woman ſhould bee receiued into a Miniſters houſe, and his owne wife excluded? it is euident that ſuperſtition was working euen in thoſe daies.

In the ſeuenth place, he alleageth, *Concil.Elibertin.c.*33. *Toletan.*2.*cap.*1. Toletan 4.*cap.*26. *Toletan.*8.*cap.*6. in all which Canons both Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons are forbidden the vſe of their wiues.

Anſ. Firſt, concerning the Elibertine Councell, we anſwere: firſt, it is not like, that this Councell being kept not long after the Nicene, which at the motion of Paphnutius, would decree nothing thing concerning the abſtaining of Clergie men from their wiues, ſed hoc in vniuſcuiuſq; voluntate dimiſit, but left euery man to his owne will: as Gratian witneſſeth, diſtinct.31.c.12. that this prouinciall would decree againſt a generall. Secondly, whereas the 6. Canon of the Apoſtles doth excommunicate them of the Clergie, that ſeparate their wiues from their companie, as the 6. generall Trullane expoundeth that Canon: how dare any prouinciall conclude againſt the Apoſtles, whoſe Canons, they ſay, they are? And this anſwere may ſerue in generall to the reſt of the Spaniſh Councels vrged by Bellarmine. Thirdly, this Synode ſeemeth to bee contrarie to it ſelfe: for can.65. He of the Clergie, that doth not proijcere, caſt off his wife, committing adulterie, ſhall bee put from the Communion: for whereas, can.33. they would haue them refraine their wiues companie, what is that elſe, but to giue them occaſion to commit adulterie? and what need they now caſt off their wiues for diſhoneſtie, whereas they are commaunded before to caſt off their honeſt wiues? theſe things agree not. Fourthly, this ſeemeth to be an erronious Councell, and may bee thought to condemne Magiſtracie as a prophane thing: for can.56. the Magiſtrate, during the yeere of his office, is forbidden to come to the Church: as though the Church were by his preſence prophaned.

Secondly, the ſecond Toletan Councell maketh nothing againſt the mariage of Miniſters, but onely forbiddeth the familiaritie of women, cap.2. and cap.1. it decreeth rather the contrarie, that both Clergie men which were ordained to that profeſſion by their parents in their infancie, and Monkes alſo at eighteene may marrie, if they will.

Thirdly, the fourth Toletan, cap.43. decreeth againſt thoſe Clerkes that doe marrie, ſine Epiſcopi conſultu, without the leaue or aduice of the Biſhop: ſo that with his leaue it might be lawfull for them to marrie. And cap.26. which is alleaged by Bellarmine, Prieſts and Deacons are required, when they are ordained to make profeſſion to the Biſhop, vt caſtè & purè viuant, to liue chaſtly and purely, which may be done in mariage. And then it followeth, vt dum eos talis profeſſio obligauerit, that their profeſſion may binde them: ſo then their promiſe onely and profeſſion bindeth them, not the law of God. Therefore by this Canon, where no ſuch promiſe or profeſſion is made by Miniſters at their ordination, they may lawfully marrie.

Fourthly, to the eight Councell Toletan our anſwere is this: Firſt, wee doe not greatly force of this Councell, being after the yeere of our Lord 640. when as ſuperſtition began to gather ſtrength. Secondly, as it may appeare by this, that this Synode ſeemeth to make the mariage of Miniſters worſe then fornication: can.6. Relatum eſt nobis, It is tolde vs, that certaine Subdeacons are not onely defiled with the vncleannes of the fleſh, but alſo (which is a ſhame to ſpeake) are coupled to new wiues. This parentheſis, dictu nefas (it is a ſhame to ſpeake) and the other clauſe, but alſo, being referred to their mariage, and not to their fornication, doe ſerue to aggrauate the firſt, and extenuate the other. So Toletan.9.c.10. they call the mariage of Miniſters deteſtandum, deteſtabile, and their children, proles pollutione nata, borne in pollution, or vncleannes: which is a foule aſſertion, and not farre from blaſphemie. I marueile Bellarmine would conceale this ſtuffe, that maketh for him. Thirdly, this Synode, can.7. imposeth ſingle life vpon Clerkes againſt their will, contrarie to all ancient Canons: as cap.7. it decreeth againſt thoſe, Qui quoniam, &c. Who, becauſe when orders were impoſed vpon them, they pretended it was againſt their will, therefore they will not forſake their former mariage: the Synode decreeth thus; That as baptiſme is imparted to many both vnwilling, and not knowing what is done vnto them, and yet it holdeth; ſo orders alſo, will they, nill they, ſhould hold. It is againſt all reaſon, that either orders or ſingle life ſhould be impoſed vpon any againſt their will: as for the compariſon of baptiſme, the caſe is not like. Firſt, baptiſme is Gods ordinance for all both men and children; ſo is not ſingle life for Miniſters. Secondly, children are baptized, not knowing any thing becauſe they are infants, and yet vnderſtand not, but orders are not fit for children. Thirdly, that any againſt their wils are baptized, it can no way be iuſtified: if they meane children, it is an improper ſpeech, to ſay they are vnwilling, hauing as yet no vſe of their will: if they ſpeake of men, none are to bee baptized, but vpon confeſſion of their ſinnes, and profeſſion of their faith, Matth.3. which ſheweth they are willing. And herein this Councell is directly contrarie to the 2. Toletane, cap.1. which giueth libertie to Subdeacons, if they proteſt, at the time of their ordination, that they will marrie, they gaue them leaue ſo to doe: and this is ratified in your owne decrees, diſtinct.28.c.17. And Gregorie alſo is more equall, who thus writeth of certaine Subdeacons in Sicilie, that were married: Durum & incompetens, &c. It ſeemeth to me an hard and inconuenient thing, that he, which neuer promiſed chaſtitie, ſhould be compelled to be ſeparated from his wife, diſtinct.31.c.1. Wherefore this decree is hard and intolerable, that impoſeth ſingle life, where they proteſted the contrarie. Fourthly, I doe oppoſe againſt this 8. Councell Toletane, the firſt Toletane, which as it was more ancient by more then two hundred yeeres, ſo is it of greater authoritie: there in the preface of the Synode, Patronus the Preſident thus proteſteth: Mihi placet, &c. I thinke it meete that wee keepe the ſtatutes of the Nicene Synode, and depart not from the ſame. But the Nicene decreed nothing as touching the ſingle life of the Clergie, but left it free. Againe, in the 21. Canon, Qui dixerit coniugia hominum,&c. He that ſaith the mariages of men, which are lawfull by the diuine law to be execrable, accurſed bee he. But the mariages of Miniſters are lawfull by Gods law; this our aduerſaries doe confeſſe, making it but a conſtitution of the Church: Ergo, they which condemne their mariages, are vnder this curſe. And thus I thinke wee haue ſufficiently anſwered the Ieſuites oppoſitions out of the Councels: which I haue ſhewed either to bee forged, or elſe erronious, or contrarie one to another, or concluding directly againſt Scripture. Now it followeth for further anſwere, that the Canons alſo which doe eſtabliſh and ratifie the mariage of Miniſters, be likewiſe produced, which I haue inſerted in the end of our arguments that here follow.

The Proteſtants.

THat it is not onely lawfull but conuenient, that all men both Miniſters and others, that haue not receiued a proper gift of continencie, ſhould marrie; and that it is agreeable and conſonant to the word of God: thus we ſhew it.

1 The Scriptures are moſt playne for the mariage of Miniſters, 1. Tim. 3. 2. S. Paul ſaith, a Biſhop and generally euery Miniſter, may be the husband of one wife: and verſ. 11. their wiues are deſcribed how they ought to behaue themſelues: Let their wiues be honeſt: Ergo, it is lawfull for them to be married. Bellarmine anſwereth, that S. Paul ſpeaketh of the wiues which they had before their calling and ordayning, not thoſe, which they ſhould marrie after. But there appeareth no ſuch thing out of the text, but rather the contrarie. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith verſ. 2. Oportet Epiſcopum eſſe,&c. A Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife: he ſheweth not what he hath been, but what he is, not of the wife which he had, but now hath. Secondly, verſ. 11. He deſcribeth what manner of women their wiues ought to be, indued with like qualities to their husbands: but if they were not ſtill as their wiues, what are they more to them, then other women? neither ſhould they neede to be otherwiſe qualified, then all other Chriſtian women. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of hoſpitalitie, of bringing vp of Children, of well gouerning his houſe, and of Biſhops wiues; how then can he be otherwiſe vnderſtood, but that their wiues ſhould be with them, as helping toward all thoſe domeſticall duties? Fourthly, S. Paul alſo ſheweth in another place, that he had libertie as well as others, To leade about a ſiſter a wife, euen after he was an Apoſtle, 1. Corinth. 9. Wherefore it is as lawfull afterward as afore. Bellarmine anſwereth: We muſt thus reade, a Siſter a woman: and it is like they were women, that did miniſter vnto the Apoſtles and followed them. We replie: Firſt, the word Siſter, doth implie a woman, and therefore it had been an improper and needleſſe ſpeech, to ſay, a Siſter a woman: therefore we muſt rather reade, a Siſter a wife. Bellarmine replieth: Firſt, if the Apoſtle vnderſtoode a wife, he would haue ſet downe the greeke worde with an article, τὴν γυναῖκα. Anſw. This is a falſe obſeruation, for the Apoſtle, 1. Timoth. 3. 2. 11, 12. making mention of Biſhops wiues, leaueth out the article. Secondly, S. Paul ſaith, a Siſter a woman, inuerting the order, for a woman a Siſter, as Peter Act. 1. ſaith, Viri fratres, Men and brethren. Anſw. In deede your latine tranſlation hath preſumed to correct the text, reading thus, a woman a Siſter: but what boldnes is this, when you haue no other ſhift, to take vpon you to amend the text? and ſeeing the Apoſtle ſaith, a Siſter a wife, or as you would haue, a woman, in the ſingular; it muſt needes implie a wife: for they had other women, more then one, that miniſtred to them. Secondly, if they were other women which miniſtred of their ſubſtance, what neede the Apoſtles to be maintained of the Churches? If they miniſtred but in their ſeruice and attendance, who were more fit to doe it and to follow them from place to place then their wiues? And beſide, if the Apoſtle did meane other women beſide wiues, how could he alleage this inſtance to ſhew that he departed from his right? for he himſelfe refuſed not the miniſterie and beneuolence of other women; as of Phebe, Rom. 16. 1, 2. Wherefore this libertie, which the Apoſtle vſed not, was as concerniug wiues. Thirdly, the phraſe of leading about a Siſter, importeth a ſuperioritie and authoritie, ſuch as the husband hath ouer his wife. Bellarmine replieth, the Apoſtles had this power ouer theſe women, not as husbands ouer their wiues, but as teachers ouer their Diſciples. Anſw. Firſt, the Apoſtle vſeth the ſame word, 1. Cor. 7. 4. The woman hath not power ouer her owne bodie,&c. The vſe of the word ſheweth, what power he meaneth. Secondly, the Apoſtle onely had not power, but in deede did vſe that power ouer both men and women, as his Diſciples, as it may appeare, Act. 16. 13. but here he ſpeaketh of a power, which he vſed not. Laſtly, S. Hierome, though in other places he varieth from himſelfe, yet giueth this rule for the vnderſtanding of this word: Tom. 3. ad Ocean. Mulierem autem,&c. A woman (which word is ambiguous in the Greeke tongue) in all theſe places vnderſtand a wife. S. Ambroſe alſo, Comment. in 1. Tim. 3. vpon theſe words, hauing children, expoundeth it of Biſhops ioyned in mariage: Ideo inferiorem poſuit,&c. The Apoſtle put the caſe of the inferiour order, that is, ſuch as were maried; that no man might doubt of the ſuperiour, that is, ſuch as were not coupled in mariage. Another place we haue, Heb. 13. 3. Mariage is honorable among all men: Ergo, amongſt Miniſters. Bellarm. If it were meant of all mariages, then to marrie within the degrees of Conſanguinitie, were alſo honorable. Anſ. This is a very childiſh cauill : Firſt, he might haue read further, And the bed vndefiled : S. Paul therefore ſpeaketh of lawfull mariage. And indeede the other ioyning and coupling of men and women together contrary to Gods law, is not to be counted Matrimonie or Wedlocke, but Inceſt rather and Fornication, as the brother to marrie his brothers wife, and ſuch like. Secondly, S. Paul ſaith, not all mariages are honorable, but mariage is honorable for all men ; the generalitie is not of the thing, but of the perſons : wherefore we doe fitly conclude out of this place, that mariage is lawfull and commendable euen among miniſters, argum. Caluin.

Further, Saint Paul ſaith, For auoyding of fornication, let euery man haue his owne wife, 1. Corinth. 7. 2. Here is no reſtraynt for Miniſters. Bellarmine, this is to be vnderſtoode of thoſe that haue not made a vow of continencie. Anſwere. Firſt, our Sauiour Chriſt commandeth no ſuch vowes : it is a cruell Antichriſtian yoke layd vpon Miniſters, to binde them, when they receiue orders, to vowe ſingle life : and therefore your Antichriſtian decree ought not to abridge the generall libertie granted by the Apoſtle. Secondly, the ende of mariage is generall, to auoyde fornication, and therefore the remedie alſo is generall : for euery man hauing not a proper gift of continencie, may be in danger of that inconuenience, if he be denyed the ordinarie helpe. Melancthon.

Secondly Bellarmine: This is not a precept of the Apoſtle, but a permiſſion and libertie, that they which feared to fall into fornication, ſhould be ioyned to their wiues.

Anſ. If then the Apoſtle gaue libertie to marrie, where fornication is feared; how dare you abridge that libertie, which God hath made common and free for all ? as it is recited in your owne decrees, diſtinct. 28. c. 5. out of the ſecond Toletan Councel, Conceſſam ab Apoſtolo licentiam, &c. The licence to marrie graunted by the Apoſtle, we cannot take away. And the Councell there ſpeaketh of the mariage of Miniſters, confeſſing that this libertie to marrie is generall to all, both Miniſters and others.

Againe, 1. Tim. 4. to forbid mariage is called a doctrine of diuels : but the Popiſh Church forbiddeth mariage. Bellarm. We do not forbid mariage to any, but we require ſingle life of al that are entred into orders, which, it is at their owne choyce to receiue or to refuſe. Anſw. Firſt, it is neceſſary that ſome ſhould receiue orders, and be conſecrate to the Church miniſtery : wherefore requiring this condition of all ſuch to liue ſingle, though particularly you prohibite not this man or that to marrie, yet generally you prohibite the whole calling, which is worſe. Secondly, if you ſay you doe not forbid mariage ſimply to all : no more did the Manichees, for they ſuffered their ſchollers and auditors to marrie. And Saint Auguſtines words are generall : Ille prohibet matrimonium, qui illud malum eſſe dicit : He forbiddeth mariage, that thinketh it is euill : you therefore forbidding mariage, muſt needs hold opinion that it is wicked and euill. The Councell of Turone, Can. 2. calleth married Miniſters, contaminatos, contaminate, or defiled. Toletan. 8. 9. 20. Deteſtandũ connubium, ſaith their mariage is deteſtable. The Papiſts allow theſe Councels, and ſo conſequently condemne mariage in this caſe as euill, counting that vnholy and vncleane, which the Lord hath made holy and honourable. There is a ſeuere decree againſt ſuch, Toletan. 1. can. 21. Qui dixerit coniugia hominum &c. He that ſhall ſay that the mariages of men, which are lawfull by the diuine law, are execrable, is accurſed. But ſo do the Papiſts count the mariages of Miniſters prophane and vncleane, which are lawfull by the word of God : Ergo, they are accurſed.

Com. Fauſt. lib. 30. ca. 6.

Argum. 2. This reſtraint of the mariage of Miniſters hath not been of auncient time in the Church, but impoſed vpon the Church of late, 1000. yeares after Chriſt : Polycrates Biſhop of Epheſus anno. 180. had ſeuen of his progenitors before him Biſhops of the ſame See. In the Nicene Councell Paphnutius ſtoode vp, and ſtayed the decree that ſhould haue paſt, for reſtrayning of the mariage of Miniſters, and it is ſaid, Synodus laudauit ſententiam Paphnutij : The Synod commended Paphnutius ſentence. Sozomen. lib. 1. cap. 11. Bellarmine here ſetteth a good face vpon it, and ſtoutly denieth the ſtorie, and maketh the author a lier that reporteth it. Thus, when they haue no other ſhift, they will refuſe, authors, bookes, antiquitie. But Gratian doth report it for a true ſtorie, diſtinct. 31. 12. who is of better credit, I thinke with Papiſts, then any of this vpſtart popiſh ſect.

Gregorie the Father of Gregorie, was Biſhop of Nazianzum. Symphoroſa, which was put to death with her ſeuen ſonnes vnder the perſecution of Adrian the Emperour, was the wife of one Getulius Miniſter in the citie of Tyber, Fox. pag. 45. Cheremon Biſhop of Nilus, vnder the tyrannie of Maximinus fled with his wife into the mountaines of Arabia, and was neuer ſeene againe, Euſeb. lib. 6. cap. 42. Fabianus Biſhop of Rome and Martyr was a married man. Saint Cyprian maketh mention of one Numidicus a presbyter, that was married ; lib. 4. epiſtol. 10. Likewiſe epiſtol. 6. ad Cornelium, he reporteth thus of Nouatus a prieſt, vterus vxoris, &c. Hee ſtrooke his wife with his heele being with child, and killed the child, that ſhe went with : yet hee findeth no fault with him, for being married, but for abuſing his wife. Diuers of the Biſhops of Rome beſide were Biſhops and prieſts ſonnes : Bonifacius the firſt, the ſonne of Iucundus a prieſt:

Felix presbyter, the father of Felix the third: Agapetus the firſt, Gordianus his ſonne a prieſt: Sylverius the ſonne of Hormiſda Biſhop of Rome: Theodorus Pope, ſonne to Theodorus Biſhop of Ieruſalem: Hadrianus ſecond ſonne to Talarus, Biſhop Benedictus the eight, and Iohn 21. his ſucceſſor both ſonnes to Georg. Epiſcop. Portuenſ. And diuers other of them beſide. The Ieſuite can anſwere here nothing els, but that theſe ſonnes of prieſts were borne before their fathers prieſthoode: But this is their vaine ſurmiſe and coniecture, ſeeing no ſuch thing is mentioned in the ſtorie. And this ſurmiſe is taken away by the direct words of *Gratian.diſtinct.*56.*c.*2. where after he had rehearſed the names of the foreſaid Biſhops of Rome, concludeth thus: Quamplures etiam alij inueniuntur, de ſacerdotibus nati, &c. And many beſide are found to haue gouerned the Apoſtolike See, being borne of Prieſts or Miniſters: which is more then to haue ſaid, ſonnes of Prieſts; for they might be Prieſts ſonnes, though borne before their prieſthood: but to bee borne of Prieſts, implieth, that they were at the time of their birth, Prieſts. Ex pontif. Damaſi.

The Greeke Church neuer yet receiued this popiſh decree of ſingle life, and their Biſhops are maried at this day. Bellarmine ſaith, that the Church of Rome hath diſpenſed with them, *cap.*18. Ergo: if the Pope would diſpence with the Latine Church, it might be lawfull enough then for Miniſters to marrie; wherefore it is but a humane conſtitution. Againe, it is falſe that they haue diſpenſed with the Greeke Church: they care not for their diſpenſations, but vſe their owne Chriſtian liberty: neither was the Greeke Church euer ſubiect to the Biſhop of Rome. This alſo may appeare by the 13.Canon of the Trullane Synode the 6.generall, where it was decreed, that notwithſtanding the contrarie cuſtome of the Church of Rome, Prieſts and Deacons might enioy the companie of their wiues. And *Innocent.*3.ſaith, Orientalis eccleſia votum continentiæ non admiſit: The Eaſt Church hath not admitted or receiued the vow of continencie, *decr.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*3.*c.*6. Wherefore it is vntrue that the Greeke Church alloweth the mariage of their Miniſters by vertue of the Popes diſpenſation, they doe it without and beſide his leaue. And we ſhall finde few ages, wherein ſome Prieſts, notwithſtanding ſo many prohibitions, were not married. In Gregorie the 7. his time, who by excommunication forced Miniſters from their wiues, there were 24.Biſhops with their Clergie that ſtood in defence of their mariage. Anno 1191.the nation of the Danes gaue licence to their Miniſters to marrie, and were for that cauſe excommunicate by Clemens the 3. ex Baleo. Anno 1372.the Archbiſhop of Colen was married: ſic Præmonſtratenſ. Paulus 2. is ſaid to haue taken aduice about the reſtoring of the mariage of Miniſters, ex Baleo.

Thus we ſee, that in times paſt mariage was lawfull for all men, vntill Pope Nicholas the ſecond, Alexander the ſecond, and Gregorie the ſeuenth, that notable ſorcerer and adulterer: for theſe three comming together, one not long after another, began by publike decree to reſtraine prieſts mariage: not long after them, Anſelme began to play the Rex here in England, *anno.*1104. who ſtoutely proceeded in his vngodly purpoſe, and enacted that maried prieſts ſhould either leaue their wiues, or their benefices. At which time 200. Prieſts at once came barefoote to the Kings palace, to make complaint: and for all Anſelmes Pope-like and outragious proceedings againſt maried prieſts, yet they continued maried well nie two hundred yeares after Anſelmes time, do what he could: and thus it is manifeſt, that the reſtraint of Miniſters mariage is no ancient thing, but then began moſt to bee vrged, when Antichriſt fully was reuealed to the world, when as the orders of Friers came in and were confirmed and priuiledged vnder Boniface the eight about *anno.*1300. Fox.pag.1166. Fox pag.1167.

*Argum.*3. What better argument can we haue againſt this Popiſh decree, then the great vncleannes, and foule enormities that haue been brought, by the meanes thereof, into the Church? In the time of Gregorie the firſt, who enioyned his Clergie to liue ſingle, commanding on a time his ſeruants to catch him ſome fiſh, out of his Motes and Pondes, in ſtead of fiſhe they brought vnto him ſixe thouſand heads of young children: whereupon, he fetching a great ſigh with himſelfe, commended then the ſaying of the Apoſtle, It is better to marrie then to burne. Bellarmine hath no better anſwere then to deny the ſtorie, which notwithſtanding is found in the Epiſtle of Hulderieus Biſhop of Auguſta, which he ſent to Pope Nicholas, Fox.pag.1155.

In Anſelmes time, after the reſtraint of Miniſters mariage, great rumors, and complaint was brought to him, of the execrable vice of Sodomitrie, which began to raigne in the Clergie. Pope Pius the ſecond ſaid, he ſaw many waightie cauſes, why wiues ſhould be taken away from prieſts, but he ſaw more why they ſhould be reſtored to them againe. The ſame Pope Pius alſo diſſolued certaine houſes of the Brigidines, bidding them to goe forth of their celles, ne amplius vrerentur, that they ſhould no longer burne in luſt, ex Baleo. Bernard ſaith, Tolle de Eccleſia honorabile coniugium, &c. Take from the Church honorable Matrimonie, ſhall you not repleniſh it with inceſtuous perſons, concubinaries, Sodomiticall vices? Hereupon the popiſh Catholikes ſeeing their owne infirmitie, began thus to ſalue vp the matter, Si non caſtè, tamen cautè: If thou deale not chaſtly, yet deale charily. Yea they are not aſhamed thus to write, If any of the prieſts ſhould be found imbracing of a woman, it muſt be expounded and preſuppoſed, that he doth it to bleſſe her. Fox.pag.1165. Sup.Cant. Serm.66. Iuel.p.231. Fox.pag.785.

Reade Maſter Bales preface to his booke entituled, De actis Romanor. pontificum: there you ſhall finde how that the Kinges viſiters appointed to viſite the Abbeyes, anno. 1538. found in ſome irreligious houſes fiue, in ſome ten, in ſome twentie Sodomites and adulterers: whereof ſome kept fiue, ſome ſeuen, ſome twentie harlots. O filthie vncleannes vnſpeakeable! Who would not now thinke, that it had been much better for theſe profeſſed votaries to haue maried? This was well foreſeene of that good man D. Collet, founder of Paules ſchoole, who wiſhed that the Maſter and Vſher of the ſchoole ſhould be rather of maried men, then ſingle prieſts. Fox. pag. 139.

Among the Heluetians it was an ancient vſe and cuſtome, that when they receiued any new prieſt into their Churches, they would premoniſh him to take his concubine leaſt he ſhould attempt any miſuſe with their wiues and daughters: Fox. pag. 866. theſe things conſidered, who can not but approue and highly commend the ſaying of Pope Pius before alleadged, if he had done as he ſaid?

I but (ſaith Bellarmine) theſe are the abuſes of ſingle life, will you condemne a good thing, becauſe of the abuſe? by the ſame reaſon (ſaith he) cælum & terra tollenda ſunt, Heauen and earth muſt be taken away, becauſe they were abuſed of the heathen and taken for Gods. cap. 21.

Anſw. Firſt, we ſay not, that theſe be the fruites of ſingle life, which S. Paul commendeth in all thoſe that haue the gift, but of this coacted and conſtrained Popiſh Virginitie, which is impoſed indifferently vpon all, and cannot haue any good vſe. Secondly, when you can proue that reſtrayning of Miniſters mariage is of Gods ordinance, as it is certaine Heauen and earth are of his making, then we will grant vnto you, that it may haue a right vſe, and for the abuſe ought not vtterly to be aboliſhed.

De ſanct. Virgin. cap. 34.

Saint Auguſtine alſo ſaith, Quæ nubere volunt, & ideo non nubunt quia impunè non poſſunt, melius nuberent, quàm vrerentur, id eſt, quàm occulta flamma concupiſcentiæ in ipſa conſcientia vaſtarentur. Thoſe Virgines, which would marry, but cannot, becauſe of reſtraint, and reproch, might better marrie then burne, that is to ſay, then with the ſecret flame of concupiſcence to be waſted and conſumed in their conſcience. Wherefore it followeth, that all they, both Miniſters, votaries and Virgines, that haue not power to abſtaine, ſhould doe better, for all their profeſſion and vow, to marrie, then to burne.

Argum. 4. The teſtimonie of antiquitie is very full and plentifull for the lawfulnes of Miniſters marriage: Stephanus Biſhop of Rome, Decretal. Aliter ſe habet orientalis Eccleſiæ traditio, aliter Romanæ Eccleſiæ: Nam illorum ſacerdotes, diaconi & ſubdiaconi Matrimonio copulantur: The tradition or cuſtome of the Eaſt Church is diuers from the vſe of the Romane Church: for their Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons are maried. See then, how is this like to be an Apoſtolike tradition, that Miniſters ſhould liue ſingle, ſeeing it was neuer vniuerſally receiued? And Cardinall Campeius is here found to be a lier, who was not aſhamed openly to ſay in the aſſemblie at Noremberg. anno. 1524. that the Greekes did not permit their Prieſts to marrie, Fox. pag. 865.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt, that this Canon of Stephanus is of no authoritie, being not found in any of his Epiſtles, &c.

Contra. Thus he taketh to himſelfe great libertie in denying of authorities alledged, refuſing his owne authors; as he denieth the ſtorie of Pope Ioan, witneſſed by 13. authors of account, as I haue ſhewed before: he giueth no credite to Sozomone his report of Paphnutius: the Epiſtle alſo of Hulderícus Biſhop of Auguſta written to Pope Nicholas, is of him refuſed: and now he giueth Gratian the lie, the compiler of their owne decrees; theſe are but beggerly ſhifts.

Secondly, ſaith he, the Canon is to be vnderſtood according to the practiſe of the Greeke Church, that it is not lawfull for their prieſts to marrie new wiues, but onely being married before, to vſe and exerciſe that mariage, which cuſtome notwithſtanding the Church of Rome condemneth.

Contra. Firſt, the wordes of this Decree are plaine, Matrimonio copulantur: The Prieſts, deacons and ſubdeacons in the Eaſt Church, are coupled or ioyned in marriage: which ſheweth a libertie as well to take wiues as to vſe wiues. Secondly, the ſame alſo is affirmed by Clemens 3. decret. Greg. lib. 5. tit. 38. c. 7. Sacerdotibus Græcis legitimo matrimonio vti licet: The Greeke prieſts may vſe lawful mariage: If marriage be lawful, then both before their prieſthood and after. Thirdly, Innocentius 3. thus teſtifieth; decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 3. cap. 6. Orientalis in minoribus &c. The Eaſterne Churches do contract matrimonie in the lower degrees, and in the higher degrees they vſe matrimonie alreadie contracted. Wherefore it is vntrue that Bellarmine ſaith, it is not lawfull in the Greeke Church for any, in ſacris exiſtentes; that are in orders, to marrie wiues. Fourthly, neyther do they contract mariage in the lower degrees onely, but in the higher alſo: as deacons are counted amongſt the greater orders, for whom, by the Ancyrane councel, it was lawfull to marrie, can. 10. as it is alledged in the decrees, diſtinct. 28. c. 8. If the 6. Canon of the Trullane be obiected, that maketh it vnlawfull for Deacons to marrie; wee anſwere, first, that the Ancyrane councel is more ancient by more then 300. yeere, being celebrate anno. 308. the other about 670.

and therefore to be preferred. Secondly, the Ancyrane is confirmed can. 1. of this Trullane Synode, and therefore therein the Synode is contrarie to it ſelfe. Thirdly, as this Synode prohibiteth deacons to contract marriage, ſo can. 12. it forbiddeth Biſhops to vſe marriage contracted, contrarie to the generall vſe of the Greeke Church.

Concil. Ancyran. ann. 308. can. 10. Diaconi, ſi in ordinatione proteſtati ſunt, ſe non poſſe continere, & velle Vxores ducere, hi poſtea, ſi ad nuptias venerint, maneant in miniſterio, &c. Deacons, which when they are ordained doe proteſt, that they cannot containe, but doe purpoſe to marrie, if afterward they marrie, let them continue ſtill in their miniſterie.

This Canon is alſo alledged by Bellarmine, to proue that marriage is not lawfull for Miniſters, vnleſſe they be diſpenſed with by the Biſhop; becauſe it followeth in the Canon, Quia Epiſcopus &c. Becauſe the Biſhop gaue them leaue, that is, Deacons, to marrie, they may be ſuffered ſo to doe.

Anſw. Firſt, if the Biſhop may diſpenſe with the marriage of Miniſters, then is it no Apoſtolicall conſtitution; for then it were not in the Biſhops power to diſpenſe. Secondly, the marriages then of the Miniſters of the Goſpell by your owne Canon are lawfull, becauſe both they and their Biſhops are enabled to marrie by the law of the Prince; which is more then the diſpenſation of a Biſhop. Thirdly, it is not the diſpenſation of the Biſhop, but the libertie of the Apoſtle, that maketh the marriage of Miniſters lawfull, as diſtinct. 27. c. 5. ex Toletan. 2. cap. 1. Conceſſam ab Apoſtolo licentiam, &c. We can not take away the licence, or libertie of mariage graunted by the Apoſtle.

Concil. Gangrenſ. cap. 1. qui mulierem fidelem cum viro ſuo dormientem, abominandam crediderit, anathema eſto: He that abhorreth a faithfull woman becauſe ſhe ſleepeth with her husband, accurſed be he. And more apertlie chap. 4. the Councell approueth the marriage of Miniſters, decreeing thus: Si quis diſcernit Presbyterum coniugatum, tanquam occaſione nuptiarum, quòd offerre non debeat, & ab eius oblatione ideo ſe abſtineat, anathema: If any man make queſtion of a married Prieſt, that by reaſon of his mariage, he ought not to Miniſter, and therefore refraineth from his oblation and ſeruice, let him be accurſed. This Canon alloweth as well of the ſeruice of a married miniſter, as of a ſingle: And although this were a prouinciall Councell, yet is it confirmed concil. Roman. 6. ſub Symmacho, and in the ſixt generall Trullane Councell. Can. 1.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that they are condemned, which condemne mariage in Miniſters as ſimply euill, as can. 1. and this Canon ſpeaketh of him, Qui habuit vxorem, that had, not hath a wife.

Anſw. Firſt, the firſt Canon of this Synode condemneth thoſe that diſpraiſe mariage as euill, but in this 4. Canon, it alſo decreeth againſt them, that miſlike mariage in Miniſters: ſo that theſe being two diuers Canons, they can not be thought to decree one and the ſame thing. Secondly, the words are plaine, Tanquam occaſione nuptiarum, If by occaſion of mariage, they ſay not as euil, a man diſcerne betweene a prieſt married and vnmarried; they ſay not, condemne, but preferre one before another, for that onely, that he is married: but thus do the Papiſts, occaſione nuptiarum, by reaſon of mariage, put Miniſters by from miniſtring: Ergo, they are anathema. Thirdly, the right tranſlation is, Presbyterum coniugatum: as Peter Crab readeth, a married Presbyter, which implieth the preſent time, not one, which had a wife, which is your owne gloſſe, and contrary to the cuſtome of the Greeke Church, who ſuffered their Miniſters to hold their wiues. Alſo your owne decrees do thus reade, diſtinct. 28. cap. 15. Si quis diſcernit presbyterum coniugatum: If any man diſcerne a prieſt married, the Greeke word is γεγαμηκότος, married or ioyned to a wife, not which had a wife: ſo that the reading in their owne Canons, doth ouerthrow this new tranſlation of theirs.

Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Alexandro. 3. part. 18. cap. 4. Si ſubdiaconi contraxerint matrimonium, eos, dummodo ante tales fuerint, quod timendum ſit, ne pro vna pluribus abutantur, diſſimulare poteris cum ſuis vxoribus remanere, quia tolerandum eſt malum, vt peiora vitentur: If Subdeacons marrie, if they were ſuch before, that it is to be feared, leaſt in ſtead of one, they would abuſe many, you may winke at them, and ſuffer them to enioy their mariage: for an inconuenience muſt be ſuffered to preuent a miſchiefe.

Ibid. cap. 4. Nullus veſtrum eum à contracto matrimonio prædicti ordinis obtentu, prohibere præſumat, nec ſibi propter hoc moleſtiam, aut grauamen inferat: Let none of you hinder him (meaning a certaine Subdeacon) from his mariage contracted, vnder colour and pretenſe of his orders, nor for that reſpect moleſt or grieue him any way. Farre off were thoſe times, though euill enough, from ſuch crueltie and outrage, as of late many haue ſeene and felt, when the mariage of Miniſters was made felonie, by that bloodie act of the ſixe articles, Fox. pag. 1135.

Argum. 5. In the fift place, that the impoſition of ſingle life vpon the Clergie is no Apoſtolike inſtitution it may appeare, both becauſe the authors and firſt deuiſers of this hard conſtitution may be aſſigned, as alſo, for that the obſeruation thereof is diuers, and not vniformely kept.

For the firſt, Syricius is held to haue been the firſt impoſer of this yoke, who was Biſhop of Rome almoſt foure hundred yeere after Chriſt: which although it bee ſtoutly by Bellarmine denied, cap.19.lib.1.de Cleric. yet is it by Cleotonaus, a popiſh writer of great credit amongſt them, affirmed, and by Innocentius the 3. who, although the other bee by Bellarmine reiected and confuted, ought to beare more ſway with him: he thus writeth, diſtinct.82.c.2. Si ad aliquos forma illa eccleſiaſtica vita, &c. If that forme of Eccleſiaſticall conuerſation and diſcipline, which was ſent from Biſhop Syricius to the prouinces, doe appeare not to haue come to the knowledge of ſome, to thoſe that are ignorant, pardon ſhall not be denied. By this it is euident, that this iniunction of ſingle life firſt proceeded from Syricius, both becauſe he is ſaid to haue preſcribed a certaine forme of life; and for that, many were ignorant thereof: whereby it is manifeſt, that it is not Apoſtolicall, for then no Church could haue pretended ignorance.

This Syricius onely inhibited Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons to marrie; for Subdeacons it was yet free, till Pelagius the 2. his time, who was Biſhop of Rome about the yeere 580. as Gregorie the firſt thus teſtifieth, diſtinct.32.c.2. We haue heard by the relation of many, that your Subdeacons doe companie with their wiues: which thing that no man ſhould afterward preſume to doe, it was prohibited, by the authoritie of our predeceſſor; which was this Pelagius. And the ſame decree againſt the mariage of Subdeacons is againe reuiued by Gregorie, diſtinct.31.cap.1.

Again, it ſhould ſeeme that the mariage of Presbyters was not generally inhibited till the firſt Toletan Councell, which was celebrate about anno 407. in the which Synode, Can.1. it is thus decreed: Si quis preſbyter ante interdictum: That if any Presbyter, yea before the interdiction, had begotten children, he ſhould not bee preferred, &c. So that it ſeemeth, that mariage began then firſt to be interdict, or forbidden.

Secondly, the diuerſitie hath been very great, and much alteration in the vrging of this inhibition.

1 The Greeke Church alloweth their Clergie to enioy their wiues before married, but ſome of them are not permitted to marrie againe: the Latin Church inhibiteth both the one and the other: So witneſſeth Innocent.decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.3.c.6.

2 The Greekes alſo differ much in their opinion and practiſe: firſt, Deacons were ſuffered to marrie after their ordination, if they made ſuch proteſtation, when they receiued orders: *concil. Ancyran.can.*10.*ann.*308.

3 Biſhops were firſt inhibited in the Greeke Church the companie of their wiues before maried; in the Trullane Synode, *Can.*12. whereas it was lawfull before: which Synode was celebrate about the yeere 673.

4 In the Latin Church Subdeacons were not a long time prohibited to marrie, as it may appeare concil.Carthag.5.c.3, which was about the yeere 438.

5 At the firſt they were not enforced to make profeſſion of ſingle life at the receiuing of their orders, but it was left free, as it is extant, concil.Toletan.2.c.1. about the yeere 530. but afterward it was decreed, that Prieſts and Deacons ſhould make ſuch promiſe and profeſſion, Toletan.4.c.26. anno 680.

6 Mariage was free in the Latine Church for all the inferiour orders and degrees of the Clergie, vnder Subdeacons, more then a thouſand yeeres, as it is extant in the decree of Leo the 9. anno 1049. *diſtinct.*32.*c.*14. But about an hundred yeere after, Alexander the 3. decreed, that if any of the lower degrees did take a wife, he ſhould be depriued of his benefice, decret.Gregor.lib.3. tit.3.cap.3.

Thus, as we ſee, there hath been great difference in the Church, concerning the degrees of the Clergie, which of them ſhould bee reſtrained mariage: firſt, Biſhops were inhibited, after that Prieſts and Deacons, then next Subdeacons, and laſt of all the inferiour orders alſo, as of Readers, Exorciſts, and the reſt: Whereby it appeareth, that this inhibition of mariage was not Apoſtolicall, for then it ſhould haue been knowne at the firſt, to whom the inhibition did appertaine. And as the diuerſitie hath been great concerning the degrees, ſo the cenſures alſo of the Church as touching the mariage of Miniſters haue been as diuers.

7 Firſt, they that were married, and had children after their ordination, were but forbidden to aſcend to a higher degree, as concil.Taurinat.c.7.anno 400. or thereabout.

8 Afterward, anno 438. in the 5. Councel of Carthage, Can.3. Clergie men, not abſtaining from their wiues, were decreed to be remoued from their office: but yet they were not ſuſpended from the Communion, Aurelianenſ.5.cap.4.

9 Then the cenſure was aggrauated, and Miniſters, that were married, were depriued of the Communion: which heauie decree is reuerſed: Concil.Turonenſ.1.c.7. anno 480. or thereabout, they decree, that they ſhould not bee kept from the Communion, but onely depriued of their office.

10 As yet Miniſters, though they were enioyned abſtinence, yet were not forbidden cohabitation with their wiues: as concil. Arelatenſ.2.can.3. it was lawfull for a Miniſter to haue his wife with him in the houſe,as well as any other kinſewoman : but afterward they were commaunded to be ſeparated from their wiues,anno 680.in the 4.Toletan.Can. 43.

11 Yet was it put to the Miniſters choiſe, whether they would leaue their wiues, or bee ſuſpended from their office : as *Gregor.*1.maketh mention of one Speciosus a Subdeacon, that was content to leaue his calling,rather then to forſake his wife, and ſo maintained himſelfe being a Notarie,*diſtinct.*32.*c.*2.and this was *an.*600. or thereabout : But afterward *Gregor.*7.*an.*1070.did enforce Miniſters by excommunicatiō to leaue their wiues,not leauing them to their choiſe at al.

12 All this while they only proceeded againſt the mariage of Miniſters by Eccleſiaſticall cenſures,as yet no ciuill or corporall puniſhments were deuiſed, till Vrbanus 2.anno 1086. who decreed, that it might bee lawfull for the Prince, mancipare ſeruituti,&c. to make Miniſters wiues bondwomen,*diſtinct.*32.*c.*10.

13 But hitherto the life of married Miniſters was not touched,till of late it was made felonie, by the bloodie act of the ſixe articles, Fox pag.1135. ſuch was the crueltie of Papiſts. Thus wee ſee how variable and diuers the conſtitutions of former times haue been concerning the mariage of Miniſters : whereby it is euident,that the Apoſtles haue not impoſed this yoke of ſingle life;for their conſtitutions are generall,and ought vniformely to bee kept of all Churches.

Now becauſe Bellarmine taketh vpon him to iuſtifie this laſt heauie cenſure of the mariage of Miniſters,which doth ſuſpend them not from their liuings only,but from their life,I cannot paſſe ouer with ſilence ſo great impietie,that it may appeare how this blood-ſucking generation of vipers intendeth nothing but crueltie.

His reaſons,for the iuſtifying of this cruell law, are two : the firſt, that married Miniſters are worthie to die,becauſe they doe breake their vow : the ſecond is taken out of the ſaying of Hierome,that a Biſhop begetting children,quaſi adulter damnabitur,ſhall be condemned as an adulterer, and not reputed as an husband : but adulterie (ſaith he) in Hieromes time was death : Ergo, maried Biſhops and Miniſters are worthie of death,*cap.*21.reſp.ad vltim.argument.Philippi.

*Anſ.*To the firſt reaſon our anſwere is this : firſt, if not the mariage of Miniſters,but the breaking of the vow be worthie of death,then haue you dealt moſt cruelly with many Miniſters of the Goſpell,which were neuer votaries, and yet haue been condemned, and put to death for their mariage. Secondly, mariage after a vow made is permitted both by the Ciuill and Canon law, and therefore the ſentence of death is vniuſt,and againſt law in this caſe. Firſt,the Ciuill law permitteth,that if a widow haue taken a ſolemne oth that ſhe will not marrie againe, may notwithſtanding that oth,goe vnto ſecond mariage : *Cod.lib.*5.*tit.*35.Valentin.Theodoſ. In optione huiuſmodi nulla cogatur: Let no woman be compelled,but left to her choiſe. If this be lawfull after an oth, there is the ſame reaſon of a vow : for a vow doth not more binde before God,then an oth.

2 Your owne Canons alſo doe warrant mariage after a vow,as *decr.Gregor.lib.*4.*tit.*6.*c.*5.Alexander the 3.thus reſolueth concerning a woman, that had made a vow not to marrie,*Nos attendentes,&c.*We conſidering,that it is more ſafe for the woman after a vow ſimplie made to contract mariage, then incurre the guilt of fornication,&c. It will here bee anſwered, that after a ſimple vow mariage may be tolerated,but not after a ſolemne : they call that a ſimple vow,when the partie neither changeth habit,nor place,profeſſing to liue ſingle.

*Contra.*Firſt,Celeſtinus the 3.of this matter thus decreeth:*Simplex votum non minus,&c.*A ſimple vow doth no leſſe binde before God,then a ſolemne,*decr.Greg.lib.*4.*tit.*6.*cap.*6. Wherefore if mariage be lawfull after the one,then after the other likewiſe: for they both binde alike before God. Thus it appeareth,that to marrie after a vow made,is agreeable to your own Canons; and authorized alſo by the Ciuill law: and therefore cannot be iudged worthie of death.

To the ſecond reaſon collected out of S.Hierome, our anſwere is : firſt, he doth not directly affirme,that a maried Biſhop is an adulterer : ſed quaſi adulter,but as an adulterer. Secondly, there is no great heede to be taken what Hierome ſaith,for he many times in his heate is ſo caried away with the commendation of virginitie, that he miſliketh not onely the mariage of Miniſters, but condemneth generally both firſt and ſecond mariage ; as of the maried eſtate he thus ſpeaketh : Fæminæ maritatæ tumentibus vteris præferunt fœditatem : epiſtol.ad Latam. Married women with their great bellies bewray their filthines. And writing to Furia : An vereris ne ex te parens tuus non habeat puſionem, &c. Art thou afraid leaſt thou ſhouldeſt not bring to thy father a little dwarfe, to creepe vpon his breaſt; & ceruicem eius ſtercore linat, and to beray his ſhoulder? Thus vnreuerently hee ſpeaketh of children which are the fruite of mariage : and yet I doe not tranſlate his words as they are ſet downe. And againe,ad Gaudentium : Seruos carnis,&c. Paul calleth them that are married, ſeruants of the fleſh. Thus he wreſteth Scripture to ſerue his turne ; thus hee counteth marriage, filthines, vncleannes, fleſhlines. And hee is no more equall toward ſecond mariage, as thus he noteth vpon theſe words of the Apoſtle, 1.Timoth.5.I will younger widowes to marrie, for certaine are turned backe after Sathan : Maritum potius accipiat, quam diabolum : Let younger widowes rather chooſe an husband,then the diuell : a goodly matter, ter,and much to bee deſired, that is receiued in compariſon of the diuell, ad Saluinam. If Hierome had this conceit of ſecond mariage,making it in the next degree to the diuell,I doe not maruell, that he calleth the mariage of Miniſters adulterie. But Hierome himſelfe hath giuen vs a rule,what we ſhould doe in this caſe: Non conſueui eorum inſultare erroribus, quorum miror ingenia: I doe not vſe to reioyce in their errors, whoſe wits I commend, Pammach. & Ocean. That libertie then, which Hierome had in iudging of others,is not denied to vs in diſcerning of him.

Thirdly, Hierome ſaith thus of himſelfe in another caſe, Imitati eſtis errantem, imitamini & correctum: As ye followed me when I erred,ſo imitate me now being corrected. So I would wiſh Bellarmine,as he is readie to take hold of this vnequall ſentence of Hierome pronounced of the mariage of Miniſters: ſo to giue him the hearing, where he ſpeaketh in fauour, as he thus writeth: Qui dixit, vnius vxoris virum, ipſe mandauit, &c. He that ſaid,a Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife, he alſo ſaid,he muſt be without reproofe,ſober,wiſe,apt to teach, &c. Ad hac omnia, &c. We winke at all this,onely we can ſee their wiues: they paſſe by that,which they ought not, & obijciunt, quod conceſſum eſt,and they obiect that which is granted, Hieron. Ocean. Here he directly affirmeth that it is granted vnto Miniſters to haue wiues.

Fourthly,he vrgeth the cuſtome of Hieromes daies, when adulterie was puniſhed with death, which cannot be denied: but he is not able to proue that the mariage of Miniſters was then puniſhed by death: Ergo,it was not reputed for adulterie. And I would aske him this queſtion, whether he approue that law or not that iudgeth adulterers worthie of death: if he doe, why is it not practiſed in Poperie? if he doe not, how can it ſerue his turne againſt the mariage of Miniſters? Againe,and doth this popiſh champion ſpeake as he thinketh? would he haue maried Miniſters put to death? what then are adulterous and fornicating Prieſts worthie of? doth he thinke mariage a greater ſtaine to orders,then fornication? But your fornicators,inceſtuous, or adulterous Prieſts,were not adiudged to death: the heauieſt cenſure againſt them, was to bee depoſed from their office, diſtinct.81.c.12. and afterward this cenſure was thought to be ſomewhat too hard,and therefore was mitigated, and chaunged into certaine yeeres penance, diſtinct.82.c.5. If then by your owne law adulterous and fornicatorious Prieſts are not to die; how much leſſe maried Miniſters? for they doe tranſgreſſe Gods law, the other breake but a conſtitution of your Church. Thus we ſee,how by the practiſe of the popiſh Church,in puniſhing more cruelly the honeſt mariage,then the vncleane conuerſation of Miniſters,they do preferre the one before the other: and thus,as S. Hierome ſaith, Lupanaria thalamis præferentur, Brothel-houſes ſhall be preferred before the mariage bed. And thus much by the way for the anſwere to Bellarmines vniuſt defence of their cruell proceedings againſt the mariage of Miniſters euen vnto death.

Fiftly,and laſtly,I will ſhew the conſent both of the Ciuill and Canon law, for the lawfulnes of Miniſters mariage.

Firſt, Cod.lib.5.tit.27.leg.1. Conſtantin. That they, quos ſacerdotij ornamenta condecorant, which are honoured by the Prieſthood, ſhould not marrie any abiect or vile perſons: they are not forbidden ſimply to marrie,but preſcribed of what condition. But if it be anſwered,that this word, ſacerdotium, Prieſthood,is here taken for an office or place of gouernment,as ſome thinke; though that vſe of the word cannot be proued in the Ciuill courſe,there are other lawes beſide to ſtrengthen this: as Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.2. Conſtantius: Clerici, coniugia, & liberi immunes, &c. Clergie men,their wiues,and children, are freed from baſe ſeruices. And leg.20. Clericorum bona poſt liberos & vxorem ad eccleſiam deferuntur: Clergie mens goods, after their children, and wife, muſt bee giuen to the Church, Theodoſ. Ergo,by the imperiall law it was lawfull for Miniſters to be maried. It will be here anſwered,that they are called their wiues, whom they had maried before their ordination,but had now left their companie. Contra. Firſt, the law ſaith, coniugia, not coniuges, the mariages or the wedlocke of Miniſters,not their wiues,muſt bee free; ſhewing a preſent vſe of mariage. Secondly, if they had now left their wiues,being maried to the Church, then the Church ſhould haue been preferred before their wiues, to inherit their goods: but now their wiues were preferred before the Church, and ſo they are in the neereſt degree to them that might be: and therefore they are their wiues ſtill, as before. Thirdly, the law being generall of all Miniſters wiues,not excluding them that are maried after,no more then the firſt, it muſt bee ſo vnderſtood, vnleſſe by the law it ſelfe,they could ſhew a reſtraint: for the law muſt be taken according to the letter.

I come now to their owne Canons: firſt, Innocentius 3. diſtinct.26.c.3. thus teſtifieth, Vxorem ducere, non eſt crimen, &c. It is no fault to marrie a wife: if it bee a ſinne, the author of mariage ſhould be in fault. And againe, Nuptiarum copula Dei mandato perficitur: The mariage bond is perfected by Gods commandement. If then it be no ſinne to marrie a wife,it is not ſinfull in a Miniſter to take a wife. Decret.p.2.cauſ.12.qu.1.c.21. Poteſtatem habet Epiſcopus, &c. A Biſhop when he dieth hath power to leaue his goods to whom he will,&c. fortaſſis enim vxorem habet, &c. it may bee he hath wife,and children: the Canon ſaith not, habuit, he had a wife, but he hath. Sext. decret. lib.3.tit.2.

*Bonif.*8.Clericus coniugatus, &c. A Clergie man, that is maried, doth enioy the priuiledge of the Clergie, &c. Their mariage then is lawful, for otherwiſe, they could not enioy their Clergie.

We haue alſo direct places of the Canons, that do affirme the mariage of the Clergie, Legitimum, to be legitimate, or lawfull: as *concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Alexand.*3.*c.*2. In ſacerdotio geniti, &c. They which are borne in the Prieſthood, may be admitted to be Prieſts: but none which were not borne in lawful mariage, could be preferred to be Biſhops or Prieſts, *part.*3.*cap.*3. Ergo, mariage in the Prieſthood is lawfull. Likewiſe *Lateran. ſub Innocent.*3.*cap.*14. Clerici, &c. Clergie men falling into fornication, ought to be more grieuouſly puniſhed, Cùm legitimo matrimonio poſſint vti, ſeeing they may vſe lawfull matrimonie, *decret. Gregor. lib.*5.*tit.*38.*c.*5.Clemens 3. Græcis legitimo matrimonio vti licet: The Greekes may ſafely vſe lawfull Matrimonie. In all theſe places, the mariage of the Clergie is called lawfull.

Now I will ſhew in particular, that it hath been lawfull for the ſeuerall degrees of the Clergie to marie: for Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, Subdeacons, Readers, Exorciſts, Singers and the reſt: firſt, for the foure inferior orders, of Doorekeepers, Lectores, Exorciſts, Acolythi, that they may take a wife, the decree of Leo the 9. is extant, *diſtinct.*32.*c.*14. Secondly, Subdeacons are permitted to marrie, *diſtinct.*84.4. out of the Councell of Carthage 5.*c.*3. Thirdly, it was lawfull for Deacons alſo to marrie, *diſtinct.*27.*c.*7. Gregorie maketh mention of one Ioannes a Deacon, Qui paruulam habuit filiam, that had a little daughter, whom the Citizens of Naples elected to be their Biſhop: the yong infant was begotten in his Deaconſhip: for it is not like they would chooſe one to be their Biſhop, that had bin Deacon but a while. Fourthly, Prieſts alſo were married, *diſtinct.*28.*c.*17. Nicholaus thus writeth to the Balganons, Deijcere non debetis &c. I would not haue you to depriue him of his place, ſpeaking of an Elder or a Prieſt that was married. Fiftly, for the lawfulneſſe alſo of Biſhops mariage, we haue a direct Canon, *diſtinct.*28.*c.*13. Where Pelagius conſenteth to the election of a married Biſhop elected to Syracuſa, though hee deferred it a whole yeere, yet at the length gaue conſent. Thus haue we the teſtimonie of their owne Canons for the approbation of Miniſters mariage.

Let vs adde the ſeale of Martyrs, M. Lambert Martyr out of S. Paul thus ſaying, They that cannot abſtaine let them marrie, &c. 1.Cor.7.9. inferreth thus, this proueth well, that all Prieſts wanting continencie of heart, had need to marrie to auoyde burning luſt, Fox. pag. 1104.

M. Tindal Martyr: A prieſt ought to haue a wife for two cauſes, leaſt he ſhould ſeeme vnapt for ſo chargeable an office, which hath no houſehold to rule: and againe, becauſe chaſtitie is an exceeding ſeldome gift, &c. Fox. pag. 1250.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER ANY OVGHT to be admitted to the Miniſterie after ſecond marriage.

The Papiſts.

78.Error.

THey deny not, but that Biſhops and Miniſters, hauing been once maried, are rightly ordeyned, ſo that afterward they doe not companie with their wiues: but they which haue been either themſelues twice married, or haue married a widowe, which had a husband before, are vtterly vncapeable of holy orders, *Bellarmin. cap.*23. *Rhemiſt. Timoth.*3.*ſect.*4. And this they call Bigamie.

*Argum.*1. They reaſon thus out of S. Pauls words. 1.Tim.4.2. A Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife: that is, ſay they, that no kinde of way was Bigamus, or had two wiues either at once, or one after another. And they proue their interpretation thus. Firſt, as S. Paul deſcribeth a widow of the Church, 1.Tim.5.9. that hath been the wife of one husband, ſo here he ſaith of a Biſhop, that he ſhould be the husband of one wife: But that is meant, ſucceſſiuè, of one husband after another: for it was neuer ſeene that one woman ſhould haue more husbands then one at once, nor neuer ſuffered either amongſt the Iewes or Gentiles: therefore it muſt be ſo taken here, a husband of one wife, that is, who hath been but once maried, as it is taken there, a wife of one husband, that neuer had more, not onely ſimul, at once, but not ſucceſſiuè, not ſucceſſiuely one after another, *Bellarm. cap.*23.

Anſw. Firſt, there were many women both among the Iewes and Gentiles, that had forſaken their firſt husbands, and were vnlawfully coupled to others, and ſo had moe husbands at once; and likewiſe many men that had done the like to their wiues, but afterward repented, and were conuerted to the Chriſtian faith; but yet were not admitted to any publike office in the Church, becauſe of their former infamous life. Of ſuch the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in both theſe places, and not of thoſe that maried one wife, or one husband after another. It is therefore great boldnes, and a greater vntruth to ſay, that there were none ſuch heard of in thoſe dayes: for although it were neither lawfull then nor now, yet both many ſuch were heard of in thoſe dayes, and it were no hard matter to finde out ſome now among the papiſts, that haue had more then one wife at once.

Secondly, the Ieſuite might haue remembred himſelfe, how elſe where, helping to excuſe the Councell of Neocæſarea,which decreed thus, Can.7. Preſbyterum conuiuio ſecundarum nuptiarum intereſſe non debere, That a Prieſt ſhould not be preſent at a ſecond mariage feaſt; hath deuiſed this ſhift, Concilium loqui de eo,qui duas ſimul Vxores habet, That the Councell calleth that ſecond mariage,when as a man hath two wiues together, *Bellarm.de concilijs lib.2.cap.*8. Why then ſhould he thinke it ſtrange, that we ſo vnderſtand S.Paul, as giuing a caueat againſt ſuch, as had two wiues together?

Thirdly, S.Hierome thus expoundeth the Apoſtle, writing in this manner, Hoc, quod dicit vnius vxoris virum,&c. This, which the Apoſtle ſaith, the husband of one wife, may be otherwiſe expounded: the firſt Church of Chriſt did conſiſt of the remnant of Iſrael: the Apoſtle did know that it was tolerated in the law to haue children by diuers wiues, yea, the Prieſts themſelues vſed that libertie: wherefore he commandeth, that the Miniſters of Chriſts Church ſhould not challenge the ſame licence, that they ſhould haue two or three mariages together, but at one time euery man his ſingle wife; *Hierom.Ocean.tom.*3.

Fourthly, he is not to be counted Bigamus or Digamus, that is coupled and ioyned to one wife after another lawfully,but he that vnlawfully at once enioyeth more then one. *Fulk.annot.*1.*Tim.*5.*ſect.6.& cap.3.ſect.*4.

To this agreeth that decree of Nicholaus the firſt: Vt Laicus Vxorem ſimul & concubinam habens non communicet Eccleſiæ, That a lay man, keeping a wife and a concubine together,ſhould not communicate with the Church. And againe, Decret.ſeptim.de regibus. An non diſtricta vltione feriendus es,qui in duabus Vxoribus adulterium & flagitium Lamech imitatus es? Are you not ſeuerely to be cenſured, which haue played the adulterer with two wiues? Thus he writeth to King Lotharius,who had two Wiues together, Teberga,and Gualdreda: And ſuch as theſe,are truely called Bigami. And thus is this worde taken both in the Ciuill and Canon law: as *Cod.*5.*leg.*2. Dioclet.Binas habens vxores eſt infamis: He that hath two wiues (that is, at once) is infamous. And to this agree the Canons, *decret.Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*21.*c.*4.*Innocent.*3. Qui duas ſimul vxores habet,&c. Hee is counted infamous, that hath two wiues at once. And in the ſame place, Licet in veritate non ſit Digamus,&c. A Clergie man twice married, though in trueth he be not Bigamus; yet incurreth the penaltie of Bigamie. Here in direct termes ſecond mariage is denied to bee Bigamie. So alſo in the Decrees,*cauſ.*31.*qu.*2.*cap.*10.*Primus Lamech &c.*Firſt the homicide Lamech brought in two wiues; Fratricidium & Digamium:But the ſame puniſhment of the Deluge,did meete both with his Fratricide and Digamie: Here Lamech is called Digamus,hauing two wiues at once. Againe Innocent 3.decreeth, that he is not to be counted Digamus,that hath many concubines,one after another, *decret.Gregor.lib.*1.*tit.*21.*c.*6. How much leſſe is he Digamus, that hath had many wiues,one after another? vnleſſe they will preferre whoredome before mariage.

*Argum.*2. Againe ſay they, the high Prieſt in the lawe was not permitted to marrie a widow, Leuit.21.13. Which lawe being obſerued in the high Prieſt, ought much more to be kept now, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. That law concerning the high Prieſt, did onely appertaine to himſelfe,who was a figure of Chriſt,neither can it be extended to the Miniſters of the Goſpell,no more then any other parts of his office,that were peculiar to that ſtate and calling. Secondly, in the ſame place the Prieſt is enioyned to marrie a Virgine: if then the prieſthoode of the lawe is for them againſt the marying of a widowe,it maketh alſo with vs for the marying of a Virgine.

The Proteſtants.

THat it is not by the word of God forbidden, that any man ſhould marrie the ſecond, yea the third time, after the deceaſe of his wife, neither that he is to be counted vnchaſt or giuen to wantonnes in ſo doing (much leſſe he that in his firſt mariage taketh a widowe,) neither that,to haue been twiſe maried ought to be a barre or a ſtop from entring into the ſtate and calling of the Miniſterie, if otherwiſe the man be qualified and furniſhed with ſufficient graces for that calling; thus it is proued.

*Argum.*1. They that cut off ſuch, as haue been twiſe married, from hauing any calling in the Church,doe ſauour of the hereſie of Montanus,into the which alſo Tertullian fell, who condemned ſecond mariage: for if once mariage be no impediment nor preiudice to him that is to be ordayned, but ſecond mariage be; then doe they diſallow ſecond mariage, (becauſe a man is thereby diſabled to be a Miniſter) if not ſimply,yet they make it leſſe lawfull,nay more offenſiue,and ſubiect to obloquie and reproch. But the Scripture maketh no difference betweene firſt and ſecond mariage: S.Paul ſaith, For auoyding of fornication, let euery man haue his owne wife: he ſaith not, his firſt wife; but generally: ſo that it is lawfull for auoyding of fornication to marrie the ſecond or the third wife,as well as the firſt.

*Argum.*2. If it be as lawfull to marrie the ſecond wife, as the firſt, if it be for auoyding of fornication; then ſecond mariage doth no more hinder the receiuing of orders then the firſt: but the antecedent is true: for what ſhould make the ſecond mariage leſſe lawfull? not any dutie that the wife or the husband oweth to the partie deceaſed: for they are free in that reſpect, and ſet at libertie, Rom.7.3. Neither is the end of mariage made fruſtrate more now then before: for he that marieth the ſecond time, may haue as good cauſe to doe it, for auoyding of fornication, as he had at the firſt.

3 Second mariage, make the worſt of it you can, is not ſo great a blot as fornication, or adulterie, or to haue a Concubine: but theſe were no lets of Prieſthood in poperie: Nay, we reade that Auguſtine in the purer age of the Church, that confeſſeth he had two Concubines, yet afterward was made presbyter, and at the laſt a Biſhop for all that. Wherefore, there is no reaſon that exception ſhould be taken againſt a twice maried man, ſeeing a fornicator is free. And by this reaſon, if after a ſecond concubine a man may be admitted to orders, but not after a ſecond wife: then as S. Hierome ſaith, Coniugales ergò tabulæ, non coitus &c. Not vnlawful companie, but the mariage bond ſhould be by the Apoſtle condemned: Imputatur infælicitas vxoris mortuæ & libido meretricia coronatur: Then a wife ſhould be counted vnhappie, and whoriſh luſt crowned. *Hieron. Ocean. Tom.*3. Wherefore, if Pelagius the Pope admitted one to be made a Deacon, who had a concubine after his firſt wife, diſtinct.33.c.7. with how much greater reaſon, may he be admitted, that had one lawfull wife after another?

Confeſſ.lib.6. cap.15.

Laſtly, of this opinion Auguſtine ſeemeth to be: That it is as lawfull to marrie the ſecond time and the third, as the firſt. Ait Apoſtolus, mulier alligata eſt viro, quamdiu vir eius viuit; non dixit primus, ſecundus, tertius, aut quartus: The woman is bound (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſo long as her husband liueth; he ſaith not, the firſt husband, ſecond, third, or fourth. So the woman is as free after the firſt or ſecond husbands death, as when ſhe was a Virgine. Yet if ſhe can content her ſelfe with her widowes eſtate, and haue the gift of continencie, ſhe ſhall doe better not to marrie: but if ſhe haue not, it is better to marrie (S. Paul ſaith not, the firſt, ſecond, or third time, but ſo often as ſhe hath neede) rather then to burne.

De Bon.viduitat.c.12.

Concerning twiſe maried Miniſters, though ſome in times paſt thought it inconuenient, yet were they not ſo fierce againſt them, as our aduerſaries now are, to thinke ſuch vnworthie their calling, and to depriue them both of office and maintenance. Concil. Arelatenſ.2.can.26. Clerici quibus duplicata inciderint Matrimonia non vltra ſubdiaconatum Eccleſiaſticas capiunt dignitates, Clerkes, that chance to be maried twiſe, let them not be capable of any Eccleſiaſticall dignitie more then the ſubdeaconſhip.

Concil. Agathenſ.can.1. Placuit, vt digami, &c. Preſbyteri vel diaconi nomen obtineant, officium non exequantur: it ſeemeth good to vs, that they which are twiſe maried in the Miniſterie, ſhould reteyne the name of Prieſt, or Deacon, though they execute not the office: yet this is not ſo hard, as to be depriued both of name, office, and dignitie.

But we haue yet clearer teſtimonies: Innocentius 1. Epiſtol.25. can.2. reaſoning againſt thoſe, which counted it not bigamie, if a man had one wife before Baptiſme, and another after, Quia in Baptiſmo, inter cætera crimina dimiſſum eſt, Becauſe it is forgiuen them amongſt other crimes in Baptiſme, ſay they: he thus writeth, Vxorem ducere crimen eſt, an non eſt crimen? ſi crimen, author eſt in culpa qui conſtituit, vt crimen in paradiſo conſtitueretur: quod Deus ergo coniunxit nefas eſt appellare, &c. Is it a ſinne to marrie a wife, or is it none? if it be a ſinne, the authour is to be blamed, who ordayned ſinne in Paradiſe: therefore that which God hath ioyned together, it is not lawfull to call ſin. Hence we gather thus: ſecond mariage is it a ſin or no? if it be a ſin, then the blame reſteth vpon God, which were blaſphemie to thinke; if it be no ſin, why ſhould it be an hindrance to the calling of a Miniſter? How can he be polluted, and made vnapt for that calling, by an act not ſinfull?

*Leo Epiſtol.*90. hath this ſaying: Ancillam à toro abijcere, & vxorem certæ ingenuitatis accipere, non duplicatio eſt coniugij, ſed profectus honeſtatis: For a man to barre a bondwoman or concubine from his bed, and to take a freewoman to his wife, is no doubling of mariage, but a profiting in honeſtie. Say then, is it an honeſt part after a man hath knowne a concubine, to gette a wife? And is it not a like honeſt part, after a man hath had one wife, to marrie, if neede require, another? If it be then profectus honeſtatis, a profiting in honeſtie, to marrie a ſecond wife for neceſſitie, as it is to take a wife after a concubine: for otherwiſe we make marriage worſe then fornication: Why ſhould not a man profiting in honeſtie, that is twiſe married, be admitted to the miniſterie?

Now for the iudgement of the ciuill law concerning ſecond mariage, thus we find, *Cod.lib.6. tit.*40.*leg.*2. Iuſtinian doth reuerſe the law Iulia, which did not permit ſecond mariage, vnleſſe the widow did take an oth, that ſhe did it for procreation ſake: wherefore he giueth libertie for ſecond mariage without any ſuch oth, alledging this reaſon of that law; Augeri magis noſtram rempublicam, &c. For we deſire rather our common wealth to be encreaſed, and by many men lawfully borne to be frequented, &c. The reaſon of this law ſerueth as well for the approbation of the ſecond mariage of Miniſters.

And as for your Canons, they allow the ſentence of S. Hierome, that he is not counted Bigamus, that had one wife before Baptiſme, and another after, diſtinct.26.c.1. and ſo it was no let vnto orders. And Hierome himſelfe maketh mention of one Carterius a Spaniſh Biſhop, that had had two wiues, one before baptiſme, another after: yea, ſaith he, Omnis mundus his ordinationibus plenus, &c. All the world is full of ſuch Ordinations, I ſpeake not onely of Prieſts, but of Biſhops, whom if a man would number, he ſhall finde ſuch a companie, as may well compare with the Synode of Arimine for multitude: Hieron. Ocean. Tom.3. Thus we ſee, it was an vſuall thing in S. Hieroms time, for men twice maried, once before baptiſme, and once after, to be receiued to orders: yet afterward Innocent.3. decreed the contrary, that ſuch mariage ſhould be counted Bigamie, diſtinct.26.c.3. But we preferre Hieromes time as more ancient, and neerer the practiſe of the Primitiue Church.

Concerning the iudgement of holy Martyrs: it is cleare by their practiſe, for diuers of them being in orders, were twiſe married, as Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr, ſee his ſtorie, Fox. pag.1860. & deinceps.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER MINISTERS ought to refraine the companie of their wiues, being entred into orders.

The Papiſts.

79.Error. THey confeſſe, that Peter and other of the Apoſtles were maried; but after their calling they had no company with their wiues, Rhemiſt. Math.8.ſect.3. And ſo ought the Miniſters of the Goſpell (ſaith Bellarmine) be kept from the vſe of their wiues, to whom they were maried before their calling.

Argum.1. The Prieſts of the law were bound to withdrawe themſelues during the time of their ſeruice, while they attended vpon the ſacrifice, and to forbeare the companie of their wiues: much more the Prieſts of the law, that muſt alwayes offer ſacrifices, muſt be alwayes free from matrimonie, Rhemiſt. Luk.1.ſect.10.

Anſw.1. The Leuiticall prieſthood did repreſent and ſhadowe forth the prieſthood of Chriſt, and their legall cleanſings, waſhings, abſtinence, purifyings, did ſhewe forth the holines and perfection of the prieſthood of Chriſt: wherefore the law of their abſtinence doth no more binde vs, then other of their legall purifications: they haue their end in the prieſthoode of Chriſt. Thus alſo ſaith S. Hierome, Noſter Pontifex ſecundum ordinem, &c. But our Biſhop according to the order of Melchiſedech, is without father or mother, without kinred, without marriage, lib.1. contra Iouinianu. 2. We acknowledge no ſacrificing prieſthood in the newe teſtament, nor any ſacrifice in the Church for ſinne, but onely that ſacrifice of attonement vpon the Croſſe: but our ſacrifices are ſpirituall, of praiſe and thankeſgiuing; therefore the argument followeth not from the Prieſts of the lawe, to thoſe that are no prieſts, *Fox.*pag.1166. 3. Purenes of life, we grant, is as much required now in Miniſters of the Goſpell, as it was then in the prieſts of the lawe: therefore they ought as well to haue libertie to marrie, ſeeing Matrimonie is the beſt remedie againſt fornication and vncleannes of life. 4. The Prieſts of the law did onely abſtaine during the time of their ſeruice, not while they liued: and ſo was it decreed in the ſixt generall Synode, cap.13. as it is alleaged, diſtinct.31.c.13. Non in perpetuum, ſed tempore oblationis, &c. That Miniſters ſhould abſtaine from the companie of their Wiues, not for euer, but during the time of the offering onely.

Argum.2. Another argument they picke out of S. Pauls words, 1.Cor.7.5. Defraud you not one another, vnleſſe it be by conſent for a time, that you may giue your ſelues to prayer. If the lay man cannot pray, vnleſſe he abſtaine from his wife; the Prieſt, that muſt alwayes pray, muſt alwayes abſtaine, Rhemiſt.

Anſw.1. The lay man is bound to offer prayers alwayes as well as the Prieſt, and ſo by this reaſon, neither ought any lay man to performe his duety to his wife, if it were an hinderance to praier. 2. S. Paul ſpeaketh not here of all prayer, but of a ſpeciall kind, which, to be made more feruent, requireth faſting and abſtinence, which kind is not alway neceſſarie, but vpon ſome certaine occaſion. 3. It is ſo farre off that a lay man cannot pray, vnleſſe he abſtaine from his wife, that many times he prayeth more quietly then he that is vnmaried, or abſtaineth, if he haue not dominion ouer his luſt, Fulk. annot. 1.Cor.7.5.

The Proteſtants.

NEither the Apoſtles forſooke the companie of their wiues, after they were called and choſen of Chriſt, neither ought the miniſters of the Goſpell to renounce, abandon, and forſweare the ſocietie and fellowſhip of their wiues: but rather to liue with them in all temperance and ſobrietie, for the good example of others.

*Argum.*1. It is proued out of the 1.Cor.9.5. that Peter and the other Apoſtles did leade about their wiues in their companie, and S.Paul there ſaith, that he alſo might vſe the ſame libertie. Likewiſe, 1.Tim.3.5. S.Paul giueth rules concerning the houſe and familie of the Miniſter, his children, the behauiour of their wiues, verſ.11. But where, I pray you, is it fitter for the Miniſters wife and children to be, then with her husband? By theſe places it is apparant, that Miniſters wiues were not excluded from their husbands company: as a thouſand yeere after and more it was decreed by Anſelme, that they ſhould not dwell in houſe with their husbands, nor talke with them without two or three witneſſes, Fox.pag.1167.

*Argum.*2. It is cleane contrarie to the ſcripture. Firſt, our Sauiour ſaith, whoſoeuer putteth away his wife, except it be for fornication, cauſeth her to commit adulterie, Matth.5.32. By this rule, therefore a Miniſter ought not for any other cauſe to put away and diſmiſſe his wife, but for fornication: Ergo, it is not lawfull becauſe of his calling, or vpon any other colour to ſend her away. Secondly, S.Paul ſaith, They ought not to defraud one another but for a time, and that with conſent, 1.Cor.7.5. Therefore if the wife will not conſent, her husband cannot goe from her: nay, though there be conſent, yet they muſt be aſunder but for a time: they cannot by conſent altogether breake off, and diſſolue their marriage, which was made before God, though they would neuer ſo fayne themſelues, vnleſſe it be for fornication, then without conſent the mariage knot is broken.

*Argum.*3. Peter left not the companie of his wife after he was made an Apoſtle: for he had a daughter called Petronilla, of whom the popiſh legends write much holines, which muſt needes be borne after he was called Peter. And againe, it is proued by her age, for ſhe was ſo young in the perſecution vnder Domitian, that Flaccus the Countie deſired her in mariage: but if ſhe had been borne before Peters Apoſtleſhip, ſhe muſt haue been threeſcore yeere old at that time, or hard vpon, *Fulk. Matth.*8.*ſect.*3.

4 Auguſtine thus writeth of this matter: Vna ſola eſſe cauſa poſſet, qua te id quod vouiſti, non ſolum non hortaremur, verumetiam prohiberemus implere, ſi forte tua coniux hoc tecum ſuſcipere animi, ſeu carnis infirmitate recuſaret, Epiſtol.45. There may be one cauſe, and no more, which would make me, not onely to moue you to performe that which you haue vowed, but to diſſwade and forbid you, namely, if your wife by reaſon of her weakenes, ſhould refuſe to beare the yoke with you. Therefore, by Auguſtines ſentence, neither ought a Miniſter that is maried, performe the vow of continencie which he made, without conſent of his wife: for he ſpeaketh generally of vowes made by thoſe that are ioyned in Wedlocke: Let vs ſee alſo the decrees of generall Councels.

Trullan. ſynod general.6.Can.13. It was decreed, Deponendos eos, qui audeant poſt ordinationem diaconos & ſacerdotes cum ſuis prioribus legitimis vxoribus conſuetudine priuare, & ipſos, qui ordinantur vxores ſuas pietatis prætextu expellentes, excommunicandos: That they ſhould be depoſed, which preſumed to depriue Deacons and Prieſts, after the receiuing of orders, of their lawfull wiues companie, and that they, which after the taking of orders, vnder pretenſe of greater holines, ſhould put away their wiues, ſhould be excommunicate.

Lateranenſ. ſub Alexandro 3.*part.*19.*cap.2.&* 3. Qui in ſacerdotio geniti ſunt, admitti poſſunt ad ſacerdotium, ſed paternas eccleſias habere non debent, alijs tamen eccleſijs præfici poſſunt: They which are borne in the Prieſthoode, may be admitted to the Prieſthoode, but their Fathers Churches or benefices they cannot haue, yet other Churches they may be ſet ouer. And *part.*3.*cap.*3.thus, Ne quis non de legitimo Matrimonio natus, Epiſcopus fieret, That none not borne in lawfull Matrimonie, ſhould be a Biſhop. Then we conclude thus, A Prieſts ſonne borne in the Prieſthoode may be made a Biſhop, and ſet ouer Churches, but he that is not borne in lawfull wedlocke cannot: therefore the mariage of Prieſts, and the ſober vſe thereof, euen in the Prieſthood, is lawfull.

*Lateranenſ. ſub Innocentio.*3.*cap.*14. Clerici, qui ſecundum religionis ſua morem, non abdicarunt copulam coniugalem, ſi lapſi fuerint in fornicationem grauius puniantur, cum legitimo Matrimonio vti poſſunt: Clergie men, which after the cuſtome of their profeſſion, doe not abrogate the mariage knot, if they fall into fornication, let them be more ſeuerely puniſhed, ſeeing they may vſe lawfull Matrimonie. The Matrimonie of Clergie men is called lawfull, and made free vnto them in reſpect of the vſe: what clearer teſtimonies can any man require?

We haue alſo the warrant of both lawes, that Miniſters ſhould not leaue or forſake the companie of their wiues: as firſt, Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.19.Honor. Theodoſ. Illas non relinqui, &c. The affection of chaſtitie doth exhort not to leaue or forſake thoſe women, which before their husbands prieſthood deſerued lawfull mariage: neque enim Clericis incompetenter adiunctæ ſunt, &c. neither are they incompetently ioyned to Clergie men, which by their conuerſation made them worthie the prieſthood. By this law it appeareth, that Miniſters wiues muſt not be caſt off, but ioyned ſtill to their husbands.

The Canon law alſo alloweth that decree of the Synode, Gangrenſ. diſtinct.30.3. Si qua mulier, &c. If any woman forſaking her husband, will depart, and diſſolue the mariage bond, and ſo condemning mariage, let her be accurſed. This Canon forbiddeth all forſaking or departing of them that are maried one from another: and ſo conſequently neither is any ſuch departure lawful for Orders ſake. It will be anſwered, that this Canon forbiddeth ſuch departure, as condemneth mariage. Contra. Mariage is condemned two waies, either abſolutely, as by counting it vncleane in it ſelfe, as the Manichees wickedly taught; or elſe by way of implication, as to thinke any calling diſgraced or polluted by it, as the Papiſts ſay Orders are. This Synode in generall decreeth againſt all condemnation of mariage, both the one and the other: as it may appeare by the 10. Canon of the ſame Synode: Si quis propter Deum virginitatem profeſſus, &c. If any profeſſing virginitie for Gods cauſe doth arrogantly diſpraiſe thoſe that are maried, let him be accurſed. So the popiſh votaries doe deſpiſe the maried Miniſters of the Goſpell, and therefore are vnder the cenſure of this Canon. Likewiſe the ſame Synode in the laſt Canon decreeth thus againſt the condemners and deſpiſers of mariage: Hos condemnamus qui ſe extollunt, &c. We doe condemne thoſe, that extoll themſelues againſt the Scriptures, and eccleſiaſticall Canons, and bring in new precepts. But the popiſh Church in impoſing ſingle life, bringeth in new precepts contrarie to the Scripture and the Canons. Ergo.

I will ſet to the ſeale of the holy Martyrs: Doctor Taylor preacher, holy Martyr, when his ſeruant Iohn Hull had brought his ſonne Thomas vnto him, he put off his hat, and thus ſaid to the people: Good people, this is mine owne ſonne begotten of my bodie in lawfull Matrimonie, and God be bleſſed for lawfull Matrimonie, Fox pag. 1525.

Lawrence Saunders preacher, holy Martyr, when his childe was brought vnto him into the priſon, he ſaid thus to the ſtanders by, which praiſed the goodlines of the childe: What man fearing God would not rather loſe this life preſent, then to adiudge this boy to bee a baſtard, his wife a whore, and himſelfe a whoremonger? Yea if there were no other cauſe, for which a man of my eſtate ſhould loſe his life, yet who would not giue it to aduouch this childe to bee legitimate, and his mariage to be lawfull and holy? Fox pag. 1497.

THE SIXT QVESTION, CONCERNING THE maintenance of the Church by tithes.

Concerning the maintenance of the Church, there are diuers points, wherein wee and our aduerſaries agree: The maintenance of the Miniſters of the Church is either by temporall poſſeſſions, which haue been beſtowed vpon the Church, by the gift of deuout and religious men; or elſe they haue inheritance from their friends and a patrimonie of their owne; or elſe they liue of the tithes and oblations of the people.

1 We graunt, and agree vnto them, that the Church Miniſters, beſide the portion of tithes, may lawfully enioy temporall lands, which the Church of ancient time hath been endowed withall. But we yeeld vnto them vpon certaine conditions: Firſt, there muſt be a moderation vſed in all ſuch gifts, which are bequeathed to the Church: for eccleſiaſticall perſons ought not to be too greedie and haſtie in receiuing whatſoeuer in ſimplicitie and blinde deuotion any man ſhall giue vnto them: as if they ſee that others are impoueriſhed by the gift whereby they are inriched. Thus the Prieſts offended in our Sauiour Chriſts time, who allured the people to bring their offerings to the Altar, though their parents wanted in the meane time, whom they were bound to relieue by the law of God. This alſo was a common practiſe in time of poperie: So the prieſts might be enriched, they cared not greatly, though all the ſtocke of their patrones and founders were vndone: who becauſe they were vnſatiable, and had no meaſure in entiſing ſimple men, to giue ouer their lands and Lordſhips into their hands, the ſtatute of Mortmaine was made, not without iuſt cauſe, to be a rule vnto them, that otherwiſe could not rule themſelues. At the firſt it was lawfull by the Imperiall conſtitutions for any man to giue to the Church, as much as he thought good, as it may appeare by the law of Conſtantinus, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 5. leg. 1. when as yet the Church was poore, and newly deliuered from perſecution: but afterward, when as ambitiouſly Clergie men ſought to enrich themſelues, and without meaſure heaped poſſeſſions together, it ſeemed good that a reſtraint ſhould bee made; as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 5. leg. 16. Iuſtinian made a law, that no gift made to the Church aboue 500. crownes ſhould bee good, without inſinuation, that is, ſome act done before the Magiſtrate. And there is a law more ancient made by the Heathen Emperours, Diocleſian, Maximinian, that a Colledge, not priuiledged, that is licenced, ſhould not be capable of any inheritance, Cod. lib. 6. tit. 34. leg. 8. Yea their owne Canons alſo haue made prouiſion againſt the inſatiable deſire of the Church, Decret. par. 2. cauſ. 12. qu. 2. can. 49. Gregor. Eccleſia rapacitatis ardore, &c. The Church muſt not greedily inuade the things pertaining to another. And, Can. 74. Non vltra quinquageſimam partem, &c. That a Biſhop ſhould not giue aboue the 50. part of the Church goods to a Monaſterie. Auguſtine doth highly commend Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, and worthely, for this one act: A certaine rich man of Carthage hauing no children, gaue all his ſubſtance to the Church, reſeruing onely the vſe thereof for his life time: afterward the man had children: Reddidit Epiſcopus nec opinanti ea, quæ donauerat: The Biſhop reſtoreth vnto him that which he gaue, not looking for it, nor making any account of it: In poteſtate habuit Epiſcopus non reddere; ſed iure fori, non iure poli? It was in the Biſhops power not to reſtore the gift, but by the law of the court, not by the law of heauen. I pray you how many ſuch examples can ye ſhew me in the time of popiſh ſuperſtition? This then is the firſt thing required, that although it be lawfull for the Church to enioy the bequeſts of their benefactors, yet it ſhould be done with ſome limitation; as the Leuites, beſide their tithes, had cities appointed them: but the number was ſet down, they ſhould not exceede 48. in all: and to euery citie was a quantitie and circuite of ground allotted, which ſhould in length and bredth containe euery way three thouſand cubites, Numb. 35. verſ. 5. 8.

Ad fratres in Eremo Serm. 52.

2 It muſt alſo bee prouided, that the gifts and legacies beſtowed vpon the Church, bee for the maintenance of pietie and true religion, and to good vſes, not to nouriſh idolatrie and ſuperſtition: or if they bee giuen through ignorance of the time, to ſuch vnlawfull purpoſes, they ought by the Prince to bee conuerted to better and more godly vſes: As now in England, the lands of Colledges, which were firſt giuen to maintaine that abominable Idoll of the Maſſe, are turned to the maintenance of learning and true religion. So was the law of Moſes, that the gold and ſiluer, braſſe, yron, tinne, lead, which the Iſraelites ſhould receiue of the Heathen, firſt ſhould paſſe through the fire, and ſo be made cleane, and fit for holy vſes: Euen thus according to this law, the lands conſecrate to ſuperſtition, hauing now paſſed through the fire of Gods word, and triall of the truth, may ſafely be vſed to the glorie of God, in aduancing and ſetting forward true religion and vertue: As Cod. lib. 1 tit. 8. leg. 8. Valentin. Martian. It is made a law that the houſes, wherein heretikes did meete, ſhould bee adiudged to the orthodoxall Church: tit. 12. leg. 11. Honor. That the habitations of certaine heretikes called Cælicolæ, ſhould be annexed to the true or right beleeuing Church. Likewiſe, leg. 17. The Synagogues of the Iewes are confiſcate to the vſe of the Church. Theodoſ. Valentin.

Numb. 31. 23.

3 Another thing muſt bee required: that Church-men ought not to abuſe the poſſeſſions of the Church, to maintaine pride, idlenes, and riotous liuing: for in caſe they doe notoriouſly ſpend and waſte the Church goods, the Prince (by whoſe authoritie they were giuen to the Church) may iuſtly take from them their ſuperfluities, not leauing the Church deſtitute of ſufficient maintenance. This is notably proued by Iohn Huſſe, in the defence of Wickliffes articles: And we haue ſeene the practiſe thereof in England, in the late ſuppreſſion of Abbeyes; wherin (though ſome of thoſe lands might otherwiſe haue bin diſpoſed of) yet the prouidence of God notably appeared in bringing deſolation vpon thoſe Cels of ſin, and vncleane cages of birds. Neither hath this been an vnuſuall and vnaccuſtomed practiſe in the Church, for Princes to correct the miſdemeanour of Prieſts, by cutting them ſhort of their temporalties: for in Auguſtines time the Chriſtian Emperors diſpoſſeſſed the Donatiſts of their Churches and poſſeſſions, and gaue them to the Catholike Biſhops. And at that time the Donatiſts cried out, as the Papiſts now doe, Quid mihi eſt imperator? What hath the Emperour, the King to doe with our lands? Auguſtine anſwereth, Secundum ius ipſius poſſides terram: by the law of Princes the Church enioyeth her poſſeſſions: Recitemus leges imperatorum, videamus ſi voluerint aliquid ab hæreticis poſſideri: Let vs then rehearſe the lawes of Emperours, and ſee whether they ſuffer heretikes to enioy the Church poſſeſſions.

Fox. pag. 457.

Tractat. in Iohann. 6.

That it is lawfull for the ciuill Magiſtrate to diſpoſſeſſe Eccleſiaſticall perſons of their liuings and maintenance abuſing them to wantonnes and impietie, ſee Concil. Colonienſ part. 9. cap 21. Fraternitates, quæ vocantur, &c. The brotherhoods, as they are called, which are made in the honour of ſome Saints, haue a ſhew indeede of godlines, but as they are now vſed, both Clerkes and lay men doe follow nothing els in ſuch places but ryot and drunkennes, and ſometimes they intend conſpiracies againſt potentates, we thinke it better that they ſhould be cleane taken out of the way, and their reuenewes giuen to the poore.

Now, whereas there is a great complaint amongſt malecontents and ſuperſtitious fauourites of the popiſh profeſſion, that the Abbey lands were taken away from their Cels, confiſcate to the Prince, and conuerted to lay vſes: for the better anſwere thereof, I will briefly ſet downe theſe concluſions. Firſt, that it hath been alwaies lawfull for the Prince, to ſeaze vpon ſuch goods and lands as were abuſed to idolatrous and ſuperſtitious purpoſes, which afterward being in the Princes right, were at his deuotion and diſpoſition to bee employed. See the law of Conſtantine, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 14. leg. 1. That the goods of ſacrificing Prieſts were confiſcate to the Prince. And leg. 5. Honor. Theodoſ. Omnia loca, quæ ſacris veterum error deputauit, noſtræ rei iubemus ſociari: All thoſe places, which haue been in the error of former time appointed to ſacred vſes, we bid to be ioyned to our treaſurie: excepting ſuch things as were beſtowed by the liberalitie of Princes vpon priuate perſons. So S. Ambroſe anſwereth Symmachus, making the like obiection, for that the Emperours had ſpoyled the Idoll prieſts of their reuenewes, Sublata ſunt prædia, quia non religioſè vtebantur ijs, quæ religionis iure defenderent: Their lands were taken away, becauſe they did not religiouſly vſe thoſe things which they held vnder colour of religion. The ſame anſwere may we make our aduerſaries in the like caſe.

Secondly, we ſay it had been very meete, that a greater part of the Abbey lands had been conuerted to godly vſes, as it was religiouſly by the Prince intended, if his godly purpoſe had not bin by the couetouſnes of ſome other hindered: according to the law of Anaſtaſius, Cod.lib.1.tit.8. leg.9. who decreed that the poſſeſſions of heretikes ſhould be confiſcate to the Prince, yet ſo, that the oratories and places of praier be ſtill maintained.

Thirdly, if any were rather led with the expectation of their priuate gaine, then the hatred of ſuperſtition in the diſſolution and ſpoyle of Abbeyes, we defend them not, neither hold them excuſed: as Auguſtine ſaith to the Donatiſts, and it is alleaged in the decrees, Cauſ.23.qu.7.c.1. Quiſquis occaſione huius legis, &c. If any man by occaſion of this law, which Kings ſeruing Chriſt haue promulgated to correct your impietie, doth greedily couet your goods, he pleaſeth not vs.

Bellarm.c.27.

Secondly, concerning the ſecond kind of maintenance, which ariſeth by the proper and peculiar inheritance, which Church Miniſters haue: wee alſo yeeld our conſent, that a Miniſter, to whom ſome inheritance is befallen, is not bound to diſclaime therefore the maintenance which he hath of the Church: for the Leuites, beſide the allotment of the tithes, had their proper houſes, which they might ſell, and redeeme againe, Leuit. 25.32. As alſo that place, 1.Timoth.3.2. will beare it, where the Apoſtle would haue a Biſhop to be harborous, and giuen to hoſpitalitie: which he ſhall be much better able to performe, hauing ſome helpe, beſide the Church liuing, of his own inheritance. So then it is not to bee doubted, but that Eccleſiaſticall perſons may, together with ſpirituall liuings, retaine their owne proper inheritance: referring them both to one and the ſelfe ſame end, that is, to countenance their Miniſterie, and to be the better able to performe the externall duties thereof, in relieuing the poore, helping the needie, and ſuch like. Yet notwithſtanding there was an imperiall law, that he which liued of the Church, ſhould renounce his owne patrimonie: of the which law S. Ambroſe maketh mention, writing againſt Symmachus: Nobis etiam priuatæ ſucceſſionis emolumenta recentibus legibus denegantur: We alſo by a late law are forbidden to reape any aduantage by priuate inheritance. And the ſame is ratified in the decrees, cauſ.1.q.3. c.6. Clericos illos, &c. Such of the Clergie ſhould bee maintained by the Church ſtipends, as haue no goods nor patrimonie from their parents. As then this law, that, whereas a man hath ſufficient maintenance beſide of the Church, his patrimonie ſhould paſſe to the next heire, is not of it ſelfe vniuſt, nor vnreaſonable, where the ſtate of the Common-wealth doth require it: ſo where there is no ſuch poſitiue law, it is both lawfull and conuenient, that Miniſters together with their eccleſiaſticall calling, ſhould enioy their patrimonies, for the gracing and dignifying of their Miniſterie.

Thirdly, as touching the proper maintenance, and reuenue of the Church, which is by tithes: diuers points are agreed of and accorded betweene vs. Firſt, that tithes are due onely to the Church, and cannot be alienated to any other vſe, nor be turned to the maintenance of lay-men: for there muſt be, where tithes are paied, a matter of giuing and receiuing, Philipp.4.15. Wee giue ſpirituall, and receiue temporall: which becauſe lay-men doe not performe, they haue nothing to doe with the tithe: for not keeping the condition, they cannot claime the couenant.

Damaſus, decret.3. thus writeth of this matter: Qua fronte, qua conſcientia oblationes vultis accipere qui vix valetis pro vobis, nedum pro alijs deo preces offerre? With what face or conſcience can you receiue tithes and oblations (ſpeaking of lay-men) ſeeing ye are neither able to pray for your ſelues, nor others?

Lateranenſ. ſub Alexand.3.part.26.cap.8. Qui decimas laico in ſeculo manenti conceſſerit, eſt deponendus: He that granteth tithes to a ſecular lay-man, ſhould be depoſed. And many ſuch decrees they haue beſide againſt the appropriating of tithes to lay-men, as decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.30.c.15. Decimæ laicis, &c. Tithes can in no caſe be granted to lay-men for their inheritance. Cauſ.16.qu.1. c.68. Vſus decimarum, &c. The vſe of tithes muſt in no wiſe redound to ſecular men. It may therefore iuſtly be marueiled at, how contrary to their owne Canons, they made ſo many impropriate benefices: for it is certaine, that impropriations (which may more fitly ſo bee called, then appropriations) haue been founded of ancient time in poperie, and by the Popes themſelues maintained; for in King Henrie the 3. his raigne, ſuite was made vp to Rome to Pope Alexander the 4. by the Biſhops of this land, that benefices appropriate to religious houſes might bee reſtored: but they could not be heard, ex Flor. Hiſtor.

Firſt, it may bee ſaid, that by the Canons it was not lawfull for the Ciuill Magiſtrate to make a benefice appropriate, but the Biſhop might.

Contra. Cauſ.16.qu.7.c.1. Periculum animæ, &c. They of the lay ſort incurre the daunger of their ſoule, that receiue tithes either of Biſhops or Kings. Secondly, though it be not permitted to euery Biſhop, yet the Pope hath authoritie to doe it.

Contra. Cauſ.16.qu.7.c.3.Gregor.7.Si quis amodò Epiſcopus,&c. If any Biſhop hereafter do grant the tithes to lay-men, let him bee counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes. This Pope maketh no exception, but includeth all Biſhops, and ſo the Pope to, if he will be a Biſhop.

Thirdly, it will be anſwered, that they made no graunt of tithes to lay-men, but onely to religious houſes and Cathedrall Churches, and ſuch like.

Contra. Firſt, the multitude of Canons made againſt the holding of tithes by the lay ſort, doth euidently ſhew, that it was a continuall practiſe in poperie, to alienate the tithes of the Church to lay-men. Secondly, it is alſo againſt their owne Canons, that benefices ſhould be annexed or appropriate to houſes or Churches of religion. Decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.5.c.30.Innocent.3. decreeth, that no penſions ſhould be granted out of benefices: which is a leſſe matter, then to alienate all the tithes, and reſerue onely a penſion. Againe, ibid.c.33. mention is made of a generall Councel, that would not ſuffer Chappels or Churches to be annexed to Prebends. Likewiſe, Clement.lib.1. tit.5.c.1.Vt prælati beneficia non applicent menſis: That prelates ſhould not employ benefices for the maintenance of their table. Thus if they had obſerued their owne Canons, this pernicious deuiſe of appropriating benefices ſhould not haue found entertainment.

2 The people are bound in conſcience, to giue of their goods vnto their lawfull paſtors, according to the determination of the Church, and the poſitiue lawes of Princes made in that behalfe, the which they are bound to obey: and the tenth being the hire of the labourer and the wages of the Lords workman, Matth.10.10. it ſhall be as great a ſinne to defraude the Miniſter of his portion, as to keepe backe the meate or wages from the hireling and labourer, Iam.5.4.

Cabilonenſ.cap.18. Qui decimas dare neglexerint, excommunicentur: They that neglect to pay their tithes, let them bee excommunicate. It is no ſmall ſinne therefore which deſerueth excommunication.

3 We vtterly denie alſo, and herein conſent with our aduerſaries, that tithes are not pure almes, as ſome haue been of opinion in times paſt, but are a plaine debt of the people to their Miniſters. Firſt, the wages or reward of the labourer is no almes, but his due, and of right belonging to him: but tithes are ſo vnto Miniſters who labour in the Lords harueſt, 1.Timoth.5.16. Ergo, no almes. Secondly, almes doe alway exceede the deſert of the almeſman, they ſhew the beneuolence and free heart of the giuer, not any merite or worthines in the receiuer: but tithes and all other temporall gifts, are farre inferiour to the labours of Miniſters: for what are temporal things to ſpirituall, 1.Cor.9.11? Ergo, no almes. Thirdly, the tenth is the Lords part, and by him it is aſſigned to his faithfull Miniſters, which in Gods ſtead doe teach vs, 2.Cor.5.20. But almes cannot be giuen vnto God. Againe, the tenth is as an inheritance to the Church, and to bee counted as the corne of the barne, or the abundance of the winepreſſe, Numb.18.verſ.26.27. it is vnto them as the fruite of the earth, and increaſe of the ground to the husbandman: Therefore to be counted no almes from men, but the bleſſing of God both vpon the paſtor and the people.

Bellar.cap.25.

Concil.Moguntienſ.ſub Arnulpho.cap.17. Admonemus, vt decima omnino dari non negligatur, timendum eſt enim, vt quiſquis Deo debitum abſtrahit, Deus propter peccatum ei auferat neceſſaria: Wee ſtraightly charge, that no man neglect to pay his tithes: for it is to bee feared, that as a man doth withhold from God his due, ſo God ſhould for his ſinne depriue him of things neceſſarie. Tithes therefore are debitum, a due debt, therefore no almes.

Concil.Aquiſgranenſ.lib.1.cap.34. Attende diligenter lector, quod omnes primitiæ, & quicquid ad ſanctuarium oblatum eſt ſacerdotis ſint, & ad ius eius pertineant: Vnderſtand diligent reader, that all firſt fruites, and whatſoeuer was offered in the ſanctuarie, was the prieſts, and belonged to him of right. Therefore tithes are more then almes.

Likewiſe, decret. Greg. lib.3. tit.30.c.14. Cum decima, &c. Seeing tithes were not inſtituted of men, but of God, quaſi debitum exigi poſſunt, they may be exacted as a due debt.

4 We alſo agree, that it is not meete that the maintenance of Miniſters ſhould be voluntarie, or left to the peoples choiſe: but that it is conuenient, iuſt, equall, requiſite, that both by lawes of Princes, and conſtitutions of the Church, prouiſion ſhould be made, as there is, for the neceſſarie, certaine, and competent maintenance of the Church. Firſt, the tenths in the lawe were eſtabliſhed by a perpetuall ordinance: Ergo, the maintenance of miniſters ought now alſo to be confirmed by poſitiue lawes, as then tithes were: the argument followeth: for if their Miniſterie deſerued ſuch aſſurance of their maintenance, which did but ſerue at the Altar, much more now doth the Miniſterie of the Goſpell deſerue it. And the Apoſtle alſo ſeemeth ſo to reaſon, 1.Cor.9.14.15. that as they which wayted on the Altar were partakers of the Altar: ſo God hath ordained (ſaith he) that they which preach the Goſpell, ſhould liue of the Goſpell. That is, as then the people did not onely giue tithes voluntarily, but were bound by lawe to doe it: euen ſo God hath ordained, that Miniſters ſhould liue of the people: and by this ordinance of God, the people may as well be bound vnto it now, as they were then. Secondly, if Miniſters, bound in conſcience to feed and inſtruct the people, may alſo be enforced & vrged by the conſtitutions of the Church and lawes of Princes to doe that, which in conſcience they are bound: why may not the people likewiſe be conſtrained by publike law, to performe that dutie to their paſtors, which their owne conſcience doth vrge them vnto? Thirdly, experience teacheth, that men are hardly (euen liuing vnder a lawe) brought to pay their rights to the Church, no not in thoſe places where they can take no exception againſt their paſtors: how much more vnwilling would they be (I ſpeake of thoſe which are not yet wonne to a through liking of the Goſpell) if they were left to their owne libertie?

Neither is it ſafe to giue the people this libertie to detaine their tithes from vnſufficient Clerkes, leſt vnder this colour afterwards they might deny them to thoſe which were worthie. Sometimes indeede it was put to the peoples choyce to pay their tithes to whom they would, and to withhold them, if they ſaw cauſe, for as yet there was no poſitiue lawe made, but ſince it hath been otherwiſe determined by ciuill conſtitutions of Princes, as Concil. Ticinenſ. ſub Lodouico Pio: Vt non pro ſuo libitu Clericis laici decimas tribuerent, &c. That the lay ſort ſhould not pay tithes at their pleaſure to the Clergie: Synod. Auguſt. cap. 19. Qui iuſtas non ſoluunt decimas, ter moniti, eis neganda communio: They that being thriſe admoniſhed doe not pay their full tithe, let them be denied the Communion. Anno. 1538. King Henrie the eight of excellent memorie, made this poſitiue lawe concerning tithes: For as much as by a lawe eſtabliſhed euery man is bound to pay his tithes, no man ſhall by colour of dutie omitted by their Curates, detaine his tithes, or be his owne iudge, but ſhall truely pay the ſame, as hath been accuſtomed without any reſtraint, or diminution; and ſuch lacke and default as they finde in their Parſons or Curates, to call for reformation thereof at their Ordinaries, and other ſuperiours hands; Fox. pag. 1006. Such ciuill conſtitutions of Princes not contrarie to the word of God, doe binde ſubiects to obedience.

5 We alſo acknowledge (as Bellarmine ſeemeth to grant, chap. 25.) that to pay preciſely the tenth, is not now commanded by the lawe of God: as though that order could not be changed by any humane lawe, as the Canoniſts hold, but men neceſſarily were bound to pay tithes. But thus farre forth we hold, that it is grounded vpon Gods lawe: firſt, in reſpect of the equitie of the lawe, in paying of tithes, which is this, that the Miniſters ought to liue of the people, and to haue ſufficient and competent maintenance by them: which equitie and ſubſtance of the lawe is morall, and ought alwayes to continue, being grounded vpon the lawe of nature: Thou ſhalt not mouſle the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corne. Secondly, in as much as the lawes of the land and of the Church doth confirme this ancient conſtitution of tithes, (which is left indifferent of it ſelfe) we are bound to obey ſuch lawes, being agreeable to the word of God: And in this ſenſe alſo, tithes may be ſayd to be due by the lawe of God, becauſe Gods word commandeth obedience to our Magiſtrates, in all lawfull ordinances.

1.Cor.9.6.

*Synod. Moguntin. cap.*75. Statuimus, vt decimæ, quæ iure debentur diuino, ſoluantur ſine fraude: We appoynt, that tithes, which are due by the diuine lawe, be payd without any fraude. This Councel doubteth not to affirme, tithes to be due by the word of God.

6 Though the lawe of tenths be not now neceſſarie, as it was a ceremonious dutie: but it is lawfull either to keepe that or any other conſtitution, for the ſufficient maintenance of the Church, whether it be more or leſſe then the tenth part: yet we doubt not to ſay, that this prouiſion for the Church maintenance by paying of tithes, is the moſt ſafe, indifferent and ſureſt way, and no better can come in the place thereof. Firſt, it is the moſt equall way, to haue euery thing in the kinde, according to the Apoſtles rule: Let him that is taught make his teacher partaker of all his goods, Gal. 6.6. But this cannot be ſo conueniently done any other way, as by erecting of a ſet ſtipend, or ſuch like, as by paying the tenth in the kind.

2 Whereas S. Paul requireth, that the Paſtor ſhould be giuen to hoſpitalitie, 1. Tim. 3.2. who ſeeth not, that for the better and more conuenient maintenance of his houſe, it is the fitteſt courſe to receiue the tenth in his owne nature and kinde: being ſo more able to relieue the poore, hauing ſufficient prouiſion and ſtore of his owne?

3 The tenth is as the corne of the barne, and the abundance of the winepreſſe Numb. 18.27. that is, it is more or leſſe, as God giueth encreaſe to the fruites of the earth: which is the moſt equall and indifferent way: for then the Miniſter, as God bleſſeth them, ſhall be partaker of the bleſsing; and if they ſuffer loſſe, he likewiſe ſhall beare the burthen with them.

4 This manner of tithe-paying is farre more ſafe and ſure, then any way can be deuiſed, becauſe of the long cuſtome and continuance, which without great hazard of the Church cannot be broken. Neither is it poſsible by any act of parliament, to make ſtipends ſo certaine, as this conſtitution of tithes is: for the people will hardly yeeld to breake their cuſtome: and when an olde cuſtome is broken, a new is not ſo ſoone receiued: nay, many yeeres muſt runne to make a cuſtome. Againe, whatſoeuer may be obiected againſt tithes, that they breede much trouble, wrangling and contention, may be more iuſtly feared, in the collection, leuying, impoſing, and demanding of ſtipends.

5 Hitherto we haue ſhewed, that it is moſt naturall, that the Miniſters portion ſhould be payed in the kind. Now, concerning the tenth, though it be not neceſſarie, yet that proportion being firſt appoynted by the wiſedome of God, is verely thought to be moſt equall and indifferent betweene the paſtor and the people, as both affoording competent ſuſtenance for the one, when he liueth of the tenth, rather then the fifteenth, or twentith part, which were too skant allowance; nor yet grieuing or oppreſſing the other, whē the owner hath nine parts reſerued to himſelfe. And ſo if it be moſt meete, that things ſhould be anſwered in their kind, no proportion can ſerue better, then that which was firſt deuiſed by the Lord himſelfe: yet we hold neither the one nor the other to be neceſſarie.

It hath been an olde obiection, that the owner ought firſt to deduct his ſeede, and of the reſidue to pay his tithe: thus was it articulated againſt one Thomas Clarke, Fox. pag.830. But this notwithſtanding, people ought to pay the full tenth, and not to be ſo ſtraight handed, ſeeing God hath giuen them nine parts for that one tenth: See to this purpoſe, *Concil. Triburienſ. cap.*13. ex Auguſtino. Da mihi decimam, &c. Giue me thy tithe (ſaith the Lord,) if thou wilt not giue me the tenth, I will take away thy nine parts: if thou giueſt me the tenth, I will multiplie thy nine: If any man aske why tithes are giuen, let him know, that they are giuen, both that God being well pleaſed therewith, ſhould giue vs things neceſſarie, and that the Miniſters being thereby relieued, ſhould more freely attend their ſpirituall ſeruice, and haue to giue to the poore. Thus we ſee why both the tenth is to be giuen, and why in the kinde.

Hitherto for the moſt part we and our aduerſaries are agreed, both concerning tithes, as alſo other maintenance of the Church: but we differ about tithes in two poynts. Firſt, there is a queſtion betweene vs and the Rhemiſts about the neceſſitie of paying of tithes: Secondly, concerning the right whereby the Miniſters of the Goſpell may demaund their duties, which they ſay, is by reaſon of their Prieſthood: of both theſe now briefly in their order.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE PAIment of tithes be neceſſarie.

The Papiſts.

80.Error. THe payment of tithes is a naturall duetie, that men owe to God in all Lawes, and to be giuen to his Prieſts in his behalfe for their honour and liuelihood, *Rhemiſt. annot.*7. *Hebr. ſect.*4.

*Argum.*1. Iacob vowed to pay tithes to God, before the lawe, Geneſ.28. Ergo, it is a perpetuall law. Rhemiſt.

Anſw. One Papiſt ſhall anſwere another at this time. Bellarmine proueth by this example the cleane contrarie, that the payment of tithes is not morall, becauſe it did not bind before the law of Moſes: for Iacob made a voluntarie vowe to pay his tithes, vpon a condition: but if he had been bound abſolutely to pay tithes, they ſhould haue been payed without any ſuch condition: It was therefore a voluntarie and a franke offering in Iacob.

*Argum.*2. Chriſt confirmeth the lawe of tithes, Matth.23.23. though he preferre the workes of mercie and iudgement, yet he ſaith that the other ought not to be left vndone, ſpeaking of the paying of tithes, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſw. We muſt conſider in what time our Sauiour Chriſt ſo ſpake vnto the Phariſies: for as yet neither the lawe nor the ceremonies thereof were fully abrogated: Chriſt was circumciſed, and Mary his mother purified according to the lawe, Luk.2.21.22. Our Sauiour alſo biddeth the Leper to ſhew himſelfe to the prieſt, and offer a gift as Moſes commanded, Matth.8.4. Yet none of all theſe ceremonies doe now ſtand in force, though Chriſt did them at that time, and bad them to be done. The ſame anſwere may ſerue alſo concerning his iniunction to the Phariſies as touching their tithes

The Proteſtants.

THe lawe of paying tithes did borrowe part of the morall, part of the iudiciall, and part of the ceremoniall lawe. The morall part therefore, is the equitie of the lawe, which is perpetuall, that as the Leuites then liued of the tenth, ſo the Miniſters at all times ought ſufficiently to be prouided and cared for. The iudiciall part was in this, that as the Leuites were not much leſſe in common account then the tenth part, being one of the tribes, (though in proportion of number, they made welneere the thirtith part: for the reſt of the tribes were numbred to ſixe hundred, 603550. three thouſand, fiue hundred and fiftie perſons, Numb.1. the Leuites made but two and twentie thouſand, Numb.3.) As I ſay the Leuites made one whole tribe, and were not much leſſe then the tenth part in that account, being in number the thirteenth tribe, for there were twelue beſide: So it was thought reaſonable that the tenth part of their brethrens goods ſhould be allotted vnto them; which being a iudiciall and politike conſtitution of that countrey, doth neither neceſſarily binde Chriſtians now, neither is forbidden, but left in that reſpect indifferent. Thirdly, the ceremonie of the lawe was in this, becauſe the tenth was due to the Prieſts and Leuites for their ſeruice at the Altar, and as belonging to their prieſthood: In which ſenſe tithes are neither due now vnto Miniſters, nor in any ſuch reſpect can be challenged, ſeeing the Prieſthood of the lawe is gone, and all the ceremonies thereof: wherefore although it be a wiſe and politike conſtitution, that the people ſhould pay their tithes, and may conueniently be retained, yet is it not now of neceſſitie impoſed vpon Chriſtians, as though no other prouiſion for the Church could ſerue but that.

*Argum.*1. Bellarmine thus reaſoneth (for herein he is an aduerſarie to our Rhemiſts) (one Ieſuite againſt another) If the lawe of tithes be morall, then the other precept annexed to this law was morall alſo, that the Leuites, becauſe they liued of the offerings and tithes, ſhould haue no patrimonie or inheritance beſide. And by this reaſon euery Miniſter now ought to reſigne ſuch inheritance and poſſeſſions, as are left him by his friends: which is not to be admitted: Ergo, neither the other lawe ſtandeth neceſſarily in force, *Bellarm.cap.*25.

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith in flat words, If the prieſthood bee changed, of neceſſitie there muſt alſo be a change of the lawe, Hebrew.7.12. But the prieſthood of the lawe is altered and changed: Ergo, alſo the lawe of the prieſthood, and ſo conſequently the ceremoniall dutie of tithes.

3 In Auguſtines time, it was no generall lawe nor cuſtome in the Church, that tithes ſhould
In Pſal.146. be payed. Pracidite & deputate aliquid fixum ex annuis fructibus vel quotidianis quaſtibus: Defaulke, ſaith hee, and appoynt ſome certaine portion, either of your yearly fruites, or your ordinarie and daylie gaines. Decimas vis? decimas exime: Will you make choyce to pay tithes? then let that be the portion. And yet this is no great matter: for the Phariſies, whoſe righteouſneſſe you ought to exceede, payed their tithes: Tu vix milleſimam das: Thou ſcarce payeſt the thouſand part: Ta-
De tempor. ſerm.205. men non reprehendo, vel hoc fac, ſic ſitio, vt ad iſtas micas gaudeam: Yet I finde not fault: doe ſo ſtill: for I ſo thirſt after your weldoing, that I refuſe not your very crummes. We ſee then, that then the payment of tithes was voluntarie: Auguſtine refuſeth not the ten hundred, that is milleſimam partem, the thouſand part, which he calleth their crummes.

*Concil. Aurelianenſ.can.*17. Sicut in arbitrio dantis eſt, vt tribuere, quod voluerit, debeat, ita ſi inobedientia vel contumacia, in aliquo accipientis extiterit, in arbitrio ſit praſentis, vtrum debeat reuocare: As it is in the will of the giuer, to giue what pleaſeth him, ſo if he finde him ſtubborne and froward, which receiueth it, it is in his power to reuoke the gift. Wee ſee then that the word of God hath layd no ſuch neceſſitie vpon tithes, for then this Councell would not haue permitted ſuch libertie.

Let vs adde the ſeale, The profeſſed Bohemians thus deliuer their opinion, who endured much for Gods cauſe: *They preach and ſay, that men are bound to giue them tithes, wherein they ſay falſely, for they cannot proue by the new Teſtament, that our Lord did commande it, and his Diſciples warned no man to doe ſo, neither did they themſelues receiue them: exhortat. Bohemor.articul.*15. Therefore tithes are not neceſſarily due by the word of God.

THE SECOND PART, BY WHAT RIGHT tithes are due to the Miniſters of the Goſpell.

The Papiſts.

81. Error. Tithes or their equiualent are due to Chriſt and the prieſthood of the newe Teſtament, *Rhemiſt. annot. Hebr.*7.4. This then is their opinion, that the prieſthood of the Goſpell being more excellent then the prieſtood of the Lawe; and their ſacrifice, which they offer vp in the Maſſe, being of greater worthines, they may with better right challenge tithes, then the Prieſts of the lawe did for their ſeruice at the Altar: So that tithes are due to the Church onely becauſe of the prieſthood, not for any other dutie appertaining to that office, as preaching the word, miniſtring the Sacraments, or any ſuch.

Abraham payed tithes, they ſay, to Melchiſedech, which was the prieſt of the moſt high God, in offering the formes of bread and wine, wherein Melchiſedech did ſacrifice: Ergo, tithes are now due to the prieſts of the Goſpell and new lawe, which are all after the order of Melchiſedech, *Rhemiſt. Heb.*7.*ſect.*4.& 8.

Anſw. Firſt, Milchiſedechs prieſthood conſiſted not in offering bread and wine to God, but brought them forth to refreſh Abraham: neither were they formes of bread and wine onely, as you imagine, but very materiall bread and wine: for if Melchiſedechs prieſthood had conſiſted therein, the Apoſtle would not haue omitted the chiefe thing, wherein Chriſts prieſthood was Rhemiſt.Heb. 7.ſect.8. ſhewed foorth, as he doth, making no mention at all of it, Heb.7. Againe it is great blaſphemie to ſay, that euery popiſh prieſt is after the order of Melchiſedech, nay that the proper act of Chriſts prieſthood prieſthood conſiſteth in the perpetuall offering of his bodie and bloud in the Church: for by this reaſon euery impure prieſt doth more properly offer the bodie of Chriſt in the Maſſe, then it was offered by himſelfe vpon the Croſſe: then the which, what greater blaſphemie can be vttered? And yet they are not aſhamed to ſpeake it: yea the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, (ſay they) was after the order of Aaron; and not after the order of Melchiſedech; and ſo they preferre euery Fulk. Heb. 7. popiſh prieſt offering in the Maſſe, before Ieſus Chriſt ſacrificing himſelfe vpon the Croſſe: con- ſect. 9. 12. trary to the Scripture, which maketh this difference betweene the prieſthood of Aaron and the prieſthood of Melchiſedech; that the prieſts of the law were many, becauſe they were taken away by death: but Chriſts prieſthood is eternall, becauſe he dyeth not, Heb. 7. 23. But if there ſhould be many prieſts after Melchiſedechs order, there ſhould herein be no difference at all. Wherefore ſeeing Melchiſedechs prieſthood onely reſteth in Chriſt, and is not tranſlated to any other; and that there is now no ſacrifice left but ſpirituall, of praiſe and thankſgiuing, Heb. 13. 15. it followeth that by Melchiſedechs right no tithes are now due vnto the Church, neither in any ſuch regard ought to be challenged.

The Proteſtants.

Tithes, or their equiualent are not due to the Church in reſpect of any ſacrificing prieſthood, of which ſort there is none in the new Teſtament ordayned to continue: but for other paſtorall duties, and principally the preaching and diſpenſing of the word, and inſtructing of the people.

Argum. 1. If there were any ſuch prieſthood, and tithes in that right did appertaine to the Church; it is moſt like that our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles would haue challenged them: But there is no one precept in the new teſtament concerning paying of tithes, but onely for a ſufficient maintenance for the Miniſters of the Goſpell, 1. Cor. 9. 14. Gal. 6. 6. Fulk. Heb. 7. ſect. 4.

Argum. 2. Saint Paul euery where, ſo oft as he ſheweth the dutie of Chriſtians in relieuing and maintayning their paſtors, maketh onely mention of ſowing of ſpirituall things, 1. Cor. 9. 11. and of teaching and inſtructing, Gal. 6. 6. Ergo, tithes are due vnto Paſtors and miniſters onely or eſpecially for their feeding and inſtructing, and ſowing ſpirituall ſeede, which is the word of God.

Argum. 3. There is no ſuch ſacrificing prieſthood now in the Church, as wee haue partly ſhewed before, and ſhall of purpoſe more fully declare it afterward: for euery where in the new Teſtament ſpirituall ſacrifices are commanded: and all Chriſtians are made Kings and Prieſts vnto God, Apocal. 1. 6. Other prieſthood we reade of none. Wherefore in that reſpect tithes cannot be due.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith: Si mendicum non contemnis, quanto magis bouem, per quem trituratur hæc In Pſal. 103. area: If thou deſpiſeſt not a begger, how much more oughteſt thou to haue regard of the oxe that part. 2. treadeth out the corne on the floore: That is, the Miniſter that preacheth the Goſpell: for ſo S. Paul expoundeth it, 1. Tim. 5. 17. The Elders, ſaith he, that labour in the word and doctrine are worthie double honour: and then it followeth, verſ. 8. for the Scripture ſaith, Thou ſhalt not mouzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne. Sufficient maintenance therefore to the Miniſters is due for their labour and trauaile in the word.

Concil. Ticinenſ. ſub Lodouico Pio: Vt decimæ Eccleſijs tribuerentur vbi baptiſmum, prædicationem, & alia Chriſti ſacramenta percipiunt: That tithes ſhould be payed to theſe Churches, where men receiue baptiſme, preaching of the word, and other Sacraments. Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Alexand. 3. part. 48. cap. 1. Illi eccleſiæ decimæ ab his perſoluendæ, qui ab ea eccleſiaſtica percipiunt ſacramenta: To that Church men muſt pay their tithes, where they receiue the ſacraments of the Church. So likewiſe their Canon law giueth two reaſons for the payment of tithes, one in reſpect of God himſelfe; In ſignum vniuerſalis dominij: To ſignifie the vniuerſall dominion and ſoueraigntie, which God hath, decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 30. c. 33. Innocent. Another reaſon is in regard of the Miniſters themſelues, as eod. libro. tit. 28. c. 1. Leo 3. tithes and other rights are due vnto that Church, In qua cœleſti pabulo refici conſueuit; Where a man hath vſed to bee refreſhed with the heauenly foode. Tithes therefore are due not in reſpect of any ſacrifice, but for the Sacraments and the word preached.

W. Thorpe holy confeſſor: Tithes were the hire and wages limited to the Prieſts and Leuites in the law, for bearing about the tabernacle, for ſlaying of beaſts, and for burning of ſacrifice, &c. But now, as Saint Paul ſaith, ſeeing the prieſthood is changed, there muſt alſo be a change of the law, &c. pag. 537. The argument is framed thus: By what right tithes were payed vnder the lawe, they are nor payable now, becauſe the lawe is changed; but then they were due for ſacrificing: Ergo, they are not ſo due now.

THE SIXTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE SVPERSTITIOVS ORDERS, AND SECTS OF MONKS AND FRIERS.

MOnkes in Latine, called Monachi, deriued of the Greeke word, were ſuch as liued ſolitarilie, and thereupon had they their name: And they were at the beginning of three ſorts: ſome were called Eremites, that liued in woods and deſerts by themſelues: there were other which were mued vp and incloſed in Cels and walles, which had not ſo much libertie as Eremites had; but kept alwaies in their cages and cloſets, and ſo in miſerie ſpent their daies: and theſe were called Anchorites, that is, ſeparated, ſet apart from all men and liuing by themſelues. There was a third ſort called Cœnobites, which liued in companies, as it were in Colledges by themſelues, and had all things common: and theſe properly were called Monkes, *Bellarm. lib.2. de monach. cap.*3. This controuerſie hath many queſtions.

1 Concerning the beginning and originall of Monkes, and of their diuers ſects, two parts.

2 Concerning Counſels of perfection, whether they differ from Euangelicall precepts.

3 Concerning vowes in generall, three parts: Firſt, whether it bee lawfull for Chriſtians to make vowes. Secondly, in what things lawfull vowes conſiſt. Thirdly, whether voluntarie vowes are any part of the worſhip of God.

4 Concerning Monaſticall vowes in particular, three parts. Firſt, of the vow of voluntarie pouertie. Secondly, the vow of obedience. Thirdly, the vow of continencie.

5 Concerning Monaſticall perſons. Firſt, whether the yonger ſort ought to bee admitted to profeſſe Monkerie. Secondly, whether children can profeſſe without conſent of their parents. Thirdly, whether maried perſons may with mutuall conſent. Fourthly, whether either of the parties, the mariage not conſummate, may enter into profeſſion.

6 Concerning the rules and diſcipline of Monaſticall life. Firſt, of their ſolitarie and ſeuere kinde of life. Secondly, of their canonicall houres. Thirdly, their habite and apparell. Fourthly, of their maintenance, whether they ought to liue by begging, or labour of their hands. Of theſe in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, OF THE BEGINning and originall of Monkes, and of their diuers ſects.

THis queſtion hath two parts: Firſt, of their originall. Secondly, of the diuerſitie of their ſects.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE ORIGInall of Monkes.

The Papiſts.

82.Error. THey make this profeſſion to bee as ancient as the time of our Sauiour Chriſt, and prooue the beginning thereof both out of the new and old Teſtament.

*Argum.*1. Elias and Elizeus were Eremites, and liued without wiues, neither poſſeſſed any riches: Ergo, this profeſſion of life is moſt ancient, *Bellarm. cap.*5. Rhemiſt. annot. in Mark.9.3.

Anſ. Firſt, the argument followeth not; they had no wiues, nor riches: Ergo, were Eremites: for euen amongſt the Papiſts themſelues many were kept from wiues, (as their prieſts) and yet were neither Monkes nor Eremites. Secondly, though we reade not that Elizeus was married, yet the ſonnes of the Prophets were, that liued as it were in the ſame Colledge with him, 2.King.41. which Bellarmine maketh a Colledge of Monkes and Eremites: and ſaith very vntruly, that they all liued without wiues, *cap.*5. Thirdly, though Elias and Elizeus were ſometime in the wilderneſſe, yet they alwaies remained not, neither liued there.

Argum.2. Iohn Baptiſt a perfect patterne of Eremiticall life, for liuing in the deſert and wilderneſſe, for his rough apparell, for abſtaining from all delicate meate, Rhemiſt. annot. Matth.3.1.

Anſ. Firſt, Iohn Baptiſts calling was ſingular and extraordinarie, and therefore cannot bee made an author of any ordinarie profeſſion. Secondly, wee denie not but his life was auſtere, and that he made his abode in a ſolitarie place, yet there were houſes and villages not farre off: his apparell alſo was courſe cloath, made of the hard haires of Camels: his foode was of locuſts and wild honie, the vſuall and common meate of that countrey: he was an extraordinarie preacher of repentance, and ſhewed in himſelf an example of auſtere life, as it became the forerunner of Chriſt: but being no miniſter of the Goſpell, but the laſt prophet of the law, he cannot bee a patterne of an ordinarie profeſſion vnder the Goſpell, Fulk. annot. Matth.3. ſect.1.

Argum.3. Nay, Bellarmine fetcheth his Monkiſh order from a more ancient beginning, then from Elias, and Iohn Baptiſt; yea from before the flood: for Enos (ſaith he) ſeemeth to haue brought in ſome ſtricter kinde of life, and peculiar manner of worſhipping God: whereas the text ſaith, that he began to call vpon the name of God: that is, after another manner: for Adam, Seth, Abel, before this time called vpon the name of God, cap.5.

Anſ. Firſt, who would haue thought, that there had bin Monks and Eremites before the flood, if the Ieſuite had not ſaid it, or that this text, which he alleageth, could haue proued it? The argument followeth not: Enos brought in a peculiar worſhip of God, therefore was founder of the Eremiticall life: for he brought in the true worſhip of God: but the other is ſuperſtitious and erronious. Secondly, Tremellius readeth more agreeably to the Hebrue, Tum nomen Dei cœptum eſt inuocando profanari: Then the name of God began to bee prophaned in calling vpon, that is, his worſhip began to bee corrupted: for the Hebrue word ſignifieth, both to inuocate and call vpon God, as alſo to corrupt, pollute, or prophane. Thirdly, if we reade as they do, The name of God began to be called vpon: it only ſheweth a reſtoring and renuing of the true worſhip of God, which was polluted by the poſteritie of Cain, whoſe ſtocke and familie is ſet downe in that chapter, Gen.4.

Argum.4. Bellarmine alſo ſaith, that the inſtitution of Monkes proceeded from the Apoſtles, who appointed all things to be common, as it may appeare, Act.4. and the Apoſtles were the firſt Chriſtian Monks: So that his argument concludeth thus, Al things were common in the Apoſtles time: Ergo, there were Monkes then, lib.2. de monach. c.5.

Anſ. 1. If the Apoſtles were the firſt Monkes, how then is Iohn Baptiſt, princeps monachorum, prince of the Monkes, as Bellarmine hath affirmed a little before? he cannot bee the firſt, and the Apoſtles the firſt to. 2. If the communitie in vſe amongſt the beleeuers in thoſe daies, made them Monkes, then the whole congregation was of Monkes: for as many as beleeued had all things common, Act.2.44. which were reckoned to the number of three thouſand ſoules, verſ.41. So then by this reaſon all Chriſtians muſt bee Monkes. 3. There was a communitie amongſt them, but not like the Monkiſh communitie: for firſt their communitie was voluntarie, not impoſed vpon them; but the other is inforced by vow: ſecondly, their communitie was not, in relinquiſhing their goods, and not to meddle with them themſelues, as men were perſwaded in Monkerie, but an equall diſtribution of them to as many as needed: thirdly, that communitie was in reſpect of that preſent neceſſitie in the time of perſecution; but Monkiſh communitie is not vpon neceſſitie, but vpon ſuperſtitious curioſitie, whereby they thinke to merit heauen. 4. We grant there was ſuch a communitie, as wee ſay, amongſt them, but they cannot ſhew a profeſſion of ſingle life amongſt the beleeuers in thoſe daies, of whom many were married, as Ananias and Sapphira, Act.5. and therefore they could not be Monkes. 5. I oppoſe againſt them the iudgement of their owne Thomas, who affirmeth, that there were no Monkes in S. Pauls time: ex citat. Eſpenc. in 2. Timoth. p.189. c.

The Proteſtants.

WE ſee then that this Monaſticall and ſolitarie kinde of life hath no proofe nor ground out of the Scriptures, either by precept or example: Nay, this kinde of profeſſion was not knowne in the Church, for diuers hundred yeeres after Chriſt; how could then the Apoſtles bee the founders of this order? And though the name of Monks be of ſome antiquitie in the Church, yet they were farre vnlike vnto Popiſh Monkes, that for theſe many yeeres haue peſtered the Church.

1 It is certaine, as Hierome witneſſeth, that Antonius, and his diſciples Amathas and Macarius, were the firſt beginners of Monkiſh profeſſion almoſt three hundred yeere after Chriſt, Fulk. annot. Mark.9.3.

Anno 260. when Sixtus the 2. was Biſhop of Rome, Paulus began the profeſſion of Heremites, as Mantuan writeth:

Iſta ego crediderim per noxia tempora Paulum:
Niligenam ſole ardentem, qui primus eremum

Incoluit, liquiſſe vrbes, &c.
About this time Paul was the firſt, I geſſe,
Who neere to Nilus dwelt in wilderneſſe.

Hierome alſo reporting diuers opinions of the originall of Monkes, as how ſome ſhould fetch their beginning from Elias and Iohn Baptiſt, which conceit he miſliketh, at the laſt alleageth the common opinion, Antonium huius propoſiti fuiſſe caput, that Antonie was the head or beginning of this profeſſion: to the which he ſubſcribeth, in vita Pauli. And he ſaith of Hilarion: Nec quiſquam monachum ante ſanctum Hilarionem in Syria nouerat: There was no Monke knowne in Syria before Hilarion. But the Apoſtles were not vnknowne in thoſe countries.

Fulk. Math. 3. ſect. 3.

2 The beginning of Monkes, was not for the more merite, and to doe penance for their owne ſinnes and the ſinnes of the world; for Antonius the firſt Monke confeſſed, that Chriſt onely ſuffered for the ſinnes of the world: But the firſt occaſion was giuen in the time of perſecution, when as men were not ſuffered to worſhip God aright publikely: and therefore they fled into the wilderneſſe, Rhemiſt. Matth. 3. ſect. 3. As Hierome reporteth of Paulus the Heremite, who being perſecuted of his ſiſters husband vnder Decius and Valerian, fled to the mountaines, & ſic neceſſitatem in voluntatem vertit, and ſo made a vertue of neceſſitie, vita Pauli. But now ſeeing the Chriſtian faith is openly profeſſed, they haue no ſuch cauſes to ſeeke ſolitarie and ſecret places.

3 The popiſh Monkes are altogether vnlike theirs: Firſt, they liued in ſolitarie places, farre from reſort of people: but the popiſh Mock-monkes liue in cities and the frequencie of the people, Fulk. annot. Matth. 3. ſect. 3. Secondly, the Monkes in times paſt laboured with their hands: but the popiſh fat-bellies pampered themſelues in idlenes. Thirdly, they are altogether vnlike in life and doctrine, as we ſhall ſee more at large afterward, Fulk. ibid.

Concil. Colonienſ. part. 10. cap. 1. Vita monaſtica non multo poſt Apoſtolorum tempora cœpit, quanquam multis perſuaſum ſit, aliam tunc fuiſſe, quàm nunc eſt, monachiſmi rationem: The Monkiſh life began not long after the Apoſtles time, although many thinke, that the profeſſion of Monkes was farre otherwiſe in thoſe times, then now.

This Councell maketh Monkerie not to bee ſo ancient as the Apoſtles, and beſides ſaith, that the Monkiſh life now, is farre vnlike the life of the ancient Monkes: as it followeth, cap. 9. Videmus monaſteria mulierum in pleriſque locis, in ſuſpectas de incontinentia domos, ne quid grauius dicam, eſſe commutatas: We ſee the monaſteries of women, to be turned into wanton houſes ſuſpected of incontinencie, to ſay no more. But ſuch were not the ancient Colledges and aſſemblies of Monkes.

Their owne Extrauagant alſo ſaith, that the rule of S. Francis is not grounded vpon the example of Chriſt or his Apoſtles: Quæ vtique nec Chriſtus, nec Apoſtoli, &c. Which neither Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles did either teach by word, or confirme by example, Ioann. 22. Extrau. tit. 14. c. 5.

I will adioyne the teſtimonie of Sir Iohn Borthwicke Knight, who endured much trouble for the faith of Chriſt: What ſhall I call the cloyſters of Monkes in theſe our daies otherwiſe then brothelhouſes, ſwine-ſtyes, and dennes of diſcord, &c? Wherefore I conclude, that this their kinde of life is wicked and naught, which is not grounded nor eſtabliſhed of any certaine calling of God, Fox pag. 1265. In this holy mans iudgement therefore, the profeſſion of Monkerie tooke not beginning neither from Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the diuers ſects of Monkes and Friers.

The Papiſts.

83. Error.

THey ſay that imitation of diuers holy men, as of S. Francis, S. Benet, S. Dominicke, which hath brought in diuers ſects and orders of Religious men, doe tend all to the imitation of Chriſt, Rhemiſt. annot. Philip. cap. 3. ſect. 2. 1. Theſſ. 1. 2.

This their aſſertion they would ground vpon the Apoſtles words, Philip. 3. 17. Be ye followers of me brethren, Rhemiſt.

Anſ. Firſt, Saint Paul would haue them no otherwiſe to follow him, then he did Chriſt, 1. Corinth. 11. 1. Neither gaue any other rules to his followers, then he had learned of Chriſt, as the patrones of the Monkiſh ſects haue done. Secondly, neither did S. Paul erect a new order of Paulians, as Franciſcus did of Franciſcanes, Dominick of Dominicanes. Thirdly, S. Paul was a perſwader of vnitie, not a maker of diuiſions among Chriſtians; as the Monkes and Friers haue done, one ſort perſecuting another for their opinions euen to death. Fulk. annot. 1. Theſſ. 1. ſect. 2. Fox p. 798. Fourthly, if the rule of S. Francis, the beſt approued ſect amongſt you, bee no other then this, as witneſſeth one of your Popes; Domini noſtri ſanctum Euangelium, &c. to obſerue the holie Goſpell of our Lord, ſext. decr. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 3. Nicol. 4. then is the rule of S. Francis ſuperfluous, ſeeing euery man is bound, that is called a Chriſtian, to follow the Goſpell of Chriſt.

The Proteſtants.

CONtrariwiſe wee affirme, that it is a great derogation to Chriſt when the people ſhall ſay, I follow the religion of Auguſtine, the religion of Francis, another ſaith, I hold of Dominicke, another, I hold of Ieſus, as the Ieſuites doe, Fulk. Philip. 3. verſ. 17.

Argum. 1. Saint Paul reprooueth the Corinthians, becauſe they made the like ſects amongſt themſelues: one ſaid, I am Pauls, another, I am Apolloes; and concludeth, that therefore they were carnall, 1. Cor. 3. 4. And further, he ſaith, they ſhould not reioyce in men, for al things were theirs, whether Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, verſ. 21. 22. That is, they were not maſters of their faith, to inſtitute new religions and ſects, but the miniſters and ſeruants of the Lords inheritance. If therefore it was not lawfull to ſay, I hold of Paul, I hold of Cephas: neither is it lawfull to ſay, I hold of Dominicke, I hold of Francis, I hold of Ieſus: for ſeeing they make their ſects, and Ieſus maketh his, it is euident that they are not all referred to the imitation of Ieſus: for then they might all as well be called Ieſuites. So then in the Apoſtles time there was not any ſuch following of ſects, or calling of men by the names of their patrones and authors, as it is now in Poperie; but all that beleeued in Chriſt, were called of his name Chriſtians, Act. 11. 26.

Argum. 2. The number of Monkes and Friers was almoſt infinite, ſects vpon ſects, and new orders dayly were deuiſed, as Auguſtinians, Bernardines, Carmelites, Carthuſians, Dominicans, Franciſcans, and a great ſort more, to the number of an hundred ſects, as they are reckoned by Maſter Fox pag. 260. And Tilmane Heſhuſ. ſetteth downe 65. ſeuerall ſects or rather ſchiſmes of Monkes, loc. 25. error. 10. This yrkeſome rabble therefore of Monkes is fitly ſhadowed forth by the ſwarme of Locuſts, which came vp out of the bottomleſſe pit, Apoc. 9. 4. And verily as the Locuſts and Graſhoppers conſume and deuoure the fruites of the earth, ſo the begging Friers, and idle Monks deuoured the goods of the people, and corrupted the doctrine of the Church.

3 Laſtly, this diuiſion of Monkerie into ſects and ſundrie orders, is of no great antiquitie: they were not knowne in Auguſtines time, who knew no other name of them, then Monkes: for he wrote a booke of purpoſe, De opere Monachorum; Of the labour of Monkes: But other names of Carmelites, Carthuſians, Franciſcans, or ſuch like, were not heard of in the Church in thoſe dayes; but came in long after in the time of Innocentius the 3. about anno 1212. many yeeres after Auguſtine, Fox. pag. 259.

The time by peruſing the ancient monuments and records, may eaſily be aſſigned, when moſt of theſe Frierly and Monkiſh ſects began. Anno 1100. Vrbanus the 2. confirmed the ſects of the Carthuſians and Ciſterſians: Anno 1118. vnder Paſchal the 2. began the ſect of the Templaries: Anno. 1125. Calixtus the 2. confirmed the order of the Pramonſtratenſes: Anno 1150. Eugenius the 3. confirmed the order of the Gilbertines in England. Anno 1223. Honorius the 3. receiued vnder his protection the Auguſtinians, Carmelites, Franciſcans, Dominicans. Anno 1295. vnder Celeſtinus the 5. the order of the Celeſtines began. Iohn the 23. confirmed the ſect of the Grandimontenſes. Anno 1371. Vrban the 5. confirmed S. Bridgets order. Gregorie the 12. did approue the ſect of the Hieronymites and Montolibetenſes, anno 1410. Iohn the 24. ratified the order of the Friſonarians, anno 1418. Anno 1555. Paulus the 3. or thereabout, confirmed the ſect of the Ieſuites: ex Mario, Cælio 2. Vergerio, Balæo & alijs.

This inuention of Sects and new Profeſſions, hath bin by the Emperiall lawes prohibited: as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 12. leg. 11. Honor. Theodoſ. Cælicolarum nomen inauditum, &c. The ſtrange and vnknowne name of Cælicolites, that is, Inhabitants of heauen, hath found out a new ſuperſtition: and ſo the law proceedeth, Niſi ad fidem Chriſtianam conuerſi fuerint, &c. Vnleſſe they be conuerted to the Chriſtian faith, ſhall be puniſhed as heretikes: this law approueth no name or faith to be vſed, but of Chriſtians; the name of Cælicolites was a goodly title, as the name of Ieſuites is; but as that name was made a cloake for ſuperſtition and hypocriſie, ſo is this: and, howſoeuer they are called, if they ſwarue from the name and faith of Chriſtians, by this law they are accounted heretikes.

This innumerable rabble of Monks hath miſliked alſo their owne patrons the Popes of Rome: Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 3. Firmiter prohibemus, &c. We do ſtreightly forbid, that no man from henceforth inuent a new Religion, leaſt the too great diuerſitie of religious perſons do bring great offence into the Church of God; but he that will enter into religion, let him chooſe ſome one of them which is alreadie approued: and he that is diſpoſed to erect an houſe of religion, let him follow ſome rule alreadie in vſe. But yet for all this decree, many ſects of religions were afterward inuented. Likewiſe Gregorie 10. doth not onely forbid new religions to be inuented, but condemneth, Ordines mendicantes, all the orders of begging Friers, begun ſince that generall Councell of Laterane, ſext. decret. lib. 3. tit. 17. c. 1. Ioann. 22. doth alſo reuerſe and diſſolue the order of the Fratricelles, who were after the order of Francis, extrau. Ioan. tit. 7. c. 1. Clemens 5. deſtroyed the ſect of the Beguines; which is reuiued notwithſtanding by Iohn 22. extrau. commun. lib. 3. tit. 9. c. 1. Thus we ſee what good opinion the Popes themſelues haue of their owne Sects.

Adde the ſeale of holy Martyrs, Iohn Wicliffe holy Confeſſor; Benedict, Francis, Dominicke, with all ſuch as haue been Patrones of priuate religion, except they haue repented, with ſuch as haue entred into the ſame, are in a damnable ſtate. Fox.p.450.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr, to follow the rules of Auguſtine, Benedict, Francis, and ſuch other, is to leaue the Faith. Fox.p.1251.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING the Counſels of perfection.

The Papiſts.

34.Error. THis they ſay is the very foundation of the Monaſticall life, which is the moſt perfect eſtate and calling of Chriſtians: for they performe more then Chriſt hath commanded, not onely his precepts, but euen his Counſels alſo; which, they ſay, do much differ: for the precepts are inioyned to all Chriſtians, and to leaue a precept vndone, is ſinne: but the Euangelicall Counſels are giuen onely to thoſe that are perfect, which they are not bound to keepe, neither do they ſinne in leauing them vndone? yet if they obſerue them, they do merite more and ſhall haue a greater reward: Such Counſels of perfection are theſe; To giue all we haue to the poore; to abſtaine from eating of fleſh; to vow chaſtitie and ſuch like, Bellarm.cap.7. Rhemiſt. annot. Matth.19.ſect.9.

Argum.*1. Matth.19.verſ.21. Chriſt ſaith, Goe and ſell all thou haſt, if thou wilt be perfect. This was a Counſell of perfection, not a precept giuen to all Chriſtians.

Anſw. Firſt, this was both a Counſell and precept, though not to all, yet to this one man, to diſcouer his hypocriſie and vayne confidence which he had in himſelfe, as though he had kept the law, when he was farre from it, Fulke Matth.19.9.Mark.10.3. Secondly, it is a generall precept vnto all, to loue the Lord with all the heart, and to be content, when the Lord requireth, for Chriſts ſake, to leaue all we haue, Caluin.Inſtitut.4.cap.13.ſect.13.

Bellarmine replieth; Firſt, it is not like, that this yong man was an hypocrite, or a vaine boaſter of himſelfe, becauſe it is ſaid Chriſt loued him; but he loueth no hypocrites or proud men.

Anſw. Firſt, it was prophecied of our Sauiour, as it is alledged, Matth.12.20. that hee ſhould not quench the ſmoaking flaxe; that is, that Chriſt ſhould accept and approoue the leaſt good things, that he found in men, increaſing, and not extinguiſhing them: as it is alſo ſaid, Zach.4.10. Who hath deſpiſed the day of ſmall thinges? ſo Chriſt is ſaid to haue loued this young man, becauſe he ſaw ſome beginning and likelyhood of goodneſſe in him, though in the reſt he approued him not. Secondly, the like example we haue, Mark.12.34. where our Sauiour ſaith to a certaine expounder of the Law, that had anſwered him diſcreetly, Thou art not farre from the Kingdome of heauen; which was a great commendation of him: and yet the other Euangeliſt Saint Matthew reporting the ſame ſtorie, cap.22.35. ſaith he came to tempt Chriſt: he was not then void of ſome diſſimulation, yet Chriſt commendeth him.

Secondly, Bellarmine ſaith, that a man may loue God with all his heart, and yet is not bound to do all, which God counſelleth; but, which he commandeth, Bellarm.lib.2.de Monach.c.9.in argum.5.

Contra. This is a moſt groſſe anſwere, and contrary to the Scripture: for he that loueth God with all his heart, is bound to keepe the Counſels of God, and it is damnation to tranſgreſſe them: as Prou.1.25.26. You haue deſpiſed all my counſell, and therefore I will laugh at your deſtruction: and Daniell ſaith to Nabuchadnezzar, 4.24. Let my counſell be acceptable vnto thee, breake off thy ſinnes by righteouſneſſe, &c. Will they ſay now, that the King was not bound [illegible] obey this counſell?

Argum.*2. Act.2.44. They had all things common. This is not a rule or precept to all Chriſtian men to liue in common, but a life of perfection and counſell followed of the religious, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. This liuing in common among the brethren in the Apoſtles time, is the ſame that ought alwayes to be among all Chriſtians, that no man accouut that to be his owne, which the neceſſitie of his brother requireth to be beſtowed vpon him: this the rule of [illegible]aritie requireth, which is one of the great commandements. Fulke in hunc locum.

Argum.*3. 1.Corinth.7.25. Concerning Virgins I haue no commandement of the Lord, but I giue mine aduice. A precept therefore is one thing, a Counſell of perfection another, Bellarm. cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, Paul hath no generall commandement from God to impoſe the yoke of continencie vpon any, becauſe God had left mariage free, and therefore no man is to be barred and kept from it: But the Apoſtles particular aduice and ſentence (being moued by the ſpirit of God, verſ.40.) is not onely a Counſell, but a commandement, that both they which haue the gift of continencie, ſhould glorifie God by that gift, verſe 7. and they which haue it not, ſhould marrie rather then burne, and ſo diſhonour God, verſ.9. Therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, Let euery man wherein he is called therein abide with God, verſe 24. If a man be called to liue ſingle, he ought to obey his calling, hauing receiued the gift: if a man be called to the maried eſtate, he muſt not preſume beyond his ſtrength, to liue vnmarried. Wherefore it is both a Counſell and a precept, to thoſe that haue receiued the gift of ſingle life: for otherwiſe they diſobey Gods calling, which is ſinne. And our Sauiour ſaith, he that is able to receiue it, let him receiue it, Matth.19.12. He that hath the gift, is commanded to vſe it, for in leeſing it he ſinneth. And laſtly, euery man by commandement is bound to the vttermoſt of his power to ſet forth Gods glorie: But God is moſt glorified by the ſingle life of thoſe, which are able to conteine, and therefore they ought in dutie ſo to doe.

Againe, in that the Apoſtle ſaith he had no commaundement of the Lord, his meaning is, that he was not directed in this caſe of virginitie by any generall precept out of Scripture, otherwiſe then by the counſell of the ſpirit ſpeaking in him: but that the aduice of the Apoſtle is of the ſame nature and authoritie with a precept, it may appeare, for that he ſpeaketh not of himſelfe, but by the ſpirit of God, verſ.40. and he had receiued mercie to be faithfull, verſ.25. Wherefore if it bee faithfulnes in the Apoſtle to giue this aduice, it was faithfulnes in them to follow it. Vnleſſe any man will entertaine Origenes light conceit, that thinketh S.Paul to haue ſpoken of himſelfe, without warrant from God: as he vntruly ſaith of the Prophets, that they ſpake ſome things of themſelues, as namely, when that came not to paſſe which they prophecied: as that of Ionas 3. that within three daies Niniue ſhould be deſtroyed: and that of Gad, that ſpake of three daies peſtilence to Dauid, 2.Sam.24. whereas it ceaſed the ſame day: So he ſaith S.Paul ſpeaketh of himſelfe in this place. But he is both there and here deceiued: for the Prophets ſpake as God bid them, who notwithſtanding vpon their repentance ſeemed to chaunge the decree, as when he ſent the Prophet to tell Hezekiah he ſhould die: but this by the way of Origens error. Hom.16.in 3. cap.Ionæ.

Thirdly, as Saint Paul ſaith here concerning Virgins he had no commaundement, but gaue aduice; ſo he ſaith of mariage, verſ.6. I ſpeake this by conceſſion, or as giuing aduice, not by commaundement: that is, that to auoide fornication a man might marrie: but this is a commaundement, as verſ.9. to marrie rather then burne; and yet the Apoſtle calleth it an indulgence, or conceſſion.

Fourthly, verſ.12. the Apoſtle ſaith in the ſame ſenſe, to the remnant I ſpeake, and not the Lord, that is, I giue counſell, hauing no preſcript commaundement in the word; that is, that a faithfull man ſhould not leaue his vnbeleeuing wife, if ſhe be content to dwell with him. But this is a commaundement, and not to be tranſgreſſed; as it may thus appeare: firſt, by the manner of ſpeech, being imperatiue, let him not forſake her, verſ.12. Secondly, verſ.15. if ſhe will depart, the man is not in ſubiection: therefore if ſhe will not depart, but abide, the man is in ſubiection, that is, bound to keepe her. Thirdly, verſ.16. The beleeuing man may bee an inſtrument to ſaue his vnbeleeuing wife: but wee are bound to doe all that may further anothers ſaluation: Ergo, euen this counſell alſo of the Apoſtle is a commaundement. And thus hath Bellarmine gained nothing by this place.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truely affirme and according to the Scriptures, that it is impoſſible for any man to performe the lawe and commaundements of God, much leſſe to fulfill more then is commaunded: And therefore it is falſe, that beſide the precepts of Chriſt there are Counſels of perfection, which are at a mans choyce to doe or not to do: for whatſoeuer is to the glorie of God, we are bound to doe. We acknowledge then no ſuch euangelicall Counſels, as they imagine, Caluin.

*Argum.*1. Matth.5.48. Our Sauiour ſaith: Yee ſhall be perfect, as your heauenly father is perfect. Therefore all Counſels tending to perfection, are commaundements. If there be any thing whereby we may more neerely attaine vnto perfection, that we are bound and commanded to doe: As if a man can better obtaine this perfection of godlineſſe, by liuing ſingle, if he haue the gift, he ought to doe it: for hauing not the gift, and yet preſuming, he burneth in luſt, and ſo is ſet further backe in the courſe of godlines, Caluin. argument.

Bellarmine diſtinguiſheth, there are (ſaith he) two kindes of perfection; a leſſe which conſiſteth in the full keeping of the law, which is neceſſarie to ſaluation: ſuch a perfection is commanded, Matth.5. There is a greater perfection, not ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation, but to obtaine a more excellent degree of glorie, in obſeruing the counſels: and this our Sauiour meaneth, when he biddeth the young man to ſell all he had, to be perfect, Mark.10.21. *Bellar. cap.9. argum.*5.

Contra. Firſt, there can bee no greater perfection, then in the abſolute fulfilling of the law: for the beſt perfection in this life is in loue, 1.Iohn.4.12.16,17. But loue is the fulfilling of the law, Rom.13.10. Wherefore, that which he calleth the leſſe perfection is the beſt, ſeeing it fulfilleth the law. Secondly, the perfection ſpoken of, Matth.5.48. is the beſt perfection, to be perfect as God is perfect: for what greater perfection can there be, then to bee perfect according to the example of God? Thirdly, that thing, to the which Chriſt exhorteth the young man, to ſell all he had to giue to the poore, is not ſo great point of perfection, as this, whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, that wee ſhould loue our enemies, and ſo be perfect as God is perfect: for a man may giue all his goods to the poore, and yet bee without loue, 1. Cor. 13. 3. but he cannot loue his enemies, vnleſſe he haue loue: wherefore this point of perfection ſeemeth to bee greater then the other, and ſo Bellarmine hath loſt a good diſtinction. Wherefore, this remaineth a ſtrong place, notwithſtanding all his cauils, that exhortation to perfection containeth not onely a counſel, but a precept alſo and commaundement.

Argum. 2. We are bound to loue God with al our heart, with al our ſoule, with al our ſtrength: Therefore whatſoeuer thing there is, whereby we may expreſſe the loue of God, we are bound by commaundement to doe it; it is not left to our owne will: for not to loue God more then thou doeſt, if it be in thy power, it is a grieuous ſinne, Martyris argument.

Bellarmine anſwereth thus: Qui deum diligit ſuper omnia, etiamſi eum non tam ardenter amet, quàm forte poſſet, vel non faciat pro eo omnia, quæ poſſet; ille habet Deum pro ſummo bono, cap. 13. He that loueth God aboue all things, although he loue him not ſo entirely, as perhaps he may, neither doth all things for his ſake that lie in his power: yet for all this, he eſteemeth of God as his chiefe good. I pray you ſee what contradictorie ſpeeches theſe be: The Ieſuite ſaith, a man may loue God perfectly and aboue all, and yet not loue him ſo much as he is able, that is, imperfectly: ſo a man, by his Monkiſh diuinitie, may loue God aboue all, and yet not loue him aboue all: for if he did, he would refuſe to doe nothing for Gods loue that is in his power.

Argum. 3. Luk. 17. 10. When you haue done all thoſe things which are commanded you, ſay, We are vnprofitable ſeruants, and did nothing but that which was our dutie to doe: Ergo, we are bound to doe all things that are to be done, and we cannot doe that which we ought, much leſſe more then we ought to doe, Martyris argument.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, Chriſt ſaith, when you haue done all which I commanded you, not which I counſelled you.

Anſw. As though the argument followeth not ſtrongly: you cannot doe the leſſe, that is, keepe my commandements, therfore you cannot do the more, that is, ſpeaking now (as the Ieſuite doth) the Counſels of perfection, which are more then the precepts. It is a precept of neceſſitie to diſpenſe our goods to the vſe of the poore; it is a counſell of perfection, as they ſay, to giue all away to the poore: But if a man cannot performe the firſt, that is, keeping his goods to vſe them aright, much leſſe is he able with a reſolute minde to giue them all away.

Secondly, he anſwereth: Chriſt biddeth them to ſay ſo, as ſhewing their humilitie, not that they were indeede vnprofitable ſeruants. A poore ſhift, as though Chriſt enuied the good of his ſeruants, or would obſcure their wel-doing, and doth not rather aduance it to the vttermoſt, and make the moſt of the ſeruiceable workes of his children, as wee ſee, Matth. 25. 34. And Chriſt being a faithfull Prophet, would not ſurely deceiue his Diſciples, and tell them one thing, and himſelfe know and thinke another. Some anſwered in Bernards time to this place, as the Ieſuite now doth: Hoc (inquies) propter humilitatem Chriſtus monuit dicendum eſſe: Chriſt onely would haue vs thus to ſpeake, namely, that wee are vnprofitable ſeruants, to ſhew our humilitie. He anſwereth, Planè propter humilitatem, ſed nunquid contra veritatem: You ſay true, for humilitie, but not againſt the veritie, de triplici cuſtod. ſerm. So likewiſe was it decreed, Concil. Mileuitan. can. 6. Placuit, quod ait S. Iohannes, ſi dixerimus, quod peccatum non habemus, nos ipſos ſeducimus, &c. quiſquis ſic accipiendum putat, vt dicat propter humanitatem non oportere dici nos non habere peccatum, non quia veritas eſt, anathema ſit: Whereas S. Iohn ſaith, If we ſay we haue no ſinne, wee deceiue our ſelues, &c. Whoſoeuer thinketh it is ſo to be vnderſtood, that for humanitie ſake it becommeth vs not to ſay that we haue no ſinne, not becauſe the truth is ſo indeede, let him be accurſed. But theſe Frierlike miſts and ſmoake of Locuſts, are not able to dimme the cleere light of this Scripture, which ſheweth, that when we haue done all we can doe, we come farre ſhort of our dutie.

Argum. 4. Bellarmine, the better to perſwade that there are certaine Euangelicall counſels beſide precepts, ſetteth downe certaine differences betweene them, cap. 7. which differences if they ſhall appeare to be none, then precepts and counſels ſhall be all one.

1 His firſt difference is, in reſpect of the matter, precepts (ſaith he) are more eaſily kept; but counſels more hardly and with greater difficultie.

Contra. It is an harder matter to loue our enemies, then for a man to giue all his goods to the poore: and therefore the loue of Chriſt is ſet forth to be the moſt excellent kinde of loue, becauſe he died for his enemies, Rom. 5. 8. But the firſt is a precept of perfection, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, Matth. 5. 48. the other a counſell of perfection, Matth. 19. 21. confeſſed alſo by Bellarmine: Ergo, a precept is more difficult then a counſell.

2 The ſecond difference in reſpect of the ſubiect: a precept is general, preſcribed to all; a counſell is particular, belonging onely to ſome, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. They confeſſe that ſingle life appertaineth to counſell, as the Apoſtle ſaith, he giueth counſell concerning virgins, 1.Cor.7.25. but this is generall, verſ.7. I would that all men were as I am, that is ſingle. Againe, to marrie to auoide fornication is an indulgence or counſell, 1.Cor.7.6. yet generall, verſ.2. To auoide fornication, let euery man haue his wife: ſo theſe counſels are generall, that euery man hauing the gift of virginitie ſhould vſe the ſame; and euery one not hauing it, ſhould vſe the remedie.

3 A third difference, a counſell not obſerued deſerueth no puniſhment, as a precept doth, being obſerued it hath a greater reward.

Contra. Firſt, to marrie rather then burne, is an Apoſtolicall indulgence or counſell, 1.Cor.7.6. but to burne rather in luſt then to to marrie, is ſinne, and deſerueth puniſhment: Ergo. Secondly, to feede the poore with all a mans goods is a counſell, Matth.19.21. but this counſell may bee obſerued, and yet no reward follow, 1.Cor.13.3. If a man giue all to the poore, and haue no loue, it profiteth nothing. Wherefore ſeeing the Ieſuite can make no ſound difference betweene precepts and counſels, we muſt needes conclude that they are all one.

4 Auguſtine, though ſometime he ſeeme to make ſome difference betweene a precept and a counſell: Præceptum eſt, ſaith he, cui non obedire, peccatum eſt: Conſilium, quo ſi vti nolueris, minus boni adipiſceris, non mali aliquid perpetrabis: de Virginit. cap. 15. A precept is that, which not to obey, is ſin: A counſel is that, which if thou wilt not follow, thou doeſt not commit any euill, yet thou haſt the leſſe good. Though he ſeeme in words, I ſay, to make difference, yet his meaning is this, That a precept is of things neceſſarie, as to follow vertue, to eſchue vice: A counſell is of things indifferent, as to vſe or not to vſe, as to eate or not to eate fleſh. But yet the occaſion may ſo ſerue, that euen this counſell is neceſſarie: for we ought not to eate fleſh to offend our brother: Multa facienda ſunt non iubente lege, ſed libera charitate: Many things are to be done (ſaith he) not by force of any law, but by the rule of charitie: that is, we haue no particular law, but the general rule of charitie. A counſell then is ſeene in things indifferent, which are alwaies lawfull, but not alway expedient: and it is nothing elſe but a particular application of the generall rule of charitie: Charitie wiſheth that nothing ſhould be done to offend our brethren, 1.Cor.10.32. The Scripture likewiſe giueth libertie to eate fleſh, there is no generall precept or prohibition: yet the Apoſtle giueth counſell, that is, according to the rule of charitie ſaith, that although all things are cleane, Malum tamen eſt homini, qui per offenſionem manducat: yet it is euill to the man that eateth with offence, Rom.14.20. Here we ſee the tranſgreſſion of an Apoſtolicall counſell is ſinne. And though we be not bound by any particular precept, at this time or that to abſtaine from fleſh, yet, quæ facienda ſunt libera charitate, the things that are to be done in the dutie of loue, doe as well binde vs, as if we had a direct commaundement: for loue is the fulfilling of the commaundements, yea it is one of the great commaundements to loue one another. Yet the counſell or libertie concerning indifferent things, remaineth in it owne nature free ſtill: as the Apoſtle counſelleth to eate, not asking any queſtion: in ſuch a caſe it is neither euill not to eate, nor good to eate; but if any man bee preſent that may take offence by our eating, then is it euill to eate. So Auguſtine concludeth: Multa mihi videntur licere & non expedire, quæ per iuſtitiam, quæ coram Deo eſt, permittuntur, ſed propter offenſionem hominum vitanda ſunt: Many things are lawfull, but not expedient, lawfull before God, but not expedient becauſe of the offence of our brethren, de Adulter. coniug. lib. 1. cap. 14.17. Thus we ſee Auguſtine doth nothing fauour the popiſh diſtinction of precepts and counſels: for by his ſentence, euen counſels, that is, the libertie and freedome of things indifferent, are reſtrained, and made neceſſarie in the externall vſe, by the rule of charitie.

That precepts, and counſels or monitions are confounded, and both taken for one, their owne Canons doe teſtifie, decret. p. 2. cauſ. 28. qu. 1. c. 9. Quæ iubet Dominus, non eſt indignum, ſi eadem monet Apoſtolus: That which the Lord commaundeth, it is not vnfit, if the Apoſtle doe moniſh the ſame. Sext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 5. Nonnulla conſilia ſub verbo præcepti: Many counſels are contained vnder the word precept. Clementin. lib. 5. tit. 11. c. 1 Nichol. 4. there it is determined, That the rules of Francis giuen to his diſciples, that they ſhould goe barefoote, and not ride but in caſe of neceſſitie and ſuch like, are precepts: which notwithſtanding according to their definition are but counſels.

This truth the holy Martyrs haue ſealed: Iohn Huſſe, There are ſo many Counſels and determinations of God in the Goſpell, as there be lawfull and honeſt things ioyned with precepts and commaundements of God, binding vs thereto vnder paine of deadly ſinne: for euery ſuch thing doth the Lord commaund vs to fulfill in time and place, &c. Fox pag. 617.

Claudius Monerius French Martyr; No man can vow to God ſo much, but the law requireth much more then he can vow. This holy Martyr died in this confeſſion, and was burned at Lyons, anno 1551. ex Iohanne Criſpin. lib. tert. Thus then it appeareth, that before the Lord, there is no difference betweene his counſels and commandements, but that we are bound to keepe them both.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING vowes in generall.

THis queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether it be lawfull for Chriſtians to make vowes. Secondly, in what things lawfull vowes conſiſt. Thirdly, whether voluntarie vowes be any part of the worſhip and ſeruice of God.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER VOWES PERtained onely to the old law, and are not now permitted vnto Chriſtians.

The Papiſts.

85.Error. THey hold it as lawfull, and as free a thing for Chriſtians to binde themſelues by vowes vnto God, as it was vſed and practiſed of the Iewes in the time of the law.

*Argum.*1. Iſai.19.21. They ſhall know the Lord in that day, and doe ſacrifice and oblation, and vow vowes vnto God and performe them. This prophecie is concerning Chriſtians, which ſhould in the time of the Goſpell make vowes vnto God, *Bellarm.cap.*17.

Anſ. The Prophet doth, by the externall ſeruice of God vſed in the Church at that time, ſet forth the ſpiritual worſhip of God in the Church of Chriſt: for Iewiſh vowes ſhal be no more then in force, then their ſacrifices and oblations. Alſo verſ.19. the Prophet ſaith, that an Altar ſhall bee ſet vp in Egypt: and verſ.18. They ſhall ſpeake the language of Canaan: But theſe things were not literally, but myſtically performed, neither is it neceſſarie the other ſhould.

*Argum.*2. Pſalme 76.11. Vow vnto God and performe: Ergo, vowes now are lawfull, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſ. It appeareth by the text, that it was a commandement vnto the Iewes, and for that time: for it followeth, All ye that are round about him: that is, the Leuites and Prieſts that dwelt round about the temple. And bring preſents to him that ought to be feared. But now Chriſtians bring no ſuch externall preſents and gifts, therefore it cannot be properly vnderſtood of them. This appeareth alſo by the beginning of the Pſalme, that this charge appertained to the Iewes: as verſ.1. God is knowne in Iudea, and verſ.2. in Salem is his tabernacle &c. Therefore while the tabernacle continued in Salem, and God was worſhipped onely in Iudea, ſo long vowes were in force.

*Argum.*3. Vowes did not take beginning from Moſes, for Iacob vowed, Geneſ.28. therefore neither are they to ceaſe with *Moſes. Bellarm.cap.*17.

Contra. Firſt, the Argument followeth not, for there were altars and ſacrifices before the law, yet they wil not ſay, that they muſt remaine ſtill after the law of ceremonies determined. Secondly, ſuch a vow, as Iacob made, is lawfull for Chriſtians to make ſtill; for he voweth, that the Lord ſhall be his God: the vow then of obedience, and of more ſtrict ſeruing of God is commendable in Chriſtians. And as for the vow of tithes, Iacob maketh it, not as it were in it ſelfe a principall ſeruice of God, but as a ſigne of the worſhip of God and obedience, which he vowed.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not condemne all vowes, neither denie, but that a Chriſtian in ſome caſes may vow, as preſently it followeth to be ſhewed: but Iewiſh vowes are vtterly vnlawfull, ſuch as the vowes of the Nazarites were, Numb.6. as to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke, not to ſhaue their haire, and ſuch like: if we place religion in ſuch vowes.

*Argum.*1. Their vowes were ceremonious, and conſiſted in externall rites, which were ſhadowes and ſignifications of ſpirituall things: as not to cut their haire, not to touch any dead thing, to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke. But all ſhadowes are now gone and aboliſhed: and ſuch externall vſages are vnprofitable, as were thoſe precepts of the falſe Apoſtles, Touch not, taſte not, handle not: which all periſh with the vſing, and are the commandements of men, as S.Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.2.21.22. Such precepts notwithſtanding, Monkes and Friers at this day doe binde themſelues vnto: for it is not lawfull for them to touch ſiluer, nor to taſte fleſh, according to the ſtrict and ſuperſtitious rules of their patrones. The Apoſtles reaſon ſtandeth thus, religion conſiſteth not in any thing, that periſheth with the vſe: but vowes not to taſte, not to touch, not to handle, periſh in the vſe: Ergo, there is no religion in ſuch vowes.

*Argum.*2. It was ordained in Moſes law, Leuit.27.26. that no man ſhould vow vnto the Lord the firſt-borne, for it was the Lords alreadie. From whence this argument may bee drawne, That which is the Lords alreadie, cannot be vowed vnto him: but wee are Chriſts, 1.Cor.3.23. and all that we haue, verſ.21. Wherefore it is a ſuperfluous thing to vow any thing, which wee haue, as therein placing the ſeruice of God; ſeeing alreadie we are deuoted to Gods ſeruice. If it bee here obiected, that by the ſame reaſon neither was it lawfull for the Iewes to offer any thing at all, becauſe cauſe the earth is the Lords, and all things therein, Pſalm.24. they ſhould offer vnto God of his owne. I anſwere, that it is true all the earth was the Lords in right of the creation; but the firſt-borne were due in a ſecond right of their deliuerance and redemption from Egypt: and ſo wee in reſpect of our ſpirituall deliuerance are bound to ſerue God all the daies of our life, Luk.1.74. And therefore it is no more in our power to vow or be vowed vnto God, then it was lawfull for the Iewes to dedicate their firſt-borne.

*Argum.*3. Saint Paul ſaith, He that is circumciſed is bound to keepe the whole law, Galat.5.3. He that keepeth any one ceremonie of the law, doth make himſelfe a ſeruant to the whole law: for if after the profeſſion of the Nazarites, they will vow not to drinke wine, not to ſhaue their heads, hereby the better to pleaſe God; why are they not alſo purified, and bring an offering according to the law, as Paul did, who becauſe of the infirmitie of the Iewes, was agreed with foure other men which had a vow, to be purified according to the law? But this Saint Paul did being amongſt the Iewes, who cried out againſt him as a breaker of the law, leaſt he ſhould bee ſcandalous vnto them. Hence alſo we reaſon thus; that which S. Paul did for that time to auoide offence, namely, to be purified with them that had a vow, is not now lawfull for the people of God to doe, as Act.21.25. Wee haue determined concerning the Gentiles, that they obſerue no ſuch thing: Ergo, it is not lawfull now after the manner of the Iewes to make a vow.

Auguſtine thus notably writeth concerning this matter: Sicut defuncta corpora neceſſariorum officijs deducenda erant quodammodo ad ſepulchrum, non deſerenda continuò, vel ſicut canibus proijcienda: The ceremonies of the law (ſaith he) were not preſently to be caſt off, but as dead bodies muſt be brought to the graue with ſome ſeemely pompe of their friends, and not to bee caſt vnto dogges: Thus he ſaith, that in the Apoſtles time all Iewiſh ceremonies were not in act aboliſhed, though they were alreadie as dead carkaſſes, that is, by right depriued of life: yet they required ſome ſpace to be honourably laid downe, and as it were buried. But whoſoeuer would now goe about to renew the Iewiſh ceremonies againe (ſaith he) Tanquam ſopitos cineres eruens, non erit pius deductor vel batulus corporis, ſed impius ſepultura violator: He ſhould as it were rake in dead mens aſhes, and not bee a ſeemely bringer of the bodie to the ground, but a wicked violator of Chriſtian buriall: Euen ſo Auguſtine maketh it as wicked a part, to bring in vſe any Iewiſh rites, as to pull one, honeſtly buried, out of his graue.

There is a rule in the Ciuill law, *Cod.lib.7.tit.6.leg.*1.Iuſtinian. Abſurdum eſt, ipſa origine rei ſublata, eius imaginem relinqui: It is abſurd, the originall being remoued, the image or reſemblance to remaine ſtill. According to this rule, ſeeing that the Iewiſh ceremonies are ceaſed, it is not fit that Iudaicall vowes ſhould haue any place in the Church.

The Canon law alſo ſaith, Vmbra legis euanuit, illuxit veritas Euangelij: The ſhadow of the law is vaniſhed, and the light of the Goſpel hath ſhined, *decr.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*47.*c.*1. Vpon which ground Innocentius 3. decreeth, the law of Moſes, concerning the purifying of women, not to be in force: of the which nature alſo is the law of vowes.

To this agreeth the ordinarie gloſſe, de 4.Concil.Primitiua Eccleſia. Modus colendi Deũ per externos ritus & ceremonias legis, quia hæc fuerunt vmbra Chriſti tum venturi & myſteriorum eius, ideo adueniente veritate Euangelica illicita facta ſunt, & euanuerunt: The manner of worſhipping God by externall rites and ceremonies of the law, becauſe theſe were a ſhadow of Chriſt to come and of his myſteries, the truth of the Goſpell being come are made vnlawfull, and are vaniſhed away. But vowes are a part of the externall and ceremonious worſhip of God. Ergo.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr, hath ſealed this truth: Vowes are againſt the ordinance of God: let them ſhew where theſe vowes in all the new Teſtament be ordained of God, eſpecially ſuch vowes of ſingle life and wilfull pouertie, &c. Fox pag.1250.col.1.articul.3.

THE SECOND PART, WHAT THINGS MAY lawfully bee vowed by Chriſtians, and whether baptiſme be properly a vow.

The Papiſts.

THey hold that the proper vowes of Chriſtians are voluntarie, not of ſuch things which Chriſtians are bound in dutie to doe, but of ſuch as they may leaue vndone, if they will; ſuch as are their popiſh vowes of continencie and voluntarie, or rather wilfull pouertie. 85.Error.

*Argum.*1. Deuteron.23. When thou ſhalt vow a vow vnto God, thou ſhalt not bee ſlacke to pay it; it ſhould be ſinne vnto thee: but when thou abſtaineſt from vowing, it ſhall bee no ſinne vnto thee. By this the Ieſuite proueth, that the vowes of Chriſtians are voluntarie, and not of neceſſarie duties, for it were ſinne to leaue any thing vndone, that we are in dutie bound vnto, *cap.*19. And hereupon he inferreth, that the promiſe made in baptiſme is no vow, becauſe it is neceſſarie.

Anſ. Firſt, we denie not but that the Iewes had voluntarie vowes, and might binde themſelues by vow to performe many things, which being not vowed, it was no ſinne to leaue vndone: As the Nazarites vowes concerning abſtinence from wine and ſtrong drinke; which things other might lawfully vſe without ſinne, if they were not profeſſed Nazarites. But theſe ceremoniall lawes do nothing appertaine to Chriſtians.

Secondly, it may alſo be vnderſtood of neceſſarie vowes, which we are bound vnto of duetie, and then the ſenſe is this: If you abſtayne from vowing ye ſinne not, that is, not ſo hainouſly as after the vow made; as Pagans and infidels do ſinne in tranſgreſſing Gods Law: but a Chriſtian ſinneth more after publike profeſſion and promiſe made of obedience vnto Gods commandements.

Thus our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith of the Iewes: If I had not come, and ſpoken vnto them, they ſhould haue had no ſinne, Iohn 15.verſ.21.that is, in compariſon their ſinne of ignorance ſhould haue been none in reſpect of their ſinne, which they haue now: ſo his ſinne, that bindeth not himſelfe to the obedience of Gods commandements, is not like to his ſinne, that hath bound himſelfe, and yet tranſgreſſeth.

Argum.2. The Ieſuite would thus alſo proue the promiſe made in Baptiſme to be no vow. The vowes of children vttered by their parents, are not ratified but by them, in whoſe name they were made, when they come to yeeres of diſcretion: but the promiſe made in Baptiſme doth bind children, whether they will or not: Ergo, it is no vow.

Anſw. Firſt, if this reaſon proue any thing, it concerneth onely the baptiſme of infants, ſo that the promiſe made in the Baptiſme of thoſe, which are adulti, already come to yeeres of diſcretion, ſhall be a vow, whatſoeuer Bellarmine ſaith to the contrarie; for they euen when they are baptized are able to giue conſent vnto the vow and promiſe then and there made. Secondly, it is vntrue, that the vowes of the parents made in the name of their children, do not abſolutely binde: for vnder the law euen in ceremonial vowes vttered by the parents, the children were bound: as 1.Sam. 1.11. Anna voweth to God, that a raſor ſhal not come vpon her ſonnes head; which vow was accordingly kept in her ſonne: Ierem.35.6. Ionadab inioyned his ſonnes, that neither they nor their ſeede for euer, ſhould drinke any wine, or ſtrong drinke; and they obeyed without any gainſaying or reſiſtance. Thirdly, but concerning neceſſarie dueties, the children are bound to keepe their parents vowes and couenant made with God: as Ioſua made a promiſe for himſelfe and his, I and my houſe will ſerue the Lord, Ioſua 24.15. And if in ciuil matters the parents may bind their children abſolutely to the couenant, which they make, as Ionathan and Dauid made a couenant for them and their ſeed, 1.Sam.20.42. much more this ſpirituall couenant bindeth, being grounded vpon the ordinance and commandement of God: notwithſtanding all that hath been ſaid, the promiſe made in Baptiſme ſhall be a vow ſtill.

Argum.3. It is both vnprofitable and ſuperfluous for a man to vow to do that, to the which he is bound already; but in Baptiſme we promiſe obedience vnto God, which we are bound to do by the law: Ergo, it is ſuperfluous to ſeeke to tie our ſelues with new bonds, and conſequently it ſhould be a ſuperfluous vow. Bellarm.cap.19.argum.5.

Anſw. Firſt, if this reaſon proue any thing, it ſeemeth to conclude, that it is ſuperfluous for any promiſe to be made in Baptiſme, as well as a vow, ſeeing we are alreadie bound to ſerue God by the law of Creation. Secondly, neither is it ſuperfluous to vow, more ſtrictly to do that, which we are bound to do; for a double bond bindeth more ſtrongly then one, and as the wiſe man ſaith, a threefold coard cannot be broken, Eccleſiaſt.4. So Iacob vowed that the Lord ſhould be his God, Gen.28. which notwithſtanding was couenanted before in his circumciſion. Thirdly, there is a common bond, which bindeth all men, namely the law of Creation; but as God hath his peculiar people, ſo is there a peculiar bond to tie them vnto God, namely, their deliuerance by Chriſt, which is profeſſed in Baptiſme: as before the commandements, God doth moue his people to obedience, not becauſe he created them, but for that he brought them out of the houſe of bondage. Fourthly, if two bonds are ſuperfluous, wherefore then doth the Lord by two immutable things, his word and his oath confirme his promiſes to vs, Hebr.6.18? let him ſay alſo that one of them is ſuperfluous.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold that to vow is not a thing ſimply forbidden Chriſtians: but our vowes are limited and reſtrained: for they are either ſuch, as directly or immediatly are referred to the worſhip of God, whereby we binde our ſelues more ſtreightly to ſerue him: and ſuch vowes are onely of ſuch things as are commanded, and neceſſarily to be done: and in this ſenſe there is but one common vow of all Chriſtians, and that is our ſolemne promiſe made in Baptiſme, which the Papiſts deny properly to be a vow, Bellarm.cap.19. There is another kinde of vowes, that directly concerneth not the worſhip of God, which may be of things not commanded, of the which we will intreat in the next ſection. Now wee are to proue, that Baptiſme is the onely proper vow of Chriſtians, which directly toucheth the ſeruice and worſhip of God.

Argum.1. Circumciſion was a generall vow of the Iewes, for thereby they bound themſelues to keepe the whole law, Galath.5.3. *Ergo,*Baptiſme is the vow of Chriſtians, which commeth in the place of circumciſion. And againe,it appeareth by this,that becauſe Chriſtians tranſgreſſing, do deſerue greater puniſhment, then Iewes or Gentiles,that they are more ſtreightly obliged and bound by their couenant vnto God then the other : and not onely, as the Ieſuite ſaith, becauſe they haue taſted more of the goodneſſe of God, and ſo are more vnthankefull ; for there are two parts of the couenant betweene God and vs : The Lord ſaith, Thou art my people, and ſo inricheth them with knowledge, and euery good thing : The people ſay, Thou art my God, Hoſh.2.23. And thus as the Lord doth couenant with them, ſo they do binde themſelues vnto God : The breach of which couenant, is that which ſtirreth vp principally the anger of God againſt vs.

Argum.2. A vow is that, whereby any thing is giuen vnto God ; as Anna 1.Sam.1.11. gaue her ſonne vnto God, which the Scripture calleth a vow: but in Baptiſme we are giuen vnto God: Rom.6.13. Giue your ſelues vnto God,ſeeing you are aliue from the dead: namely,by the power of Chriſts reſurrection repreſented in Baptiſme : as the Apoſtle ſheweth verſ.4. *Ergo,*in Baptiſme we doe vow our ſelues vnto God.

Argum.3. An oath bindeth as well as a vow, if not more, before God ; (this Bellarmine confeſſeth cap.16.argum.3.) for a vow is but a ſolemne promiſe, as Iepthah his vow is called a promiſe Iud.11.36. but an oath is more then a promiſe : but by oath wee may bind our ſelues to the performance of thoſe things, which notwithſtanding are neceſſarily inioyned vs, as Pſal.119.106. I haue ſworne to keepe thy righteous iudgements : and Nehem.10.9. the people bind themſelues by an oath to obſerue Gods commandements. Ergo, alſo theſe things are incident to our vowes. Auguſtine alſo vpon the 75.Pſalme writeth thus: Vouete & reddite Domino Deo veſtro omnes communiter : Quid debemus vouere? credere in illum, ſperare ab illo vitam æternam, benè viuere, ſecundùm communem modum : Make your vowes, and pay them vnto God generally altogether; What muſt we vow? to beleeue in him, to hope for eternall life, to liue honeſtly, not to ſteale, not to commit adulterie. Theſe then are the common and generall duties of Chriſtians : no other then we promiſed and vowed in Baptiſme.

Concil.Colonienſ.part.7. It was decreed, that the Godfathers ſhould be growne in yeeres, not children : Ne infans infantem offerre aut ſponſorem pro alio ſe Deo conſtituere, qui quod promittit, non intelligat : Leaſt that one child ſhould offer or preſent another, or vndertake for another before God, not vnderſtanding what he promiſeth. From hence we reaſon thus, A vow is nothing elſe, but Religioſa promiſſio Deo facta : A religious promiſe made vnto God, as Bellarmine himſelfe defineth it,cap.14. But in Baptiſme there is religioſa promiſſio & ſponſio, a religious promiſe and trothgiuing made vnto God, as this Councell ſheweth : Ergo.

Their owne Authors alſo are againſt them, that the things commanded of God may properly be vowed: as Dominicus a Soto lib.7.de iuſtitia qu.1.art.3. Alphonſus a caſtro lib.1.de leg.pænal.cap.10.

The Maſter alſo of the ſentences confeſſeth, that the common vow of Chriſtians is made in Baptiſme, namely to renounce the diuell: and in the ſame place, he thus expoundeth that place 1.Tim.5. They haue broken their firſt faith; which Bellarmine expoundeth of vowes.cap.17.argum.3. that is, ſayth he, votum, vel fidem, quam in Baptiſmo profeſſa ſunt ; Their vow or faith, which they profeſſed in Baptiſme.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING VOLVNTArie vowes,whether they be any part of the worſhip of God.

The Papiſts.

ALl voluntarie vowes (ſay they) made by Chriſtians,though not commanded of God, as not 86.Error. to eate fleſh, not to drinke ſtrong drinke, or to liue vnmarried ; do concerne the worſhip of God, and thereby men are made more acceptable vnto him, Bellarm.cap.16.

Argum.1. Iacob vowed to pay tithes,Gen.28. Dauid to build a Temple vnto God,Pſal.131.2. But neither of theſe two were commanded them, and yet they were properly referred to the ſeruice of God.

Anſw. Firſt,we deny not, as we haue ſaid, but that in the lawe and before, there might be ſuch voluntarie vowes : yet it followeth not,that there ſhould be any ſuch now. Secondly, both thoſe duties were neceſſarie,and commaunded in generall,though not in particular. As firſt, Iacobs vow was, that the Lord ſhould be his God, verſ.21. No man can deny, but this was neceſſarie, and a commaundement : Then ſeeing the Lord is his God, it is alſo neceſſarie that he ſhould acknowledge him by ſome external worſhip,as by appoynting the Lord an houſe in that place,and bringing oblations vnto his altars : theſe are but particular duties,that doe followe that generall commandement.

Secondly, Dauid did vow that, which he was bound to doe being King of Iſrael, namely, to haue a care of the temple of God: for thus he ſaith to Nathan the Prophet, I dwell in an houſe of Cedar trees; but the Arke of God remaineth within the curtaines, 2.Sam.7.2. This belonged to the King of dutie, as it was generally commanded all Iſrael, Hagg.1.4. but that Dauid was diſcharged of this care, by the eſpeciall warrant of God by the Prophet.

*Argum.*2. Heb.13.16. To doe good and to diſtribute forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifices God is pleaſed. Intelligitur (ſaith Bellarmine) de eleemoſyna non præcepta: which is vnderſtood of almes not commanded: And if God be pleaſed with euery vertuous act, yea done without a vow, in things not commanded; much more where a vow is.

Anſw. First, it is a moſt groſſe and abſurd ſaying, that there can be any vertuous act not commanded in Scripture: the Apoſtle ſpeaketh contrarie, 2.Timoth.3.17. that the man of God by the Scriptures is made perfect to all good workes: Ergo, all good workes are preſcribed in Scripture. Secondly, it is alſo vntrue, that there are almes deedes not commanded, ſeeing that in this very place, it is an expreſſe charge and commandement of the Apoſtle, To do good and to diſtribute.

*Argum.*3. To keepe promiſe or faith giuen vnto God, is properly to ſerue God; a vow is a promiſe made vnto God: Ergo.Bellar.ibid.

Anſw. By a vow or promiſe made vnto God of that which is not lawfull, is no worſhipping of God, but rather a diſhonouring of him, as may appeare in the vow of Iepthe, of the which S. Ambroſe thus writeth, Melius fuit nihil tale promittere, quam promiſſum parricidio ſoluere: It had bin better neuer to haue vowed or promiſed any ſuch thing, then with parricide to performe his promiſe. *lib.*1.*de offic.c.*50.

*Argum.*4. An oath euen in a thing not commanded, is the worſhip of God, as to ſweare not to drinke wine: and ſo conſequently a vow alſo. *Bellarm.ibid.c.*16.*argum.*3.

Anſw. The conſequence or dependance of this argument I willingly yeeld vnto, hauing vrged it before againſt the Suite himſelfe (I would ſay Ieſuite;) for an oath and a vow may be well compared together: but an oath, ſuch as the Ieſuite ſpeaketh of, is not acceptable to God: First, becauſe an oath is appointed to make an end of ſtriſe betweene men, Hebr.6.16. not to determine matters betweene God and vs; men ſweare by God, not ſo properly to God. Secondly, neither is it pleaſing to God, to bind thoſe things with an oath abſolutely, which are not in our owne power, as not to drinke wine, ſeeing his infirmitie may cauſe him to drinke it, as S.Paul counſelled Timoth.1.5. Thirdly, yet an oath in theſe externall matters, doth not verily or properly belong to the worſhip of God, though in ſome ſort may be referred vnto it, as now followeth to be ſhewed.

The Proteſtants.

WE grant that there are other kinds of vowes then before wee ſpake of, which doe not directly concerne the worſhip of God, neither are of thinges commanded vs, nor yet is God thereby the better pleaſed: but they ſerue onely as helpes, to make vs more fit vnto Chriſtian duties: As a man that ſeeth he is by nature giuen to drunkennes, doth vowe that he will take no ſtrong drinke, leſt he ſhould offend that way: Another purpoſeth to faſt, thereby to tame his fleſh, and the more feruently to pray; as Iob made a couenant with his eyes not to looke vpon a maide, 31.1. But theſe things of themſelues, by the outward act, are not the more acceptable vnto God, neither is God by eating or not eating, or looking or not looking, the better worſhipped, as theſe things are conſidered in themſelues. Wherefore by the word of God we condemne all voluntarie and ſuperſtitious vowes of men, inuented to ſerue God by, as vowes of chaſtitie, of going in pilgrimage, offering to Images, and ſuch like.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul condemneth all voluntarie worſhip of God which is inuented by man, as vnprofitable, though it haue a ſhew of wiſedome in humblenes of minde, and not ſparing the bodie, Coloſſ.2.23. As ſuch are the ordinances of the world in worſhipping of Angels, and in abſtinence, Touch not, taſt not, handle not. But ſuch are all popiſh vowes, a voluntarie ſeruice of God, euen in the ſame things which the Apoſtle taketh exception againſt; for they make vowes to Angels, to Saints, vowes to keep dayes holy, and to faſt in them: Ergo, they are vnlawful.

*Argum.*2. Rom.14.23. Whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſin, that is, grounded vpon knowledge out of the word: Ergo, all voluntarie vowes made to ſerue God by, are to be abandoned, becauſe they haue no warrant out of Gods word. Bellarm. anſwereth, that the place is not ſo to be vnderſtood, but rather, by faith, is meant the conſcience of man, and ſo whatſoeuer is done againſt the conſcience is ſinne.

Anſ. By faith, is not vnderſtood any conſcience, but the aſſurance of a right conſcience, which muſt needes be builded vpon the word: for verſ.22. S.Paul ſaith, If thou haſt faith, haue it with God: This cannot be ſpoken of a corrupt conſcience which is not able to abide Gods triall, but a right conſcience eſtabliſhed out of the word.

Thus Bernard expoundeth this place: De fide vera non falſa puto dixiſſe Apoſtolum, omne, quod non ex fide, peccatum, quia fides falſa, fides non eſt: I thinke the Apoſtle ſpake of a true, not a falſe faith, ſaying, what is not of faith is ſinne; for a falſe faith, is no faith: lib. de diſpenſation.

*Argum.*3. To mortifie the bodie, and to be renewed in the minde, is the reaſonable, that is, the true and proper ſeruice of God; but the mortifying of the fleſh, and change of the minde conſiſteth not in meate or drinke or any ſuch externall thing. Ergo, therein ſtandeth not the true ſeruice of God: And ſo the Apoſtle alſo euidentlie ſaith, Meate maketh vs not acceptable vnto God, for neither if we eate haue we the more, or if we eate not haue we the leſſe, &c. 1. Cor. 8. 8. The Apoſtle reaſoneth thus: that, which being vſed bringeth no rewarde, not vſed procureth no loſſe, doth not make vs acceptable to God: for the neglecting or not vſing of thoſe things, wherein Gods ſeruice ſtandeth is damnable: but the not vſing of meates and drinkes and ſuch like is not damnable. Ergo, therein ſtandeth not Gods ſeruice.

*Argum.*4. Let vs heare Auguſtines iudgement: Sunt multi qui vouent, &c. There are many that vowe, one a cloake, another oyle, another a waxe candle, another that he will drinke no wine, another that he will faſt, another that he will eate no fleſh. This is not the beſt kind of vowing: God neither careth for thy comely apparell, nor for thy oile, nor for thy faſting: but offer that vnto him which he hath redeemed, that is, thy ſoule, *De tempor. ſer.*7. We ſee by this what account Auguſtine maketh of ſuperſtitious voluntarie vowes, made with an intent to pleaſe God thereby.

*Concil. Arauſicane.*2. *can.*11, Nemo quicquam Deo vouerit, niſi ab ipſo acceperit, ſicut legitur quæ de manu tua accepimus, damus tibi, 1. *Paralippom.*29. 14. Let no man vow vnto God any thing, vnleſſe he haue receiued it, as wee reade, thoſe things which we haue receiued at thy hand, we giue vnto thee: Therefore no man can make a vowe of chaſtitie vnto God, nor of any other gift not in his owne power.

See alſo the rules of your owne lawes: *Decret. Gregor. lib.*1. *tit.*7. *c.*2. Innocent. Quod non eſt ſanctorum patrum decreto ſancitum, ſuperſtitioſis non eſt adinuentionibus præſumendum: That which is not eſtabliſhed by the decree of the holy Fathers, muſt not by ſuperſtitious inuentions be preſumed: If that be ſuperſtition, which is not decreed by the Fathers, how much more that, which is not warranted by Scripture: And as it followeth in the ſame place; Nonnunquam intelligitur prohibitum, quod non inuenitur conceſſum: That we vnderſtand to be prohibited, which is found not to be granted. Wherefore by this rule all voluntarie vowes of things not commaunded or graunted in Scripture, are held to be prohibited.

Iames Baineham holy Martyr: The vowes of chaſtitie, and all goodnes are giuen of God, by his abundant grace, which no man of himſelfe can keepe, but it muſt bee giuen him of God, Fox. pag. 1028. col. 1.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING Monaſticall vowes in particular.

THere are three kinds of vowes which belong vnto Monkerie: the firſt is the vowe of voluntarie pouertie: the ſecond the vowe of obedience vnto the Monaſticall preſidents and gouernours: the third is the vowe of continencie: of theſe three in order.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE vowe of voluntarie pouertie.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay it is an acceptable ſeruice vnto God, for a man to giue all he hath to the poore, and by vowe to conſecrate and addict himſelfe to voluntarie pouertie. 87. Error.

*Argum.*1. Matth. 18. 21. Chriſt ſaith, If thou wilt be perfect, goe and ſell all thou haſt, and giue it to the poore, and come and follow me. This is properly to follow Chriſt, to lacke proprietie and liue in common: and thus the Apoſtles followed Chriſt, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, this is a precept not generall to all, but giuen to this one man to diſcouer his hypocriſie, and vaine confidence that he had in himſelfe, as though he had kept the law, which he came farre ſhort of. Secondly, the Apoſtles themſelues had proprietie: Peter had a houſe: Iohn had to prouide for the Virgin Marie, whom Chriſt commended vnto him: Matthew made a feaſt of his owne goods, Fulk. ibid.

*Argum.*2. Act. 2. 44. They had all things common: and Act. 5. Ananias and Sapphira, after their profeſſion of common life, detaining ſome part proper to themſelues, were reproued and iudged of the Apoſtles: Ergo, it is acceptable to God to liue in common, *Rhemiſt. ibid. Bellarm. cap.*20.

Anſ. Firſt, that communitie vſed then amongſt the brethren, ought alwaies to be among Chriſtians, no man to count that his owne, which the neceſſitie of his brother requireth to bee beſtowed vpon him. Thus alſo witneſſeth Vrbanus in his Decretal, *cauſ.*12.*qu.*1.*c.*9. Scimus vos non ignorare,&c. We know you are not ignorant that hitherto a common life hath floriſhed amongſt all Chriſtians,and yet by Gods grace doth floriſh.Neither was euery man then bound to giue vp the proprietie of their goods : for they diſtributed to euery man as they had neede, Act.4.35. But if they had giuen vp all the proprietie of their goods, then all ſhould haue needed alike : And Peter ſaith not the contrarie,but that Ananias might haue kept the proprietie of his goods,if he had not made publike profeſſion to the contrary, Act.5.4.

2. Your owne law giueth another reaſon of that communitie among the Apoſtles, *ibid.c.*15. Futuram eccleſiam,&c. The Apoſtles did foreſee that the Church ſhould bee amongſt the Gentiles, and therefore they would not haue any poſſeſſions in Iudea,but tooke the price onely for the reliefe of the poore.

3. Concerning Ananias, wee doe not reade that he made any vow to giue his goods to the Church : nay the contrarie appeareth, in that Saint Peter ſaith, While it remained with thee,appertained it not to thee ? But if his vow were paſt before, the goods, though yet not ſold, could not appertaine vnto him. Againe, the principall and chiefe cauſe,why Peter proceeded againſt him,was his lying and hypocriſie,not for breaking his vow : for it cannot be proued that he promiſed all,but that he affirmed that he brought all,whereas he withdrew part.

*Argum.*3. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith,Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit,Matth.5.3. that is,ſuch as willingly make themſelues poore : for ſo did our Sauiour Chriſt, who both in action and affection was poore,and did as he taught.And Luke 6.24.There is a woe denounced to the rich in this world: So that by the contrarie the bleſſing is vpon the poore,*Bellarm.cap.*20.

Anſ. Firſt,it is euident, that Chriſt ſpeaketh not of outward pouertie, but of the humilitie of the mind:firſt,becauſe it is ſo expreſſed,bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit. Secondly,the Prophet Dauid in the ſame ſenſe ſaith,I am poore,Pſalm.26.16.yet was he King, and abounded in riches. Thirdly, Matth.11.5. the poore receiue the Goſpell: yet were they not all poore in ſubſtance that receiued Chriſt, as Nicodemus, Ioſeph of Arimathaa, Zachaus. Now to anſwere likewiſe to his proofes: Firſt,where Chriſt ſaith,woe vnto the rich, he meaneth not all rich men, but ſuch as truſted in their riches : for ſuch onely are excluded the kingdome of heauen,Mark.10.24. Secondly, it is vntrue that Chriſt did profeſſe voluntarie pouertie,as your owne Extrauagant hath decreed, that it is an hereſie ſo to affirme:for Chriſt had both money,and a bagge for the almes of the poore,*Ioann.*22. *tit.*14.*c.*5.

The Proteſtants.

VOluntarie,or rather wilfull pouertie,for a man hauing no vrgent cauſe,to leaue all he hath, and bequeath himſelfe to a poore and needie life, onely for opinion of greater merite, and hope thereby better to pleaſe God,is neither a thing acceptable nor commendable before God, nor any where commaunded in the Scriptures.

*Argum.*1. 1.Timoth.6.17. Saint Paul giuing counſell to rich men, biddeth them not to caſt away their riches : but charge them (ſaith he) that they be not high minded, nor put their truſt in vncertaine riches. Surely it had been a more compendious way to wiſh them at once to leaue their riches,ſo they ſhould not be in daunger, either of pride, or vaine confidence : but the Apoſtle ſaith no ſuch thing. Againe,God giueth vs abundantly all things to enioy: riches are the gift of God, wee ought not to be wearie of Gods bleſſing. And as Iob ſaith, The Lord giueth, the Lord taketh: therefore a man ought not to make himſelfe poore, becauſe he made not himſelfe rich, but to waite vpon God.

Further it followeth, verſ.18. that they doe good,and be rich in good workes : he that can vſe riches well, may bee rich in good workes : but he that is poore,wanteth occaſion and meanes to doe good,as the rich man indued with grace may : wherefore he is an enemie to the glorie of God, that changeth his rich eſtate,wherein he may more glorifie God,for a poore.

Againe,if it were ſo acceptable a thing to God, and ſo meritorious to liue in pouertie,what made the Prophet to pray againſt it ? Giue me not pouertie nor riches , but feede me with foode conuenient,Prou.30.verſ.8.

*Argum.*2. What better argument can wee haue againſt them, then their owne practiſe ? for, though in words they much commend voluntarie pouertie,yet it is a rare thing to finde it amongſt them : for not one among a thouſand of them, if they haue lands, doe giue them to the poore,but to their owne kinſefolkes,or elſe to the Abbeyes,where they know they ſhall be wealthily maintained. The Pope alſo is good to many, and granteth them capacities to poſſeſſe temporall goods, contrary to their former vow.

*Argum.*3. The Wiſeman praieth vnto God, Giue me not pouertie, leaſt I bee poore , and ſteale, and take the name of God in vaine, Prouerbs 31.8.9. From this place two arguments may bee drawne : That which may lawfully be praied againſt, is not willingly to bee deſired : pouertie may bee prayed againſt ; therefore it is not to bee purpoſely ſought. Againe, no man is willingly to runne into temptation; but pouertie is a temptation to ſteale,and to take Gods name in vaine: Ergo,&c.

Auguſtine ſaith, *Diuitiæ ſeculares ſi deſint, non per opera mala quærantur in mundo: Si autem adſunt, per opera bona ſeruentur in cœlo: Epiſt.*1.poſteriorum. If ſecular riches be wanting,let not a man ſeeke to get them by euill doing in the world: but if he haue them,labour,by well doing, to ſtore them vp in heauen. He counſelleth not men to caſt away their riches: It was the hereſie of the Pelagians to perſwade rich men to caſt away their goods, *Auguſt.epiſtol.*106. and of the Manichees likewiſe, *Auguſt.cont.Fauſtum.lib.*5.*cap.*10.

Concil.Cabilonenſ.ſub.Carol.cap.6.Imputatur quibuſdam fratribus,&c. Certaine brethren are charged,that for couetouſnes they perſwade men, that renouncing the world,they ſhould giue their ſubſtance to the Church,which practiſe ſhould be rooted out of all mindes: for the paſtor ſhould ſeeke the ſaluation of mens ſoules,not earthly commoditie: becauſe Chriſtians muſt not be compelled to giue their ſubſtance, &c. But I pray you,if it were a thing ſo meritorious and healthfull for the ſoule to giue all away,why ſhould not men be perſwaded and allured thereunto?

Let vs ſee the Imperiall conſtitutions: *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*5.*leg.*11.Valentinian. By this law it is made lawfull for women profeſſed (who are now called Nunnes) to make their willes and teſtaments, and to leaue to what vſes they thought good. Likewiſe, *tit.6.leg.*42. the ſonne, though a profeſſed Monke,may ſucceede his father in his inheritance, Iuſtinian. It ſhould ſeeme then, that in thoſe daies the vow of voluntarie pouertie was not practiſed amongſt thoſe ancient Monkes.

Their owne Canons alſo doe helpe vs in this matter: *Decret.p.*1.*diſtinct.*30.*c.*16.Diuites,&c. We doe not reiect rich men hauing good workes. Againe, *Cauſ.*12.*qu.*1.*c.*25.Sine peccato poſſideant ſua,&c. They that are profeſſed, may without ſinne poſſeſſe their owne. *Cauſ.*16.*qu.*1.*c.*68.In pauperibus,&c. We muſt not in the poore ſo much conſider their pouertie,as their religion: Ergo, pouertie of it ſelfe by your owne law is not meritorious.

And yet more euidently, whereas the order of S.Francis was bound to voluntarie pouertie, it being not lawfull for them to touch any money, nor yet to haue propertie or dominion in any thing,but in the ſimple vſe onely,as may appeare by the conſtitution of Pope *Nicholas, ſext.decr. lib.*5.*tit.*12.*c.*3. afterward commeth Iohn 22.who determineth the contrarie, ſhewing that, in rebus conſumptilibus,in things which conſume in the vſe,as meate,drinke,apparell, the vſe could not be ſeuered from the propertie: for then the vſe may be ſeuered from the propertie, when there ariſeth ſome profit by the vſe,(ſalua rei ſubſtantia) the ſubſtance being preſerued, but in vſing of meate and drinke,the ſubſtance alſo is conſumed: And ſo he concludeth, that the ſaid order had not only the vſe,but the propertie alſo in the ſaid things; and ſo conſequently it may be inferred, that where a property remained,there could be no reſolute pouertie, *Extrau.tit.*14.*c.*5.

The ſaid Iohn 22. condemned them for heretikes, who affirmed that Chriſt and his Apoſtles had nothing proper, *Extrau.tit.*14.*c.*5. If neither Chriſt nor his Apoſtles entered into this rule of perfection,nor did betake themſelues to voluntarie pouertie, ſhall any man now ſtriue to bee more perfect then they?

Iohn Lambert (holy Martyr) ſheweth what voluntarie pouertie is required of Chriſtians,and how that precept of our Sauiour, goe and ſell all that thou haſt,&c. may be fulfilled,for he hath ſold (ſaith he) all that euer he had,that can finde in his heart to depart from it,when God ſhall pleaſe, or charitie ſo requireth: Voluntas reputatur pro facto, the will is accepted for the deede, &c. Fox pag.1110.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the vowe of obedience.

The Papiſts.

THey that doe enter into the Monkiſh profeſſion, doe vow in all things to become obedient to their gouernour,and to follow his rules and iniunctions: as the Franciſcans follow Saint Francis rule,who in ſtead of a girdle, put a corde about him, went bare-foote,in winter ſeaſon couered his fleſh with yce and ſnow. It is acceptable,and gratefull ſeruice,ſay they,vnto God, to be thus obedient to their fathers and gouernours. 88.Error. Fox.pag.259.

1 Ierem.35. The ſonnes of Ionadab are commended,for being obedient to their father, who inioyned them to drinke no wine, nor to ſow their fields, nor builde houſes but dwell in tents: Thus they obeyed their father in things not commanded of God: Ergo,ſo ought religious Monkes to doe, *Bellarm.cap.*21.

Anſw. Firſt,you cannot ſhew that your monkiſh Abbots haue ſuch authoritie ouer their Monkes,as the father hath ouer his children: for Coloſſ.3.and in many other places,children are commaunded to bee obedient to their parents: but the other haue neither authoritie nor calling out of the word. Alſo S.Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.3. Sonnes obey your parents in all things: wherefore Ionadabs dabs children did no more,then was commanded. Bellarmine anſwereth, that children are bound onely to obey their parents while they are little ones, and not afterward : as the Apoſtle ſaith, that the heire,as long as he is a child,differeth nothing from a ſeruant,Galath.4.1.

Contra. Firſt,a childe while he is yong is more in ſubiection,then afterward : for he is then kept in awe as a ſeruant ; but when he commeth to yeeres of diſcretion, he is ſtill held as a ſonne : and this to bee the meaning of the Apoſtle appeareth by the application of this compariſon ; that euen ſo we as ſeruants,were kept vnder the bondage of the rudiments of the world,and ceremonies of the law, but by the redemption of Chriſt haue receiued the adoption of ſonnes. Secondly,and that ſonnes,euen when they come to mens eſtate,muſt be obedient to their parents,it appeareth by the ſonnes of Eli,1.Sam.2.who is both puniſhed for not chaſtiſing his ſonnes,and they likewiſe for not hearing their father. We ſee then what goodly ſtuffe this popiſh doctrine is, that teacheth children to caſt off the yoke of obedience to their parents.

Secondly,Ionadab inioyned nothing contrarie to the law of the Nazarites,Numb.6.And if you ſay,that it was not the cuſtome of the Nazarites to dwell in tents ; you ſhall finde that the Rechabites did not ſo ſtreightly obſerue this, as the other, namely not to drinke wine : for Ierem.35. ver.11.they came vp for feare of the Chaldeans that were in the land,and dwelt at Ieruſalem:they diſpenſed with the voluntarie iniunction of their father, for dwelling in their tents,but kept the other vow of abſtaining from wine ſtill , becauſe it was after the law. Wherefore this example maketh not for Monkiſh obedience, ſeeing they are inioyned things not commaunded by God, nay contrarie to his commaundements.

Argum.2. Our Sauiour ſaith,He that will follow me,muſt denie himſelfe, Matth.16. but this deniall conſiſteth in the vow of obedience made to another : for then a man doth denie himſelfe, when he is bound by vow to obey; and not ſometime to obey, ſometime not to obey at his pleaſure,Bellarm.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt,then by this reaſon,none can be followers of Chriſt,vnleſſe they will be Monks : for the words of our Sauiour are generall of all, that will follow him. Secondly, to bee a follower of Chriſt, and a follower of men, are contrarie : for the Apoſtle ſaith, If I ſhould pleaſe men, I were no more the ſeruant of Chriſt, Galat.1.10. Wherefore they which addict themſelues by their ſuperſtitious obedience to pleaſe men,are not the ſeruants of Chriſt,but of men.

The Proteſtants.

NO obedience to any ruler either ſpirituall or temporall is to bee yeelded vnto, but for the Lords ſake,& in ſuch matters,wherein we haue the warrant of Gods word for our obediẽce.

1 Coloſſ.3.23.Seruants bee obedient to your maſters, and whatſoeuer you doe,doe it heartily as to the Lord. But if any thing be inioyned vs which is not warranted by the word of God,we cannot with a good conſcience obey as before the Lord. Againe,S. Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.2.18. Let no man at his pleaſure beare rule ouer you,or beguile you : or as the Rhemiſts tranſlate,ſeduce you wilfully: Ergo, no man muſt impoſe rules of life beſide the Goſpell,for this were to rule ouer men at their pleaſure.

2 Auguſtine ſaith,Cum homo conſtet anima & corpore,&c. Seeing a man doth conſiſt both of bodie and ſoule ; in regard of that part,which the affayres of this life concerne,we ought to be ſubiect to the higher powers : but in reſpect of that part whereby wee beleeue,and are called to the kingdome of God,wee muſt bee obedient to none, Auguſt.in 13.ad Rom. Therefore no man may impoſe any new religion vpon vs,which altogether toucheth the conſcience.

Argum.3. Saint Paul commandeth obedience to the Ciuill anthoritie,that beareth the ſword, Rom.13.but obedience cannot be yeelded to the Prince, if another thing be commaunded by the Monkiſh gouernour,to whom they are tied by the vow of obedience : as there is a Canon of a ſuperſtitious Councell,Triburienſ.c.9.Si Epiſcopus placitum,&c. If the Biſhop doe canonically decree a Synode,and the Ciuill Iudge at the ſame time enioyne alſo a law day,his law day muſt giue place to the other: Ergo, to vow obedience to any which may hinder obedience to the Ciuill Magiſtrate,is contrarie to S.Pauls rule.

Argum.4. Saint Paul alſo ſaith,1.Cor.7.23.Ye are bought with a price,be not the ſeruants of men : but they which vow Monkiſh obedience in things not preſcribed in the word, make themſelues ſeruants of men.Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle forbiddeth vs to be ſeruants vnto men for mens cauſe, but it is lawfull to ſerue men for Gods cauſe.

Contra. Firſt, to ſerue men for Gods cauſe, or in the name of God, is not to be ſeruants vnto men,but vnto God : and therefore in this caſe they are not the ſeruants of men, but of Chriſt ; as Saint Paul exhorteth ſeruants to bee obedient to their maſters , as the ſeruants of Chriſt, Epheſ.6.6. Secondly, they doe not ſerue men for Gods cauſe, which are obedient vnto them in things not commaunded by God, nor warranted by his word : as Monkes that doe vow obedience euen in ſuperſtitious fancies, and meere humane inuentions : So that this place of the Apoſtle is very ſtrong againſt them.

We haue in this caſe plentifull teſtimonie from both lawes: firſt, Cod.lib.3.tit.13.leg.7. Anaſtaſius the Emperor hath this conſtitution, That he, which is entred into any profeſſion in a colledge, ſhould be obedient to the gouernour thereof, ſo that notwithſtanding he yeeld obedience alſo to the Preſident or Magiſtrate.

To this agreeth the Canon law: Decret.part.2.cauſ.11.quæſt.3.c.91. Eutychianus Pope thus decreeth, Si quis Epiſcopus ſiue Abbas,&c. If a Biſhop or an Abbot commaund a Prieſt or a Monke to ſay Maſſe for an heretike, he muſt not be obeyed: Ergo, the vow of obedience may be broken.

Further, the vow of obedience, which they vrge ſo ſtrictly, is not obſerued amongſt themſelues: as in the order of the Franciſcanes, who by the rule of S. Francis ſhould haue but one coate, they ought to labour with their owne hands, they ſhould make no gloſſes vpon S. Francis rule: yet in all theſe things they are now diſpenſed with, ſext.decret.lib.5.tit.12.c.3. Againe, they are forbidden by their rule to handle any money by themſelues, or others, to haue the execution of teſtaments, or granaries, or cellers, or vineyards: yet now all theſe things are permitted them, Clement.lib.5.tit.11.c.1. So that they themſelues are the chiefe tranſgreſſors of their vowes of obedience.

See alſo Concil.Senonenſ.decret.morum.30. Ex nunc iuramenta,&c. From henceforth we diſanull and forbid the othes which are accuſtomed to be made in the entrance to certaine fratries and religious houſes, for the obſeruing of their ſtatutes, that no ſuch othes ſhould hereafter be made, or exacted. This councell, we ſee, hath decreed againſt the oth of obedience, which nouices were wont to make in their entrance.

Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr: Paulus Phariſæus propter meliorem ſectam Chriſti, ſuam reliquit ſectam, & ob hoc clauſtrales cuiuſcunque ſectæ fuerint, debent exire, & induere ſectam Chriſti: Paul the Phariſie, for the better ſect of Chriſt, did leaue his owne ſect, and therefore all that are profeſſed in cloyſters ſhould leaue their ſects, and come forth to profeſſe the ſect of Chriſt, ex Concil Conſtantienſ.can.15. Ergo, the vowe of ſuperſtitious obedience bindeth not.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE VOWE of continencie or chaſtitie, and whether it be lawfull to marrie after ſuch a vowe made.

The Papiſts.

THe vowe of chaſt and continent life is commendable and meritorious, they ſay, in all that 89.Error. doe take it vpon them, and after the vowe made, they are ſure to receiue that high gift of continencie, if they duely labour for it, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Corinth.7.verſ.7. But whoſoeuer marieth after the vowe made, ſinneth damnably, and turneth backe after Sathan, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Tim.5.ſect.12.

*Argum.*1. Matth.19.12. Some haue made themſelues chaſte, or as the Rhemiſts do very homely tranſlate it, haue gelded themſelues, for the kingdome of heauen: This proueth the vowes of chaſtitie to be both lawfull and meritorious, Rhemiſt.in hunc locum.

Anſw. This is ment onely of thoſe that haue the gift of continencie, who, if they be ſure they haue receiued it, may vowe and purpoſe ſingle life: but without ſuch aſſurance no man can vowe continencie lawfully: Neither can euery man receiue this gift that will, for Chriſt ſaith verſ.11. All men cannot receiue this thing, ſaue they to whom it is giuen: Secondly, as for meriting heauen it commeth neither by being maried or vnmaried, but it is the free gift of God through Chriſt, Rom.6.23.

*Argum.*2. 1.Tim.5.12. Hauing damnation becauſe they haue caſt away their firſt faith: that is, the vowe of continencie, which they made to Chriſt: it cannot be meant of the firſt faith in baptiſme, for that is not loſt by mariage, Rhemiſt. And againe, verſ.15. They are turned backe after Sathan: we may heere learne, for thoſe to marie which are profeſſed, is to turne backe after Sathan, Rhemiſt.in eum locum.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Paul ſpeaketh not here of widowes already choſen, but to be choſen: he would not haue younger widowes to be choſen, becauſe they would waxe wanton and marrie: and therefore it is not like, that by the firſt faith here is meant the vowe of chaſtitie, ſeeing there is no cauſe that theſe younger widowes ſhould make any vowe, being excluded by the Apoſtle from Church ſeruices. Secondly, verſ.14. S. Paul himſelfe counſelleth the younger widowes to marrie, therefore it is not like they were votaries. Thirdly, by the firſt faith is vnderſtood the Chriſtian faith, which the younger widowes waxing wanton, and laſciuious, not caring to match with Infidels, were in danger to breake, as the Apoſtle telleth them of ſome that had done ſo alreadie, and were turned backe after Sathan. Fourthly, we ſay not that the faith of baptiſme is broken by all mariage, but with ioyning with Infidels. Fiftly, it appeareth what breach of faith Paul meaneth, when he ſaith, They waxe wanton, and idle, and are buſie-bodies, goe from houſe to houſe, and ſpeake things vncomely,verſ.13. Which is a ſliding backe from the Chriſtian faith, when our life iarreth with our profeſſion; not a breach of any vowe of continencie. Laſtly,your Maſter of ſentences ſo expoundeth it of that faith, quam in Baptiſmo profeſſæ ſunt, which they profeſſed in Baptiſme. lib.4.diſtinct.38.b.

*Argum.*3. We muſt vow vnto God, that which is the beſt and moſt perfect ſtate of life; but virginitie is more excellent then mariage; therefore we ought to vow virginitie vnto God: and it is better and more acceptable to God to do it with a vow, then without. *Bellarm.cap.*28.

Anſw. Firſt,we graunt, that the beſt things ought to be giuen vnto God, ſo that it be in our power to performe them,otherwiſe it is but a tempting of God: ſuch was the vow of Iephthe,that promiſed vnawares that vnto God, which by the law he could not performe, namely his daughter: ſo they which vow ſingle life, promiſe a thing, which is not in their power. Secondly, concerning virginitie, though in it ſelfe it be preferred before mariage, yet in them that haue not that gift, mariage is better: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, It is better to marrie, then burne, that is, to liue a conſtrayned ſingle life in luſt and concupiſcence. Thirdly, to the proofe of the propoſition, that it is better to do any dutie with a vow, then without,becauſe it ſheweth greater charitie and loue to God, and it better defendeth againſt the tentation of Sathan; when a man is bound,&c. We anſwere: Firſt, loue is alwayes ioyned with humilitie; For loue doth not boaſt it ſelfe. 1.Cor.13.4. but he that voweth, boaſteth and preſumeth of his owne ſtrength. Ergo, to vow a thing not in our power,ſheweth not greater charitie. Secondly,for a man to be bound to keepe a vow aboue his ſtrength, doth giue greater aduantage to Sathans tentation; that while they labour to keepe their vow, they are tempted to ſome greater euill; as fornication, or ſuch like: for now Sathan encombreth a man on both ſides; that being weake,he muſt breake his vow and marrie, or keeping his vow muſt burne in luſt. And this teſtifieth Gregorie, as it is in their owne decrees,*par.*1. *diſtinct.*13.*c.*2. Nerui teſticulorum Leuiathan perplexi ſunt, &c. Leuiathans ſtones are wrapped in together, that is, his ſuggeſtions are folded and linked together: and he putteth this very caſe of vowes,when a man is tempted and aſſaulted on both ſides.

The Proteſtants.

OVr ſentence then appeareth to bee this: that the vowe of continencie cannot lawfully be made of all,neither is indifferently to be required of them,ſeeing all are not indued with that gift. And that it is better euen for vowed perſons, hauing raſhly preſumed beyond their ſtrength, to marrie,rather then to burne.

*Argum.*1. The Scripture euery where commandeth ſuch to vſe the benefite of mariage, that haue not the gift to liue ſingle, 1.Cor.7.2. For auoyding of fornication let euery man haue his wife: and verſ.9. If they cannot abſtaine let them marrie. Wherefore they tranſgreſſe the commandement of God,and preſume raſhly,that hauing not this gift,doe vow virginitie.

Bellarmin. Anſwer. Firſt, S.Paul wiſheth men to marrie, not for euery temptation of luſt, but when they are ready to fall into external workes of vncleannes,as into fornication:and therefore he ſaith, For auoyding of fornication let euery one haue his wife: For S.Paul felt the pricke of the fleſh, that is,the luſt of concupiſcence, and was buffeted of it, yet maried not for all that, *cap.*30. *Rhemiſt.annot.*1.*Cor.*7 *ſect.*8.

Anſw. Firſt, we ſay not that for euery light temptation which by reſiſting may be ouercome, in thoſe that haue the gifte of continencie,a man is to deſire mariage, but when he is continually enflamed with luſt, ſo that the will doth conſent: though he be not yet ſo ouercome, that he fall in outward vncleanneſſe: and this is the Apoſtles meaning when he ſaith, It is better to marrie then to burne, that is, with inward luſt when his minde is diſquieted: And ſuch a man as doth burne with ſecret concupiſcence, ſtill wraſtling with that fire, and not being able to quench it, if he refuſe to vſe the lawful remedie of marriage,is in danger alſo to fal into outward fornication.

2 Concerning Pauls example: Firſt, the place is not ſo to be vnderſtood of the luſt of concupiſcence: for it is not like, that the Apoſtle being kept vnder with hunger, colde, impriſonment, ſhould be ſo greatly tempted that way. But either it may be vnderſtood of the particular temptation to pride and vainglorie, as he himſelfe expoundeth it, verſ.7. Leaſt I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of reuelations: or elſe generally S.Paul vnderſtandeth by the fleſh, the whole maſſe of corruption, and whatſoeuer was in him that reſiſted the ſpirit: In this ſenſe he crieth out,Rom.7.Who ſhall deliuer me from this body of death! Caluin.

3 Though we yeeld that S.Paul was tempted of his concupiſcence, yet he ouercame and ſubdued it,obtayning from God,after ſome ſtriuing, grace and power to quench the ſecret fire: And ſo we denie not, but that men ought by faſting and prayer to labour for that precious gift. But if they feele the fire to burne within them ſtill,then are they to vſe the remedie preſcribed by S.Paul, that is,to marrie.

Secondly,ſaith Bellarmine, S.Paul giueth libertie of mariage onely to thoſe which were free and had not vowed continencie,*cap.*30.

Anſw. Firſt, the Apoſtles words are generall: Let euery man haue his wife. I, ſay the Rhemiſts, he ſpeaketh of thoſe that were maried before their conuerſion, that they might ſtill vſe and keepe their wiues. Yea but S. Paul ſpeaketh of all vnmaried, in the verſe next before, It is good not to touch a woman: I trow he meaneth not, it is good for a man that is maried not to touch his wife. Secondly, it is a generall libertie, which he granteth to all, verſ. 9. If they cannot containe, let them marrie: but many votaries cannot containe, as it may appeare by the vnchaſt liues of your Monkiſh rabble: therefore hauing the diſeaſe, they may vſe the remedie, that is, marrie.

The teſtimony of antiquitie in this caſe is moſt plentifull, to ſhew that raſh vowes and othes, ſuch as the vowe of chaſtitie is in him, that hath not power to keepe it, may ſafely bee broken, Concil. Toletan 8. cap. 2. Tolerabilius eſt ſtultæ promiſſionis vota reijcere, quàm per inutilium promiſſionum cuſtodiam, exhorrendam criminum implere menſuram: It is more tolerable, to reiect raſh and fooliſh vowes and promiſes, then by keeping vnprofitable promiſes, to fall into horrible ſinnes: As the monkiſh votaries did, who for that they wanted lawfull matrimonie, gaue themſelues to vnnaturall luſts. Concil. Triburienſ. cap. 21. ex Beda: Si fortè nos incautiùs iurare contigerit, quod ſcilicet obſeruatum peiorem vergeat in exitum, liberè illud mutandum nouerimus ſalubriori conſilio: If it chance that we ſweare raſhly, which oth being obſerued, will haue a worſe end, vpon more holeſome aduiſe we may freely change it. If an oth may be changed, much more a vowe, for an oth is greater.

The Ciuill law thus ſaith, Cod. lib. 5. tit. 4. leg. 23. authentic. Illicitæ rei iuramentum &c. An oath of an vnlawfull thing is not to be kept, as if one ſweare to continue in the profeſſion of ſtage plaies, &c. By the ſame reaſon alſo, whether it be a vow or an oath, that one taketh not to marrie, if he liue incontinently, it ought not to bind him.

Cod. lib. 5. tit. 35. leg. 2. Valentinian. Theodoſ. A mother could not be admitted to the tuition of her child, vnleſſe ſhe would ſweare not to marrie againe: notwithſtanding ſuch oath, ſhe is permitted by this law to marrie againe: In optione nulla cogatur; No woman ought to be enforced to her choiſe. So then after an oath made to continue a widow, which is as much as a vow, yet by the Ciuill law mariage is lawfull.

Cod. lib. 6. tit. 40. leg. 2. Iuſtinian. Whereas the law was, that a man dying and leauing a legacie to his wife vpon condition, ſhe ſhould remaine a widow, the woman could not haue the legacie, vnleſſe ſhe would ſweare not to marrie, but for procreation of children: By this conſtitution it was lawfull for the woman to enioy her husbands gift, and without any ſuch oath to marrie againe. So this conſtitution alloweth not any oath to be taken againſt mariage: but a vow and an oath are of the ſame nature.

Cod. lib. 9. tit. 8. leg. 2. A man ſwearing that he would neuer forgiue his ſeruant, but keepe him in continuall bonds, is not tyed by this oath; Alexander: no more is a man bound, that voweth to keepe his body in the perpetuall bonds of luſt and burning without mariage.

Let vs take a view of their owne Canons: Lateranenſ. ſub. Alexandro 3. part. 5. cap. 2. cap. 10. this caſe is put: A certaine woman promiſed mariage to a man being abſent, but afterward hearing more of his inhumane nature: Votum continentiæ promiſit: Shee vowed and made promiſe of continencie: it is thus determined: Tutius eſſe ducimus, vt præfata mulier, poſt fidem & votum ſimplex oblatum matrimonium contrahat, quam fornicationis reatum incurrat: Wee iudge it more ſafe, that the ſaid woman, after her ſimple vowe and faith thus giuen and made, to marrie rather, then to fall into fornication. But it will bee here anſwered, that this woman made but a ſimple or ſingle vowe; nec veſtem, nec locum mutauit, ſhee changed neither place nor garment: Marke then what followeth, Lateranenſ. part. 47. cap. 8. Pope Adriane decreeth thus: Si quis timore mortis habitum religionis aſſumpſerit & clauſtrum intrauerit, licitè poterit ad ſeculum redire: If any man for feare of death doth take the habite of religion, and goe into a clauſter, he may lawfully returne to his ſecular eſtate. Here is both a change of place and habite, and yet libertie giuen to diſſolue the vowe. If it be againe anſwered, that it was done of feare: ſo I ſay, that as this is one infirmitie, ſo there be many beſide; and if this infirmitie may breake a vow, why may not alſo other infirmities, as of incontinencie, and ſuch other? Now where as they thinke a ſimple vowe may be broken, which conſiſteth onely in the purpoſe or promiſe of the votarie, but a vowe ratified, by changing of place, habite, and profeſſion, cannot be broken, this alſo is but an idle ſhift: for a vowe vttered onely before God, though there be no ſuch outward teſtification, doth binde in conſcience, as if it were done in the preſence of many: Iacobs vowe, Geneſ. 28. was but a ſingle vowe, vttered onely in the hearing of God: and of ſuch vowes ſpeaketh the preacher, Eccleſ. 5. 3. when thou haſt vowed a vowe to God, &c. And herein their owne law helpeth vs; decret. Greg. lib. 4. tit. 7. c. 6. Celeſtin. 3. Votum ſimplex &c. A ſimple vow doth no leſſe bind before God, then a ſolemne: And againe, ſext. decretal. lib. 3. tit. 15. c. 1. Bonif. 8. Voti ſolemnitas &c. A ſolemne vow was found out onely by the conſtitution of the Church. Wherefore if mariage be lawfull after a ſimple vow, why not as well after a ſolemne?

We haue yet alſo more euident teſtimonie out of their law: decret.Greg.lib.2.tit.24.c.3. Gregor. Propoſitum non infringit,&c. He doth not breake his vow or promiſe, that changeth it into a better: wherefore he that changeth vnchaſt ſingle life, with chaſt mariage, doth not breake his vow.

Bonif.8.regu.iuris.6.Nemo poteſt ad impoſſibile ligari: No man can be bound to that is impoſſible: but for him to liue ſingle, that hath not the gift, is impoſſible; therefore he can not be bound vnto it with vow or without. Againe, regul.58. Iuramentum contra bonos mores non ligat: An oath againſt good manners bindeth not: and ſo conſequently a vow; wherefore a vow to liue without marriage in ſinfull luſt, bindeth not, being againſt good manners.

Other vowes may be altered and changed, as the vow of going in pilgrimage to Ieruſalem may be redeemed with almes, decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.34.c.1. It may be altered for the benefite of the Commonwealth, c.5. for the neceſſitie of the Church, c.7. becauſe of ſickeneſſe or pouertie, c.8. Why then may not the vow of Continencie vpon the like conſiderations be diſpenſed with. Sext. decretal.lib.3.tit.12.c.1. A vow to be buried in a certaine place, may be altered. Bonif.8. Why may not the like alteration in other vowes be admitted?

Here wanteth now nothing, but the ſeale of the Martyrs, D.Taylour holy Martyr ſheweth the vnlawfulnes of ſuch othes and vowes, whereby Prieſts and others are conſtrayned to vowe chaſtitie, and forſweare mariage by the like caſe: In Iuſtinian titulo de indicta viduitate, where it is thus written: That if one would bequeath to his wife in his teſtament a legacie vnder a condition, that ſhe ſhould neuer marrie againe, and take an oth of her for the accompliſhment of the ſame, yet ſhe may marrie againe if he die, notwithſtanding the aforeſaid condition, and oth taken and made againſt mariage: and an othe is an other manner of obligation made to God, then a papiſticall vowe made to man, *Fox.*pag.1522.

William Flower, who was firſt a profeſſed Monke, and afterward maried, proteſteth, that therein he beleeueth he did well, and according to Gods lawes, *Fox.*pag.1575. Raſh vowes then and inconſiderate, as of chaſtitie, ſingle life and ſuch like, may lawfully be diſſolued: but let vs now proceede.

Argum.2. Virginitie, and continent life is onely to be required of thoſe which haue the gift of continencie: But all haue not that gift: Ergo, the vowe of Virginitie is not indifferently to be made by any. That the gift of continencie cannot be had or obtained of all, neither reſteth in our free will, it is plaine by Scripture.

1 Math.19.12. He that is able to receiue this gift, let him receiue it: Ergo, all are not able to receiue it.

Bellarmin. Firſt, though they are not able to receiue it yet, yet they may if they will, and aske for it by prayer: for the texte is, Some haue made themſelues chaſte for the kingdome of God: whereby it appeareth that it is in the will of man, cap.31. Anſw. He ſpeaketh cleane contrarie to the texte: for Chriſt ſaith, None receiue it but to whom it is giuen; and the words are, qui capere poteſt, not, qui velit, he that can receiue, not he that will receiue. And they are ſaid to make themſelues chaſte, not becauſe it is in their owne choyce, but being enabled of God, and hauing receiued power ouer their will, they are ſaid to make themſelues chaſte, hauing receiued power by the ſpirit of God: So our Sauiour ſaith, Come vnto me all ye that are laden, Matth.11. and yet no man commeth to Chriſt, but his father firſt draweth him, Ioh.6.44. Wherefore it being a peculiar gift of God, all cannot haue it, neither are ſure to obtaine it, though they aske it by prayer, becauſe we haue no promiſe to be heard.

Rhemiſt. When a man is bound to abſtayne by vowe, or other neceſſarie occaſion, as impriſonment, baniſhment, ſickenes, no doubt, if he labour for the gift of continencie, he may haue it. Anſw. They that binde themſelues to a raſh vowe, haue no promiſe to be heard praying for continencie. Secondly, they that are driuen vnto any ſuch neceſſitie as you ſpeake of, which they are not a cauſe of themſelues, neither can auoyde, as in long and perpetuall ſicknes, it is certaine that God will giue the gift being ſought by lawfull meanes: But as for baniſhment and impriſonment, they are not of ſuch neceſſitie, but that the husband is bound to follow the wife, and the wife her husband, *Fulk.*1.Cor.7.6.

Neither are many of thoſe meanes commendable, which were vſed in Monkerie: for ſome of them were ſuperſtitious and vnlawfull, as they vſed Phiſicke and medicine to correct or ſlacke, and extinguiſh nature in them: Francis was wont to couer his bodie with yce and ſnowe; others did whip themſelues: This was not to ſubdue and tame the bodie, but to deſtroy and kill the bodie, and make it vnfit for other duties. The Scripture preſcribeth no other meanes but prayer and faſting, and labour in our vocation. Some of them againe vſed externall exerciſe of their bodie, as by faſting, by lying hard, by watching, which in themſelues were not amiſſe: but they leaue the chiefe and principall, which is the ſpirituall meanes: for the outward exerciſe of their fleſh without this, is little worth, Coloſſ.2.23.

Bellarmin. To beleeue is no leſſe the gift of God, then to liue chaſte, yet we exhorte all men to beleeue,and they doe vowe and promiſe it in baptiſme:why may they not as well vowe continencie,although it be a peculiar gifte? *cap.*31.

Anſ. They are both indeede the gifts of God, but one is neceſſarie to ſaluation, namely,to beleeue, and is promiſed to all that will ſeeke for it: But the other gift is not neceſſarie, neither hath any ſuch promiſe.

Secondly, S.Paul calleth this a proper gift: But if all men were capable of it, how could it be called a proper gift? One after this manner,another after that,ſaith the Apoſtle. But if euery man might attaine to that one gifte of continencie, they ſhould not all haue their proper gifte, but all one gifte, and after the ſame manner. And though S.Paul ſhould meane, that to liue chaſtly in wedlocke be allſo a proper gifte of God, as Bellarmine vrgeth, and we deny not: yet it remaineth ſtill,that the other is a more ſingular and proper gift;and is not therefore commonly,and indifferently beſtowed vpon all.

Thirdly, S.Paul ſaith,that a man may marrie his Virgin if neede ſo require, 1.Cor.7.37. But if euery one labouring for the gift of continencie,might obtaine it,there ſhould then be no neceſſitie of mariage: which the Apoſtle here affirmeth. *Capitul.Græcar.Synod.*21.*collect.à Martin. Bracarenſ.Epiſcop.*and it is alleaged,*decret.part.*1.*diſt.*55.*cap.*9. Si quis ſanus non per diſciplinam religionis, & abſtinentiæ, ſed per abſciſionem à Deo plaſmati corporis exiſtimans poſſe à ſe carnales concupiſcentias amputari,caſtrauerit ſe,Clericus ne fiat: If any man being ſound and in health,doth caſtrate or geld himſelfe not by the diſcipline of religion, and abſtinence, but by mangling his bodie framed of God,thinking that it lieth in him to cut off carnall concupiſcence, let him not be a Clergie man. Here their opinion is reproued that thinke euery man hath power to be continent.

Further,the decree of *Martin. Cauſ.*27.*quæſt.*1.*c.*8. witneſſeth in theſe words,ſpeaking of a certaine widow,*Si ſe continere non poterat,&c.*If ſhe could not containe,ſhe was not forbid to marrie. And againe,*Cauſ.*32.*c.*11.*Si poſt nuditatem,&c.*If S.Paul after nakedneſſe, hunger,faſting,priſon, ſtripes,crieth out,O vnhappie man that I am,who ſhall deliuer me from this bodie of ſinne; do you think your ſelfe ſecure? *rectius fuerat hominem ſubiiſſe coniugium,&c.*it had been better to haue entred into mariage with other men,then ſtriuing to climbe higher,to fall downe to hell. Wee ſee by this decree of theirs, what an hard thing it is to attaine vnto virginitie, and that euery one cannot haue it.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr hath put to his ſeale: If we haue infirmities,that draw vs from the lawes of God,let vs cure them with the remedies that God hath made; if thou burne,marrie: for God hath promiſed thee no chaſtitie,as long as thou maiſt vſe the remedie that he hath ordained: no more then he hath promiſed to ſlake thine hunger without meate: now to aske of God more then he hath promiſed, commeth of a falſe faith, &c. Fox pag.1251.col.1.

Laſtly,the Rhemiſts ſay,that the mariage of thoſe that haue vowed,is the worſt ſort of incontinencie and fornication,1.*Corinth.*7.*ſect.*8.

Auguſtine ſaith cleane contrarie: *Non ipſæ nuptiæ talium damnandæ iudicantur,&c.*The mariages of ſuch are not condemned, but the violating of their vow is condemned,not becauſe they afterward entred into the league of mariage, but becauſe they did breake the firſt faith of continencie. Auguſtine ſaith not, that ſuch mariages are no mariages, but plaine adulterie and fornication: but maketh the mariage lawfull,and reproueth their raſhnes before in making,and their vnſtedfaſtnes now in breaking their vowes.

THE FIFT QVESTION, CONCERNING MONAſticall perſons which doe enter into that profeſſion.

THere are foure ſorts of people which the Papiſts doe offer great wrong vnto, in drawing them to the profeſſion of Monkerie: Firſt,vnto the yonger ſort, which haue libertie to marrie. Secondly, to the children and ſonnes whom they make Monkes without conſent of their parents. Thirdly,they ſay,married perſons,by mutuall conſent,may betake themſelues to a Monkes habite. Fourthly,if mariage be contracted,not conſummate or finiſhed, they may one leaue another without conſent firſt had.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE YOVNGER ſort are to be admitted to profeſſe Monkerie.

The Papiſts.

IF they be come to the yeeres of diſcretion,they may,men or women at any age,take vpon them the vow of Monkerie,*Bellarm.cap.*35. 90. Error.

1 Matth.19.14.*Suffer little children to come vnto me: Ergo,*young men and maides may become Monkes,Bellarm.

Anſ. Firſt, the text ſpeaketh of little children: but by your confeſſion, they muſt be of yeeres of diſcretion that ſhould enter into your profeſſion: ſo are not little children. Secondly, as though none could come to Chriſt, but through a Monkes cowle: nay, I would they of all men did not goe furtheſt off from Chriſt. It followeth alſo in the text, Of ſuch is the kingdome of heauen: ſo by this reaſon, heauen gates ſhould bee open onely to Monkes and Friers: and this is the right hereſie of the Pelagians, and Manichees, that promiſed the kingdome of God not to any, but thoſe that caſt away their riches.

2 Iohn Baptiſt liued from a childe in the wilderneſſe: Ergo, lawfull for young ones to profeſſe Monkerie.

Anſ. Firſt, Iohns example is extraordinarie, as his office and calling was ſingular, and therefore is no more to bee imitated and followed in his ſolitarie life, then in his diet of Locuſts and wilde honie: He ſprang alſo in his mothers wombe; ſo I thinke all Monkes and Eremites doe not. Secondly, it is not certaine at what yeeres Iohn entred into the wilderneſſe: for hee was thirtie yeere old when he came and preached in the wilderneſſe, as Matthew writeth, 3. 1.

The Proteſtants.

Though we ſhould graunt, that a Monaſticall life were in ſome perſons, and at ſome times tolerable among Chriſtians; yet of all other the younger ſort, in whom luſt doth raigne, were moſt vnfit, and not to be admitted vnto that kinde of life.

Argum. 1. Saint Paul would haue no widow to be choſen vnder 60. yeeres, 1. Timoth. 5. 9. and I will the younger to marrie, verſ. 16. Ergo, it is contrarie to Saint Pauls rule, to ſuffer any ſuch to make vowes of continencie.

Rhemiſt. anſwere. Firſt, it was but a rule for that time, when as yet there were no Monaſteries nor diſcipline, but young widowes wandred vp and downe idlely.

Anſ. Firſt, the ſame cauſe that young women had to marrie then, they haue now; and therefore the rule is generall. Secondly, as though the walles of Monaſteries were able to keepe in virginitie: no, it is notoriouſly knowne, that vnchaſt life hath ſcaled the walles of Nunneries, crept in at windowes, and found muſes in the ground.

2 Saint Paul (ſay they) counſelleth young widowes to marrie, not young virgins, which hauing not experience of luſt, are not ſo greatly tempted.

Anſ. How chaſte your cloyſter women haue been, and free from theſe tentations, the ſtories of former times make mention; and the examples of ſo many vnchaſte milch-Nunnes, and filthie Monkes and Friers, are a ſufficient proofe, Fulk. 1. Timoth. 5. ſect. 11. But all theſe ſhifts notwithſtanding Saint Pauls rule muſt ſtand, that no widowes muſt be admitted vnder 60. yeere old.

Bellarmine alſo anſwereth, that the Apoſtles meaning is, that the younger women ſhould be refuſed, not from the vow of continencie, but not to bee of the number of the widowes, which were maintained of the Church.

Contra. Firſt, this is flat oppoſite to the Apoſtle, who would haue the younger women to marrie, verſ. 14. how then is it like they were votaries? therfore it is euident, that they are excluded from vow making, ſeeing they are counſelled by the Apoſtle to marrie.

To this he againe replieth, that where the Apoſtle ſaith, I would haue the younger marrie, that it is not a precept, but a counſell.

Contra. Firſt, it is a charge and commaundement which the Apoſtle giueth, that they ſhould marrie, in reſpect of their frailtie, becauſe diuers were turned alreadie after Sathan by their incontinencie, and gaue occaſion to the aduerſarie to ſpeake euill. Wherefore to auoide theſe things he not onely aduiſeth, but willeth and chargeth, they ſhould marrie. Secondly, though it bee but a counſell, yet it will follow, that the Apoſtle gaue counſell to them to marrie, which had vowed ſingle life, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, that the younger women were not barred from vowing continencie.

Secondly, if the younger women are not admitted to bee of the number of the almes widowes for feare of incontinencie, they were as vnfit to enter into any vow or profeſſion of ſingle life. And be it graunted, that it might be a greater offence for publike widowes, then priuate votaries, to breake their vow; yet in the other the offence were great enough: and therefore the Apoſtles rule of their age ought to be obſerued in both.

Argum. 2. The Manichees tooke occaſion hereby to inſult againſt the Catholikes, becauſe they admitted ſo many virgins to the profeſſion of ſingle life: Certatim ad hanc profeſſionem eas incitatis ſuaſionibus veſtris, vt iam pene maior in eccleſijs omnibus virginum apud vos, quam mulierum numeroſitas habeatur, Auguſt. cont. Fauſtum. 30. 4. Ye labour (ſay the Manichees) to draw women of euerie hand to this profeſſion by your perſwaſions, that now in your Churches, the number of profeſſed virgins exceedeth the number of women. And hereby the Manichees that extolled virginitie, and condemned mariage, were induced to thinke that the Catholike Biſhops alſo were of their opinion.

The Imperiall law enioyneth,that no woman bee admitted to bee a Deaconeſſe of the Church vnder 50.or 60.yeeres,according to the precept of the Apoſtle,Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.9.Theodoſ.

We haue alſo for this point very euident teſtimonie of their owne law: Clemens epiſtol.1.S.Peter is brought in ſpeaking thus: Ad preſbyteros fiant iſta, ante omnia vt pudicitiæ ſtudentes, adoleſcentes nuptijs iungant,quo calorem feruentis ætatis,coniugali lege præueniant: item iuniores viduas nuptijs copulate: Theſe inſtructions concerne the prieſts, firſt of all, as men carefull to preſerue chaſtitie,let them ioyne young men in mariage, that the heate of burning youth may by the matrimoniall law be preuented: likewiſe let the younger virgins be coupled in mariage.

Concil.ſub Syluestro, cap.10. Vt vidua non niſi 72.annorum eligatur: nulla porrò ſchemata monachorum oportet fieri niſi poſt 25.ætatis annum propter ſcandala,iam euacuato omni feruore diaboli, vt inueniat ſibi mundum vas ſpiritus ſanctus: That a widow bee not choſen vnder 72.yeere: let none take the habite of a Monke before he be 25.yeere old,to auoide offence,that the diuelliſh heate of the fleſh being euacuate,the holy Ghoſt may finde a cleane veſſell.

Concil.Agathenſ.can.19. Sanctimoniales, quantumlibet mores earum probati ſint, ante annum ætatis quadrageſimum non velentur: Holy virgins,though their behauiour bee neuer ſo much approoued, let them not bee vailed before the fortith yeere of their age. This is alleaged in their owne decrees,cauſ.20.qu.1.c.13.

And many ſuch Canons and decrees might bee alleadged, againſt the entring of the younger ſort into Monkiſh profeſſion.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER CHILdren may enter into profeſſion of Monkerie without their parents conſent.

The Papiſts.

91.Error.

IF they be of ſufficient age,as the men of 14.yere at the leaſt, the women of 12.and their parents be not driuen to any ſuch neceſſitie, that they neede their childrens helpe, they may without parents conſent enter into Monkerie.

*Argum.*1. God ſaid to Abraham, Get thee out of thy countrie, and from thy fathers houſe, Gen.12. And Chriſt,Matth.10.Whoſoeuer loueth father or mother more then me,is not worthie of me: *Ergo,*children may become Monkes,without their fathers leaue,Bellar.cap.36.

*Anſ.*Firſt,who would haue thought that Abraham was a Monke, but that the Ieſuite ſaith it? Secondly,by the ſame reaſon a man may not leaue his parents onely, but goe out of his countrie. Thirdly, Abraham was 75.yeere old at that time,when he went out of Haran,verſ.4.*Ergo,*we will conclude yͭ none ought to be made Monks before thoſe yeers.Fourthly, whē God calleth any mā to a Monkiſh life,as Abraham had an eſpeciall calling of God,we will giue him good leaue to go.

Concerning the other ſaying of our Sauiour,it maketh nothing for you. Firſt, Chriſt ſpeaketh of perſecution, when a man ought not for loue of his friends to denie Chriſt: but,I trow you will not graunt,that your Monkiſh life is perſecution: and yet it is after a ſort; for the Locuſts, which are none other but Monkes and Friers,Apocal.9. doe bite and ſting like ſerpents, that is, doe ſecretly wound mens conſciences. Secondly,a man may leaue his parents,as Chriſt commandeth,though he dwell in the ſame houſe with them: that is,by ſetting his loue and affection on heauenly things. Thirdly,do al go to Chriſt that come into your Monaſteries? nay,I would they went not from Chriſt: for they liue after another rule, then Chriſts: Francis your great founder erected a new ſect of Monkerie, and found out a new rule for them, which he called *regulam Euangelicam,*the rule of the Goſpell: as though Chriſts rule were not ſufficient.

*Argum.*2. Here the conſtitution of Iuſtinian may bee obiected, Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.42. which is, that a ſonne,*etiam inuito patre,*againſt his fathers will, may become a Monke. To the which I anſwere: firſt, this ſame conſtitution alſo decreeth, that a ſonne againſt his fathers will profeſſing monaſticall life,may ſucceed him in his teſtament,& to be his heire,*nullo eis impedimento,&c.*their ſanctimoniall conuerſation being no let vnto them. If they will haue this law ſtand in force for the one,why not alſo for the other? as it ſeemeth to make with them in one point,ſo in the other concerning voluntarie and profeſſed pouertie of Monkes,it maketh againſt them. Secondly, the Conſtitutions of *Iuſtinian,*which were laſt inſerted into the Code, more then 500.yeere after Chriſt, doe ſomewhat ſauour of the ſuperſtition which began then to ſet in foote, and therefore are not of that authoritie which the more ancient Imperials haue. Thirdly, this conſtitution is contrarie to other Imperiall lawes of greater antiquitie: as Alexander made a law, Cod.lib.8.tit.47.leg.3. That a father might chaſtiſe his ſonne if he offended him,and if he ſo continued, the Preſident,at the appointment of his father,ſhould more ſeuerely puniſh him.This law permitteth not the ſonne to bee diſobedient to his father without due correction: but to enter into a profeſſion to his diſlike,is diſobedience: Ergo, by the law not tolerable. Likewiſe, tit.49.leg.4. Pater in- uitus non cogitur,&c. The father againſt his will cannot bee conſtrained, no not by the Princes letters to ſet free or manumit his ſonne: but he is manumitted by entring into Monkerie againſt his fathers will. This then is contrarie to the law: and thus euery Abbot and Monke ſhall preſume to doe more then the Emperour himſelfe challengeth.

The Proteſtants.

CHildren ought not by the law of God to make any vow of ſingle and continent life without the conſent and liking of their parents, Luther. Pet. Martyr, lib. de cælibat. & votis.

Argum.1. By the law of Moſes the father had power to diſallow the vowes which the daughter made being in his houſe, Numb. 30. 6. which law was not ceremonious: for it was grounded vpon the Morall law, which commaunded all obedience and dutie of the children to the parents. And that it is not abrogate, it appeareth, becauſe the ſame law is renued by S. Paul, 1. Corinth. 7. verſ. 36. 37. where the Apoſtle referreth the whole matter of keeping a virgin, or placing of her in mariage to the will of the father; yet ſo, that he muſt haue regard vnto the neceſſitie, the eſtate and condition of his virgin. Both theſe places doe apertly prooue, that neither the childe can bee beſtowed in mariage, nor vowed to virginitie, without the conſent and determination of the parents.

Argum.2. The father hath as great power ouer his ſonne, as the maſter ouer his ſeruant: but the ſeruant cannot take vpon him the profeſſion of Monkerie without the conſent of his maſter. Ergo, &c.

The ſecond part of the reaſon is proued both by the Ciuill and Canon law: firſt, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 16. Honor. Theodoſ. Ruſticus, &c. A rurall ſeruant being made a Clerke, is bound to ſerue his maſter by a ſufficient ſubſtitute. But more euidently it appeareth by the conſtitution of Anthemius, leg. 34. Iubemus aſcriptitiorum, &c. We wil that no ſeruant make choiſe of a ſolitarie life without the conſent of his maſter: if he doe, his maſter ſhall haue the ſame power ouer him, which he hath ouer other ſeruants.

See alſo for their owne law the decree of Gelaſius, That ſeruants entring into Monaſteries without conſent of their maſters or patrones, ſhould be reſtored vnto them, decret. part. 1. diſt. 54. c. 12.

Likewiſe, Concil. Chalced. can. 4. Decreuimus, &c. Wee haue decreed that no ſeruant bee receiued into a Monaſterie, without the knowledge and leaue of his maſter.

The firſt part of the argument is denied by Bellarmine, that ſonnes to their parents are not in like ſubiection, as ſeruants to their maſters; and therefore haue more power of themſelues, then ſeruants haue.

Contra. Though children are not in ſuch ſeruile ſubiection, for there is one feare of children, an other of ſeruants; yet the father hath as great power ouer the perſons of their children being within age, as ouer ſeruants: becauſe the law of nature, which bindeth ſonnes, is ſtronger then the law of men, which maketh ſeruants: and parents haue greater power ouer their owne fleſh, then ouer ſtrangers.

Let vs heare what authoritie Auguſtine yeeldeth to the father ouer his children: Agite vicem noſtram in domibus veſtris: Epiſcopus inde appellatus eſt quia ſuperintendit: vnuſquiſque ergo in domo ſua, ſi caput eſt domui ſuæ, debet ad eum pertinere epiſcopatus officium, de Sanct. Ser. 51. You (ſaith Auguſtine their Biſhop) muſt ſupplie our ſtead in your houſes: a Biſhop or Superintendent, is ſo called becauſe he ouerſeeth: therefore euery houſeholder, being the head of his houſe, ought to play the Biſhop in his houſe. The father then is a Biſhop ouer his children: ſhall any man then dare to take any out of his houſe, that is his Biſhopricke, or any ſheepe out of his fold, without the Biſhop and ſhepheards conſent.

The teſtimonie alſo of their owne law in this caſe is very cleere: Si puella in puerili ætate, &c. If a maiden in her childhood, or vnder yeeres, doth binde her ſelfe with an oth in her fathers houſe, without the knowledge of her father, if her father, ſo ſoone as he heareth of it, doth gainſay, her vow and oth is voyd, cauſ. 32. qu. 2. c. 14.

Likewiſe, Bonif. 8. ſext. decr. lib. 3. tit. 12. c. 4. Filius pro anima, &c. The ſonne can make choiſe of nothing concerning his ſoule, without conſent of his father, though he may chooſe ſepulture for his bodie.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER MARIED PERſons may with mutuall conſent become votaries.

The Papiſts.

92. Error. WIth mutuall conſent the man and the wife may ſeparate themſelues, and vow and promiſe ſingle life for euer, ſo long as they both ſhall liue, Bellar. cap. 37.

Argum.1. Marie and Ioſeph were perfitly man and wife, yet by mutuall conſent they liued continently all their dayes: Ergo, it is lawfull for maried couples to ſeparate themſelues for euer, both agreeing thereunto, *Bellarm.cap.*37.

Anſw. 1. It appeareth by the text, that there was no ſuch thing purpoſed by Ioſeph, before he was admoniſhed by the Angell in a dreame, but that, as ſhe was already betrothed, ſo there was an intent on Ioſephs part, that they ſhould come together, Matth.1.18. but that in the meane time Marie was found with childe by the holy Ghoſt: and ſo from that time Ioſeph being a iuſt man neuer knew his wife: there was no ſuch purpoſe or vow before.

2 That this was an extraordinarie example, who ſeeth it not? When any man ſhall be admoniſhed by an Angell as Ioſeph was, and ſhall haue the like cauſe as Ioſeph had to abſtaine, which ſhall neuer be, he may be bold to doe as Ioſeph did.

*Argum.*2. I will not here conceale a certaine law of *Iuſtinian.Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*42. whereby it is prouided, that if the husband or wife, Religionis cauſa à coniugio receſſerit, &c. Do for religion ſake depart from marriage, and chooſe ſolitarie life, the other ſhall haue ſuch dower, or gift, as if the partie ſo departed were dead.

Anſw. This law ſeemeth to allow of the departure of the married parties, euen without conſent each of other, for it ſpeaketh of the departure of one of the parties onely: and thus Bellarmine interpreteth this law, and refuteth it alſo, holding it to be a great error, that either partie ſhould depart without mutuall conſent: wherefore ſince that this law is refuſed by them, I ſhall not need to refute it.

The Proteſtants.

THey that are once ioyned together in mariage, and haue made a couenant each to other before God, cannot ſeparate themſelues though they both conſent, there being no other cauſe, but a purpoſe of ſingle life for more holynes ſake.

*Argum.*1. It is flat contrarie to S.Pauls rule, 1.Cor.7.5. Defraud not your ſelues, except it be with conſent for a time, that you may giue your ſelues to faſting and prayer, and againe come together, leaſt Sathan tempte you for your incontinencie. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith directly: they ſhould but ſeparate themſelues for a time. Secondly, we doe thus reaſon out of his words: There is no cauſe of ſeparation, but to be giuen to faſting and prayer; but this may be done by a ſeparation for a time: neither is it neceſſarie we ſhould alwayes be giuen to faſting and prayer, but vpon ſpeciall occaſion: therefore perpetuall ſeparation is not needfull. Thirdly, they that are long ſeparated, are ſubiect to fall into tentation: the ſame cauſe therfore that moued them firſt to marrie, for auoyding of incontinencie, ought to moue them to come together againe: Therefore it is not good nor lawfull they ſhould ſeparate themſelues for euer.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle ſaying, This I ſpeake by way of indulgence or permiſſion, verſ.6. ſheweth that he would rather, they ſhould abſtaine altogether; yet in reſpect of their frailtie he permitteth, that they come together againe: ſo then, they that do ſeparate themſelues at once for all, do that which is beſt agreeable to the Apoſtles meaning, *cap.*30.

Contra. Firſt, it is vntrue, that S.Paul had rather the married ſhould be ſeparated altogether: for where he wiſheth that all men were as himſelfe, he ſpeaketh directly to the widowes, and vnmarried, verſ.8. and not to them, which were married: and againe, he ſhould be contrary to himſelfe, verſ.24. Let euery man, wherein he was called, abide: and it followeth verſ.27. Art thou bound to a wife, ſeeke not to be looſed? wherefore they that are married, ought to remaine in that eſtate which they are called vnto. Secondly, this then, which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh by way of indulgence, is not to be referred to their comming together againe, for the Apoſtle hath for that a direct commandement, verſ.10. I commaund, not I, but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband: and againe, verſ.5. Defraud not one another: which is a precept, as Bellarmine confeſſeth; but if they ſhould be ſeparated altogether, they ſhould one defraud another: wherefore this permiſſion belongeth to the ſecond verſe, where the Apoſtle to auoid fornication, granteth the remedie of mariage to euery one, that hath not the other gift.

*Argum.*2. That which God hath coupled, no man ought to put aſunder: but they that are maried haue made a couenant to God, Pro.2.17. as well as to themſelues, and are ioyned by Gods law together: Ergo, they cannot diſſolue their mariage by their owne power and will, the Lord hauing an intereſt therein.

Bellarmine ſaith, that by this ſeparation mariage is not diſſolued. Anſw. It is as much diſſolued, as by your law in caſes of diuorce: for theſe are their words: For aduoutrie one may diſmiſſe another, but neyther partie can marrie againe for any cauſe during life, *Rhemiſt.Math.*19.*ſect.*4. So ye allow onely a kind of diſmiſſion in the caſe of adulterie, and ſo you do in the vow of continencie: and thus you make this cauſe as forcible as the other, to breake off matrimoniall dutie, which is contrary to the Goſpell.

Auguſtine thus writeth, *Non licet excepta cauſa fornicationis coniugem à coniuge dirimi, nec ſterilem coniugem fas eſt relinquere, vt fæcunda ducatur, de nupt. & concupiſcen. Lib.*1.*cap.*10. It is not lawfull for maried couples, one to be ſeparate from another, vnleſſe it be for fornication : nor to leaue a barren wife to marrie a fruitfull. Therefore if fornication onely be a iuſt cauſe of finall ſeparation, there can be no other : If there were any other, it is moſt like it ſhould be for procreation of children : But neither for that cauſe is a man to leaue his wife : Ergo, for no other.

Nicholaus 1. *de matrimon. can.*7. Hi, qui matrimonium ſani contraxerunt, &c. They, which were ſound when they maried, if afterward one of them chance to be mad or franticke, or hath any other infirmitie : as if hee bee made blinde by his enemies, maymed in his bodie, or cut in his priuie members, for none of theſe cauſes is their mariage to bee diſſolued. But thoſe are greater lets and impediments to mariage, then mariage is or can bee to the exerciſe of religion : therefore not for any vowe of continencie is marriage to bee diſolued, or any ſeparation to bee admitted.

And yet we haue clearer euidence out of their owne law, *decret.p.*2.*cauſ.*33.*qu.*5.*c.*11. Vota abſtinentia, qua mulier &c. The vowes of abſtinence, which the wife made by her husbands leaue, if he afterward forbid, ſhe is not bound to keepe. By this Canon it is not lawfull for the wife, no not with the husbands conſent to become a Votarie. *Decret. Greg.lib.*2.*tit.*24.*c.*24. This caſe is put, a certaine man and his wife do ſweare each to other, that they would neuer deſire one the others company againe : afterward the man would haue receiued his wife, ſhe refuſed, ſaying, ſhe would be a Saracene firſt &c: Innocentius 3. thus reſolueth the caſe, that if the man could not be perſwaded to liue ſingle, the woman ſhould be enforced by excommunication to returne vnto him. If an oath then do not hold as touching ſeparation of the husband and the wife by conſent, no more ſhall a vow bind.

Likewiſe *decret.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*32.*c.*1. Alexander 3. this caſe is propounded: the husband in the preſence of diuers Prieſtes and Monkes, by the licence of his wife profeſſeth Monaſticall life: if his wife afterward ſuſpected not to liue continently deſire her husband, Vi poteſt & debet de monaſterio reuocari : The man may and ought to be fetched out of his Monaſterie. Ergo, there can be no finall ſeparation in mariage, no not by conſent, by their owne Canon law.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER MARIAGE contracted not conſummate, may without conſent be broken for the vow of continencie.

The Papiſts.

93.Error. THeir opinion is, that if the mariage be contracted only and ratified, but not yet conſummate, by the parties comming together, it is lawfull for either of them without the others conſent to vowe chaſtitie, *cap.*38. Bellarm.

His reaſon is, becauſe it is lawfull for a man to paſſe from a leſſe perfect ſtate of life to a more perfect, if it may be done without detriment, as this may be : for yet they haue no children, and the partie may as wel be maried to another, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, a ſingle life is not alwayes the perfecter ſtate, nor to all, as it is not to them that haue not the gift to containe, as it is moſt like he hath not, that is contracted, and hath made promiſe of mariage : for then all this needed not. Secondly, though there be none of thoſe impediments named, yet there is a greater : namely, their faith and promiſe made each to other before God, which they ought not to violate. Thirdly, S. Paul ſaith, If thou be bound to a wife, ſeeke not to be looſed, 1.Cor.7.27. But they that are eſpouſed one to the other, are bound ; vnleſſe you will ſay, that the couenant made by them vnto God, Pro.2.17. bindeth not.

*Argum.*2. There is a double bond in Matrimonie, a carnall and ſpirituall, as the carnall is diſſolued by the temporall death, ſo the ſpirituall is by the ſpirituall death ; ſuch is the Monaſticall profeſſion, whereby a man dieth to the whole world, in renouncing his goods, *Bellarm.cap.*38. *ration.*2.

Anſw. Firſt, if to renounce the goods of the world, be to die to the world, then your Clergie ſhould thus die vnto the world, as well as your Monkes ; as your owne decree teſtifieth, *Cauſ.*1. *qu.*2.*c.*6. Qui opibus ſuis, &c. They that can be maintained by their owne goods, if they liue of the ſtipends of the Church, commit ſacriledge: wherefore your Orders are as able to diſſolue a contract of mariage, as Monkerie, which notwithſtanding you denie. Secondly, if to be a Monke, is to die to the world, then euery Monke ſhall be ſaued : for they that die with Chriſt, ſhall alſo liue with him. Rom.6.8. But I thinke they dare not ſay ſo of all Monks, ſeeing they denie not but that the Pope may be a reprobate : and yet S. Peters chaire will as ſoone bring them to heauen, as a Monkes coule. Thirdly, the ſpirituall death may be euen in mariage, vnleſſe Bellarmine wil ſay, that in marriage is no ſaluation (for where there is not dying with Chriſt, there is no liuing with him:) If a man then that is married, may die vnto ſinne, then it is falſe, that the ſpirituall death doth diſſolue the ſpirituall bond of mariage.

The Proteſtants.

MAtrimonie whether ratified onely by lawfull contract or eſpouſals, or conſummate, ought not any way to be broken with conſent or without,for Monaſticall profeſſion.

*Argum.*1. Our reaſon is, becauſe it is perfect mariage already in ſubſtance and before God, which is ratified by contract onely and ſolemne vowe and couenant made each to other: And being thus betrothed,the one giueth power of their bodie to the other,and now they are no more free.That this mariage is perfect before God,and in ſubſtance,it appeareth by the law of Moſes,by the which a man defiling a maide betrothed, was to ſuffer death, as well, as if he had committed vncleannes with a woman already maried,Deuteron.22.verſ.22.23.And Matth.1.18.Marie that was but betrothed to Ioſeph,is by the Angell called his wife,verſ.20.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that notwithſtanding the contract,the wife is not bound to yeeld the due debt of mariage to her husband,if it be a detriment to her ſpirituall good,as in this caſe it is,when ſhe entreth into Monaſticall profeſſion.

Contra. Firſt, this reaſon maketh as much for the diſſolution of mariage conſummate,as of the contract only: for the temporal good of mariage alſo muſt yeeld to the ſpirituall good.Secondly, we denie that it tendeth to any ſpiritual good, for monaſtical life to violate a contract made before God: firſt,becauſe the partie is not ſure to haue the gift of continencie,hauing ſo lately contracted and agreed to vſe the remedie of mariage, feeling her owne weakenes: and ſo ſhe is more like to fall into a ſpirituall euill, to liue in continuall burning and luſt of the fleſh,as many of their milch-Nunnes did. Secondly, becauſe no ſpirituall good is to bee hoped for contrarie to Gods ordinance, which euen vpon the contract giueth the husband power ouer the wife, and maketh her bound vnto him as long as ſhe liueth; 1.Cor.7.39. The wife is bound to the husband,as long as he liueth: but ſhe that is eſpouſed onely is a wife, as was ſhewed before in the example of Marie. Thirdly,the Apoſtle ſaith,verſ.27. Art thou bound to a wife? ſeeke not to be looſed: but he that is contracted onely, is bound: Ergo, he ought vpon no occaſion to ſeeke to be looſed.

*Argum.*2. The vow of continencie made in the taking of orders, non eſt efficax, is not of force to diſſolue matrimonie before contracted, as *Iohn.*22.decreeth, *Extrauag.tit.6.c.*1. Ergo, neither monaſticall profeſſion.

Bellarmine anſwereth,the reaſon is not alike, becauſe mariage is repugnant to monaſticall life of it ſelfe ſimply: but to orders it is repugnant onely by the decree of the Church.

Contra. Firſt,we take it then as graunted, that by the word of God mariage is not repugnant to orders,but only by the conſtitution of the Church. Secondly,Monaſticall life alſo is an humane inuention, as well as the ſingle life of the Clergie: for S.Paul knew no ſuch profeſſion, when he giueth euery man leaue, without exception,to haue his wife, 1.Cor.7.2. Thirdly, though wee ſhould graunt,that Monkerie bindeth more from mariage then Orders,yet the vow making bindeth as well in the one as the other: for to marrie contrarie to vow, is ſimply repugnant in their opinion: wherefore ſeeing that a vow after contract in Orders diſſolueth it not,neither ſhall a vow made in Monkerie.

Concerning the Ciuill law,it may appeare,*Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*42. that the law did puniſh ſuch, as being contracted,betooke themſelues to ſolitarie life: the man loſt all his tokens and gifts ſent to his ſpouſe,and ſhe was to render double the value of the tokens receiued: although this law is abrogated by Iuſtinian the laſt law-maker of the Emperours, whoſe times ſauoured of ſuperſtition.

Their own law is alſo ſomewhat doubtful: *Decr.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*32.*c.*14.*Innocen.*3.though he dare not ſwerue from the practiſe of his predeceſſors,yet deliuereth this to be his iudgement: *Poteſt non inconſulte videri,&c.*It may with good aduiſement bee thought, that matrimonie contracted by words of the preſent, *in nullo caſu,&c.*in no caſe ſhould be diſſolued as long as the parties liue.

Likewiſe,*lib.*4.*tit.*1.*c.*16.*Alexander.*3.thus determineth, That if a man ſweare to be contracted to a woman within a certaine ſpace, and in the meane time haue a purpoſe to liue monaſtically, he ſhould firſt, to ſaue his oth,performe the contract. If then the vow or promiſe of monaſticall life be not able to diſſolue a promiſe of a contract, much leſſe the contract it ſelfe, which is more then a promiſe of mariage.

The Maſter of Sentences alſo is of opinion,that a contract made,per verba de præſenti,by words vttered of the preſent, cannot without common conſent be broken,*lib.*4.*diſt.*27.I.

Eſpenceus alſo a reuerent writer among the Papiſts holdeth,that mariage whether conſummate or contracted onely,ought not for any profeſſion of monaſticall life to bee diſſolued, *lib.*6.*cap.*4. de continent.

*Concil.Ancyran.can.*11.ſic. Deſponſatas puellas,&c. We thinke it meete,that if a maide eſpouſed to one, be defiled of another, that ſhe ſhould be reſtored, to whom ſhe was eſpouſed, although it be certaine, that ſhe hath loſt the flower of her Virginitie by the other. But the looſing of her Virginitie is more forcible to diſſolue the contract, then the vow of chaſtitie, for it is able to diſſolue mariage conſummate, and ſo is not the other without mutuall conſent, as the Ieſuite affirmeth: therefore by this canon, if the more forceable cauſe cannot breake the eſpouſals, much leſſe can the other not ſo forceable.

2 Auguſtine ſaith, Coniuges fidem ſibi pariter debent: Cui fidei tantum iuris tribuit Apoſtolus, vt eam poteſtatem appellaret dicens, Mulier non habet poteſtatem ſui corporis ſed vir, &c. Maried couples doe owe faith and troth one to the other: which mutuall troth the Apoſtle maketh ſuch account of, that he giueth it the name of power, ſaying: The woman hath not power of her owne bodie, but the man, and likewiſe the man, &c. Auguſtine ſaith, that by the very plighting of their troth each to other, they receiue mutuall power and intereſt one of anothers bodie. But this troth was plighted before the conſummation of their mariage: Ergo, they had one intereſt in another then, and can doe nothing one without the conſent of the other: de bon. coniugal. cap. 3.

THE SIXT QVESTION, CONCERNING the rules and diſcipline of Monaſticall life.

THis queſtion hath foure parts. Firſt, of the ſolitarie and ſeuere kind of life in Monkes and Eremites. Secondly, of their canonicall houres appoynted for prayer. Thirdly, of their habite and apparell. Fourthly, of their maintenance, whether it ought to come by their labour.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE ſolitarie and auſtere life of Monkes, and of Eremites.

The Papiſts.

94. Error. TO liue in ſolitarie places, to weare ſack-cloth, to be giuen continually to faſting, to lie hard, to fare meanely, and by other ſuch wayes to puniſh and afflict the bodie, they ſay, are notable meanes to bring the ſoule to the contemplation of heauenly things.

Argum. 1. Iohn Baptiſt liued in the deſart, fared courſely, and was barely apparelled, hee ate Locuſt and wilde honie, and wore a garment of Camels haire: he was a right paterne of true Eremites, Bellarm. cap. 39. lib. 2. de Monach.

Anſw. Firſt, Iohns life was not ſo auſtere, as they make it: for the place where he liued was not ſo ſolitarie, but that there were villages and houſes not farre off, as it may appeare by the peoples reſort vnto him: his apparell was of Camels hayre, and was ſomewhat courſe, yet no ſuch thing as ſack-cloth, or haire-cloth; for of the fineſt of the Camels haire Chamblets and Groggrains are made, that are had in price amongſt vs: his diet alſo in eating Locuſts and wilde honie was vſuall in that countrey. Secondly, we deny not but Iohn liued an auſtere life, becauſe he was a preacher of repentance, and had a ſingular office to prepare men for the comming of Chriſt: Therefore his calling being extraordinarie, he cannot be an author of an ordinary calling among Chriſtians. Thirdly, ſeeing Chriſt came eating and drinking, liued amongſt men, and was apparelled as others were, why ſhould Chriſtians rather chooſe to imitate the Baptiſt, who had no office, or miniſterie in the Goſpell, Matth. 11. 11. then our Sauiour Chriſt, whoſe life and doctrine is for our imitation?

Fulk. Mat. 3. ſect. 1.

Bellarmine replieth, notwithſtanding this which hath been alleaged, that Iohn verely liued in the deſart and ſolitarie wilderneſſe, where was no reſort, nor frequencie of people at all; which he would proue by theſe two reaſons chiefly: firſt, becauſe it is ſaid, Luk. 1. 80. That he dwelled in the wilderneſſe, till the time he ſhould ſhew himſelfe to Iſrael: but if he had been in his fathers houſe, he could not haue been vnknowne to Iſrael. Secondly, becauſe they aske if he were Elias: but if he had been conuerſant in his fathers houſe, they would not haue doubted, knowing whoſe ſonne he was, cap. 39.

Anſ. To the firſt reaſon I anſwere, that it followeth not, Iohn was not yet knowne to Iſrael; Ergo, he liued in the wilderneſſe: for our Sauiour was not knowne to Iſrael, till he was 30. yeere old, when he began to preach; yet liued he not in the wilderneſſe, but in his parents houſe, and was obedient vnto them, Luk. 2. 51. To the ſecond, our anſwer is, that they knew alſo whence Ieſus was, Ioh. 7. 27. yet they were doubtfull who he ſhuld be, whether the Prophet, or the Chriſt, ver. 40. 41: ſo concerning Iohn, though his parents were knowne, yet might they bee doubtfull of his office. Againe, though he had liued in the very wilderneſſe from a childe; yet his birth was ſo famous, bruted ouer all the countrie of Iudea, Luk. 1. 65. that his parentage could not be hid.

Now our contrarie reaſons, that Iohn liued not in ſuch a wilderneſſe, as where no reſort of people was, are theſe: Firſt, it is ſaid, that he was in the wilderneſſe, till he ſhewed himſelfe, &c. Luk. 1. 80. but it is not like, that ſtraight after his birth, being yet an infant, he was put forth into the wilderneſſe, vnleſſe they will imagine, that he ſucked of ſome wilde beaſt: wherefore by the wilderneſſe here muſt be vnderſtood the hillie and leſſe inhabited countrie of Iudea, where Zacharie dwelt, verſ.39. and where Iohn alſo had his education. Secondly, Matth.3.1. Iohn is ſaid to haue preached in the wilderneſſe of Iudea: which addition ſheweth, that it was the leſſe frequented part of Iudea, not ſimply a wilderneſſe, as Chriſt is ſaid to haue been led into the wilderneſſe, Matth.4.1. without any other addition. Thirdly, it is not like that Iohn would begin to preach where there was no people at all, but ſauage and wilde beaſts. Fourthly, Iohn preached and baptized in the wilderneſſe, and there was Ieſus baptized of him, and from thence was led into the wilderneſſe to be tempted: ſo that Chriſt was led from Iohns wilderneſſe, to another wilderneſſe, which was the very deſart, and not that, where Iohn preached. So then, our ſentence is this, that the wilderneſſe, where Iohn liued till he publikely ſhewed himſelfe, and where he preached, muſt of neceſſitie be taken for the leſſe peopled countrie of Iudea, which was ſo called in reſpect of the more popular and frequented places of Iudea: yet we denie not, but that Iohn alſo did giue himſelfe to a ſtrict and ſolitarie kinde of life, though he kept not in ſuch a deſert, as they imagine, that he ſhould giue occaſion to be called an Eremite.

The Proteſtants.

THat the ſolitarie life of Eremites, in flying the comfortable ſocietie of men, and their rigorous manner in the vnnaturall chaſtiſing of their bodies, is contrarie to the rule of the Goſpell, thus we ſhew it.

*Argum.*1. Heb.10.24.25. Let vs conſider one another, and prouoke one another to good workes, not forſaking the aſſemblies of our ſelues together, as the manner of ſome is, but exhorting one another: Here the Apoſtle ſpeaketh manifeſtly againſt thoſe that ſhun the ſocietie and companie of their brethren, becauſe they muſt needes fayle in the duties of charitie, as in exhorting one another, and prouoking to good workes: theſe duties Eremites cannot performe, therefore their life is vnlawfull: and Matth.24. it is a note of falſe prophets and falſe Chriſts to liue in the deſarts. Againe, they that loue ſolitarie places, doe offer themſelues to tentation, and fall into the ſnares of the diuell: God ſaw it was not good for Adam, no not in Paradiſe, to liue alone: but I thinke their deſarts are farre vnlike to Paradiſe: Chriſt to be tempted of the diuell was led into the wildernes: Therefore ſuch places are fit for Sathans working. The Preacher ſaith, Two are better then one, for if one ouercome him, two ſhall ſtand againſt him, Eccle.4.12. Wee are better able being ayded by our brethren to reſiſt Sathan, then being alone: We ought not then to tempt God, and not knowing our owne ſtrength, to go forth into ſolitarie places, and as it were prouoke Sathan to the Combat. See to this purpoſe, Conc. Oxonienſ. ſub Stephano: Quia ſerpens antiquus, &c. Becauſe the olde Serpent, when he found holy men ſolitarie, liuing without any mutuall comfort or conſolation, did ſo much the more eaſily inuade and oppreſſe them, we with good deliberation haue decreed, that Monkes, regular Canons, Nunnes, ſhould ſleepe together in the ſame dorters.

*Argum.*2. That cruell and inhumane kind of chaſtiſing their bodies by faſting and other diſcipline vtterly is vnlawfull. The Monkes, called Grandimontenſes, did weare ſhirts of maile next their bodies, the Charter Monkes hairecloth: the Monkes Flagellants went bare-foote in linnen ſhirts, leauing an open place in the backe where they did dayly whip themſelues before the people till the blood followed. Moſes a certaine Abbot did ſo afflict his body with faſting and watching, that for two or three dayes together many times he had no appetite at all to his meate, neither could ſleepe. Another Eremite (as Caſſianus writeth) did purpoſe with himſelfe not to eate meate, vnleſſe he had ſome gueſt or ſtranger with him, and ſo was conſtrained to abſtaine ſometime fiue dayes together: two other Monaſticall brethren, trauailing in the deſart of Thebaide, did vowe not to take any ſuſtenance, but ſuch as God ſhould ſend them; and as they went, a certaine wilde people, contrarie to their cuſtome, offered them meate, the one tooke it as ſent of God; the other refuſed it, becauſe he thought it to bee ſent rather of man then of God, and ſo died.

Baſilius magnus, and Gregor. Nazianzene, did ſo plucke downe themſelues by immoderate faſting; that when they were called to bee Biſhops, they were not able to ſuſtaine the labour thereof.

Where in all the Scriptures learned theſe men, thus to puniſh their bodies? This is not with S. Paul to ſubdue and bring vnder the fleſh: but to kill and deſtroy it; contrarie to that ſaying of Saint Paul, No man euer yet hated his owne fleſh, but loueth and cheriſheth it. See I pray you, how theſe men loued and cheriſhed their bodies?

*Argum.*3. That Religion which conſiſteth in the afflicting and not ſparing of the bodie, hath but a ſhew of wiſdome, and is a voluntarie or will worſhip, ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, Coloſſ.2.23. but ſuch is the religion of Heremites, which ſay, Touch not, taſte not, handle not, as it is in the ſame place, verſ.21. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that to afflict and humble the bodie is lawfull, ſo that it be not done ſuperſtitiouſlie, and vnprofitablie, as S. Paul ſaith, I doe chaſtice my bodie, and bring it into ſubiection, 1.Cor.9.27. *Bellarm. cap.*39.

Contra. To humble the bodie by faſting for a time, that our prayer may be more feruent, as S. Paul did, is a thing both commendable and commaunded, and it is neither ſuperſtitious nor vnprofitable: but continuall and immoderate abſtinence from ſuch things as are lawfull, ſuch as Eremites are deuoted vnto, is not to keepe the bodie vnder, but to kill it; not to vanquiſh the affection, but to extinguiſh it; and is both ſuperſtitious and vnprofitable: Firſt, it is ſuperſtitious, becauſe it is a will worſhip according to the doctrine of men, Coloſſ. 2. 22. So the Lord ſaith, Zach. 7. 5. Did you faſt vnto me? Eſay. 58. 3. When you faſt, you will ſecke your owne will, and chap. 1. 12. Who required this of your hands? wherefore, ſeeing this ſtrict vſage is but an humane inuention, I conclude it is meere ſuperſtition. Secondly, it is alſo vnprofitable: for a man to redeeme his ſinne with the fruite of his bodie, Micah. 6. 7. and ſo likewiſe with the bodie it ſelfe, is not pleaſing vnto God: but this doe Eremites, thinking by the puniſhment of their bodie to ſatisfie for their ſinnes. Ergo.

Concerning the rigorous and hard vſage of Monkes, the iudgement of the Imperiall lawes is this, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 8. authentic. It is decreed, that Prieſts, giuing falſe witneſſe, Monaſteriјs pro tormentis tradantur: Should be deliuered to the Monaſteries to be tormented: So likewiſe, leg. 14. authent. a ſeditious Biſhop is condemned to the Monaſterie, for his correction. What kind of life then and profeſſion cal you this, which is appointed for a torment and puniſhment to men?

As touching ſolitarie life alſo, the Canon lawe ſaith, Væ ſoli, Woe to him that is alone, Decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 35. cap. 2. The decree alſo of Clemens 5. in the Councell of Vienna is extant, Ne Monachi ſinguli in ſingulis, &c. That Monkes ſhould not liue ſinglie or ſolitarilie by themſelues. And as for their ſtrict diet, and ſtaruing of the bodie, faring courſely and lying hardly: your owne Canons haue decreed, and deſcribed the Seueriani to be heretikes, that refuſed to drinke wine: and they reckon vp other hereſies, ſome that, Nudis pedibus ambulant: Walke barefoote: ſome refuſe to eate in the companie of men: Cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 39. Such heretikes are their Monkes and Heremites.

In Pſal. 49. Let vs heare what Auguſtine ſaith, Tu deſeris res humanas, & ſegregas te, vt nemo te videat: Cui proderis? tu ad hoc perueniſſes, ſi nemo tibi profuiſſet? An quia veloces pedes tibi videris habuiſſe ad tranſeundū, præciſurus es pontem? Thou leaueſt the care of humaine things, and ſeparateſt thy ſelfe that no man ſhould ſee thee: to whom doeſt thou good in ſo doing? Hadſt thou come to this perfection thy ſelfe if no man had done thee good? becauſe thou haſt quickly paſſed ouer, wilt thou cut off the bridge, that no man elſe ſhould paſſe? See then Auguſtine maketh the heremiticall life altogether vnprofitable to men.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the habite and ſhauing of Monkes.

The Papiſts.

95. Error. BOth theſe ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, for Monkes to bee knowne by their coules and ſhauen crownes, they receiue and allow as commendable and fit for them to be knowne by. Beſide ſome ſhew of antiquitie, Scripture they haue none: but their beſt reaſon is this: that as Senators and ſouldiers, Noble men and ruſtickes are knowne by their apparell; ſo it is meete that Monkes ſhould be diſcerned from others by their habite, Bellarm. cap. 40. Our Rhemiſts vſe the ſame reaſon for ſhauen crownes, that it is a note of diſtinction betweene the Clergie and lay-men, annot. 1. Pet. 5. ſect. 2. And for prieſtlike garments, they alleage out of Apoc. 1. verſ. 13. how Chriſt appeared to Iohn, veſted in a prieſtlike garment.

Anſw. Firſt, we deny not, but that it is conuenient for Miniſters to be diſcerned from others euen in their apparell: which may be done by the grauity and modeſtie thereof in colour, in plainnes, not neceſſarie to bring in ſtrange and ridiculous faſhions of attire, ſuch as Monkes coules are: yet Miniſters are better diſcerned by other things, then their apparell, as they are deſcribed by S. Paul, 1. Tim. 3. But as for any ſuch diſtinction of Monkes we allow not: for the very calling it ſelfe ought to be aboliſhed. As for ſhauen crownes and beards, they are but tokens of Baals prieſts, make the beſt of them you can.

2 Chriſt appeared in a long garment downe to the feete: which they tranſlate a prieſtlike garment, as though Chriſt were then going to Maſſe: The word is, podéres, which ſignifieth a long veſture, downe to the feete, which was one of the high prieſts garments, and hereby is ſignified the prieſthood of Chriſt: but what is this to the attire of Monkes or prieſts? We deny not but long garments for their comlines are fit for Miniſters, according to the faſhion of the countrie, but not as neceſſarie, repreſenting more holineſſe: for in the Eaſt countries, ſhort garments were graue and comely enough: as the prophets had their mantles: and S. Paul maketh mention of his cloke, 2. Tim. 4. 13.

Argum. 2. The ſpeciall habite of Monkes doth bind them to liue well, for being knowne from all other men by their habite, if they ſhould doe amiſſe they ſhould be rebuked of all: Bellarm. cap.40. ration.2.

Anſw. Firſt, this is right Phariſaicall to doe well onely to auoide the rebuke of men, and to haue their praiſe: as our Sauiour ſaith, Matth.23.5. All their workes they doe to be ſeene of men, for they make their Phylacteries broad, &c. Wherefore it is plaine hypocriſie, rather for feare of men then of conſcience, not to doe euill. Secondly, their habite ſerueth not as a ſtreighter bond to doe well, but as a pretenſed cloake of their euill doing: for by this meanes they practiſe knauerie without ſuſpition, masking vnder the colours of religion: by their Monkes coules they haue entred into the preſence of Princes, and moſt treacherouſlie murdered them, as in our memorie hath been practiſed in France.

The Proteſtants.

WE condemne both the habite and ſhauing of the Monkes as ſuperſtitious, euen as their whole life and profeſſion is.

Argum.1. There is no one precepte in the new teſtament concerning formes and faſhions of apparell to be vſed by Clergie men, but onely in generall termes, that they ſhould be modeſt and ſober, and graue in their behauiour, 1.Tim.3. The Leuites and prieſts indeede in the lawe had rules and precepts ſet them, both for their veſtures in the temple, and their ordinary apparell, Num.15.39. that it ſhould be made with fringes in remembrance of the commandements. But who ſeeth not that ſuch ſignifications of apparell were Leuiticall, and meerely ceremonious? ſuch is the habit of Monkes: for their coules, ſaith the Ieſuite, ſignifie their innocencie, like vnto children that are couered with vailes like vnto coules. But to place any religion or holines in apparell, as they did, (for it was thought a great priuiledge to be buried in a Monkes coule) is abominable ſuperſtition: for ſuch Monkiſh ſuperſtition our Sauiour rebuked the Phariſies, Matth.23.5. All their workes they doe, to be ſeene of men: for they make their Phylacteries broad, and make long the fringes of their garments. If the Phariſies did abuſe to vaine-glorie and ſuperſtition, that kinde of apparrell which the law commanded: there can be no good vſe of Monkiſh habites, which the Goſpell neither commendeth nor commandeth.

As for ſhauen crownes: they were directly forbidden by the law of Moſes, not onely to round the tufts of their beard, as the Gentiles did, Leu.19.27. but not to ſhaue their beard, or make bald their head, Leu.21.5. And then it was a ſigne of holines not to cut the haire, as in the Nazarites it appeareth, Numb.6. It was then the cuſtome of the heathen and of their Idolatrous prieſts to ſhaue themſelues: How then dare the papiſts make that a ſigne of holines now, which was a ſigne of prophanenes, and heathennes then? And is their religion ſo beggarly, that they muſt needs borrow their ceremonies of the heathen?

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Leuitic.21.5. The Prieſts were not ſimplie forbidden to ſhaue their heads, but not to doe it in the death of their friends.

Contra. Firſt, there is no ſuch addition in the text, but the words are generall, They ſhall not make balde parts vpon their heads: Secondly, the prohibition in Ezechiel is generall, chap.44.20. They ſhall not ſhaue their heads.

Bellarmine replieth againe, that the ſhauing of their heads was not ſimplie forbidden, as euill in it ſelfe; for the Nazarites according to the lawe did ſhaue their heads, Numb.6. and S. Paule alſo, Act.21.24. But it was forbidden onely in reſpect of the Gentiles, among whom they dwelt, that they ſhould not be like them, Bellarm.cap.40.

Contra. Firſt, to ſhaue the head as the Gentiles did, was ſimplie forbidden, ſauing where the Lord himſelfe made an exception, as in the vowe of the Nazarites: neither were they forbidden to doe ſo onely, becauſe the Gentiles did the like, but becauſe it was a ſuperſtitious vſe receiued of the Gentiles, and therefore not beſeeming Gods people: And therefore this reaſon is giuen, you are the children of the Lord and an holy people to God, therefore you ſhall not make any baldnes, &c. Deuter.14.1. Secondly, the ſhauing of the Nazarites, was a ſpeciall exception, as likewiſe the ſuffering of their haire to grow long, which is ſimplie forbidden, Ezech.44.20. yet for a time tolerated in the Nazarites: ſo alſo the Prophets ſhauing of himſelfe to be a ſigne to the people, Ezech.5.1. was extraordinarie, and by the Lords direct commaundement. So that if Monkes can ſhew a ſpeciall toleration for their ſhauing, as the Nazarites had, they may doe as they did; but the profeſſion of the Nazarites is now ceaſed, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, where he ſaith, Touch not, taſte not, &c. which was the vſe of Nazarites, not to taſte wine, nor to touch any dead thing: that they were but ſhadowes of things to come, Coloſſ.2.17.

Argum.2. The great varietie of their habites, and fooliſh ſignifications of their ſhauings, doe ſhew what beginning they had. The Monks of Baſils order went in white; of Benets rule in blacke; the Ciſtercians had white rotchets vpon a blacke coate; the Grandimontenſes a coate of maile, with a blacke cloke vpon; ſome ſtarred Monkes; ſome Ieſuites with a white girdle, and a Fox.pag.154.

ruſſet coule: ſome Celeſtines all in blew, both cloake, coule and cap. The Franciſcans did weare ropes for girdles and treen ſhooes.

They render alſo diuers reaſons of their ſhauen crownes: ſome ſay, it reſembleth Chriſts crowne of thornes: ſome by ſhauing the haire, doe ſignifie the mortifying of the affections, as cutting off of things that are ſuperfluous: ſome by baring of the head, the ſimplicitie and plainnes of life: Bellarmine ſaith, it is a ſigne of repentance and conuerſion. Is not here good ſtuffe, thinke you? Such rites, ſuch ceremonies, ſuch ſignifications, ſuch humane traditions, I thinke, the Phariſies would haue abhorred. For theſe are worſe then their waſhing of tables, braſen veſſels, pots, cups, and ſuch like: and yet our Sauiour ſaith of them, that they did lay the commandement of God apart, to eſtabliſh their owne traditions, Mark.7.8.

Laſtly, let Auguſtine ſpeake: concerning the habite of eccleſiaſticall perſons, thus he writeth: Æquè laicis patet cœli palatium Dei mandata ſeruantibus quàm ſanctimoniali habitu præditis ſacerdotibus, De ſalutar. docum. cap. 8. The heauenly palace is as well open for Lay men, keeping the commandements of God, as for Prieſts in their holy attire. What profiteth it then, I pray you, to be buried in a Monkes coule? Againe, Auguſtine found fault with certaine diſſolute Monkes in that time, that ſuffered their haire to growe long: Againſt whom he vrgeth the ſaying of Saint Paul, 1.Cor.11.14. Doth not nature it ſelfe teach you, that it is a ſhame for a man to haue long haire? And ſo he concludeth: Hoc quò pertinet, quæſo, tam apertè contra Apoſtoli præcepta comari? What meaning haue you in this, to ſuffer your haire to grow, contrary to the precept of the Apoſtle? But this precept did no more belong to Monkes, then all other Chriſtians. Concerning the ſhauing of Monkes, Auguſtine hath not one word at al, but of polling, and clipping the haire: he ſpeaketh onely againſt certaine crinitos fratres, that nouriſhed their haire and ſuffered it to grow of length.

Nay, our Rhemiſts loue ſhauing ſo well, that they defend the ſhauing of Nunnes, and would proue it out of Hierome, who indeed ſpeaketh of the cutting off of their haire, not for any religion, but to auoyde certeine little beaſtes that bred betweene the skinne and the haire, (you knowe what beaſts they are) becauſe they vſed not the bathes, nor oyle, as other women did, Fulk. 2. Theſſ. 3. ſect. 2. But whatſoeuer Hierome ſaith, it is flat contrarie to S. Pauls rule, who ſaith, It is a ſhame for a woman to be ſhorne or ſhauen, 1.Cor.14.6.

Concerning the habite of Monkes, antiquitie thus ſpeaketh, Si quis virorum putauerit ſancto propoſito. i. continentiæ, conuenire, vt pallio vtatur, tanquam ex eo iuſtitiam habiturus, & iudicet eos qui veſte communi vtuntur, anathema ſit. Concil. Gangrenſ. cap. 12. If any man thinke that to weare a cloake, doth fit his profeſſion, as though thereby he were more iuſt, and doth condemne or deſpiſe thoſe which vſe a common veſture, let him be accurſed: but the Monkes and Friers doe put holines in their habite, as euen now ſhall be ſeene: Ergo.

Celeſtine Epiſtol. 2. cap. 1. Diſcernendi à plebe, vel cæteris ſumus doctrina, non veſte; conuerſatione non habitu; mentis puritate, non cultu. We are diſcerned from the people, by our doctrine, not our garments; by our conuerſation, not by our habite; the puritie of our minde, not by our apparell.

Colonienſ. part. 2. cap. 26. Ex veſte apud homines opinionem ſanctimoniæ prohibuit Chriſtus, &c. Chriſt forbad, that men ſhould haue opinion of holines in garments: who firſt biddeth that to be cleanſed, which is within, denouncing woe to the Phariſies, who to ſeeme iuſt, made broad their phylacteries, but within were full of rauening, &c. But Friers and Monkes did aduaunce themſelues as more holy, by their habite. Likewiſe in the Canon law. Cauſ. 33. qu. 5. c. 4. expediret te potius candidis moribus, &c. It were better for you to obey your husband, with white and faire conditions, then in blacke rament to reſiſt him.

Decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 31. c. 13. Clemen. 3. Monachum facit non habitus, ſed profeſſio: not the habite, but the profeſſion maketh a Monke.

Maſter Bilney holy Martyr, perſecuted to death, for this article with others: if to be buried (ſaith he) in Saint Francis coule ſhould remit foure parts of penance, what is then left for our Sauiour Chriſt, which taketh away the ſinnes of the world? This I will iuſtifie to be a great blaſphemie againſt the blood of Chriſt, Fox. pag. 1001.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr condemneth the ſuperſtition of thoſe, which ſay that a man being buried in a gray Fryers frocke, ſhall haue the remiſſion of the third part of his ſinnes, Fox. p. 1107. ad articul. 13.

Concerning the ſuperſtitious ſhauing of crownes, we haue alſo the teſtimonie of antiquitie: Concil. Eliberin. can. 55. Qui tantum ſacrificantium coronam portant nec ſacrificant idolis, placuit poſt biennium communionem accipere: They which onely beare the crowne of ſacrificing prieſts though they ſacrifice not to idols, ſhall want the communion two yeeres. Behold then it was the faſhion of heatheniſh Idolatrous prieſts, to haue their crownes ſhauen.

Concil. Gangrenſ. cap. 17. which is alleadged in the Canon law, diſtinct. 30. c. 2. Quæcunque mulier propter diuinum cultum crines attondeat quos ad ſubiectionis materiam Deus tribuit, tanquam præceptum diſſoluens obedientiæ, anathema ſit: If any woman for religion ſake doe poll her haire, which God hath giuen as a ſigne of ſubiection, as one tranſgreſſing the precept of obedience, let her be accurſed. Yet for all this our Rhemiſts commend the ſhauing of Nunnes.

Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, calleth the Popes ſhauen crowne the beaſts marke, *epiſtol.ad matrem.*p.1625.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE MONKES Canonicall houres.

The Papiſts.

96.Error.

THe 3.6.9. houres, they ſay, are conſecrated and deuoted to prayer, which they call their Canonicall houres: at the 3. houre the holy Ghoſt deſcended: at the 6. houre Peter went vp to the top of the houſe: and at the 9. houre Peter and Iohn went vp to pray in the Temple; Act.3.1. And Daniel vſed to pray thrice in the day, Dan.6.10. Ergo, thoſe times ought to be conſecrate to prayer, Rhemiſt. Act.10.ſect.6.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie that it can be gathered by any of thoſe places, that theſe houres onely ought to be ſet apart for prayer. Peter and Iohn went vp at the ninth houre, which was the time of the euening ſacrifice, when the religious Iewes went vp to pray. Secondly, Daniel prayed three times a day, but at what houres the text ſpeaketh not: yet by this example, and by the other proofes alleadged, we do gather, that at the 3.6.9. houre, that is not preciſely at any of theſe times, but in the morning, when men riſe vp to their labours, at noone before their repaſt, and at night when they go to reſt, it is meete and conuenient that men ſhould make their prayers vnto God, and at other times alſo when they finde themſelues fit. Thirdly, the popiſh ſeruice hath nothing but the names of theſe houres: for they are all finiſhed in the forenoone, whereas the ſixt houre is at high noone, the ninth houre is the third houre before the Sunnes ſet: And this toleration, to diſpatch all in the forenoone, is agreeable to their owne ſuperſtitious decrees; *decret.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*41.*c.*1.Presbyter mane,&c. The Prieſt in the morning muſt performe his ſeruice, the firſt, the third, ſixt, ninth houre; and for the euening, &c. and all this may be done in the morning: for after theſe houres diſpatched, he muſt go forth faſting, ad rurale opus, to his field buſines, &c. Thus wee ſee how well they obſerue their houres themſelues.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that ſet times of publike prayer are commendable, as we haue our forenoone, and afternoone ſeruice: but at vnſeaſonable houres, as at midnight, or the riſing of the Sunne, to call the people together, when they cannot conueniently be aſſembled, is but a ſuperſtitious cuſtome. Againe, it is profitable for men in the morning, noone, euening, though not preciſely at any ſet houres, to direct their prayers vnto God: but ſo to ſtint mens praiers, as that they ought of neceſſitie to keepe their houres, as though their prayers were then more auaileable, it hath no ground out of Scripture.

*Argum.*1. S.Paul ſaith, Pray continually, 1.Theſſal.5.17. Ergo, it is lawfull to pray at all times, and one time as fit for prayer as another, if a man be prepared. Againe, the ſame Apoſtle ſaith; I will that the men euery where lift vp pure hands without wrath and doubting, 1.Timoth.2.8. Out of theſe words we gather two arguments: Firſt, prayers are no more bound to times, then to places: a man may pray euery where, Ergo, at euery time. Secondly, a man ought not to pray, but when he is voyd of wrath, and is otherwiſe prepared: but it may be, that at the ſtinted houres, of the 3.6.9. a man may be in wrath, and otherwiſe not fit; therefore hee is not neceſſarily to be tyed to thoſe houres.

2 Auguſtine thus writeth: *Cum quiſque orationem quærit, collocat membra ſicut ei occurrerit. Cum autem non quæritur, ſed infertur appetitus orandi: hoc eſt, cum repentè aliquid venit in mentem, quocumq; modo inuenerit hominem, non eſt vtique differenda oratio. Lib.*2.*ad Simplician.quæſt.*4. When any man deſireth to pray, let him diſpoſe his body as he thinketh beſt: But when as it commeth not of his deſire and ſeeking, but ſodainly his affection is ſtirred vp to pray, howſoeuer prayer findeth him (that is, whether ſtanding or ſitting) he muſt not in any caſe deferre it and put it off to another time. This then is Auguſtines mind, that a man ſhould pray ſo oft as he hath a diſpoſition thereunto, and not deferre his prayer, as they do, which bind themſelues to Canonicall houres.

*Concil.Conſtantinop.*6.*cap.*7. Singulis diebus qui amplius non poteſt, ſaltem duabus vicibus oret, mane ſcilicet & veſpere, dicens ſymbolum, ſiue orationem dominicam: Euery day, he that cannot oftner, let him pray twiſe, that is, morning and euening, ſaying the Creede, and the Lordes prayer. It appeareth that in thoſe dayes when this Councell was held, which was about the yeere 670. men were not tyed to their Canonicall houres.

Claudius Monerius holie Martyr: To houres and times prayers ought not to bee tied, but whenſoeuer Gods ſpirit doth moue vs, or when any neceſſitie driueth vs, wee ought to pray. Fox pag.905.

But who could haue ſaid better of this matter, then Winchester doth, if he had been conſtant in the truth? The obſeruing (ſaith he) of daies, houres, number, time, place, if they bee orderly and publikely commaunded by the rulers, it is but to ſet the Church in an outward and publike order: but if a man inwardly and priuately be addicted to the ſame, thinking his prayer otherwiſe not auaileable, but by obſeruing thereof, it is an error, Fox.pag.1791.ex depoſition.D.Redman. I thinke no reaſonable man will refuſe to ſubſcribe to this ſentence.

THE FOVRTH PART, CONCERNING THE maintenance of Monkes.

The Papiſts.

97. Error. THey neither denie that it is vnlawfull for Monkes to labour with their hands, where neceſſitie, bodily ſtrength, the order of the Church doth require them; neither doe they confeſſe, that it is neceſſarie for them to worke: And ſo are not aſhamed to maintaine their idle, ſlothfull, and Epicures life, Bellarm.cap.41.42.Rhemiſts,2.Theſſal.3.ſect.2. But they may either liue of the lands giuen to their houſes, or elſe by their religious begging, cap.44.

Argum.1. Monkes are not now bound to worke, hauing wherewithall to liue beſide of lands giuen vnto them, becauſe moſt of them are prieſts, and doe ſerue at the Altar, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, wee graunt that Miniſters of the Goſpell labouring in the Word and Sacraments, ought to be maintained by the Goſpell: but ſuch are few or none of your Monkes, who being fit for no other ſeruice either in the Church or Common-wealth, are thruſt into Monaſteries by their friends: they are idolatrous prieſts, and ſerue little better then at Baals Altar. If any of them bee fit for the Miniſterie, as we denie not but ſome haue come out of your Cloyſters, as Luther, Bucer, P.Martyr, by whom the Church of God hath receiued much good: but they muſt come firſt out of your Dennes, and relinquiſh their Monkiſh life, and labour amongſt the people; ſo ſhall they bee no more regular, but ſecular prieſts, as you terme them. Secondly, the lands which were beſtowed vpon them, were firſt giuen vpon an euill intent, that by their prayers they ſhould redeeme the ſoules of their founders, who moſt of them had committed ſome notable ſinne, and ſo pro remedio animarum, to helpe their ſoules, they built Monaſteries. So King Ethelſtane for killing his brother Edwin, built two Monaſteries, Middleton and Michelney for his ſoule, Fox pag.152. King Offa for killing Ethelbert a good Prince, who came peaceably for the deſpouſage of Athheldred his daughter, being pricked in conſcience, gaue the firſt Peter pence to Rome, pag.114. Thoſe lands therefore being giuen firſt for vngodly purpoſes, and continued by them for idolatrous vſes, ought cleane to be taken from them, and to be beſtowed vpon better vſes: neither is it lawfull for them in that ſort to enioy them.

Argum.2. They proue the impudent begging of Friers, which they call religious begging, to bee lawfull and commendable, by the example of Chriſt, who had not a place where to put his head, Luk.9. and of his Apoſtles, that were charged not to poſſeſſe gold or ſiluer in their purſes, Matt.10. Bellarm.cap.45.

Anſ. Firſt, I pray you where euer did you reade that Chriſt went a begging? he liued not of almes, but gaue almes, and Iudas was the almeſman, though he played his part but euill. Auguſtine flatly denieth that you auouch: He ſaith that Chriſts bagge was as Fiſcus regis, euen as the Kings Exchequer: and that what was giuen him, was as due as tribute money to the Prince: But the King, I trow, is not a begger: Niſi putetis (ſaith he) quia dominus petebat & indigebat, cui ſeruiebant angeli, qui de quinque panibus tot millia pauit: Vnleſſe you thinke (ſaith he) that Chriſt begged, and wanted, whom the Angels ſerued, and who fed with fiue loaues not a few thouſands, in Pſal.146. Secondly, if the Apoſtles were beggers, then they liued of almes, but that is vntrue: for Chriſt ſaith, The labourer is worthie of his hire: but the labourers wages is earned and deſerued, it is no almes.

Iohn the 23. defined them to be heretikes, that affirmed Chriſt and his Apoſtles to haue had nothing proper of their owne. Then by this determination, Bellarmine and the Rhemiſts are found heretikes, in ſaying that Chriſt and his Apoſtles went a begging: vnleſſe they will reuerſe the ſentence of their holy father, which were alſo no leſſe then hereſie. Thus are they intrapped on both ſides: let them vnfold themſelues as they can.

Notwithſtanding all this, yet Bellarmine taketh vpon him to prooue that Chriſt was a begger: firſt, becauſe he had no houſe, nor poſſeſſions of his owne, nor any place where to reſt his head: but was entertained ſometime in one place, ſometime in another, and liued of the almes, that faithfull women miniſtred vnto him, Bellarm.cap.45.

Anſ. All this we graunt, that Chriſt had no poſſeſſions here in earth, becauſe he ſaith, his kingdome was not of this world; and that he refuſed not the miniſterie of the faithfull: yet this proueth not, that he begged, or liued of almes. Firſt, the women are ſaid to miniſter to him of their ſubſtance, Luk.8.3. which word of miniſtration ſheweth, that they acknowledged a ſeruice in their goods vnto Chriſt, whereas he that giueth almes, hath a dominion in that he giueth, and is a Lord thereof, rather then a ſeruant. Secondly, almes are giuen to him that needeth: but Chriſt needed not, that was able of fiue loaues to feede fiue thouſand.

Secondly, he alleageth that ſaying, Pſal.40.17. Ego mendicus, But I am poore, and a begger: which words are vnderſtood of Chriſt: As the Apoſtle applieth thoſe words, verſ.7. in the beginning of the booke it is written of me, &c. to our Sauiour Chriſt, Heb.9.7. Bellar. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, though ſome part of this Pſalme bee prophetically applied to Chriſt, yet the whole Pſalme is not, as that, verſ.12. My ſinnes are more then the haires of my head; let him ſhew, if he can, how it may be pronounced of Chriſt. Secondly, Dauid in ſaying, I am a begger, had ſpoken contrarie to himſelfe, Pſal.37.25. where he confeſſeth, that he neuer ſaw in all his time, the ſeede of the righteous to begge their bread. Thirdly, the word here vſed ſignifieth not a begger, but one that is needie, and ſo your owne vulgar tranſlation, for mendicus, begger, noteth in the margent, egenus, needie. Fourthly, Dauid ſpeaketh not of any want of ſubſtance, but that he needed Gods helpe to deliuer him from his enemies: as it followeth in the ſame verſe, thou art my helper and deliuerer, &c. So is Bellarmine anſwered.

Contra. Now I will inſert the reaſons of their owne law, as they ſtand in the Extrauagant of Iohn 22. againſt thoſe that affirmed Chriſt to be a begger, and that he had no propertie or dominion in any thing, but the ſimple vſe thereof.

Firſt, Quis ſimplicem vſuarium: Who can call him a ſimple vſer of a thing without any right or propertie, that hath power to giue it, &c. but Chriſt gaue almes to the poore; for one of them alwaies carried the bagge: Ergo, he had right and propertie, &c.

Secondly, In rebus conſumptilibus, &c. In things that conſume and waſte, as meate and drink, there can be no vſe without propertie: for then there may be an vſe ſeuered from propertie, when the ſubſtance reſerued, there ariſeth ſome profit to the vſer: but this cannot bee in meate and drinke, which conſume in the vſing, *Extrauag. Ioann. tit.*14.*c.*3.

Thirdly, euery vſe without a right vnto the thing vſed, is vniuſt: for that is vniuſt, where there is no right; and ſo conſequently if Chriſt had no right in the things he vſed, the vſing ſhould bee vniuſt, which were blaſphemie to affirme.

Fourthly, the contrarie may be proued out of Scripture, that Chriſt had both the vſe and propertie of the things which he vſed: for one alwaies carried the ſatchell or bagge of prouiſion for themſelues, and of almes for the poore, *tit.*14.*c.*5. So vpon theſe and other reaſons he concludeth them to be heretikes, that affirme Chriſt and his Apoſtles to haue been without any right or propertie in any thing, and ſo conſequently beggers.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt we ſay, that no idle perſons ought to be maintained in a Chriſtian Common-wealth; but they that haue not any other neceſſarie calling, ſhould labour with their hands, and therefore Monkes that are fit for no other ſeruice in the Church, ought to labour and worke.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul giueth a generall rule: He that will not worke, let him not eate, 2. Theſſal.3. verſ.10. ſpeaking of thoſe that haue no neceſſarie calling in the Church: Ergo, Monkes muſt worke, or elſe by Saint Pauls rule, not eate. The Rhemiſts anſwere, that this is but a naturall admonition or counſell. Nay, it is a precept and commaundement, that all in their ſeuerall places and callings ſhould labour, none liue idly: for S. Paul ſaith not, this I counſelled you, but this I warned you of, or denounced vnto you, and he calleth thoſe that followed not this rule, inordinate walkers.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that S. Paul giueth this precept to labour vnto the ſecular ſort onely, not to Monks, which, ſaith he, in the opinion of our aduerſaries, were not as yet in the Church, *Bellarm. cap.*42.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle writeth to the whole Church of the Theſſalonians, 2. epiſt. chap.1.v.1. wherefore this precept alſo bindeth Monkes, vnleſſe you will ſay they are no members of the Church, as indeede they are not of the true Church. Secondly, if you will graunt, that there were no monkes in Saint Pauls time, that you may finde out a colourable anſwere, then haue they not their foundation out of the Scripture, as you beare vs in hand: yet S. Pauls rule ſhall ſtill binde all that belong to the Church.

Bellarmine againe anſwereth, that Saint Paul doth not abſolutely commaund to worke, but onely to auoide offence, and idlenes: ſo that they are not bound corporally to labour, which can by other meanes, then labouring corporally, auoide theſe dangers. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle doth giue an abſolute charge to all to worke, ſetting himſelfe for an example, who could haue kept himſelfe from idlenes otherwiſe then by working, yet he laboured, verſ.7.8. Secondly, if he commaund to worke, onely to auoide idlenes and offence, then is the commaundement abſolute, becauſe theſe inconueniences muſt needes enſue vpon not working: as the Apoſtle ſaith, verſ.11. Wee haue heard of ſome that walke inordinately, and worke not at all: where the reaſon is giuen of their inordinate walking, euen their not working: ſo that they muſt needes walke inordinately, that worke not. Thirdly, they which haue a lawfull vocation, beſide bodily working, are not bound to corporall labour: but ſo haue not your loytering lubberly Friers, that neither preach, nor worke: neither can they keepe themſelues from idlenes and offences, by any other meanes, then by working, which they doe not.

*Argum.*2. Neither is it to bee permitted, that Friers ſhould get their liuing by begging: for what are they elſe but valiant beggers? Firſt, there ought to bee no beggers in the Common-wealth: as Deuteron.15. Though the Lord ſay, that they ſhould neuer bee without poore or beggers, which ſhould want their helpe, verſ.11. yet, verſ.5. this charge is giuen, that by them, that is, their default, there ſhould not be a begger in Iſrael: they ſhould ſo prouide for the poore, that they neede not goe a begging. There are alſo poſitiue lawes, to reſtraine the number of beggers, and therefore there is no reaſon, that by a number of idle vagrant perſons, belly-god Friers, that begging order ſhould be enlarged.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Deuter.15.4. there is no prohibition of beggers: for our Sauiour Chriſt in all the Goſpell findeth not fault with the beggers, that then abounded; but it is a promiſe onely that they ſhould haue ſuch plentie, if they kept Gods commaundements, that they ſhould haue no beggers, *cap.46.reſp.ad argum.*1.

Contra. Firſt, to ſuffer beggers is a thing diſpleaſing vnto God and forbidden: becauſe begging proceedeth either from the hardnes of mens hearts, and therefore wee are commaunded not to turne away our eyes from our owne fleſh, that is, from our poore brethren, Iſai.58.7. or elſe from idlenes; and therefore men are commanded to work, that they be not in want, 1.Theſſ.4.12. and both theſe, as hardnes of heart, and idlenes, are diſpleaſing to God and forbidden. Secondly, it is vntrue, that in the Goſpell the rich are not rebuked for ſuffering beggers; as may appeare in the parable of the rich man, Luk.16. who is puniſhed for ſuffering Lazarus to lie crying at his gates: and it is Iobs commendation, that he ſuffered not the eyes of the widow to faile, Iob.31.16. that is, ſuffered not the poore to waite for their almes, or lie begging at his gates; but he eftſoone admitted them vnto his table, as it followeth verſ.17.

*Argum.*3. Seeing it cannot be choſen, but there muſt needes be ſome beggers; they ought not to be young ſturdie lubbers, that are able to worke, as moſt of the Friers were; but ſuch as are deſcribed, Luk.14.21. where the King ſaith to his ſeruants, Goe out quickly, and bring hither the poore, the maimed, the halt, the blinde: Ergo, ſuch luſtie fellowes ought to liue by the ſweate of their browes, not to eate vp the bread of the poore.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that in this place alleaged, Luk.14.21. all the poore are not vnderſtood, to be blinde, lame, impotent, &c. but it muſt bee read with a diſtinction, Bring in the poore, and the maimed: ſo the poore are called, whether they are maimed or not: and S.Paul, Act.24.17. brought almes to the poore at Ieruſalem, yet were they not all blinde and lame, &c.

Contra. Firſt, we ſay not that almes are not to be giuen to any poore, but ſuch as are impotent; but that no poore ought to bee ſuffered to liue by asking and begging, but ſuch as are impotent, and vnfit to labour. Secondly, wherefore the example of S.Pauls bringing almes to Ieruſalem is impertinent, ſeeing the queſtion is of beggers, not of all poore: And beſide, we ſpeake of a ſetled ſtate in the Common-wealth, not of the daies of perſecution, when the brethren of neceſſitie muſt be relieued. Thirdly, that in the parable impotent poore onely are vnderſtood, it may bee gathered by the place from whence they were called, namely from the ſtreetes, high wayes and hedges: where in thoſe daies none were ſuffered to ſtand and begge, but onely the impotent, as blinde, lame, and ſuch like.

Serm.16.

Laſtly, in the Sermons, Ad fratres in eremo, which are aſcribed to Auguſtine, thus we reade: Eia fratres mei, ſemper boni aliquid facite; quem tædet orare, vel pſallere non deſiſtat; quem tædet orare, vel pſallere, manibus laborare non deſiſtat: My brethren, alwaies be ye doing of ſome good; if you bee wearie of praying, ſing; if of ſinging, then labour with your hands. And in the ſame place, olde men onely of 80. yeere old are exempted from working. And in another place Auguſtine ſheweth, that the Monkes in his time did ſo plie their worke, Vſqueadeo, vt etiam naues oneratas in ea loca mittant, quæ inopes incolunt: That they ſent ſhips laden with neceſſaries, vnto thoſe places where the poore inhabited, *de morib.eccleſ.cap.*32.Ergo, in Auguſtines time Monkes liued not by begging, but with labour of their hands.

This alſo is further proued by the generall conſent of antiquitie: that Monkes ſhould not meddle with any part of the Miniſtrie, and therefore had no right to their maintenance. *Chalcedon. Concil.can.*4.Vt nullus monachorum tentet ciuilia aut eccleſiaſtica negotia inquietare: That no Monke vnder paine of excommunication, meddle with ciuill or eccleſiaſticall buſines. *Leo epiſtol.*60.Nullus præter eos, qui ſunt domini ſacerdotes ius docendi & prædicandi audeat vendicare, ſiue ſit monachus, ſiue laicus, &c. Let no man, beſide the Miniſters of God, take vpon them to teach, or preach, whether he be a Monke, or a lay man, *Tarraconenſ.can.*11.Vt nullus monachorum miniſterium Eccleſiaſticum præſumat agere: That no Monke preſume to execute the Eccleſiaſticall miniſterie.

Hereunto agree their owne Canons: *Cauſ.*2.*qu.*7.*c.*54.Pelag.Nec ſecularia, nec eccleſiaſtica negotia monachus,&c. That a Monke ſhould not entermeddle either with matters ſecular, or eccleſiaſticall. *Cauſ.*7.*qu.*1.*c.*45.Monachorum vita,&c. A Monkes profeſſion is to be ſubiect, not to teach, or beare rule. Likewiſe, *Sext.decretal.lib.*5.*tit.*2.*c.*11.Clemens 4. Prædicatores quæſtuarios à prædicationis officio,& c. Begging preachers muſt be inhibited to preach, for it appertaineth only to them to aske charitable reliefe, &c. Thus Monkes in times paſt, were excluded from the office of the Clergie.

And as Monkes could not become Clerkes, ſo neither was it lawfull for Clerkes to enter into Monkerie. *Concil.Cæſarauguſt.can.*6.Clericus,qui propter luxum,&c. ab officio ſuo ſponte diſceſſerit, ac velut obſeruatorem legis ſe monachum videri maluerit, de eccleſia repellendus: A Clergie man, which of wantonnes doth leaue his office, and chuſeth rather to bee a Monke, that he may ſeeme an obſeruer of the law, let him be expelled from the Church.

Secondly, as there is no affinitie betweene Monkes and Clerkes, for their office, ſo haue they nothing to doe with Clerkes maintenance. Monkes ought to take no tithes, *Lateranenſ.ſub Innocent.*3.*cap.*61. Ne religioſi ſuſcipiant decimas de manu laicali: Religious men (meaning Monkes) ought to receiue no tithes of the lay ſort. Yet Monkes are commaunded to pay tithes: *Concil.Lateranenſ.part.*13.*cap.*6.*ſub Alexandro.*3. Ex prædijs ruſticis traditis monachi decimas ſoluant: Monkes muſt pay their tithes out of their farmes let out to husbandmen. And as for other maintenance by land, it is likewiſe forbidden, *Lateranenſ.part.*27.*cap.*1. *Alexander.*3. Monachi non debent villas aut eccleſias ad firmam tenere: Monkes muſt not take villages or Churches to farme.

3 Monkiſh idle life is condemned, *Concil.Toletan.*7.*can.*5.Illos quos in tali propoſito ignauia impulit, quoſque nulla vitæ dignitas ornat, ſed ignorantia fœdat, decernimus à cellulis eijci,&c. They which entred into this profeſſion for idlenes ſake, who are of no commendable life, but fouly ignorant, we would haue them caſt out of their Cels.

4 Monkes alſo and Friers are forbidden by the ancient Canons to liue by begging, *Concil.Aquiſgranenſ.cap.*107.Ipſi pauperes, ſi ſe poſſunt ſuis artificijs & laboribus expedire, non præſumant, quod debet infirmus,& debilis accipere: The poore, that are able to helpe themſelues by their labour, muſt not take that, which is allotted for the weake and impotent. *Colonienſ.part.*11.*cap.*3. In hoſpitalia, nullæ aliæ quam miſerabiles perſonæ, quæ aut morbo, debilitate, aut ætate impeditæ ſunt manibus laborare: Let none but miſerable poore perſons be receiued into hoſpitals, which are hindred by their ſicknes, impotencie, or age, from working with their hands. *Cap.*5.Sint mendicantibus validis non ſolum hoſpitalia clauſa, ſed & publicè & oſtiatim mendicare interdictum ſit: Not onely hoſpitals are to bee ſhut vp againſt valiant beggers, but we forbid ſuch to begge from houſe to houſe. Therfore luſtie, ſturdie, lubberly Friers ought not to goe a begging, but to get their liuing with labour.

See alſo to this purpoſe their owne Canons: *Cauſ.*16 *qu.*1.*c.*18.Pſeudomonachi,&c. Monks that wander to and fro, are called falſe Monkes. *Cauſ.*18 *qu.*2.*c.*10. Monachi in ciuitate vagantes,&c. Monkes wandring vp and downe in cities, doe but make a ſhew onely, they are not true Monkes. *Extrauag.commun.lib.*3.*tit.*8.*c.*2.*Ioann.*22.Monachi ad tranſmarina,&c. Monkes going beyond the ſea, muſt bee taken for Apoſtataes. Theſe Canons forbid the wandring and runnagate life of Monkes.

5 Laſtly then, that there is no meanes left to Monkes for their maintenance, but the labour of their hands, it is thus further ſhewed, *Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap.*96. ex Hieronym. Facito aliquid operis, vt ſemper inueniat te diabolus occupatum: Be doing of ſome worke, that the diuell may alwaies finde you occupied.

*Concil.Carthag.*4.*can.*51.Clericus quantumlibet verbo Dei eruditus, artificio victum quærat: A clergie man, though very well inſtructed in the word of God, may get his liuing by ſome artificiall worke. *Can.*53. Omnes Clerici, qui ad operandum validi ſunt, artificiola & literas diſcant: All Clergie men, that are ſtrong to labour, let them together with letters learne ſome handicraft. If Clerkes in thoſe daies were inured to hand-labour, whoſe office was to teach; how much more did it become the Monkes, who had nothing to doe with Eccleſiaſticall functions?

Laſtly, Iohn Wickliffe condemned for this article with others, for ſaying, that Friers are bound to get their liuing by labour of their hands, and not by begging: and that whoſoeuer gaue any almes to begging Friers, is accurſed, Fox pag.435.articl.22.23.

Thus by Gods goodnes we haue finiſhed this queſtion, and this whole Controuerſie: One other queſtion remaineth; whether the Monaſticall life be meritorious or not: which we haue referred to another place, when we ſhall come to the queſtion of Virginitie in generall and the priuiledges thereof.

THE SEVENTH GENERAL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE CIVILL MAGISTRATE.

MAny things, which Bellarmine in this controuerſie laboureth to proue, are agreed vpon betweene vs and our aduerſaries, and therefore wee will ſpend no time in them.

1 We teach, as well as they, that there ought to be Magiſtrates, Princes and gouernours amongſt Chriſtians, contrarie to that which the Anabaptiſts hold, that there ought to be equalitie among Chriſtians. The holy Ghoſt, Iudg. 17. 6. and 19. 1. maketh this the cauſe of all diſorder: At that time in Iſrael there was no King amongſt them, but euery man did that which ſeemed good in his owne eyes.

2 We doe hold, that euen wicked Kings and Tyrants haue power ouer the goods and liues of men, neither that it is lawfull to diſobey them, but in matters onely belonging to our conſcience, where it is better to obey God then men: Ierem. 27. 6. I haue giuen, ſaith the Lord, all theſe lands to Nabuchadnezzar.

3 Concerning the power of Princes, we graunt, that they may make lawes and ordinances to gouerne the people by, Prou. 8. 15. that they may puniſh the offenders of their lawes, Rom. 13. They doe not beare the ſword for nought: That it is lawfull for Chriſtian Princes, vpon iuſt occaſion, to wage battaile, Luk. 3. 14. Iohn Baptiſt doth not condemne the calling of ſouldiers, but teacheth them to vſe it aright.

But here by the way we muſt a little ſalute the Ieſuite, who findeth great fault with Luther, for ſaying; That to fight againſt the Turkes, is to repugne againſt God, viſiting our iniquities by them, Articul. 34. condem. in bulla Leonis. As though Luther ſhould thinke it vnlawfull to wage battell with the Turke. Firſt I will briefly declare, that Luther had no ſuch meaning; and then it ſhall appeare by whom the Turkiſh warres haue been moſt hindered.

As concerning the firſt, Luther doth not ſimply ſpeake againſt ſuch warres, but onely the abuſes among Chriſtians, in ſuch warlike enterpriſes: the firſt is, their malice and hatred againſt the Infidels, whom they ſeeke by no meanes to conuert or winne vnto the faith, but vſe altogether violent and bloodie meanes, whereas the other way ought firſt to bee attempted, as Maſter Tindall ſaith; I am bound to loue the Turke with all my might, &c. after the example that Chriſt loued me, neither to ſpare goods, bodie or life to winne him to Chriſt, Fox pag. 1248.

The ſecond abuſe is their ſuperſtition towards the land of Iudea, which they call the holy land, for the recouering whereof principally all thoſe great warres were taken in hand: whereas there are greater motiues, as the propagation of the Goſpell, the redeeming of the libertie of Chriſtians: And therefore it is to be thought, that God in his great wiſedome, hath giuen ouer thoſe places to the poſſeſſion of the Heathen, to let vs know, that before God one place is not more holie then another.

A third fault is, for that Chriſtians ſeeing the mightie encreaſe of the Turkiſh tyrannie, doe not enter into conſideration of themſelues, and repent them of their ſinnes, which are the cauſe why Chriſtians are ſcourged with the Turkiſh yron rods. The ſinnes of Chriſtians (ſo called) are very great, and doe farre exceede the manners of the Eaſt: As one thus writeth, Latini licèt ad ea, qua ſunt fidei, verius adhareant Deo quàm Graci, tamen quoad mores multò pluribus fœditatibus & ſceleribus implicati ſunt: Though the Latines in things concerning faith doe more neerely cleaue to God, then the Grecians, yet are they more polluted in their manners, Oper. tripartit. lib. 1. cap. 2. tom. 2. Concil. But as the truth is, the Latines are more corrupt both in life, in manners: this is that therefore that Luther miſliketh in theſe warres, that men will not conſider, that they are chaſtiſed for their ſinnes, and ſo learne to amend their liues: and otherwiſe he thinketh not. Yea Bellarmine himſelfe alleageth Luthers owne words, whereby he ſheweth his great miſlike of thoſe preachers, that crie out the Turke ought not to be reſiſted: Hic ſermo ſeditioſus eſt, &c. This ſaying is ſeditious and not to bee ſuffered. Theſe are Luthers owne words in his booke, De Viſitation. Saxonica: howſoeuer the Ieſuite in other places wreſteth his meaning.

Now in the next place I will ſhew, how that not Luther, or any of his part, but the Pope and popelings haue been the onely hinderers of the Chriſtians couragious enterpriſes againſt the Turke, and the greateſt cauſe of his riſing.

1 The firſt aduauntage which the Infidels had, was by the diuiſion of the Chriſtian Empire, when as firſt Gregorie the 3. anno 742. began, and Leo the 3. finiſhed his deuice, in erecting a new Emperour in the Weſt, anno 800. and ſo weakened the power of the Emperour of Conſtantinople. And afterward they tooke vpon them to excommunicate the Greeke Emperour at their pleaſure: as Clemens 5. dealt with Andronicus Paleologus, excommunicating him, and all the Greeke Church beſide, charging all Princes, Earles, Barons, &c. vnder paine of excommunication, to haue no ſocietie or confederacie with him, Extrau. commun. lib. 5 tit. 10. c. 3. And by this meanes the Greeke Emperour being forſaken of all helpe, was vnable to reſiſt the cruell Turke.

2 After that the Empire of the Eaſt was thus weakened; by little and little the Weſt Empire began to decay: for the Popes vſurped vpon the Emperours, tooke vpon them to depoſe them, to make them their vaſſals, to hold their ſtirrup, to kiſſe their feete, to receiue their Crowne and dignitie at the Popes hands: And at the length Gregorie the 5. anno 1000. or thereabout, made a decree, that the Emperour ſhould bee choſen from thenceforth by ſeuen Prince-Electors of Germanie: ſo the maieſtie of the Empire, which before deſcended by certaine inheritance, now began to depend vpon vncertaine and corrupt election. And hereof it came to paſſe, that anno 1350. Carolus 4. that his ſonne might ſucceede him in the Empire, did lay to pledge vnto the Prince-Electors the free Cities belonging to the Empire, which to this day were neuer redeemed: and thus alſo was the Weſt Empire weakened, and a way made for the Turke to inuade Chriſtendome.

3 A third practiſe of the Pope in weakening the ſtate of Chriſtendome was, by his cruell taxes and impoſitions vpon the Clergy and others, in leuying ſometime the tenths, ſometime the firſt fruites, ſometime halfe the fruites of all Eccleſiaſticall promotions, as Innocentius the ſeuenth did: And vnder the pretenſe and colour of the holy warres, gathering great ſummes of money, as in the Laterane Councel ſub Innocent. 3. in fine: the twentieth part of euery ſpirituall liuing for the ſpace of three yeeres was allotted towards the expedition intended againſt the Infidels: and at diuers other times the like exactions were required. And thus by the Popes Annates, Buls, Indulgences, yeeres of Iubile, firſt fruites, pall money, diſpenſations, Peter pence, and ſuch other deuices, all Chriſtendome was robbed and ſpoyled, and left naked to the Turke.

4 Beſide theſe former practiſes, the Popes haue dealt vnfaithfully, and entred themſelues into league with the Infidels: Alexander the third anno. 1160. perſwaded the Emperour Fredericke to goe in battell in his own perſon againſt the Souldane, and ſo betrayed him into his enemies hand, ſending vnto the Souldane the Emperours counterfeit taken by a ſkilfull paynter: Alexander the ſixt, tooke 200000. crownes of Baiazetes the great Turke to poyſon his brother Gemes, that was fled to him for ſuccour, and ſo he did: Eugenius the fourth, anno. 1430. perſwaded Vladiſlaus King of Hungarie to breake the truce, and violate his faith giuen vnto Amurathes the great Turke: whereupon the Turke in great indignation ioyned battell with him, wherein the King himſelfe and the moſt of his Armie were ſlaine: And by this occaſion the Turke entred into Chriſtendome, and to this daye neuer could be driuen out.

5 Laſtly, if the Pope were an enemie indeed to the Turke, and would haue battell waged with him, he ſhould do as his predeceſſor Innocentius the third did, Concil. Lateranenſ. who proclaming warre againſt the Turke, Imperauit pacem Chriſtianis ad quadriennium ſub pœna excommunicationis: Inioyned peace and truce to all Chriſtians for foure yeere vnder paine of excommunication. So ſhould the Pope cauſe the King of Spayne to leaue of moleſting and troubling his neighbours: but now he is ſo farre from this, that the Pope is rather become the chiefe author of diſſention, and ſtrife, and ſower of diſcord among Chriſtian Princes, exciting and ſtirring them vp to warre one againſt another. Did not Marcellus the ſecond ſay, not long ſince, Expeditionem magis fieri debere in Lutheranos, quàm Turcas? That warre ſhould be made vpon the Lutherans, rather then againſt the Turkes? But as the ſaying is, it is well that a curſt cow hath ſhort hornes, for this Marcellus was but a Pope of 23. dayes. Alexander Farneſius Cardinall and chiefe Captaine vnder Paulus the third, againſt the Lutherans, ſaid, he would ſhed ſo much Lutheran bloud, as that his horſe might ſwim therein: ex actis Paul. 2.

Iudge now (Chriſtian Reader) whether by this meanes the Pope hath not greatly decayed the ſtrength of Chriſtendome, in nouriſhing of domeſticall warres: and ſo comparing this, with the other practiſes, you ſhall finde, not Luther nor Lutherans, as they are ſlaundered; but the Pope and his popelings, to haue been the chiefe hinderers of the Chriſtians warlike enterpriſes againſt the Turke: let vs now goe forward.

The ſeuerall queſtions, wherein we differ from our aduerſaries, and they from the truth, concerning the office of the ciuill Magiſtrate, are theſe.

1 Concerning the authoritie of the Prince in Eccleſiaſticall matters, three parts of the queſtion.

on: Firſt, whether he haue power ouer perſons Eccleſiaſticall. Secondly, whether ouer their goods. Thirdly, whether in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes.

2 Whether the ciuill Magiſtrate may proſecute heretikes to death: and whether he ought to be the iudge of heretikes, with other like queſtions.

3 Whether the poſitiue and ciuill lawes of Princes doe binde their ſubiects and oblige them ſimply in conſcience. This matter we haue diſcuſſed before, Controuerſie 4.queſt.7.part.1.

4 Whether the Pope ought or may excommunicate the Prince, or Emperour, or otherwiſe hath any temporall iuriſdiction aboue him: this queſtion alſo is handled before, Controuerſie 4. queſt.8. part.1.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE authoritie of the Prince in Eccleſiaſticall matters.

THis queſtion hath three parts. Firſt, whether he haue power ouer the perſons Eccleſiaſticall. Secondly, whether ouer their goods. Thirdly, whether the Prince be chiefe in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE AVTHOritie of the ciuill Magiſtrate ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons.

The Papiſts.

91.Error. THe Clergie is not bound to keepe and obſerue the ciuill and poſitiue lawes of Princes, if they be contrarie to the Canons of the Church: neither ought they for any cauſe to be cited before the ciuill Magiſtrate, or to be iudged by him, *Bellarm.de Clericis,cap.*28.

It is abſurd (ſaith the Ieſuite) that the ſheepe ſhould iudge the ſhepheard, Bellarm. And the Apoſtle willeth all men to obey their Biſhops and ouerſeers, Heb.13.17. and to ſubmit themſelues vnto them, from which rule neither Kings nor Emperours are exempted: Prelates muſt be obeyed: Ergo, not obey, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, the obedience here required we acknowledge, that it ought to be yeelded by Kings and Emperours to thoſe that haue the ouerſight of their ſoules: for the Prince is bound to receiue and beleeue all true doctrine which is taught by the Paſtors and Biſhops of the Church, agreeable to the word of God, vnder paine of damnation: and the Paſtors are bound vnder the like paine to obey the Princes lawes, made according to the word of God. Secondly, the ſpirituall obedience of the ciuill Magiſtrate to the word of God, taught by the Paſtors of the Church, is no exemption of them from their ciuill obedience: for euery ſoule is ſubiect to the higher powers, Rom.13.1.*Fulk.annot.*13.Heb.ſect.9.

*Argum.*2. Bellarmine in this place much vrgeth the conſtitutions of certaine Councels, for the priuiledge of the Clergie: as *Chalced.can.*9. *Agathenſ.can.*32.concil. Carthag. 3.*can.*9.*Toletan.*3.*can.*13.

Anſw. Theſe Canons do not ſimply forbid Magiſtrates to haue the cogniſance of Clergie mens cauſes, or to conuent them before them: but onely, that Clergie men vpon euery occaſion, ſhould not draw one another before the ciuill Magiſtrate, but be contented rather to be ordered by their B. as the words of the Canon of the Chalcedon are theſe, Si Clericus aduerſus Clericum,&c. If a Clergie man haue a matter againſt a Clergie man, he ſhould referre it to the B.&c. the Agathenſian ſaith, a Clergie man without the licence of his Biſhop, ſhould not preſume to ſue to a ſecular Iudge: ſo the Toletane, Vt Clerici Clericos,&c. that Clergie men ſhould not draw Clergie men before the ſecular Iudge contemning the Biſhop. Who ſeeth not, that here is no limitation of the ciuill authoritie, but a monition onely, that Clergie men in ſuch matters, as belonged to the cogniſance of the Biſhop, ſhould be ordered by him rather with quietneſſe, then to runne to forraine iudgement vpon euerie occaſion. And this wee denie not, but it is practiſed in our Church, which notwithſtanding attributeth to the Prince the chiefe Soueraignitie ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons.

The Proteſtants.

THat Eccleſiaſticall perſons are ſubiect to temporall gouernours, and are to be iudged by their lawes, the Scriptures ſpeake plainly.

*Argum.*1. Rom.13.1. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher powers: Ergo, Biſhops, yea the Pope himſelfe, if he haue a ſoule. The like ſaith S.Peter 1.2.13. Submit your ſelues to all manner ordinance. Salomon remoued Abiathar from the Prieſthood, and put in Sadock. Paul appealed, and ſubmitted himſelfe to Cæſar. Againe, if Prieſts offend and commit any grieuous ſinne, as of murther, theft, who ſhall puniſh them? The ciuill Magiſtrate onely beareth the ſword. They muſt either grant, that prieſts are no euill doers, which were to too groſſe; or if they be, that they are vnder the ciuill Magiſtrates power: for he is the Miniſter of God to take vengeance vpon euery euill doer, Rom. 13.4.

In Auguſtines time, the controuerſies betweene the Catholike and Donatiſt Biſhops, were committed to the iudgement of the Emperour: Ait quidam, ſaith he, non debuit Epiſcopus proconſulari iudicio purgari: Quaſi verò ipſe ſibi hoc comparauerit, ac non Imperator ita quæri iuſſerat, ad cuius curam, de qua rationem deo redditurus eſt res illa maximè pertinebat. But, ſaith one, a Biſhop ought not to haue bin purged before the Proconſul, or ciuil Magiſtrate: As though (ſaith Auguſtine) the Procōſul did of himſelfe intermeddle in this matter, and was not commanded rather of the Emperour ſo to do: vnto whoſe charge that matter principally appertained, and whereof he ſhal make account vnto God. Ergo, by his ſentence, the cauſe of the Biſhop principally was to be iudged by the Emperour. Epiſtol. 162.

Agatho Biſhop of Rome writing to Conſtantius the Emperour, calleth himſelfe, imperij famulum, a ſeruant or ſubiect of his Empire: and againe, Pro obedientia, quam debemus: he confeſſeth, he oweth obedience to him.

Pope Leo ſubmitted himſelfe to Lodouicus the Emperour, 2. queſt. 7. as it appeareth vnder theſe words: If we haue done any thing incompetently, or haue not obſerued the path of equitie among ſubiects, we will amend the ſame, either by your owne iudgement, or els by the aduiſe and iudgement of thoſe, whom you ſhall appoynt. If the Popes therefore themſelues are not exempted from the ſecular power, I thinke inferiour Clerkes are not?

Epiſtol. Leodienſ. cont. Paſchal. 2. Omnis anima poteſtatibus ſublimioribus ſubdito, qui hoc omni animæ præcipit, quem à ſubiectione terrenæ poteſtatis excepit? Let euery ſoule (ſaith S. Paul) be ſubiect to the higher powers: he that inioyneth this to euery ſoule, whom hath he exempted from the ſubiection of the earthly power?

M. Bradford collecteth out of this place, that al men ought to be ſubiect to the temporal power, Poteſtati, quæ gladium geſtat: to that power which beareth the ſword, which is the temporal power. Fox. pag. 1607.

B. Cranmer holy Martyr: By the Scripture the King is chiefe, and no forraine perſon in his owne realm aboue him: there is no ſubiect, but to a King, I owe my fidelity to the Crown, &c. Fox. 1874.

Now whereas Bellarmine maketh ſhew both of Imperiall and Pontificiall conſtitutions, as though he could out of them warrant his aſſertion: I will briefely declare, what plentifull teſtimonies we haue out of both.

Firſt, for the Ciuill law, whereas Bellarmine affirmeth, that the Magiſtrate can neither puniſh Clergie men, nor conuent them before them: I will proue the contrarie, concerning both theſe points. Firſt, that the Ciuil power hath authoritie to cenſure and puniſh the Clergie offending, it is euident, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. leg. 3. Martian. Si Clericus erit &c. If a Clergie man ſhal ſeeme to diſpute or doubt of the faith, he ſhall be depriued. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 14. Arcadius, a Biſhop offending againſt the Common-wealth, ſhall be exiled.

For the conuenting of Clerkes, the law is as cleare, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 24. Martian. Cum Clericis, &c. The Clergie men of Conſtantinople may be conuented before the Patriarke or Preſident of the Citie. Leg. 31. Anthemius, Clerici extranei: Forraine Clerks, and not of the citie of Conſtantinople, muſt be conuented only before the Preſident of the citie. Ibid. authentic. In ciuili crimine ciuilis præſit iudex, &c. In ciuill offences the Ciuill Iudge muſt beare ſway: And there criminal offences are interpreted to be murther, adultery, periury, &c. Likewiſe Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 34. Anthemius, Præſidali iuriſdictioni, &c. To the Preſidents iuriſdiction all of what degree ſoeuer are ſubiect, Biſhops, Clerkes, Monkes, &c.

Now let vs take a view of their owne law, Cauſ. 11. qu. 1. c. 20. Gregorius; Paulinum Aquileienſ. &c. I pray, ſend vnder ſafe cuſtodie vnto the Emperour, Paulinus Biſhop Aquileienſ. and the Biſhop of Millaine. This Canon attributeth this power to the Imperiall crowne, to puniſh eccleſiaſticall perſons. Alſo cap. 45. Si quis cum Clerico, &c. If a man haue a ſuite with a Clerke concerning a money matter, if the Biſhop refuſe to heare, Tunc ad ciuilem iudicem: Then it may be lawful to bring the matter before a ciuill Iudge: Decret. Greg. lib. 5. tit. 39. c. 23. Clemens 3. Clericus à Comite iuſſus fuſtigari, &c. A certaine Clerke for making ſedition, was commanded by an Earle to be beaten with a club, and thereof dyed. The Pope himſelfe determineth this to be lawfully done. Thus we ſee, how that in former time, Clerkes were ſubiect, both by the law of God and man, to the ciuill Iuriſdiction.

Now then, as by the preaching of the Goſpel, Princes are reſtored to their Imperial dignity, and made Lords of al their ſubiects both ſpiritual & temporal, whereas they were but halfe rulers before: ſo Princes likewiſe haue prouided great immunities and priuiledges for the Preachers of the Goſpel, by whom their Princely authoritie is reuiued: as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 1. Conſtantinus made a law, that Clergie men, their Miniſters and ſeruants ſhould be free from all new exactions and impoſitions. Likewiſe Conſtantius ibid. leg. 2. exempteth Clergy men, their wiues, childrē, ſeruants, goods, from all militarie ſeruices, from cariage, poſt ſeruice, and ſuch like. And Fredericke made an excellent conſtitution in the behalfe of the Clergie, and eſpecially ſuch as were Profeſſores ſacrarum legum,&c. Profeſſors of Scriptures, Ne à viliſſimis hominibus, &c. That euery vile perſon ſhould not be readie to offer or do them wrong, or conuent them at their pleaſures before euery Iudge, but onely ſuch as are there named: And the reaſon of this conſtitution is rendred, Quia illorum ſcientia,&c. Becauſe the whole world is lightened with their knowledge: Et ad obediendum Deo & nobis,&c. And the Subiects are taught by them to obey God, and vs his Miniſters. Then it followeth, Dignum exiſtimauimus,vt quadam ſpeciali dilectione eos ab omni iniuria defendamus; Wee haue therefore thought it good, by our eſpeciall fauour to defend them from all iniurie: *Conſtit. Frederici,Cod.lib.*4.*tit.*13.*leg.*5. A worthie conſideration, that the Miniſters and Preachers of the Goſpell, which teach the people obedience, and would haue none exempted from their regal authoritie, ſhould themſelues be chiefely defended and protected by it. Agreeable to this Conſtitution, are the Imperial lawes of this nature yet in force, which forbid that any hay, corne, beaſts, cattell or any goods of Clergie men, ſhould be taken from them, by any colour of Commiſſion, without their conſent: For we do take, (as the words of the law are) the ſaid Clergie men with their poſſeſſions, goods and cattels, into our eſpeciall protection and defence: Anno 14.*Eward.*3.*cap.1.& anno* 1.*Richard.*2.*c.*3. Thus Chriſtian Princes in token of thankefulneſſe to the Goſpell and the Miniſters thereof, haue endued them with excellent priuiledges, if through the enuie, and pragmaticall attempts of inferior Miniſters and officers they might be ſuffered to enioy the ſame: But it is now farre otherwiſe, that the Goſpell with the Miniſters thereof are growne into ſuch contempt, that euery vile perſon is readie to offer them wrong, and to moleſt them with iniurious ſuites, and that with many they find ſmall fauour, neyther are reſpected according to their calling; a ſmall reward for their labours in the Goſpell. And thus we are made a ſcorne to our aduerſaries, who laugh in their ſleeues, to ſee the Miniſters of the Goſpell, that haue by their preaching enlarged the Ciuill authoritie, to receiue no more fauour from it, and in enlarging other mens libertie, to abridge their owne: which I ſpeake not, as complayning of the ſoueraigne and ſacred Princely Maieſtie, or the honourable Miniſters thereof; vnder whoſe comfortable ſhadow we liue, and haue libertie of conſcience; but of ſome inferior officers, that haue not that regard to the excellent calling and Miniſterie of the Goſpell, which is fit of all Chriſtians to be acknowledged. But leauing this complaint I will proceed.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER THE PRINCE haue power ouer Eccleſiaſticall goods.

The Papiſts.

99.Error. THe goods of the Clergie both ſecular and Eccleſiaſticall, are and ought to be exempted from paying tribute to Princes: yet they haue not this libertie, ſay they, by the lawe of God, but by the grant of Princes themſelues, *Rhemiſt. annot. Rom.*13.*ſect.*5. *Bellarmine de Clericis, cap.*28.

*Argum.*1. Geneſ.47.22.and 27. The lands of the Prieſts were exempted from paying tribute: Ergo, it ſeemeth that this cuſtome is grounded vpon the law of nature, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the Hebrew word ſignifieth rather Preſidents, ſuch as were the Kings officers, not prieſts, as Tremellius ſheweth: who were maintained by the Kings prouiſion, being officers of his houſehold: for Geneſ.41.45. Ioſeph is ſaid to marrie the daughter of Potyphar Prince, not prieſt of On. The ſame word Cohen is there vſed: for it is not like that Ioſeph would match himſelfe with an idolatrous prieſts daughter. Secondly, but be it granted, this was but a politike conſtitution for that countrie: other Princes are not bound to Pharao his law. Thirdly, they gaine nothing by this, but that it is an humane conſtitution.

*Argum.*2. Some of them do thus reaſon out of our Sauiour Chriſts words, Matth.17. when he ſaid thus to Peter, What thinkeſt thou Simon? of whom do the Kings of the Nations receiue tribute, of their owne, or of ſtrangers? Simon anſwered, of ſtrangers: the Lord ſaid, then are their children free. But Clergie men are the children of the kingdome: Ergo, they ought to be free: thus reaſoneth Marſilius de Padua, and the *Rhemiſts Matth.*17.*ſect.*8.

Anſw. To this argument Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this reaſon all Chriſtians, as well as Clerks ſhould be exempted from tribute, becauſe they are all the Sons of God, being borne anew in Baptiſme. Secondly, Chriſt ſpeaketh onely of himſelfe: that as Kings children are freed from tribute, ſo much more he, being the Sonne and Heire apparant of the King of kings, ſhould be exempted from all temporall tribute: thus one of them anſwereth another. Thirdly, to this anſwere may be added, that Chriſt ſtandeth not vpon any ſuch priuiledge, as hee might iuſtly alledge; but notwithſtanding leaſt he ſhould offend, yeeldeth to pay tribute: therefore by the words of our Sauiour, it is ſcandalous and offenſiue for any to pleade priuiledge in denying of tribute to Princes.

The Proteſtants.

THat Princes haue authoritie to puniſh Eccleſiaſticall perſons offending in their goods; either by diſplacing them, or by conuerting the Church poſſeſſions by them abuſed, to better vſes, we haue ſhewed before, Contr.5.quæſt.6.part.1. And that their goods ought to pay tribute, ſubſidie, taxe, vnto the prince, thus now it is proued.

Argum.1. Our Sauiour Chriſt payed poll money, Matth.17.25. Rom.13. Euery ſoule ought to be ſubiect to the higher powers, and there verſ.5. paying of tribute is made a part of ſubiection: the argument therefore thus followeth: Clergie men are ſubiect to Princes, therefore they ought to pay tribute.

Argum.2. Ex conceſſis, wee reaſon thus from their owne confeſſion: That which Princes gaue to the Church, vpon good cauſe they may take away: but this immunitie, not to pay tribute, was firſt graunted, as they confeſſe, to the Church, by kings and Princes: Ergo, they haue the ſame right, hauing iuſt occaſion, to take it from them againe. What Auguſtines iudgement is, wee haue ſeene in the place before alleaged.

*Concil.Lateranenſ.ſub Leon.*10.*ſeſſ.*11. there the ancient cuſtome and priuiledge of Parliaments is approued: Quod habeant iuriſdictionem in perſonas Eccleſiaſticas: That they haue power and iuriſdiction ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons. And the whole Councell ratified it, ſauing onely Iohannes Dominicus Epiſcop.Terdonenſ. But Parliaments haue authoritie to leuie taxes and ſubſidies vpon Clergie men; ſo that conſequently herein alſo this Councell doth authorize Parliaments.

Fredericke the Emperour writeth well to Pope Adrian the 4. Ab ijs, qui regalia noſtra tenent, cur homagium & regalia ſacramenta non exigimus; cum ille noſter & veſter inſtitutor ab homine rege nihil accipiens, tamen pro ſe & Petro cenſum Cæſari perſoluit, & exemplum vobis dedit, vt vos ita faciatis: Why ſhould we not require fealtie and other regall rights of thoſe, which doe hold and enioy our regall dignities, he meaneth Biſhops, ſeeing that Chriſt the founder both of the Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall ſtate, whereas he receiued nothing of any humane King; yet for himſelfe and Peter payd tribute to Cæſar, and gaue you an example ſo to doe.

This is agreeable to the Ciuil law, Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.3. Conſtantius: Clerici pro ijs prædijs,&c. Clergie men, for ſuch poſſeſſions as they hold, muſt be vrged to pay tribute.

Their owne Canons conſent: Decret.par.1.diſtinct.8.c.1. Noli dicere quid mihi & regi,&c. Say not, what hath the King to doe with me? for what haſt thou to doe with thy poſſeſſion, which thou enioyeſt by the lawes of the King? Decret.par.2.cauſ.11.qu.1.cap.27. Si tributum petit imperator, non negamus: If the Emperour require tribute, wee denie it not: for euen the lands of the Church pay tribute. But becauſe theſe Canons are but compiled by Gratiane out of the fathers, as the firſt out of S. Auguſtine, the ſecond from S. Ambroſe; let vs heare the decree and ſentence of their owne Biſhops of Rome: as Vrbanus thus determineth, Cauſ.23.qu.8.c.22. Tributum in ore piſcis inuentum eſt,&c. Tribute was found in the fiſhes mouth; for the Church of her externall things paieth tribute: but he was not bidden to giue the whole fiſh, but onely the piece in the fiſhes mouth: So the Church and the office of a Biſhop muſt not be yeelded to the Emperour; but that which is found in the mouth of the fiſh muſt bee paied for the defence of peace, &c. Boniface 8. indeed decreed al ſuch lay officers to be excommunicate that laid any taxes or impoſitions vpon the Church, & al Clergie men paying any ſuch, to bee ſubiect to the ſame cenſure, ſext.decr.lib.3.tit.23.cap.3. But this conſtitution is reuerſed by Clemens 5.Clementin.lib.3.tit.17. and by Benedict.11.extrauag.commun.lib.3.tit.13.c.1. where two caſes are excepted, namely, of neceſſitie, and common vtilitie, when it ſhall be lawfull for Clergie men to pay taxe and ſubſidie to the Ciuill ſtate.

Doctor Taylor holie Martyr, alleageth out of Chryſoſtome, how that the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts, and all men in euery realme were euer, and ought to bee euer, both touching bodie and goods, in ſubiection to the kingly authoritie, who hath the ſword in his hand, as Gods principall officer and gouernour in euery realme, *Fox.*pag.1523.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE PRINces authoritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

The Papiſts.

100. Error. THe Prince, they ſay, hath no authoritie to giue voyce deliberatiue or definitiue in Councels concerning matters of religion, nor to make lawes eccleſiaſticall concerning the ſame: Only they giue them authoritie to execute the Eccleſiaſticall lawes made by the Church, Rhemiſt.1.Corinth.14.16.Bellarm.de Pontif.lib.1.cap.7.

Argum.1. Kings and Princes may in their owne perſons execute if they will, whatſoeuer their inferiour officers doe, as to heare and determine cauſes, as the Iudges and other Magiſtrates doe: but the Prince cannot execute any Eccleſiaſticall function, as to preach, baptize: Ergo, he hath no authoritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall: for how can the Prince impart that to others, whereof he is himſelfe incapable, as to giue Biſhops and Paſtors power to ordaine, to preach, and ſuch like: Bellarm.Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, the authoritie of ciuill Magiſtrates doth not giue any thing to Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, which appertaineth to their office, as to ordaine, preach, baptize; neither is the Prince to deale in theſe offices: yet may the ciuill Magiſtrates commaund them to execute their charge and duties according to the word of God. Wherefore it followeth not, Princes cannot execute the paſtorall duties themſelues: Ergo, they ought not to ſee them executed. Dauid, Salomon, Iehoſaphat, Ezechias, commaunded the Prieſts to execute their office according to the law of God, though it was not lawfull for them, neither did they execute any thing proper to the Prieſts office in their owne perſons; neither doth any Chriſtian Prince challenge any ſuch right in Eccleſiaſticall functions: wherefore it is an impudent ſlaunder of Bellarmine, which he giueth forth of our Queene, Iam re ipſa Caluiniſtis in Anglia mulier quadam ſummus pontifex: And now (ſaith he) in England the Caluiniſts haue a certaine woman for their chiefe Biſhop, De notis Eccleſ.lib.4.cap 9.

2 It doth not followe, that the Prince might as well execute Eccleſiaſticall offices, as he may ciuill in his owne perſon, if he haue authoritie ouer both: no more then it followeth, that becauſe Eccleſiaſticall perſons doe teach both ciuil Magiſtrates and Church officers their duties, and may in their owne perſons execute the one, that is, ſpirituall duties, that they may as well intermeddle in the other: But theſe two offices of Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall gouernment are diſtinguiſhed, and muſt not be confounded. The Prince, though he haue authoritie to command Eccleſiaſticall perſons; yet being a ciuill Magiſtrate, is not to deale with the execution of ſpirituall duties. Biſhops and paſtors likewiſe haue a ſpirituall charge ouer Kings and Princes, to ſhew them their duties out of Gods word, yet becauſe they are perſons Eccleſiaſticall, they ought not to meddle with meere ciuill duties. The Prince hath the ſoueraigntie of externall gouernment in all cauſes and ouer all perſons, yet not alike: for ciuill offices he may both command and execute; Eccleſiaſticall duties he commandeth onely: Biſhops and paſtors haue alſo a ſpirituall charge ouer all, preſcribing out of Gods word as well the dutie of Magiſtrates, as of Miniſters, but not alike; for the one they may fully execute, ſo may they not the other. The head in the naturall bodie reſembleth the Prince in the commonwealth, in ſome ſenſe: the head giueth mouing to the whole bodie and all the parts thereof; but to the principall parts in the head the eyes, tongue, eares, it giueth beſide the facultie of mouing, the ſenſe alſo of ſeeing, taſting, hearing: So in the commonwealth, by the Princes authoritie all perſons are kept in order, and vrged to looke to their charge, both ciuil officers and ſpiritual, as all the parts of the body receiue mouing from the head: But the ciuil officers receiue power & authority beſide, & their very offices of the King, as the parts in the head receiue ſenſe frō their fountaine: but Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters receiue not their offices frō the prince, or any mortal man, but they haue their calling according to the order of yͤ Church of God.

Argum.*2. For the ſpace of 300. yeeres the Church after Chriſt had no Chriſtian gouernours, but all Heathen and Idoll worſhippers, yet then the Church was eſtabliſhed, and preuailed: Ergo, Ciuill Magiſtrates ought not to deale in Eccleſiaſticall affayres, Bellarm.de laicis.cap.17.

*Anſw.*1. Euen then alſo, the Heathen Emperours had authoritie in Church matters, and if they had commanded any thing agreeable to true religion, they ſhould haue been obeyed: as Cyrus in the law which he made for building the temple, Ezra.1. Darius the Median, for worſhipping the true God. The Heathen Emperours then had the ſame power, but they knewe not how to vſe it: Chriſtian Princes doe ſucceed them in the ſame office, but are better taught by the word of God how to exerciſe the ſword. Secondly, we deny not but that in the time of perſecution all things neceſſarie for the ſpirituall building thereof may be had, without the Magiſtrate, as a Vineyard may bring forth fruite without an hedge, but it cannot enioy peace, nor be in a perfect eſtate, in reſpect of the externall gouernment, but vnder good Magiſtrates; as the Vineyard may ſoone be ſpoyled, the wild bore and the beaſts of the field may breake in vpon it hauing no hedge. The child being in the wombe, though it haue as yet ſmall vſe of the head, but is fed by the nauell, which is in ſtead of the mouth, hath in it ſelfe the lineaments and proportion of a humane bodie, yet it wanteth the perfect beautie, till it be borne and come forth, and the head receiue his office: So may the Church haue a being in perſecution, and the want of the ciuill head may bee otherwiſe ſupplied, but it is not beautifull till the head bee ſet vp, and the ſword put into the Chriſtian Magiſtrates hand.

Argum.*3. Princes haue no cure nor charge of ſoules: Ergo, they are not to meddle with Eccleſiaſticall lawes, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Corinth.14.ſect.16.

Anſw. Parents haue charge ouer the ſoules of their children, for they are charged to bring them vp in the inſtruction and information of the Lord, Eph.6.4. Therefore Princes alſo haue directly charge of the ſoules of their ſubiects according to their place and calling, by prouiding and making good Eccleſiaſticall lawes, and compelling them to the true ſeruice of God: as the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters in another kind, and more properly are ſaid to haue the cure of ſoules, in feeding and inſtructing the people.

Concil.Matiſconenſ in fine.Guntranus the King being preſent, ſaith thus to the Biſhops: Licet ſine noſtra admonitione, ad vos ſpecialiter prædicandi cauſa pertineat, &c. Although without our admonition or charge, the dutie of preaching doth eſpecially belong to you: neuertheleſſe, we, to whom the higheſt King hath giuen authoritie to raigne, ſhall not eſcape his wrath, if we haue no care of our ſubiects, that is, concerning their religion. This godly King taketh himſelfe to be charged with the ſoules of his people. Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr alſo hath ſealed the ſame truth: Both the falſe teacher, and the corrupt gouernour, ſhall be puniſhed for the death of their ſubiect, whom they haue falſely taught, and corruptly led, yea and his bloud ſhall bee required at his hands. Fox. pag.1774.

The Proteſtants.

THe ciuill Magiſtrate, by the word of God, hath power to make and conſtitute Eccleſiaſticall lawes, and to eſtabliſh true religion, and ſee that all perſons vnder their gouernment doe faithfully execute their charge: To ſay therefore that the Church officers are to deuiſe lawes concerning religion, and the Prince onely to execute them, is to make the Prince their ſeruant, and doth derogate too much from the princely authoritie. Neither doe we giue vnto the Prince abſolute power to make Eccleſiaſticall lawes: for firſt, the Prince is not to preſcribe what lawes he liſteth to the Church, but ſuch as onely may require the true worſhip of God. Secondly, that it is expedient and meete, according to the commendable cuſtome of this land, that the godly learned of the Clergie ſhould be conſulted withall, in eſtabliſhing of Eccleſiaſticall ordinances, vnleſſe it be in ſuch a corrupt time, when the Church gouernours are enemies to religion: for then the Prince, not ſtaying vpon their iudgement, ought to reforme religion according the word of God, as we ſee it was lawfully and godly practiſed by King Henry the eight. Thirdly, we doe make exception of all ſuch Eccleſiaſticall canons and ordinances, the making whereof doth properly belong to the office of Biſhops and gouernours of the Church: for our meaning is not, that it is not lawfull for Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, to make Eccleſiaſticall decrees, which doe properly concerne their office, as concerning the cenſures of the Church, excommunication, ſuſpenſion, abſoluing, binding, looſing, and ſuch like, which things are incident to their paſtorall office: and yet we graunt, that the Prince hath euen in theſe caſes an ouerruling hand, to ſee that none abuſe their paſtorall office: But that any lawes ought to be made without the authoritie of the prince, which the prince is bound to execute, we vtterly deny. And ſo we conclude, that the ciuill Magiſtrate hath power ouer all perſons and in all cauſes, both temporall and Eccleſiaſticall, in ſuch manner as we haue ſaid.

Fulk.Heb.13.9.

Argum 1. S.Paul willeth, that prayers ſhould be made for Kings and Princes, that vnder them we may leade a peaceable life, in all godlines and honeſtie, 1.Tim.2.2. Ergo, it is their dutie as well to procure religion by their authoritie, as ciuill honeſtie. Againe, He beareth not the ſword for nought, Rom.13.4. He hath power to puniſh all euill doers: therefore alſo to correct euill miniſters, and to make Eccleſiaſticall lawes: for otherwiſe he ſhould haue no full power to correct the tranſgreſſors thereof.

*Argum.*2. We reade that Ioſua, Dauid, Salomon, Ioſias, did deale in Eccleſiaſticall matters, which concerned religion and the worſhip of God. Bellarm. They did it by an extraordinarie authoritie, not as Kings, but as Prophets. Nay, it was an ordinarie power: for all the good Kings of Iuda beſide, as Iehoſaphat, Hezekiah, and others, did take care of religion: and this was ſo properly annexed to the kingly office, that idolatrous Kings alſo tooke vpon them to command falſe religion, as Ieroboam ſet vp two golden calues, and Ahaz King of Iudah commaunded Vriah the high Prieſt to make an Altar according to the patterne which he ſent from Damaſcus, 2.King.16.11. This power alſo was afterward exerciſed by Chriſtian Kings and Emperours: as Conſtantinus, Theodoſius, Martianus, made lawes for the Church. Iuſtinianus the Emperour decreed many things concerning Church affayres: as how excommunication ſhould be vſed, how Biſhops and Prieſts ſhould be ordained, concerning the order and manner of funerals: that the holy myſteries ſhould not be done in priuate houſes. Carolus magnus decreed, that onely the Canonicall bookes of Scripture ſhould be read in the Church: he chargeth all Biſhops and prieſts to preach the word. Lodouicus Pius his ſonne, and Emperour after him, ordained that no entrie ſhould be made into the Church by Symonie: that Biſhops ſhould be choſen by the free election of the Clergie and the people. All theſe Emperors did lawfully exerciſe their princely authoritie in Eccleſiaſticall matters: Ergo, other Princes may doe the ſame ſtill.

Fox.pag.7.

3 Auguſtine ſaith, *Epiſtol.*50. Quis mente ſobrius, &c? Who in his right wits would ſay to the King, It pertaineth not to you, who in your kingdom is religious or ſacrilegious; to whom it cannot be ſaid, let it not pertaine vnto you, who in your kingdome will be chaſte or vnchaſte? And in another place, *Ad fratres in erem.ſerm.*14. Tunc iuſtitia dicitur gladius ex vtraque parte acutus, quia hominis defendit corpus ab exterioribus iniurijs,& animam à ſpiritualibus moleſtijs: Then iuſtice is rightly called a ſword with a double edge, becauſe it doth both defend the bodie from externall and corporall wrongs, and the ſoule from ſpirituall vexation: That is, the ſword of the Magiſtrate ſerueth as well to prune the Church, and to cut off all errors and hereſies in religion, as to deſtroy the vices and corruptions in manners.

The conſent of antiquitie is on our ſide: Bonifacius ad Honorium imperatorem: Angeretur plurib. Chriſtianiſſime princeps, mater eccleſia niſi apud te ſuarum eſſet ſecura cauſarum: The Church your mother, moſt Chriſtian prince, would bee greatly grieued, if ſhe were not ſecure and confident in all her cauſes and matters, which reſt in your hand.

Leo epiſtol.7.ad Theodoſium: Vobis non ſolum regium, ſed ſacerdotalem animum ineſſe gaudemus, ſiquidem prater imperiales & publicas curas, piiſſimam ſollicitudinem Chriſtianæ religionis habetis: We doe reioyce to ſee in you not onely a kingly, but a prieſtly minde, in that beſide your imperiall cares, you are moſt godly carefull of religion.

Concil.6.Conſtantinop. Quid eſt præſertim imperatori decibilius,&c.quam præ omnibus pietate adornare ſubiectos.action.18. What can bee more comely, eſpecially for the Emperour, then to adorne his ſubiects with pietie?

Arelatenſ.ſub Carolo.can.26.Hæc imperatori præſentanda decreuimus, poſcentes eius clementiam, vt ſi quid hic minus eſt, eius prudentia ſuppleatur; ſi quid ſecus, quam ſe ratio habet, eius iudicio emendetur; ſi quid rationabiliter taxatum eſt, eius adiutorio perficiatur: Theſe things which wee haue decreed, wee purpoſe to preſent to the Emperour, that if any thing be wanting, it may bee by his prudence ſupplied; if any thing amiſſe, it may be by him amended; if any thing reaſonably inioyned, it may be by his helpe perfited and confirmed. Do not they now go againſt all antiquitie, that ſay the Prince ought to haue no voyce in Councell, nor to make Eccleſiaſticall lawes: whereas theſe ancient Canons doe ſhew, that theſe things did principally belong to the ciuill Magiſtrate?

We haue alſo moſt euident teſtimonies out of the Ciuill and Canon law. Firſt, Cod.lib.1.tit.4. leg.1. A law is made by the Emperours Gratianus, Valentinianus, Theodoſius, as touching the Catholike faith, and the right beleeuing in the Trinitie. Leg.3.Martianus ordaineth, that no man publikely ſhould diſpute of the faith receiued. Tit.6.leg.26.Leo maketh a conſtitution againſt the placing, and carying about of relicks. It is euident then that theſe Chriſtian Emperours had to doe in the matters of faith.

Likewiſe for their owne Canons: Decret.par.1.diſt.96.Nickolaus thus writeth to Michael the Emperour: Vbi legiſtis,&c. Where haue you read, that any of your predeceſſors were preſent in Synodes, but onely where faith was entreated of, which is vniuerſall, and common to all, as well the Laitie as the Clergie? This Canon excludeth not the imperiall preſence and authoritie euen in matters of faith.

Cauſ.16.qu.7.31.regis auribus,&c. If the Metropolitane take away any thing dedicated to the Church, intimate it into the eares of the King.

Cauſ.23.quæſt.5.cap.20.Cognoſcant reges ſeculi,&c. Let the Princes of the world know that they muſt render an account vnto God for the Church, which they receiued to defend: Per terrenum regnum ſæpe cœleſte regnum proficit: Oftentimes the heauenly kingdome is encreaſed by the terrene and earthly kingdome. But more euidently, Can.21.Leo: Res humana,&c. Humane ſtate cannot ſtand, vnleſſe ſuch things, as belong to the diuine faith, both the prieſtly and kingly authoritie defend. c.34. Iniuria ſacramentorum, &c. The iniurie done to the Sacraments of Chriſt, muſt bee reuenged of Kings. c.40.Rex debet adulteria punire: The King muſt puniſh adulterie. Thus we ſee how that by the ſentence of their owne lawe, Princes ought to beare ſway euen in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

AN APPENDIX OR FOVRTH PART OF THE QVEſtion, whether the Prince in any good ſenſe may be called the head of his kingdome, and conſequently of the Church in his kingdome.

The Papiſts.

101. THey doe appropriate this title, to bee called head of the vniuerſall Church, to the Pope of Rome, moſt blaſphemouſly: for there can be no head of the vniuerſall bodie but Chriſt: But for Princes to bee called the head, that is, chiefe gouernours of the Churches in their kingdomes, they doe abhorre it. Whereupon Bellarmine is ſo ſaucie as to checke and controule King Henrie the 8. becauſe he was called the head of the Engliſh Church.

Argum.1. The Heathen Emperours were not heads of the Church, being not ſo much as members thereof: therefore neither Chriſtian Magiſtrates, which doe ſucceede them in that authoritie, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Pet.2.ſect.6.

Anſ. The argument followeth not: they were no true members of the Church, therefore could not bee heads, that is, haue the ſoueraigntie of the externall gouernment: for wicked Kings and Princes doe keepe their magiſtracie and gouernment ſtill; who though they be not true members of the Catholike Church, yet ought to be obeyed as Princes. 2. Though the metaphoricall name of head agreed not vnto them, yet were they by Gods ordinance appointed to bee heads and gouernours of his people and protectors of his Church, and ſhould haue been, if they had not abuſed their authoritie. 3. Chriſtian Princes, though they haue the ſame authoritie which they had, yet now exerciſing the ſword according to Gods law, and being Nurſes of the Church, may vſe and retaine thoſe princely titles indeede, to bee called Patrones and defenders of the faith, and head, that is, chiefe gouernours and protectors of the Church: which by right had been due vnto the other, if they had vſed their authoritie as they ſhould.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr: Euen Nero was Peters head, and the head of the Church, that is, in worldly reſpect of the temporall bodies of men, of whom the Church conſiſteth; for ſo he beheaded Peter, and the Apoſtles: And ſo the Turke to is head of the Church in Turkey, Fox p.1877.

*Argum.*2. Chriſtian Princes are members of the Church: Ergo, not heads; for if they were heads, how could the Church ſtand without them, as it did in the time of perſecution?

Anſ. Firſt, as though the head is not a member and part of the bodie, though a principall one: ſo the Prince is a member of the Church, but a principall and chiefe member, not of the inuiſible Church, for ſo Chriſt is onely head; but of a particular viſible Church. Secondly, we deny not but that the inuiſible and ſpirituall Church may conſiſt without the Magiſtrate: but a viſible, flouriſhing, and wel-gouerned Church cannot want a head or chiefe gouernour, that is as a wall or hedge vnto it.

The Proteſtants.

TO bee head of the vniuerſall Church is proper onely to Chriſt, and in that ſenſe is not communicable to any creature: for he is to his Church, as the head to the naturall bodie, giuing vnto it influence of grace, ſpirit and life: he is therefore the onely myſticall head of the vniuerſall Church: But in another ſenſe the Prince may be ſaid to bee the head and chiefe gouernour of his kingdome, and of that particular viſible Church, where he is King: We make him neither the myſticall head, which is onely Chriſt, (farre bee that blaſphemie from vs) nor a miniſteriall head, as they make the Pope to bee as Chriſts Vicegerent in the Church; but a politicall head, to keepe and preſerue the peace of the Church, and to ſee that euery member doe his office and dutie. But this name we confeſſe is vnproperly giuen to the Prince, neither were we the firſt inuentors of it: for the Papiſts firſt gaue it to Henry the 8. And there are other titles which do ſufficiently expreſſe the office of the Prince, and may bee more ſafely vſed. If any man thinke it too high a name for any mortall man, and ſo not to bee giuen to any, we will not greatly contend about it: But if any denie it to the Prince, as thereby to abridge her of her power in Eccleſiaſticall matters, wee doe ſtand ſtiffely for it; and are bold to affirme, that with much better right is this title attributed to the ciuill Magiſtrate then it was to the Pope: yea, and that it hath been of old giuen in a modeſt and ſober ſenſe to Kings and Princes, and may with a fauourable expoſition be ſtill: and Princes alſo may receiue this honour and title at their ſubiects hands, with proteſtation of their Chriſtian meaning herein.

*Argum.*1. This phraſe, for the King to bee called the head, is not vnuſuall in Scripture, 1.Samuel 15.17. Saul is ſaid to bee the head of the tribes. Pſal.18.43. Dauid the head of the nations: Iſay 9.15. The Prince or honourable man the head of the people: yea Princes are called Gods, Pſal.82.2. which is a name of greater ſoueraigntie, then to be called heads.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Princes doe rule ouer their ſubiects as men, not as Chriſtians; and Kings are ſet ouer the people, not as they are Chriſtians, but politike perſons: ſo the Prince is head of the kingdome, not of the Church, *De pontif.Rom.lib.*1.*cap.*7.

Anſ. Stephen Gardiner taketh away this cauill very ſufficiently, wee will ſet one Papiſt againſt another: It is all one (ſaith he) to call the Prince head of the Church of England, and head of the Realme of England; for if all Engliſhmen bee his ſubiects, why are they not his ſubiects, as they are Chriſtians? If the wife or ſeruant bee ſubiect to the maſter or husband being infidels, doth their conuerſion, or name of Chriſtians make them leſſe ſubiect, then they were before? Hæc ille. Againe, how farre is this, I pray you, from Anabaptiſtrie, to ſay, that ſubiects, onely as men, not as Chriſtians, are in ſubiection to Princes? for doth it not follow hereupon, that as Chriſtians they ought to haue no ſuperiour or Magiſtrate? Fox.pag.1059.

*Argum.*2. It is ſufficient for vs, that this title more fitly and properly belongeth to euery Prince in his owne kingdome, then to the Pope: For the Pope can in no wiſe bee head of the Church; he is not the myſticall head, neither dare they ſay ſo; for Chriſt onely is the head in that manner: neither can he bee the Miniſteriall head of the vniuerſall Church; for the Catholike Church is a bodie myſticall, and muſt needes haue a myſticall head: neither is he the politicall head of any particular Church: for no Biſhop can be a politicall head; becauſe he that is the head and chiefe muſt haue a coactiue power, to binde his ſubiects to obedience: ſo hath not any Biſhop. The Prince onely beareth the ſword, and enforceth obedience. Againe, in a farre diuers ſenſe is the Prince called the head, then the Pope was: for firſt the Pope challenged to bee head of the vniuerſall Church; but the Prince is chiefe onely in his owne kingdome. Secondly, the Pope would be an abſolute head, to doe all vpon earth that Chriſt did, yea and more too, to binde and looſe at his pleaſure, to depoſe Kings, to diſpenſe with the word of God, to conſtitute and make lawes at his pleaſure: inſomuch that one of his clawbacke flatterers is not aſhamed to ſay of him, Panormitane. Chriſtus & Papa vnum faciunt conſiſtorium, & exceptò peccato poteſt Papa, quaſi omnia facere, quæ poteſt Deus: Chriſt and the Pope make but one Conſiſtorie, and keepe but one court; and ſinne onely excepted, the Pope in a manner can doe all things that God can doe. But wee doe limit the power of the Prince: who is not to impoſe any lawes vpon the Church, but ſuch as are agreeable to the word of God: neither doe we make him a ſpirituall officer, as the Pope would be, but a ciuill gouernour, who by poſitiue lawes is to prouide for the peace and welfare of the Church.

1.Pet.2.13. Laſtly, Saint Peter ſaith, Submit your ſelues to the King as the chiefe, ὡς ὑπερέχοντι, or moſt excelling: what is this elſe, but as to the head? what is it to bee chiefe but to bee head? But we will not much contend for the name, ſo they will graunt vs the thing: namely, that the Prince is a commaunder euen in Eccleſiaſticall matters, as Auguſtine ſaith: In hoc reges Deo ſeruiunt, ſi mala prohibeant, non ſolùm quæ pertinent ad humanam ſocietatem, verumetiam quæ ad diuinam religionem. Cont. Creſcon. lib. 3. cap. 5. In this Kings doe good ſeruice to God, if they forbid euill to be done, not onely in matters pertaining to humane ſocietie, but in things concerning religion. As for the title, to bee called head, let them ceaſe to call their chiefe Biſhop ſo who hath no right vnto it, and wee will promiſe alſo to lay it downe, though in good ſenſe we might vſe it, though the Pope had neuer laid claime thereunto.

Concil. Toletan. 8. Recceſiunthus the King thus ſaith in his preface to the Councell: Regendorum membrorum cauſa, ſalus eſt capitis; & fœlicitas populorum, non niſi manſuetudo eſt principum: The health of the head muſt be ſought, for the better regiment of the members; and the happines of the people, is the lenitie of their Prince. Here the Prince is called the head, the people the members.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr: The King is the ſupreame head of all the people of England both Eccleſiaſticall and temporall, which are the viſible Church: But Chriſt onely is head of the Church, that is, of the faith and religion thereof, both of the whole vniuerſall Church, and of euerie member thereof, Fox pag. 1881. And otherwiſe we hold not.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING THE authoritie of the Prince in puniſhing Heretikes.

WE doe willingly graunt, that obſtinate heretikes and peruerters of the faith, if they perſiſt in their damnable opinions, and remaine incorrigible, may and ought to bee cut off and puniſhed by death, to make others to feare: So Seruetus at Geneua, and one Valentinus at Berne, both monſtrous heretikes, not amongſt the Papiſts, but by the Proteſtants were worthily put to death. In this therefore wee and our aduerſaries agree, that heretikes may bee puniſhed by death by the ciuill Magiſtrate. If Luther, or any other haue held any priuate opinion to the contrarie, let them anſwere for themſelues: but although we varie not in the principall, yet there are certaine circumſtances and acceſſaries greatly materiall, wherein they both diſſent from vs and from the truth.

Bellarm. de pontif. lib. 1. cap. 7. 1 They would haue the Magiſtrate onely to be their executioner, the iudgement of hereſie, they ſay, belongeth to the Church: for they cited, examined, iudged, degraded, condemned heretikes; and then gaue them ouer to the ſecular power: this was the common practiſe, of their Church. 102.

But we hold, that the hearing, iudgement, ſentence, and condemnation of heretikes belongeth to the ciuill Magiſtrate, as well as the execution: becauſe theſe actions are proper to the ciuill ſword, which the Magiſtrate beareth, Rom. 13. and Deut. 17. 5. The falſe Prophets and Idolaters were brought to the gates of the Citie where the ciuill Magiſtrate was wont to ſit. Auguſtine is of the ſame minde, Cur in veneficos vigorem legum exerceri iuſtè fatentur, in hæreticos & ſchiſmaticos nolunt fateri? cont. epiſt. Parmen. 1. 7. Why do they graunt, that the vigour of the law may iuſtly be executed vpon witches, and not as well vpon heretikes and ſchiſmatikes? But the cauſes of witches are heard, iudged and handled before the ciuill Magiſtrate: Ergo, alſo the cauſe of heretikes. Auguſtines reaſon is out of the 5. Galath. 20. The workes of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are adulterie, fornication, idolatrie, witchcraft, and hereſies are alſo reckoned vp amongſt them: All theſe are workes of the fleſh: Ergo, the Magiſtrate being appointed to puniſh euill doers, hath asfull right to deale againſt them all, as ſome.

Concil.Chalcedon.action.16. Quoties ſacerdotum ſententia quoſdam indignos ſacerdotio de ſacris ſedibus depoſuit, toties imperium eiuſdem ſententiæ & ordinationis cum ſacerdotum authoritate fuit: As often as any vnworthie perſons by the ſentence of Miniſters were thruſt from their ſeates, ſo often the imperiall power did concurre with the authoritie of the Prieſtes in the ſame ſentence: the Emperour was ioyned with Clergie men in the iudgement of hereſie.

Thus teſtifieth M.Philpot holy Martyr, I ſeeke not to be mine owne Iudge, but am content to be iudged by other, ſo that the order of iudgement in matters of religion be kept, that was in the primitiue Church; which is, firſt, that Gods will by his word was ſought, and thereunto both the ſpiritualtie and temporaltie was gathered together and gaue their conſents and iudgements, &c. Fox.pag.1807.

That the iudgement of hereſie belongeth to the Ciuill power; it is euident by the Imperiall lawes: Cod.lib.1.tit.8.leg.2.Gratian Valentinian. Hæreticorum vocabulo continentur, &c. They are to be accounted heretikes, that do erre neuer ſo little from the Catholike faith. Tit.12.leg.11. Theodoſ. Certum eſt &c. It is certaine, that whatſoeuer doth differ from the Chriſtian faith, is contrarie to the Chriſtian law, therefore Chriſtian lawes do take knowledge of things varying from the faith. Decret.p.2.cauſ.23.qu.8.c.30. Ne Clerici, quod morte plectendum eſt, propria ſententia iudicare præſumant: That Clergy men ſhould not giue ſentence, where the puniſhment is by death. But hereſie is to be puniſhed by death; Ergo, Clergie men are not to giue ſentence againſt heretikes.

But if it ſhall be anſwered, that they put none to death, but deliuer them ouer to the ſecular power: this cannot excuſe them, but is flat contrary to their owne Canon, Cauſ.33.diſtinct.1. c.23. Perniciosè ſe decipiunt, &c. They do perniciouſly deceiue themſelues, that thinke them onely to be manſlayers, that kill with their hands, and not they by whoſe counſell and encouragement men are killed, &c. The Iewes did not kill our Lord with their owne hands; for ſay they, it is not lawfull for vs to put any to death; yet our Lords death is imputed vnto them, becauſe with their tongue and voyce they killed him, crying out, that he ſhould be crucified: Qui ergo hominem tradidit &c. He therefore that deliuereth a man ouer, killeth him. Wherefore the popiſh Phariſees, or phariſaicall Papiſts, in that they deliuer innocents ouer to be killed, are the killers themſelues.

103. 2 We differ about the way and meanes to trie an heretike by: They affirme that he is an heretike onely that is ſo iudged by a generall Councell, or the ſentence of the chiefe Paſtors of the Church: they would haue an heretike tryed by the conſtitutions and Canons of their Church, Annot.tit.3.ſect.2.Rhemiſt.

We ſay that an heretike is to be conuicted by the Scriptures, and that he that holdeth any opinion obſtinately againſt the manifeſt authoritie of Scripture, may be iudged an heretike without a general Councel: So Auguſtine writeth, anſwering the Pelagians, who obiected that they were condẽned without a Synod. Ac ſi congregatione Synodi opus erat, vt aperta pernicies damnaretur, quaſi nulla hæreſis aliquando, niſi ſynodi congregatione damnata ſit. As though a Synod need to be congregate or called, to condemñe ſuch open wickednes, as if neuer any hereſie had bin condemned but in a Synode or Councel: Cont.2.epiſtol.Pelag.lib.4.cap.12. This is that heretical opinion, as they call it, which the Councell of Conſtance condemned in Iohn Huſſe, and him together with it, becauſe he ſaid, That an heretike, whatſoeuer he be, ought firſt to be inſtructed, and taught with Chriſtian loue, and gentleneſſe by the holy Scriptures, and by reaſons drawne out of the ſame, before hee ſuffer corporall or bodily puniſhment: Fox.p.610.articul.18. Which his ſaying is grounded vpon that rule of the Goſpell, Matth.18.15. That if we ſee one offend, we ſhould firſt tell him priuatly; then before two or three: laſtly, declare it to the Church: and if he will not heare the Church, that is, by Scripture conuincing him; then continuing obſtinate, let him be as a publicane. This rule the Papiſts kept not in their bloudie perſecutions here in England: They put many hundreds to death, and were not able to conuince any one of hereſie; but in diſputation were themſelues put to ſilence and made aſhamed: Their onely arguments were the fire and fagot.

That hereſie muſt be tryed out by Scripture, wee haue the iudgement and practiſe of ancient times. Concil. Aquileienſ. contra Palladium Arrianum: Propoſitæ diuinæ in medio ſcripturæ. præſens eſt Apoſtolus, omnes ſcripturæ præſtò ſunt, vnde vis, aſtrue, ſi putas non eſſe filium Dei ſempiternum: The diuine Scriptures are ſet forth in the middeſt, the Apoſtle is preſent, the Scriptures are at hand: fetch thy prooues, where thou wilt, if thou thinkeſt that Chriſt is not the Sonne of God.

Leo epiſtol,44. Quia Euangelica, & apoſtolica fides omnes expugnat errores, hanc regulam mementote ſeruandam: becauſe the faith or trueth of the Goſpel and Apoſtles doth expugne all error, remember to keepe this rule.

Maſter Philpot putteth his ſeale to this trueth: ſhewing how in the primitiue Church after the iudgment of Gods word declared, with the aſſent of the Biſhops and the people, heretikes were condemned, or abſolued, Fox.p.1806.examinat.6.

Concerning the other point, that heretikes ought not raſhly to be condemned without ſufficient triall and examination, and euident conuincing of them, thus it is ſhewed.

The Councell of Baſile for promiſing to the Bohemians free audience, and libertie to diſpute, was therefore reprooued by ſome of the Popes accomplices: The Councell anſwereth thus, in one of their Epiſtles Synodals: Omnis ſchola Theologorum & canoniſtarum, affirmat eam diſputationem, &c. The whole ſchoole of Diuines and Canoniſts denieth not, but ſuch diſputation of faith to be lawfull, which is not the cauſe of tumult, of diſtruſt, or doubting in faith, but for inſtruction, and to open the truth, to conuince heretikes, and confirme the Catholikes: for as Gregory ſaith, as vnaduiſed ſpeech bringeth into error, ſo vndiſcreete ſilence leaueth them in error, which might be inſtructed. To this alſo agreeth the extrauagant, *lib.*5.*tit.*8.*c.*1. *Ioann.*22. Nolentes antè credere, quam probare: We not willing to beleeue, before we proue, haue appointed inquiſition and ſearch to be made &c. It is lawfull therefore to diſpute with heretikes: which Winchester denyeth to Maſter Rogers holy Martyr, who complaineth; that it was not permitted him to trie out the truth by conference, and writing, *Fox.*pag.1485.

Error. 104.

3 Againe, they vſed vnlawful wayes and vniuſt, in ſifting and examining, by cruel torments the poore innocents brought before them, neither ſhewing accuſers nor witneſſes: Iohn Browne Martyr appearing before Warham and Fiſher, two bloodſuckers, was burned with hot coales, his bare feete being ſet vpon them: Fox.pag.1292. Cutbert Symſons fingers were grated with an arrow, and he himſelfe piteouſly racked, to be made betray his innocent brethren, *Fox.*p.2032. Tomkins hand was burned by Bonner, till the ſinewes ſparkled againe, *Fox.*p.1533. And theſe were the witneſſes and accuſers that were brought againſt them.

Which practiſe of theirs is flat contrarie to the auncient Canons: Calixtus the ſecond, Per ſcripturam nullus accuſare, vel accuſari poteſt, ſed propria voce, & præſente eo, quem accuſare voluerit, ſuam quiſque agat accuſationem: Let no man accuſe or be accuſed by writing, but by his owne voyce, and in the preſence of him, who is accuſed, let the accuſation be made.

*Fabianus epiſtol.*2. Nullus præſumat accuſator ſimul eſſe & iudex, vel teſtis, quoniam in omni iudicio quatuor perſonas neceſſe eſt ſemper adeſſe: Iudices electos, accuſatores, defenſores, & teſtes: Let no man preſume to be an accuſer, and iudge at the ſame time, or witneſſe: becauſe in euery iudgement there muſt be foure perſons, the Iudges, accuſers, defenders, witneſſes.

*Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocentio.*3.*cap.*8. Debet præſens eſſe is, contra quem facienda eſt inquiſitio, &c. He ought to be preſent, againſt whome enquirie is to be made, and the ſeuerall pointes and articles, which are ſought into, muſt be declared, that he may haue power to defend himſelfe: And not onely the words of the accuſation, but the perſons alſo muſt be publiſhed, that it may appeare, what, and by whom euery thing is reported. It ſhall alſo be lawfull for the partie accuſed, to take exceptions, and make replication: And all this would be done, leſt by ſuppreſſing names men ſhould take occaſion to defame others; and by cutting off of exceptions, they ſhould not be afraid to ſweare falſly.

What clearer teſtimonie can we haue, againſt this popiſh courſe and manner of proceeding in iudgement, when as without witneſſes a man is condemned, whereas the lawe, as we ſee, alloweth the accuſed, to vnderſtand the articles whereof he is accuſed, that he may haue time to anſwere, and to his accuſer, that if there be cauſe, he may take exception againſt him.

Quæſt.ex vtroque mix. 102.

This was cleane contrarie to the lawe of Moſes: At the mouth of two or three witneſſes, ſhall he that is worthy of death die, Deuteron.17.6. Auguſtine ſaith, Quis iudex accuſantis ſumat perſonam? &c. What Iudge would take vpon him to be an accuſer? Our Lord Chriſt knewe Iudas to be a theefe (ſaith he:) yet becauſe he was not accuſed, he did not caſt him off. He counteth it a very vnnaturall thing for the Iudge to be an accuſer, and to proceede without witneſſes: which although in ſome criminall caſes is more tolerable, yet in the caſes of life and death ought in no wiſe to be vſed. The ſame iudgement alſo Auguſtine giueth of that cruell cuſtome of tormenting men, to conuince them by their owne mouth, which was inuented by the heathen, but neuer more cruelly practiſed then among the papiſts: Hoc intolerabile eſt (ſaith he) & rigandum fontibus lacrymarum, cum propterea torqueat iudex accuſatum, ne occidat neſciens innocentem; & fit per ignorantiam, vt & tortum & innocentem occidat, quem ne innocentem occideret, torſerat: How intolerable a thing is it, and to be much lamented, that while the Iudge tormenteth the partie accuſed, leaſt vnwittingly he ſhould put an innocent man to death; it falleth out that he adiugeth to death a man both innocent, and beſide tormented; whom, leaſt he ſhould ſlay as an innocent, he before put to torment. His meaning is, that when a man is put to the racke, or otherwiſe tortured, that he might confeſſe the truth, and cleere himſelfe; it commeth to paſſe, that through extremitie of the paine, he maketh himſelfe guiltie, and ſo the innocent is both wrongfully tormented, and vniuſtly put to death. Which kind of forcing men by torture, though in ſome dangerous caſes, as of high treaſon, and ſuch like, where there is great perill in the concealing of the truth, and no other way to ſift it out, may be admitted: yet to vſe it as an ordinarie courſe as the papiſts did, and in cauſes of religion, it is too ſhamefull, and of all Christians to be abhorred.

Now, as touching theſe three points, to proceede without an accuſer, without witneſſe: by the parties oth, and by torments, in matters and cauſes concerning the life of him that is accuſed, I will in order ſhew, how it agreeth, or diſagreeth both with the Ciuill and Canon law.

Concerning the neceſſitie of an accuſer in matters of iudgement, the Ciuil law hath thus determined: Cod.lib.9.tit.2.leg.16. Libellus in criminali,&c. The libell in criminall cauſes muſt containe the name of the accuſer, the Iudge, & of the partie accuſed. Arcadius,leg.7.Honor.Quiſquis crimen intendit in iudicium veniat,&c. Whoſoeuer doth obiect any crime, let him come himſelfe into open iudgement, and declare the matter, and let him bee vnder ſafe keeping, as well as the partie accuſed, till the matter be examined. Againe, ibid.leg.14.Arcad. Iudex in publicis criminibus non debet vti emendicatis ſuffragijs decretorum,&c. The Iudge in publike crimes, muſt not bee ruled by the reports of the acts or decrees, but ſeeke out the truth of the matter. This law chargeth Iudges not to be carried, no not by the complaints or informations of the Notaries and officers of the court, without due proofe.

Hereunto their owne decrees giue conſent: Cauſ.2.qu.1.c.10.Nicholaus: Reſtituendus, qui nec confeſſus, nec conuictus: He muſt bee reſtored, that is neither confeſſed, nor detected. Cap.7.Gregor. Si non alij teſtes, alij accuſatores,&c. iudicium non ordinabiliter factum: If that there bee not ſome witneſſes, ſome accuſers, the iudgement is not orderly. Likewiſe, Cauſ.30.qu.5.c.11.Eleuther. preſcribeth this forme of iudgement; That the Iudge ſhould giue licence to each partie, the one to obiect, the other to anſwere, vt actio ambarum partium illuminata ſit pleniter, that both parties action may bee fully cleered, and inlightened: But this cannot bee, whereas there is but one partie. Wherefore both the lawes agree in this, that an accuſer muſt bee in euery lawfull iudgement produced: Yet there is a certaine caſe excepted, wherein an accuſer is not needfull: as Cod.lib.9.tit.2. leg.7 Gordian. Niſi in notorio iudex procedit per viam accuſationis: Vnleſſe the matter be notorious, the Iudge muſt proceede by way of accuſation. So alſo ſaith the Canon law: Decret.Greg.lib.3. tit.2.c.8.Innocent.3. In notorijs nec teſtis,&c. In a notorious matter, neither witneſſe, or accuſer is neceſſarie. And what is to bee counted notorious, or manifeſt, is further ſhewed, ibid.lib.5.tit.40. c.24.Innocent.3. That is a manifeſt crime, which is knowne, per confeſſionem, probationem, rei euidentiam, by confeſſion, or due proofe, or the euidence of the thing it ſelfe. If then in caſes onely notoriouſly knowne an accuſer is not neceſſarie, but in all other caſes, he muſt be produced: then haue the Papiſts been moſt iniurious to many conuented before them for hereſie (as they call it) and other crimes, who were not ſuſpected, much leſſe detected thereof, and ſo far from being notorious heretikes; & yet they proceeded againſt them, as they called it ex officio, ſhewing no accuſer at all.

I cannot here omit that notable place of S. Ambroſe to this purpoſe, epiſtol.66. where he reproueth one Syagrius the Biſhop of Verona: Quod virginem, quam nullus argueret,&c. For that he drew a certaine Virgin into great hazard and danger of guiltines, without any accuſer: where did he learne any ſuch forme of iudgement? if he aske the lawes, they require an accuſer; if he referre it to the Church, there in the mouth of two or three witneſſes euery word is eſtabliſhed. If Syagrius for proceeding againſt a Virgin for incontinencie without an accuſer, were much blamed by S. Ambroſe, what would he haue ſaid, if he had ſeene this practiſe vſuall in the popiſh prelacie euen in the caſes of hereſie, to which belonged the ſentence of death?

Now concerning the ſecond point, whether a man may bee vrged to accuſe himſelfe vpon his oth, eſpecially in capitall cauſes, the iudgement of the law is, that, except in certaine caſes, none ſhould be enforced to teſtifie againſt themſelues. Firſt, Cod.lib.4.tit.20.leg.6.Diocletian. Nemo contra ſe cogitur teſtes producere: No man is compelled to produce witneſſes againſt himſelfe: but he that by his oth maketh himſelfe guiltie, witneſſeth againſt himſelfe. So likewiſe in the Canon law, Cauſ.35.qu 6.c.4.Vrbanus: Si negauerint, ſibipſis relinquendi: If inceſt cannot be proued neither by oth of witneſſes, nor by confeſſion, the partie muſt bee charged by their baptiſme, their faith, &c. to confeſſe the truth: but if they denie, they muſt bee left to themſelues. This Canon preſcribeth no oth, but an earneſt obteſtation to be miniſtred vnto the ſuſpected partie.

But yet certaine caſes there are aſſigned in the law, wherein the partie accuſed may be brought to his oth: as firſt, Propter inopiam probationum: If the proofe doe otherwiſe faile: Cod.lib.4.tit.1. leg.3.Dioclet. So that all other proues muſt be vſed before the partie be driuen to his oth: that as the law is, for torments, and tortures, that they muſt not bee miniſtred in the firſt place, but other arguments muſt firſt bee vſed: Cod.lib.9.tit.41.leg.8.Dioclet. ſo likewiſe the oth of the partie muſt not be enforced, but other euidences and preſumptions firſt are to be produced.

Secondly, there muſt by the law a partie bee giuen, and an accuſer ſet forth, where the other partie is vrged to his oth: the reaſon is this, becauſe the guiltie partie hath 3. things put to his choiſe by the law: Reus debet iurare, ſoluere, vel referre iuramentum: He may either ſweare, or be content to be condemned, or refer the oth to his accuſer: that is, vrge him firſt to ſweare, Cod lib.4.tit.1.leg.9. Diocletian. The reaſon is giuen, ibid.leg.12.Iuſtinian: Non debet reſpuere in perſona ſua, quod placuit in perſona aduerſarij: He muſt not refuſe to doe that in his owne perſon, which he was pleaſed with in his aduerſarie. So then where the guiltie partie was vrged to ſweare, the accuſer alſo was by his oth to iuſtifie his accuſation. And this referring or rebounding of an oth is allowed by their law, decret.Greg.lib.2.tit.24.cap.36.Greg.9. Quod in iudicio à parte parti defertur,&c. An oth in iudgement betweene partie and partie may be referred.

Thirdly, where it is agreed by the parties themſelues, that the matter ſhall be decided by the oth of a partie, in that caſe ſuch oth by the law is allowed : as when there ariſeth a queſtion, whether one bee right heire; if they, whom it concerneth, be content to put it to his oth, it ſhall ſtand, Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.6.

Fourthly, the parties oth by the Ciuill law was vſed for the moſt part in ciuill cauſes, as in queſtions of debt, in matters of truſt, and ſuch like; where an apparant iniurie did ſeeme to be offered, or intended by the partie ſworne, to the other partie by whom he is impleaded : as Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.5. The pupill or ward might put his tutor or guardian to his oth, concerning ſuch things, as were committed to his truſt. Ibid.leg.9. In an action of debt, the debter might bee put to his oth : he muſt either ſweare or pay. Ibid.leg.10. In actione depoſiti,&c. In an action of a thing committed to ones truſt, the partie might be required to take his oth. In theſe and the like caſes ciuill, where the truth is concealed to another mans loſſe and hinderance, the oth of the partie ſued or impleaded, might be demaunded : but in caſes criminall, where the offence redoundeth to the hurt and dammage of the partie, rather then to the reliefe of another, it is thought hard to preſſe him with an oth againſt himſelfe ; yet in ſome criminall caſes it is allowed, as now followeth to be ſhewed.

Fiftly, then in ſuch criminall caſes, as where the offence is publike, and the puniſhment extendeth not to death, where other proofe faileth, the partie may be charged with an oth : as by a new law it is conſtituted in the Code, that if a Iudge do receiue a bribe in a cauſe criminall, if it cannot be proued againſt him, he ſhalbe put to his oth: which if he refuſe, he is held as guiltie, & ſhall forfeit all his goods and bee ſent into exile, Cod.lib.7 tit.49.leg.1.authentic. So then in theſe caſes rehearſed, where a partie is giuen, and all other proues beſide firſt vſed, and in Ciuill matters to relieue others from a wrong, and ſometime in Criminall, where the offence is publike, and not vnto death, it is lawfull to preſſe the defendant with an oth : But in the iudgement of hereſie, and other crimes obiected, the popiſh tyranny proceeded without any regard had of the premiſſes; preſſing the poore innocents with their owne oth in cauſes criminall vnto the execution of death, giuing no partie, nor ſtanding much vpon other euidence: Wherefore their proceedings were contrarie to law herein.

The third point followeth to be diſcuſſed, of inquiſition to be made by torments; where I will out of the law briefly declare theſe three points : firſt, in what caſes tortures are to bee vſed: ſecondly, in what manner : thirdly, what perſons are priuiledged and exempted from tortures. For the firſt, though that bondſlaues might bee put to torture, vpon diuers occaſions, as if they were fugitiues, Cod.lib.6.tit.1.leg.4. to know the right heire to their maſter, Cod.lib.9.tit.41.leg.9. and whether it be a forged will or not, ibid leg.10. Yea, Seruus poteſt de ſuo facto torqueri, A ſlaue may be examined by torture of his owne act in embeaſelling of his maſters goods, ibid.leg.15.Diocletian. Though I ſay bondſlaues were vpon ſundrie occaſions ſubiect to tortures : yet others but only in graue and waightie matters, were put to torture; as in caſe of treaſon againſt the Prince, Cod.lib.9.tit.8.leg.3. Falſifiers of coyne might be examined by torment, lib.9 tit.24.leg.1. A woman ſuſpected for poyſoning her husband may be tortured, lib.9.tit.41.leg.3. They that are accuſed of witchcraft alſo may be put to the racke, tit.18.leg.7. Where the woman is ſuſpected of adulterie, the ſeruants may bee enforced by torture, tit.9.leg.3. Likewiſe in the murder of the husband or the wife, the ſeruants may likewiſe bee vrged, tit.16.leg.9. In theſe and the like waightie and vrgent cauſes, the queſtion by torments hath been allowed: But the practiſe of Papiſts, in tormenting of men and women, to wreſt from them their faith and conſcience, being perſons of honeſt and innocent life, not guiltie of treaſon, murder, witchcraft, or ſuch like, was neuer heard of in times paſt, but is moſt cruell, and contrarie to law.

Secondly, as touching the manner to bee vſed in inflicting of torments, there are certaine rules ſet downe in the law. Firſt, Cod.lib.9 tit.2.leg.13. Accuſatus non debet torqueri,&c. The guiltie partie muſt not be tortured, vnleſſe the accuſer doe binde himſelfe to endure the like, if he proue not his accuſation. So then by this law, where torments are miniſtred, an accuſer ſhould be produced. Secondly, Cod.lib.9.tit.22.leg.17. Non incipiendum à tormentis, &c. The Iudge muſt not begin with torments, but be induced by other arguments to doe it. Thirdly, lib.9.tit.2.leg.17.Honor. Qui torquetur non debet interrogari de ſocijs : He that is tortured, muſt not be vrged to bewray his fellowes. And in their owne law it is thus decreed : Cauſ.5.qu.5.c.4.Nec illi credendi, &c. They muſt not be beleeued that of themſelues do appeach others, but let the religious tormentor fetch out the truth by putting him to paine, &c. Thus we ſee what moderation the law would haue obſerued in tormenting. But the popiſh tormentors contrarie to theſe rules haue applied torments, without any accuſer, hauing no other euidence to induce them; and onely to this end, to cauſe them one to betray another. See the ſtorie of Anne Askew, apud Foxum.

In the third place, let vs ſee what perſons are exempted from torments by the law. Firſt, lib.9.

tit.41.leg.7.Dioclet. The ſeruant muſt not be tormented againſt his maſter; nor yet ſouldiers, ibid. leg.8.Dioclet. nor Noblemen, leg.11. nor innocents, leg.17.Honor. Clergie men muſt confeſſe the truth, citra iniuriam quæſtionis, without torture, Cod.lib.1.tit.8.Theodoſ. But the Romiſh tormentors in their crueltie haue violated all good lawes; tormenting not onely ſeruants to confeſſe againſt their maſters, but children againſt their parents, as Tyrrell burned Roſe Allins hand with a candle till ÿ ſinewes burſt, Fox p.2006. They haue not ſpared moſt cruelly to handle noblemen, much more ſouldiers: ſee the ſtorie of Sir Iohn Oldcaſtle Lord Cobham, apud Foxum. They haue vexed with their torments iuſt and innocent men: as Thomas Tomkins a godly and deuout man, well reported of all his neighbours, had his hand ſo ſcorched with a candle by Bonner, that the water ſparkled out of the ſinewes, Fox pag.1534. Laſtly, they haue exerciſed with torments Miniſters and Deacons of the Church: as Adam Damlip at Calice, Fox pag.1229. And Cuthbert Simſon a Deacon of the congregation, was thrice racked in one day, ſtood three houres in an yron engine, had his fingers grated with an arrow, and all to betray the congregation: See the ſtorie, pag.2031. Thus it is euident how cruelly, contrarie to the ancient imperiall lawes, thoſe cruell perſecutors haue tormented the poore profeſſors of the Goſpell: yea and contrarie to their owne lawes; Cauſ.23.qu.5.c.1. Scelerum confeſſionem non extendente equuleo, non ſulcantibus vngulis, non vrentibus flammis: The confeſſion of faults muſt not bee wreſted out, by ſtretching out vpon the racke, or ſlitting or grating with engines, ſcorching with flames, &c. And thus in euery of theſe points in proceeding againſt Chriſtians without witneſſe, or accuſing, in tyrannizing againſt them vnto death euen by their owne oth, in vexing of them with vnſpeakable torments, they haue tranſgreſſed and violated both diuine & humane lawes. But now I will proceed to the reſt.

105. In the fourth place; Where haue they learned ſo hotly and fiercely to purſue ſimple men and women to death, for none or very ſmall offences, which they notwithſtanding falſly called hereſie? Was it hereſie for Iames Brewſter to heare one Sweeting to reade many good things out of a certaine booke? or for the ſame Sweeting, when as the ſaid Iames ſhould ſay, Now the ſonne of the liuing God helpe vs, to anſwere: Now almightie God ſo doe? yet for theſe hereſies were they both condemned and burnt in Smithfield, anno 1511. Fox pag.818.

A woman of Auſpurge had like to haue been burned, for asking a prieſt that carried the Hoſt to a ſicke man with Taper-light, what he meant to goe with a light at noone day, if Mary the Emperours ſiſter had not made ſute for her, anno 1550. Fox.pag.894.

Anno 1525. a Monke burned in France, becauſe he had forſaken his abominable order and maried a wife, pag.896.

Iohannes de Cadurco, being at a feaſt, where it was agreed that euery one ſhould bring forth his poſie or ſentence, becauſe he brought forth this; Chriſt reigne in our hearts, and proſecuted it out of the Scriptures, was burned, anno 1533. pag.897.

A Taylor burned at Paris anno 1549 for working vpon an holy day, *ex Iohan.Criſpin.Fox.*p.903.

Ralfe Hare conſtrained to abiure for ſaying before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, The Lord is my witnes: It is Symbolum Hæreticorum, ſaith Wincheſter, a marke to know heretikes by, to ſay the Lord, the Lord, pag.1225.

One Thomas Sanpaulinus Martyr, becauſe he rebuked a man for ſwearing, was thereupon ſuſpected to be a Lutheran, examined, condemned and burned at Paris, anno 1551.pag.904. Many ſuch like examples might be produced of holie Martyrs, which for theſe and ſuch other great hereſies were put to death. And as the offences were very ſmall, as wee ſee, ſo their manner of proceeding was moſt cruell, voyd of all humanitie. They ſpared not women with child: We haue not forgotten that famous example of their crueltie, which ſhall be remembred to their perpetuall ſhame and infamie: How they burned three ſimple women in the Ile of Garnſey, anno 1556. which had ſubmitted themſelues to their mercie, one of the three was great with childe, which braſt out of her wombe in the midſt of the fire, and was throwne in againe, pag.1944. They had no compaſſion of the tender age of children: In the towne of Byrbroke, while Richard Chapman did penance in the Church, being inioyned to kneele barefoote, and bare legged all the ſermon while vpon the cold ſteps of the Church; a little boy for giuing him his hat to kneele vpon, was had into the Veſtrie and piteouſly ſcourged, pag.1047. Cruell Bonner burned Richard Mekins a child of 15. yeeres, for ſpeaking againſt the ſacrament of the Altar, who notwithſtanding at the ſtake was taught to ſpeake much good of the Biſhop of London, and ſo did, pag.1202. Iohn Fettie his childe being of eight yeeres old, for ſaying to one of the Biſhops Chapleins, that he had Balaams marke, was ſcourged ſo cruelly, that within 14. daies he died. Nay, ſuch was their crueltie, they condemned to death men that were beſtraught of their wits: as Collins and Cowbridge were burned being both franticke: ſee their ſtorie, pag.1131.

Where is now that lenitie and compaſſion, which ought to be in the Miniſters of the Goſpell? Such crueltie was not heard of, no not amongſt the Heathen. Yea they breake their owne law: which ſuffereth a man once to abiure his hereſie, but if afterward he be detected, he dieth without mercie, Fox anno 1511. William Carder and Agnes Grebil were condemned, though they ſubmitted themſelues,and promiſed to be conformable to their religion.p.1277. Yet this law of theirs is moſt vniuſt,and contrary to the Goſpel,which ſaith,that if thy brother ſin againſt thee ſeuen times in a day,& ſeuen times in a day turne again,and ſay, It repenteth me,thou ſhalt forgiue him, Luk.17.4 Yet theſe men wil forgiue but once,and not that neither. But S.Paul ſaith, An heretike after once or twice admonition reiect. Tit.3.10. Bellarmine his beſt anſwer is by denying the text, ſaying, that it was not ſo read in former times : but thus, after once admonition. *De laicis cap.*22.

This popiſh rigor is much contrary to the ancient lenity,that was vſed in former times: *African. Conc.can.*33.it was decreed, Vt cum Donatiſtis leniter & pacifice ageretur. Ne forte,ſicut dicit Apoſtolus, nobis in manſuetudine corripientibus diuerſa ſentientes det Deus illis pœnitentiam,&c. 2.Tim.2. That the Donatiſts ſhould be gently and peaceably handled,if perhaps,as the Apoſtle ſaith, while we with all gentlenes correct thoſe that are otherwiſe minded,God may giue them repentance.

*Leo Epiſt.*13. Sedis Apoſtolicæ moderatio hanc temperantiam obſeruat,vt ſeuerius agat cum obduratis, & veniam cupiat præſtare correctis: This Apoſtolike See hath alwaies kept this moderation,to deale more ſeuerely with the obdurate and obſtinate,and to ſhew mercie to the corrigible: This moderation is now quite baniſhed from this See,as in theſe former examples is to be ſeene. There was more clemencie vſed in Auguſtines time: for then Biſhops did not prouoke the Magiſtrate to execute whom they had condemned,but did entreate the Magiſtrate to ſhew compaſſion vnto Heretikes, not ſtraightwaies to puniſh them with death : Ne ſic vitam iſtam finiant (ſaith Auguſtine) per ſupplicium, vt ea finita non poſſint finire ſupplicium, Leaſt they ſhould ſo end this life by puniſhment, that the life being ended,they ſhould neuer end their puniſhment. *Epiſt.*54. And in another place: *Sic eorum peccata compeſce,vt ſint,quos pœniteat peccaſſe, Epiſt.*159. So reſtraine their ſinnes,that they may yet remaine to repent them of their ſinnes. In thoſe daies therefore, men were not by and by puniſhed with death to preuent their repentance,as in time of poperie, but their repentance was expected,to deliuer them from the ſentence of death.

Certaine notes touching the Spaniſh Inquiſition.

NOw in the laſt place I will briefly ſhew how their cruell proceeding againſt the profeſſors of the Goſpell,and chiefly in their Spaniſh Inquiſition,as it is called,is contrarie to their owne Canons. Firſt,to extort faith by ſtripes and torments,is termed in their law, Noua & inaudita prædicatio, A new and ſtrange learning, *diſt.*45. *Gregor.c.*1. yet vſed altogether by them in their Inquiſition. Secondly,their vſe hath been to intreate for offenders to the ſecular power, Vt citra mortis periculum ſententia moderetur, That the ſentence might be moderated without the perill or puniſhment of death, *decret.Greg.lib.*5.*tit.*40.*c.*27.*Innocent.*3. And againe, *Sext.decr.lib.*5.*tit.*11.*c.*1.*Innocent.*4. Medicinalis ſit excommunicatio non mortalis: Excommunication ſhould be medicinall,not mortall. But their excommunications were vnto death : for whom they did for hereſie (as they falſely called it) excommunicate,the ſecular power did execute to death. Thirdly,their Inquiſition is made in ſecret,the Martyrs were priuily condemned, and neuer publikely produced,till they were brought forth to execution: contrarie to the decree of *Innocent.*3.*decr.Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*29.*c.*24. Ne eccleſiaſticum iudicium fiat in tenebris,quia iuxta teſtimonium veritatis, Qui male agit,odit lucem: That eccleſiaſticall iudgement ſhould not bee done in the darke, or in corners : for according to the teſtimonie of the truth it ſelfe, He that doth euill, hateth the light. So then it is manifeſt,that their doings were euill,ſeeing they ſought into corners. Fourthly,they in their phariſaicall proceedings ſuppreſſe the names of the accuſers and witneſſes,though there bee no danger at all feared in the publiſhing of them : contrarie to the decree of *Bonif.*8.*ſext.decr.lib.*5.*tit.*2.*c.*20. Ceſſante periculo,publicanda,&c. Where there is no daunger, the names both of the accuſer and the witneſſes muſt be publiſhed. Fiftly,diuers conſtitutions haue been made concerning the perſon, qualitie,and condition of accuſers : as *Cod.lib.*9.*tit.*1.*leg.*12. A woman is not admitted to be an accuſer. Likewiſe in their decrees : *Cauſ.*2.*qu.*1.*c.*14. One brother is not to accuſe another. *Cod.lib.*9.*tit.*1.*leg.*13.nor he that is nouriſhed his patrone or nouriſher. *Ibid.leg.*17. nor the ſeruant his maſter, *leg.*20.No infamous perſon can be receiued to bee an accuſer, *Ibid leg.*15. And in their owne law, *Cauſ.*2.*qu.*7.*c.*23. Yet notwithſtanding they contrarie to theſe ancient prouiſions,haue admitted women to accuſe their husbands,children their parents, ſeruants their maſters ; yea infamous,adulterous & periured perſons haue not bin refuſed. I need not giue an inſtance here in particular, their cruell practiſes are full euery where of ſuch examples. Sixtly, concerning the vſage of ſuch, as were impriſoned for religion,the Popes owne decree is this: *Clemen.lib.*5.*tit.*3.*c.*1. Vt fideliter & abſq; diminutione,&c. That ſuch things as are offered to ẏ priſoners by their friends,ſhuld faithfully and without diminution be miniſtred vnto them. But their practiſe was contrary : ſee the ſtorie of Rob.Samuel, who was allowed but 3.mouthfuls of bread,& 3.ſpoonfuls of water by the day,till his body was ſo dried vp,ẏ he could make no vrine at al,which he oft deſired to drink. Fox p.1704.

Thus much of this queſtion,as likewiſe of the whole controuerſie:and thus far alſo concerning ſuch controuerſies,as are moued about the church militant here vpon earth; which we haue hitherto proſecuted by the Lords gracious aſſiſtance : In the next place wee are to deale in thoſe controuerſies,which concerne the other part of the Church triumphant in heauen.

THE SECOND BOOKE OR CENTVRIE, CONTAINING THE SECOND HVNDRED OF POPISH ERRORS AND HERESIES:

CONSISTING OF THREE GENERALL CONTROVERSIES CONCERNING THE STATE OF THE CHVRCH Triumphant in Heauen, the interceſſion of Chriſt, and the Sacraments of the Church Militant vpon earth in generall.

AT LONDON
Imprinted by Felix Kyngston, for Thomas
Man, dwelling in Pater noſter rowe at the ſigne of the Talbot. 1600.

HERE FOLLOW THE CONTROVERSIES CONCERNING THE CHVRCH TRIVMPHANT.

THey are two in number: The firſt is as touching the condition, office, and miniſterie of Angels: The ſecond of and concerning the Saints departed.

THE EIGHT CONTROVERSIE concerning Angels.

THis Controuerſie containeth three queſtions. Firſt, of the Hierarchie and degrees of Angels. Secondly, of their miniſterie and office. Thirdly, of the worſhip and inuocation of Angels.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE celeſtiall Hierarchie, or degrees of Angels.

THis queſtion hath likewiſe two parts: Firſt, how many degrees there be of Angels. Secondly, whether Michael be the prince of the Angels.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE DIVERS orders and degrees of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THey doe boldly affirme, that there are nine orders of Angels: and thoſe that doe doubt of it, they charge with infidelitie and blaſphemie. There are firſt Principalities, then Poteſtates: thirdly, Powers: fourthly, Dominations, Eph.1.21. fiftly, there are Thrones, Coloſſ.1.16. vnto theſe ad 4. other, Cherubim, Seraphim, Angels, Archangels: ſo haue we 9. in al, Rhem. annot. Eph. 1. ſect. 4. 1. Error.

The Proteſtants.

AS of the diuerſitie of names we gather, that there are diuers orders, as Hierome ſaith, Sine cauſa diuerſitas eſt nominum, vbi non eſt diuerſitas meritorum: There is no reaſon to haue diuerſitie of names, where there is no diuerſitie of merit: that is, vertue: So to enquire of them more ſubtilly, to define their number, and appoint their degrees: it is a point not onely of fooliſh curioſitie, but alſo of vngodly and dangerous raſhnes, ex Caluino. Fulk. ibid.

Argum. 1. That the Scripture alloweth no ſuch difference or diſtinction of orders or degrees amongſt the Angels it may thus appeare: firſt, Epheſ.6.12. the Apoſtle giueth two of the names of theſe orders to euill angels, namely, Principalities, and Poteſtates: from which place I reaſon thus: If theſe be names of orders and degrees, then they may be found amongſt the euill angels as well as amongſt the good: and if ſome of theſe degrees are amongſt the euill angels, then why not the reſt alſo? and ſo wee ſhall haue Seraphim and Cherubim amongſt the euill and reprobate angels, which were blaſphemie to affirme.

Againe, they that hold thoſe nine orders of Angels, doe make Cherubim, Seraphim, and Thrones, the three higheſt: ſaying further, that, Superiora agmina ab intimis nunquam recedunt: The ſuperiour orders doe neuer depart from the preſence of God, and that the angels of the inferiour orders, are ſent in embaſſage from God: Mag. lib. 2. diſtinct. 10. a. But contrarie to this aſſertion, Eſay. 6. we reade, that the Seraphims alſo are ſent vpon Gods meſſage: and ſo wee conclude, that Seraphims are not of the higheſt and ſuperiour order.

Further, Michael and Gabriel are ſpirits of the higheſt nature and office, as appeareth by their names: the firſt, ſignifying one that is equall to God; the other, the ſtrength of God: and yet they are called Angels. Wherefore thoſe orders are confounded in Scripture, and no ſuch preciſe difference amongſt the Angels can there be found: and the Apoſtle ſaith, they are all miniſtring ſpirits, Heb. 1. adminiſtratorij ſpiritus: therefore not commaunding ſpirits one ouer another.

Likewiſe Origen taketh the two Seraphims mentioned Eſay. 6. for Chriſt and the ſpirit, ſaying, That none are able to comprehend the beginning and end of things, which he would haue ſignified in that place, by couering their face and feete with their wings, but onely Chriſt and the holy ſpirit. Wherefore in his iudgement the Seraphim are not a diſtinct order of Angels.

Auguſtine ſaith, Quid inter ſe diſtent quatuor illa vocabula, throni, dominationes, principatus, poteſtates, dicant qui poſſunt ſi tamen poſſunt probare quod dicunt, ego me iſta ignorare confiteor: What difference there is betweene theſe foure words, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, Powers, let them tell vs, that be able, ſo they can proue that they tell vs: for my part, I confeſſe I know it not, Auguſt. Enchirid. cap. 58. With Auguſtine therefore wee confeſſe, that as it appeareth by theſe ſeuerall names, there are diſtinct orders of Angels: ſo how many there be, and how they are diſtinguiſhed, the Scripture hath not reuealed vnto vs: and it were curioſitie for vs to enquire: wee ſhall then know, when we ſhall be like vnto the Angels.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER MICHAEL be the prince of Angels.

The Papiſts.

2. Error. THey ſay, that in heauen beſide God himſelfe, there is another commaunder and captaine of the Angels, euen Michael the prince of the Angels: which place the diuell had in the beginning before his fall. For as the Scripture ſaith, the diuell and his angels, meaning, that all euill angels are ſubiect vnto him: ſo by Michael and his angels, we vnderſtand all good angels, that are likewiſe ſubiect to him, Apocal. 12. 7. Rhemiſt. Bellarm. de pontif. lib. 1. cap. 9.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, Michael in that place ſignifieth Chriſt, who is Lord of the Angels: for the Angels cannot be ſaid to be any other Michaels Angels, but onely the Angels of God and Chriſt, Fulk. ibid. This is alſo proued by the text, verſ. 10. Now is come ſaluation, the kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt, for the accuſer of the brethren is caſt out. Here hee is called Chriſt, which before is named Michael. Auguſtine alſo ſo expoundeth it, Michaëlem intellige Chriſtum: By Michael vnderſtand Chriſt: Homil. 9. in Apocalypſ.

Secondly, it followeth not, that as there is a chiefe and captaine of the euill Angels, ſo amongſt the good there ſhould bee a chiefe Angell aboue the reſt, beſide Chriſt: for it is ſufficient that there is one Lord and prince of the Angels, euen Chriſt. Againe, neither is it proued out of ſcripture, that amongſt the diuels there is one captaine and great diuell to whom the reſt were ſubiects: for whereas the Phariſees obiected, that Chriſt caſt out diuels through Beelzebub the prince of the diuels, Mark. 3. if either the Phariſees did then ſo meane, or any ſhall now gather vpon their words, that there is a great maſter diuell that ruleth and commaundeth the reſt, it was in them but a phariſaicall dreame, and in the other a popiſh collection. We deny not, but that there may be degrees in power and angelicall gifts, both among the good and bad angels, as there ſhall be degrees in glorie among the Saints: yet the Saints ſhall not be princes one ouer the other, no more are the Angels now. Thirdly, marke the anſwere of our Sauiour in that place, If Sathan caſt out Sathan, Mark. 3. Here Sathan is made a common name to all euill ſpirits. But Apocal. 12. where mention is made of the diuell and his angels, the text ſaith, The great dragon, the old ſerpent, called the diuell and Sathanas, verſ. 9. Here the name Sathanas, is giuen to the prince of the diuels: ſo there is not one Sathanas, but many. And where our Sauiour calleth the diuell the prince of the world, Ioh. 14. Saint Paul calleth them all principalities and powers, worldly gouernours, and princes of the darkneſſe of this world, Epheſ. 6. 12. ſo there is not one prince of the diuels, but they are all princes. Thus Auguſtine expoundeth that place: Draco pugnauit & angeli eius: id eſt, diabolus & homines voluntati eius obtemperantes: The dragon fought and his angels, that is, wicked men obeying his will, Apocalypſ. Hom. 9. So by Auguſtines ſentence the diuels are not ſubiects to the great diuell, but they are all princes and commaunders of wicked men.

Argum. If Michael be the prince of the Angels, then it muſt needes be graunted, that he is of the higheſt order of Angels, which are Seraphim, and Cherubim: for ſo theſe Angel-makers do place them: Theſe three, Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, make the higheſt ranke: Dominations, Principalities, Potentates the middle order: Powers, Archangels, Angels the loweſt region, Mag. lib. 2. diſtinct. 9. a. But Michael being an Archangell is in the loweſt order, and therefore cannot be the chiefe and commaunder of the reſt.

Further, the Apoſtle ſaith, They are all λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα, miniſtring ſpirits, Hebr. 1. 14. Ergo, not commaunding ſpirits one ouer another.

Homil. 6. in Ioſ. Origen thinketh, that there is no other prince of the Angels, but Chriſt: Omnis cœli militia, &c. All the hoſt of heauen, whether Angels, Archangels, Powers, Dominions, &c. were made by him, and ſerue vnder him their prince.

THE SECOND QVESTION, OF THE ministerie and function of Angels.

THis queſtion hath two parts: firſt, of the externall miniſterie of Angels, in the protection, and defence of the Church. Secondly, of their ſpirituall office about the praiers of Gods ſeruants.

THE

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE defence and protection of Angels.

The Papiſts.

MIchael (ſay they) is the protector and keeper of the whole Church of Chriſt, Dan.10.21. And as earthly kingdoms haue their ſpeciall Angels for their protectors; ſo alſo haue particular Churches, *Dan.*10.*Rhem.annot.*1.*Apoc.ſect.*9. 3.Error.

The Proteſtants.

THe whole Church hath Chriſt himſelf, who is the true Michael, for her protector & defender: And ſo is that place in Daniel to be vnderſtood. Auguſtine alſo by Michael vnderſtandeth Chriſt: the name alſo ſignifieth as much: Michael, that is, one like vnto God: ſee more of this before: *Controu.*4.*queſt.*1. The Scripture ſaith, All power is giuen to Chriſt, and he is with his Church to the ende of the world, Matth.28.18.20. He therefore is the chiefe patrone and protector of his Church.

Secondly, it cannot be proued out of Scripture, that kingdomes haue their ſpeciall Angels protectors, for Dan.10. The Princes of the Perſians and Grecians, were not Angels but earthly Princes: for Angels doe not reſiſt Chriſt and his Angels defenders of the Church, as the Prince of Percia did, verſ.13. Fulk ibid. but all the Angels of heauen are readie to ſerue the Lord at his pleaſure, for the defence of his Church, without any limitation of place, Zachar.1.10. Theſe are they whom the Lord hath ſent, to go through the world. The Angels execute their meſſage, not in ſeuerall countries, but in the whole world.

The Papiſts.

EVery one hath from his Natiuitie an Angel for his cuſtodie and patronage againſt the wicked, before the face of God, Gen.48.16. Iacob ſaith, The Angell that hath kept me from my youth vp: Act.12.15. It is his angell, Rhemiſt ibid. Matth.18.10. Their Angels behold the face of my Father: Ergo, euery man hath his proper Angell. 4.Error.

Anſw. 1. Iacob by the Angell vnderſtandeth Chriſt, to whom it is proper to bleſſe Gods children: the Angell bleſſe thy children, ſaith he, Gen.48.16. This Angell appeared vnto him in Bethel, and is called the God of Bethel, Gen.31.13. with this Angell Iacob wreſtled, 32. which was God, as it appeareth by the name of Iacob, he is called Iſrael, becauſe hee had preuailed with God, and the place is called Peniel, I haue ſeene God face to face: Other proper Angell Iacob had none, for all the Angels of God were appointed for his defence, Gen.32.1. He met an hoſte of Gods Angels, and accordingly called the place Mahanaim.

2. Neither of the other places proue that men haue proper Angels, Matth.18. The children of God are ſaid to haue their Angels: not theirs, as euery man his proper Angell, but theirs in common, becauſe they were deputed for their defence: Act.12. Peter at that time was deliuered by one Angell, but it followeth not, that therefore he was his proper Angell.

The Proteſtants.

WE nothing doubt of the protection of Gods Angels: but that euery one hath a proper Angell appointed for his protection from his Natiuitie, out of Scripture it is not proued.

1. Sometime one Angell hath the charge of a multitude, Exod.23.20. The Lord ſaith to all the people of Iſrael, I ſend mine Angell before thee, to keepe thee in thy way.

2. Sometime many Angels are readie for the defence of one man: Gen.32.1. an hoſte of Angels met Iacob, Pſalm.91.11. He ſhall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, to keepe thee in all thy waies: Ergo, euery man hath not his particular proper Angell.

3. Luke.16.22. The poore man is ſaid, being dead, to be caried not by one Angell, but by the Angels, into the boſome of Abraham. But if he had one Angell appointed to be the preſident of his life from his Natiuitie, it had been alſo part of that Angels charge, to haue conueyed his ſoule into heauen. So Auguſtine writeth: *Si bene vixerimus, vbi à carnis vinculo anima liberata fuerit, mox in occurſum noſtrum Angelorum chorus occurret. De ſalutaribus.document.cap.*39. If we liued well here, when as the ſoule is gone from the bodie, the holy company of the Angels are readie to meet vs: he ſaith not one Angell, but the whole chore or company.

Laſtly, they that hold, that euery man hath a good Angell appointed for his cuſtodie at his Natiuitie, doe alſo affirme, that euery wicked man hath alſo an euill Angell waiting vpon him. But this cannot be, for ſeeing it is confeſſed that the good Angels are more in number then the bad, *Magiſt.lib.2.diſt.*11.b. but wicked men doe contrariewiſe exceede the good in number, it muſt needs follow, that there is not for euery euill man an euill Angell, or elſe that there are more good Angels, than for euery man one: the Maſter of the ſentences anſwereth, that one Angel may ſerue diuers men ſucceſſiuely, for men die; but Angels die not, and ſo notwithſtanding euerie man ſhall haue his Angell.

Anſw. 1. Yet the obiection is not anſwered, for in euery age the good men are feweſt, and the euill men moſt, and not onely in reſpect of the whole age of the world, and yet the good Angels are more then the bad: 2. To admit this diſtinction, yet ſeeing the number of good men is ſometime more, ſometime leſſe, as toward the end of the world, when faith ſhall faile, but the number of the Angels is alwaies the ſame, it cannot be that euery man ſhould haue his Angell, and euery Angell his particular charge of ſome one man.

THE SECOND PART, WHAT OFFICE the Angels haue about our prayers.

The Papiſts.

Hæreſ.5. THeir opinion is, that the Angels doe offer vp our prayers vnto God. And they would proue it by that place, Apoc.8.2. An Angell ſtood by the Altar, with a golden cenſer, and much incenſe was giuen vnto him to offer with the praiers of the Saints, Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Anſw. Auguſtine vpon this place ſaith, that this Angell is Chriſt: Thuribulum aureum eſt corpus eius ſanctum, the golden cenſer is his bodie, ex quo Deus odorem ſuauitatis accepit, out of the which God ſmelt a ſweet ſauour. Homil. in *Apocalyp.*6. And in another place he ſaith, Vt altare ſanctificat dona, ſic Chriſtus preces noſtras, as the altar ſanctifieth the gift, ſo Chriſt doth our praiers, *quaſt. in Euangel.*34. Firſt, therefore this place is vnderſtood of Chriſt, not of any Angell.

2. If this place might be vnderſtood of Angels, that they haue ſome miniſtery about our praiers, it maketh nothing notwithſtanding for popiſh inuocation of Angels: for the Angell heere commendeth not the praiers of the Saints by his merit, but by the much incenſe giuen vnto him, to adde to the praiers of the Saints to make them acceptable, which is the ſweet ſmell and ſauour of the precious death and merits of Chriſt. Fulk. in hunc locum. Auguſtine indeed ſometime aſcribeth ſuch an office vnto the Angels to carry vp our praiers to heauen, as their charge is to carry vp our ſoules: not as mediators or interceſſors, but as the Lords meſſengers and agents here vpon earth, to report vnto him our affaires: dicuntur Angeli preces noſtras, & vota Deo offerre, non vt Deum doceant, qui omnia antequam fiant, nouit, ſed vt ſuper his Dei voluntatem conſulant. The Angels are ſaide to offer vp our praiers and vowes vnto God, not to informe or inſtruct the Lord, but only to conſult and know his pleaſure: *tom.9. de dilection. cap.*3. *& in Pſal.*74. for the Angels haue two offices, the one, to execute the commandement of God in the world, and to attend vpon him to receiue their charge, Matth.18.10. the other, to returne vnto God as faithfull meſſengers the ſucceſſe of their buſines in the world, Zach.1.10. Now whether the Angels be appointed of God to report vnto him our ſayings and doings, as other affaires of our life, the Scripture no where euidently ſheweth. Neither, if it were granted, would it any thing helpe their popiſh inuocation of Angels.

Fulk. Apoc.8. ſect.2.

Rhemiſt. alleage Tob.12.12. to proue the offering of our praiers by Angels.

Anſw. It is neither Canonicall Scripture, nor agreeable vnto it: *Fulk. annot. Coloſſ.*2. *ſect.*3.

The Proteſtants.

THe Scripture alwaies maketh Chriſt our only Mediator, neither Angels nor Saints, by whom our prayers and all other ſpirituall ſacrifices are offered vnto God.

1. Hebr.13.15. Let vs by him offer the ſacrifice of praiſe alwaies to God, 1.Pet.2.5. You are an holy Prieſthood, to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable to God, by Ieſus Chriſt: Ergo, Chriſt Ieſus is our onely Mediator.

2. Galath.3.19. The law was ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediator: Ergo, the Angels are one office, and the Mediator another. Auguſtine ſaith: Quòd non aliquem ex Angelis dicit Midiatorem, ſed ipſum Dominum noſtrum Ieſum Chriſtum habes alio loco: Vnus (inquit) Deus, & vnus Mediator Dei & hominum, homo Chriſtus Ieſus. That the Apoſtle calleth not any of the Angels, but onely Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, Mediator, we haue in another place: There is one God, ſaith he, and one Mediator of God and man, the Man Ieſus Chriſt.

1.Tim.2.

AN APPENDIX OR THIRD PART OF THIS Queſtion, whether Angels or Saints know our hearts.

The Papiſts.

Hæreſ.6. THe Angels and other Celeſtiall ſpirits doe know our hearts and inward repentance: And betweene the Angels and the bleſſed ſoules of Saints, there is no difference in this caſe, the one being as highly exalted, and neere God, as the other, in whom and by whom onely they ſee and know our affaires, Luk.15.10. There is ioy in heauen, in the preſence of the Angels ouer one ſinner that repenteth: Ergo, they know our repentance: *Rhemiſt. Luk.*15. *ſect.*2.

Anſw. 1. Our hearts and inward repentance are not knowen to the Angels, but by the fruits, and the true effects thereof.

2 Although the elect, after the reſurrection ſhall be like in glorie to the Angels, yet it followeth not, that they ſhall be like in all things, much leſſe that their ſoules now in heauen, be in all things like vnto the Angels, whoſe preſence and miniſterie God vſeth in the preſeruation of his choſen.

3. That all things done in the world may be ſeene in God, as in a glaſſe, is but a prophane ſpeculation, and the deuice of an idle braine, Fulk.ibid.

Argum.2. Abraham had knowledge of things in earth, which were not in his time, as that they had Moſes and the Prophets bookes, which he neuer ſaw, Luk.16.verſ.29. Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Firſt, in this narration many things are ſpoken parabolically, out of the which we muſt not ground any doctrine not taught elſewhere in Scripture: for you may as well ſay, that ſoules haue fingers and tongues, and that elementall water will quench hell fire, as that Abraham knew what bookes were written after his death.

Secondly, albeit that the doctrine of the Church comprehended in the Scriptures, might be reuealed to Abraham after his death, yet it followeth not, that he knew all things, as you affirme the the Saints doe, by beholding the maieſtie of God.

The Saints therfore in heauen know ſo much as the Lord thinketh good to reueale vnto them, they know not all things.

The Proteſtants.

WE deny not, but that as Prophets and holy men in this life, may know many ſecret things reuealed vnto them by the ſpirit of God, as Peter found out the ſecret fraude of Ananias and Sapphira: Eliſeus being abſent found out Gebezi his corruption; yea, hee could tell what was done in the King of Syria his chamber: ſo the Lord may reueale vnto the Saints in heauen at his pleaſure, ſome things done vpon earth. But that they receiued any ſuch gift of God, to know all things done vpon earth, it is a great vntruth, and cleane contrarie to the Scriptures.

Firſt, Salomon ſaith in his prayer vnto God: Heare thou in heauen in thy dwelling place, and giue vnto euery man according to his wayes, as thou knoweſt his heart: for thou onely knoweſt the hearts of all the children of men, 1.King.8.29. Out of this place we thus reaſon: he onely knoweth the heart, that is the iudge of all men, and a rewarder of them according to their wayes: But the Lorde onely is iudge: Ergo. Againe, the words themſelues be plaine, that God onely knoweth the heart: ſo that what knowledge of ſecrets the Saints haue, it is by reuelation, not by ſearching the heart.

Againe, S. Paul ſaith, No man knoweth the things of man ſaue the ſpirit of man which is in him: ſo the things of God knoweth no man, but the ſpirit of God, 1.Cor.1.11. The Rhemiſts anſwere, that no man knoweth the ſecrets of the heart naturally, but by extraordinarie gift he may, as the Prophets did. Anſw. No man euer had or can haue a generall gift to know the heart, but when God ſeeth it good to reueale it: for otherwiſe the compariſon holdeth not. The ſpirit of God onely knoweth the things of God: which alſo is giuen to men to know, but not by receiuing any gift, to ſearch and looke into the nature and heart as it were of God (for then ſhould they know all the ſecrets of God, which neuer any did:) but onely by reuelation of the ſpirit, which openeth Gods ſecrets vnto them, ſo farre as it is conuenient and needfull.

Euen after the ſame manner the ſpirit of God may reueale the ſecrets of the heart of man, not by giuing them a generall gift themſelues to looke into the heart, as into a glaſſe, but by reuealing ſuch things, when the Lord ſeeth it expedient.

Neither had the Prophets an inherent gift and dwelling in them, to know ſecrets, but the word of God was inſpired into them at times, as they had neede, as we ſee in Nathan, 2.Sam.7.3.4. in Eliſha, 2.King.2.15. in Iſaiah, 2.King.20.4. And though Paul was taken vp into heauen, and ſawe many ſecrets, yet he knew not all: for thus he ſaith of himſelfe, If I knew all ſecrets, 1.Cor.13.2. Ergo, no man euer receiued this gift, to ſearch the heart: but it is proper vnto God, who will not giue his honour to another.

2 Auguſtine ſaith, Neſcire mortuos quid hic agatur dum hic agitur: That the dead know not what is done here, while it is in doing. But they vnderſtand either by relation of thoſe that depart this world, or elſe by the Angels; Non quidem omnia, ſed quæ ſinuntur indicare: ſicut Prophetæ, nec hic omnia cognoſcebant, ſed quæ illis eſſe reuelanda dei prouidentia iudicarat. de cura pro mort. cap. 15. Neither doe they know all things, but what God ſuffereth to be knowne; as neither did the Prophets know all things while they liued, but what God in his diuine prouidence thought good to reueale vnto them. I note out of this ſaying of Auguſtine three things.

Firſt, what great vncertaintie of opinion here is: How the dead ſhould come by the knowledge of humane affaires, the Papiſts thinke they haue it by Gods gift: otherwhile they ſay, they ſee all things in God, as in a cleere glaſſe. Auguſtine ſaith, they know them by the Angels, or by men newly departed this life: ſo that it appeareth to be but a meere conceit and imagination, that they haue any ſuch knowledge, whereof there is no ſurer ground. Secondly, Auguſtine ſaith, they know not things preſently done, but afterward, contrary to the Papiſts. Thirdly, they know not al things, as the Prophets alſo did not, but what the Lord reuealeth vnto them: wherein alſo he is contrarie to our aduerſaries.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this truth: that God onely is the knower of the hearts, and that he hath not giuen this honour to any other.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: God knew all things before the beginning of the world, and is euery where to ſee, not onely our outward dealing, but alſo all the ſecrets of all mens hearts; ſo that he needeth no mediator, to informe him of our deſires, pag. 1109. But Angels and Saints were not from the beginning, neither are they euery where: Ergo, they know not our thoughts.

Paul Luther confeſſor: Saints in heauen cannot helpe vs, neither know na more what men doe in this world, then a man in the North countrie knoweth what is done in the South countrey, p. 1040.*col.*2.

THE THIRD QVESTION CONCERNING THE worſhip of Angels, firſt in generall, then in particular, of inuocation.

The Papiſts.

Hæreſ.7. THey ſay that the diuine honour and adoration due vnto God alone, is not to be giuen to Angels: But there is a religious reuerence, honour and adoration, which is not to be denied to Angels and Saints, *Rhem.annot.Apocalyp.*19.*ſect.*4.

Argum. 1. Ioſua fell downe before the Angell and worſhipped, *Ioſ.*5.Rhemiſt.

Anſw. He worſhipped not an Angell, but the Lord Chriſt himſelfe the captaine of the Lords armie: for it was a diuine worſhip: He is bid to put off his ſhooes, as Moſes was, when God appeared out of the fierie buſh, Exod.3. But a diuine worſhip (by your owne confeſſion) is due onely to God, Fulk.annot.Coloſſ. 2.3. And thus Origen expoundeth this viſion: homil. 6. in Ioſ. Ioſua non adoraſſet, niſi aguouiſſet Deum, &c. Ioſua would not haue adored him, if he had not knowen him to be God, for who elſe is the Prince of the armie of the power of God, but our Lord Ieſus Chriſt?

Argum. 2. 1.Timoth.2.21. I charge thee before God and the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and his elect Angels, that thou obſerue theſe things: Ergo, Angels may be adored and reuerenced, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Saint Paul maketh heere the Angels witneſſes of his waightie charge: ſo Moſes calleth heauen and earth to witneſſe, Deut.30.19. may we therefore conclude, that he yeelded any religious worſhip to heauen and earth?

The Proteſtants.

AS for due reuerence, which is of loue, not of any ſeruice, there is no queſtion, but we ought to yeeld it vnto the Angels. But all religious ſeruice or worſhip is due onely to God, and whoſoeuer man or Angell, requireth, or receiueth any religious worſhip or ſeruice, vſurpeth that which is due vnto God. Fulk. Apocal. 19.*ſect.*4.

Argum. 1. Apocal. 19.10. and 22.9. Iohn fell downe to worſhip the Angell: but the Angell ſuffered him not: See thou doe it not, (ſaith hee:) for I am thy fellowe ſeruant, and of thy brethren, worſhippe God: Ergo, Angels are not to be adored with any religious worſhip.

Rhemiſt. Firſt, he forbiddeth him onely to worſhip him with diuine adoration.

Anſw. The words are generall: he ſaith not, worſhip God, with this kinde of ſeruice; but worſhip God: and the word here vſed, προσκύνησον, properly ſignifieth in falling downe to worſhip: by which word alſo Act.10.25. Cornelius manner of worſhipping Peter is expreſſed: vpon which place the Rhemiſts doe note, that euery falling downe to worſhip, is not diuine, or proper onely to God, and that Peter did refuſe it for humilitie ſake: the Angell then in this place refuſeth that falling downe, or worſhipping, which they ſay was giuen to Peter, and is not onely dew to God; and ſo doth Peter in the other place, not for humilitie, but alleaging hee was a man, and therefore of pietie, becauſe hee woulde not haue God robbed of his honour.

Rhemiſt. Secondly, you ſay, that Iohn ſo worthie an Apoſtle was not ignorant of that point, that Angels were not to be worſhipped as God: we may reply alſo, that if Iohn had knowne that this other kind of ſeruice was vnlawfull, he would not haue done it.

Anſw. Iohn ſinned not of ignorance, but of forgetfulnes, in this ecſtacie of his mind, while he beheld the glory of the Angell, as likewiſe through his frailenes and forgetfulnes he committeth the like againe, cap.22. which Iohn would not haue done, being once before admoniſhed, had he not preſently forgotten himſelfe. But the other error of worſhipping the creature for the Creator, was too groſſe an error for the Apoſtle.

Rhemiſt. Thirdly, he was deceiued in the perſon, taking the Angell for Chriſt, and therefore was not culpable at all in this fact, in giuing diuine honour to the Angell, for he ſinned onely materially not formally.

Anſw. Firſt, Iohn was not ignorant, that he was an Angell, and not Chriſt; for he ſaith, he was one of the ſeuen Angels that had the ſeuen vials. Secondly, though he ſinned of ignorance, yet was it a ſinne: for the Prophet, which beleeued the old Prophet, ſinned grieuouſly, as it appeared by his puniſhment, though he did it ignorantly, 1. King. 13. Wherefore it is a groſſe error of your Schoolemen, that ſay, a man ſinneth not, if he worſhip the Diuell in the ſhape of an Angell ignorantly.

Rhemiſt. Fourthly, the Angell would not receiue this worſhip at Iohns hand, whom he knew to be in great fauour with God, and greater then ſome Angell.

Anſw. Firſt, though hereafter the children of God ſhall be made equall to the Angels in glorie, yet in this mortall life they muſt needs be inferiour, ſeeing Chriſt himſelfe, in reſpect of his paſſion, was inferiour to the Angels, Hebr. 2. 9. Secondly, the Angell would not haue taken this homage at any other mans hands, beſide Iohns: for he giueth a reaſon, that he is not onely his fellow ſeruant, but alſo of his brethren. So for all their ſhifts and cauils, we ſtrongly conclude by this example, that no religious honour ought to be giuen to Angels.

Honoramus Angelos, charitate non ſeruitute (ſaith Auguſtine) nec eis templa conſtruimus: Wee honour Angels with the dutie of loue, not of ſeruice, neither doe we build temples vnto them. Quod ergo colit ſummus Angelus, id colendum etiam eſt ab homine vltimo. That therfore which is worſhipped of the higheſt Angell, the man of loweſt degree ought alſo to worſhip, De vera religion. cap. 55. Ergo, no worſhip due vnto Angels, but all vnto God.

Adrian. 1. Epiſt. ad Conſtantin. Imperator. Qualis eſt iſte adorationis honor? profectò non alius, quam is, quo nos peccatores quoſque inuicem proſequimur, ſalutantes nos inter nos per honoratione͂ & dilectionem: What manner of worſhip is this (he meaneth the reuerence to be giuen to Angels and Saints) ſurely no other, then that, which we ſinners amongſt our ſelues doe giue to one another, by a mutuall ſalutation of honour and loue. The argument out of theſe words may be framed thus: No other worſhip is due to Angels & Saints, but that which we giue one to another: but that is no religious worſhip: Ergo. Your owne decrees alſo do reckon the heretikes called Angelici in the number, becauſe they worſhip Angels: decret. p. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 39. wherefore it is hereſie euen by your owne law to worſhip Angels.

Iohn Lambert holy martyr, ſheweth out of Auguſtine, that we ſhould worſhip no men departed, be they neuer ſo good, or holy, no nor yet no Angell, ne honour the ſame, but onely the imitation of them, following their good acts in our liuing: the Angels refuſe all honour, ſauing that which is called honor charitatis, that is, to be loued, &c. Fox. p. 1108. reſponſ. ad articul. 14.

THE SECOND PART OF THE INVOCATION of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THey hold, that it is lawfull to direct our praiers vnto Angels, Rhemiſt. Coloſſ. 2. ſect. 3. Yea, and becauſe they for vs, and deale with God to procure mercy for vs, they may iuſtly be called our aduocates. Heræſ. 8.

Angels are deputed for our protection (which is nothing, but aduocation.) Dan. 10. 13. Matth. 18. 10. Rhemiſt. annot. 1. Iohn. 2. ſect. 5.

Anſw. Firſt, the argument followeth not: for the Angels at the appointment of God, may ſerue for our protection and defence, though they be not aduocates for vs, to obtaine remiſſion of our ſinnes. Secondly, the places alleaged proue no ſuch aduocation of Angels, but onely defence and protection. Dan. 10. 13. The Angell was readie at the firſt praiers of Daniel, but he was letted a while. This proueth, that Angels may know our praiers when it pleaſeth God, and be miniſters of his helpe vnto vs, which we denie not: not that they are our aduocates. And concerning the other place in Matthew our Sauiour only ſaith, that their Angels doe behold the face of his father; that is to know his pleaſure, and what ſeruice God wil command them for the good of his Church: this text maketh nothing for the aduocation of Angels. So then theſe two Scriptures doe ſet forth two offices of the Angels: the one their deſcending from heauen, Dan. 10. 13. the other their aſcending to heauen: Matth. 18. 10. Like as Iacob ſaw the Angels deſcending and aſcending vpon the ladder, Gen. 28. which ſignifieth their miniſteriall protection of vs, not an imperiall aduocation: vnleſſe they will ſay, that the Angels alſo are Chriſtes aduocates, for vpon him they are ſaid to aſcend and deſcend, Iohn. 1. 51. And further what is ſignified by the aſcending and deſcending of the Angels, Bernard hath very well expreſſed in this ſentence: aſcenſio & deſcenſio via angelorum, &c. aſcending and deſcending is the way of the Angels: they aſcend for themſelues, and deſcend for vs; they aſcend for contemplation, they deſcend vnto vs for compaſſion; they aſcend to behold his face, deſcend at his becke: in Pſal. 90. ſerm. 11. Wherefore they aſcend to know Gods pleaſure, they deſcend to doe Gods pleaſure, this ſheweth their ſeruice and miniſtrie, not their aduocation or maieſtie: the argument then followeth not at all, they are our protectors, Ergo, our aduocates.

And whereas the Rhemiſts in the ſame place would proue the aduocation of Angels by the Collect vſed in our Church vpon S. Michaels day, which is this: That they which doe thee alwaies ſeruice in heauen, may by thy appointment ſuccour and defend vs in earth: who ſeeth not, what beggerly ſhifts they are driuen to vſe, ſeeing that this praier maketh nothing at all for the aduocation or inuocation of Angels, but onely their protection and preſeruation.

*Argum.*2. Apoc.8.verſ.3. I ſaw another Angell, that came and ſtood before the altar hauing a golden cenſer, and much odors were giuen vnto him, to offer with the praiers of the Saints vpon the golden altar, &c. From this place the Rhemiſts conclude that angels do offer our praiers to God, Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Anſw. Firſt, though the Angels ſhould report vnto God our praiers, as the reſt of our affaires, which they ſee done (which miniſterie of theirs notwithſtanding in preſenting of our praiers, hath no direct warrant out of Scripture) yet it followeth not that we ſhould inuocate them, for the Saints in earth do inuocate God for vs, yet are not to be inuocated by vs. Secondly, if in this place we ſhould vnderſtand any of the Angels to be the preferrer of our praiers, yet they doe it not by their owne merite, but by the merite and ſweet ſauour of the death of Chriſt, which are the ſweet odors added to the praiers of the Saints: Thirdly this place is better expounded of Chriſt himſelfe, who is the Angell, that offereth vp our praiers, as Saint Auguſtine in his commentary vpon this text.

The Proteſtants.

THat Angels are not be worſhipped, nor inuocated, as mediators, interceſſors, or aduocates, the Scripture ſpeaketh euidently,

*Argum.*1. Coloſſ.2.18. Let no man beguile you in the humblenes and worſhipping of Angels: Ergo, it is not lawfull to pray vnto them, or to worſhip them.

Rhemiſt. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh here againſt the wicked doctrine of Simon Magus, that affirmed that the Angels both ill and good, were mediators for vs vnto God; and againſt the ſuperſtition of the Iewes, that worſhipped the Angels by whom the law was guien.

Anſw. The Apoſtle condemneth both theſe ſuperſtitions, as likewiſe the popiſh inuocation of Angels: becauſe all will-worſhippe is forbidden, which is not after the preſcript of Gods word, Coloſſ.2.23. Out of which place we reaſon thus, all will-worſhip is forbidden: but all worſhip of Angels is a will-worſhip, Ergo, all worſhip of Angels is forbrdden: that which the Apoſtle calleth, verſ. 18. θρησκείαν, the worſhip of Angels, verſ. 23. he termeth ἐθελοθρησκείαν, will-worſhip, which is inuented by man, and not warranted by the word.

*Argum.*2. If any man ſinne, (ſaith the Apoſtle) we haue an aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt, he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, Iohn.2.2. Ergo, Chriſt onely is our aduocate.

Rhemiſt. Chriſt is our aduocate in the higheſt degree, becauſe by himſelf, and his owne merits, without the aſſiſtance of any other, he obtaineth pardon for vs. The other, as Angels & Saints, are as ſecondary interceſſors, that obtain not any thing by their own merits, but only through Chriſt.

Anſw. Firſt, he onely and properly is an aduocate that can pleade the iuſtice of his clients cauſe, which euery one that prayeth for vs cannot do: for though the Angels and Saints departed ſhould pray for vs (which we know not by the Scriptures) as our brethren vpon earth doe, yet ſhould they not be mediators and aduocates, but petitioners and intreators for vs.

Secondly, we gather many ſtrong arguments out of this place, for the ſole ſufficient aduocation of Chriſt. Firſt, the ſonne is the beſt and onely ſufficient aduocate with the father; therefore where we may haue free & bold acceſſe to the Sonne, Heb.4.16. what need haue we of the ſeruants helpe? Secondly, he is the onely aduocate that is iuſt and righteous before God: ſo only is Chriſt, the Angels are impect in his ſight, Iob.4.18. Ergo. Thirdly, he muſt be our aduocate that is alſo the propitiation for our ſinnes: Ergo, onely Chriſt.

Auguſtine ſaith, Dicitis, Angelos nos colimus: vtinam illos coleretis, facile ab illis diſceretis, illos non colere: But yee will ſay yee worſhip not images but Angels: I would you did truly worſhip and reuerence them: for you ſhould ſoone learne of the Angels, not to worſhip the Angels, In Pſal.96. And Bernard alſo thus writeth vpon theſe words of the Apoſtle, Hebr.1. are they not all miniſtring ſpirits? Plane miniſtri noſtri non Domini noſtri: They are our miniſters, not our Maſters or Lords: *In Pſal.90.ſerm.*11. if not our Lords, then not to be worſhipped.

Synod. Moguntin.cap.45. Sancti, &c. Velut corporis Chriſti nobiliſſima membra, eo ſocietatis & dilectionis cultu à nobis honorari debent; quo in hac vita à nobis ſancti homines coli poſſunt: Saintes, which haue happily ended this life, as the moſt noble members of Chriſts body, muſt be honoured with the worſhip of loue and brotherly fellowſhip, as holy men in this life may be honoured. But we do not make our prayers vnto men, though neuer ſo holy vpon earth: Ergo, neither ought we to pray to Angels or Saints in heauen.

We will adde the ſeale of the holy confeſſors and Martyrs: Certaine godly Chriſtians were perſecuted in the dioceſſe of Lincolne, for denying to pray to Saints, ſaying; What neede wee goe to the feete, when we may goe to the head? anno 1521. Fox pag.826.col.2.

Claudius Monerius, who ſuffered for the truth at Lyons, anno 1551. being asked whether Saints were not to be inuocated: anſwered, They cannot pray without faith, and therefore it is in vaine to call vnto them, pag.905.col.1. The reaſon ſtandeth thus, It is in vaine to pray to them, that cannot pray for vs (ſeeing by our aduerſaries confeſſion, Saints onely helpe vs by their prayer, and mediation to God, not by any helpfull power in themſelues) but neither the Angels nor Saints can pray for vs, becauſe they haue no faith (which gift is now with them ceaſed) and without faith no prayer is acceptable: Ergo, it is needleſſe to pray to them.

Francis Rebezies martyred at Paris, anno 1558. thus reaſoneth againſt inuocation of Angels and Saints: Saint Iohn ſaith, 1.Epiſt.5.verſ.14. This is the truſt wee haue in him, that if we demaund any thing after his will, he will heare vs: We muſt doe and pray therefore according to Gods will, not after our owne: But it is not Gods will that wee ſhould pray vnto any ſuch, either Angell or Saint: for no ſuch commaundement is giuen in his word, where his will onely is to be ſeene. Ergo.

THE NINTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING SAINTS DEPARTED.

THis Controuerſie hath two parts: firſt, of thoſe that being departed ſuffer ſome puniſhment after this life. Secondly, of thoſe that are ſtraight receiued to ioy in heauen. The firſt part hath two queſtions: firſt, of the place of darkneſſe, where the faithfull remained till the comming of Chriſt, as the Papiſts imagine. Secondly, of Purgatorie.

THE FIRST QVESTION OF LIMBVS PATRVM, where the Patriarkes were imagined to be.

The Papiſts.

THey haue deuiſed and imagined in their fooliſh conceit foure infernall and ſubterreſtriall Hæreſ.9. places; Hell, Purgatorie, Limbus infantium, where children remaine dying without Baptiſme, and Limbus Patrum, where the Fathers were before Chriſts comming. Theſe places they diſtinguiſh three waies: Firſt, by the ſituation: Hell is loweſt, Purgatorie is next, Limbus infantium in the third place, Limbus Patrum vppermoſt. Secondly, they differ in meaſure of puniſhment, ſome of them haue pœnam damni, and pœnam ſenſus, a double puniſhment, both of loſſe, in that they are excluded heauen, and of paine alſo, as Hell, and Purgatorie: the other two Limbi, are but dungeons of darknes onely, where they ſuffer no other ſmart or paine, but are only abſent from God. Thirdly, they differ in time and continuance, ſay they, Hell and the dungeon of children ſhall abide for euer: but Purgatorie and the dungeon of the Fathers are temporall: the one, that is, Limbus Patrum, is many yeeres agoe diſſolued: and Purgatorie alſo ſhall ceaſe, ſay they, at the comming of Chriſt, Bellarm.de Purgat.lib.2.cap.6.

This then is their opinion, that the Patriarkes and Prophets before Chriſts comming were not in heauen, but were kept in an infernall place of darkneſſe, yet without paine, and were deliuered by Chriſts deſcending into hell, *Bellarm.de Chriſti anima, lib.4.cap.*11.*Rhemiſt.Heb.*9.8.

*Argum.*1. Heb.11.40. God prouiding a better thing for vs, that they without vs ſhould not be perfect: That is, (ſay the Rhemiſts) the Fathers of the law could not be admitted to the ioyes of heauen, till the Apoſtles and other of the new law, were aſſociate with them, and a way made into heauen by the death and aſcenſion of Chriſt, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, by this reaſon the Patriarkes could not enter into heauen before the death of the Apoſtles, if there were no entrance found, vnleſſe they were aſſociate with them. Secondly, if the way were not opened before Chriſts aſcenſion, then the Patriarkes could not aſcend before: where were they then all thoſe 40.daies? for they were deliuered out of Limbus Patrum before Chriſts reſurrection. Thirdly, there is therefore no ſuch meaning of this place: but it is to bee vnderſtood of the reſurrection, when as all the elect ſhall be conſummate together, and enter body and ſoule into heauen. Fulk.

Thus doth Bernard expound this place, Acceperunt iam ſinguli ſtolas, ſed non veſtientur duplicibus donec veſtiamur & nos, Deo melius aliquid prouidente pro nobis, vt non ſine nobis conſummarentur : All of them, that are departed, (he meaneth the Saints) haue receiued their ſtoles or ſingle garments, but they ſhall not be cloathed with double, vntill we alſo be apparelled, God prouiding better things for vs : that is, in the reſurrection we ſhall all receiue this double rayment, we ſhall be perfited in body and ſoule.

After the ſame manner doth this Father expound that place, Apocal.6.9. how the ſoules cryed vnder the Altar : A labore requieſcunt, qui in Domino moriuntur ; ſed non requieſcunt interim à clamore, ſub throno Dei clamant animæ occiſorum, quia nihil etſi habent, quod moleſtet, nondum habent totum tamen, quod delectet : In die Palmar. ſerm.3. They reſt from labour, that die in the Lord : but they reſt not from crying : The ſoules of the ſlaine cry vnder the throne of God, becauſe though they haue nothing that doth moleſt them ; yet they haue not all, that may delight them. Neither of theſe places then can bee vnderſtood of the Patriarkes in Limbo : for they could not bee without ſome moleſtation in that duugeon of darknes.

In ſolennitat. Sanct. Ser. 3.

Biſhop Ridley agreeth with Bernard in the expoſition of the former place : God did prouide better for vs, that they without vs, &c. They tarrie now for vs vndoubtedly, longing for the day : but they are commanded yet to haue patience, vntill the number of their fellowe ſeruants be fulfilled : Fox.pag.1784. He vnderſtandeth the glorious conſummation of the Saints in the reſurrection.

Argum.2. Zachar.9.11. I haue looſed thy priſoners out of the pit, where there is no water : That is out of Limbus Patrum, Bellarm. de Chriſti anima. lib.4. cap.11.

Anſw. Auguſtine giueth a cleane contrarie ſenſe of the place, by the pit without water he vnderſtandeth, Humana miſeria ſiccam profunditatem & ſterilem, vbi non ſunt fluenta iuſtitia, ſed iniquitatis lutum : The drie and barren dungeon of humane miſerie, where there are no ſprings of iuſtice, but the puddle and mire of iniquity : That is, the Prophet ſpeaketh of the deliuerance of the people from their cruell and vniuſt bondage and captiuitie.

De ciuitat. Dei lib.18. cap.35.

Argum.3. 1.Pet.3.19. In the which ſpirit he alſo went and preached vnto the ſpirits that were in priſon, which ſometime had been diſobedient in the dayes of Noe. This place proueth euidently (ſaith Bellarmine) that Chriſt deſcended in ſoule into hell, and deliuered the fathers from thence, De Chriſti anima. lib.4.13.

Anſw. The place can haue no ſuch meaning : Firſt, by the ſpirit here the humane ſoule of Chriſt cannot be vnderſtood, but his diuine power : for Chriſt went and preached in that ſpirit, by the which he was quickened, as the text is : but he was not quickened or reſtored to life by his humane ſoule, but by his diuine power his ſoule was ioyned againe to his body. Auguſtine alſo giueth another reaſon, why he cannot be ſaid to be quickned or made aliue in ſpirit, that is, in his ſoule : for then he muſt haue dyed before in ſoule. But, Mors animæ peccatum eſt, à quo ille immunis fuit : But the death of the ſoule is ſinne, from the which Chriſt was free.

Bellarmine ſaith, that by the ſpirit not Chriſts diuinity but his ſoule muſt be vnderſtood, becauſe it cannot be ſaid properly of his diuine nature, that it went or came to a place, as it may be ſaid of his ſoule : Bellarm. ibid.

Contra.1. If the Ieſuite will ſtand ſo much vpon proper ſpeaking, neither can the ſoule be ſaid properly to goe, or come, which betoken an action and geſture of the bodie. 2. But to ſpeake according to the phraſe of Scripture, he cannot be ignorant, how that the Scripture ſpeaking to our capacitie, doth aſcribe ſuch humane actions vnto God : as the ſpirit is ſaid to moue vpon the waters, Geneſ.1.1. God is ſaid to walke in paradiſe, Geneſ.3. 3. Yet more vſually in the Goſpell the actions of the humanitie are ſometimes attributed to the Godhead of Chriſt, becauſe of the neere vniting and coniunction of them in one perſon : as Iohn.3.13. Chriſt is ſaid to deſcend from heauen, which was his Godhead onely, for his fleſh as yet had not aſcended. 4. This phraſe is neither ſtrange nor vnuſuall, to ſay that Chriſt went in ſpirite, or the ſpirite of Chriſt went, ſeeing Noah went in the ſpirite of Chriſt : that is attributed to the worker, which was done by the inſtrument : as whatſoeuer the Prophets did in times paſt, the Lord is ſaid to doe it, &c.

Againe Bellarmine anſwereth, that it is not vnuſuall in Scripture, to ſay that is quickened, which dyed not, as 2.Sam.8.2. Dauid is ſaid to meaſure Moab with 2. coards, one to kill them by, another to quicken them : and Act.7.19. Pharao is ſaid to caſt out their infants, ne viuificarentur, that they ſhould not be quickened ; that is, remaine aliue : ſo in this place the ſpirite, that is, the ſoule of Chriſt is ſaid to be quickened, becauſe it remained aliue and could not be killed.

Contra. Firſt, the ſame word is not read in the places alleadged, which S.Peter vſeth here : in the firſt place, the word is ζωγρέω, as the Septuagint tranſlate, which ſignifieth, to raiſe or reſtore to life : in the other place the word is ζωογονέω, which betokeneth to grow vp or proſper, as plants doe; but the word vſed by Saint Peter is deriued from the word ζωοποιέω, which is to make aliue, and the right Latine thereof is viuifico, I do reuiue, and I am reuiued, which is more then to reſtore one to the hope of life, as Dauid did the Moabites, which otherwiſe were as dead men, or to remaine aliue, which Pharao would not ſuffer the infants to do. Secondly, the examples are not alike, for they are ſaid to be reuiued, becauſe they might die, though they died not; but the ſoule cannot die: wherefore vnleſſe he can ſhew out of Scripture, that ſome thing is ſaid to be reuiued or quickened, that neither doth nor can die, he ſayeth nothing; but neither hath he, nor yet can produce any ſuch example out of Scripture.

2 The Apoſtle ſpeaketh onely of thoſe which were incredulous and diſobedient, not of the faithfull, ſuch as the Patriarkes were and Prophets. Yea (ſaith Bellarmine) they might be vnbeleeuers at the firſt, but after repented before they dyed.

Anſ. Then the Apoſtles compariſon could not hold, if any were ſaued without the Arke: for as then eight perſons onely were ſaued, all without the Arke periſhed: ſo now without Baptiſme and faith of the Church, (for by Baptiſme he vnderſtandeth not onely the waſhing of water, but the inward cleanſing by the grace of the ſpirit) none can bee ſaued. If then any were ſaued out of the Arke, there may now alſo be ſaluation out of the Church. Auguſtine alſo ſaith, Ii modò, qui non crediderunt Euangelio illis intelligantur eſſe ſimiles, qui tunc non crediderunt, cum fabricaretur arca: They which now beleeue not the Goſpell, are like to them which beleeued not then while the Arke was in making. And they which doe now beleeue and are baptized, are like to thoſe which then were ſaued in the Arke. Auguſtine thinketh therefore, that they were incredulous perſons, and vtterly periſhed both bodie and ſoule. And ſo is our opinion.

3 The text ſaith not, he went and deliuered, but went and preached: for Auguſtine calleth it an abſurd thing to thinke, that the Goſpell was preached to them that were dead, which in their life time were incredulous: for if the Goſpell be preached in hell (ſaith he) it would follow that it is not neceſſarie it ſhould be preached here in the world, if men when they are dead, may heare it, and be conuerted. And againe, it would enſue (ſaith he) that there ſhould be a Church in hell: for where the word is preached, there is a Church. Wherefore he concludeth, that it muſt needes be vnderſtood of Noah his preaching in the ſpirit and power of Chriſt: Arcæ fabricatio, prædicatio quædam fuit: The building of the Arke was a kind of preaching, Epiſtol. 99. So alſo he expoundeth that 1. Pet. 4. 6. The Goſpell was preached to the dead: Ex circumſtantia loci apparet, eum intelligere eos, qui nunc mortui ſunt, ſed olim in vita Euangelium audiuerunt. Commentar. in epiſtol. ad Roman.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt in ſoule preached vnto them, Non vt conuerterentur impij, ſed vt gauderent animæ piorum: Not to conuert the wicked, but to reioyce the ſoules of the godly.

Contra. But S. Peter ſaith otherwiſe, That the Goſpell was preached to the dead, that they might be condemned according to men in the fleſh, but might liue according to God in the ſpirit, chap. 4. 6. What is this elſe, but to conuert the dead? of the which conuerſion there are two parts, the mortification of the fleſh, and the reuiuing or quickening of the ſpirit, both ſet downe by the Apoſtle.

4 The text is not, that were in priſon, but doth better beare this ſenſe, that are: The words in the originall are theſe: τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι, ſpiritibus in carcere, to the ſpirits in priſon: the participle here to be ſupplied in the Greeke οὖσι, in Latine exiſtentibus, is properly of the preſent tence, and ſignifieth being: and common vſe of ſpeech will giue it rather to bee vnderſtood of the preſent time, then of the time paſt: as if I ſhould ſay, the man in the houſe, or in the priſon, who would not thinke that I meane one now being in the houſe, rather then one that was in the houſe and now is not? So the Apoſtles meaning is this, that they which were incredulous and diſobedient in time paſt, when Noah in the ſpirit of Chriſt, or Chriſt by his ſpirit in Noah preached to the world, were then deſtroyed in the flood, and now for their incredulitie are puniſhed in the priſon of hell. And thus Auguſtine in euery point vnderſtandeth this text, of Noah his preaching to the old world in the ſpirit of Chriſt, ſauing that by the priſon he vnderſtandeth their mortall bodies, while they liued. Bellarmine taketh paines at large to confute Auguſtines expoſition, becauſe it commeth neere vnto ours: ſo well theſe fellowes agree with antiquitie, whereof notwithſtanding they make great boaſt.

The Proteſtants.

THat the holie Patriarkes, Fathers and Prophets dyed in the ſame faith before the comming of Chriſt, which all true Chriſtians doe now hold, and were preſently receiued into the ioyes of heauen, and not kept in any infernall place or dungeon of darknes: thus it is proued.

Argum. 1. They had all faith, and beleeued in Chriſt: yea, the ſame faith that is now preached; as it is defined by the Apoſtle, Heb. 11. 1. They alſo by this faith obtained remiſſion of ſinnes, Rom. 4. 7. Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiuen, as it is alleadged out of the Pſalme: Ergo, they were bleſſed: but out of the kingdome of God there was no bleſſedneſſe to be found: therefore they alſo went to heauen.

Your owne maſter of ſentences alſo here witneſſeth with vs: Eadem fides ſaluatoris, quæ nos ſal- uat, ſaluos iuſtos faciebat antiquos, &c. The ſame faith, which ſaueth vs, did alſo ſaue the ancient righteous, the great with the ſmall. For as we beleeue that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, ſo they, that he was to come: as wee beleeue that he dyed and roſe againe, ſo they, that hee ſhould die and riſe againe: And Gregorie compareth both, to thoſe that went before, and followed Chriſt riding to Ieruſalem, crying, Oſanna, &c. lib. 3. diſtinct. 25. a. From this place we may further reaſon thus: The ſame faith hath the ſame effects and fruits; the Patriarkes had the ſame faith with vs: Ergo, they were ſaued and went to heauen, as all beleeuers now do. Agayne, they that went before Chriſt entred into Ieruſalem, as well as they that followed: wherefore the forerunners of Chriſt, that beleeued in him, by the ſame faith entred into heauen.

Argum. 2. If the heauens were not opened before Chriſts aſcenſion, as the Rhemiſts affirme: then none went to heauen before Chriſt aſcended. But that is falſe: Henoch and Elias by their owne confeſſion were taken vp into Paradiſe: ſo was the ſoule of the theefe vpon the Croſſe. But Paradiſe is in heauen, yea the third and higheſt heauen, as S. Paul calleth it, 2. Corinth. 12.4. And ſo Auguſtine expoundeth that place, Voluit Deus Apoſtolo demonſtrare vitam, in qua poſt hanc vitam viuendum eſt in æternum. The Lord would ſhew vnto the Apoſtle that life, wherein, after this life, we ſhall liue and remaine for euer: De Gen. lib. 12.28. Theſe three therefore went to Paradiſe, which is no infernall or place of darkeneſſe, but a celeſtiall habitation of ioy, light and felicitie. They were not then in Limbo Patrum, in the dungeon of the Fathers. Wherefore we conclude, there was acceſſe to heauen before the aſcenſion of Chriſt.

Argum. 3. Beſide out of Scripture many ſtrong arguments may be gathered, to proue that the Fathers and Patriarkes were in heauen, a place of ioy, not in the imagined Limbus, a dungeon of darkeneſſe, before the comming of Chriſt.

Firſt, Euery one that beleeueth, hath euerlaſting life. Iohn 5.24. Abraham beleeued, Rom. 4.3. Ergo, Abraham had and was in euerlaſting life: Ergo, not in Limbus, which is a place of payne, as they confeſſe; but in euerlaſting life is no payne.

Secondly, the ſoules of the faithfull before Chriſt were in celeſtiall Ieruſalem, for they are the Congregation of the firſt borne, whoſe names are written in heauen, Heb. 12.23. they were the firſt borne vnto Chriſt in the world: Ergo, their names were written in heauen.

Thirdly, where the holy Angels were, there alſo were the ſoules of the ancient faithfull, Heb. 12.22. The companie of the Angels and the congregation of the firſt borne belong all to one place; ſo alſo Lazarus ſoule was caried by the Angels: but the Angels are in no other place but heauen: Ergo.

Further, as out of theſe words, I am the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, our Sauiour proueth the reſurrectiõ, becauſe he is not God of the dead but of the liuing; ſo by the ſame reaſon we may conclude they were in heauen: for if it be inglorious for God to be named of the dead, euen ſo alſo it is to call himſelfe by them, that are in payne, in darkeneſſe, abſent from God, as all they are which are imagined to be in Limbo: Ergo.

Argum. 4. The Fathers and Patriarches, before Chriſts comming, were in Abrahams boſome: but that was no infernall place or priſon, ſuch as they imagine Limbus Patrum to be. Auguſtine proueth, that it could not be membrum, or pars inferorum, a member or part of Hell, or any infernall place, as the Ieſuites hold: Firſt, the text ſaith, there is magnum chaos, a great gulfe, a great diſtance betweene, Luk. 16.26. and verſe 23. The rich man ſaw Abraham a farre off: wherefore it is not like, that both thoſe places ſhould be infernall. Secondly, Abrahams boſome, was quietis habitatio, & fœlicitatis ſinus, a place of reſt and bliſſe: but ſo is not any infernall place, where there is horror, and darkeneſſe. Thirdly, the place where the rich man was, is called Hell, or infernall: there is no ſuch thing ſaid of Lazarus, that he was in any lower place; but aboue in ſome high and farre diſtant place: for the rich man is ſaid to lift vp his eyes. Auguſtine then concludeth: Ne ipſos quidem inferos vſpiam ſcripturarum locis in bono appellatos reperire potui. Epiſtol. 99. I do not find that this word Infernal, is taken any where in the Scriptures in the good part. And therefore the boſome of Abraham, being a place of reſt, ſaith he, cannot be any infernall place. One of your owne writers maketh Abrahams boſome to be the ſame place, where the ſaints now are in happineſſe and ioy, and Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe: Intrepidè pergamus ad redemptorem noſtrum, &c. Let vs therefore go without feare to our Redeemer Ieſus, to the aſſemblie of the Saints, &c. and to the boſome of Abraham with Lazarus. Eſpenc. in 2. Timoth. cap. 4. p. 167. d.

Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. lib. 3. cap. 3. Confuſiones duas eſſe legimus, vnam temporalem, per quam omnis peccator pœnitendo peccaſſe confunditur: alteram æternalem, & ſine fine manſuram, quam hi, qui à ſiniſtris ſunt, audituri ſunt, quibus dicetur, ite maledicti, &c. We reade of two confuſions, one temporal, by the which a ſinner in repenting for his ſinne is confounded or aſhamed: another eternall, to indure without ende, which they that are on the left hand ſhall heare, to whom it ſhall be ſaid, Goe yee curſed, &c. If then according to the ſentence of this Councel there be two confuſions or abaſhments, one temporall in this life, another eternal afterward: then was there neuer any ſuch Limbus bus Patrum, a dungeon of darkeneſſe, for the fathers: vnleſſe they will ſay, that when the fathers were thruſt into ſuch a darke dungeon or priſon, it was no confuſion or abaſhment vnto them.

And becauſe our aduerſaries do here accumulate and heape vp many teſtimonies of the Fathers, whom we confeſſe for the moſt part of them, eſpecially the later ſort of them, to haue bin in this error; yet that it may appeare, that the trueth is yet more ancient, I will alleadge the ſentence of a moſt ancient father, namely Origen, vpon theſe words of Iob, Naked ſhal I returne &c. Nudus ibo illuc &c. I ſhall returne naked thither; whither? euen where Adam and the reſt of my Elders are gone, where the tabernacles of the righteous are, the reſt of the faithfull, the conſolation of the godly: where is Abrahams boſome, the company of Angels, the kingdome of Chriſt, life and light, and glorie, and ſight of God. Orig. in 1. cap. Iob. But where elſe are all theſe to be found, but in heauen, for in Limbus is neither light, nor comfort, nor Angell, nor Chriſt, nor the glorie of God to be ſeene? What clearer euidence of antiquitie can be required?

See this trueth ſealed by the bloud of Martyrs: Richardus Feurus who ſuffered for the trueth at Lions anno 1554. being asked where the old Fathers were before the death of Chriſt, anſwered: They were in life eternall, which they looked for, being promiſed before to Adam, Abraham, and the Patriarkes in the ſeede to come: Fox. pag. 913.

The ſincere iudgement of Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr we haue ſeene before.

AN APPENDIX OR APPERTINANCE OF THIS queſtion, concerning the apparition of Samuel.

The Papiſts.

10. Error. THey hold opinion, that it was the very ſoule of Samuel that appeared at the witches houſe at Endor vnto Saul: and vſe it as an argument, to proue that the ſoules of the Patriarkes were not in heauen, but in ſome infernall place, before Chriſts comming, becauſe Samuel aſcended out of the earth, *Bellarm. de Chriſt. anim. lib.*4. 11.

Argum. 1. Becauſe he that appeared to Saul, is called Samuel in the text. Auguſtine anſwereth: that the images of things, are called by the names of the things themſelues: as Geneſ. 41. Pharao ſaid, he ſaw eares of corne, and fat and leane kine in his dreame, when they were but the images of ſuch things: So the diuell becauſe he appeared in the ſhape of Samuel, Samuel himſelfe is ſaid to be ſeene: *Ad Simplicianum lib.*2. *quæſt.*3.

Argum. 2. Eccleſiaſtic. 46. It is ſet downe as a commendation of Samuel, that he propheſied being dead: Ergo, it was Samuel indeed, *Bellarm. De Purgat. lib.*2. *cap.*6.

Auguſtine anſwereth, that this booke was not receiued into the Canon of the Scriptures: It is not Canonicall. *De cura pro mortuis, cap.*15.

Argum. 3. He telleth Saul things to come, as how the next day he ſhould be ouercome, and ſlaine. But the diuell knoweth not things to come, Bellarm. ibid.

Auguſtine anſwereth, Facile eſt & non incongruum: It is an eaſie matter with God, and not vnlikely, that ſome things ſhould bee reuealed to euill ſpirits, for the greater puniſhment of the wicked: for otherwiſe we might meruaile; Quomodo dæmones agnouerint Chriſtum, quem Iudæi non agnoſcebant: How the diuels knew Chriſt, whom the Iewes did not acknowledge: *Ad Simplician. lib.*2. *quæſt.*3.

The Proteſtants.

THat it was not the ſoule of Samuel which appeared, who was now at reſt; but the diuell in the likenes of Samuel, who alſo can transforme himſelfe into an Angel of light: Auguſtine proueth by theſe foure arguments.

Argum. 1. Becauſe the Witch or Pythoniſt vſed enchantments, vnto the which the ſoule of ſo holy a Prophet was not ſubiect, *Dæmoniacis incantationibus vti videtur. De mirabilibus Scriptur.*2. *cap.*11. Bellarmine anſwereth: that Samuel preuented her inchantment, and came vp voluntarily.

Anſw. The text is contrarie, verſ. 11. for the woman firſt asked Saul, whom ſhe ſhould bring vp, that is, by her charmes and incantations: and he ſaid, bring me vp Samuel.

Argum. 2. Quomodo Saul, &c. How could Saul obtaine to heare a Prophet ſpeake from the dead, whom God vouchſafed not to anſwer by Prophets aliue? The text is, that God gaue him no anſwer neither by Prophets, nor by dreames: therefore I haue called for thee, verſ. 15. Ergo, it was not Samuel, for then God ſhould haue giuen him anſwer by Prophets.

Argum. 3. If it had been Samuel, he would not haue told a lye vnto Saul, ſaying, to morowe thou ſhalt be with me: Magno quippe interuallo ſeparari bonos à malis legimus: For we reade that the good are ſeparated from the bad by a great diſtance after this life, as it appeareth in the ſtorie of Diues and Lazarus. Auguſt. ad Simplician. ibid.

Bellarm. He ſaith as much, as you ſhall be dead: noting the generall condition, not the particular ſtate of the dead : and he ſaith further, Thou and thy ſonnes ſhall be with me to morrow, but Ionathan being a righteous man, went not to the ſame place that Saul did : wherefore, ye ſhal be with me, is as much to ſay, Ye ſhall be dead.

Anſw. This phraſe in Scripture importeth, and implieth alſo the particular ſtate of thoſe that are departed, as 2.Sam.12.23. Dauid ſaith of his child, I ſhall goe to him, he ſhall not come to me: And Luk.23.43. Chriſt ſaith, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe : In both places it ſignifieth to be in reſt and ioy, in the ſame place, where they are, with whom they are ſaid, they ſhall be : Ergo, it ſhould be ſo taken here. Neither is it neceſſarie to vnderſtand Ionathan in this ſpeech, ſeeing that he ſaith not all his ſonnes : and there were two other of his ſonnes beſide Ionathan ſlaine, namely, Abinadab, and Malchiſhuah. 1.Sam.31.2,6. So that the ſpeech is true, thou and thy ſonnes, though Ionathan be excluded.

*Argum.*4. If it had been Samuel: Vtique vir iuſtus non permiſiſſet ſe adorari : The iuſt man would not haue ſuffered himſelfe to be adored and worſhipped: as the diuell doth take it at Saules hands, to be worſhipped of him. For the text ſaith, he enclined his face toward the ground, and bowed himſelfe, or worſhipped : Auguſt.quæſt.ex.veteri.teſtam.27.

Bellarmine ſaith, that he did giue no other worſhip vnto him, then was due vnto the ſoule of Samuel ſo great a Prophet.

Anſw. Cornelius did no otherwiſe worſhip Peter, then by falling downe as Saul here doth, nor Iohn the Angell, Apocal.22. yet neither of them are permitted to do it : Wherefore, if this had bin true Samuel, he would not haue arrogated more to himſelfe, then either Peter, or the Angell: Wherefore as S. Auguſtine ſaith, Hoc nititur, vt adoretur, quaſi Deus, he goeth about to be worſhipped as God, and therefore it was ſurely Sathan, not Samuel : Thoſe foure effectuall reaſons of S. Auguſtine are confirmed by their owne decrees, Cauſ.26. qu.5.c.14. howſoeuer Bellarmine at his pleaſure reiecteth both the one and the other.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING Purgatorie.

THe queſtion hath three parts : firſt, whether there be any Purgatorie for ſoules to be purged and cleanſed in after this life. Secondly, of other circumſtances and matters that doe belong thereunto. Thirdly, of prayer for the dead.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THERE BE any Purgatorie after this life.

The Papiſts.

Hæreſ.11. THere is (they ſay) a certaine infernall place in the earth, called Purgatorie, in the which, as in a priſon houſe, the ſoules which were not fully purged in this life, are there cleanſed and purged by fire, before they can be receiued into heauen: Bellarm.de Purgat.lib.1.c.1.lib.2.c.6. Rhemiſt. Matth.12.ſect.6.

*Argum.*1. Zachar.9.11. Thou haſt looſed thy priſoners out of the pit where was no water, Pſal.66.12. We went through fire and water. Theſe and ſuch like places the Ieſuite vnderſtandeth of Purgatorie, Lib.1.de Purgator.cap.3.

Anſw. Firſt, the Ieſuite brought this place before, to proue that there was Limbus Patrum, and now he maketh it ſerue for Purgatorie : thus they can make the Scripture to ſpeake what they liſt themſelues. But Purgatorie and Limbus Patrum, are two diuers, yea and contrary things : for the Limbus was onely for thoſe that liued before Chriſt ; Purgatorie began ſince : the Limbus was voyde of paine and puniſhment; ſo is not Purgatorie: wherefore if the Lake or pit in Zacharie ſignifie Purgatorie, it maketh nothing for Limbus: and if it ſerue for Limbus, then they miſſe of a place for Purgatorie. But indeede it ſignifieth no ſuch thing : but is taken onely in that place for the affliction and miſerie of this life, as we ſhewed out of Auguſtine. And ſo doth he alſo expound ſuch and the like places out of the Pſalmes, as Pſalm.86.13. Thou haſt deliuered my ſoule from the loweſt graue. Quid (ſaith he) eſt lacus infimus, niſi profundiſſima miſeria, qua non ſit profundior? What els (ſaith he) is the loweſt pit or graue, but the loweſt degree of miſerie, then the which there can be no greater?

*Argum.*2. Matth.12.32. Blaſphemie againſt the ſpirit ſhall not be forgiuen neither in this world nor the world to come: Ergo, ſome ſinnes ſhall be forgiuen in the next world ; and therefore there is a purgatorie, for in hell there is no forgiueneſſe : Bellarm.loc.1.ex nouo teſtamento.

Anſw. Firſt, by the world to come, is vnderſtood the world ſucceeding this, and ſo it anſwereth to the world preſent : as Marke 10.30. They ſhall at this preſent receiue an hundred fold, and in the world to come life euerlaſting. Wherefore purgatorie being imagined to be now preſent, it can not be taken to belong to the world to come: ſo alſo muſt we vnderſtand that place, Epheſ.1.21. that Chriſt is exalted aboue euery name, that is named in this worlde, or the world to come: that is, in the world which ſhall be after this: I thinke they will not by the world to come, in this place, inferre Purgatorie; nor yet, where the Apoſtle ſaith, The powers of the world to come, Heb.6.5.

Secondly, it followeth not, ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhall not be remitted in the next worlde, Ergo, other ſinnes ſhall: no more, then it followeth, that where Chriſt ſaith, I will not drinke henceforth of the fruite of this vine, vntill I drinke it with you in my fathers kingdome, Math. 26.29. that therefore he did drinke of other things; becauſe he did not drinke of the Vine, &c. And whereas Bellarmine would iuſtifie this argument, by that example Iohn 19. where Chriſt ſaith, My kingdome is not of this world, and Pilate inferreth thereupon, Art thou a king then? where an affirmatiue is concluded out of the negatiue; the reaſon is not alike, vnleſſe he will reaſon as Pilate did: Thy kingdome is not of this world: Ergo, thou haſt a kingdome: ſo blaſphemie ſhal not be forgiuen in the next world: Ergo, there ſhall be blaſphemie then. Thus he might conclude truely, for in hell there ſhall be blaſphemie.

Thirdly, S. Marke doth beſt expound S. Matthew, 3.29. He that blaſphemeth, ſhall neuer be forgiuen: ſo that to be forgiuen neither in this worlde, nor the next, is neuer to be forgiuen. Bellar. But Marke is rather to be expounded by Matthew. Anſw. Yea, let Matthew expound himſelfe: for verſ.31. he ſaith, Blaſphemie ſhall not be forgiuen, that is, at all: and then he addeth in the verſe following, neither in this world, nor the world to come: ſo that not to be forgiuen in this world, or the next, is not to be forgiuen at all.

Fourthly, that there is no remiſſion of ſinne after this life, the Scripture is euident, Iohn 3.18. He that beleeueth is not condemned, but he that beleeueth not, is condemned alreadie. Vpon which place the Rhemiſts giue this note, That he that beleeueth, ſhall not be condemned eyther at the houre of death, or day of iudgement: from which place I reaſon thus, Euery man eyther dyeth in faith, or without faith: if he die in incredulitie, he is condemned, and there is afterward no hope; if in faith, he is freed from condemnation, and entred into life, and ſo conſequently deliuered from his ſinnes: therefore in this life we onely obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes, becauſe faith is onely of this life, whereby our ſinnes are remitted. Ambroſe alſo ſaith, Qui hic non acceperit remiſſionem peccatorum, illic non erit: He that receiueth not here remiſſion of ſinnes, ſhal not be there, that is, in heauen. de bono mort.cap.2.

*Argum.*3. Luke 8.55. Her ſpirit came againe and ſhe roſe. Chriſt rayſed the Rulers daughter to life. This euidently ſheweth that there is a third place beſide Heauen and Hell: for the ſoules that are there cannot returne againe, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Surely, a goodly argument, the ſpirits of Lazarus and of the Maid returned: Ergo, there is a third place: and why may you not thinke, that their ſoules were, whereas the ſoules of other righteous are? And why may not the Lord bring at his pleaſure, if it pleaſeth him, the ſoules at reſt, into their bodies againe? And this further may be thus ſhewed: after the reſurrection of Chriſt, the bodies of many that were dead, appeared out of their graues, Matth.27.53. If Chriſt then by his power be able to call the bodie out of his place, which is the graue, euen ſo the ſoule alſo. Againe, S. Paul ſaith, He was taken vp into the third heauen, whether in his bodie or not, he knoweth not, but in his ſpirit and ſoule, he was ſure he was there: therefore it is poſſible with God, to call the ſoules from heauen into the bodie, the more to manifeſt his glorie. Further I aske, where the ſoule of Dorcas was after her departure: I thinke they will not ſay in Purgatorie, ſhe being a woman full of good works and almes while ſhe liued: if ſhee were then in heauen, and Peter called her ſoule into her bodie againe; ſhall the Maſter be able to do leſſe, then the diſciple? S. Gregorie alſo reporteth lib.1.dialog.c.9. how S. Fortunatus rayſed againe one Marcellus an holy man, which was caried by the Angels into a bleſſed place: this ſtorie is receiued by Bellarmine; who alſo granteth that holy men may returne from other places then Purgatorie, lib.2. de Purg.c.8. Wherefore this example of Lazarus concludeth not. Act.8.

*Argum.*4. Of all other they moſt inſult, and beare themſelues bolde vpon that place of S. Paul, 1.Cor.3. which being rightly vnderſtood, doth not helpe them any thing at all; verſ.13. The fire ſhall trie euery mans worke, verſ.15. if any mans worke, burne, he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, but he ſhall be ſafe himſelfe, yet as it were through the fire. Bellar.& Rhemiſt. by fire here vnderſtand the flames of Purgatorie: by wood, ſtubble, ſtrawe; veniall ſinnes, which muſt be purged by that fire, Rhemiſt. 1.Cor.3.ſect.3.

Anſw. Firſt, by the precious matter here, as of gold, ſiluer, are not the workes of charitie vnderſtood, but the preaching of ſound doctrine: by ſtraw, and ſtubble, and wood, and other combuſtible matter, the affectation of eloquence, and corrupt teaching of the truth, yet holding the foundation; not veniall ſinnes, as the Rhemiſts affirme: and this Bellarmine alſo granteth. And ſo S. Ambroſe expoundeth, Opus quod ardere dicitur, mala doctrina eſt &c. The worke that ſhal burne is euill doctrine &c. in 3.1.ad Corinth. Doth then their purgatorie fire diſcerne betweene ſound and corrupt doctrine? but that they imagine to be a puniſhing and purging fire, not a trying and diſcerning fire, as this is, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

Secondly, fire is here taken allegorically, as the reſt of the words are, of gold, ſiluer, ſtubble: neither can it be taken for their Purgatorie fire; becauſe it trieth the workes onely, not the perſons, and all muſt be tried by this fire, as well thoſe that build gold and ſiluer, as the other: but all ſhall not paſſe through Purgatorie, by their owne confeſſion. They are driuen to his ſhift, to graunt, that verſe 13. the fire is taken in one ſenſe, namely, for the ſentence and iudgement of God, and verſe 15. in another, that is, for the flames of Purgatorie. But who ſeeth not howe abſurd a thing this is, that in an allegorie the ſame word, and in the ſame place, ſhould be ſo diuerſly taken? It is apparant then that this is the meaning, that the day, that is, the time, ſhall declare it: for God hath appointed a time to examine euery mans doctrine by fire: which is nothing elſe but the iudgement of God by the fire of his word, whereby euery man, in the day of his calling and conuerſion, ſhall know whether he hath preached aright or not.

Firſt I will proue this expoſition to be ſound, and then ſhew how it is impugned. Firſt, this fire muſt needs be either a materiall fire, or a ſpirituall: if materiall, then either euerlaſting fire, or purgatorie fire, or the fire of the iudgement day: not the firſt, becauſe it is onely for the wicked; not the ſecond, nor the third, becauſe they doe not trie works, but the perſons; but this fire trieth euerie mans worke: Ergo, it is not a materiall, but a ſpirituall fire.

Secondly, this fire is a triall of euery mans doctrine, how he hath preached and taught; but no materiall fire can make triall of doctrine: Ergo, a ſpirituall fire.

Thirdly, as is the gold and ſiluer, ſtubble, wood, &c. ſo is the fire; but they muſt be vnderſtood ſpiritually: Ergo, ſo muſt the fire.

And thus much Bellarmine granteth, that in the two firſt places the fire of Gods iudgement muſt be vnderſtood, but not in the third, in the 15. verſe.

Contra. Firſt, that fire, whereby a man ſuffereth loſſe in his worke, is the fire he ſhall be ſaued through, verſ. 15. but the firſt fire is ſpirituall, becauſe it examineth the worke it ſelfe: Ergo, the other is the ſame ſpirituall fire.

Againe, by the ſame fire is as well the ſaluation of the worker, as the probation of the worke: for the probation of the worke tendeth to the ſauing of the worker: but the worke is proued and tried by a ſpirituall fire. Ergo, &c.

Further, Bellarmines owne application of the ſimilitude ſheweth as much: for hee thus expoundeth it, as if two workmen ſhould make two houſes, one of hewed ſtone, the other of timber and ſtraw: fire is ſet to both houſes; the workman in the ſtone houſe is vntouched of the fire, and his houſe ſafe: but the other houſe burneth, and the builder within is in daunger, and cannot eſcape, but by paſſing thorough the fire, cap.4.loc.2. Doth he not euidently graunt, that it is one and the ſelfe ſame fire, wherewith the houſe is burned, and thorough the which the builder eſcapeth? So then theſe foure properties named by the Apoſtle, of reuealing, trying, burning, ſauing, muſt bee referred to one and the ſelfe ſame fire, which is a ſpirituall fire, and not a materiall: therefore no purgatorie fire.

Now Bellarmine goeth about to infringe this our expoſition of the ſpirituall fire of truth, wherby euery mans worke is tried in this life, by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, The day of the Lord ſhall declare it, verſ. 13. which is in Scripture taken for the day of iudgement: and therefore it ſhall not declare it in this life.

Anſ. In the Originall Greeke wee reade onely the day, and not the day of the Lord: ſo that word ſeemeth to be added in the vulgar Latin. And againe, there ſhall be no purgatorie fire after the day of iudgement: wherefore herein they doe contradict themſelues.

Secondly, The day which ſhall be reuealed by fire, ſaith the Apoſtle; what day is this elſe but the day of iudgement, which the preciſe ſignifying of fire declareth? Rhemiſt.

Anſ. I will oppoſe againſt them the iugdement of Bellarmine, who ſaith, that the fire of the day of iudgement cannot here be vnderſtood: firſt, becauſe that fire ſhall worke onely vpon the wicked, but S. Pauls fire ſhall trie all. Secondly, that fire maketh not triall of workes, as S. Pauls fire doth. Thirdly, it would follow that they which build hay, ſtubble, &c. ſhould not enter into heauen before the day of iudgement: ſo are they anſwered with their owne.

Thirdly, this fire ſhall trie euery mans worke what it is: but this difference of mens working is not alwaies ſeene in this life. Ergo, ſic Rhemiſt. Bellarm.

Anſ. Firſt, the Apoſtle meaneth not euery worke whatſoeuer ſhall be made manifeſt here, but he ſpeaketh onely of the worke of the Miniſterie, which is publike, and to be diſcerned of all. Secondly, neither is it neceſſarie to vnderſtand the manifeſtation of theſe workes to the ſight of others, but the reuealing thereof to their owne conſcience, which alwaies falleth out in this life to thoſe that ſhall be ſaued.

Fourthly, they, whoſe errors are reuealed by the word of God, and their mindes lightened, doe ſuffer no loſſe, but rather haue gaine by it: but the Apoſtle ſaith, that they whoſe worke burneth doe ſuffer loſſe by it, Bellarm.

Anſ. They whoſe erronious preaching is reuealed by the ſpirit in the word, ſuffer no loſſe, in reſpect that they themſelues vpon their repentance are ſaued: but yet they haue loſſe in regard of their labour, which is loſt, and of the greatnes of reward, which they ſhall haue, that preach ſincerely: and ſo is S. Paul to be vnderſtood, ſaying, they ſuffer loſſe, &c. yet are ſaued.

So then, notwithſtanding theſe obiections to the contrarie, our expoſition of the Reuelation & trial to be had in this life by the ſpiritual fire of truth in euery mans conſcience, as touching the worke of the Miniſterie, remaineth ſound, and agreeable to Scripture. To this conſenteth Origen: Habuit Petrus aliquid plumbi, &c. Peter had a little lead, for our Sauiour ſaith vnto him, O thou of little faith. He therefore that is ſafe, is ſafe, as it were through fire: as the furnace trieth the gold, ſo tentation the righteous: Veniendū eſt ergo omnibus, &c. Wherfore euery one muſt come to the fire, muſt come to the conflatorie or fining pot, Hom.6. in Exod. Likewiſe Saint Hierome: Cum viderit Satanas nos ſuper fundamentum Chriſti, &c. When Satan ſeeth vs vpon the foundation of Chriſt to build hay, or ſtubble; ſupponit incendium, he ſetteth to the fire: wherefore let vs build gold, &c. and he ſhall not dare to tempt vs, lib.2. aduerſ. Iouinian. Both theſe fathers by this fire vnderſtand, the tentation in this life, whereby a man is tried, and brought to acknowledge his infirmitie: which is a preparation to the more excellent worke of the ſpirit, whereby they are further lightened.

I will alſo produce Bernard for the expoſition of this place, though I denie not, but that he ſomewhat ſauoured of this purgatorie inuention: theſe words, he ſhall bee ſafe, yet as thorough fire, he thus interpreteth: Ignis tria habet, fumum, lucem, ardorem, &c. Fire hath three things, ſmoake, light, heate: the ſmoake, that is the bitternes of ſoule: the light, is the confeſſion of the mouth: the heate is in the bodie the tribulation or puniſhment of repentance. The bitternes then of the ſoule, the confeſſion of the mouth, the puniſhment of the bodie, are that fire, whereby the looſe and negligent builder ſhall bee ſaued, Serm. de lig. fœn. ſtipul. But all theſe are in this life. Ergo, &c.

*Argum.*5. Matth.5.25. Agree with thine aduerſarie while thou art in the way with him, leſt he deliuer thee to the Iudge, the Iudge to the Miniſter, and thou bee caſt into priſon: Verely I ſay vnto thee, thou ſhalt not come out thence, till thou haſt paied the vtmoſt farthing. This priſon, ſaith Bellarmine, is Purgatorie, out of which, after the debt is paied, the debter ſhall goe forth.

Anſ. Firſt, this ſaying of our Sauiour may ſafely be expounded according to the letter of the affaires of this life, as Saint Chryſoſtome doth expound it, that men to preuent their further daunger, ſhould bee readie to compound their controuerſies betime. And ſuch counſell alſo the Wiſeman giueth, Pro.6.3. That if a man haue giuen his word, and is become a ſuretie for another, he ſhould not ſleepe before he had deliuered himſelfe. And this expoſition is moſt agreeable to the text: for the word is ἀντίδικος, an aduerſarie at the law. And Luke.12.58. where the ſame ſentence of our Sauiour is repeated, there is mention made of the Magiſtrate, and of the Iaylor, which are termes and offices properly fitting the buſines of this life. Bellarmine hath not any thing worth the anſwering, contrarie to this ſenſe.

Secondly, if we draw theſe words to a ſpirituall vnderſtanding, by the priſon hell muſt bee ſignified, a place of euerlaſting torment, and not Purgatorie.

Firſt, becauſe the word φυλακὴ, a priſon, is ſo taken, 1.Pet.3.19. for the place of the diſobedient, which is hell: for I thinke, they will not ſend obſtinate ſinners to purgatorie

Secondly, he ſhall not come forth, till he hath paied the vtmoſt farthing, or as S. Luke ſaith, the vtmoſt mite; that is neuer: vnleſſe he dare ſay, that a ſinner is able by his puniſhment to ſatisfie the vtmoſt mite of his debt, that is, his ſinne vnto God, which is great blaſphemie to affirme, and contrarie to the Scriptures: for we cannot anſwere God one thing of a thouſand, Iob.9.3.

Thirdly, this place may bee expounded by that parable, Matth.18. where the vnkinde ſeruant is caſt into priſon, till he ſhould pay all that was due, verſ.34. that is, he ſhould lie there for euer; for the debt was ten thouſand talents, too much for a Prince, much leſſe for a ſeruant, to pay: and verſ.25. he had nothing to pay: and therefore his maſter forgaue him the debt, verſ.32. Wherefore we ſee our debt is not paied vnto God by vs, but forgiuen; and where it is not pardoned, it can neuer be paied. Againe, it followeth, verſ.35. So ſhall my heauenly father doe vnto you, if you forgiue not from your hearts one another your treſpaſſes: What is this, ſo ſhall my father doe vnto you? ſend them to purgatorie? No, but vnto hell: for vncharitable and malicious men, which will not forgiue others, I truſt they will not ordaine vnto a place of temporall puniſhment: for as S. Iohn ſaith, He that hateth his brother, and ſo is a manſlayer, cannot haue eternall life, 1.Ioh.3.15.

Fourthly, thus S. Ambroſe expoundeth this place, *lib.9. in Luc.c.*19. Redde promiſſum, dum in hoc corpore es, &c. Render thy vowe or promiſe, while thou art in the bodie, before the exactor commeth, and caſteth thee into priſon. Hence it followeth, that being in priſon, the promiſe, or debt, cannot be paied.

But S. Auguſtine more plainly : Conſenti cum aduerſario, &c. Conſent with thy aduerſarie in the way,&c.for afterward,when we are paſſed out of this world,nulla compunctio, vel ſatisfactio remanebit,there remaineth no compuction or ſatisfaction for ſinne , tom.10.hom.5.ſuper illa . Conſenti cum aduerſar.&c.

Argum.6. Matth.5.verſ.22.He that is angrie with his brother vnaduiſedly,is culpable of iudgement: he that ſaith,Racha,ſhall be puniſhed by a councel : but he that ſaith, thou foole, is guiltie of hell fire. Ergo, all ſinnes are not puniſhed with hell fire, but ſome haue onely temporall chaſticement after this life : therefore in purgatorie,Bellarm.

Anſ. Theſe three degrees of puniſhment doe not ſhew diuers and differing places of puniſhment after this life,but a difference of puniſhment in hell ; as it may be thus ſhewed :

Firſt, euery tranſgreſſion of the law is ſinne, 1.Ioh.3.4.and the wages of euery ſinne is death, Rom.6.23. but to be angrie raſhly,and to raile,are tranſgreſſions, and conſequently ſinnes, and ſo in themſelues worthie of euerlaſting death.

Againe,He that loueth not his brother,abideth in death,that is, hath not eternall life, 1.Ioh.3. ver.14.15.but he that is angrie vniuſtly with his brother,loueth him not.Ergo.

Further, no railers ſhall inherite Gods kingdome, 1.Cor.6.10.that is, without repentance : but he that ſaith to his brother racha, that is, idlebraine, or lighthead, raileth : Ergo, this ſinne excludeth from heauen; and conſequently in it ſelfe is worthie of hell. Wherefore it is great boldnes in the Ieſuite to exempt thoſe ſinnes from hell fire, which the Scripture iudgeth worthie thereof.

And that theſe be three degrees of the ſame euerlaſting puniſhment, wherein Chriſt alludeth to the formes of iudgement amongſt men,Saint Auguſtine ſheweth : Iudicium dicitur,&c. That is called iudgement where the ſentence is not pronounced ; that is a councell, where the puniſhment is yet conſulted of : but Gehenna or Hell is that, which hath certaine damnation,&c.lib.1. de ſerm.in monte,cap.19. Like as then,the pronouncing,conſulting,execution of ſentence,are all tending to the ſame puniſhment,yet in diuers degrees : ſo is it here,&c.

Argum.7. 1.Cor.15:29.Why are they then baptized for the dead, if the dead riſe not againe? The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the baptiſme of teares, faſting, and prayer, which they did in behalfe of the dead,to eaſe them in the paines of purgatorie : And that baptiſme is taken for affliction, our Sauiour Chriſt ſheweth, ſaying, I haue a baptiſme to bee baptized with, Luk.12. ſic Bellarm.cap.4. loc.3.

Anſ. Firſt, this is a forced and vnreaſonable expoſition of this Scripture : firſt, becauſe that in Scripture we reade of no ſuch baptiſme by teares and faſting : the Scripture maketh mention of three baptiſmes, flaminis, fluminis, ſanguinis: of the ſpirit, Mat.3. Chriſt is ſaid to baptize with the ſpirit : of water,as Iohn is ſaid to baptize with water : of blood,or of death,of which Baptiſme our Sauiour ſpeaketh: but to applie baptiſme vnto teares,is improper ; & they rather are ſaid to baptize themſelues,then to be baptized. Secondly,if the Apoſtles meaning were ſuch, why ſaith he not, Why are we baptized,rather then they, ſeeing that he himſelfe vſed, as they ſay, to pray for the dead ? And whereas he ſaith, the Apoſtle doth vrge rather the ancient cuſtome of the Iewes, that praied for the dead,then the vſe of the Church,and therefore,ſaith,they,not we: it is falſe that the Iewes had any ſuch cuſtome, but rather the contrary, for Dauid prayed for his child, while he liued; but ceaſed to pray for him being dead. Thirdly, it is more agreeable to the text, to vnderſtand Baptiſme properly, for the baptiſme of water,then coactely for the baptiſme of teares:and ſo Saint Ambroſe ſaith, that the Apoſtle alludeth to the erroneous vſe of ſome , that did either baptize the dead, or were baptized for the dead, in hope of the reſurrection.And whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that the Apoſtle then would haue giuen ſome ſignification of this error, and not ſo lightly haue touched it : S.Ambroſe anſwereth, that the Apoſtle adding further , And why are we in ieopardie ? but ſaith not, Why are we baptized? Diſcreuit perſonas , oſtendens non catholicos eſſe &c. He doth diſcerne the perſons, ſhewing, that they were not catholikes , that were thus baptized for the dead, Ambroſ.in hunc locum. This expoſition is better , and more agreeable, then Bellarmines : Firſt, becauſe in this ſenſe, we are not forced to take Baptiſme,for any ſuch new found Baptiſme, but properly for Baptiſme indeed. Secondly, becauſe in the Baptiſme of water there is a ſignification of the reſurrection, and a profeſſion of the hope thereof, which is agreeable to the Apoſtles purpoſe : but in the baptiſme of teares there is no ſuch ſignification or repreſentation. Thirdly, becauſe that in the Baptiſme of water, the baptiſme of teares is included, for prayer is made for the partie baptized : ſo that if baptiſme of water be applied to the dead, they haue alſo benefite by the baptiſme of teares. Fourthly , this expoſition is more reaſonable, becauſe of S.Ambroſe authoritie : yet it is no fit or proper interpretation of this place ; as S.Chryſoſtome in his commentarie ſheweth by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, becauſe that Marcion that wicked heretike , whoſe followers did vſe to put one in the dead mans bedde,after he was departed,and ſo baptized him for the dead,did alleadge this place for that ſuperſtitious vſe, which might ſerue his turne very well; the Apoſtle giuing approbation thereof, without any word of reprehenſion at all, if this place were ſo to be vnderſtood.

Secondly, as theſe words of Chriſt, Vnleſſe you eate my fleſh and drinke my blood &c. are ſpoken to the liuing, and not to the dead: ſo likewiſe, where he ſaith, Except a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, muſt be taken as ſpoken to the liuing.

Thirdly, if this were ſufficient for a man to be baptized when he is dead: then there might be hope for Pagans, Infidels, Iewes, when they are dead: vpon theſe reaſons Chryſoſtome infringeth this interpretation allowed by Ambroſe, which comming neerer the Apoſtles ſcope then Bellarmines, yet miſſing the marke, ſheweth his expoſition to be abſurd and vnreaſonable.

Secondly, then let vs ſee how this place is truely expounded: ſome therefore do vnderſtand it of thoſe, who either deferring their Baptiſme, or not being before admitted to it of the Church, becauſe they were lately conuerted from Paganiſme, did deſire baptiſme vpon their death-bed, being in a manner dead: and ſo were baptized for dead, that is, as dead. But this expoſition is not ſufficient: firſt, becauſe the Apoſtle ſhould haue ſeemed to approue their negligence, that did driue baptiſme to ſuch a ſtreight, as to the point of death. Secondly, the argument of the Apoſtle being drawne from a particular cuſtome of ſome, and not from the generall vſe of the Church, could not ſo ſtrongly conclude. Thirdly, becauſe the force of the Apoſtles reaſon is drawne from baptiſme, and being baptized, the firſt part of the propoſition, and not from the latter, for dead: for it followeth not, they that are deadly ſicke deſire to be baptized: Ergo, they expect a reſurrection: vnleſſe that the reſurrection were ſhadowed forth in baptiſme.

Wherefore leauing all by-expoſitions, I take none more fully to expreſſe the Apoſtles meaning, then that of Saint Chryſoſtome; who draweth the Apoſtles argument from the end and ſcope of Baptiſme, wherein whether we conſider the confeſſion vttered in Baptiſme, the repreſentation of Baptiſme, or the efficacie thereof, whether theſe all together, or by themſelues; we ſhall finde the argument to conclude: For the confeſſion, he ſaith, Hoc ad finem cum baptizaturi ſumus, &c. In the end, being about to baptize, we bid them ſay, I beleeue the reſurrection of the dead: For the repreſentation, Aquam ſubire & hinc remeare, &c. To goe into the water, and returne out of the water, are ſymboles, the one of deſcending, ad inferos, to the dead; the other, of riſing againe: and therefore S. Paul calleth Baptiſme the graue, ye are buried then by baptiſme into his death, Rom. 6. And the Apoſtle further ſaith, that by baptiſme we are graft into the ſimilitude of his death, and into the ſimilitude of his reſurrection, verſ. 6. For the third, the efficacie of baptiſme, he ſaith, Spiritus ſanctus, &c. The ſpirit in baptiſme conſumeth ſinne, as in a furnace, &c. and therfore the cauſe of death, which is ſinne, being extinct, death it ſelfe ſhall ceaſe, and the reſurrection follow. Thus then the Apoſtle ſaith, they are baptized for dead, that is, to die vnto ſinne, that they alſo may be partakers of Chriſts reſurrection. This expoſition is both ſound, and good, and moſt agreeable to the Apoſtles purpoſe: neither are the contrarie obiections of any moment.

Firſt, Bellarmine obiecteth, that if the Apoſtle had ſpoken ſimply of baptiſme, he would haue ſaid, why are we baptized, as afterward, why are we alſo in ieopardie? for the Apoſtle was baptized into the death of Chriſt as well as the reſt.
